GROUP DEFERS CAMPAIGN FOR PARITY FUNDS

Farm Leaders May Give Up Proposal Altogether

ECONOMY DRIVE SEEN AS REASON

Uncertainties of European Wars also reported as Factor in Bloc's Decision to Drop Fight

Washington, Jan. 29.—(AP)—Farm bloc leaders in the House have decided to defer and perhaps drop altogether their annual campaign for more than $200,000,000 for parity payments to help swell agricultural income.

They said today that the congressional economy drive, plus the uncertainties of European wars, made it inadvisable to try to add that sum to the agriculture department appropriation bill, which will go before the House tomorrow.

Chairman Jones (D-Tex.) of the House Agriculture committee, who has been an active proponent of parity payments, commented "It may be that developments abroad will force prices up to a point where parity will not be needed as badly."

Parity payments are designed to raise the farmers' purchasing power to the 1909-1914 level. President Roosevelt omitted parity payments from his budget recommendations, but once more asked for a $500,000,000 fund for soil conservation benefits, a figure which Congress has approved with little debate for the last five years.

He suggested $781,000,000 for all agriculture department activities for the next fiscal year. Congress voted about $1,200,000,000 for the current year, but that included $225,000,000 for parity payments and about $200,000,000 for road funds which under the president's reorganization program, will be in another bill.

It was understood that the House Appropriations committee, which has cut more than $113,000,000 from the president's budget recommendations and other bills will continue its economizing when it approves the farm bill tomorrow.

The subcommittee which wrote the measure already is reported to have cut more than $70,000,000 from the measure.

Nine Are Tried In City Court Today

Nine defendants faced trial in Municipal recorder's court this morning, two of them being convicted and sentenced on two counts.

Artis Leary, Negro, was convicted of assault on a female and given a 30-day sentence and also was convicted of engaging in riotous and disorderly conduct and assault and was given an additional 60-day sentence, the two to run consecutively.

Will Brown, Negro, was given a 90-day sentence on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon and was given an additional sentence of 30 days, suspended upon payment of costs for drunkenness. The sentences are to run consecutively, unless he pays the cost in the drunkenness case.

Lyman Avery, the only white man to face trial at the session, was acquitted of careless and reckless driving but a co-defendant, Jim Langley, Negro, was convicted and given a 30-day sentence, suspended upon payment of court costs and $5 to the Water and Light Commission for damages to a hydrant. The case resulted from a wreck Saturday night at the corner of Washington and Second streets.

Charges of careless and reckless driving against Heber Greene and Johnnie White, growing out of an old wreck case, were not pressed.

Ernest Hines, Negro, convicted of larceny of lumber from the Farmers Warehouse, was given 60 days.

Allen Brock, Negro, found guilty of driving while his license was revoked, was given a 60-day sentence, suspended upon payment of $25, costs to be deducted and the balance to go as a fine. His driving license was ordered revoked for an additional 12 months.

Julius Barnes, Negro, convicted of drunkenness, was given a 30-day sentence, suspended upon payment of court costs.

Expected To Postpone Embargo Against Japan

Washington, Jan. 29.—(AP)—Sentiment increased in the Senate foreign relations committee today to delay action on proposals to embargo shipments of American raw materials to Japan.

Chairman Pittman (D-NeV.) of the Foreign Relations committee, the author of one embargo bill, said "there is no hurry."

There have been signs, too, that Secretary Hull would prefer that embargo proposals be held in reserve as a weapon to combat any Japanese discrimination against Americans in China.

Instead, there is talk of giving further financial aid to the embattled government of China.

At least two senators who specialize in foreign relations said they would seek an amendment to the pending Finnish loan bill to open Export-Import bank facilities to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek. This would enable the Chinese chieftain to buy more non-military American goods.

BRITISH SHIPS SUBJECTED TO NAZI BOMBING

Vessels Along 400 Miles of East Coast Are Attacked

FIGHTER PLANES DRIVE OFF FOES

German Raiders Reported to Have Continued Attacks On Shipping from 9 a.m. Until Middy

London, Jan. 29.—(AP)—German bombing planes were reported to have attacked British ships along 400 miles of Britain's east coast today in the most widespread raids on shipping yet attempted in the war.

Attacks on vessels were reported from the mouth of the river Tyne in the north to the Kentish coast to the south. They continued from shortly after 9 a. m. to midday.

Anti-aircraft guns burst into action in the Tyne-side area and air raid warnings were sounded in a number of northeast coast districts.

British fighters were credited with driving off bombers.

London, Jan. 29.—(AP)—Air raid alarms sounded a second time over the northern British coast today after Royal Air Force fighters and anti-aircraft guns had chased off a first group of German raiders.

The second was in an area north of the first, which apparently involved parts of northern England and Scotland.

Violent explosions were heard at sea off a north Yorkshire resort before the first air raid warning sounded in four towns along the northeast coast.

An Air Ministry communique said no enemy aircraft crossed the coast.

The public calmly took shelter at one undisclosed inland Yorkshire town when observers reported what they believed were a number of German bombers. Air raid precaution organizations went to their posts.

The marine entered a not guilty plea to a murder charge at his arraignment before U. S. Commissioner John Monroe, Jr., last Thursday and it was announced he would be given a preliminary hearing today. It became known today, however, that he had waived the formality of a hearing.

Stevenson remained in the Alexandria jail.

Several Deaths Attributable to Weather Reported in State; 2 Fatalities In This County

(By The Associated Press) The cold wave that has harassed the Carolinas for more than a week moved eastward today, establishing low records in the Piedmont and east central portions, while some of the more mountainous areas returned to normalcy.

At Salisbury, in the heart of the Piedmont section, the mercury sank to seven below zero.

Greensboro had a minus five, while Burlington had the coldest night in many years as the mercury hung around zero.

In the east-central section, Durham led the field with a minus four. Raleigh reported a low of 11 degrees above and the weatherman said lower readings were reported toward the Virginia line.

On Mount Mitchell, highest peak east of the Mississippi, the low reading was 17 degrees. At a CCC camp between Asheville and Broadway the mercury sank to minus 13.

Warmer weather was promised tonight and tomorrow. The weather bureau also forecast cloudy and snow flurries in the mountains.

Due to illness, M. K. Blount was unable to address the club as was previously announced. A round table discussion was held on this subject, with the club members directing the questions.

The meeting was greatly enjoyed and the club appreciates Mayor Spain's presence and discussing the city government in such an interesting manner. The meeting was believed to be one of the best and most informative that we have had, with each person present feeling she knew more about the City of Greenville than ever before. At the close of the discussion, light refreshments were served, and Mayor Spain was invited to return some time for another meeting.

Valentine Dance at College. East Carolina Teachers College was the scene of a colorful Valentine Dance Saturday night when the Sophomore class sponsored its annual Sophomore-Senior dance.

Spencer Hatley and his celebrated "Deans of Rhythm" who will play for the President's Birthday Ball at the college Tuesday night, furnished the music for the gala occasion on Saturday night. Hatley and his boys, who have become quite popular as an East Carolina dance band, are music majors at East Carolina Teachers College.

The campus building, in which the dance was held, was decorated in red and white with a large red heart on the stage curtains. The decorations committee was headed by Mary D. Horne and Walter Tucker, both of Greenville.

Chaperones for the occasion were: Mr. and Mrs. A. Dittmer, Mr. and Mrs. Dean C. Tabor, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Deal, Dr. and Mrs. Beecher Flanagan, Dr. and Mrs. B. E. Brandt, Dr. and Mrs. Denver E. Baughman, Mr. and Mrs. P. W. Picklesimer and Mr. and Mrs. M. N. Posey. Dancing got under way around 9 o'clock and was concluded at 11:45.

Ramsay Potts Speaker. Ramsay Potts of Greenville, a graduate of the University of North Carolina, and now connected with Blount-Harvey Department Store, spoke at the college Y. W. C. A. vespers service Sunday evening in the Austin Auditorium.

Mr. Potts said that the girls who are to become teachers will not only live their own lives, but will also reflect life for those they teach. He then brought out his idea that literature, and music should be stressed especially for girls, because they can and will usually appreciate such things more than most of the boys.

Too much emphasis is placed on intercollegiate sports, Mr. Potts declared. The money spent on the boys' teams could easily be used to a greater advantage many times if it were used in some way that would help the majority of the girls.

Miss Jean Abeyounis of Greenville sang "Ave Maria" at the beginning of the service, which was led by Miss Sarah Ann Maxwell, president of the Young Women's time" Christian Association.

"You see, these are portraits that artists throughout the ages have painted of themselves. This answers the first question; the others you should try to find for yourself.

"It would be impossible to have the original of these pictures here in Greenville, but these photographs—done by the Photographic Division of a WPA project at the Philadelphia Museum of Art, bring you an opportunity to see self portraits by famous artists from as long ago as 2650 B. C. up to the present day.

Some of the earliest ones are very impersonal, but later they become more faithful reproductions of likenesses, while still later on we see the artist's increasing freedom.

Some of the artists show us that they are light hearted, others serious or satirical, and still others were suffering from bigotry, or melancholia.

"Somehow, I didn't see all this," said Jimmy, apologetically.

"Never mind, Jimmy, I don't blame you. I could see how they might not appeal to one as young as you. But it really is important that everyone, both young and old, should have a grave respect, vantage though it may be, for the traditional arts and the works of the old masters."

"Oh, Idunno," he grinned, sheepishly.

"Jimmy, we do not expect everyone to like all of the exhibitions that we show here. People have so many tastes and distastes, likes and dislikes, that it would be impossible to have exhibitions that appeal to everyone all the time."

"But some of the people in these pictures look like they have the small pox."

"I feel like scolding you for not taking the pains to find out what the exhibition is about, Jimmy," the gallery attendant answered good-naturedly. "Perhaps I shouldn't blame you, for likely no one has ever taken the pains to tell you that in looking at any work of art it would help you to keep your mind more ready to understand what the artist says if you would ask yourself the following five questions:

1. What did the artist aim to do?

2. How did he succeed in accomplishing what he planned?

3. How did he accomplish this?

4. What was his plan or design?

5. How did he use the materials in his design?

"I guess you are right," Jimmy replied.

J. C. GASKINS

In the death today of J. C. Gaskins, Pitt County lost one of its citizens who probably will be missed by more people than any other. Not only was "Claude" Gaskins a public servant who had held his office for nearly a quarter of a century, a charter member of the Rotary Club who during the more than 20 years of existence of the club had not missed a single meeting until his recent illness, but he probably knew more individual people and enjoyed as many or more friends than any single individual in Pitt county.

Considered wholly from the standpoint of material wealth he was not a big man, but he reared a large family, proving always to be a good husband and father, and there was no call that ever came to him from the outside from one in need that he did not lend a helping hand.

No one with a downcast spirit or troubled mind ever was in his company without gaining from him comfort and inspiration. His friendly greetings to everyone he met and his deep interest in everyone as individuals won for him a niche in the hearts of the hundreds who knew him.

We could point out many more of his numerous fine traits but it is sufficient to say that he was a beloved man and will be greatly missed in Pitt county.

Raleigh, Jan. 29.—The boys who make pictures can't sing. Bill Sharpe, chairman of the Carolinas Press Photographers' Association Gridiron committee, sadly confesses.

And so the Swansons quartet of Durham, members of the Nell Hunter group of singers, will do all the vocalizing for the skits.

No more tickets are available for the affair. It has been announced by Jake Houston of Charlotte, president of the association. The original 200 reservations have been exceeded by forty, and Houston says no more could be accepted.

BLOOD RUNS COLD

By Ann Demarest

YESTERDAY: Mrs. MacDonald, Joan's mother, and Richard MacDonald, Joan's half brother, questioned Richard says he went to Long Island to see his mother and she had a heart attack and died.

Chapter 12

'Always Worrying'

WE SAT there, all six of us, watching the Sergeant and waiting to see what he would do or say next. Outside I could hear the harsh scraping of a snow shovel as it struck the ice, and Norton's voice as he called to someone. When the Sergeant finally spoke, his tension lessened I looked at Dires. His eyes were resting thoughtfully on the book-shelves on the far side of the room.

"Then you know nothing about your sister Joan's death until you came here today," Sergeant Long was saying.

"Nothing."

"The Sergeant, I thought, seemed to be having trouble finding anyone with a water-tight alibi. He'd score here to arrest all of us on suspicion."

He looked at his notebook. "Your sister left a letter on her desk, and among other things she mentioned in it that she was worried about you. What's the reason for that?"

A strained expression crept over his face. "I can't think of anything," he said. "Except that Joan—well, Joan was always worrying." He glanced about uneasily.

"That seems a little far-fetched to me. Always worrying," the Sergeant grunted.

Richard drew out his handkerchief again and mopped his forehead. He was very pale, and I thought he looked almost ill.

"What I mean in this," he said with some hesitation. "She worried about my work... my future," he added lamely.

The Sergeant regarded him for a moment, thoughtfully, then brought a small package out of his pocket, unwrapped it and drew out a string of metal beads. "Do you recognize this necklace?"

MacDonald looked at it with a puzzled expression, reached a thin hand forward to take it, and then drew back.

"It's all right to handle it."

"No, I've never seen them before," he said after he took the string of beads from the Sergeant and looked at them closely.

"If your sister had worn them, would you remember it, or do you think you wouldn't have noticed?" the Sergeant persisted.

"I'd remember it. Joan rarely wore jewelry, except for rings, and this carved metal is odd. I'm sure I would have noticed it."

The Sergeant leaned forward. "They were around her neck when we found her, so someone must have given them to her last evening. Would you have any idea who might have done that? Was anyone in the habit of giving her jewelry?"

"I don't know," Richard murmured. "I mean... it would only be a guess and it might implicate somebody who had nothing to do with this."

"I see how you feel," the Sergeant said, and his voice was a little more kindly than usual. "But this is important. We must find out who gave her the necklace. It doesn't mean necessarily that whoever gave it to her was the person who strangled her."

The girl's brother winced. I wished that the Sergeant would take it easy. The boy looked ready to collapse.

"The only person I can think of would be Tim—Tim Lathrop," he said slowly. "He has given her one or two rings and a bracelet."

Perfectly Happy
"LATHROP," the Sergeant murmured to himself, and then turned to Nicholas Kimball. "He's the man who dropped into the shop last night? The note that Miss Kent wrote was addressed to him?"

"Yes," Mr. Kimball agreed with some reluctance. "Last evening he came to see Joan. He stopped in the shop first."

"But he did go to see her?"

"Yes, I sent some ice-cream up with him that I'd just bought for Joan. Since he was going up I gave it to him to take to her, but he came back with it. He looked terribly worried, and when I asked him why she hadn't taken it he looked at me in a dazed way and said that she hadn't wished to be disturbed. He didn't see her at all, just stood in the hall, I imagine, and called to her. He forgot he had the ice-cream until he came back to the shop."

"Tim Lathrop is the one person you can't accuse," Richard broke in fiercely. "He was crazy about Joan."

The Sergeant disregarded the interruption. "What time was that?" he asked Mr. Kimball.

"About ten o'clock, I believe."

"Rather late to call on a girl, wasn't it?"

Dirck nudged me and even Mr. Kimball smiled faintly when he said, "You're not very sophisticated, are you, Sergeant? However, as it happens, Joan worked in the shop every day from three in the afternoon until ten in the evening, so any engagements she had were after ten."

"I see," the Sergeant replied gruffly. "Now perhaps you can tell me who the woman is your niece mentioned in her letter—the woman who dropped in to see her last night?"

Mr. Kimball and Richard looked at each other, and it seemed to me that a glance of understanding flashed between them. It was Mr. Kimball who replied:

"I know of no woman who was here last night."

But he didn't say anything about the woman in the letter. Either the Sergeant was napping or thought it unimportant, for he asked how long Joan had been working for her uncle. It seems she'd been in New York for about a year and a half and had taken an art course for about six months and then given it up.

"Why?" the Sergeant asked.

"It was quite expensive," Mr. Kimball told him. "I believe that she felt she couldn't afford it."

"If it's not too personal a question," pursued the Sergeant, "does the family have any money?"

The girl's mother interposed with a quick glance at her brother. There was plenty of money for her art course, but after she had gone for six months it was decided that she didn't have talent enough to go on with it.

Washington Daybook

By Preston Cross

Washington. — The explanation here of England's cavalier manner toward American mail and commerce is that she is either dead certain she is going to win the war and-or dead certain American support is "in the bag."

This nation has always been disposed to side with England in any war against Germany. The impression here is that Britain feels she can scrub us around more than considerable without any change in our attitude.

Moreover, her experience during the last war could convince England that she can do almost anything short of raiding our coasts without encountering anything harsher than a stern note.

With respect to the mail and ship searches—we had the same daily picnic all through the last war. We got hot under the collar and sent hot notes. The British, coached by U. S. Ambassador Page, largely ignored them.

For months on end the British kept a patrol of cruisers just outside New York harbor to examine ships whose cargoes the British thought suspect. Finally we got wrought up about that.

We'll jolly well have no more of that, we said to Britain. And Britain backed down—exactly three miles. That is the distance she pulled her cruisers away from the three-mile limit. They didn't loom up so big six miles away, but they continued to stop and search our ships just as they now are doing farther out to sea.

Washington never will get over being amazed and riled at Britain's high-handed methods. She grasps our ships and drags them through the war zone, examines sealed envelopes for anything from bonds to a 10-ton truck, and orders the cargo unloaded if she thinks it might trickle through some neutral country into Germany.

And about the only thing we can do is to protest. We ourselves set the pattern during the Civil war. The Union navy seized British cargoes in the Caribbean on the presumption they were bound for the Confederacy, even though they were billed for Havana or some other non-belligerent port.

These days we ourselves are you being very polite to Japan. We even rough up her geography. On official U. S. maps issued since January 1 we don't list various mandated islands in the Pacific as being under Japanese domination. That includes all the islands around Guam, our embryo naval base in the far western Pacific.

Japan has repudiated the League of Nations under which these former German islands were mandated to her. So far as U. S. maps are concerned, the islands are orphaned.

Maybe it doesn't mean anything, but the conference on the Cause and Cure of War is meeting in the only worthwhile bombproof quarters we know of in downtown Washington. It is a room two stories underground in the Washington hotel, just a block from the White House. The President might like to know where to duck. Of course he could hide in the underground tunnels channeled through Capitol Hill, but that will be a long way to run if the bombers come this way.

TILT MOVED UP FROM TUESDAY

Game Originally Had Been Scheduled For Tomorrow

East Carolina Teachers College will engage the swift Rocky Mount Y. M. C. A. cagers in a basketball game in the Robert H. Wright building here tonight at 8 o'clock.

Tonight's game was scheduled originally for tomorrow night, but is being played a day earlier in order to turn the gymnasium over to the President's Birthday Ball committee.

The birthday ball will be held in the Wright building Tuesday night.

Rocky Mount's Y. M. C. A. boasts a stronger team than last year. When the Pirates and the boys from Rocky Mount clashed in a pair of early games, the Pirates took both.

The first encounter produced a 33-26 victory and the second a 49-39 triumph.

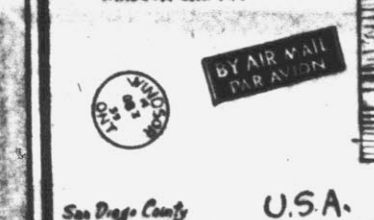

Thus far this season, the Rocky Mount team has turned in wins over several superior teams in collegiate and independent competition.

Don Brock, who has scored more points than any other player on the Pirate team this season, is expected to be up to his usual scoring standard in the game tonight.

FLEMING WINS CLUE GIVEN BY DR. MCDONALD

Emerges Victorious in Golden Gloves Boxing Tournament

Norman Fleming, son of Mrs. Eva Fleming of Greenville and popular member of the boxing squad at East Carolina Teachers College, Saturday night received a "purple and gold" boxing robe by virtue of having emerged victorious in the Golden Gloves Boxing Tournament finals in Raleigh.

Fleming defeated J. P. Sheppard, outstanding Raleigh scrapper, in an exciting battle in the bantam-weight division. The decision of the judges was branded in the press as being an unpopular one, but the action likely rested in Sheppard's popularity than in the decision.

Battling in the tournament got under way in the capital city on Thursday night of last week. Fleming drew a bye and won by a default over a Clayton puncher. He defeated his opponent Friday night and triumphed in Saturday night's doings.

Fleming's fighting career began when a freshman in Greenville High school, when he won two fights. In his senior year of high school, Fleming was one of the winners in the annual boxing tournament sponsored by the college.

When he returned to the campus today, Fleming appeared to be in good shape, but signs of blows received in the Raleigh ring could be seen on his facial features. As usual, however, Fleming was still grinning and looking forward to additional fights.

This was Fleming's first fight in a Golden Gloves Tournament. He lost by a decision in the openers of the Virginia Carolina tournament in 1938.

CLUE GIVEN BY DR. MCDONALD

Speech Indication Of His Support For Broughton

Reflector Bureau. By HENRY AVERILL.

Raleigh, Jan. 29.—The anti-diversion speech of Dr. Ralph W. McDonald before oil interests at Durham Friday was more than a ringing plea for the sanctity of highway funds—it was a definite clue to the McDonald support of J. M. Broughton in the current gubernatorial scramble.

Not that McDonald thinks Broughton would be any less likely to divert highway funds under the existing tax structure of North Carolina, than would, say, Commissioner of Revenue A. J. Maxwell; but here's the rub, McDonald regards the Revenue Commissioner as the very personification of the "interests" he so vigorously attacked in the Durham address.

In short, when McDonald attacks "wealthy interests," he feels he is striking Maxwell as their chief representative and "friend at court," in the government. When he says there can be no tax relief for the average man "until the state government gets bigger than these interests," he is saying, in effect, that there can be no relief in sight under a Maxwell administration.

And there's the key which unlocks the door to any mystery in connection with McDonald's activities during the current governor's race. Some suspect, or at least profess to believe, that McDonald has "sold out" the Liberals because he refused to support Tom Cooper and because he refuses to urge Paul Grady or any other of the group to get into the race.

The answer to that is simple—McDonald does not think either Cooper, or Grady, or any other of the same ilk has a really good chance to win; and he fears that with one of them in the race the path to the governor's mansion will be made smoother for Maxwell, whom he is determined to beat at all costs.

It now appears that the McDonald efforts to keep Grady out have failed; as reports that announcement of the Kenly man will appear tomorrow are too circumstantial and apparently well-based to dispute.

McDonald isn't going to support Grady—he will stay with Broughton, it seems certain. He will stay there not so much because he is overly in love with the Broughton platform, or the Broughton personality; but simply and solely because he believes that the state faces tremendous issues which will be solved adversely to his philosophy if Maxwell should win.

He looks on Broughton as the candidate of no particular group or faction. He has been unofficially reported to have said "Broughton is his own candidate and hasn't made any definite commitments to any interests."

A fair analysis of the situation does not indicate that McDonald has yielded any part of his liberalism. He still stands for the things he stood for in 1936; but he is a practical man although something of a crusader. He started out with the fixed idea that Maxwell is bad medicine for North Carolina; he surveyed the field and saw nothing to point to a "liberal" victory if his group should put up one of its members; he surveyed the field again, decided that Broughton will sup- port some of the things for which McDonald stands and, perhaps even more important, he decided that Broughton has the best chance of any to defeat Maxwell, who in McDonald's eyes is "the wealthy inter- ests" controlling North Carolina.

Inventor To Speak At UNC This Week

Chapel Hill, Jan. 29.—Originator of the ductile tungsten lamp filament and the copper-clad nickel steel leading-in wire—Dr. Colin G. Fink, world famous inventor and head of the Columbia University Division of Electrochemistry—will speak at the University of North Carolina Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock.

The public is invited to attend.

His appearance is being sponsored by the North Carolina section of the American Chemical Society which will meet in Venable Hall following a dinner in honor of Dr. Fink at the Carolina Inn at 6:30 o'clock. Dr. E. C. Markham, of the University Chemistry Department and chairman of the North Carolina section, will preside.

Dr. Fink's process for the restoration of ancient bronzes is used all over the world. By a simple and easily-applied electrolytic method, it reverses corrosion by reducing the oxidized copper minerals of the inscription to metallic copper.

N. Y. Stock Market
New York, Jan. 29.—(AP)—Stocks generally leaned toward the recovery side in today's market. While dealings were at about the slowest rate for the year to date, there were more fractional gains than losses in evidence near the fourth hour.
Strong news stimulation was lacking in both cases, but some nibbling was attributed to the belief the lengthy market stalemate might be nearing an end and that the recent downward adjustment could inspire at least an intermediate rally.
A break in wheat futures at Chicago was a bearing influence. European securities markets were without trends and bonds followed an irregular course.

At High Point the clothing of Mrs. Florence Neal, 72, caught fire when she brushed against a stove and she was fatally burned.
A Greenville Negro died of injuries suffered when the car in which he was riding skidded on ice and struck a tree.
At Smithfield Sam T. Honeycutt, Jr., about 24, of Smithfield, drowned in Holts lake near here today when the icy coating of the water gave way under him.
Honeycutt and two companions were walking on the frozen surface of the lake when the ice cracked. The other two got ashore safely.
Honeycutt held on to the edge as long as he could while his companion unsuccessfully sought means to rescue. Unable to hold on any longer, he fell to his friend, "boss," tell mother goodbye, and dropped down into the icy water of the lake. His body was recovered in about 15 minutes, but efforts to revive him were without success.

Secretary Perkins Termed As Wozy
Columbus, Ohio, Jan. 29.—(AP)—John I. Lewis, chairman of the United Mine Workers' convention, recalled that he had made repeated efforts to get Secretary Perkins and President Roosevelt to call a conference of labor, business and government officials to study unemployment problems.
Two weeks ago, he said, he sent pneumonia kills or leaves a victim paralyzed after a short ordeal. Infantile paralysis brings tragedy worse than four labor men to discuss the situation.

Want To Get Away From It All? You Might Try The Shaw System

By SAM JACKSON
AP Feature Service Writer
Fort Bragg, Calif.—It has been more than a decade since the Rev. Henry Shaw became embittered by the way the world had treated him, turned his back on civilization, and became a hermit.
Today, comparing his situation with that of his fellow men, he says he has no regrets.
"I have little money, little expense and no worry whatever. I seldom think of the past and never of the future. I live for the day," he explains.
There is no fakery about "the hermit of Fort Bragg."
Alone With Five Cats
He lives in a shack of driftwood on a rocky, unfrequented stretch of coast some miles north of this little lumber town. His only companions are five cats.
He goes barefoot the year 'round. The soles of his feet are so calloused he compares them to horses' hoofs. Except on visits to town, he wears only a piece of gunnysack. A most daily he takes a dip in the cold surf. His white hair falls to his shoulders, and an untrimmed beard completes this traditional figure of a recluse.
A graduate of Oxford university, England, Shaw early distinguished himself in investigating church irregularities in Wales.
"Some pretty high persons went to prison," he relates. "But the scandal made things unpleasant and I knew I'd better clear out. I went to Canada, didn't like the way things were run there, and came on to Fort Bragg."
He learned the operating business and for years operated a mortuary serving a huge area of this sparsely settled timber country.
Talks To The Hills
"When people began to die off like flies in the influenza plague it was too much for me," he says. "I went all to pieces."
Six years in a mental hospital followed. The hermit says he was sane but was kept confined so his substantial savings could be alienated. He was penniless when released. It was then he became a hermit.
"I fix up a farmer's fences for the right to live here," he explains. "I get $14 a month relief money and net alone just fine. The sea throws up plenty of wood and I don't wear any clothes. I eat good food and so do my cats. And the hungry wayfarer is welcome here."

The Rev. Henry Shaw—"I live for the day"

Has An Invention
Shaw will be 60 in June. Except for an oversize waistline, he is in prime physical condition and as hard as nails. He still speaks with an Oxford accent.
Unmarried and with no relatives at home, Shaw has no one to turn to for help. He has no one to turn to for help. He has no one to turn to for help.

I care to mention," the hermit of Fort Bragg can think of only one thing that might take him briefly back into normal life. He claims some years ago to have perfected a new embalming process, "simple, inexpensive, yet astonishing in its results."
He'd like to demonstrate the process but doesn't care much whether he gets paid for it or not.

ation with Mrs. Perkins, but she told them she did not think the program was serious and to give the Democratic party time and everything would be worked out.
Philip Murray, U. S. first assistant, warned that "surprisings might develop from people seeking a right to live" unless the unemployment problem is solved.
Speaking in favor of a resolution urging a White House conference among labor, business, agriculture and government, Murray told the UMW convention "the federal administration in Washington has evidenced no desire to cure unemployment. In Pennsylvania, which has 10,000,000 citizens, 1,000,000 are idle and they represent 3,000,000 people."
Organized labor will be a "stupid sucker" politically, General Hugh S. Johnson asserted, if it fails to follow Lewis' advice and get sewed up in the bag of any party or politician.

Regional Director Will Visit College
Miss Marie White, Washington, D. C., regional director of the Federal Bureau of Home Economics, and Miss Catherine Dennis, Raleigh, state supervisor of home economics, will be visitors of the Home Economics Department of the College Tuesday and Wednesday of this week.
After meeting faculty members at a tea in the ball room Tuesday afternoon, Miss White and Miss Dennis will be entertained at dinner at the home management house. Other dinner guests will be President and Mrs. L. B. Meadows, Registrar and Mrs. H. J. McGinnis, treasurer and Mrs. F. D. Duncan, Miss Catherine Holbrook, head of the home economics department of the College, and Miss Mary Green.
Mrs. Adelaide Blanton is director of the home management house. The tea will be served by the foods class of the home economics department under the supervision of Miss Ruby Scholz.
These specialists in home economics will have the opportunity of visiting the progressive quarters of the department here in the practically completed new classroom building.

North Carolina and Virginia Moving Bulk of Total
Raleigh, Jan. 29.—Shipments of shelled and cleaned peanuts out of the North Carolina-Virginia area have been substantially above those of last season for the corresponding period. It was reported today by Dr. L. O. Schaub, director of Extension at State College, on the basis of U. S. Department of Agriculture reports. He said, however, that the movement of farmers' stock peanuts slowed up a little during the past week.
Already 12 to 15 million more pounds of farmers' stock peanuts have moved out of the North Carolina-Virginia area in the form of cleaned and shelled goods than had moved out during the first 10 weeks of the 1938-39 season. One reason Dr. Schaub gave for this is the decline in shipments from Georgia, Florida, and other Southeastern states.
During the first four months of the 1938-39 season there were shipped out of the Southeast 300 more cars of shelled goods and nearly 200 more cars of peanut oil than were moved during the corresponding period this season.
Latest market reports show Junbos still commanding 4 to 4.15 cents per pound delivered, with best bunch averaging 3 to 3 1/2 cents per pound and a few 4 cents per pound delivered.
The National Peanut Week, just concluded, is expected to stimulate demand for farmers' stock. Thousands of stores throughout the nation arranged peanut displays, some of them quite elaborate, and reported increased sales of edible nuts, peanut butter, and other peanut products.
"We can look for the results of this promotional campaign in market prices of the next few weeks," Dr. Schaub stated.
Serve pork dishes for nourishing and economical meals, says Miss Mary E. Thomas, nutritionist of the State College Extension Service.
E. V. Vestal, recently appointed assistant swine specialist of the State College Extension Service, has been conducting highly successful meat cutting and curing demonstrations throughout the State.
