JUBILANT OVER CLOSE VICTORY ON TRADE ACT

Sen. Harrison Predicts Senate Passage Tuesday

FOES, HOWEVER, TO WAGE FIGHT

Ratification Amendment To Reciprocal Trade Measure Defeated By Three-Vote Margin

Washington, March 30.—(AP)—The reciprocal trade program, a fundamental administration policy and potential campaign issue, survived the crucial Senate test late yesterday when a three-vote majority killed an amendment to require Senate ratification of trade agreements.

Administration lieutenants who considered the amendment a death warrant for the program were jubilant over the 44 to 41 vote. Sen. Harrison (D-Miss), floor manager for the legislation extending the program three years, told reporters:

"The fight is over now. I think we'll pass the bill Tuesday."

Foes of the trade policy made it clear, however, that they would keep on fighting for other restrictive amendments. Sen. Johnson (D-Col.) held out "a dim hope that the bill itself will be defeated."

Yesterday's vote found Republicans solidly for the ratification amendment. They made it plain that they would carry their fight to the electorate and Republican leaders felt they had gained political advantage in presenting an unbroken front on the issue.

Easter Egg Hunt Declared Success

Although handicapped by the threatening weather, the Easter Egg hunt sponsored by the Greenville Merchants Association was held on the West campus of the college this morning and attended by 600 or more children.

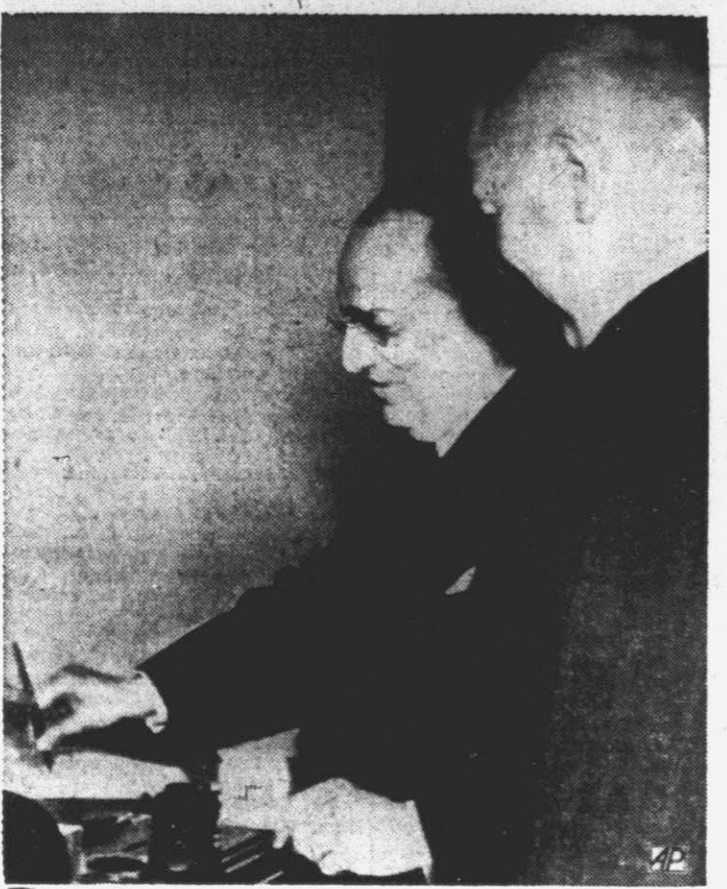

Approximately 10,000 candy eggs were hidden about the grounds and after the children left not a one could be found.

In addition, a large number of prize eggs were hidden and the finders will be entitled to special gifts to be given by the merchants whose name appears in the package.

The hunt was originally scheduled for Easter Monday, but had to be postponed on account of snow. It is proposed to make the hunt an annual affair, and although today's was not as widely attended as had been hoped for at first, it was declared a success when the weather is taken into consideration.

U.S. Places No Credence In Nazi Produced Documents; German Press Hails "Find"

Financier Under Indictment

Herbert Fleishacker (left), former president of the Anglo-California National bank and a dominant figure in west coast finances for a generation, is shown in San Francisco as he surrendered and posted bond on a federal indictment charging he misappropriated $55,000 through the huge bank which he headed until October, 1938. He was known also as a philanthropist, civic leader and art patron. With him is his attorney, H. S. Young.

Washington, March 30.—(AP)—The authenticity of documents produced by German officials as evidence that "American policy" helped loose war on Europe was challenged emphatically in administration quarters today.

President Roosevelt declared that propaganda from abroad should be taken with several grains of salt.

Secretary of State Hull spoke bluntly. He declared that the State Department faced not "the slightest credence" in the conversations related in the German White Book and denied that the war-like attitude they set forth represented "in any way" the country's foreign policy.

Berlin, March 30.—(AP)—The inspired Nazi press asserted today that the "sensational discovery" of alleged Polish documents proved that United States officials had helped instigate allied plans "to finish National Socialist Germany through war."

Comments on the document, which the German foreign office said last night had been uncovered in the secret archives of conquered Poland, pushed other news into the background as the morning papers blamed American diplomacy in great measure for the outbreak of the European conflict.

German officialdom sidestepped comment with the assertion that the documents "speak for themselves," but promised publication of additional papers dealing with American foreign policy.

Principal targets of the Nazi press barrage were William C. Bullitt, United States ambassador to Paris; Joseph P. Kennedy, ambassador to London; and Anthony J. Biddle, Jr., ambassador to Poland.

All three, as well as President Roosevelt, were mentioned in the document.

Adolf Hitler's newspaper said "these three gentlemen—first of all Mr. Bullitt in Paris—virtually made it a point of honor to swing the still seemingly repugnant elements in the London government toward adapting Polish desires and thereby bringing Europe closer to war."

Another paper which is close to Field Marshal Hermann Goerring said "there can be no doubt that these American representatives used all their influence x x x to aggravate the atmosphere in Europe."

Berlin, March 30.—(AP)—The 16 documents which the German foreign office published yesterday as evidence in the archives of the Polish foreign office were only "cheap wine" compared with costly vintages yet to follow, an authorized German source asserted today.

Citing the Bible story of Jesus' conversion of water into wine, this source observed:

"American statesmen must not go out on a limb to try to put yesterday's publication off with the remark that these were after all the opinions of Polish ambassadors as to what American policy is."

"Remember how at Cana the ruler of the feast complained to the bridegroom for keeping the best wine until the end. Maybe that's what we're doing."

He further intimated that the German government was in possession of direct communications by the United States ambassador to Paris, William C. Bullitt, and others.

Authenticity of Papers Tending to Show America Helped Bring On War Emphatically Challenged in Wash'ton; Nazi Press Claims 'Sensational Discovery'

JAP BAYONETS BACK WANG IN CHINESE RULE

Central Government Of China Is Established

NEW HEAD ONLY NIPPON PUPPET

Authority of New Regime to Extend Only To Areas Occupied By Japanese Soldiers

Nanking, March 30.—(AP)—Backed by the bayonets of his Japanese sponsors, Wang Ching-Wei, formally proclaimed himself head of a new "Central Government of China" today as the banners of Nanking flapped under cloudy skies.

Wang once was Nationalist China's premier and, with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, was the political heir of the Republic's founder, Dr. Sun Yat-Sen. Now his former associates call Wang a "dispicable traitor."

Mounting a platform Wang read a proclamation ordering immediate cessation of the 33-months-old war. Blandly ignoring the practical certainty of disobedience, Wang announced his chief aims were realization of peace and establishment of a new order in East Asia in cooperation with Japan.

Although Wang set himself up as successor to Chiang Kai-Shek's government, his authority actually will extend only to areas occupied by the Japanese army.

Molotoff Address Is Brushed Aside

London, March 30.—(AP)—British observers today brushed aside Russian Premier-Foreign Commissar Molotoff's harsh words about the allies and emphasized his neutrality declaration as ending any Nazi hope of a Rome-Berlin-Moscow axis.

Some sources interpreted Molotoff's foreign policy review yesterday before a joint session of the Supreme Soviet as throwing out broad hints that the Soviets wanted to resume trade negotiations with Britain.

Others, however, declared it fore-shadowed the reshaping of Russian foreign policy on the theory that Germany would win the war.

Although Molotoff assailed Great Britain and France for "hostility toward the USSR" and declared German-Russian relations were firmly proved, he proclaimed Moscow's desire to "maintain our neutrality and refrain from any participation in the war."

Session Of Civil Court Completed

The case of Leslie Crawford, tenant, vs. Offie Hodges, landlord, in which the plaintiff sought to recover $150 for alleged failure of the defendant to provide adequate facilities for housing a tobacco crop, required all of Friday.

The civil session was completed after the case was concluded with a jury verdict awarding the plaintiff $40.

The next term of Superior court is scheduled to start here on April 15, a two-weeks criminal session, for which the calendar is in the process of being drafted.

Judge Walter J. Bone of Nashville will preside over the first week of the criminal session, while Judge Q. S. Weeks of Fayetteville will be in the chair during the second week, a transfer having been ordered by the governor's office.

WORKING WIVES UNDER FIRE Babson Warns That Legislation Is In The Making

Babson Park, Fla., March 30.—The biggest search job ever undertaken by any nation in any age begins on the day when the 1940 census starts. Each decade this vast nose-counting project gets bigger, the blanks longer, the questions more personal. However, as long as people want to turn to Uncle Sam for help when they are in trouble they must expect to furnish the information which the government needs in order intelligently to provide such help.

Notwithstanding all the hullabaloo about "your income," most anxiously awaited reply will be to the question, "Are you employed?" I fear the nation will be shocked when the answers to this query are added, tabulated, published. However, it will be impossible to compare this figure with any previous totals. Our national ideas on unemployment have changed drastically in the past ten years. We went "unemployment-conscious" during the 30's. Ten years ago a jobless family of four was content to consider that one person—usually the father—was unemployed. Today, that family would report there are four out of work.

Millions of Working Wives—During the last decade, business has been unable to absorb the trek of women into industry and find new jobs for the displaced males. It is estimated that there are three to four million married women holding jobs. Of course, in many cases these wives are the sole support of their own family, of their aged parents, or of some other family. My hat is off to any wife with guts enough to support the family if her husband cannot or will not do so. But many people believe something must be done about those cases where both husband and wife are holding down good jobs.

British Air Force Scores Victory Against Germany Over Western Front Lines

Bankhead's Wife Turns Sculptor

Mrs. Florence Bankhead, wife of House Speaker William B. Bankhead of Alabama, has made the delightful discovery that she has rare talents as a sculptor. Just for the fun of it, she began "pinching" clay—and then she found she could work the clay into sculptured heads that are quite recognizable. She is shown in Washington beside one of her models of the speaker.

AIR MINISTRY MAKES REPORT

Two German Messerschmitt fighting planes were shot down in flames and a bomber disabled in action over border; Victory in Addition To Nazi Plane Downed Over Britain

London, March 30.—(AP)—Two German Messerschmitt fighting planes were shot down in flames and a bomber disabled in action over the German Western front lines yesterday, the Air Ministry announced today.

The German high command communique mentioned only fights between German and French planes over the Western front yesterday in which it acknowledged that one German pursuit plane was shot down, while "three enemy planes were seriously damaged."

The British air force in France said the British planes which accounted for the Messerschmitt had engaged "strong formations" of German aircraft which crossed the allied lines.

It said that the bomber which was caught diving steeply into low clouds with one engine disabled.

The air victory was in addition to the shooting down of a German plane off the British coast.

Court Holds Professor Can Not Accept Post

N. Y. Appointment Described As Chair Of Indecency

New York, March 30.—(AP)—A state supreme court supreme court justice today upheld the application of a Brooklyn housewife for an order to revoke the appointment of Bertrand Russell as a professor of mathematics at the City College of New York.

Justice John E. McGeehan termed the appointment of the English philosopher a "chair of indecency."

Appointment of Russell, which was to have taken effect next February raised an immediate storm of protest from church figures and others. Educators on the other hand, came to his defense, terming the controversy a challenge to "academic freedom."

The court case was brought by Mrs. Jean Kay, whose high school daughter, she said, might some day attend the college.

After reviewing various criminal statutes pertaining to crimes of sex and perversion, some of which crimes Mrs. Kay in her petition said were advocated by Russell, Justice McGeehan said it was "repugnant to the common welfare" to encourage violation of the provisions of the penal law.

Equador Uprising Fails To Develop

QUITO, Equador, March 30.—(AP)—The government announced today quick and effective measures by the police and army had forestalled a revolutionary plot timed for today.

It said an attack against military barracks here had been scheduled for this morning, but the placing of soldiers and police in readiness to crush any uprising kept it from taking place.

The government statement said the authorities knew the identity of the ringleaders and that a number of arrests probably would be made.

Sees No Need For Two U. S. Fleets

Los Angeles, March 30.—(AP)—Secretary of the Navy Charles Edison said today he was opposed to the "two ocean navy" plan advocated by some members of Congress because "every sound strategic conclusion demands the maintenance of the fleet as a single coordinated unit in the Pacific."

"I think the idea of building a separate fleet for the Atlantic is not only unnecessary, but altogether too costly even to consider," said Edison in an interview. "We are now adding to the fleet by steady increases in essential types and the proposal to build up to the present fleet by 10 per cent seems sound to me."

It should be realized that it would take more than 10 years to duplicate the present United States fleet even if it was sound to do so.

"Youth Marches On"
"Youth Marches On" was the subject of discussion of the Y. W. C. A. Vesper service Friday night, March 29.

Arlene Mercer was in charge of the program. Johnny Faye Barnes, a student, talked on youth's struggle to retain the best in life which must be accompanied by the two factors of belief and faith. The life of Geo. A. Gordon was given as an illustration of the hardships one must endure to receive the greatest blessings from life.

Having vital Christian experiences, following the life and teachings of Jesus, discovering the purpose and nature of the church, and participating in the Christian religion are the major objectives toward which the youth of today must work to receive the greatest blessings from living.

IN MEMORIAM
Egon Franz Tapper
Our father, dear, has passed away. He has answered his Master's call. Now he enjoys an unending day Where shadows never fall.
We loved him much, nor shall we forget.
This Father who loved us too,
Who had plenty of room in his heart to let
For his family all tried and true,
Your memory we honor and hold most dear,
Though your body lies under the sod,
This father we loved, who was so sincere,
Has gone to live with his God.

Greensboro College Alumnae
The Greenville Greensboro College Alumnae Chapter met with Mrs. Wiley Brown Wednesday afternoon, March 27, 1940.

Mrs. Brown greeted us in her most cordial manner and directed us to the east drawing room, where spring flowers made the day more delightful.

Mrs. J. R. Gullede, president, called the meeting to order, and Mrs. J. E. Parkerson, secretary, read interesting minutes of the past two months. Miss Mabel Tomlinson made a favorable treasurer's report.

After the brief business session and discussions of college news, the program leader, Mrs. P. P. Brooks, called on Mrs. W. C. Harris to give us a talk on Ethna St. Vincent Millay's writings.

Mrs. Harris (we call her Eva Berry) is a poetess and in her charming and individual way, read some of Miss Millay's poems. So that we could be more appreciative of the foremost living woman poet, Mrs. Harris read a discourse of her mother's life, Cora Millay. Though she was a frail and delicate young woman who had to care for and raise three little girls, she was never daunted in any of her desires for their welfare.

While she nursed and was away from them hours at a time making only enough money to give them the bare necessities of life, they played and worked as creative, imaginary children do.

They went to the schools of the village and took away most of the prizes given. The most enviable trait of character that they learned was that of sharing. Their wardrobe was limited and when one took any prominent part each was so interested as if it were her own performance. After much struggle each of the girls were educated at Vassar, and Mrs. Millay, because of poverty, unconsciously gave her children a heritage money cannot buy.

In after years they repaid her by giving her trips and the luxuries of life she wished for them to have.

Edna St. Vincent was born in Rockland, Maine, in 1892, and in 1917 graduated from Vassar. At the age of eight she wrote her first poem. At the age of nineteen, she wrote "Renascence", which is considered a masterpiece of this generation and was marveled at, that one so young knew the meaning of life so well. She composed some music, and compiled a number of books of verse and prose. Her last book is "Conversation at Night". Mrs. Harris read one of the conversations which was quite interesting.

After delicious tea and cakes were served we adjourned to meet in April with Mrs. Galloway. —Reported

Harmonists at College
The Comedian Harmonists, known in both this country and other countries for their light and entertaining music programs, will appear at East Carolina Teachers College next Wednesday night, April 3, on their second American tour.

This group of six accomplished singers has just returned from England, where it closed a successful tour that had taken it through South Africa, New Zealand, and Australia, as well as England.

After appearing with Marlene Dietrich in the revue "Two Ties," and with Lillian Hervey in "Monte Carlo Madness," they began their concert work, and have since entertained audiences in many parts of the world by their music antics.

The group is composed of Hans Rexe, first tenor; Eric Collins, second tenor; Roman Cywowski, baritone; Rudolf Mayreder, bass; Harry Frommermann, "tenor buffo" and arranger of the music; and Fritz Kramer, pianist. Thought all are Austrian citizens, they have their headquarters in Paris.

On their first American tour, last year, these "musical funsters" closed their series by an appearance on the Magic Key radio program.

According to their managers, a representative program of this sextet may range from Jerome Kern to Johannes Brahms, and go from "The Blue Bird" to "The Merry Widow" and "The Barber of Seville." But with all their clowning, they are, says the San Francisco Bulletin, "musicians of the first rank."

Their program will begin at 8:00 and will be in Robert H. Wright Auditorium.

Inspirational Program
A deputation team composed of Lucy Ann Barrow, Erlene Sawyer, Sarah Ann Maxwell, Wilda Royal, and Sara Gorham, from East Carolina Teachers College, gave an inspirational program at the North Carolina State College "Y" vesper service on Thursday evening, March 28, on "Following Your Ideals."

Sara Ann Maxwell spoke on "Following Your Ideals," bringing out the fact that people consciously or unconsciously are following some kind of ideal. She gave examples of several humanitarians who spent their lives following their ideal of bettering life for humanity, and ended her talk by suggesting that each member of the group create in themselves high ideals and then follow them.

After this a story, "Henry Van Dyke's, The Lost Word," was read by Lucy Ann Barrow. The story told of a man who lost his ideal when he gave up the word that stands for God, the Father.

Erlene Sawyer gave a musical selection for the benediction. She was accompanied by Wilda Royal at the piano.

Sara Gorham, who was general chairman for the occasion, introduced the members of the team and read the scripture.

A deputation team composed of boys from the State College Y. M. C. A. cabinet will give a return program at E. C. T. C. April 7.

China's Wang, Always A No. 2 Man, Heads New Puppet Government

WANG CHING-WEI Traitor or Savior?

Wang Ching-wei, who heads the new government of conquered China, is one of the big names of modern Chinese history—but he's always been a No. 2 man. Early this century he propagandized against the Chinese monarchy and in 1910 went to jail for trying to kill the prince regent. Freed the next year by Dr. Sun Yat-sen's revolution, he became Dr. Sun's secretary and No. 2 man in the republican government.

When Sun died in 1925, Chiang Kai-shek, not Wang, moved into first place. Five years later Political Wang and General Chiang quarreled over the war against Chi-

April Brings First Big Test For Presidential Hopefuls

Nobody knows what will happen at the national party conventions in June and July, but after the smoke of the April primary battles has cleared away, it should be easier to guess. For some of the prominent candidates for the presidential nominations get their first real test this month—in one or more of the six primaries in which delegates to the national conventions will be chosen. This map shows the highlights of these primaries—shows also what happened in the first primary, New Hampshire's, last month.

Political dopesters will be interested especially in answers to these questions:

What kind of race will Roosevelt men run in Wisconsin, where Garner men hope to profit by the fact that two rival FDR tickets have been entered? (The President has not sanctioned the entrance anywhere of slates of delegates pledged to him; neither has he forbidden it.)

How will the President stack up against the Vice President in Illinois? (Says Mayor Kelly, FDR backer: "If Roosevelt gets a vote in Illinois, he will be renominated; and, if not, he won't be.")

What will the primaries show about the relative vote-getting ability of duty and Vandenberg, two of the leading candidates for the Republican nomination?

LIVING AMERICAN ART AND MODERN PHOTOGRAPHY

Two exhibitions of unusual interest will open Tuesday, April 2 at two o'clock at the Woman's Club.

The show of Living American Art, consisting of 18 color reproductions of American art during the four decades of this century. The exhibit provides the visitor with a summary review of the influence, the restless experimentation and the achievements of that period. Represented are such well-known artists as John Marin, considered one of the greatest watercolor artists in this country; Louis Elshemius, a long forgotten figure until his recent rise to fame as an eccentric genius; Georgia O'Keefe, renowned woman artist of magnified flowers and New Mexican desert scenes; Guy Pene duBois; journalist-painter; William Glackens of Impressionist fame; Charles Sheeler who was recently given a retrospective show at the Museum of Modern Art, George Grosz, Franklin Watkins and Aaron Bohrod. These reproductions are color lithographs made by Max Jaffe, world famous ago.

Viennese color printer.

The exhibition of Modern Photography provides an excellent cross section of some of the finest accomplishments in this field. The photographs were produced under the WPA Art Program which has been encouraging the development of creative photography in this country. The collection offers the amateur camera enthusiasts many suggestions as to true pictorial value in photography.

A feature of this display is a group of 12 photographs by Berenice Abbott, all from her "Changing New York" series, done under the Art Project, and recently published in book form. Miss Abbott has sought to record for future generations many characteristic aspects of New York in the 1936-1938 period which in another ten years may have radically changed or completely vanished. Famous churches, the waterfront, picturesque streets, in foreign sections, hotels that have survived from the brown-stone era, quaint by-ways in Greenwich Village, are among the subjects recorded in a project conceived nearly six years ago.

Other New York photographers whose work is included in the display are Alexander Alland, George Horvath, George Herlick, Aaron Egel, Andrew Herman, David Robbins and Mark Nagir. Most of these photographs were taken in foreign sections and unfamiliar neighborhoods, unknown to the average sightseer. In addition to their interesting themes, these plates show what may be attained by sharp and patient concentration on the pictorial values of daily life; what effects may be secured through understanding of the true beauty of light and shadow, framing and heightening the central motif.

Under the leadership of Edward and Breet Weston, two brothers, who have a national reputation in the photographic field, much unusual work has been done. Such plates as "Leafless Tree" and "Sand Dunes" are typical of the Westons' method of revealing delicate variations of pattern and texture that usually escape the eye of all save artist and naturalist. These two exhibitions have been secured for the Community Art-Fes-

LEAP BEFORE YOU LOOK

By Peggy O'More

YESTERDAY: Thinking Dotty Dougherty has betrayed her, Tomi sends her a telegram spring her. The business mission to Los Angeles is a failure. Allen takes Tomi out for the evening and she realizes she both hates and loves him.

Chapter 29 Desertion

TOMI was surprised to see Dotty Dougherty at the gate.

"I fired you, Mrs. Dougherty," she informed the woman, coolly. Dotty took the handbags away from her. "You can't fire people these days," she remarked. "I took it up with the N.L.R.B. and they said to give you another chance. If you didn't behave yourself I could have your frogs picketed."

A wan giggle escaped Tomi, and then she remembered.

"But I can't have people around me who can't be trusted."

"I should say not," agreed Dotty and pushed Tomi onto the divan, removed her hat, took off her high-heeled street shoes and replaced them with house slippers. She hurried into the kitchen and returned wheeling a tea-cart.

"As soon as I received the wire," she continued as though there had been no time lapse, "I went into action. You'd been betrayed somewhere between the farm and Los Angeles. I thought Allen might be up to something, so I called him home and the maid told me he'd left for the South on the same train you were on, and could be reached at the same hotel I'd told you about. As I hadn't told him, I started looking around for the fellow who had it. It was Abe."

"Abe!" cried Tomi. "I'll attend to him."

"Whoa, now wait a minute," warned Dotty. "He didn't know you wanted it kept a secret. Allen drove him to Alameda when his car broke down. He was there when he got your reservation, and probably bought one for himself at the same time."

"Next, he drove Abe to the telegraph office. All he had to do there would be to listen to the operator read the message back to Abe and he'd know where Tomi was making reservations."

Tomi nodded. "But Dotty, why didn't Abe tell me he had met Allen and had been with him all of that time?"

Mrs. Dougherty chuckled. "Abe said he'd rather have you think he'd doubled-crossed you, than to admit the ark had broken down again. And that, my love, is what you get for teasing him about his tin frog."

Tomi leaned back, relieved. The light supper was delicious, the hot tea fragrant and refreshing. She was home. She had Dotty and Abe—and—

"Where is Pierre?" she asked. "I guess he didn't see me come in. I'll guess not." But Dotty, in a peculiar tone. "You see—well, Tomi, Pierre isn't with us any more. He's gone back to Louisiana."

Tomi felt as though some foundation upon which she was depending had given way. Had Pierre been called home by illness, Dotty wouldn't have spoken in that peculiar tone.

But for Pierre to leave without waiting to see her, to leave while she was out of town?

"Didn't find a note pinned to his pillow, did you?" she asked flippantly.

Mrs. Dougherty shook her head. "No, he didn't take a note with him being unpinned. He mailed a letter to you via Uncle Sam." She handed Tomi a thin envelope, and bustled out of the room with the dishes.

Tomi opened the letter slowly. A glance at the message told her it was not a love letter. It had been prepared by a public stenographer. Puzzled, she read:

Dear Miss Toland:—

I'm sorry to leave during your absence, but my father is anxious to have me return to New Orleans immediately.

I have enjoyed my brief stay at the farm.

If you are ever in New Orleans, and are still interested in ranaiculture, you might drop me a line, and I will have someone call for you and take you on a tour of our holdings.

Very truly yours, Pierre Prudhomme.

'Just You And I'

TOMI read the letter three times, then wondered why she felt so ill. It must have been the salad. Pierre had gone away and dared to leave this stilted note. Pierre who had said he loved her; who had wanted to care for her; to protect her; to fight Allen in her behalf.

"He was all right Saturday," she thought. "And Sunday when he drove me to the train he kissed me goodby and promised to look after things for me."

Yet this letter was dated Monday. Something had happened between Sunday and Monday morning.

"Allen Bartell!"

But Allen was on the train Sunday. He was in Los Angeles all day Monday and she had gone out with him Monday night.

"I'll bet that is why he made that trip," she said aloud. "He wanted me to see he was not responsible, and meanwhile he left his dirty work for someone else to do."

Slowly Tomi went to her room, to stand before the west window and stare blankly into the summer dusk. That didn't excuse Pierre. Pierre had been the one to speak openly of Allen's underhand methods. No matter what had occurred to make him think of flight, he should have known it wasn't necessary.

"And no matter what provocation he had," Tomi reasoned, "if he had loved me just half as much as he said, he'd have stayed to warn me."

Tomi heard Abe's car go rattling and wheezing out of the yard. He hadn't waited to welcome her. He was afraid to face her.

Downstairs the telephone shrilled. Tomi heard Dotty's excited voice, then heard her calling as she ran upstairs.

"Tomi, Gladys did break a leg. They want me to come right away. One of the neighbors is calling for me in her car. You'll be all right here alone? Tomorrow's dinner is all ready. Gladys slipped on a rug."

Tomi helped Mrs. Dougherty pack her bag. The neighbor was there by the time she was ready.

"I'll have to stay with the children until she returns from the hospital," Dotty sang out as the car drove off.

Headlights came towards her. Three cars drove towards the farm, then turned left to stop before Allen Bartell's. High above the voices of girls and men came one familiar tone.

"Allen," boomed Great-aunt Hannah Toland, "Lily taught me to truck while you were South. Come on." A door closed. Allen must have flown back.

Tomi walked slowly into the dark house. She went to her room. From the west window she could see the garlands of lights which festooned Neptune Beach, the whirl of lights on the ferris wheel, the curving line of lights on the roller coaster.

She turned to the south window. Every window in the Bartell cottage was bright. Heads bobbed before them.

"They aren't inviting me to their party," thought Tomi.

She'd get away from this room where every window offered a comparison, her lonely life in contrast to the happy lives of others.

She turned on the lamp beside the divan and sat down, looked up. Timothy Toland smiled his oil-painted smile. Tomi's bruised heart eased. The old fellow looked kindly.

"Well, Uncle Tim," she sighed, "it looks as though just you and I are left."

No Emotions

TOMI faced the future with a bitter curve to her lips and sardonic laughter in her eyes. The laughter was for herself, directed at the Tomi Toland who had flown out from Chicago. She was wiser now.

Some good had come of Dotty's and Pierre's desertion. In the three months left before the close of the season she would have the nine hundred dollars which would have gone to their salaries. By living economically, she could save at least an additional two hundred in food and utilities.

Much to her amazement, the morning mail brought a check from Hannah Toland, covering the full amount of the bills incurred by the quarantine.

Midnight, the previous night, Great-aunt Hannah had talked to Allen at the party. They had felt sorry for her.

For a moment she grasped the check, ready to tear it to shreds, then she endorsed it. She'd need this to win. She couldn't indulge in emotions.

Tomi made just one business call. She went to see the railroad commissary agent. She talked for an hour and came out, defeated. Frogs' legs were not a staple commodity.

"We have to stock our trains with food which appeals to the general public," the agent explained. "Our space is limited. We must carry on such perishable foods as will be used each run."

Enroute home, Tomi stopped at a beauty parlor. Her hair, which had been growing long, was cropped to a close boyish cut.

At home, a key was turned on the dainty feminine clothes. The drawers of her wardrobe were draped with chain-knit skirts which would require no ironing, and khaki breeches.

Tomi was awake at dawn. For an hour she worked in the garden; did the work of the man she had discharged because she was counting pennies, but from that hour she drew strength to carry on through the day.

The cool, dew-sweet hour was balm to her bruised spirit. The flowers responded to her care. Gladioli and delphiniums faded and dahlias and zinnias blazed in their wake. These faded to make way for asters and cosmos.

The garden had become an entity; a child. She had to feed and care for it, whether it was to be her own or not.

N.C. Employment Service Aids Vocational Program

Releigh, March 29.—The North Carolina State Employment Service is working hand in hand with North Carolina's diversified occupations program. Director R. Mayne Albright says.

Objective of the program is promotion of serious occupational counseling and the placing of young people who have received their training at school.

Already twenty cities and towns have instituted the plan of teaching high school students a vocation by book and apprenticeship.

In Burlington the high school employment bureau conducted by the diversified occupations department is planning a reorganization which will call for greater cooperation with the Employment Service. Initial work of the expanded bureau will be registration of all high school seniors of at least 16 years of age who do not expect to attend college.

At Shelby a definite follow up program for vocational students at Shelby high school has been planned and will be launched about the time school closes this spring. The Shelby local office will probably carry on the follow-up plan during the summer months.

At Wilson where the Service and school are working together in the interest of vocational guidance and placement, the director of the State Employment Service was a speaker recently at a diversified occupations banquet.

A cooperative program between Thomasville high school and the Thomasville Employment Service office is soon to be started. By virtue of the new plan the local office will work with school officials in an effort to learn occupations in which graduating students are most interested and to assure the students of finding jobs.

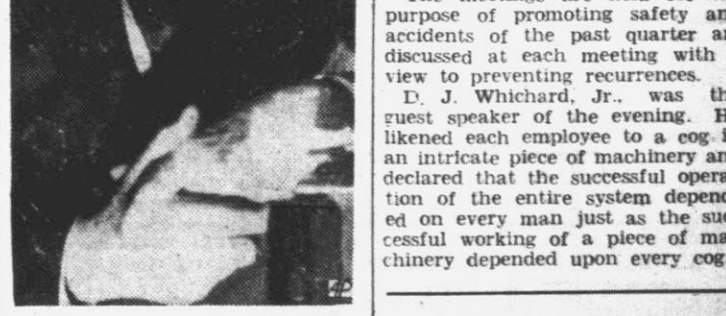

Officials and employees of the Water and Light Commission held their quarterly safety meeting dinner-session at the Rotary club building last night.

The meeting was well attended. Guests included two representatives of the Combustion Engineering Corporation who are here installing a steam generator at the local plant.

The meetings are held for the purpose of promoting safety and accidents of the past quarter are discussed at each meeting with a view to preventing recurrences.

D. J. Whitchard, Jr., was the guest speaker of the evening. He likened each employee to a cog in an intricate piece of machinery and declared that the successful operation of the entire system depended on every man just as the successful working of a piece of machinery depended upon every cog.

Gravely To Announce Managers Next Week

Reflector Bureau. Raleigh, March 29.—Crayon Efrid, state manager for Lee Gravely's gubernatorial campaign, believes that a political campaign can be likened to a "business deal" and that too much, or too early, publicity on certain phases is likely to defeat its own purposes. For instance, he told your reporter that there have been selected quite a number of Gravely county managers, but that to release them for publication at this time might "gum up" the Gravely game. He indicated that beginning with next week the political writers can count upon announcement of numerous Gravely county managers; and probably upon a quickening all along the line of the Gravely campaign tempo.

Strength For The Day

GIVE ME A GARAGE

A real estate man was talking to a young woman and trying to convince her that she and her husband should own their home. "Why should I own a home?" said the young woman. "I was born in a hospital, educated in a college, courted in an automobile, married in a church. My husband and I eat our meals in restaurants or live out of delicatessen shops. In the morning I play golf; in the afternoon bridge; my evenings I spend in the movies. When I die I shall be buried from an undertaking establishment. All I need is a garage."

Many people are asking today what the matter with America? One thing desperately the matter with it is that too many people are living this way. We are intended to live in homes. Marriage is most happy when it is stable. Most divorces are not the result of any of the charges which one of the parties makes against another, but purely because the contracting parties have got desperately sick and tired of each other. It is not to be wondered at when they live in a way that would shame the gypsies. Stability may seem rather prosy and uninteresting to some, but people can never be happy without it. SHOULD LIMIT TO ONE TERM

(Lumberton Robesonian)
In a recent address Governor Hoey, answering a question, said he thought the President of the United States should be limited to one term and that term should be for six years.

That is not a new idea but it is timely in view of the persistent effort to convince the people that President Roosevelt should be chosen for a third term, thus upsetting the time-honored custom of limiting a President to two terms.

It would be a fine thing if a constitutional amendment were adopted limiting the President to one term of six years.

The governor of North Carolina is limited to one term of four years. It has worked well in this state. Perhaps that has no little to do with the undisputed fact that North Carolina has had such a good line of governors. It is known of all men and acknowledged the country over, that North Carolina has a habit of choosing for governor only men of outstanding ability and high character.

Not every state in the union truthfully can make such a boast.

The practice has worked well in North Carolina. There is no good reason why the President of the United States should not be limited likewise.

Then there would not be the clamor of men whose jobs depend upon keeping a President in office to break the honored custom that has prevailed since the founding of this republic.

Washington.—Into the office of "Cactus Jack" Garner the other day came "Cactus Harry" Carey.

Occasion for the visit was simply that Carey was in town, making his return to the stage after 29 years. He wanted to see and chat with the vice-president, whose chair he occupied for that "Mr. Smith" movie.

Occasion for this yarn was that the two got to reminiscing and out of that came a remarkable example of how life goes round and round.

John Nance Garner, the son of a westerner, becomes a big politician. Harry Carey, the son of a big New York politician, becomes a westerner.

Mr. Garner, no doubt, could give Harry cards and spades and beat him to death at the political game but Carey Perry would have given Mr. Garner a run for his money.

"Pop," says Harry, "was one of old Richard Croker's Tammany district leaders in Brooklyn and a judge of the court of special sessions."

Carried An Umbrella
"He anticipated Chamberlain by about 50 years—used to wear a high silk hat and carry an umbrella, mainly for show. Only difference was he used it all the time—used it to keep the sun off as well as the rain."

"Golly, what a bunch of thieves they had around Tammany in those days. Even Pop had a franchise. It was for a two-mile horse-car railway through Pelham Bay park. Pop set it up and charged 10-cent fare."

"Seems like there was a state law in that time that a company couldn't charge more than five cents on any street railway, so Pop was called up to Albany, umbrella and all."

"They put him on the pan, told him he'd violated the law, and Pop says, 'Now, gentlemen, I know the law. For years I have been on the bench. Doesn't that law say that no one street railway company can charge more than five cents? But does it say anything about two companies not being able to charge five cents, each? Well, gentlemen, my two-mile railway is owned by two companies. One owns one mile, another the next. You can look up the articles of incorporation. And, gentlemen, if you want to sit here and issue an order that the thousands of poor people who ride those railways have to get off at the end of the first mile, in torrential rains and bitter cold, and transfer to the other company's railway just to comply with a silly law, then I guess I'll have to take the matter up with the voters.'"

"Well that was the last Pop ever heard of that."

More Trouble
"He did have a little trouble later on when they were building a wooden bridge across City Island. Pop wanted to run his horse-car line across there. They wouldn't stand for it. So one night, after the bridge was finished, Pop got a mixed gang of his Italian and Irish voters together and between midnight and dawn they laid those rails across that bridge."

"The next morning Old Debban was pulling the car across the bridge and the car was met with an armed force. Pop was on board and waving his umbrella. He just grinned when the car was stopped and he shouted: 'Gentlemen, if you want to hold up the United States mail, you'll have to take the consequences. And right in their faces he waved a full government mail pouch.'"

"How Pop ever got the United States government to throw in with him on that, I don't know, but that horse-car carried U. S. mail as long as the opposition could remember."

"Yes, Pop was a great politician," concludes Carey.

"Pop has my vote, Harry. He undoubtedly could give the modern boys axes in the hole and beat them with a deer-down draw, even with Vice President Garner in the game."

Raleigh, March 30.—North Carolina's gubernatorial race has been to "Gallup." Already two straw polls operated by weeklies have made their appearance.

The Sandhill Citizen has already released first scattering returns. First results confirm the generally held impression that J. M. Broughton is making a strong race, but the really surprising thing about it is that the poll shows Wilmington's Tom Cooper tied with Broughton for the lead, each with 23 per cent of the voters cast so far.

Others by percentages are Leon Governor W. P. Horton 15, A. Maxwell 13, Lee Gravelly 11 and Paul Grady 5.

The other poll is to be conducted by the Rockingham Post-Dispatch but it hasn't got round to tabulating any returns yet.

Under the tag line "Jobs," Bill Sharpe, in his lusty young weekly "Thursday" gives us this insight into the fickleness of politicians and the ease with which they leap from precipice to precipice.

Thousands Of Americans Have Been Cured Of Cancer

Now They're Forming A Club To Tell Others How To Get Well

President Roosevelt and Congress have set aside April as Cancer Control Month. Here is a story about the Cured Cancer Club, a unique organization that is doing a great deal to regulate and prevent the disease.

By DR. C. C. LITTLE
Managing Director, The American Society For The Control Of Cancer
Written For The AP Feature

Dr. Anna C. Palmer—50 to 75,000 Could Be Saved Each Year

Twenty years ago a woman physician in Massachusetts was operated upon for cancer of the breast. Today the same physician, Dr. Anna C. Palmer, now eighty-three years old, is the alert and crusading president of one of the most unusual organizations in the world: The Cured Cancer Club of the American Society for the Control of Cancer.

The club was formed two years ago, with Dr. Palmer as its organizer.

"Its purpose," she says, "is to break down the barriers of silence and fear that prevent men and women from learning about cancer. It is those of us who from our own experience know that cancer is curable, will talk about it as informally as we would of a broken arm, there will be a change in popular feeling. Our silence leaves the subject surrounded by terror and superstition and prevents the spread of knowledge that could save thousands of lives."

"Authorities agree that there are approximately 450,000 men, women and children in the United States today with cancer. Each year upwards of 150,000 of them die of it. Between one-third and one-half of these could and should be saved by early diagnosis and prompt, proper treatment."

From her small frame house in Milton, Mass., Dr. Palmer carries on a voluminous correspondence with those who write her from all parts of the U. S. asking questions that men and women are worrying about more today than ever before—questions such as "Is cancer curable?" and "What shall I do if I think I have cancer?"

Occasionally Dr. Palmer refers the letters to the American Society for the Control of Cancer at 350 Madison Avenue, New York. But most of them she answers herself in careful, strong language.

Collect Case Notes
No one knows just how many people who have been cured of cancer are alive today. The American College of Surgeons, long one of the leaders in the fight against this disease, has records in its files of 30,000 individuals who have had cancer, have been treated by x-rays, radium and surgery, and now, five or more years after their treatment, are entirely free of the disease. Dr. Frank E. Adair, chairman of the committee on cancer of the American College of Surgeons, recently issued an appeal to member doctors to send their records in for filing. He believes that there are at least 100,000 men and women who have been cured of cancer and are now in good health.

The Cured Cancer Club is growing slowly but steadily. Anyone may join who is certified by a recognized physician as having had the disease, been treated for it, and after five years, is free of any recurrence. There are no dues or expenses of any sort. However, those who join must be willing to be known publicly as cured-cancer patients.

Veteran Turns Teacher
One veteran of the fight against this disease is Charles Griffith Moses, a New York City real estate broker, who years ago was cured of cancer of the larynx. After his operation it was necessary for him to learn to use an artificial larynx, or mechanical voice box. He has become so adept in handling this kind of speech that he has taken up, as a hobby, teaching others how to master it. In recent years he has taught nearly a hundred men and women.

A woman member of the club Mrs. Lora Valadon of Rhode Island, a former circus performer, has been of great aid to the Women's Field Army of the American Society for the Control of Cancer in its educational program in Rhode Island.

Other members of the Cured Cancer Club are Mrs. G. A. Douglas, a housewife of Greenwich, Conn.; Mme. Winifred L. Fisher, a voice teacher of Sacramento, Calif.; John R. Leckie, a woodsman of Benedict, Minn.; Alonzo Gore Oakley, vice-president of an insurance company in New York City; Mrs. Ella K. Sizemore of Akron, Ohio; Miss Rosalind Winslow, a writer of Woodstock, N. Y.; and Miss Agnes C. Wood, a stenographer of Milwaukee, Wis.

As cancer is the most democratic of all diseases, striking men and women of every class and walk of life, it is not surprising that the membership of the club is composed of rich and poor, humble and powerful.

Many Don't Understand
Dr. Palmer's correspondence reveals that a great many people do not know that cancer is ever curable. The fact is that in its early stages, this disease, second only to heart trouble as a cause of death, is one of the most curable of all three cures: Surgery or x-rays or radium, used individually or in combination.

Another problem that faces men and women is what to do if cancer is suspected.

Dr. Palmer's answer and the answer given by all organizations is to go at once to a recognized physician or clinic. Lack of funds should not deter anyone from seeking medical help. Reputable physicians always take into account the financial ability of their patients.

one of the candidates, Calvin Graves, is a forthright Maxwellian by only a matter of a few days, and had already considered the position of working for Horton, according to three or four of his friends. Fred Hutchins blossomed as a Broughton supporter almost overnight, so far as the records go. J. T. Joyner has been handling Candidate J. M. Broughton's errands up here. And, of course, as reported already, the sanguine Alonzo Bolch, Jr., had already ripped a couple of his best shirts in behalf of Maxwell, before sending his erratic and optimistic way to the Horton stables.

Afflicted with a "crick in the neck," Mrs. Anna Kitchin Josey, Broughton women's State manager has found a new and effective cure.

"I just kept on bowing and scraping to all these politicians who come up to our headquarters," she confided to your Raleigh reporter. "It worked that crick out fine."

Candidate J. M. Broughton took time out long enough Thursday to attend a high school debate in which his son was a contender.

"It got me just a little out of the family doghouse, where I've been ever since Mrs. Broughton became a 'campaign widow,'" he jested.

Congressman Lon Folger, who was round visiting gubernatorial campaign headquarters Thursday and Friday, looked to be in better health than in many a long year.

Sandy Graham's manager in the heated 1936 race admitted that all the excitement around the various headquarters made him want to get back into the thick of the battle; but at the same time he gave no indication whatsoever of his preference for Governor, if he has any.

At Broughton headquarters he jokingly pointed to State Manager Emory Denny and said: "You see, they just have to have a 'Surry man'."

Denny, now a Gastonian is originally from Surry.

Clayton Efrud, Gravelly state manager and also a candidate for reelection to Stanley's House seat, will face fierce opposition in his own race. He is being opposed by one Kurtz, whom he defeated last time by less than a score of votes.

Smith Named President Of Ball Club; Wilson Manager

15 DIRECTORS ARE SELECTED

Ty Wagner Vice President and Dave Moore Secy.

Guy V. Smith whose name is synonymous with baseball in this section and who organized and headed the Greenville baseball club for years, last night was drafted as president of the local organization by the newly elected Board of Directors.

Immediately after the 15-man Board of Directors was chosen, a president, vice president and secretary-treasurer were named. Following this the directors immediately employed Hal (Rube) Wilson to manage the team for 1940.

Although it had been generally conceded that Rube would pilot the 1940 team, to be composed chiefly of rookies, no official action was possible until last night when the club was organized.

The organization meeting was presided over by David W. Mosier, president of the Junior Chamber of Commerce which organization undertook the task of selling stock in the club. The organization received a standing vote of thanks for its work in selling the stock "and putting baseball over for Greenville this year." It was reported that approximately 160 shares had been sold at $10 each to some 100 local men.

Immediately after going into session, the directors started out to name Mr. Smith president by acclamation. The veteran baseball enthusiast declared that while he loved the game and intended to keep in close touch with it as long as he was able, he added that the club was starting out anew, with younger men on the board and that he thought it might be a good idea to start out with a new president. As person after person rose to praise Mr. Smith for his work, his spirit of fairness in all dealings and the generosity with which he has given of his time and money, the man for whom the new baseball park is named, apparently touched by the kind words said about him, declared he was not trying to shirk any duty and whether he was named president or not he would have the interest of the baseball club at heart and would do all he could to help, the directors took him to infer that he would serve again if elected and unanimously declared him president for another year, with the understanding that they would name an active vice president to serve as an understudy.

The person selected for vice president appropriately was Ty Wagner, a player brought here some years ago by Mr. Smith, and Mr. Wagner also was declared the unanimous choice for the vice presidency.

D. C. Moore, Jr. whom Mr. Smith declared knew more about baseball rules, regulations, etc. than most anyone here and who was described as his "guiding light" was the unanimous choice for secretary-treasurer.

The 15-man Board of Directors, selected by a vote of the stockholders, is composed of Mr. Smith, Mr. Wagner, Mr. Moore, W. W. Lee, O. P. Matthews, Jack Spain, W. H. Dall, J. G. Clark, R. M. Garrett, Gus Forbes, Reynolds May (who also came here as a player at the same time as Ty Wagner), R. E. Harris, Jr., H. H. Duncan (who also came here as a baseball player), J. Con Lanier and David W. Mosier.

After discussing several questions relative to the opening of the season, including the use of turn-tees, renting the concessions, etc., the directors adjourned to meet again Monday night.

The list of the Board of Directors does not include one man who has meant much to Greenville baseball in the past. That man, whom everyone probably knows without mentioning, is M. O. Minges, who sent word that while the club would have his whole-hearted support and that he had subscribed to some stock because of his health and other pressing matters, he preferred not to be named to the board or to any office. Despite this, however, he received a number of votes for the board. His message was delivered after the stockholders starting marking their ballots and numerous persons had to remark their votes, already having voted for him.

McKechnie's Surprise This Year May Be Pitcher John Hutchings

By DILLON GRAHAM
Sports Editor, AP Feature Service
Tampa, Fla.—It's getting to be almost a spring custom for Bill McKechnie to come up with a surprise package.

Remember how, three years ago, he reached down into the minors and uncovered a pair of ancient old veterans who were the pitching sensations of the year — Jim Turner and Lou Fette? Each won 20 games.

Two years ago Bill spent a lot of early training time down here working on a wild young hurler that other managers had about given up on. When the season got under way that boy, Johnny Vander Meer, pitched the first pair of successive no-hit games in major league baseball history.

Hunch About Hutchings

Last spring McKechnie liked the looks of a young buster from Columbia, S. C. The brand of baseball there isn't too fast, and generally kids from any lower loop need more seasoning. But Willy Bill figured this kid was ready. And he was. Gene Thompson was one of the twirling stars of the year, winning 12 and losing 5. This year Turner, Vander Meer and Thompson, along with Paul Derringer and Bucky Walters, comprise the first five of Cincinnati's pitching staff.

McKechnie is tutoring several newcomers this year, but I've got a hunch his surprise may be 3'6", blond Johnny Hutchings, a good looking right hander who breezes a fast ball past the plate with whistling speed.

GENE THOMPSON
Just A Buster Last Spring

John is 23, has broad shoulders, stands 6 foot 2, weighs 205 pounds and gives the impression that he's strong enough to pitch all day and into the evening.

He's one of the greatest pitchers the Southeastern league ever produced. Burly Johnny set a new league record for strikeouts, whiffing 205 batters. He won 22 games and topped the league in earned run averages with 1.97. If you don't savvy that that is a remarkable performance, just remember that Bucky Walters led the National league with a figure of 2.29.

Johnny has been in baseball five years. He was playing sandlot ball around Chicago when a Cubs scout signed him to play for Peoria. He went out to the Cubs training camp at Catalina Island in 1936, but they figured he needed more seasoning. He's a Triple Threat.

He spent a season with Portsmouth, a short stretch with Birmingham and the last two years with Pensacola. He was almost a good two years ago as he was last season. He won 18 in 1938.

Hutch has a triple threat delivery. He mixes up his fast ball and his curve and confuses the batter by coming in first with an overhand pitch, then a side arm and finally an underhand toss. Hutch says he has equally good control with all of these deliveries. He averaged walking less than two men a game.

It's a good jump from Class B to the majors, but Hutch may make it. "He's a real prospect," says McKechnie. "Big and fast and strong, with a lot of stuff. He'll have to be brought along slowly, but I think we can use him."

Johnny Hutchings will be the 1940 surprise?

JOHNNY HUTCHINGS
Will He Be The 1940 Surprise?

MARTINS HAVE ACE BACKSTOP

The veteran Dixie Parker has been catching pro baseball on and off since 1918, when he started at Petersburg up in the old Virginia League. There never has been a better hustler back of the plate, and that includes the fiery Red O'Malley, whom Parker succeeds as manager of the Williamston Martins.

Dixie can still work around 50 games a year for his club if the occupational demands, and that's a testimonial to his hustling nature, for most veterans of his long service would have hung up the tools long ago.

Parker is a homespun philosopher. He'll tell you there is no such thing as a smart catcher. "When a man puts on those toils of torture," he says, "and squats down back of the plate he admits right then and there he's dumb as they come. No one with average mentality would think of being a catcher. In all the years I've been catching, I have envied outfielders. During each game, when I'm told back of the plate on that hard clay, I often think of those outfielders with their feet in the nice cool, soft grass, with hardly a thing to do and no one to second guess them when they didn't call for a curve instead of a fast ball."

But Dixie, after speaking facetiously about the job, will also tell you it holds the best future of any in the game. The proverbial teeth of the hen are easier to find today than good catchers. The young receiver who can handle the job is worth his weight in gold.

The major league rosters will show quite a few chaps who are not great hitters, but they hold their jobs as catchers, year in and year out, because they are capable receivers.

Coastal Plain fans will like Dixie Parker. He's a good mixer, a great hand with kids and he's been a hustler for over 20 years. The boys who make his club will have to hustle win, lose or draw.

Report Vacancies In Flying Cadet Corps

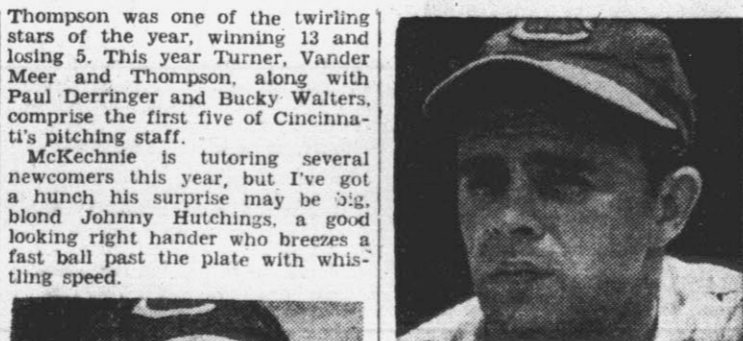

Information has been received at the local recruiting station that there are 375 vacancies for flying cadets in the May 15, 1940, class.

Candidates for appointment as flying cadets must be unmarried male citizens of the United States who at the time of application have reached the age of 20 and who have not reached the age of 27. An applicant must present a certified document from the office of the registrar of a recognized college or university showing that he has completed satisfactorily at least one-half of the necessary credits leading to a degree which normally requires 4 years' work, or must pass a written examination in lieu thereof.

They must be of excellent character and present evidence of that fact, and also of sound physique and in excellent health.

Further information may be obtained from Sergeant Jackson at the Army Recruiting Station, located at the City-County Armory, of this city.

years. He was playing sandlot ball around Chicago when a Cubs scout signed him to play for Peoria. He went out to the Cubs training camp at Catalina Island in 1936, but they figured he needed more seasoning. He's a Triple Threat.

He spent a season with Portsmouth, a short stretch with Birmingham and the last two years with Pensacola. He was almost a good two years ago as he was last season. He won 18 in 1938.

Hutch has a triple threat delivery. He mixes up his fast ball and his curve and confuses the batter by coming in first with an overhand pitch, then a side arm and finally an underhand toss. Hutch says he has equally good control with all of these deliveries. He averaged walking less than two men a game.

It's a good jump from Class B to the majors, but Hutch may make it. "He's a real prospect," says McKechnie. "Big and fast and strong, with a lot of stuff. He'll have to be brought along slowly, but I think we can use him."

Hollywood Sights And Sounds

By Robbin Coons

Hollywood.—The scene in "Tom Brown's School Days" was completed and Sir Cedric Hardwicke and Josephine Hutchinson were "holding it for a still."

Sir Cedric laughed. "I'm grinning like a Cheshire, and you ask me to smile!" With that, he used the tips of his forefingers to distend his lips, and struck a pose.

It was rather shocking, however amusing. To me, I mean. Maybe to others, too, but I should know better. I should know that actors aren't the people they are in pictures and plays. I shouldn't feel, watching Sir Cedric, that I am watching an austere, aloof, religious gentleman. That he was in the play "Shadow and Substance." That he has been in most of his films—a reverend fellow in whom prankishness is unbecoming.

But Sir Cedric himself assures me that the mantle of holiness was placed on his shoulders in America, that actually he is anything but an ascetic—and this despite his success in priestly and supernatural roles (like Mr. Brink in "On Borrowed Time"). He will remind you, too, that he has been happy in assorted villainies, as in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," in "Becky Sharp," in "The Invisible Man Returns."

Still one feels that one should doff one's hat and ask a blessing.

Actually, of course, Sir Cedric is a thoroughly human, amiable chap, neither saintly nor villainous. Once, when he was new here, his title caused no end of confusion. Many an underling, addressing him as "Mr. Hardwicke," retreated with red face, uncertain as to the etiquette of addressing an English knight.

Sir Cedric is a Shakespearean at heart, an actor of modern roles because the demand for Shakespeare is not what it was. When he was 12 years old, he engineered a neighborhood production of "The Merchant of Venice" to tragic-comic failure. At 14, he put on a "Hamlet" which persuaded his doctor father to permit him the pursuit of drama. It was Shakespearean drama—with the Benson company in South African tours—that gave him his first professional experience. After distinguished service in the war, Sir Cedric returned to the theater in 1921—not, however, to Shakespeare. Times had changed.

He has an interesting theory that the old-time Shakespearean stars, if alive today, would make political captives.

Check over the table setting at the last minute before the guests come in, Madame, to be sure everything's in its place.

And if the hostess has to serve, too, it's quite proper, and generally works out more comfortable, if the food is on the plates on the table before the guests are summoned to be seated.

In planning the meal, don't ask the maid to make a grand new dish or let her persuade you to let her try something she's never tackled before unless she's a born cook. Likewise, if you're the cook, it's best to serve tried dishes. The old stand-bys make the hits with guests, anyway.

If you know your guest likes roast beef especially well give him roast beef occasionally, at least. It isn't necessary to prepare fancy food to please him.

Even when the maid is serving a familiar menu, it's a good idea to remind her before guests arrive that hot dishes are good only when hot at eating time and that cold dishes must be adequately chilled. Many hostesses get their reputation for excellent food by remembering this.

If the salad fork is missing, don't apologize. Get it with a little fuss as possible. If it's your maid's fault, don't make her feel stupid, by reminding her before guests; that will only hinder her service.

After guests are gone, it's only fair to tell the maid her prize dish was appreciated, and it's very considerate for the family to tell mother the guests praised her food while she was in the kitchen.

dictators. Bosses of their careers, dominating the theater, playing power-mad kings and emperors, they had good training for one-man rule.

"Today, the actor is but the playwright's tool," Sir Cedric, one of the best, maintains. "The once-bare stage is filled with scenery. It is no longer the actor's work to paint that scenery with words, to exercise the audience's imagination. It is in keeping with the times—little is left to the imagination."

But I don't see him weeping over it all. I see him urbanely content to be a "playwright's tool." I see him using the tips of his fingers to distend his lips.

The meeting is open to the general public. Lieutenant-Governor W. P. Horton is the only gubernatorial candidate that will be present so far as is known now.

BABSON (Continued from page one) Under normal conditions I would feel that nothing need be done legisla-tively about the problem of working wives and husbands. To-day's conditions, however, are not normal. There are millions of men out of work, the government is sup-porting upwards of twenty million people, federal expenses have soared to an all-time peak. At least one-quarter of this money goes directly for relief and another 25 per cent for recovery "aids." In addition, nearly every town and city runs community chests.

Adding to Tax Burden Yet, from one end of the country to the other there are glaring exam-ples of wives holding down good jobs while their husbands are doing likewise. These cases cover public jobs as well as private employment. So long as we have to hand over one-quarter of our income every year to meet government bills (which have been pushed up to re-cord highs to support the jobless) then some type of formal action to stop this practice is bound to come.

A storm of controversy has raged around this subject for years. Pro-jectors of the home have thumped the tub against working wives on the basis that the place for the wife is in the home. They insist that if we wish to continue with our pres-ent system of the family as the unit of society, we must confine the wife to her real role of mother and homemaker. I think a lot of words are wasted in arguing along this line. If the family as the unit of society is going out the window, then we can not stem the tide sim-ply by putting a new law on the books. Only a spiritual family awak-ening will solve the problem prop-erly.

Real Objections Are Economic My only objection to married wo-men working is based on cold eco-nomic grounds. Working wives take many part-time jobs, they work at lower pay scales than single wo-men, they create a surplus of labor, they fill jobs that unemployed men could handle. The tide of resent-ment against the practice is rising steadily throughout the nation. I understand that two state legisla-tures have already adopted laws designed to force married women out of industry. Twenty-eight other legislatures have considered the subject.

Yet if legislation is to be adopted, I hope it will be practical, sensible, not too restrictive. There are hun-dreds and hundreds of cases that must be made exempt—cases where the wife must help support her own family, an unemployed brother's family, an aged mother or father. If any legislation is adopted, it should not automatically purge married women from industry. It should merely prohibit both hus-band and wife from holding certain types of jobs, especially government jobs. In many a family the wife makes a far better bread-win-ner than the husband. If the wife has the business ability then why shouldn't she hold the family job while the husband stays at home and changes the baby's diapers?

Should Recognize Trend Working wives can make out a splendid case for themselves. Yet I believe they would be smarter if they recognized this rising tide of national resentment against both husbands and wives working where there is no need for both to work. They would do far better to resign their jobs now and prevent restric-tive legislation—legislation which it may take years to repeal. We al-ready have too many regulations shackling employers and employees. But if wives insist on working when their husbands have good jobs, then they must face the day of reckon-ing.

N. Y. Stock Market New York, March 30.—(AP)—The stock market took on a slight "war bride" appearance today and reflected issues, led by steels, air rafts and specialties, pushed up frac-tions to more than a point. Odets To Witness High School Play

The Greenville High School Dramateers, winners of the Eastern North Carolina dramatic contest with "Waiting for Lefty," will have the distinct honor of playing be-fore Clifford Odets, author of the play, next Monday evening in Chapel Hill. Mr. Odets, who is consid-ered one of the outstanding person-alities in the dramatic world, is making the trip from New York to Chapel Hill especially to see the Greenville production.

Learning that Mr. Odets is in-terested enough to travel 600 miles to see a high school group present his play has given the dramateers the exact impetus needed to do the play better than ever. Naturally, the students participating in "Wait-ing for Lefty" are decidedly pleas-ed with this unique opportunity," declared Director R. G. Walsler.

Greenville will represent the Eastern part of the state with two plays at the North Carolina Drama Festival to be held at Chapel Hill, March 31 to April 7. "And He Came To His Father," a religious drama will be put on by the Little Theatre of Greenville, Sunday night. The Greenville high school Dramateers will present "Waiting for Lefty," a powerful drama about the poor labor con-ditions of today, on Monday night. The play, "And He Came To His Father," won first prize in a religious contest of the Drama League of America in 1935. The cast in-cludes: Richard Walsler, Edward Conway, Ruby Grant, Louis Skinner and Elizabeth Wilson.

Sixteen students constitute the cast of "Waiting for Lefty," which has been chosen as the best high school production in Eastern Caro-lina. The cast is as follows: George Tyndall, Verda Harris, Julia Ann Bland, H. R. Goodall, Herbert Lee, Gene Johnson, James L. Briley, Leonard Briley, James Worsley, Spencer Carroll, Bickett Carroll, Russell Rogerson, Thad Nobles, George Garrett, Thomas Campbell, and John Anderson.

"Waiting for Lefty" will be com-peting with "The Bond Between,"

Local Club Hears Tarboro Minister

The Rev. Chester Alexander, the Presbyterian minister of Tarboro who has been conducting a series of services at the local church of that denomination, was the prin-cipal speaker at last night's meet-ing of the Greenville Kiwanis club.

W. Clyde Hollowell was induct-ed into the club membership by Past President J. Frank Harrington. Two guests, Leslie Wall and Bill Jones, were present. Also present were the Crumpler twins who have been delegated as this state's rep-resentatives at the college twin re-union to be held in Waco, Texas.

The club members, in accordance with the action of other civic clubs, made contributions to help pay the expenses of the two ECTC fresh-men to and from the convention.

The meeting was presided over by Vice President S. M. Crisp, in the absence of President Clarence Patrick. Dink James had charge of the program and introduced the speaker.

Man About Manhattan

By George Tucker

New York.—A man from Michi-gan wrote a novel and sent it to us with this little note. "You get this published for me and we'll split."

I'd never heard of this man. I sent it right back to him without even looking at it. I don't know what the title was, or what it is about. Before I left it with the postman, I registered it.

A thing like that can be very annoying. Suppose this novel got lost. He could sue, and probably would. If I had kept it, and some-one else had along with it, simi-lar ideas, he could sue, and probably would.

Two years ago, an agent I know got a song from some fellow in the West. The song was returned. Re-cently, a song with a similar melody made a big hit. It was a best seller. This agent and the author of the hit, song are now being sued by this fellow from the West.

"If I had him here," the agent said thoughtfully, "I'd punch him. I'd cram his lousy song down his gullet."

"Was his song lousy?" "No. On the contrary it was a very good song. But it wasn't timely. It didn't tell. The publishers didn't want it, or didn't have sense enough to anticipate its merits, and let it go. I returned it to him. Now I'm a defendant."

A lot of people have the idea that because they aren't well known their stuff doesn't receive fair treat-ment. That isn't true. It isn't true with reputable publishers. I can tell you. Everything that comes in is read, and closely. The outstanding mystery novel of last year came in cold—just bobbed up in the mail.

But that isn't a good policy. Peo-ple ought to work through agents. That man in Michigan ought to get himself a good agent. Maybe he's another Sinclair Lewis. Maybe he's not. An agent will tell him, and quickly. Recognized agents are thoroughly reliable. They have to be. And they know what they are talking about. They have to guess right, or they starve. If an agent accepts your manuscript, it has a chance. If he refuses it, take his word for it that it is no good, and try again.
