STRONG WINDS HIT SECTIONS OF CAROLINAS

Negro Woman Killed By Tornado in Anson County

HEAVY DAMAGES IN OTHER AREAS

Victim, Husband and Their Five Children Carried Through the Air About a Quarter Of A Mile

Charlotte, April 20. (AP) — A tornado that struck Morven, N. C., late yesterday caused at least one death and did considerable damage, while windstorms of varying force caused minor damage in widely separated parts of the Carolinas.

Pauline Cox, a Negro, died at a hospital of injuries received when the tornado struck Morven around 7 p. m. Damage there appeared heavier than at first reported. John Cox, husband of Pauline, suffered a broken leg and other injuries when the couple and their five children were carried through the air about a quarter of a mile from their dwelling which was demolished. Two of the children were believed seriously hurt.

At Mount Holly, N. C., a cotton gin, a frame pool room and cafe were destroyed, as well as two small residences. A man was slightly hurt. Morven is in Anson county.

A few miles away, near Chesterfield, S. C., a number of farm buildings were destroyed or unroofed. Chesterfield was without electricity all night.

Scores of trees in the residential section of Abbeville, S. C., were uprooted. A few buildings were damaged.

Dr. Idleman Heard By ECTC Students

"Do not stop with accepting life as a trust," said Dr. Finis S. Idleman of New York City, in speaking to the student body of East Carolina Teachers College at chapel Friday, "but take off your coat, figuratively, saying 'I want to have a hand in things'."

Dr. Idleman began by relating an incident from the celebration of the two hundred fiftieth anniversary of the founding of Harvard. "Harvard University has been waiting 250 years for us," read the banner which the freshmen carried on that occasion.

"I wouldn't say the world is just waiting to receive you when you graduate," Dr. Idleman continued, "but that it is waiting with various laws, by which you must be governed."

The first law mentioned, the law of the trail, says, "When you've taken what you want, put back as much as you took out." Mountain climbers, the speaker said, always learn that this law holds in any cabin found at the top.

The law of culture, as George Bernard Shaw states it, "You must put back more than you took out," is a higher law, Dr. Idleman continued, "but it is not yet the highest."

"I am debtor to the Greek and the barbarian," said Paul, thus recognizing the highest law, the law of Christianity, which looks on life as a trust.

Dr. Idleman spoke of Dr. W. T. Grenfell, Jane Addams, and Robert Louis Stevenson as three people who accepted this trust. So beautiful did this make the life of Stevenson that the people on the island in the South Seas, where he spent his last days, although they couldn't speak his language, built for him the "Road of the Loving Heart."

A sea captain when told what they were doing, pulled off his coat saying, "Give me a shovel; I want to have a hand in that."

"Life demands that of you," Dr. Idleman said in closing. "The world needs to have you say, 'I want a hand in that.'"

Plan Special Service For Simpson Church

The Salem Methodist church of Simpson will hold a special service at 8 o'clock tomorrow night honoring members of the local 4-H and Home Demonstration clubs.

The service will be in the form of a recognition program for the two clubs. C. D. Griggs, assistant county agent in charge of club activities, will make a special talk preceding the sermon by the pastor, Rev. W. A. Crow, who will discuss "The Marks of a Good Citizen."

The church is cooperating with the Home Demonstration and 4-H club members in bringing to the attention of the congregation the importance of better homes and of the work being promoted by the clubs throughout the nation.

Major Battle In Norway Believed To Be In Making

In Agreement

Washington, D. C. April 20 (AP)—The Japanese ambassador said after nearly an hour's conference with Secretary Hull today that the United States and Japan were in substantial agreement as to the future status of the Dutch East Indies.

He added that both governments, along with the Netherlands, the island's country, "want to maintain the status quo."

"Japan is maintaining a policy of non-involvement in the European war," the ambassador told reporters, adding that he saw no likelihood of change.

He said that at his government's request he explained Tokyo's attitude toward the possibility that the Pacific islands might be involved in a backlash of the war should the Netherlands be involved.

The conference followed statements by the United States and Japan that both nations regarded as vital that the island's status not be changed.

BELIEVES HULL WOULD ACCEPT

Friend Says Hull Would Run If FDR Declines

Washington, April 20.—(AP)—A high official who is a close friend of Secretary Hull expressed belief today that the state department chief would be willing to accept the democratic presidential nomination if President Roosevelt did not want it.

This statement was made after Hull had reiterated yesterday that he had no political ambitions and that he was not a candidate for anything.

The high official, who is also close to President Roosevelt, declined to be quoted by name.

He predicted that Secretary Hull would be in a strong position at the democratic convention if Mr. Roosevelt was not a candidate.

At the outset, he said, the secretary would be sure of all the Tennessee delegation and with it the Kentucky delegation.

He forecast also that, with the support of Governor Hoey of North Carolina, Hull would have all or most of that state.

To that he added Nebraska and probably Iowa and Maryland.

The official also said Hull would get Texas after the initial ballot had been cast for Vice President Garner.

He said the same would be true of Indiana after the first ballot had been cast for Paul McNutt.

He claimed half of the New York delegation for Hull.

Considers Probing Orphanage In S. C.

Spartanburg, S. C. April 20. (AP)—The county grand jury convening here Monday will be asked to investigate alleged "merciless whippings" of at least two young boys at the Spartanburg county orphanage.

Solicitor Sam Watt of the seventh circuit announced yesterday he would ask the grand jury to investigate conditions at the orphanage.

Later the orphanage board of trustees concluded a six-hour hearing and voted also to ask the grand jury to make a "full and complete" probe.

Judge Charles M. Page of county court, last Thursday signed an order removing from the orphanage two 12-year-old boys, Earl Cannon and Roland Sizemore.

These boys, testifying before the trustees yesterday, said they were beaten by Supt. George T. Johnson with a leather dog leash the night of April 2.

Officials Praise Work Of Matrons

Parents and other interested friends are invited to visit the Training school to see the work that is being done by the matrons there through the WPA. The matrons take care of the basements, administer first aid treatment under the supervision of the school authorities, look after the first aid room, assist small children in washing their faces and hands, look after the children who come in wet on rainy days and mend clothing torn while the children are playing.

Germany Observes Hitler's Birthday; Nazis Said To Have Suffered Losses In Norway

By The Associated Press

A battle of major proportions appeared to be in the making in Norway today, as the German and allied expeditionary forces, augmented by a steady flow of reinforcements, felt each other out on an ever-widening front.

Unofficial reports said that one French and two British divisions, totalling between 30,000 and 40,000 men, had been landed at three widely separated coastal points and that the Allies apparently were planning a thrust at the German-occupied port of Trondheim, key to central Norway.

A British report said British and French soldiers reached Norway without a single life being lost, which the Press Association, British news agency, hailed as proving "more than anything else" the complete control the allied fleets have over sea routes.

On the trade front Britain informed Soviet Russia she was willing to discuss a trade agreement, negotiations for which originally were broken off when Germany and Russia reached a non-aggression pact before the European war started.

The Germans, meanwhile engaged in extending their grip on southern Norway, were estimated to have increased their expeditionary force to between 60,000 and 80,000 men—largely through reinforcements transported into the country by planes.

From Berlin, celebrating Adolf Hitler's 51st birthday, came words of defiance and predictions of ultimate victory, bolstered by reports of a new trade treaty with Rumania, strengthening the Reich's economic position.

Under the terms of the agreement, Rumania—possessor of vast wealth in the form of oil and wheat—was understood to have granted Germany new trade concessions in return for war materials and fighting planes.

Negro Boy Killed On Belvoir Road

Elbert Bradley, eight-year-old Negro boy, son of John Bradley, who lives on G. V. Smith's farm on the Belvoir road, died at 3:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon of injuries he sustained about 10 o'clock yesterday morning when he was struck by an automobile being driven by W. W. Mayo, Negro man who lives on E. J. Garrett's farm also on the Belvoir road.

The accident occurred about three miles from the city near the victim's home.

According to Mayo, the Bradley boy and another boy were walking along the side of the road and the Barrett boy started to run across the highway directly in front of the automobile.

Holt Evans of Williamston, was named president. Crosby Wyche of southern Maryland was elected secretary-treasurer of the newly organized association.

Mr. Keel of this city is erecting a warehouse, to be 336 by 112 feet, which will be completed in time for the opening of the market. It will be one of the largest warehouses in Maryland, which state will operate six houses this year.

Maryland only recently has gone into the tobacco growing business on a comparatively large scale and the government estimates place the 1940 crop at 32 million pounds. The Maryland tobacco is cured by air and the crop harvested last fall will be sold during the auction season opening in May.

The Maryland markets are Upper Marlboro, two warehouses; Waldorf, one warehouse; La Plata, one warehouse; and Hughesville, two warehouses.

In addition to the warehouse under construction, Mr. Keel has erected a storage and packing company of Durham, the first of its kind in Maryland. The firm operates as the Dixie Leaf Tobacco Company in Kinston.

President Speaks At 10:45 Tonight

Warm Springs, Ga., April 20. (AP)—Back in the familiar surroundings of the little White House and the Warm Springs infantile paralysis foundation, President Roosevelt concentrated his attention today on completing a potentially significant political speech to be made at Young Democratic club tonight.

At 9:45 p. m. (CST) he is going on the air with his speech.

Young Democrats assembled at dinners over the nation will hear it. Many a politician will be listening, too, for a possible clue to Mr. Roosevelt's intention toward a third term or to whom the President prefers as his successor.

JURORS DIVIDE IN AUTO CASE

Mistrial Ordered In Automobile Burning Charge

A Pitt county jury failed to reach a verdict in the case charging Fred Roach and Gray Dudley with burning an automobile after deliberating from about noon until nearly 6 o'clock yesterday afternoon and Judge Walter Bone declared a mistrial when the jurors reported they were apparently hopelessly deadlocked.

The jury was declared to have stood nine to three for conviction of Roach. The case against Dudley was never considered by the jurors, it was reported.

The case was started Thursday, took all of that afternoon and Friday morning before being given to the jury. It was hard fought throughout, with D. M. Clark prosecuting, L. W. Gaylord representing Roach and Jack Spain appearing for Dudley.

Heber Stox, another defendant, turned state's witness and the case against him was not pressed.

The defendant, an alleged burglar, was charged with having purposely burned the car on the night of November 7, last year. Milton Kirkpatrick, who was in the car, is still in a serious condition from burns sustained which necessitated the amputation of a leg.

Two other cases were disposed of yesterday afternoon. Jim Allen, Negro, was given four months on a highway charge and George Buck, white man, was given three months for stealing chickens.

Give Railroads a Fair Show

Babson Says Hurry Up Reorganization Of Nation's Carriers

New York City, April 20.—Only rates on many a jump, like the railroads, they are soon to segregate their mail, express, and passenger business. A year or two and we will see freight trains of the air! This is the subrosa idea for using the thousands of military airplanes which, after the European war, will be available for commercial purposes.

The planes are great time-savers. Their safety record gets better every year—actually beat the railroads in 1939. They are clean and comfortable, give wonderful service, and are still far behind the air lines. They need new blood, younger personnel, men trained in public relations. Instead of disagreeable ticket agents, cold and impersonal train crews, they need employees who like making passengers and shippers comfortable and happy. The colored railroaders, closer to filling the bill than the high-paid conductors.

Local Boy Scouts Fared OK In Rain

S. B. Underwood, Jr. Scout commissioner, reported this morning that he had been advised from Kingston that the approximately 100 Greenville Boy Scouts attending the Camporee in Kingston "survived the rain and are getting along fine."

Commissioner Underwood said that he was advised that the Greenville boys got their tents pitched before it started raining and that none of them got wet during the downpour.

Although some of the Scouts attending the annual affair had to move in larger tents on account of the rain, all of the Greenville boys were "kept dry in their own."

The Camporee was progressing on schedule today, with the big circus scheduled for tonight. In case of rain the circus will be held in a building. The public is invited to attend the circus and a number from here are invited to attend.

A Greenville Scout, Pat Corey, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Hicks Corey, is to be presented his Eagle badge during the encampment.

Oxford Singing Class In Grifton Wednesday

The Oxford Orphanage Singing Class will present a concert at the Grifton community building on Wednesday night of next week at 8 o'clock, under the sponsorship of the Grifton Masonic lodge.

Large Crowd Expected To Attend YDC Fete Here

Practically all arrangements had been made today for the district YDC rally to be held in the city-county Armory building here Monday night, at which time United States Senator Josh Lee of Oklahoma will deliver the principal address.

The address will be the feature of a dinner program scheduled to get under way at 7:30 o'clock.

Miss Patsy Davenport, district vice chairman and also vice president of the local Young Democratic club, declared today that plates would be set for 350 persons. She declared that approximately 150 Pitt county democrats were expected to be here.

Miss Patsy Davenport, district vice chairman and also vice president of the local Young Democratic club, declared today that plates would be set for 350 persons. She declared that approximately 150 Pitt county democrats were expected to be here.

Word has been received from Raleigh that a delegation of approximately 25 would be here for the rally, and YDC members from all sections of northeastern North Carolina are expected.

Gubernatorial candidates and candidates for other state offices are expected to converge on the city for the event. Among those who have signified their intention to be here, although many more are expected, include Paul Grady, candidate for governor; Kerr Scott, candidate for reelection as commissioner of agriculture; D. L. Ward, speaker of the House of Representatives in the last legislature; Thad Eure, candidate for reelection as secretary of state; Erskine Smith, candidate for lieutenant governor.

State YDC officials also have advised that they would be here. Both State President Forrest Pollard of Durham and Vice President Beulah Langston of Raleigh are expected to attend, as well as Past Presidents Gordon Gray of Winston-Salem and Arch Allen of Raleigh. Miss Mary Graham Croom of Raleigh, national committeewoman, also plans to be here.

A delegation of prominent Greenville Democrats will meet Senator Lee in Rocky Mount Monday night and escort him here for the rally. He will be returned to Rocky Mount that night, and enroute for the return trip to Washington. He is making the trip to North Carolina for the sole purpose of addressing the rally and officials have expressed themselves as fortunate in securing him for the address.

The speaker, one of the most outstanding speakers in the Senate and staunch New Dealer, will be introduced by Hoover Taft, state organizer.

Senator Lee has been proclaimed as one of the greatest orators in American public life. George Creel, writing in Colliers magazine, said "Josh Lee is the closest approach to Delors that this country has ever produced. Watching him speak is a graduate course in synchronization, for not only are his voice and hands symphonic, but even his ears and toes contribute to swelling harmonies."

He Says He's 128

Sayed Mehren (above) of Chicago told a census enumerator he is 128 years old. And what's more, he presented documents designed to prove it. Mehren said he was born in Cairo, Egypt and has lived in Chicago since 1893. He became a United States citizen in 1899 and now draws an old age pension of $30 a month.

FRANCE SEEKS ITALIAN PACT

Looks to Entente with Italy And Spain Included

Paris, April 20.—(AP)—Premier Paul Reynaud told the Senate Foreign Affairs committee today that France was looking toward a "Mediterranean Entente" with Italy and Spain and has continued "a friendly exchange of views" with those two countries since the beginning of the war.

The fact that such overtures have failed to bring an Italian response, the premier declared, has not changed the French attitude.

Such a Mediterranean entente, said a communique issued by the committee, is regarded by the French as "one of the indispensable bases of peace."

In the hope of reaching such an entente, the premier told the committee, "France would continue equitable regulation of all pending questions" with Italy.

Reynaud cited recent speeches by President Roosevelt condemning aggression and praised "the common ideals which motivate the large democracies," the communique said.

This communique said Reynaud described in detail the "efforts which France has put forth during the past few months" for a settlement of existing differences with Italy.

Ford Gets Orders From Labor Board

Washington, D. C., April 20 (AP)—The Ford Motor Company charged by a Labor board examiner with using a "strongarm squad" to beat and terrorize union members, was confronted today with an unprecedented proposal that it notify individually its more than 100,000 workers that they are free to join any labor union of their own choosing.

The recommendation that the company be required to give such notification was made by Robert N. Denham, the examiner, in a report to the board holding that the company had "gathered together the most brutal, vicious and consciousness thugs in its employ" to defeat union organization at the Ford plant in Dallas, Texas, in 1937.

Gabe P. Allen, an attorney for the Ford Company commented at Dallas that the examiner's charge was "just a conclusion and wild inference" designed to carry out the Labor board's policy of "persecuting a company." Declaring the findings were not warranted by the evidence, he said that he and other Ford attorneys would file exceptions to them and to the accompanying recommendations.

Pitt Farmers Already Setting Out Tobacco

Although the tobacco crop in general is two or three weeks behind last year, at least two farmers who live on the Cox's Mill road, Tom Moore and Jim Wrenn, have started setting out their plants.

The two farmers began setting out plants today and reported that they had plenty of plants now ready to set out their entire crop.

FAST EXPRESS RUNNING LATE

Nine of 16-Car New York-Chicago Lake Shore Limited Is Transformed Into Mass Of Twisted Steel After Hurling Tracks On A Wide Curve; Speed Is Believed Responsible

Little Falls, N. Y., April 20.—(AP)—The New York Chicago Lake Shore Limited, roaring westward along the Mohawk valley 15 minutes behind schedule, hurtled through the night shortly before midnight last night carrying at least 25 persons to death and leaving 100 injured.

With most of the 250 to 300 passengers asleep, nine cars of the 16-car New York Central fast express were turned in a flash into a mass of twisted steel as they were derailed on a wide curve and piled for half a mile along the main Buffalo barge canal.

Railroad men investigating the wreck vowed belief the train, taking the curve at high speed, sprung the rails.

The locomotive plunged across a highway into a rock embankment, tossing the fireman to instant death and pinning the engineer in a battered cab where he died three hours later.

The high-speed train, which was derailed with a crash, came down the tracks as a can of sardines, top ripped off and the inside complete wreck. A pullman car, resting on its right side, from several bodies were removed.

The dead, the injured, car cushions, clothing and personal effects were strewn along the right-of-way. Feet of some of the victims protruded from the wreckage.

State Police Lieutenant John P. Nolan said 28 bodies were removed in addition to those of the engine and fireman. Identification of victims was made difficult because most of them were in sleeping attire.

City Is Visited By Two Of Candidates

Two gubernatorial candidates were Greenville visitors yesterday. J. M. Broughton of Raleigh graded a large number of friends made many new acquaintances and ing his brief stop at the Pro hotel.

Last night Paul Grady of Knoxville also made a short visit here, stopping at the same hotel and welcomed by a number of friends and acquaintances.

Mr. Grady stated that he would be back here Monday night to attend the district YDC rally. O. candidates also are expected to be here for the gathering.

Reappoints Moore As N.C. ABC Head

Raleigh, April 20 (AP)—Governor Hoey today reappointed Earl Moore as chairman of the State Board of Alcohol Control, a post he has held since the agency was organized in April, 1937.

The new term expires April 1943.

"Mr. Moore has filled this difficult post with ability and fidelity and has given general satisfaction," Governor Hoey commented in announcing the reappointment.

The post carries a $6,000 salary, fixed by statute.

first-grade teacher, gave a program with some of her pupils, "The Toy Orchestra." They deserve much credit for their talent.

Miss Vaughan, home economics teacher, assisted by several girls served lemonade, cakes and salted pecans.

All the rooms were beautiful with lovely flowers and all grades displayed their accomplishments of the year's work.

Much interest was shown by P. T. A. members and all other parents of school, as well as our visitors.

The Druid's Club members went on a water skid to Public Landing on Thursday night, chaperoned by Mr. Carr, principal of the school.

The sudden death of Jimmie Hardee, resident of our community, was a shock to his friends and relatives.

May the Lord comfort each of them in their hours of bereavement.

To My Child

Little feet that play increasingly,
It seems that they, so tired must be,
And yet when I from work must flee,
Thou art never too tired to run to me.

Thy little ups and downs to tell,
When my mind's too tired to even tell
The right from wrong of your childish play.

Please wait for mother to rest I pray,
And then with a tumble off his little chin,
He starts anew at play again.

His heart as free as a little bird,
Since the sound of his mother's voice he's heard,
Would the Master's voice we all could hear.

And yield to his pleadings as my child, so dear.

When a mother's too tired for her child, you see,

It seems the Master so tired must be.

LITTLE SPITEFIRE

By Jean Randall

YESTERDAY: Still another resident of The Street asks Brenda's advice. Middle-aged Maud VanNess thinks Judge Harper is in love with her but too shy to propose.

Chapter 15

Temporary Comradeship

BRENDA'S eyes narrowed, all the laughter gone. Was this one of the queer cases one read about? Maud VanNess talked and looked like a character out of an O'Neill play. All very well to discuss them in the abstract, these characters, read about them; an entirely different thing to be sitting in the same room with one, listening to her raving. Brenda rose decisively.

"I'm afraid I can't give you any advice, Miss VanNess. I've never encountered the difficult which appears to be bothering you. And I really must go now!"

Back in her own room she reviewed the conversation incredulously. It simply could not be! Old maids like Maud VanNess didn't exist out of plays and books.

"Aunt Anne told me I'd find The Street an interesting place," she mused, "but she didn't warn me that it was entirely inhabited by freaks."

Her conscience smote her at that last word. Isobel wasn't a freak, nor Eric, nor Mac; certainly not Hugh Saltus, nor kindly Adelaide, nor even the foolish twins.

In her preoccupation she had forgotten to close her door and when she was interrupted by a tap on it, Mac stood in the hall, smiling at her.

"You? This early in the afternoon?"

"I've just bought a car," he informed her. "Not a lordly new one like Saltus's, but a darned good car, for all that. Will you come for a little ride with me and try it out?"

She hesitated. Here was a beautiful chance to snub the man whom she had told Hugh she cordially disliked; but her luncheon with Maud VanNess had spoiled her day, she was tired of thinking, the prospect of driving through the late afternoon allured her. She caught up her hat and followed him.

"I didn't know you were considering buying a car," she said. "I'm a creature of impulse," he informed her gravely. "I was busy with the layout for our Complete College Outfit when suddenly the notion struck me and out I darted and picked up this little model."

"I thought there was a lot of red tape about buying cars—licenses and titles and things like that."

"That can all be attended to tomorrow. The fellow that sold me the car wanted me to try it out anyway."

She glanced at him sharply. Something—some extra note of cheerfulness in his voice, some fleeting air of nonchalance in his manner—aroused her suspicion.

"Mac!"

"Golly, Brenda, don't yell at me like that! I darn near ran into that truck."

"Mac, did Adelaide tell you I was having lunch with Maud VanNess?"

"One Swell Sport!"

LIS eyes were too innocent, his tone too surprised.

"Why on earth should she tell me that, Brenda? Did you have a nice heart-to-heart with the fair Maud?"

"I believe Adelaide did," the girl said slowly, more to herself than to her companion. "I believe you made up your mind that I've been getting too large a dose of The Street—of its anxieties and peculiarities."

"He looked like a small boy caught with streaks of jam on his face."

"I—but I've been needing a car," he protested. "You can ask Isobel—you can ask Eric if I haven't talked about getting one! I suppose Maud told you about the Judge?"

Brenda nodded. "Yes, the poor foolish woman! I wish there was something I could do to help her!"

To her astonishment he drove the car close to the curb, stopped it and turning, took both her hands in his.

"Brenda, you're one swell sport! To take it like that, I mean, Lots of girls—most of them, in fact—would merely make fun of a poor old maid like Maud. I apologize for anything I ever said about your writing! Anybody as sweet and understanding as human nature as you've proved yourself since you came here is certainly cut out for a first-class author!"

She felt herself glowing with pride, partly because of Mac's praise of her, partly because he was, at last, appreciating her literary talent. To be sure she had not yet progressed from the second square on her cardboard to the third, but she felt that Mac's encouragement would dissolve all her difficulties. She had heard a good deal of talk in the Village about the necessity of a sympathetic atmosphere for the artist. She had secretly believed this to be a pose. Now she wondered if there might not be some truth in it; if Mac's unqualified amusement over her work, Eric's indifference to it, The Street's disapproval, might not have exerted a stupefying effect upon her creative ability.

For a few moments she toyed with the idea of confiding the plot of her book to Mac, but wisdom prevailed, and she made no mention of the Masterpiece-in-the-Making awaiting her in her own room.

However, she did tell Mac about Ab's abominable, and her belief that an injustice had been done Alaine's persistent suitor.

"The least we can do, it seems to me," she said earnestly, "is to give him a chance to explain. It isn't fair to judge him by circumstantial evidence, Mac."

"No, I suppose not," he was frowning not so much over Ned Barrow's supposed past as over Brenda's knowledge of it. "I hate having you pitchforked into all this!" he burst forth.

Two Letters

SHE laughed. "My dear Mac, do you think I'm a child! And let me tell you something—Alaine isn't either—child, I mean. You and Ab have behaved very foolishly about this whole business with Ned. Ask him about it when he comes back from California. If it's true—that he's the father of that little boy, I mean, she went on despite the growing darkness of Mac's frown, "then tell Alaine the whole story. I am sure you can rely on her good judgment in the matter."

"Alaine has no judgment," he retorted coldly.

"There's exactly where you're wrong! You and Ab have treated her as if she were a baby and naturally she resents it. Any girl would! What business is it of Ab's to say how her gowns shall be cut, or what sort of swimming suits she shall wear? I don't wonder she threatens to elope! I would too in her place!"

Her cheeks were scarlet, her eyes glowing with anger. Mac leaned forward and turned on the ignition, touched the starter.

"I don't think you're the proper person to advise Alaine. She's headstrong enough as it is. I shall tell Ab—"

Gone was their new-formed sense of comradeship; gone Mac's admiration of her attitude toward The Street, her gratitude for his sympathy. They quarreled sharply half the way home, drove the rest in icy silence.

At the end of a fortnight Brenda was back on the first square of her book. To be sure she had written steadily every day but the results had frankly disgusted her. It did not add to her peace of mind to realize that each evening she read over the day's work through Mac's eyes, and found it sorely lacking in excellence.

"I'm being frustrated," she told herself in surprise. "Mac is telling me that I did not know where I was going."

She wondered if, such being the case, she should not leave The Shortest Street; leave the city, for that matter. Then her small chin came up and she decided definitely that Mac or no Mac she would write her book right here; and that it would be a good book, too.

On the morning she crowded the wastepaper basket with typewritten yellow sheets and returned to Square One, she received two important letters.

Now according to her own carefully formulated rules, she had no business reading those letters before noon. Grenadine had standing instructions to slip the mail quietly under the door and leave it. So far all times Brenda had proudly ignored it for an hour or two; but usually healthy curiosity and interest got the better of her, and she snatched up the mail and ripped open the envelopes before the sound of the maid's heavy footsteps had died away.

This morning she uncovered with avidity one especial letter, bearing a New York postmark. After she had read it twice, she rose up and, bareheaded, and coatless, darted out of the old Burnham house.

Across the street Dorothy was sweeping Mrs. Arnold's porch. At sight of Brenda she dropped her broom and made urgent detaining gestures while she moved toward the girl as rapidly as her somewhat ponderous figure permitted.

"Miss Brenda! Oh, Miss Brenda!"

By O. P. MATTHEWS
(Past President Merchants' Association)

One of the guiding principles of our English system of jurisprudence is the fundamental rule that a man is innocent until proved guilty, and this rule has been applauded by the philosophers and thinkers of many countries as being the very foundation of justice. In business there is a fundamental rule that is markedly similar to this one. Until proved unworthy of trust, have confidence in the person or company with whom you deal. Except in the case of fraudulent or crooked dealings, which are extremely few in proportion to the number of business transactions made, the confidence for you show will be met by a return of confidence and by a greater willingness to serve.

In the case of the local merchants this confidence of yours cannot be misplaced. The desire of every business organization that serves the public is to please its customers and establish the firm in the good will of the community. Local businesses are dependent upon this public show of confidence for the continued operation of their business, and they judge the amount of confidence by the number of transactions that you, as the public, make with them. Local merchants must stand behind every item of service or goods that they sell, because they can be held directly responsible for the satisfaction you receive from your purchase. Of course this is not so true of foreign merchants, in which case the transaction is certain to be more impersonal and more indirect. It is a community, as well as a personal advantage, for you to avail yourself of every opportunity to know the people from whom you buy and to whom you sell. That will certainly be the case if you buy first at home. Your confidence in him is the local merchant's reward for his business integrity and for his continued effort to serve the public.

Those who hold this idea think

This angle had been a source of some worry to the Rooseveltians long before the governor said anything about the matter. There were many who pointed out the absurdity of holding the organization out as designed to support Roosevelt for president and at the same time promising to vote for another on what will be the only ballot taken should the president finally decide to leave.

But the Hoy's first ballot angle is after all only a minor one and there are many other aspects of the situation which are of much greater importance and interest. It is on these other angles that there is such divergence of opinion.

Perhaps the most generally held theory, in the main, is that the statement of Governor Hoy is the opening gun in a blitzkrieg for control of the North Carolina delegation to the Democratic national convention.

These who think this way see a battle to the finish between the now dominant Gardner-Hoy element of the party and the master minds who were behind organization of the Roosevelt organization.

To these, it will not be so much a question of who will get the support of the delegation, but who will get the credit for controlling the delegation and the resulting pap and perquisites which are ordinarily passed out to those who swing delegations to the winning candidate.

The whole Roosevelt drive, as was indicated in this correspondence early this week is looked on as an effort to snatch the control from O. Max Gardner, and the Hoy handout is looked on as the first counter-attack of the Old Guard.

It should be understood that this is the view of a very large element of those with whom your reporter has come in contact, but it is only a viewpoint and not passed along as a statement of uncontroverted facts.

There are other equally unprovable viewpoints. For example there are those who suggest that the Hoy statement is perhaps the first real hint from really authoritative sources that President Roosevelt will not run for a third term.

The suggestion is that the statement was the result of a Roosevelt to Gardner to Hoy relay. The Tar Heel governor said in his statement that he has "information" which leads him to believe FDR will not be a candidate; and His Excellency is not in the habit of going out on that Franklin D. told Max something and Max in turn passed it along to brother-in-law Clyde, with the result that the governor came out for Cordell Hull.

Still another point of view is held by some who think the Hoy statement was prompted by purely personal pique at his having been more or less ignored in information of the North Carolina for Roosevelt movement. This, to your reporter at least, sounds extremely far-fetched, as the Hoy actions are usually far too well considered for any such theory to hold water. And besides that, the governor is usually about the last person in the world to move from any such spiteful and unworthy motive. If anything gets under his skin he is ordinarily the last in the world to show it.

There is much speculation, too, over the question of why the governor should have put himself in the position of arraying against him the backers of all the other Democratic presidential aspirants.

"Why," it is asked, "should Governor Hoy take a stand which will put Senator Joe Blythe of Charlotte against him? (Blythe is state manager for Paul V. McNutt). "And why should he ruffle the feelings of Judge Walter Siler?" (Siler is the unofficial, but recognized head of the Garner boosters in North Carolina). "And why should he make Lindsay Warren angry?" (Warren is looked on as a Garner crony).

As a matter of fact there is no reason to think that any of these named persons are going to paw up the earth in savage wrath at the Hoy presumption in opposing their favorites; and the reason for this is quite simple.

It is obvious that there isn't any appreciable sentiment in North Carolina for either McNutt or Garner. There seems to be no getting around the general impression that President Roosevelt has by far the majority of the rank and file behind him and the further fact that outside the President, Cordell Hull is the only candidate who has any strength at all in his own right.

It is vividly recalled that in 1928 the Simmons forces marshalled themselves behind Hull in an effort to stop Al Smith's steam roller—and it was stopped in North Carolina.

though not in the nation. There exists the possibility that the anti-third terms, among whom the governor is known to be numbered, are endeavoring to repeat that bit of Tar Heel strategy. At all events, there seems to have been precipitated as pretty a prospective battle as the state has enjoyed in a long time. As Governor Clyde Hoy has studiously kept out of controversy, His regime to date has been singularly free from bickering and brawling; but there are now indications that the era of good feeling. He has committed himself on a matter of intensely bitter controversy and something of a scrap can be looked for.

Grimesland News

Miss Ava Credle has gone home for the week-end.

Mrs. C. E. Tucker has returned home from Fowle Memorial hospital, where she underwent an operation for appendicitis and is rapidly improving.

Graham Hudson is improving and is able to receive visitors.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Coleman from Richmond, Va., is spending the week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Elks.

Miss Cora Weston of Swan Quarter is visiting Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Carr for a few days.

Miss Virginia Todd, of Smithfield, is spending the week with her sister, Mrs. Ramon Elks.

P. T. A. MEETS

Tuesday, April 16 the P. T. A. met in the Grimesland High School auditorium with Mrs. Milton Tucker presiding.

Reports were given by Chairmen of different committees showing the accomplishments made by each in the year's work.

Election of new officers was postponed until the first meeting to be held next fall.

We were glad to have with us our Home Demonstration Agent, Miss Nice and Mrs. Maude Jimison, who made a very interesting talk on Child Welfare. Her general topic was "How Recreation Aids in Prevention of Crime."

The features for the evening's program were: The Toy Band from Misses Cherry's and Swindell's first grades, and a campus picture showing the "Danger of Mosquitoes" was presented.

Then the meeting adjourned to the Home Economics Department for refreshments prepared by Miss Vaughan.

On the same night "Open House" was held from 6:30 p. m. to 10:00 p. m.

Work done by pupils of all classes was exhibited in the rooms. The meeting was a very successful one.

FARMERS TOLD GO AFTER PEST

Not Too Early To Plan Drive On Boll Weevil

"It is not too early for the cotton farmers of Eastern Carolina to begin making their plans for poisoning early in the Spring, with liquid poison comprised of molasses and calcium arsenate," according to a statement given out by N. G. Bartlett, Secretary of the Eastern Carolina Chamber of Commerce, recently.

"The 'Back to Cotton' campaign which was initiated by the regional organization in January has met with very favorable response by all sections of the Eastern part of the State and it is the opinion of those most familiar with the facts in the case that practically the entire allotments to cotton will be planted this year," according to information coming from headquarters of the regional organization.

According to the figures given out by the Department of Agriculture, the territory served by the Eastern Carolina Chamber of Commerce planted to cotton last year 424,528 acres, but there is allotted for 1940 to the same territory 600,000 acres. It is the purpose of the "Back to Cotton" movement to get every farmer to grow his full allotment of cotton this year in order to make up in part at least the shortage that will be caused by the reduction in the tobacco acreage.

Early poisoning with molasses and calcium arsenate has proved very effective where instructions have been followed. The regional organization suggests that cotton growers consult their county agent for directions as to how to prepare and apply early poisoning.

A. C. Tadlock, Secretary and Treasurer of the First Federal Savings and Loan Association today suggested the following as the "Ten Commandments" for families planning to build a home.

1. Look to the price. Of course it is important that it be good dollar value. It is much more important that it bear some definite relation to your income. So—

2. Don't spend for a home more than 2 1/2 to 3 times your yearly income—2 1/2 times is better than three.

3. Figure all the carrying costs. Home costs are more than just mortgage payments and taxes. Be sure the total of all the carrying costs are within your ability to pay.

4. Pay as much as possible in the beginning so as to reduce your carrying costs through the years.

5. Plan to pay off the balance as rapidly as possible for the same reason and also so that you will, as soon as possible, really own your home. Remember, a mortgaged home is not yours; it is not much more of a lifeboat than a rented house.

6. Insist upon a mortgage that provides for regular monthly amortizing payments—a mortgage that pays out before it ever comes due.

7. Carry enough life insurance for your wife and family to pay off the mortgage in full in the event of your death.

8. Buy when everyone else wants to sell, not when everyone is fighting to buy.

9. Be sure you have a congenial neighborhood and one that is on the upgrade rather than the downgrade. To again emphasize—always buy too little rather than too much house.

Of the 4,231 families in Helena, Mont., only 27 have five or more children, according to a report by the WPA housing survey. Approximately 66 per cent or 2,795 families have no children; 741 families have one child; 471 families have two children and 197 families have three or four children.

Much Speculation Over Hoey's Support Of Hull

Reflector Bureau. Raleigh, April 20.—Governor Clyde R. Hoey's formal statement in support of Cordell Hull for the Democratic nomination for the presidency has set almost the whole of political North Carolina to speculating, coming as it did so closely on the heels of the opening of "North Carolina For Roosevelt" headquarters in the Sir Walter hotel here.

Naturally nobody has yet penetrated the mystery of the whys and wherefores behind the Hoey pronouncement and there are almost as many theories about it as there are theorists. Practically everybody has his own explanation and each explanation varies in some details, at least, from every other—some are at complete variance in every possible respect.

The "caution" signal seems to have been displayed as far as any quotations for publications from leaders of the Roosevelt movement, though in "off the record" conversation they express the view that the gubernatorial statement rather makes the issue in North Carolina one of "Hoey against Roosevelt" and they profess to have no fear whatever of the outcome of any such battle.

Another point on which all these Roosevelt leaders seem agreed is that the governor himself relieved them of one rather embarrassing feature—the complimentary vote on the first ballot at the na-

For The Day
By EARL L. DOUGLASS

STRENGTH—CC

DEATH OF A SAINT

Augustine, the famous saint and scholar, was converted to Christianity from a life of gross indulgence.
A few days after his conversion he saw one of his former companions approaching him on the street.
Turning quickly, he walked hurridly in the opposite direction, for he knew that this meeting might constitute a temptation to return to his life. The friend ran after him and cried, "Augustine, Augustine, wait a moment, it is I," but Augustine quickened his pace and cried back over his shoulder, "This is not Augustine; Augustine is dead."

Paul spoke of being crucified with Christ, of putting off the old man of sin and putting on the new man of righteousness. When men decide sincerely upon a new course of life, they die to what has gone before.
The man who is wise knows he cannot live in two worlds nor serve two masters; he must become all one thing or all the other. He must not look back upon his Sodoms and Gomorrah lest he be transfixed forever. Rather, he must call back over his shoulder to pursuing temptations, "This is not the man you are seeking; the man you are seeking is dead."

It has been rightly suggested that if more individuals would do some planning toward caring for themselves the job of the "Big Planners" would be greatly reduced.

Tomorrow is another Sunday and with good weather the highways will be crowded with motorists off for a day's outing. With our national annual highway traffic toll of more than 36, 000 fatalities the daily average is about 100 deaths. In order that you may not be one of tomorrow's 100 casualties and in order that you might not be one of those causing one of the 100 deaths we again urge you to "Start a Little Sooner, Drive a Little Slower and Live a Lot Longer." Every motorist would adopt this slogan as his or her own and abide by it tomorrow there would probably be a hundred more persons alive in this country tomorrow night than there will be otherwise.

Has the census taker counted you yet? This is a question that is being asked frequently and in view of complaints in many other towns and cities we feel that the question is a timely one here. We do not know just what the situation regarding the census-taking in Greenville is now, but we do know that in former census

100 More Will Die Tomorrow

years, there have been complaints that many persons were missed and did not get included in the city's population count. When the records are compiled they will stand for the next ten years, so it is up to us now to see that everyone gets counted.
Naturally our Chamber of Commerce is interested in knowing whether or not our citizens are accurately counted, so if you have not been called upon by the census-takers or if you know of sections of the city that have not been visited, we are sure the Chamber of Commerce would be glad to get the information. After the figures are in and compiled it is a hard matter to make corrections, so now is the time to make sure that Greenville will have its proper rating in this year's count of noses.

Washington Daybook

By Jack Stinnett

Washington.—I thought it could be told, but it can't—so on this story you'll have to bear with me while I omit a few names and admit nothing—and tell what I hope is a fascinating tale of an armchair Marco Polo who has left important pin-pricks on the face of the earth because he had a hobby.
In the files of the state department is a collection of maps which tells more of the activities of American mariners in the equatorial Pacific—and hence forms a valuable basis for our claims to many islands there—than any other record extant. And it is there because Dr.
Charles Haskins Townsend, former director of the famous Aquarium on the Battery in New York City, got interested in Galapagos tortoises.
Doctor Townsend, now living in retirement on Long Island, found that these shell-backed plodders of the centuries (many live 300 to 400 years), were becoming extinct. He wanted to search out ways of preserving the species.

Tracks Whalers

His study of the Galapagos tor-toises led him to the whaling industry—for the whalers used these big shell-backs much as we use canned meat today. They took them aboard, killed them when the larder ran low, feasted for days.
The point is that Doctor Townsend became more interested in the whaling industry than in the Galapagos tortoises. He discovered that the logs of those ships listed every point at which a whale had been taken. And there began his labor of love.

Months on end, he spent sticking pins into maps of the world, checking every point that an American whaler had taken its load, until he had listed 1,665 voyages, picked off the death struggle of 58,877 whales, and turned out one of the most amazing maps on record—the Seven Seas' pattern of the American whaling industry from 1761 to 1920.

Uncle Sam Searches

That's Chapter No. 1. A few years ago, the state department was checking up on the United States' claims to a few tiny atolls in the Pacific.

There was a report that the New York public library has records which might be important. An employee was dispatched to New York to investigate. After hours of research, he found that what he needed was not available. He was about to leave when a library assistant recalled that somebody at the Aquarium was writing a book about the whaling industry that had to do with the Pacific.

The state department official checked up on that and discovered Doctor Townsend's hobby. He found that not anywhere in the history books is there such a complete record of discovery, exploitation and habitation of the unknown or uninhabited islands of the world as in Doctor Townsend's minutely pinpointed maps on the far voyages of the whalers.

Discovery, exploitation and habitation are the three factors which contribute most to a nation's claims to lands which fly no flags.

Still Claiming Land

Do you see why the Doctor's hobby has become one of the important treasures in the state department files?

The idea that the United States is state as far as its land acquisitions are concerned can be dismissed right now. As recently as 1938, Presidential proclamation announced to the world that we were taking over hitherto unclaimed islands in the far Pacific. By the same method, some of these days, we may tell the world that we are planting the American flag permanently on a sizable chunk of the Antarctic.

If there should be any objection, it will fall to the state department to smother the objectors with documentary evidence substantiating our claim.

Out of a hobby like Doctor Townsend's may come one of our great mid-ocean airline bases of tomorrow —or perhaps some valuable slice of the earth's surface that yesterday was no more important than an ice-capped peak in Antarctica.

SHORT SHOTS

Reflector Bureau.

By HENRY AVERILL
Raleigh, April 20.—Department of Conservation and Development officials probably heaved a sigh of relief when they looked over the list of candidates for the 1941 House and found that Raymond B. Mallard of Tubor City is not among those trying for a seat in the 1941 legislature.
As Columbus' 1939 Representative Mallard was perhaps the biggest pain in the neck that the department had in the General Assembly.
On more than one occasion he publicly called the department "nothing but a racket."

Those of the North Carolina Food Dealers Association (a group made up of so-called "independent" merchants who have fought the chain stores tooth and nail) supporting J. M. Broughton for governor explain they do not hold the Raleigh lawyer's representation of the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea company against him. He appeared for the big chain just as he would appear for any client who hired him as a lawyer, they contend.
The Food Dealers are headed, in fact if not in name, by James B.
Vogler, Mecklenburg Representative in the 1937 and 1939 General As-semblies. A candidate for reelection, Vogler isn't saying anything at all for publication about the governor's race.

Bystanders are wondering what Mrs. J. B. Spillman, U. C. C. member by Hoey appointment and Hoey
"woman's manager" in 1936, is going to do about her membership on the "North Carolina For Roosevelt" committee, now that her patron has declared publicly for Cordell Hull.
—W. W. Walker has withdrawn as candidate for the Democratic nomination for representative in Henderson county, thus leaving incumbent L. L. Burgin unopposed in the primary.
Your reporter was talking with

Wake's State Senator L. Y. Balen-tine a day or so ago, when up walked a serious, unsmiling gentleman to hand to the Senator and the reporter a political card, with the earnest request that they consider supporting the candidate whose virtues were extolled thereon.
"Vote for R. N. Simms, Jr., for State Senator," read the card.

Difficulty in finding more than a two-dee-dee and two-dee-dum difference between gubernatorial candidates as far as issues go was well illustrated during the anti-diversion meeting here under auspices of the Highway Users Conference.
Professor Harry Tucker of North Carolina State College, chairman of the conference, said he has received letters from all Democratic candidates. He added that all stated their opposition to diversion.

It's hard to get up much of an argument when everybody's on the same side.
Lieutenant Governor W. P. Horton almost came out publicly and strongly for reappointment about a week ago. Had a speech all prepared and ready for delivery; but changed his mind at the last minute and ordered the advance releases "killed."

Dedicated to His Honor The President, Franklin D. Roosevelt and the present administration.

Will the President run again?
With his wise host of senate men.
And to our business still attend,
Let us hope, Amen! Amen!

His praises now are in the skies,
To keep them there would be wise.
Should he retire within a zone
And be a power behind the throne.

Who can do a better job than he with his host has done,
Who can guide this ship of state
'better if he runs, Who'll help the rich and poor and spend no more,
Who'll provide for slum conditions at our door.

The world was surely in a mess,
That this is true, we must confess.
Farmers were all in distress.
Not only farmers, but all the rest.

I wish I had the time to tell,
Just how all the big banks fell,
'Til this Moses in a hast, Put them on a firmer base.

We felt his hand, in all the land,
It lifted a burden and broke a band.
We bounced out from sinking sand
And stand on clay now—a better land.

He took our boat and began to row,
The tide was against him, folks,
you know,
But in spite of every snare,
He pulled us in from deep despair.

The problems that he tampered with,
Tell us that he has a gift.
To weigh and measure and to sift,
And with that insight burdens lift.

Give him the credit that is due,
For good he gave the world and you.
But don't forget the Senate men,
Who stood by him through thick and thin.

They gave him power to amend Bad legislation to put at end.
They stood by him as a friend,
And said, "Go, go, you'll surely win.

God be praised for all these men.
No tongue can tell where they've been.
The sleepless nights they had to spend,
To give to the world its present trend.

Those of us who are standing by,
To get with the rabble to cry, Could we make this train plumb the track,
With 48 states hung to our back?

It's a big thing, folks, if you look at it right.
The administration has made a valiant fight,
Who has the vision or the sight,
To hold and guide this ship a right?

The history made during these times,
I'd like to tell to you in rhyme,
But who would read from a puny hand,
Such writings as this about our land?

Were it Milton, Scott or Harriet Beecher Stowe,
Or even the drunkard, Edgar Allen
Poe,
Or any of the writers of long ago, You'd give their praises to the winds, and tell them to blow.

Greenies And Harrisburg Scheduled To Battle Sunday

RAIN HELD UP FRIDAY'S GAME

Morris Willson Slated To Start On Mound

The scheduled baseball game between the Greenies and Harrisburg Senators was rained out yesterday, but the two teams, both of which are in the midst of the spring training period here, are slated to meet again tomorrow.

Weather permitting, the two teams will start play at Guy Smith park at 3 o'clock.

Morris Willson, veteran of last year's Greenville team who was scheduled to have started on the mound for Rube Wilson's Greenies, is slated to get the first call tomorrow, although one or two more hurlers probably will see service during the contest.

Two local boys, Forbes and Respass, are expected to start in two of the outfield positions in tomorrow's contest and it is likely that one or more Greenville boys will be on the team. Forrest Minges, a hurler, also is out to make the local team.

If tomorrow brings fair and warm weather a large crowd is expected to see the Greenies in action.

LOCAL TRACK TEAM FOURTH IN STATE MEET

Fine Showing Made By Locals At Chapel Hill

The Greenville High School trackmen, coached by Herman Fulkerson, turned in fourth place in the All-State Invitational meet at Chapel Hill yesterday.

George Tyndall, local boy, who has not been defeated in the mile and half-mile since becoming a trackman last season, snared first place honors in the mile run. Sixteen boys from various schools in the state ran in this race. Included in the race was Jewett, Winston-Salem boy, who holds the Western conference crown. The time for this race was 4:42.8.

Another local boy, who made fans sit up and take notice, was John Spearman. Spearman took second place in the 220 yard dash. The winner of this event was B. Lyon of Durham, who ran it in 22.5 seconds.

Bob Gantt, who takes care of the weights for Durham, garnered first place in the shot put, discus and javelin. Gantt tossed the shot 53 feet, 2 and 3/4 inches. In the discus he heaved it 137 feet 4 inches.

Russell Robertson, Greenville weight man pushed Gantt hard for first place in the javelin. He was only a yard behind Gantt and was credited with second place.

Yesterday's meet was a battle for first place between Durham and Charlotte in which Durham forged out front with 46 points to take the meet.

Charlotte's points came mainly in the broad jumps, high hurdles, and low hurdles in which they won first place in these events. Little won the broad jump with 20 feet, 9 1/4 inches. Brantley won both the high hurdles and low hurdles.

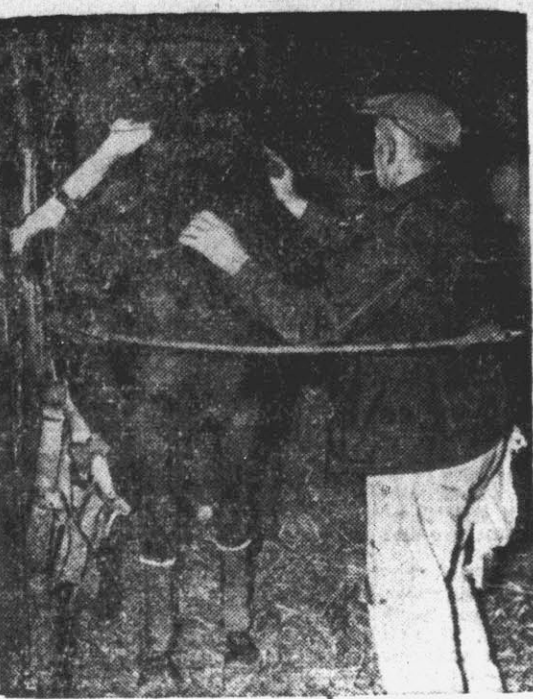

Sakas, Greenville High School pole vaulter, tied for third place in this event. Boyette, of Goldsboro, took 4th place. Richmond and Saunders of Lumberton, tied for first place. The pole vault was 10 feet 8 inches.

The deciding event between Durham and Charlotte was the mile race. Durham came from behind a 42-41 lead in this even in 3:32 minutes.

The teams as they scored were: Durham 46; Charlotte 44; Winston-Salem 16; Greenville 14; High Point 9; Old Richmond 6; Lumberton 5; Fayetteville 4; Mineral Springs 3; Goldsboro 2 1/2.

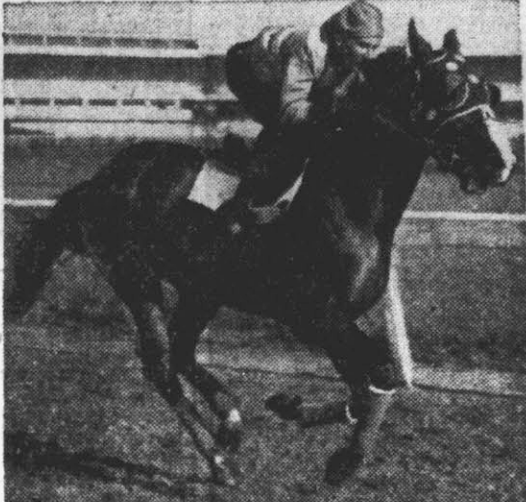

Agreements between employers and workers in Sweden's paper, wood pulp, sawmill, textile and machine industries assured labor peace in 1940. The agreements covered small wage increases, as well as certain supplementary wages because of higher living costs.

Here's How A Derby Horse Trains For The Big Day

KENTUCKY DERBY candidates train rigorously. Here Prompt Pay starts his early morning drill. Groom O. W. Kipp walks him to the track and turns him over to the exercise boy.

The Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs Louisville, ranks as America's No. One horse race. Scores of thoroughbreds were nominated for this $75,000 mile-and-a-quarter competition but it is unlikely that more than a dozen will face the barrier May 4. Daily drills bring the horses to top condition:

THE HANDSOME BLACK COLT, with Jockey Clayton Perkins up, gallops around Churchill Downs. A daily spring or gallop, sometimes a run over the course, keeps the horse tuned up.

KIPP RUBS DOWN PROMPT PAY after his exercise. The horse is then blanketed and walked until "cooled off". The rest of the day the pampered thoroughbred loafs in his stall.

RACING HORSES have big appetites. Prompt Pay gets a lump of sugar before breakfast. While not a Derby favorite, Prompt Pay is liked. His pop, Inco, sired Lawrin, 1938 victor.

fellows stall and connive to prevent reorganization. When a railroad comes out of receivership they naturally lose their jobs. Final plans were just announced, for instance, for the Minneapolis and St. Louis which had been in receivership since 1923—nearly 20 years.

Under such circumstances, security-holders lose hope that their road will ever be reorganized. Hence, they sell their defaulted securities at enormous losses—far below their intrinsic value. Meanwhile, the receivers, lawyers, bondholders' committees, all suck the blood out of the road. Solvent, but sick, roads are in the same boat. They try desperately to keep out of receivership. They are forced to scrimp and cut corners to meet their bond interest. Their locomotives and cars wear out. They cannot afford to buy new equipment, to cut rates, to meet competition.

Wholesale Reorganization Needed
The best thing in the world for the railroads—and that means for every honest person connected with them—would be a sane, wholesale

Norman Selby, who boxed under the name of Kid McCoy and became a famous character of the ring about the turn of the century, killed himself with an overdose of sleeping medicine or poison in his hotel room at Detroit. The former ring favorite, who was 66 years old, left a note saying he couldn't endure "this world's madness" any longer. This recent picture shows him after he served a prison term for the killing of his sweetheart, Mrs. Theresa Mers of Los Angeles.

To Speak Of Many Thing Toy Dogs Of 1940 Have Pedigrees

PLYMOUTH, N. C.: Many years ago each of 12 trees in a churchyard was named after one of the 12 Apostles. Eleven of the trees are in good condition, but the one called "Judas" was struck by lightning. EDISON, in the early days of his phonograph, did not think it would ever amount to much as a musical instrument, but did believe it would be useful for recording the last words of dying persons.

NEW TOYS FOR 1940 INCLUDE: Submersible submarines, prefabricated houses with windows that go up and down, stuffed dogs with pedigrees, and printing sets that reproduce comics. Toy freight cars cost as little as 10 cents.

TWO PETRIFIED FISH, believed to be more than 50,000,000 years old, have been found at Bjur Sweden. The fish resemble present-day sturgeons.

the railroads if the carriers really want to compete.

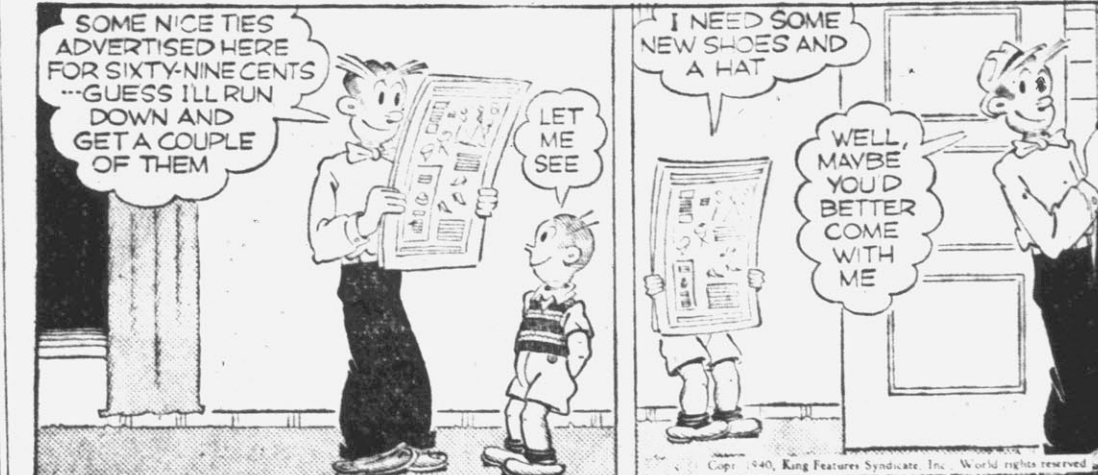

Chief difficulties of the railroads are fourfold: (1) I. C. C. regulation. (2) Top-heavy capitalization. (3) Job-holding managements. (4) Unfair labor unions. Of these, problem No. 2 seems most urgent. Thirty per cent of the nation's mileage is in receivership—some of it has been there for nearly ten years. Thirty per cent has been only one jump ahead of the sheriff for a similar length of time. A railroad in receivership is not my idea of sales appeal nor good advertising, either for freight or passengers. Certainly it does not help the bondholder nor the stockholder.

Receivership Racket Receiverships do, of course, provide big fat salaries for lawyers, insiders, and receivers. The latter actually have more power in running a road in receivership than the president and board of directors had when the road was solvent. These

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, April 20.—(AP)—Steels, aviation and specialties today led the stock market on its first rally in more than a week. Gains ran to two or so points at the best, but these were shaded at the close.

Shipbuilding, paper and woolen issues were out in front at the start. The steel group, hesitant for a while, also puffed on a rising show. Aeronautical stocks followed. Motors edged forward along with some rails, coppers and utilities.

Transfers approximated 650,000 shares.

Sights And Sounds

Hollywood.—It is customary for movie directors to discourse glibly on their current pictures as their personal "favorites," on characters therein as the most intriguing, most this, most that. When Jay Theodore Reed (plain Ted) outside the credit titles gets enthusiastic about Henry Aldrich, I make an exception and believe it's straight from the heart.

Here's why—a story Ted tells on the set where he's putting Jackie Cooper through another set of Henry Aldrich's tribulations.

Ted, who used to direct Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks in silent epics, is a father. One of his boys, Jim, is about Henry Aldrich's age.

One day, Ted was in his back yard, taking the earned leisure of a hardworking paterfamilias, when ominous sounds from the heavens caused him to look skyward. An airplane was diving low over his house, in tactics doubtless amusing to the pilot, but alarming to a home-owner. Again and again the machine roared down, zoomed up, circled around, dipping and saluting. Angriest, Ted was ready to call the sheriff when the performance was discontinued.

Some hours later, son Jim appeared, very cheery. "Well, dad, did you see me?"

"See you?" said puzzled Ted. Then light broke. "Were you with the insane guy in that plane?" said Jim. "No, dad, I was the guy." And then Ted Reed learned that son Jim had earned his pilot's li-

Man About Manhattan

By George Tucker

New York.—George Balanchine is a thin, slight Russian with enough hair on his head to cover half the baldness of Moscow. Were he to comb the hair on the right side of his head straight back and bring it around behind his head, it would drape over his left ear. When he leaps onto a stage to instruct his underlings in the finesse of tap and ballet routines, it dangles beneath his chin. One of his mannerisms is a sort of nervous roaching of his hair with his long, thin dancer's hands.

Balanchine is not an easy man to talk to. Perhaps it is because he speaks English, but badly. His accent is difficult to follow. And at rehearsals, which are the only times I have encountered him, his mind is too suffused with visions of the dance to permit him to indulge in very much small talk.

It may be that you remember a cense—when Ted hadn't known the boy ever had been up in a plane.

That, of course, has nothing to do with Henry Aldrich. Ted Reed wasn't talking about Henry Aldrich at the time. But you can put two and two together.

"I like Henry," said Ted, "because he's such a great character. He's a kid who tries hard, and that's where his troubles start. If he'd only sit down and relax, and quit trying, he'd never get into trouble. He's not a character who depends on situation to be interesting. We don't have to figure up situations to put him in. Just turn Henry loose, and right away he's in a situation—one that comes out of his own character."

Henry's adventures this time center about a desired vacation trip. The boy of "What a Life!" is "trying hard" object to earn a trip to Alaska. There's a philanthropist in Chicago (Moroni Olsen) who co-operates with deserving boys toward this end, and Henry—but you know what happens when Henry Aldrich tries hard.

Just to show how little incidents lead to big movies, here's the story of the genesis of the new Aldrich yarn.

Two summers ago Don Hartman, the screen writer, was vacationing up in Canada, at Banff and Lake Louise. On the street, he was approached by a lad selling pencils.

Hartman took out a nickel, obligingly, but the boy said "No, a quarter—this is an On-to-Alaska pencil."

Intrigued, Hartman learned there really was a gentleman (in Detroit) whose interest in Alaska and in youngsters promoted a plan to make Alaskan vacations possible for boys who would work for them.

Hartman filed the note away in memory, and when he and Clifford Goldsmith, playwright of "What a Life!", got together to concoct a sequel, there it was: Henry would work for an Alaskan vacation, and Henry, naturally, would get into trouble.
