ANTI-POLITICS BILL REVIVED BY COMMITTEE

House Judiciary Group to Reconsider Measure

MOVE TAKEN ON 14-10 DECISION

Proposal Would Extend Act To Include All State Employees Paid In Part With Federal Funds

Washington, May 7.—(AP)—The House Judiciary committee voted 14 to 11 today to revive the Hatch political practices bill and give it further consideration.

The motion that the committee reconsider its previous action on the legislation was made by Rep. Murdock (D-Utah).

The vote revived the committee's 14 to 10 decision last Wednesday to table the measure.

In contrast to the previous action when the vote was secret, the roll call today was announced.

Those who voted against reconsideration included Rep. Weaver (D-NC).

All members of the committee voted except Chairman Sumners (D-Tex.), who said he planned to address the House on the measure late today.

The committee's resurrection of the measure came after Rep. Dempsey (D-N. M.) had led a movement in the House either to force some action or else have the House itself lift the measure from the committee.

The bill, which would extend to state employees drawing federal funds the political regulations now applied to federal employees by the Hatch law enacted last year, won President Roosevelt's unqualified endorsement last night.

Other congressional developments included the appearance before the Senate Naval committee of Secretary Edison, who testified that U. S. naval experts do not believe Germany's aerial superiority will enable her to destroy Britain's battleship.

Rotary Club Told Of Academy Plans

By WYATT BROWN
Effort to get a saddle horse ring or track for Greenville is being exerted, it was disclosed by Mr. Sam White in his remarks before his fellow Rotarians at their regular weekly meeting. Last night was scheduled as an open meeting by the program committee. Mr. White said they were seeking to have the town permit the use of some property already owned and unused by the town.

This loaned property would be developed for riding and horse shows by private funds. However, it would be free to the public for horseback riding. Of course, admission would be charged for horse shows.

The danger of horseback riding on the open highway today was emphasized by Mr. White. The new idea of a riding ring would afford riders a safe cool place to ride. It would develop riding among many who now refrain due to the danger of highways. It would give the young people something more to do, it would give people a place to go on warm days and Sundays to see people riding and give our town some good publicity, declared Mr. White.

Prior to the meeting last night the Eastern Carolina Symphonic Singers gave three numbers for the Rotarians. The youth, beauty, and energy of the young singers was delightful but their singing was finished and wrapped attention upon the leader, Mr. Lewis Bullock, secured polished results. The young folks did a finished job.

How they enjoyed a swell when they could let out, but ever so carefully did the pianissimo seemingly having the best time of their lives. The young man who did the solo part in the "Water Boy" sang well though out of breath from the run which fetched him to the place of singing just as the number was announced. Sans robe and with ruffled hair, he sang with feeling his role. He even affected the negro tenor "whoop" on the rising scale. His was a clear, fresh, young tenor-toned by an obvious affection for (Continued on page six)

R. V. Keel, operator of a tobacco auction warehouse in Toward, Maryland, today advised that opening day offerings were small, with prices ranging from six to 46 cents per pound. The tobaccoist wired that the average was around the 22-cent figure.

Chamberlain Asserts That Britain May Be Attacked In The Most Violent Form

Four Killed and Three Wounded by School Man

Californian Shoots Seven Upon Being Replaced

South Pasadena, Calif., May 7.—(AP)—Death hovered near today for three critically wounded survivors of a deposed school principal's bullet-strewn target pistol that cost the lives of four other education authorities.

Slain were George C. Bush, 62, for 35 years superintendent of schools here and in nearby San Marino; John E. Almon, 50, principal of the South Pasadena-San Marino high school for 25 years; William Spear, 43, business manager of the combined school district; and Victor V. Vanderlip, 45, manual arts and printing instructor at South Pasadena junior high school.

Hospital authorities described as critical the condition of high-strung erratic Verlin Spencer, 38, who suddenly went berserk after being told his junior high school contract would not be renewed and moved down the six school attaches and then turned his .22 calibre pistol upon himself.

Little hope also was held for the other survivors of his mad outburst of gunfire, Miss Ruth B. Sturgeon, 48, art instructor at the junior high school, and Miss Dorothea Talbert, 30, secretary to Superintendent Bush.

League Providing Girl Scout Award

Announcement of the Service League Girl Scout scholarship was made today. This scholarship pays one girl's annual dues to the Girl Scout organization, provides her uniform, and sends her to a Girl Scout camp for two weeks during the summer. To receive this scholarship will be a signal honor as only the highest type girls will be considered by the League's committee.

The Service League's recent activities have consisted mainly of clinic work, providing layettes for the county health department, and giving its annual ball for the maintenance of its hospital bed. The Thrift Shop will remain open daily until June 1.

At its May meeting two new officers for the coming year were elected. Mrs. W. E. Harrington will succeed Mrs. R. C. Stokes, Jr., as president, and Miss Hennie Long will succeed Mrs. L. E. Babcock as secretary.

Mrs. Annie B. Faircloth, home teacher from the State Commission for the Blind, addressed the League Monday. She told of her work in 21 counties and described graphically her activities in Pitt county. Mrs. Faircloth is always an interesting and welcome visitor.

Health Questions Talked At Session

Several health problems were discussed at a meeting held at the Municipal building this morning at the call of Dr. N. Thomas Ennett, Pitt county health officer.

Present were: Mayor Jack Spain, Dr. Ennett, Mr. Swartz, Superintendent of the Water and Light Commission, J. T. Welch, City Sanitary Inspector, and C. K. Beatty, Superintendent of the City Street Department.

The following health matters were discussed: (a) Closing of mosquito breeding city ditches. (b) A city wide clean up campaign. (c) A rat extermination campaign.

W.H. Woolard Leaves For Bankers Meeting

W. H. Woolard, president of the North Carolina Bankers Association, left today for Pinehurst, where the annual convention will be held on Thursday and Friday of this week.

Other officials and employees of the bank will leave tomorrow or Thursday morning.

Mr. Woolard will make the presidential address at the Thursday morning session, which also will be featured by Robert M. Hanes of Winston-Salem, president of the American Bankers Association.

Killer's Victim

Pay Gates (above), 25-year-old match factory worker, was found slain on a lonely road through "Spook Hollow" near Bellefonte, Pa. Her body was found in the road near her automobile. Authorities believe she was the victim of the same "maniac killer" who slew Rachel Taylor, Penn State co-ed, near Bellefonte five weeks before.

SIMPSON WINS IN CITY RACE

J.A. Watson Also Victorious In Primary-Election

J. A. Watson defeated J. B. Kittrell by 80 votes in the Second Ward Aldermanic contest and J. D. Simpson won over Hoover Taft by 23 ballots in the Third Ward in yesterday's city primary-election.

Dr. M. B. Massey, unopposed for his seat from the Fourth Ward, polled a total of 14 votes.

The two contests were "rather warm" for an off-year election. Watson polled 244 votes to Kittrell's 164, while Simpson polled an even 200 to Taft's 180.

Mr. Simpson was defeated in the primary-election last May by R. E. Sellers after having served on the board from the Third Ward. The ward has two members on the board. J. M. Taft, retiring alderman, did not make the race.

Alderman Watson has been on the board for several years. His opponent, Mr. Kittrell, also has seen service on the board.

The successful candidates will be sworn in on July 1.

The terms of Mayor Spain and five aldermen do not expire for another year. The five aldermen are: L. B. Fleming of the first, which has only one member; J. A. Collins of the Second; R. E. Sellers of the Third; David A. Evans of the Fourth and George H. Clapp of the Fifth, which has only one member on the board.

Maxwell To Speak Here Friday Night

A. J. Maxwell, candidate for governor, will deliver a public address at the Pitt county court house here Friday night at 8 o'clock. The public is invited to attend.

Mr. Maxwell will be the first gubernatorial candidate to make a public address in Greenville, although several others have made visits to this city and Lee Gravelly made the commencement address in Grimsland last week.

Mr. Maxwell, commissioner of revenue for years, is on leave of absence during the current campaign.

Prime Minister Attempts To Justify Withdrawals of Allies From Norway; Winston Churchill To Supervise All Military Operations; Address Assailed By Labor Opposition

London, May 7.—(AP)—Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain, declaring Britain herself may soon face attacks "in the most violent form", sought today to justify the British withdrawals from mid-Norway and announced that Winston Churchill would supervise military operations from day to day.

In a turbulent House of Commons, which once forced the Prime Minister to sit down until order was restored, the labor opposition leader, Clement R. Attlee, bitterly attacked Chamberlain's speech as merely "one of excuse and explanation."

Churchill will give "guidance and direction" to the chiefs of staff of the three fighting services, the Prime Minister announced. He will remain as First Lord of the Admiralty.

Aside from this Chamberlain rejected any other immediate changes in the personnel of his government, but said changes in the form of government or the functions of individuals might be needed.

Chamberlain's speech in general was an anxious appeal for unity, both in Parliament and among the people, in the face of dangers which, he said, the nation did not yet appreciate.

He said the campaign was not yet finished in Norway, but he warned the country to remember: "There are other fronts where may at any moment blaze into a conflagration."

"This is not the time for quarrels among ourselves," he said dramatically. "In this debate we are giving hostages to fortune."

Military advisors, he said, had cautioned him against today's discussion, "but we could not accept this in a democratic country."

While an angry opposition shouted "you missed the bus," Chamberlain declared he tried to steer a "middle course," looking ahead to the possibility of attack by vast and well equipped German armies "at a number of different points."

He said "we shall give all the help to Norway we can," despite the allied troop withdrawals from all but the far-northern part of the country, but he said he thought it was "right" to retreat from the Trondheim front when it became apparent that the plan to seize that city "would not succeed."

"We want to be ready to meet the attack wherever it may come," he said.

Geo. Badger King Claimed By Death

George Badger King, 79, native of the Falkland section of Pitt county, died at his home in Washington, D. C., this morning at 7 o'clock from a stroke of paralysis suffered last fall.

Following funeral services in Washington the body will be brought here for burial in Cherry Hill cemetery Thursday afternoon.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p.m. at the home of Mrs. King, 1000 N. W. 10th St., Washington, D. C.

Mr. King was born November 29, 1861 on the King plantation near Falkland. He was educated at Kings Mountain and received his lawyer's degree at the University of North Carolina. He served as post master in Greenville and also a member of the General Assembly from Pitt county.

He later went to Washington as secretary to Congressman W. A. B. Branch and subsequently was connected with the Department of Agriculture and moved his family to the national capital. He had been retired for several years.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Nanette A. King, and two sons, George B. King of Hankow, China, and Edwin Alderman King of Washington, D. C.

NEW DEFENSE STEPS

The Hague, May 7.—(AP)—The Netherlands cancelled all army and navy leaves today and ordered the men to report at once for duty.

MARYLAND & IDAHO LINE UP BEHIND DEWEY

Twenty-Four More Convention Votes Pledged

CALIF. VOTING ON THIRD TERM Primaries Also Being Held In Four Other States, Florida, Alabama, Indiana, So. Dakota

(By The Associated Press)
Twenty-four Republican convention delegates from Maryland and Idaho were enrolled under Thomas E. Dewey's banner today, while California Democrats were registering their third term views in a complicated primary-election.

Dewey delegates led an unopposed slate by more than seven to one in Maryland's Republican primary yesterday. At the same time the Idaho Republican convention broke tradition and voted, 133 to 68, to instruct its eight delegates to support the New York district attorney.

In the California primary four delegates' slates were entered. One was pledged to President Roosevelt and one to Vice President Garner. Two others, one of which was led by "ham and eggs" pension forces, were unopposed. One unopposed slate was on the Republican ballot.

Besides the California voting there were primaries today in four other states as follows:

Alabama: Democrats were choosing 22 national convention delegates.

Florida: More than half the 88 candidates for 14 national convention votes announced support of a third term.

Indiana: Both major parties were choosing nominees for 12 House seats, along with state convention delegates.

South Dakota: Republic and Democratic national delegations of eight members each were unopposed.

May Meeting Held By Commissions

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners today held a regular session yesterday, attended to routine business, discussed drainage and road projects and named G. R. Jones constable of Swift Creek township, succeeding H. H. Adams, resigned.

H. M. Harris was appointed electrical inspector for the Pitt-Greene Electric Membership Corporation.

County Agent R. R. Bennett and Home Demonstration Agent Miss Ethel Rice were authorized to proceed with a WPA mattress project, the cost to the county not to exceed $50.

A petition was received and forwarded to the State Highway Commission district offices requesting the state to take over and maintain the road beginning at B. J. Edwards tobacco barns and leading to Nymman Elks' home, a distance of eight-tenths of a mile in Chicod township. It was pointed out that a large number of families lived on the highway and all of them had signed the petition, and also that the school bus travels the road daily.

Another petition was received and forwarded asking the State Commission to cut a road from a fork about a mile and four-tenths north from Albemarle cross roads about 30 degrees east, connecting with another road at the nearest point. It was pointed out that the proposed 2.8 miles road would eliminate the present necessity of going all the way around a tract, a distance of some 18 miles.

E.B. Braxton Wins Winterville Race

E. B. Braxton defeated Woodrow Worthington by the scant margin of 110 to 108 in Winterville's mayoral race yesterday in the largest election in the history of the Pitt county town.

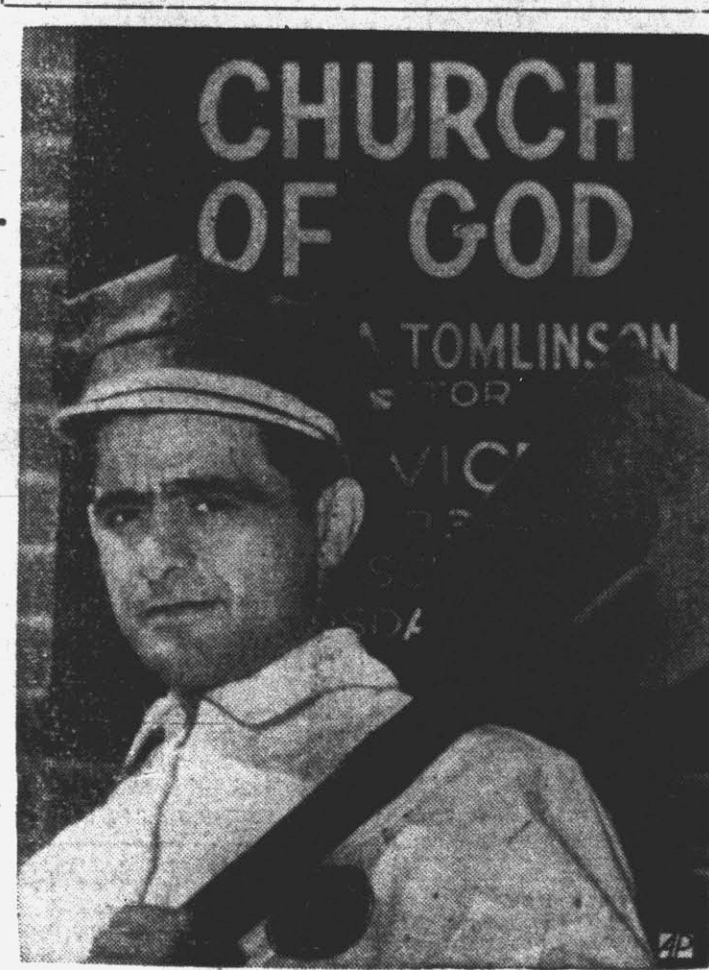

A total of 221 residents participated in the balloting.

Wayland Hunsucker, the present mayor, did not offer for re-election. Three members were named to the Board of Aldermen as follows: B. T. Cox, Ray Oglesby and Joe Beddard.

Five contestants entered the aldermanic race, polling the following votes: B. T. Cox, 166; Albert Cox, 57; Walter Dail, 115; Ray Oglesby, 135; Joe Beddard, 153.

Changes Demanded By Chamberlain Opposition

DROP PENALTY AGAINST ITALY

Move Taken To Improve Italo-American Relations

Washington, May 7.—(AP)—The Treasury today removed penalty tariffs against most Italian silk goods in compliance with a State Department request for the move as a means of improving Italian-American relations.

The Treasury last August imposed special duties on a long list of Italian silk on the theory that Italy was subsidizing these exports and the tariff ought to be raised by the amount of the subsidy in order to prevent unfair competition with American manufacturers in their own markets.

Today's order removed the penalties and restored the normal tariff duties.

May Day Set For Tomorrow P.M.

The May Day celebration at East Carolina Teachers College, postponed from last Saturday because of inclement weather, will be held tomorrow evening at 6:30.

It will see Miss Dorothy Reed Miller, Wilmington senior, crowned queen for the second consecutive year, with Miss Christine Harris, Thomasville, Tenn., as her maid of honor, and Misses Sarah Ann Maxwell, Pink Hill; Mary Helen Gullledge, Raleigh; Mildred Jane Taylor, South Mills; Millie Gray Dupree, Angier; Eloise Bone, Rocky Mount; and Marguerite Britt, Mount Olive, as maids in attendance.

Following the queen as train bearers will come Louise Baughan and Barbara Tabor, small daughters of faculty members, Sophia Frazzelle, Snow Hill, will act as crown bearer.

There will be two lords and ladies from each college class, also in the queen's train.

Besides the highlight of the crowning of the queen, numbers by the glee club and the orchestra, and several dances will be on the program.

CHARGE DENIED BY TWO ALLIES

Statement That Britain and France Would Be Ready for "Ordered Action" In Near East Described As Fantastic; Germany Meanwhile Claims Success In Norway By Land, Sea and Air

Berlin, May 7.—(AP)—Charges that the Allies would be prepared for "ordered action" in the Near East about May 15 thundered in the German press today on the basis of an account of a purported telephone conversation between British Prime Minister Chamberlain and French Premier Reynaud.

(Official circles in London called the story fantastic and a French communique said it contained "purely lying allegations," both the reported telephone conversations, which never took place, and the intention attributed to the Allies.)

The German high command meanwhile reported land, sea and air triumphs for the Nazi forces in Norway.

Its communique said German bombers had hit another British cruiser and a big flying boat off Narvik, Norwegian iron ore port in which a German garrison is besieged. German pursuit planes shot down two British craft "in an attempt by the British to fly over the German (Helgoland) light," it said.

The communique reported an enemy submarine sunk in the Skagerrak by "a flotilla of submarine chasers."

Its announcement that German troops have reduced Mosjoen in a northward drive from Namsos meant that the Germans have covered about one-third of the 300 miles to Narvik, supposedly on the heels of allied detachments cut off from the main expeditionary force withdrawn last week from central Norway.

Il Duce Expected To Reveal Stand

Rome, May 7.—(AP)—Premier Mussolini's answer to the riddle of Italy's position in the face of allied fleet concentrations in the Mediterranean was widely expected today to be given Thursday when he is to review troops of the Rome garrison. Vatican authorities indicated meanwhile that Pope Pius still sees little chance of an early peace.

Appomattox Site Of National Park

Washington, May 7.—(AP)—Secretary Ickes today designated a 900-acre area at Appomattox, Va., scene of General Robert E. Lee's surrender of the army of northern Virginia, in April, 1865, as a national historical monument.

The area includes the spot where General Lee and General Grant had headquarters and the site of the McLean house, where Lee surrendered to Grant.

Crack-Up Is Fatal To Detroit Racer

Indianapolis, May 7.—(AP)—George Bailey, 38, Detroit race driver, died today in a hospital soon after he was injured in the wreck of a car in which he was practicing for the annual 500-mile race at the Indianapolis motor speedway.

Bailey, driving a rear-motor speedster, had just finished four laps on the two and a half mile track, the last at 128 miles an hour, when the car hit a wall and caught fire.

Apostle of Peace Dies
London, May 7.—(AP)—George Lansbury, 81, veteran British political leader and apostle of peace, died today.

'Post's' His Books
Richmond, Va.—(AP)—A farmer applied to the Virginia division of motor vehicles for a refund of tax on gasoline used in a farm tractor.

"I do not have an itemized statement," he wrote, "but I can swear that amount was used in the tractor, for each time I put five gallons of gas in the tractor I placed a nail in a post."

The division told him his "heavy" bookkeeping was inadequate and he could forget about the $6.50 refund.

Smart-Boyd. On Saturday afternoon, May 4, at 4 o'clock in the chapel at Duke University, Miss Willie Yvonne Boyd, daughter of Mrs. William John Boyd and the late Mr. Boyd, of Ayden, became the bride of Mr. Gardner Ford Smart, son of Mr. Benjamin F. Smart and the late Dr. Smart of Troy, Ala.

The quiet afternoon ceremony, which was marked by simplicity and dignity, was performed by Dr. E. B. Meyer of the School of Religion at Duke University. Edward Hall, broadhead, alumnus of the university, presided at the organ console. Marvin Kelly sang "Because", and the traditional wedding marches were used for the processional and recessional.

The bride and groom entered together and were unattended. The bride chose for her wedding a navy blue redingote ensemble with dainty lingerie trimmings at the neckline. Her hat was high crown sailor or navy marshallow straw trimmed with white and a fine navy mesh veil, with this she wore navy shoes and white gloves, her flowers were a corsage of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Smart received her A. B. degree in art from W. C. U. N. C. in the class of 1937. While in college she took an active part in a number of curricular activities. She was social chairman and vice-president of St. Mary's student club, president of the Art Club, member of Dikane Literary society and since her graduation she has taken special courses in art under the direction of Gregory O. Ivey. She made her debut in 1936 in Raleigh, and for the past several years she has taught art at Fuller School in Durham.

Mr. Smart was graduated from Duke University in 1936, and at the present is a member of the graduating class in the medical school at Duke University. He is a member of the Alpha Kappa Kappa Medical fraternity.

The wedding guests included only members of the families and a few close friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Smart will make their home at 328 Urban Avenue, in Durham.

"Freshman Frolics of 1940"

The "Freshmen Frolics of 1940" will be presented by the Freshman Class of E. C. T. C. in the Austin Auditorium on the night of May 9. The program will consist of a variety show directed by Mrs. Al Dittmer, with farces on school life, and features bringing out individual types of ability in the freshman class; the symphonic Orchestra will play for the melodrama; and there will be a one-act melodrama, "She Was Only A Farmer's Daughter."

Hilda Ruth Martin from Conway plays the lead as an innocent country girl who goes to the city and is tricked by the villain or slicker, Norwood Wahl. Micro, the poor but honest country boy, plays opposite her, and finally wins the hand of his childhood sweetheart by his sincerity.

Other roles are banker's daughter, played by Estelle Davis, Seaboard; the city slicker, David Cox, New York City; the heroine's aunt, Margaret Hinnant, Micro; the hero's mother, Joy Parnell, Fayetteville; the banker father of Estelle Davis, Bill Baysden, Raleigh; and the banker's wife, Frances Sears, Apex.

The play is being directed by Kenneth Woolard, of Greenville.

Library News

The Scouts, both boys and girls, are being specially provided for in the summer reading material now being ordered for Sheppard Memorial Library. Some books are mainly entertaining, some provide food for mind and character building, some combine both of these features. A special effort is always made to find books of this last type. Do club reading from the library this summer and see what books were selected. Orders are being placed today.

Legislative Controversy On Game Division Likely

Reflector Bureau.
By HENRY AVERILL.
Raleigh, May 7.—The Game and Inland Fish division of the Department of Conservation and Development is likely to be the center of legislative controversy in next year's General Assembly, although only desultory attention has been paid to it in the campaign for governor.

All the candidates who said anything one way or the other about "diversion" of funds from hunting and fishing licenses to other purposes have announced opposition to this practice. All seemed thoroughly agreed that the law makers ought to make sufficient appropriation to take care of the Forestry division without the necessity of dipping into the game division funds.

That, apparently, ought to have settled that issue, and as far as the particular phase is concerned, it is probably dead; but the controversy over financing the game division goes much deeper than the mere debate over whether or not some small part of the funds derived from sale of hunting and fishing licenses shall or shall not be used for other purposes, such as forest fire prevention and control.

There are some officials in the Department of Conservation and Development who believe that a studied effort to bring about a change in the Game and Inland Fish division from the Department's jurisdiction and to set it up as a separate and independent agency. There was more than a little talk of such a movement when sportsmen came to Raleigh late last year in an angry mood, demanding that there be no "diversion" of game division funds for the current biennium. A "compromise" agreement was reached which seemed to mollify almost all concerned, but there were many die-hards who left swearing to stop any future diversion by taking the game division out.

The department officials who think this likely say that control of the funds derived from hunting and fishing licenses would give opportunity to set up a pretty fair sort of political machine. They point to the uncontroverted fact that more money is collected from these licenses than is appropriated for all the other seven or eight divisions of the Department combined.

It has been charged, by innuendo if not directly, that the present Game Division head, John D. Chalk, appears to be maneuvering with an eye to becoming head of a game setup completely independent of the Department.

And so there seem quite sufficient grounds to look for an effort to take the Game division away from the Conservation unit.

As a sort of counter-stroke in rebuttal to the alleged efforts to separate game and other units, there is a suggestion that the 1941 General Assembly may eventually reach a decision that the best thing to do with the game and fish funds is to put them directly into the general fund and make appropriations for the game division directly from these general funds just as is done with most state agencies.

Conservation Department isn't likely to recommend any such course (it is satisfied with the present set-up so long as the game division is one of its subordinate units) and of course the division would be bitterly opposed, because it would thereby lose all the power conferred by having money to disburse and dispense.

The argument is that the pressure on the legislators will be applied in so many directions, that they will eventually decide to take matters into their own hands and settle the dispute in summary fashion.

Veteran Raleigh news men have told your reporter that is very much what happened to the Department of Agriculture in the matter of its funds. There was a time when all money for the Agriculture department was disbursed under its exclusive control and jurisdiction; but year after year there developed so many disputes over what funds should be "sacred" to what purposes and handled by whom that the legislature eventually got sick and tired of the mess and put the whole thing under the budget department's control—agricultural money going into the general funds and being disbursed under the same conditions as other general funds.

So there will be that sort of cross current—the game division fighting for more independence in the matter of its finances, the Department of Conservation and Development unwilling to let the division get out from under its wing.

Aside from this broad and rather general controversy there now appears no more game legislation likely to bob up except the perennial efforts of certain provincial-minded legislators to break up the existing statewide system of game control by exempting their counties from provisions of the act which do not meet with complete approval in the localities from which these law makers come.

That happens every two years, but of late these attempts have been beaten off without too much trouble.

Hollywood

Sights And Sounds

By Robin Coon

Hollywood — Bel-Air is an exclusive, wooded and flowered residential division that sprawls over some of the rolling hills, valleys and canyons between Hollywood and the sea.

Some years ago, it was a matter of local moment that Bel-Air had opened its invisible gates to a "movie person," one Colleen Moore who proceeded to build a sumptuous little shack of unpeeped rooms, swimming pool and other trappings. As one who always figured movie people were just about like other people, at least in their beginnings and if Hollywood didn't "get" them, I never did see why Bel-Air was being generous, or why Colleen Moore had achieved any particular distinction in moving in, but then there are lots of matters I need to clear up.

Anyway Bel-Air has plenty of "movie persons" now, and the ladies of the Bel-Air garden club had their annual flower show not long ago. It was quite a show, colossal as we say in the movies, although I failed to see any exhibits from movie personages.

What I'm getting around to saying is that Miss G. Garbo was among the customers. Miss G. came in, accompanied by a friend my spy identified as Mrs. Harrison Williams of sartorial fame, and sat down for tea in a secluded corner of the tea room.

"Garbo is in there," one of the members said disinterestedly to her colleagues.

"Oh, is she?" said Bel-Air collectively and sniffily, and went about its flowery affairs. This indifference continued a few moments, until one of the ladies said airily, "Well, I think I'll just go by and see what she looks like." In a little while, a casual stream of ladies, wearing oh-so-well-to-do-looking expressions had inspected Miss G. Garbo, who tea-d on, unperturbed.

I am in receipt of a communication from the Guild Publicity Bureau, Inc. ("There's more to proper publicity than getting your name in print" which enjoins me henceforth to refer to cameramen as "Directors of Photography," which is the title bestowed upon members of the craft by agreement with the producers three years ago.

"The word 'cameramen' is no longer properly descriptive of the men who have charge of lighting and photography, since they never touch the cameras," says the bulletin.

This is a pretty thought but as a peace-loving individual I dislike his passion for hair-splitting in titles. Thus guided, one no longer could blanket all hams under the charitable term "actor," nor label "director" all those who merely stand around a set and try to follow explicit instructions in the script. One would have to detail how much producing some producers really do, and embarrass certain "writers" whose best signed works are checks.

However, I'll compromise. I'll call them Directors of Photography, if they'll call me something fancy like—let's see, how would Veteran of Verbosity do?

Death is sweet in Hollywood. Actors dote on dying. That's because it's a tough job to deal a scene from a corpse-elect. "I'm a heavy," as Akim Tamiroff observed gleefully today, "but I've got a wonderful death scene!"

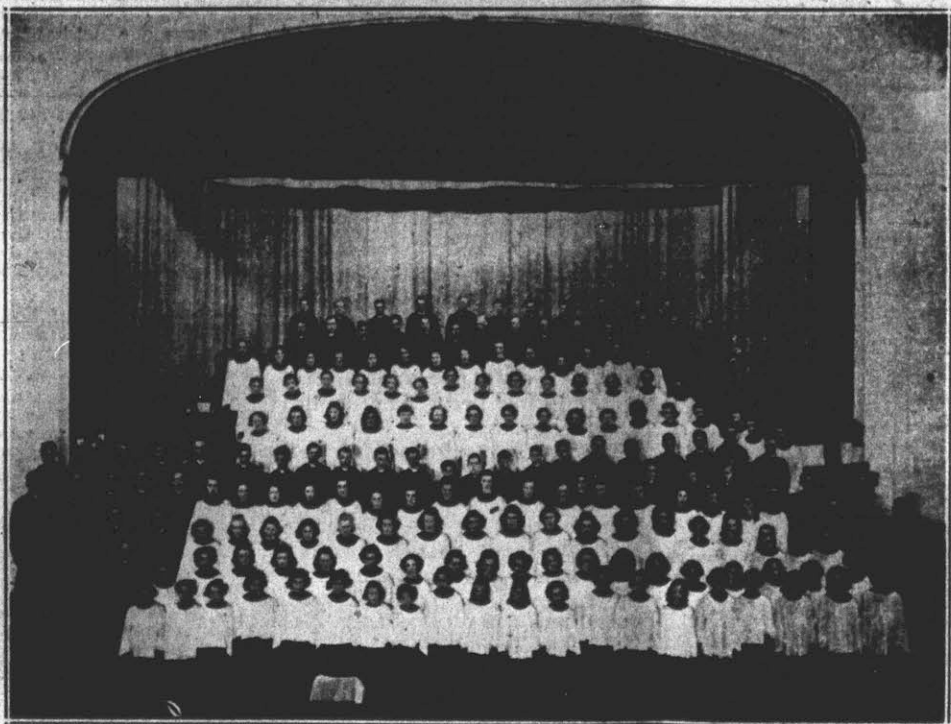

There's a chap named Francis Walker who practically makes his living by dying in westerns. He gets more lead than lead—has died in 74 movies and survived only 21, in seven of which he got "shot." He was ready today for his 75th demise in "Black K Rides Tonight."

"There's no better way to get the audience to look at you," he said, while they smeared him with "blood" for his big moment, "and it answers the exit problem—no question about what to do with your hands and feet when you're loaded with lead."

Of the total area of Iceland, six-sevenths is unproductive.

To Present Festival Concert Friday Night

The Music Festival Concert will be presented by the combined choruses of the Eastern Carolina Symphonic Choral Association at Wright Memorial auditorium on Friday night at 8 o'clock.

The combined junior choruses from Winterville, Ayden and Snow Hill numbering around 75 voices, will give a group of songs.

The high school choruses from the same schools will also combine into one large chorus of 100 voices and present a group of numbers.

Next the five symphonic choruses from Robersonville, Greenville, Ayden, Snow Hill and Goldsboro will combine into one chorus of over 100 voices and sing one group of selections.

The Eastern Carolina Symphonic singers will also present a group of numbers. This will be their farewell appearance before they leave on their northern tour Monday, May 13.

As a climax, the combined high school and adult choruses will present a group together. This will be a great chorus of 200 voices.

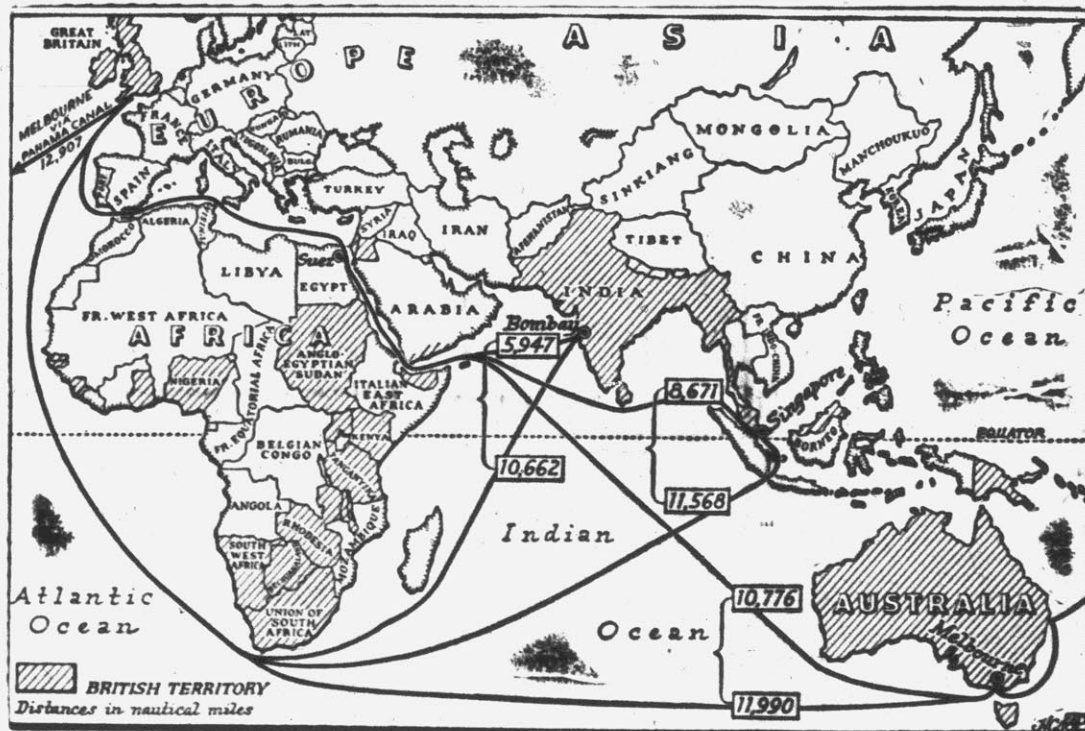

This concert will be a musical treat for music lovers in eastern Carolina.

The association is grateful to the Greenville Chamber of Commerce for sponsoring the festival concert. The association is also most grateful to the East Carolina Teachers College for its graciousness, and willing cooperation in helping to make this concert possible. We wish to express our appreciation to the newspapers, and the Greenville Merchants Association and all others who have so graciously assisted.

The concert is entirely free to all. Its purpose is to encourage a better appreciation for good music among our people, thus making our communities better places in which to live because of the tremendous power of good music.

Fear Of War In Mediterranean Stretches British Supply Lines

Britain, uneasy lest Italy's Duce jump off his fence and into the war on Germany's side, has ordered her merchant ships to avoid the Mediterranean Sea. This map shows what that means in lengthened lifelines to Great Britain from her empire sources of supply in the ar East. Figures on the map indicate the mileage of alternative Mediterranean and around-Africa routes. Braces connect comparable distances, showing differences up to 75 percent.

FETE IS HELD AT VANCEBORO

Farm Life School Association Holds Banquet

The twentieth annual meeting of the Craven County Farm Life School Alumni Association of Vanceboro was held in the Community Building Friday evening, May 3, 1940. The meeting was presided over by Mrs. M. F. Aldridge, president, member of the first graduating class (1916) and Miss Myrtle Huff, secretary and treasurer (1928). A delightful supper was served under the direction of Miss Grace Peterson (1924), chairman of the food committee.

Mrs. Aldridge welcomed the members of the association and the incoming members of the class of 1940. The response was given by Monnie Laughins, Jr., president of the 1940 class. After the business session the following program was given under the direction of Harry Smith (1923) chairman of the program committee:

Farm Life School song by Alumni Association; short talk on school activities by Superintendent E. P. Blair; Duet, Evelyn Williams (1938) and Aline Purser (1940); short talk by Roy H. Rowe (1923); song, Mrs. Etta Feldman Bloom (1923); short talk, L. Guy Mathis; solo, Mrs. Grace Wood Larson (1937); jokes, Rodman L. Lancaster (1930); tap dance, Virginia Dare Boyd, daughter of Mrs. Clyde Hill Boyd (1925); reading, Myrtle Huff (1928).

A list of by-laws was presented by Lawrence E. Lancaster (1923). These were accepted by the Association with an amendment to the effect that each annual, "Old Mill Stream," edited by incoming senior classes, contain a page by the Association. Another amendment was that the dance following the banquet should be an annual affair.

Mrs. Grace Lancaster Elks (1922) chairman of the nomination committee, then took charge and the following officers for 1941 were elected.

President, Webster Butler (1928); vice president, Edwin Robinson (1939); secretary, Charlotte Simmons (1936); assistant secretary, Ruby Bland (1938); treasurer, Sonia White (1936).

The following chairmen of committees were appointed: Program, J. F. Williams, Jr. (1924); food, Mrs. David Joyner (1923); decorating, Mrs. J. E. Hellen (1935); preparation, Elmo Hill (1934); nominating, Floyd Lancaster (1923).

All business for the year being finished, the members were invited to the gymnasium which had been decorated under the direction of Bill Cleve (1932), chairman of the decorating committee, for the annual dance. Music, furnished by the Wesley Hunt orchestra of Washington, was enjoyed by the members and their guests.

It was voted one of the most successful meetings of the Association.

Strength For The Day
By EARL L. DOUGLASS

THE ONE SURE WAY
A prominent journalist collecting information for an article was told recently of a night school which the people of a certain city were conducting for adult men and women who could not read or write. The journalist went with a friend to see the school, and he said to one of the grizzled old scholars, "How are you getting on?" "Well," said the man, "I am getting along all right. I can read the road signs now. That is, I can read how far, but I can't read where to." He was not much different from the rest of us. As we look at the disturbed and chaotic conditions in the world today, we can read "how far" but we can't read "where to." We are well aware of the length of that rough road along which humanity is stumbling blindly and madly at this very hour. But we do not know the destination.

Some say that peace lies at the end. Others say that the road leads over the precipice so far as civilization is concerned. Some maintain that the present order will break up and a new era will start happier by far than any we have known in the past. But all this is conjecture. As we read the road signs today, we all read "how far" but no one is wise enough to read "where to."

There is only one sure way, and it was pointed out to us 2000 years ago. Said Jesus, "I am the way, the truth, and the life." If we follow that way, and if the world follows that way, we need have no fear.

PHILIPPINES APPARENTLY A LINK IN JAPAN'S EXPANSION

Nowhere in the Pacific is the groundwork of expansion being laid more carefully and thoroughly by Japan than in the Philippines, many observers believe. And all signs indicate that when these Islands receive independence from the United States, it will be short-lived unless America is willing to back that nation to the limit in maintaining its freedom.

Japanese colonization in the Islands has apparently been with a long range view. They have picked the Island of Mindanao, particularly the province of Davao, which is the second largest in the Philippines. But even more significant is its economic importance and strategic location. It has the greatest potential and least developed natural resources of all the Islands, with an estimated iron reserve of a billion tons. And it is on the opposite end of the archipelago from Japan—an important link in any program of expansion that nation may try to carry out.

This position makes it the spearhead of a drive to dominate the East Indies, and could be easily fortified and converted in the southern bulwark of a vast chain of defense points. Japan already has a strong naval base at Formosa; has recently seized Hainan Island from China to gain a naval base 1,000 miles nearer Singapore, the British stronghold; controls Spratly Island and a string of small islands and reefs off the northwest coast of Borneo, and, nearer home, the Empire includes the Caroline Islands, the Marshalls, the Marianas, the Bonins and several more smaller islands.

Japan's violations of treaties in its expansion policy in the East has reached a point where it is now costing the United States hundreds of millions of dollars to get back into the naval race as the only means of protecting American interests in the Pacific, and possibly, in the future, the only means of protecting itself from invasion. Japan's naval policy is best described as one of constant deception. The recent announcement that Japan has secretly built its navy so that it probably has a larger battle line than the United States—possibly by more than 150,000 tons—may finally bring the fact home to the American people that the Japanese threat in the Pacific is not merely idle chatter.

Japan's repudiation of treaty obligations started before Hitler and Stalin began making mere scraps of paper out of signed pledges. Many believe that the success of the Japanese in these early violations paved the way for the tactics used by Germany in Poland, Czechoslovakia, Denmark and Norway, and by Russia in Finland. The record of these dictatorships proves that national honor means nothing to them—that they live by the rule of expediency and opportunity, and will stop at nothing to gain an advantage.

Washington Daybook
By Jack Stinnett

Washington.—Face-saving is supposed to be an Oriental custom. Storybooks say many an Oriental has run himself through with a sword because he was defeated for the Oriental equivalent for soldier. It seems he had "lost face," and couldn't prove he didn't want the job anyway.

But what we often overlook the fact that good Anglo-Saxon and Latin stocks from Europe and America have been known to save a few faces now and then, even if they don't do it on purpose.

Take the case of Vice President Cactus Jack Garner, who allowed it to be announced just before the big primaries a few weeks ago that he was out for the presidency whether Boss Roosevelt ran or not. Garner's announcement was taken by a lot of people to mean that this wise old owl of politics had reason to believe he was in the big money.

Then Came The Primaries

For Cactus Jack Garner has seldom made a wrong move. Why, I know an executive for a big group of business men who thought Garner had the lowdown on the political situation and was practically in before the primaries.

Wondering just what was what about this presidential situation, I visited the Southwest last winter. I ran into a traveling man friend who is a keen student of Texas politics.

So I asked: "What about Texas?" He said: "Do you mean that Garner-for-President boom? If you do, watch your step. Don't let 'em fool you up there in Washington."

"In the first place, Texas Democrats are for their hometown, even if it's only a hog waller. They just naturally love it. Then they're for the state of Texas. They worship it. Next, they're for the Democratic party. After that, they're for Roosevelt, and after that—well, after that they're for Garner."

I was a little surprised by this stump speech for the President. But now comes the news that my friend might have been aiming in the right direction.

Leastways, that's what people who know make of the love feast these days, now that Garner has run behind the procession in the primaries.

At the height of love-making, it seems the love-makers sent some telegrams to Samuel Rayburn, Democratic house majority leader from Texas. Funny, the way Mr. Rayburn can get people to send telegrams to him.

Love-Making In Texas

Anyway, the Garner-for-President man in Texas, a Mr. Myron G. Blacklock, and the Roosevelt third-term boom, a Mr. Alvin J. Wirtz, also of Texas, telegraphed Rayburn that they were for Roosevelt and Garner.

Washington.—Face-saving is supposed to be an Oriental custom. Storybooks say many an Oriental has run himself through with a sword because he was defeated for the Oriental equivalent for soldier. It seems he had "lost face," and couldn't prove he didn't want the job anyway.

But what we often overlook the fact that good Anglo-Saxon and Latin stocks from Europe and America have been known to save a few faces now and then, even if they don't do it on purpose.

Take the case of Vice President Cactus Jack Garner, who allowed it to be announced just before the big primaries a few weeks ago that he was out for the presidency whether Boss Roosevelt ran or not. Garner's announcement was taken by a lot of people to mean that this wise old owl of politics had reason to believe he was in the big money.

Then Came The Primaries

For Cactus Jack Garner has seldom made a wrong move. Why, I know an executive for a big group of business men who thought Garner had the lowdown on the political situation and was practically in before the primaries.

Wondering just what was what about this presidential situation, I visited the Southwest last winter. I ran into a traveling man friend who is a keen student of Texas politics.

So I asked: "What about Texas?" He said: "Do you mean that Garner-for-President boom? If you do, watch your step. Don't let 'em fool you up there in Washington."

"In the first place, Texas Democrats are for their hometown, even if it's only a hog waller. They just naturally love it. Then they're for the state of Texas. They worship it. Next, they're for the Democratic party. After that, they're for Roosevelt, and after that—well, after that they're for Garner."

I was a little surprised by this stump speech for the President. But now comes the news that my friend might have been aiming in the right direction.

Leastways, that's what people who know make of the love feast these days, now that Garner has run behind the procession in the primaries.

At the height of love-making, it seems the love-makers sent some telegrams to Samuel Rayburn, Democratic house majority leader from Texas. Funny, the way Mr. Rayburn can get people to send telegrams to him.

Love-Making In Texas

Anyway, the Garner-for-President man in Texas, a Mr. Myron G. Blacklock, and the Roosevelt third-term boom, a Mr. Alvin J. Wirtz, also of Texas, telegraphed Rayburn that they were for Roosevelt and Garner.

LITTLE SPHERE
By Jean Randall

YESTERDAY: To her horror Brenda learns that she is responsible for Adelaide's worry. As a result of Brenda's scheme to jam the household machinery, Adelaide believes she is losing her mind. When Brenda explains, Adelaide starts to recover, but Brenda is irreconcilable.

Chapter 28
Heavy Heart

BRENDa stumbled wearily across the hall to the library, guided by Mac's hand at her elbow. She was numb with misery and lack of sleep. She hardly knew how she happened to be in a big armchair with pillows behind her tired shoulders, and with Mac holding something in a small glass to her lips.

"Drink this," he said quietly, and docilely she swallowed it.

"It's aromatic spirits of ammonia and will put you up," he went on. "Now, Brenda, let me do the talking for a few minutes. You just sit there and listen until I'm through. I know what Adelaide told you this morning—what you told her. And I know you're planning to tell Eric and Isabel about it, too."

"How?" she whispered. "How did you know?"

"A word or two from Stern, something that Adelaide let fall when I saw her just before dinner; but most of all the facts themselves. I've been the world's dumbest idiot not to have connected cause and effect before."

The stimulant was helping her a little. Instead of the blur that Mac's face had been, it was clear-cut and friendly, even kindly.

"But I must tell everybody—"

"That's exactly what you must not do! Think, Brenda, of some of the harm that will cause. Isabel will grow self-conscious—for you can't explain what you did without telling why you did it! Adelaide's friends and neighbors will see with new eyes her casualness, her vagueness. Unconsciously they'll build up an atmosphere in which she may learn to distrust her own mind. And she's been a long time on The Street. Most of us here have so little to talk of that they—well, things over and over until sometimes they lose their original proportions. Are you listening, Brenda?"

"Yes."

"Then I beg you to keep your own counsel on this subject. You've told the truth to the only two people concerned: Adelaide, and the doctor. Now forget the whole thing!"

In spite of her determination, her chin quivered, two crystal tears rolled down her cheeks. Mac made an involuntary movement toward her, then stopped, one hand gripping the back of his chair.

"My dear," he said in a big brotherly tone, "you're making too much of this. Your motive was good. You couldn't know about Adelaide's mother, or what effect your little plan would have on her. She was over-tired to begin with; perhaps a steady ill that what made her put so much stress on a few silly things she couldn't account for."

Brenda could not speak. She pressed her handkerchief against her mouth, and sat there, her head slightly bowed, all of her forces bent upon regaining control of herself. Mac went on steadily.

"If you were to blame—I mean, if you think you took a little too much on yourself"—he smiled—"and it's feminine nature to try a bit of matchmaking at all possible times. I suppose—remember that you've paid for it over and over again. You've nursed Adelaide tirelessly. You've given up your own work, you've devoted yourself to us all. And now you've accomplished what neither her doctor nor her old friends could do: you've found out what was worrying her, and set it right. Doesn't that sort of square accounts with yourself?"

Reunited

IT WAS nearly one o'clock and they had almost finished their impromptu meal when a knock at the back door startled them.

"Who on earth?" Isabel exclaimed.

Mac shot the bolt and opened the door, peering into the dim light. He peered, he stared, his eyes almost popped from his head, as Eric told him afterward.

"Salut!"

"And Linda," announced the artist proudly. "Let us in, Mac. We saw the light on in the living room and went to the front door but were afraid to ring for fear of waking Adelaide. Then I caught sight of the light streaming out of this window and we came around to see what's going on out here."

He gazed radiantly from one to another, the bitterness gone from his eyes, his fairly leaping from them. He said to Brenda, a slender woman whose face reflected something of his own emotion.

"Will you tell me," Mac demanded, "what in the name of all that's sensible you're doing strolling around at this time of night?"

"Here's Linda," Hugh said again as if that explained everything. "You all know her—all but Brenda. Brenda, you blessed child, this is my wife!"

"Why is Brenda a blessed child?" Eric wished to know.

"Because—bless her little interfering heart and soul—it was she who brought Linda home to me."

"How?" asked a chorus of voices.

Salut threw his wife a humorous glance. "May I tell 'em darling?"

For the first time Linda herself spoke; in a sweet, drawing voice which held a thread of laughter.

"No, I'll do it myself, Hugh. You're sure to make it out worse than it is. It was Brenda," she explained, "only not in the way she had planned. I mean having Jim talk to me didn't do any good. He'd done it before—lots. But that girl in New York that Brenda wrote to! She kept telling me that Brenda said Hugh was wonderful and—well, she admired him with charming honesty. 'I got jealous, that's all. You see, I'd planned to come back when Jim—when Jim did. I suppose that I'd thought I had Hugh in a sort of cold storage, waiting to be called for. The idea that he might get interested in another woman didn't appeal.'"

She smiled at Brenda.

"So she thought the matter over and came to claim her property," was her husband's triumphant addition.

Brenda had paled and flushed and paled again. It frightened her to realize how greatly she could influence the lives of others. A gentle pull on the reins here, a flick of the whip there, and people seemed to respond like high-spirited horses. It was lucky that things had turned out well for the Saluts.

"But they quite easily might not," she brooded. "My letters might have made Linda run away where Hugh could never have found her."

She was very quiet during the subdued chatter that followed. She made more sandwiches for the callers, she smiled and said an appropriate sentence or two; but for the most part she sat, eyes heavy with weariness, heart heavy with a new grief.

Far Happier

SHE said huskily: "No. No. Mac, it doesn't. Nothing will ever free me from the knowledge that I very nearly killed poor Adelaide with my—my trying to arrange other people's lives for them!"

"Trying to help other people," he amended kindly. "And you have helped a lot of us. The Street is far happier for your having come."

"Not everyone on The Street!"

"No, not everyone," he agreed. "I'm not for one. But the percentage is pretty high for all that. Brenda, let's have a party. Don't you think there have been enough tears shed in this house lately? What do you say we drive downtown now and get some supplies. Come on now, come on," he continued coaxingly. "Be a sport and come with me!"

lock, stock, and barrel.

Now, it's pretty hard to be for two men for one job, lock, stock and barrel. So the Messrs. Wirtz and Blacklock "clarified" themselves a little further.

They agreed that (1) Texas Democrats should endorse the Roosevelt administration, (2) that they should send a delegation to the national convention pledged to native son, John Nance Garner, and (3) they should not serve as a stop-Roosevelt group.

Well, sir, I couldn't figure it out. So I went to fellows who knew Texas politics. They told me it meant Mr. Garner had won a technical victory, thanks to Samuel Rayburn.

It also means, they tell me, that Texas Democrats won't be all split up at the convention with conservatives in one camp and liberals in another, in case Mr. Roosevelt should want a third term. Maybe that means they're going to go for Mr. Roosevelt if he runs for a third term.

Certainly Rayburn has fixed it so Garner won't have to run for President if he doesn't want to, and also fixed it so Mr. Garner—and Roosevelt—usually do what all party stalwarts usually do.

In the words of Gifford Pinchot, they always come a running with their tails tucked in between their legs when the party whistle blows.

No wonder the Kitchins are divided in their gubernatorial allegiance. A bit of research dug up the fact that there were eleven brothers and sisters in the Governor-Congressman producing family. They had 40 children and 35 of them are still living in North Carolina.

With these dozens of cousins, it's not at all surprising that their votes and sympathies will be split at least four ways.

State Auditor George Ross Pou is planning to send a "lucky" rabbit foot to every registrar in North Carolina.

Reports reaching Vance Balse, engineer of the State Highway Public works commission indicate that the Wright Memorial Bridge is probably in better condition now than at any time since the state bought it from private owners. Load limit on the span across the Albemarle sound will likely be increased as soon as repairs are fully completed—which will be about the end of the month.

As the "Clean Up and Paint Up" parade passed in front of the Sir Walter, Ronald Wilson, Maxwell's assistant state manager, looked out the window at a couple of Negroes following the band, sweeping the street hard and clean as they went along.

"They're doing just like Mr. Maxwell is going to do—mop up," he said, then added rather dolefully: "But this being cleanup week I guess I'll have to take a bath tonight—and it's only Monday."

Secretary of State Thad Eure is proudly displaying card of W. B. Keziah, executive secretary of the Brunswick County Chamber of Commerce (he's a mute) on the back of which Mr. Keziah wrote, "You're the only candidate worth a damn who has been here this year."

"Hugh!!", sniffed Auditor George Ross Pou, "I haven't been to Brunswick yet."

If You Don't Believe This You're Not An Emanuel

AP Feature Service
North Bend, Neb.—Reviewer Paul Bunyan and his legendary feats of strength?

North Bend is the home of most of the descendants of Peter Emanuel, and through the years North Bend is painting Peter Emanuel more and more in Bunyan-esque colors.

Peter Emanuel, his yarn-spinning descendants say, was born in Huetendorf in 1765. It was then a French area, is now German. He lived there until his death in 1858. Once upon a time he and his wife went to the meadow for a load of hay. His wife tried to climb on the loaded rack, but couldn't make it. So Peter tossed her to the top. But he didn't know his own strength. She flew clear over the rack and landed on the other side, unhurt.

Then there was the time a neighbor's horse trespassed in Peter's garden. The irate Peter threw it over the hedge.

In war time, Peter was a soldier.

Once another strong man challenged him to lift two cannon balls, each weighing 200 pounds. Peter lifted them, tapped them together in front of him, swung them around and tapped them together behind his back.

The other soldier made the front tap, but when he tried the back one he collapsed, dying three days later of internal injuries.

Peter afterward blamed himself for the tragedy.

And, says Rosalie Emanuel, "If you don't believe these stories, you are not an Emanuel."

The Republic of Guatemala was established April 17, 1829.

Haiti was formerly a French colony.

ISSUE AWAITS COLLEGE-BRED MEN SEEK JOB

Reapportioners Mark Time Awaiting Census Dope

By HENRY AVERILL

Raleigh, May 7.—The issue of reapportionment appears to have fallen flatter than a pocket the day before pay day, so far as any discussion in the current gubernatorial races goes; but there are clear indications that reapportioners are only waiting for publication of census figures, before hearing down vigorously on the subject.

That will, of course, be after the first primary and probably after the second but it has been long apparent that the issue couldn't be worked up into a vote getting in the statewide race, anyhow. Paul Grady's abortive efforts to drum up some interest was a complete failure and none of the others has tried it since, although Lieutenant Governor Wilkins P. Horton once got round so close to the point that he released advance stories of a speech in which he would come out for reapportionment.

It isn't that anybody anywhere is against obeying the State's constitution and having a new apportionment of legislative seats; it just that everybody knows there's no way to get anything done except by concentrating fire on the members of the 1941 General Assembly. Therefore, there has been no real pressure put on the candidates for Governor.

The Charlotte Observer's editorial of Sunday, in which Pete Murphy was honored for Secretary of State because he is the only one who was completely oblivious to numerous facts with reference to the location of candidates for state office in this primary, but it was, in the opinion of many, the opening gun in what is sure to turn into a tremendous drive for legislative reapportionment.

Winterville Ends Finals Exercises

"Whether Americans continue to enjoy the benefits that accrue from living in a democracy will probably be settled during the present decade," J. L. Memory, Jr., professor of Education at Wake Forest College, told members of the graduation class at the Winterville High school on Friday night, May 3.

"Too many people nowadays," he continued, "are seemingly unmindful of the price that our forefathers paid for political liberty and allow themselves to be herded into the polls by political bosses, like so many sheep led to slaughter."

He told the seniors that good citizens will vote their own convictions and will support men of character and ability.

Talking on the subject, "The Qualities of a Good Citizen," Memory admonished his hearers to be loyal, courageous, and helpful, to be a lifter instead of a leaver, a producer instead of a consumer, a constructive influence instead of a destructive influence.

Twenty-five seniors were awarded diplomas by C. D. Ward, principal; Robert Bowlin, Linwood Kittrell, Milton May, Dixie McGlohon, William Nobles, Norman Peede, Billy Robertson, Jesse Lyle Rollins, L. Of 24 Applicants for Post, 23 College Trained

By HENRY AVERILL

Raleigh, May 7.—When the North Carolina State Employment Service recently issued Clearance Order 262, seeking to fill a position as insurance claim adjuster, no less than 23 of 24 young men who made application turned out to have had specialized college training.

Of course only one could get the job, leaving 22 other college men still looking for jobs; though at least they have lodged with the Service a record of their qualifications which may later land them positions.

In age they ran from 21 to 35. Five were graduates of the University of North Carolina in commerce, economics, business administration and the liberal arts. One is a Phi Beta Kappa key holder.

Four other attended U. N. C. from one to three years, studying mechanical engineering, commerce and business administration.

Two were graduates of Duke University; three others attended Duke. Two held B. S. and A. B. degrees respectively from Wake Forest. One was a commerce graduate from Georgia Tech. The others attended Appalachian, Wingate, Brevard, Campbell and Mars Hill.

Some of them had worked at odd jobs in the summers during their collegiate careers; others worked a year or so before going to college. Their employment records are:

Sophomore Scholarship, Hazel Riggs; Junior Scholarship, Lonnie Riggs; Senior Scholarship, Phyllis Pilgreen; All-Around Boy, Norman Peede; All-Around Girl, Beatrice Forrest; Salutatorian, Louise Hobgood; Valedictorian, Phyllis Pilgreen.

The faculty award which is presented each year to a member of the graduating class for being the most outstanding student during the four years in high school was presented to Louise Hobgood.
