Eleven Per Cent Increase Endorsed By Committee

MOVE BY HOUSE ALREADY TAKEN

House Sub-Committee Meanwhile Approves FDR Request To Spend Relief Money In 8 Months

Washington, May 9.—(AP)—The Senate Naval Committee unanimously endorsed today a House-approved measure authorizing an 11 per cent increase in the navy's fighting strength.

The committee rejected, however, an amendment by Chairman Walsh (D-Mass.) which would have provided that the 19 new combat ships authorized in the bill should become permanent additions to the fleet and be subject to replacement without further congressional action when they are obsolete.

Walsh said a five-to-three vote against the amendment reflected the majority opinion of the committee that changes in naval designs, foreshadowed by developments in the European war, might be such that the navy ought to consult Congress before building replacements.

The bill, which approved calling for a future outlay of $655,000,000 to be spent over a period of several years, carried no immediate appropriations. Navy officials indicated, however, that they expected to ask this Congress for $46,000,000 to start work on some of the ships involved if the bill is approved by the Senate.

A House appropriations sub-committee was reported to have approved President Roosevelt's request for authority to spend $275,000,000 for WPA in the eight months starting July 1.

The relief bill, carrying funds for the Farm Security Administration as well as the WPA, will be recommended to the full appropriations committee Wednesday and administration leaders said it was planned to have the House begin consideration of the measure the following day.

Budget director Harold Smith told the Senate Reorganization committee that merger of the Civil Aeronautics Authority into the Commerce Department, as proposed in President Roosevelt's contested fourth reorganization plan, would eliminate existing "functional confusion" in the CAA.

Smith said that the shift would "continue the independence of the regulatory and accident investigation functions" now carried on by the CAA board and the air safety board.

The reorganization plan, already disapproved by the House, would abolish the air safety board and lodge its functions in the five-member CAA board.

Final Rites Held For H. C. Venters

Funeral services for Henry Clinton Venters, 73, who died Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at his home in Sheldahl following a heart attack suffered earlier, were conducted this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at the late home by the Rev. H. B. Lewis, Methodist minister of Vanceboro. Burial was in Greenville and Grimsland had charge of services at the grave.

Active pallbearers were G. W. Venters, Jr., John Buck, Glenn Gaskins, Stuart Harris, E. A. Venters and Herbert Savage.

Mr. Venters, a native of Pitt county and a son of the late George Washington and Mary Stokes Venters, was a member of Chapman's Chapel Methodist church, a charter member of the Grimsland lodge and a charter member of the Woodmen of the World of Sheldahl.

Surviving are his widow, two daughters, two brothers, four sisters and 12 grand children.

FEDERAL JURY INDICTS FOUR

One of Founders of Associates Gas Under Charge

New York, May 9.—(AP)—Howard C. Hobson, one of the founders of the vast Associated Gas and Electric system, was indicted today by a federal grand jury for making allegedly unlawful profits in excess of $20,000,000 in securities of the business.

Indicted with the one-time bookkeeper who ran borrowed thousands into billions, were Charles M. Travis and Garrett A. Brownback, lawyers for the system, and Frederick S. Burroughs, former banker for the system and since 1932 a principal officer of the associated company.

The indictment alleges the four men committed mail fraud and conspired to defraud the investing public generally and holders of securities of the associated system subsidiaries in particular.

The alleged conspiracy, the indictment began, began in 1922, the year Hobson purchased with borrowed money the old Associated Gas and Electric company of New York.

The true bill charged that the two lawyers aided Hobson in the alleged fraud and that Burroughs assisted in financing the Associated Gas and Electric Company in the issuance of certain securities which were used by Hobson to derive fraudulent profits.

Hold Last Rites For Dr. W. L. Davis

Final rites for Dr. W. L. Davis, 70, father of Miss Sallie Mae Davis of Greenville, who died Tuesday at his home in Washington, N. C., following an extended illness, were conducted yesterday afternoon at the late home by the Rev. J. R. Everett, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Washington. Burial was in Oakdale cemetery.

Dr. Davis was born and reared in Bertie county, attended the Horner Military Academy and the Norfolk Military Academy. In 1896 he was graduated from the Philadelphia Optical College and was ordained into the Baptist ministry in 1921. He was pastor of the Speed Baptist church eight years and since 1935 had been pastor of the Alldred Baptist church.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Allie Davis; two sons, Gilbert and Herman Davis of Washington; and daughter, Miss Sallie Mae Davis of Greenville; and the following children by a former marriage: G. T. Davis of Windsor, D. G. Davis of Plymouth, and W. L. Davis, Jr., of Washington. Mrs. Belva Perry of Windsor and Mrs. C. F. Hayden of Richmond, Va., a sister, Mrs. J. T. Mizelle, Sr., of Richmond and six grandchildren.

Premier Mussolini Tells Followers that "Only Facts" Will Break His Silence on European Situation, Thus Indicating that Italy to Remain Neutral for While at Least Rome, May 9.—(AP)—Premier Mussolini today told his Fascist followers, celebrating army and empire day, that "only facts" would break his self-imposed silence on the European war.

Il Duce thus indicated clearly that Italy's non-belligerency remained without change until some new development in Europe's conflict plunged the country into war.

Mussolini referred to the declaration of the Italian empire four years ago.

"A great day in the history of our country was that of May 9, 1936," Mussolini said. "It was a day of sunny victory."

"After my speeches you must become accustomed also to my silence. Only facts will break it."

While Mussolini was addressing his followers, Fascist authorities indicated that Italy still is on the fence, waiting the right moment to jump in and get what she wants in prestige and more living space.

Associates of Mussolini emphasized that Italian preparedness for war did not mean necessarily that Italy was entering the conflict soon.

"Our army is under arms, but nobody can or must draw arbitrary dangerous deductions from this attitude," said a newspaper. "Our arms are always ready to be shouldered at any moment interests of the country require."

Not One Lynching During Past Year

Atlanta, May 9.—(AP)—The modern south ended its first year without a lynching last midnight and today a foe of mob rule credited this new record to effective education, plus swift work of police and patrol.

Mrs. Jessie Daniel Ames, executive secretary of the Association of Southern Women for the prevention of Lynching, said last midnight marked the close of the first 12 months lynchless period since tabulations were started in 1922.

In contrast to this is the peak mark of 231 mob killings recorded in 1922.

Mrs. Ames said swift action made possible by police radio alarm systems, particularly as used by highly mobile state trooper units, was an effective and relatively new technique in combating mob violence.

Raps Government

In the midst of the grave debate in parliament over the Chamberlain government's conduct of the war, Admiral Sir Roger John Brownlow Keyes (above), veteran officer of the British navy, charged the government with "shocking ineptitude." He said the admiralty refused him permission to stem Trondheim, Norway, from the sea in the early stages of the Norwegian campaign. He said the attack he wanted to make on the Germans at Trondheim might have meant victory instead of defeat for the British in Norway.

WOULD EXPORT SURPLUS CORN

Subsidy Program Put Into Effect By Department

Washington, May 9.—(AP)—The Agriculture Department announced today the inauguration of an export subsidy program for corn designed to reduce record surpluses.

The department asked export grain traders to submit offers under which grain would be shipped to Canadian and European markets.

Officials indicated deals were now under consideration involving the sale of between 20 and 30 million bushels.

The corn probably will be taken from stocks the government has acquired under its war loan programs. The government would sell the corn to exporters at prices which would enable them to meet competitive prices in foreign markets.

Officials said there was no indication yet as to how much grain it would sell under the subsidy program.

Chicago, May 9.—(AP)—Extension of the government's grain export subsidy program to include corn, of which the United States has the largest surplus on record, produced a rally in corn prices here today that established new highs for almost three years.

Additional Men Summoned As Chamberlain Doggedly Sticks To Official Post

Jones-Wheeler Measure Attacked by R.M. Hanes

American Bankers Head Addresses State Body

By W. JOYNES MacFARLAN, Pinehurst, May 9.—(AP)—Robert M. Hanes, president of the American Bankers Association, charged today that the Jones-Wheeler farm credit bill, advocated to Congress by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, would destroy federal land banks, destroy the "existing cooperative agricultural credit system," and place the farmer "at the mercy of a single bureaucratic credit agency."

He charged that Wallace's attacks on bankers who had testified against the bill were apparently motivated by "political aspirations" and said "the real issues cannot be obscured by the cheap political trick of calling names or impugning motives."

The real issue is whether a system of agricultural credits operated by the farmers of the country with government supervision and utilizing private capital shall survive or whether it shall be emasculated and perverted into a centralized political system under centralized political control and financed by the United States Treasury."

Hanes is president of the Wachovia Bank and Trust company at Winston-Salem. He was honor guest on "Two Hanes Days" as the North Carolina Bankers Association opened its 4th annual convention here. Hanes is a former president of the state body. The other principal speaker, Ray A. Tig of Boston, Mass., urged bankers to make careful studies and surveys of what is needed to "sell" their business to the public, and actively to meet all competition.

Ben R. Roberts, vice-president of the Durham Bank and Trust Company of Durham, was elected president of the State Association, succeeding W. H. Woolard of Greenville. Phillip Woolcott of Asheville was elected third vice president, and placed in line for the presidency in 1943. R. C. Lewellyn of Mt. Airy, and R. P. Holding of Smithfield, advanced as vice presidents. J. A. Harris, Jr., of Troy, was named treasurer to succeed Gordon C. Hunter of Roxboro.

Explaining the position of the American Bankers Association and commercial and savings banks on the Jones-Wheeler bill, Hanes said: "We believe the provisions of the Jones-Wheeler bill will injure rather than benefit the farmer, and we find ourselves sharing this opinion with the more important farmer organizations."

"We believe, and we have testified, that in our opinion the provisions of the bill will result in concentrating practically all of the farm mortgage borrowing in the hands of a bureau of the department of agriculture, and the elimination of all other lenders, such a bureaucratic monopoly is not in the public interest, nor in the interest of the farmer."

"We believe that this bill would ultimately result in the federal government becoming the largest farm land owner in the nation."

"We hold that the substitution of a government guarantee of land bank bonds for farm mortgages as unsecured collateral for these bonds will destroy the value of farm mortgages. This proposal to increase contingent liabilities of the federal government billions of dollars thru the guarantee should be a cause for alarm. The size of the government debt is becoming a serious threat to recovery and economic stability."

"We believe the elimination of deficiency judgments and the establishment as a statutory right the privilege of scaling down debts will result in repudiation of such debts and will destroy the integrity of credit."

"To say," charged Hanes, "that the American Bankers Association or the commercial and savings banks of the country don't want farm credit to serve farmers better, as did the Secretary of Agriculture, is to make a statement that is not true."

Bankers who testified about the Jones-Wheeler bill gave "intelligent, honest, and sincere" testimony, Hanes said, and "we believe it was constructive."

He said that Secretary Wallace charged April 27 that the opposition of the country "is part of a campaign against lower interest rates for the farmers. The secretary's address was a typical political (Continued on page five)

Retiring

W. H. Local Banker Says Big Public Debt Unnecessary

Mr. Woolard declared that any success the organization has enjoyed under his presidency was due in great part to the committees, adding that they had been active and had done a good job during the year.

He reported that all ten group meetings held during the year were well attended and much interest exhibited.

Following these preliminary remarks, Mr. Woolard turned to the public debt, declaring that it continues to climb and at the end of (Continued on Page Eight)

ARMY BOOSTED TO 4,500,000

British Press Takes Sober View of Chamberlain's Determination to Remain as Prime Minister Despite Majority Vote of Only 18; Official German Press Ironic

King George, VI, signed a proclamation making 2,500,000 more Britons subject to military service today—boosting the total to 4,500,000—as Prime Minister Chamberlain stuck doggedly to his guns under a blasting fire of criticism and hinted that he had no intention of resigning.

"May God give long life to Neville Chamberlain as Britain's Prime Minister," came the ironic comment from official German circles in Berlin.

But the usually docile British press took a sober view.

"It remains to be seen whether Mr. Chamberlain will cling tenaciously to office or, with higher patriotism, make way for a man who is fitted to win the war, not muddle it," said the London Star.

A popular selection for Prime Minister with the British man in the street might well be Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty and long a bitterly outspoken foe of Hitlerism.

With a "confidence vote" majority of only 81, Chamberlain hurriedly left his seat in the House of Commons with the seven members of his war cabinet for a series of mysterious conferences with several opposition leaders, including David Lloyd George, World war prime minister, who yesterday shook his finger across the table at Chamberlain and urged him point blank to resign.

King George issued a proclamation bringing 19-year-olds and men from 27 to 36 into categories for call to the colors.

Germany reported a 7,000-ton allied troop transport had been sunk by Nazi bombing planes near Narvik, the far northern region, which is the Allies last foothold in Norway, and said the air force was effective in helping battle allied troops, which are besieging a force of between 3,000 and 4,000 Germans at Narvik.

By way of Stockholm came reports that German planes had landed parachute troops behind the allied siege lines at Narvik. What success they had, if any, was not known.

Union Organizer Shot On Entering Factory

New York, May 9.—(AP)—The leader of 11 men, tentatively identified as union organizers, was shot dead today after they entered the Brooklyn factory of the Trio Coal Corporation in the renewal of prolonged attempts to organize the plant's 35 employees.

Police said the president of the corporation had repeatedly refused the demand of the organizers.

He was quoted as saying again today that he would not permit organization of the women in his plant.

The dead man was about 35 years old.

SOCIAL and LOCAL

Third Street School P. T. A. The last meeting of the Third Street School P. T. A. for the school year 1939-40 was held in the school auditorium on Wednesday afternoon at 2:15.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Helene Higgs Kirkpatrick and the minutes from the joint meeting last month were read.

Then Mrs. Kirkpatrick read a letter from Mr. Rose regretting that he could not be with us and expressing his appreciation for the work that the P. T. A. had accomplished during this school year. Mr. Rose added that the parents help do something with the 36 acres bought for recreation in East Greenville, and he invited everyone to visit the Girl Scout house on this property. He also stated there would be a ten-acre truck farm on this property. The vegetables from the farm are to be canned and used in the lunchroom next year. He asked that everyone who would to donate jars of every kind that would hold canned vegetables for the need for these jars would be great.

Mr. Rose then told about activities for recreation which will be carried on during the summer months. Boy Scouting and Girl Scouting and vacation schools for all younger children in the city.

Next, Mrs. Guy Smith announced that she had a treat in store for us that she had persuaded Mrs. Kirkpatrick to sing. Mrs. Kirkpatrick sang "The Swallow" in a most beautiful manner.

The fourth and last of the Child Study programs was then held under the leadership of Miss Annie Newell of E. C. T. C. Education Department. Miss Newell talked on Books for Children.

Miss Newell opened her instructive and interesting talk by saying that if the fairy godmothers would bestow just two gifts upon each child at its christening, the best two gifts would be a love of reading and a sense of humor.

Miss Newell said the chief problem facing choosing books for children was getting books for them that were suitable. For so long all books called children's books were edited and published for adult taste and not for children's taste. The pictures in these books were to please adults and to appeal to mothers.

Also children's tastes differ. Some like fact books, and some like fanciful stories, so we must consider the child's taste in selecting.

Then again good books cost high, around $2 and $2.50. It is hard to see why when the material in them ranges around 7c a book, but then the publisher, the author, the illustrator, the advertiser, all must live, and there is a loss when some books do not sell. But a good book should be a permanent possession, to be read over and over and loved.

In choosing or evaluating a book there are three main things we must consider: (1) Content, (2) Format, (3) Illustration. In content: Is the subject matter interesting to the child? We no longer buy a book for a child aged 4 and another for one aged 7, but we ask what does that child like? What is he interested in? Will the book stand re-reading? If it is a fact story, then, is it authentic and accurate? Then if the child is going to read the book, himself, watch the vocabulary to see if he can read it with pleasure.

One of the most important factors to be considered is, does the story appear in its original form or is it some one else's version? Old folk tales told in original form are always the best, and Mother Goose can not be imitated with any success. It's been tried and always fails. Then we find good books condensed to even one-fourth the real book. Why do we have to condense? Children should not be rushed so thru books, nor through life, and they need much time for good reading. Many people have tried to write the Christmas story in their own words.

The only Christmas story that lives is the one using the real words in the Bible. There is none grander.

Another question is should children have stories bound in volumes? Many of the classic folk tales come that way, but imagine Peter Rabbit or Little Black Sambo all in a volume!

Should you buy a series of books for children. The danger here is that plots are not easily thought out and the writer falls into the same pattern all the books through. However, William Lyons Phelps, says a series of books do serve their purpose in that they give a dash of adventure which leads to richer experience, and with careful guidance the child can be lead into better reading.

The second consideration of evaluating books is format. Grown people are attracted by bright book covers, and so are children. Attractive jackets add much. A child will take the bright book first. Art covers our daily lives from kitchen to living room, even dust cloth is decorated—so Art in children's picture books is very essential.

Well-bound books are necessary; and a book must lay open flat for if a child has to read on a curved surface it causes eyestrain. Then again to see better he will bend the book flat and it might break. The book must be small enough for him to handle with comfort. The paper should be of good quality and have no glare or gloss. The paper should be thick enough not to show blurred spots caused by pictures or print on the other side. Large and legible type should be used for young children whose eyes are not trained and are immature. Many specialists contend that on the above condition they would prefer that eyes not be used for reading before a child is 8 or 9 years old.

Then, thirdly, we must consider the illustrations. The McGuffey readers had decorations, not illustrations and Mr. McGuffey said his books were well-decorated. Little children like large brightly colored pictures and simple ones. This is one reason the Little Black Sambo books are so popular with children. There is not too much detail. Many really good stories are illustrated by lazy artists who have not spent enough time to know what the story is really about, and children look for detail, and like realistic pictures.

Miss Newell told how when the Petershams and Misha illustrated a book they went to the scene of the story and made a study of the surroundings, then drew the pictures. They spent a long time in the Holy Land, then made a Christmas Story book using the words from the Bible. This book will live. She also told of her visit to the Book Fair held last year in New York City, and how the school children were invited to come and look through the books, and what a treat it was to see a response to various books on display.

Miss Newell closed her interesting talk by passing around for inspection various types of books, good and frail. These amply illustrated her points and were great helps in making book lists for summer readings. She stressed that every child should have some books that are his very own.

Those present were very glad to have had the opportunity to hear how to select books for children.

Mrs. Raleigh Lee then announced the officers for next year. They are as follows: President, Mrs. Helene Higgs Kirkpatrick; Vice-President, Mrs. C. C. Hilton; Secretary and Treasurer, Mrs. Jasper Jones.

Then everyone gave a rising vote of thanks for the work of the officers and committees who have made the P. T. A. a success during this school year.

A count was made and the Second Grade won the attendance prize for having the most mothers present at the meeting. This is the fourth time the second grade has won during the year.

The new mothers for next year were special guests. Mrs. Kirkpatrick asked them to rise and introduced them. Then she announced there would be a social hour for Mrs. Newell and the new mothers for Grade One next year.

Just before adjourning for the social hour it was announced that the teachers of Third Street School would have an Open House or Visiting Day for all parents and friends of Third Street School; and everyone interested is cordially invited to come. Each teacher including the

Monogram Dance

The Monogram club, local letter-men's group, will give its last dance of the year on Friday evening, May 10. "This is our last dance of the year," states J. B. Kittrell, "and we intend to make it good." J. B., along with Buddy Harrington and Warren Parrish compose the committee in charge of this program. A jitterbug and waltz contest will be put on for added attraction and entertainment.

A number of important decisions were made yesterday at a meeting of the junior class toward plans for this year's junior-senior. It was voted to assess each member of the junior class a small sum in order to have Spencer Hatley's entire band. Committees in charge of refreshments, decorations and the menu gave reports. It was decided that the dance would be strictly boy break and all girls must wear evening dresses. Boys can or cannot wear "Tuxedos" at the affair.

Strength For The Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

ASK, WAIT, AND LISTEN

Very often we receive no answer to our prayers because we do not wait after praying to get an answer. It is surprising how many times we pray for something, God answers with a firm conviction that there is the way, walk ye in it. Frequently as we cry out in the darkness, the light begins to dawn round about; but as often as not, we get up from our knees and leave the scene of our struggles without knowing that God has already started to help us.

The result of such an attitude is that when on some later day, God answers our prayer fully, we do not recognize that this was the answer to a definite petition, and so fail to give God the praise He should have.

Wait after your prayers and listen. Abraham Lincoln loved above all texts in the Bible that one which enjoins us to wait upon the Lord. It is always to begin a season of prayer with a few moments of relaxation and quiet, and it is most important that we should end our praying not by jumping up from our knees and going after the circumstances of life as if we expected to vanquish them by our own efforts, but by waiting quietly a few moments until God shows us definitely what is the next step to take.

These are solemn days, and he is wise who undergirds his heart and mind in this hour with sincere and trusting petition.

PROPAGANDA

The-propaganda machines of the foreign countries are busy even in this country grinding out stories in the hope they will be swallowed up by a gullible American public. Today we are in receipt of a 260 page book published by the German Library of Information, New York, the title of which is "Polish Acts of Atrocity Against The German Minority in Poland."

SATURDAY LAST DAY

While registrations for the coming primaries are reported good in most of the precincts there are still a large number of Pitt County citizens who will not have the opportunity to vote in the primaries unless they take the trouble to get their names on the new registration books between now and sunset Saturday of this week. Every effort is being made by the registrars, election officials and candidates to get these people to register and if you are among those who have not registered we urge you to do so. The registration books will be open all day Saturday at each of the precinct voting places but in the meantime the registrars will be glad to register you if you will contact them. As we have already warned many times in this column since the registration books opened, it will be your own fault if you fail to get your name on the book and cannot vote in the primaries.

SAYS PUBLIC SPENDING NOT JUSTIFIED

We agree heartily with the sentiments expressed by Mr. W. H. Woolard, of this city, president of the North Carolina Bankers Association, in his address to the bankers' convention this morning when he declared that much of the increased public debt was unnecessary and that there should be a halt in the endorsement of public projects that did not justify the expenditures.

In this connection Mr. Woolard said:

"Our National Debt, that is the debt of the United States, continues to climb, and at the end of the past year was approximately 43 billion dollars. In my opinion much of this increased debt was unnecessary and that we private citizens are largely responsible for a good portion of it. We have not hesitated to ask for grants for local pride projects, prompted by the feeling that 'it is going' I am satisfied that many government assisted projects have been put through the merit of which did not justify the expenditure. It is our duty to our country as individuals to investigate closely all applications for public funds and endorse only those which are necessary and those of a self liquidating nature."

"Our State debt, that is the debt of the State of North Carolina, presents a more satisfactory picture and I express appreciation of the service of those who have been responsible for the reduction of the state indebtedness from 120 million dollars to 114 million within the past ten years."

Washington, May 9.—The President's health is reported to be better today than it has been in some time, according to a statement issued by the White House.

Came August 6, 1939, when he will have this technical record as well as for his professional life. He will pass his entire life's work as a sure as popcorn.

Steve arrived from France 20 years ago and after a brief stay in the back of a restaurant, he moved himself in the prominent position.

He doesn't recall the details of how he got up courage to tell his cart up to the executive mansion.

'Presidents Need Peanuts'

"I come here with friends," he said, "and the people buy. Some days Presidents' wife buys. Everybody sees my peanuts-pop-corn is here. They let my star."

Five years ago, the capital police had Steve away from his post. They decided his unpainted cart at the busy intersection was a traffic hazard.

He complained bitterly. President Coolidge used to be a personal customer. He said Presidents needed peanuts.

"The police showed him traffic choked Pennsylvania avenue and the tourist-filled East Executive Avenue."

"You're a hazard," a lieutenant told him.

"I almost fight," says Steve.

But recently—during his night school studies for citizenship—Steve learned the meaning of "hazard" in his grammar.

"It ain't so bad."

Aid From Mrs. FDR
But Steve had to take his problem to Mrs. Roosevelt. She appealed to the police. They moved the cart off the street onto the sidewalk and Steve stayed. Now he's got squatter's rights at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue.

"Now I say to myself what I been thinking," Steve tells me. "I love this country."

For the last seven years, Steve has set aside two days of the year to turn over his day's earnings to worthwhile causes.

On one, he gives his earnings to the Red Cross.

On the other, to the Community Chest.

America's peace in the face of Europe's war has made a deep impression on the squat little fellow from Greece.

"United States is quiet," he said. "I love him. I join him."

SHORT SHOTS

Reflector Bureau.

By HENRY AVERILL

Raleigh, May 9.—In contrast to the Oklahoma candidate for congress who won his first race largely because he happened to be named Will Rogers, Lieutenant Governor Wilkins P. Horton is said to be suffering in New Hanover and other railroad counties because his last name happens to be the same as that of a motor freight line.

They say the Wilmington employees of the Atlantic Coast Line have been refusing to become the least interested in Horton just for that reason.

Your Raleigh reporter does not profess to know the truth of the matter, but there are reports that the motor line Hortons are supporting another and not their namesake in the Governor's race.

Scandal raises its, in this case, humorous rather than ugly head in Maxwell headquarters.

Mrs. W. B. Murphy dictated letters to a host of close personal and feminine friends. She instructed that they be closed "With all my love," but was completely flabbergasted to learn that the same valedictory clause was used in the one letter in the batch which was to go to a friend of the masculine persuasion.

The scattered straw polls being taken by various North Carolina papers are reflecting the generally admitted spurt being staged by Lee Gravelly in the Governor's race. The Rocky Mountaineer has gone into first place in Wilson and Moore counties and is second to A. J. Maxwell in the Fredell voting of the Statesville Record.

The campaign for Governor recently took Commissioner of Revenue Allen J. Maxwell back to the place of his birth for the first time since his father took him away from the section more than 65 years ago. The visit to his natal health occurred when Maxwell went down for the dedication of Salem Presbyterian Chapel near Chincapin in Duplin county—the church structure standing not more than a hundred yards from the house in which the revenue commissioner was born.

Maxwell says his interest in better transportation facilities for North Carolina first arose when he heard his father telling of how they used to clear out the creek running by Chincapin so that they could float logs down it.

Installation of a big swimming pool at the North Carolina Institute for the Blind has been a big aid to improved health of children in the school, says G. E. Lineberry, superintendent.

"It is impossible to say how much good the pool has done the children," he said. "They are happier and in better health. Our annual average drug bill has dropped from 60 to 75 per cent."

Bob Thompson, state News Bureau head, has issued a memorandum on "North Carolina's Coastal Fishing." He lists among the good ocean and inlet fishing "holes" Oregon Inlet, Hatteras, Ocracoke, Cape Lookout, Bogue Inlet, New River and the Cape Fear Inlet.

Bob describes some other wonders of the coastal section, but adds "to the real fisherman, who is charged no license, even the Wright brothers, the pirate Blackbeard and Virginia Dare must take a back seat as he pulls in the big ones along the coast of North Carolina."

Chapter 31

Poor, Worried Mac

EVERYTHING Eric had said about Mac was true: about his seeing that she had her favorite chair and passing her the cream at breakfast when Adelaide gazed dreamily out of the window . . . suddenly she knew that Mac was, as Eric had said, never unaware of her. His reserve might be a reflection of her own.

"I'm not—for one!"
Would those words never cease ringing in her ears? They had been spoken, not angrily but sadly; a fact which made it the more difficult for Brenda to dismiss them.

"But he was anxious about Adelaide then," she tried to comfort herself. "He blamed me for causing her illness and of course I deserved to be blamed. Everybody says things they don't mean afterward. Perhaps . . ." A look of deep thought darkened her eyes. That night she discarded her icy reserve toward Mac. She chatted with him gaily, and gradually won him from his aloofness. Adelaide's obvious delight at the change was proof she had not been as unobservant as her boarders thought her.

Mac's behavior for the next week or two puzzled Brenda greatly. In the very midst of some warmly friendly talk with her, he would suddenly pause, his jaw hardening and his eyes growing cold. Twice he stalked out of the room without explanation or apology.

"Don't mind him," advised the watchful Eric. "I think he's bothered about his job."

"His job? Why should he be bothered about it?"

"Fraid of losing it, maybe," said the well-informed Mr. Mason.

"It's like this, Brenda. His boss—the president of the company, you know—has a nephew who's been studying advertising. Graduated last June and has been trying his hand in a small concern somewhere in Ohio. I've heard it rumored that the old man thinks he's about ripe for Mac's position by this time."

"But that's ridiculous!" Brenda burst out. "A boy with only a few months' experience to do Mac's work. Why, Mac's a genius! I could tell his dunder-headed boss he'll lose a lot of money if he lets Mac go." Her cheeks were scarlet and she pushed back her curls with a reckless hand. Eric suppressed a grin.

"Right, my girl! But you can see what makes Mac a bit upset just now."

Brenda did not write at all the next morning. She sat before the window gazing stonily into The Street as though she expected Mac's misgued employer to appear any moment. In truth she saw nothing—no one; not Miss Ormond, coming across for her early call on Adelaide; not the Wicks, in handsome new coats, setting forth upon the half-lane, half-alley which gave egress to The Street.

Sweetness Personified

The girl was examining and dis-carding in quick succession a number of ways she hoped might help Mac. She thought of getting everybody on The Street to write warmly commendatory letters to Mac's employer about the excellence of his advertising work.

"But if they all come from one street, it will look like a conspiracy," she decided.

She considered talking to Mac himself, advising him to lay down the law to the short-sighted person who thought of dispensing with his valuable services. It was a distinct recollection of how Mac's jaw looked when he was displeased which put a stop to that train of thought.

In the end she had to give up the problem, contented herself by resolving to be as sweet to poor, worried Mac as it lay in her power to be.

Brenda, being sweet to a man, was—or so thought the amused Eric—infinitely more of a menace than the loss of a job.

"Gosh, I'm glad she's never undertaken to mother me! When she comes those eyes on a guy, trots out those dimples of hers, puts a distinct note of tenderness in her voice, it's enough to make any fellow begin to figure whether he can pay for the diamond outright, or on the installment plan. Beats me how old Mac can resist her!"

It bewildered Brenda a little, too. When she took the trouble to be what she called "sweet" to any man, she was accustomed to get results; usually more rapid and decisive results than she had planned or desired. Since Mac appeared either indifferent to her kindness, or stolidly unaffected by it, she redoubled her efforts.

One evening when he was shrugging himself into his coat in the hall, preparing to return to the office for some extra work, she came close to him, and put one small hand on his arm.

"Mac, dear, wouldn't you feel better if you talked about it?" she asked.

He looked down into the soft dark eyes, the gentle curves of her mouth.

"No," he said gruffly. "It's the last thing on earth I want to discuss with—anybody."

"But perhaps it isn't as bad as you think, Mac! Perhaps if you said frankly and honestly that you—"

To her astonishment he shook her hand from his arm; not rudely but as if it had become intolerably heavy for him to support. His voice was harsh with misery when he spoke.

"Not while I'm in my right mind! Get that through your head this minute, Brenda!"

She was not offended, she was more than ever troubled for him. She clasped the rejected hand in its mate and her head drooped a little.

"Oh, Mac, dear, I'd give anything if this—this hadn't happened! And perhaps it won't happen! Perhaps you—"

He strode to the door. With his hand on the knob he said, still in that strange harsh voice: "You're dead right it won't happen, Brenda! I've made up my mind it shall not!"

I'll Be Seeing You

MAC had left The Shortest Street!

Two days after his talk with Brenda he had shut himself up with Adelaide for fifteen minutes' talk. When they emerged from the library, Adelaide's eyes were a trifle red, Mac looked more unhappy than ever. He was busy in his room all evening, and at breakfast the next day he announced quietly that he was moving. Downtown—nearer the office.

Only Isobel exclaimed over the news. Eric shot the other man a quick look. Adelaide made no comment. Brenda, distrustful her own voice, looked blindly down at her plate.

"Permanently, Mac?" This was Isobel. "Surely not permanently! Just while the spring work is so heavy and you have to work so often evenings?"

"Permanently, I'm afraid," he said, throwing Adelaide a glance that was oddly imploring.

"I've told Mac I think he's wise in moving," came Mrs. Rostetter's gentle voice. "Of course we'll all miss him terribly, but we mustn't be selfish. It will save him—in lots of ways—to be closer to the office."

"And I'll be seeing you frequently," Mac added. He rose and shook hands briskly all around. "I'll send for my stuff today, Adelaide. Got to hurry now!" And incredibly he was gone.

Brenda sat as if stunned. Things must be in a bad way indeed if Mac could so desert Adelaide. She determined to question Eric that evening.

Eric, however, proved elusive. He telephoned late in the afternoon that he was dining out. He returned too late for anything resembling a consultation. The next evening he was home, but Isobel, Brenda told herself with some irritation, stuck to him like a burr.

Mac had in fact been away five days before Brenda cornered Eric Mason.

"How is it going?" she asked anxiously.

"How is what going?" Eric gazed at her blandly. "Oh, you mean Isobel's affair? Nicely. I think don't you? She's been out with him twice this week and—"

"You know perfectly well I don't mean Isobel. Why will you be so horrid, Eric? I am talking about Mac. Has he lost his job?"

Seboyeta, N. M.—(AP)—Portraying the part of the famous conquistador, Coronado, in a festival celebrating the 400th anniversary of the Spaniard's trek into New Mexico, D. B. Martinez was astride a milk white charger leading a pageant.

With sword drawn, Martinez, alias Coronado, was passing the filling station he owned. A truck was there, waiting to be gassed.

Coronado hesitated momentarily; then dropped from his horse, gassed the truck, leaped to the saddle again and raced with robes flying to the head of the column.

Ouster Move Is Rumored Against Ralph McDonald

WILSON'S Weekly MEMO by GEORGE RECTOR

Most any woman can look for her family to be considerate of her on Mother's Day. And why not. In view of the 1095 meals she has prepared for them since last Mother's Day? The only trouble with Mother's Day is, it is apt to be up to Mother to be considerate of herself all the other days of the year. One of the easiest ways she can do this is to take full advantage of such time- and energy-savers as Wilson's complete line of cooked meats, known as Lasting Flavor Products. This includes the famous Tender Made Ham and twenty-six other superior, ready-to-eat meats and meat products.

For Mother's Day

My Mother's Day offering to the ladies is an old, medieval recipe, translated into modern measurements and ingredients. It is called Simnel Cake, and was the traditional offering of children to their mothers on Mothering Sunday during the middle ages. You will find it is amazingly good and "different."

SIMNEL CAKE

Cream together 1 cup (1 1/2 lb.) Wilson's Clear Brook Butter and 1 cup brown sugar. Add 3 Wilson's Clear Brook Eggs, beaten with 2 tablespoons of sherry wine. Add 1 cup raisins, 1 cup currants and 2 tablespoons chopped citron. Sift cake flour, Measure 2 3/4 cups and resift with 1 1/2 teaspoons baking powder, 1/2 teaspoon each of powdered allspice, mace and cinnamon, 1/4 teaspoon powdered cloves, and a pinch of salt. Add to first mixture. Pour into a greased and lined 8x4 pan and bake in a slow oven (250° F.) for 2 hours or until done.

If convenient, a layer of almond paste should be placed on top of half the batter and the remaining batter poured over it.

"Lasting Flavor" Is High in Favor

Now that spring is here, you will have more time to yourself, and have a cooler kitchen to work in, if you get the happy habit of serving meat without the bother of cooking it. Raleigh, May 1.—Rumblings have been heard on many sides lately that an ouster move against Dr. Ralph W. McDonald is being worked up by conservatives and Roosevelt haters all over the state.

There are clear indications that efforts to toss McDonald out of his job as associate Extension director at the University of North Carolina will be made at the next meeting of the U. N. C. board of trustees.

Such a movement may, of course, gain sufficient strength to achieve its ends (which would include an indirect slap, at least, at President Frank Graham); but most capital observers who are in touch with the subject believe that it would be much more likely to result in red faces for those hatching the ouster plot.

Those who do not like McDonald will charge that he has violated all the proprieties, if not actually the law, by campaigning vigorously for a North Carolina delegation favorable to President Roosevelt. They insist that he has used the University's time and the salary paid him for university work in activities which have no proper place under the circumstances.

In rebuttal, McDonald's friends contend that he has kept his politics entirely separate from his university work and travel. McDonald, they point out, is fully aware that he has many bitter political enemies who would like nothing quite so well as to get his professional scalp and to get him out of North Carolina entirely. If they could.

For this very reason, they believe, he has scrupulously refrained from any lying of politics in his series of public forum discussions, and has been very careful indeed that there should be no evidence that his professional and political activities have overlapped in the slightest degree.

That he has been extremely active in politics McDonald would be the last person in the world to deny. In fact he makes absolutely no bones whatsoever of his loyalty to President Roosevelt, or of the fact that he has bent every ethical effort toward pressing the North Carolina for Roosevelt movement.

So far nobody has accused McDonald of ever pledging himself to refrain from political activities—activities which he and his friends view as completely within his rights so long as he does not permit them to trespass on the duties of his position with the University.

It is equally true that there has so far been no intimation that McDonald is not doing a good job. It is claimed on his behalf that his work has actually been phenomenal. It is pointed out that in the space of a year he has started from absolute scratch and built up the University's radio division into one which is the envy of every other college in the country. U. N. C. programs are carried to millions every week over ten North Carolina stations and a national hookup.

There is ample evidence that his success in this field has attracted national attention and admiration in education and radio circles all over the state.

Officials of the University, including President Graham, have lauded the success of the public forum program sponsored and conducted by McDonald. Results have far exceeded expectations, they say; and the forum program will be carried into next year with many additional communities joining in the movement which has already reached into about one-fourth the state's counties.

With these facts in mind—plus the experience that President Graham has always managed to stay well ahead of the enemies who have sought so hard to get him out at Chapel Hill—most Raleigh observers feel that McDonald would win hands down if his or Roosevelt's

'39 Fairs Found Folks Like Fun So The'ye Gonna Get It In '40

These dancers are meant to show the carnival spirit of San Francisco's 1940 fair, while, right, an imported Sicilian burro arrives for New York's glorified "county fair."

San Francisco.—The San Francisco fair on Treasure Island opens its gates May 25. It'll be more of a carnival and less of a museum this year.

The California enterprise learned some hard lessons in 1939. Two results are a shorter run (133 days), and an emphasis upon sheer amusement in 1940.

The swing toward amusements was made about midway in last year's run when Dr. Charles H. Strub, manager of Santa Anita race track, was called in.

This year the Gayway is being elaborately improved. Two of the industrial exhibit palaces are being taken over by shows—one being the version of Billy Rose's Aquacade which appeared in New York last season, and the other, a moving picture studio in public operation.

The Polys Berge, a big money maker last year, will reopen. There will be two big outdoor spectacles—"Cavalade of the Nation" and "Golden Days of '40." Clyde Beatty's animal show and Salie's puppets are two added features. Big-name bands, which proved their box-office appeal last season, and symphony concerts are on the program.

Sex appeal—notably Sally Rand's "nude ranch"—played such a big role on the Gayway last season that fair officials are considering a special midway for this type of show alone. There is going to be some loss of the more dignified exhibits, anyway, with certain foreign nations and big corporations dropping out.

Some exhibitors, however, have increased their space. Exposition officials promise there will be no vacant buildings. Like San Francisco's, Panama-Pacific exposition of 1915, the 1940 event has run into a war. Officials say this means about 300,000 Americans won't go to Europe this summer. It also means, they say, that people will seek relief from a war's tension in sheer amusement.

Symbolical of the attitude is the dropping of the old official name, "The Golden Gate International Exposition."

In 1940, it will be just "the San Francisco fair."

New York.—The accent will be on fun, gals and swing at the second edition of the New York World's fair which opens May 11.

Of course, the exhibits on manufacturing, the arts and the sciences still will be around. But last year's emphasis on culture didn't pay off. Only 26,000,000 of the expected 50,000,000 visitors arrived.

Now there's an about-face. This year's show is designed to be the county fair of county fairs.

enemies force the issue with the board of trustees.

On the other hand there is no discounting the bitterness with which McDonald is being attacked in many powerful circles.

This bitterness has been aroused more by his support of J. M. Broughton in the gubernatorial race than by his activities for FDR in the current movement to give the President the solid backing of North Carolina's delegation to the Democratic national convention.

There is all sorts of talk about the "kiss of death" McDonald is supposed to have bestowed upon the Raleigh attorney by his endorsement; but it seems reasonable to suppose that there would be no real anger aroused against the one-time candidate for governor if his support was, in fact believed to be a handicap rather than an asset.

The McDonald friends believe that any attack on him because of his activities for President Roosevelt will boomerang against those launching such an offensive. They would rather meet this type of assault than one based on the McDonald activities in connection with the gubernatorial campaign.

If and when the effort to get rid of McDonald is made, it will be interesting to learn, if possible, the position which Governor Clyde R. Hoey will take.

McDonald is thought to have been appointed to his present University post with the complete sanction of the governor, if not, in fact, upon the direct Hoey recommendation. There is some speculation, however, about the effect on the Hoey attitude of McDonald's pro-Roosevelt activities. This, particularly because the North Carolina for Roosevelt movement resulted in placing the governor in a losing political situation for the first time in his administration. McDonald will undoubtedly have the staunch support of President Graham, but there is no guarantee that Governor Hoey would be enthusiastic in his behalf.

JONES-WHEELER MEASURE
ATTACKED BY R. M. HANES

speech which avoided any attempt to meet a single argument advanced against this deliberate proposal to destroy the federal land bank system and substitute for a centralized, bureaucratic farm credit system under which the farmer would have to go hat in hand, to a department of the federal government for his credit needs.

"It is a deplorable thing that the opinion of American citizens honestly and sincerely presented to the Congress should be made the object of misrepresentation in the course of a political attack by the chief officer of an administrative department. It is difficult to escape the conviction that such an attack springs from the political aspirations of the one who made it."

The effective opposition to the Jones-Wheeler bill is only one of the many constructive accomplishments of the American Bankers Association and its committee, Hanes said. He revealed that the Association is expanding its services to banks by securing the pledge from 200 banks that its income will be $750,000 a year. As a result it has secured an economist as adviser; an expert on methods to meet competition, government and otherwise, in agriculture areas; an expert on personal loans; an expert on real estate loans; and a specialist in public relations.

There is an urgent need for bankers to be alert and informed. Hanes said, adding:

"There are constantly at work in this country forces that would tear down the very fundamental principles upon which America was built. There are trends in government that constantly increase the power and control of government bureaus over the lives and destinies of American people."

The annual banquet of the State Association will be held tonight. Tomorrow Dr. Paul F. Cadman, economist of the American Bankers Association, and A. L. M. Wiggins of Hartsville, S. C., chairman of the A. B. A. federal legislative council, will speak.

Fig. vice president of the National Shawmut Bank of Boston, said the banks should be absolutely sincere in efforts to serve communities in extending credit, and should search out every possible avenue by which credit might be dispensed instead of taking only the "cream of the crop." The public should be convinced that a belief of long standing, "that a loaning officer tries to find some reason for not making a loan," is incorrect and that banks are anxious to make good loans.

Greenville To Try Hand Against Billies Here Tonight

DROP ANOTHER ON WEDNESDAY

Defeated By New Bern Bears By A Score of 7-4

The Greenvilles dropped a 7-4 contest to the New Bern Bears in that city yesterday afternoon, although the locals made 13 hits against nine for the winners.

The locals just couldn't get hits when hits meant runs and 11 men were left stranded on the bags.

Greenville drew first blood, scoring two in the third inning, and added one each in the fifth and the ninth, but the Bears made two in the fourth and three in the seventh adding one each in the seventh and eighth.

Swamp Norwood got the only extra-bagger of the game. He and four other local players, Dides, Jenkins, Kracke and Samocki, got two hits each.

Greenville plays Snow Hill here tonight.

Cows and Cowstips

Washington—There's discrimination somewhere—Uncle Sam will patent plants but he won't patent animals.
An aspiring Burank who cross-breeds a new sweetpot or a species of sugar cane that gives better molasses can cash in on the fruits of his labor. But the livestock breeder who crossbreeds animals and eventually stabilizes a new breed—such as milking Shorthorn cattle, the Boston bull terrier—is out of luck.
The reason? Nobody ever tried to patent an animal. Horticulturists got congress to pass the plant patent law. Livestock breeders just don't seem to care. So as matters stand, a new forage grass can get in the patent office register—but the cow that eats it can't.

19-Year-Old White Sox Star Overcomes Big League Jitters

BOB KENNEDY: His Arm Is One Of The Greatest

This is the first of several stories which will appear from time to time on rookies who are making good in the major leagues.

AP Feature Service

Chicago—A rousing cheer greeted the graying Lefty Grove as he stroled to the mound—and Bob Kennedy, 19-year-old rookie third baseman for the Chicago White Sox, thrilled to this first glimpse of his hero.

The kid's knees shook and he nervously wiped his bat as Grove, his baseball idol for years, wound up and shot the ball across the plate. Strike!

"I've gotta be cool, gotta wait for one I like," Bob told himself as he dug with his spikes for a firmer footing and tried to stay his wobbling knees.

The count went to three and two. Then Bob saw one coming down the middle, one he liked. He swung, and was off as bat hit ball. The ball rose and rose, farther and farther, until it sailed over the fence, 400 feet away in left centerfield.

That was Bob's biggest thrill in his young baseball career.
"I surprised myself," he says with a grin. "Lefty had always been a sort of special hero to me and I was pretty nervous. But I managed to cool off and I leaped into that one I liked."

A Regular Now

Bob, who went to training camp "just for the ride" one of several rookies taken along so that Jimmy Dykes could get a look at his better farm hands before they went back to the bushes—is still riding, but he's playing his way in line shape.

He stepped into the third base job when Eric M. Nair came up with a sore arm.

Big league pitchers hit him at first—off the field.
"I couldn't sit still," he recalls. "I had to keep moving, couldn't read, felt on edge. But it wasn't nearly so bad in a game. And now I'm all right off the field too."

He looks all right. Perfectly poised, an easy talker. Bob weighs 195, stands 6 feet 2 inches. Well groomed, he doesn't appear to be one who'll go haywire in the first flush of success.

Ramsey Potts was medalist for the day, scoring a 71.

Greenville golfers participating and their scores follow: Potts 71; Massey 76; Allen 77; Simon Moye 77; Campbell 78; Luther Herring 78; Cosby 78; Clark 78; Taylor 80; Jesse Moye 80; Smoot 81; Edwards 81; Ben Herring 82; Luth 83; Brown 86; Keck 86; Waldray 88; Dunn 89; Little 91; Conley 95.

Greenville men scored points as follows:

Potts, Taylor, J. Moye and Clark, three each; Little, Waldray, Dunn and L. Herring, two each; Massey, Campbell, Edwards, B. Herring, Brown and Keck, one each.

Taxpayer's Revenge

"That's too much," said the grocer.
"I'll give you that for it," Knox said, promptly.

"Sold," said the grocer, just as promptly.

Played Legion Ball
Bob looks more like a husky farm boy than a product of Chicago's South Side. That's where he got his baseball start, playing neighborhood and American Legion baseball.

At 15, he got a workout at Comiskey Park and Billie Webb, head of the White Sox farm system, all but shipped him out right then, until Bob admitted he was only 15.

That gave the youngster a chance at high school athletic competition. As a sophomore, he was a regular halfback on the De La Salle high school football team, played on the basketball team that won the national Catholic tournament, won the city championship in the mile and placed second in the same event in a national Catholic tournament at Notre Dame.

The next summer he went to Dallas and played some at Vicksburg. He returned to Dallas the following year but was moved over to Longview, in the East Texas loop. Last year he was with Shreveport. A broken hand halted him in mid-season but the Sox decided to have a look at him.

Now he's a rip-roaring third baseman with an arm that's called the greatest in the American League and a bat that already commands respect.
"I'm a lucky kid," he says.

It was the locals' fourth loss of the season against six wins.

Tarboro took a clean sweep of its double-header, also defeating Kinston, 31-16, and taking over the second place with a 49-15 win over Goldsboro. Rocky Mount defeated Farmville.

Twenty-five Greenville golfers went to Tarboro for the match, but the Edgecombe town could match only 20. The locals feel that if the other five had been matched Greenville would have taken the match in easy fashion.

President J. D. Simpson of the Greenville softball league today issued a plea to parents of children attending the games to urge them to remain orderly.

Mr. Simpson pointed out that the children were admitted to the games free, but that unless they showed more respect and behaved better in general, some steps would have to be taken.

The loop president also said that beginning next week all games would start promptly at 7:45 and that unless a team had enough men on the field, or unless they use substitutes, the game would be forfeited.

In all four games that the Black Jack team has played this season, it has won all four times.

On Sunday afternoon May 12 at 2 o'clock, the Black Jack boys will play the Winterville team on the Black Jack ball diamond.

Roosevelt Movement To Come Up At Conventions

Reflector Bureau
By HENRY AVERILL
Raleigh, May 9.—Final arrangements have been completed for introduction in every Democratic county convention of the "Roosevelt for Renomination" resolutions, former State Senator John Folger said today.

The chairman of the North Carolina for Roosevelt movement had just lined up the one-hundredth county when he made this announcement. He was quite obviously pleased with the fast work of his statewide organization, which had succeeded in lining up a sponsor for the resolution in every county, all in the space of slightly more than a week.

He preferred to keep silent on identity of the resolution introducers, on the theory that if they are not known publicly until time for introduction arrives they cannot be subjected to pressure from hostile groups in an effort to get them weakened in their decision to back FDR for a third term.

Senator Folger expressed complete satisfaction with the situation but, being a veteran of many hard-fought political campaigns he realized that nothing is ever completely in the bag until it has become an accomplished fact.

With that in mind he has called Roosevelt supporters all over the state not to relax their efforts but to keep plugging away right up to the last minute.

He called on Democrats to "nominate the man surest to win" and declared the best way to defend the national record of the Democratic party is to select the candidate who made that record.

"The record of the Democratic party in national affairs is under violent attack in this campaign," he said. "The logical man to resist that attack is the man who made the record."

"The record speaks for itself as

Get Out That Tackle, It's Fishin' Time

The fishing season opens on Friday, May 10th, in Eastern North Carolina and large numbers of followers of the sport are getting their tackle ready to take to the streams this week-end.

The sport draws no line among its followers and it can cost a few pennies or large sums for equipment.

Many states, particularly in the East and Middle Atlantic sections, opened their lakes and streams to trout fishermen last month. In other parts of the land anglers are getting their rods and reels out of closets and readying them for the beginning of open seasons in their localities.

The fishermen are just as anxious and optimistic as ever, for the sale of fishing licenses probably will pass the 10,000,000 mark again this season.

Pay Plenty For Thrills
It's hard to believe that American fishermen spend nearly $1,000,000 a day during the season. But that's the price they pay for their sport when you figure the costs of licenses, equipment, transportation, food, hotels, lodges, etc.

These anglers range from kiddies barely big enough to hold a light pole to the western angler who admits to more than 90 years. The cost of fishing depends on the thickness of your pocketbook. Some folks use equipment costing little more than a few cents, while others go in for elaborate and expensive tackle. Often the chap with the home-made material has better luck than the fellow with the store-bought paraphernalia.

Fishermen will argue all day about every phase of the sport but many admit that luck plays a major part in angling success.

a consistent endeavor to promote the common good and improve the condition of the average man.

"There can be no danger of usurpation from the man whose administration has at all times sought security for the oppressed and unprivileged and protection for all the people against abuses of privilege and power."

"The New Deal of economic justice to all men and particularly to those to whom it has been denied."

'Nearly $1,000,000 A Day Spent For Fishing Fun'

Fishing really is simple. It's just a matter of finding the fish, giving them what they want in the manner they want it and when they want it.

Pretty Independent
If the fish isn't interested, you can try to tease him all morning with the fanciest of lures and he won't even make a faint strike. One point on which most anglers are agreed is that the fisherman should stay out of sight of the trout he wants to take.

The argument over the gameness of hatchery fish still rages. Some regard hatchery-reared fish as sissies. Others say that hatchery methods in recent years have produced a fish that is just as full of fight as those which grew up in the streams. Anyway, the work of state and federal conservation agencies in restocking streams and lakes and in improving living conditions for the fish has greatly increased the population of the fishing spots and resulted in better luck for the anglers.

So, whenever you can't locate your pal at his store or office during the next few weeks it's a pretty good bet that you can find him at his favorite fishing spot.

Big Program Is Arranged For Safety Conference

Reflector Bureau.
By HENRY AVERILL
Raleigh, May 9.—Prominent speakers from many sections, a maximum of discussion of special problems by special groups and a coordinated plan for general sessions will mark the big program arranged by the North Carolina Industrial Commission for the Eleventh Annual Safety Conference of the Commission to be held in Winston-Salem on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week.

Among the prominent speakers will be J. Dewey Dorsett, who was a member and chairman of the state industrial group for several years before his resignation about a year ago. He is now connected with a prominent New York firm. Listed as "Some Highlights of the Program" are:

"Selling Safety" by R. H. Warner, Philadelphia; "Management Must Lead in Safety Matters" also by W. E. Mitchell, Atlanta, Georgia; "An Organized Safety Program for the Dairy Industry" by Frank F. Rennie, Jr., of Richmond; "Practical Application of Safety in the Construction Field" by T. W. Osgood, Everett, Pa.; "Testing Rubber Equipment" by Gordon Thompson of New York; "Finding the Basic Causes of Accidents" by R. L. Forney of Chicago; "The Red Cross Accident Prevention Program in American Homes" by Richard W. Thrush of Washington; "The Progress of Industrial Nursing" by Miss Joanna M. Johnson of Milwaukee; "Forward With Safety" by Mr. Dorsett; and "Safety Lessons Gained From the Study of Motor Carrier Accidents" by G. R. Wellington of Washington.

Seven sectional North Carolina Safety Councils are cooperating in the statewide conference, while 15 different "sections" will have group sessions either Wednesday or Thursday, and in some cases on both days.

Sections having sessions on Wednesday are Home Safety, Furniture and Wood Products, Maintaining Interest, Railroad, Textile, Truck and Bus, Electrical and Public Utilities, and Highway Employees.

Meeting Thursday will be Truck and Bus, Contracting and Quarrying, Medical Problems, Dairying, Municipal Employees, Nursing and Tobacco.

The first general session will be held Tuesday night with Industrial Commissioner Buren Jurney presiding.

Wednesday morning there will be another general session with Professor Edwin H. Paget of State College speaking on "Preparing Your Safety Talk."

Commissioner Pat Kinney will preside at Wednesday afternoon's general session, when Mr. Warmee will be the speaker.

The final general session will be held Thursday morning with Commissioner of Labor Forrest H. Shuford as chairman.

In connection with the Conference there will be a noon luncheon Wednesday of the Textile Section of the National Safety Council at which the coming year's activities will be planned.

Thursday at noon there will be a luncheon session for the purpose of organizing a North Carolina Society of Safety Engineers. This group, after functioning for one year, expects to become a member of the American Society of Safety Engineers.

Thursday afternoon there will be the first Truck Rodeo ever held in North Carolina. Such an event has been staged in only one other Southern state.

Maryl'd Colonists Forced To Practice Crop Control

AP Feature Service
St. Mary's City, Md.—There's apparently nothing new under the farmer's sun. Come corn-planting time, an ever-normal granary program in Maryland will be 300 years old.

It was in the spring of 1640 — two and a half centuries before Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace was born — that the Maryland provincial government first got into the managed economy business.

Southern Maryland farmers descended from the colonial voemen would scratch their heads in bewilderment if they could see great-grand - great - grandpapa's records. They get benefits for soil conservation and crop control, but grandpappy got jailed if he didn't plant corn and more corn.

Research into records of the provincial council which met here in 1640 disclosed a statute which required planting two acres of corn for every laborer employed in tobacco culture.

Footnotes explained the 1640 "farm relief program" was necessary because farmers had "gone crazy" seeking to satisfy the growing tobacco fad in Europe. The Jamestown, Va., colony was threatened with starvation because so little acreage was devoted to food crops, and the Maryland provincial council ordered the maize-planting to prevent a repetition in St. Mary's county.

Asheville Woman Plunges To Death

New York, May 9.—(AP)—Mrs. Sadie Spear, 65, of Asheville, N. C., plunged to her death today about a half an hour after she had engaged a room on the thirteenth floor of the Allerton house for women.

Mrs. Spear, a widow, arrived in New York today and intended to consult physicians regarding a physical examination.

Her body landed in Lexington avenue, a busy street at that time of day, and narrowly missed pedestrians passing it.

Mrs. Spear's sister, Mrs. J. P. Hand of Hamilton, Bernards, was in an adjoining room and told detectives that Mrs. Spear had been in poor health.

HINTS TO HOUSEWIVES

When laundering a lace or an embroidered collar, baste it carefully onto a piece of muslin or other soft material. Wash and rinse as usual and roll up in a Turkish towel. When almost dry, press thoroughly on the wrong side. Remove the collar from the cloth, lay it face down into a dry towel and press until dry.

When making up spiced fruit cookies to accompany hot or cold beverages, use pineapple juice in place of the liquid called for in the recipe. The tart flavor is very good with spicy blends.

Sardines, mashed with a fork and with a little salad dressing and lemon juice mixed in, makes a grand filling for hot toasted sandwiches.

A dainty pudding sauce that is easy to prepare: Beat jelly and cream together, using one-fourth as much jelly as cream and beat until frothy. Serve quickly. Try it on warm or chilled desserts.

New York, May 9.—(AP)—The stock market whetted its appetite on steel and aircraft again today, but barely nibbled at many leaders in other groups.

Issues of companies with war profits potentialities continued to attract the belief of traders that as soon as the British cabinet row is settled the Allies will intensify the conflict with the Nazis and consequently come to America with more widespread orders for military materials.

Gains for selected stocks ran to two points or so at the best, although top marks were reduced at the close. Transfers approximated 800,000 shares.

W. H. Woolard Meet Speaker

The past year was approximately 42 billion dollars.

"In my opinion much of this increased debt has been unnecessary," he declared, adding that "we private citizens are largely responsible for a good portion of it."

"We have not hesitated to ask for grants, for local pride projects, prompted by the feeling 'get it while it is going,'" he declared.

The local bank executive said that he was satisfied that many government aid projects did not merit the expenditure and said that it was "our duty to our country, as individuals, to investigate closely all applications for public funds, and endorse only those absolutely necessary and those of a self-liquidating nature."

The speaker pointed out that the state debt situation presented a more satisfactory picture and expressed appreciation of the services of those who have been responsible for the reduction of the state indebtedness from 163 million dollars to 134 million dollars during the past 10 years.

"It appears to me that with the continuation of this policy we should be getting a reduction in tax in some form," he ventured.

The county debt situation also was described as favorable by Mr. Woolard, who declared that this indebtedness had decreased from 152 million dollars to 140 million dollars in the past five years.

The speaker reviewed business conditions in general and cited figures showing that a cross section review disclosed a 14 per cent average increase in business in 1939 over the previous year. He also stated that this was largely an agricultural state and that our principal cash crops increased nine per cent in value in 1939 over 1938.

He also cited figures showing that the combined statement of all banks in the state indicate a strong financial position. He declared that during the calendar year 1939 the state, national and industrial banks increased 78 million dollars in assets—rising from 488 million to 566 million. He added that the total assets of these banks at the close of the year were exactly 100 per cent more than they were six years ago. He recalled that no bank failures in North Carolina in 1939 gives the state an unbroken record for seven years.

Hollywood.—Billy Lee sure had a good time down in Albany, Ga. Billy Lee went back there to see Miss Georgia Frye and Taxi Smith and Martha Inez and the elevator boy at the hotel and all the folks. Of course, sort of incidentally, Billy's trip was a business journey—personal appearance. Billy's a picture actor. Made one called "The Biscuit Eater" down in Albany, and the company set the opening there so Billy got a return trip out of it.

"It was sure fun," said Billy Lee, hero of this month's Big Comeback story. "Especially that day I was riding the ox out in the country, and I talked Miss Smith—the Miss Rachel Smith, the Paramount school-teacher—into taking a ride on it, too. Boy, was she scared! And Taxi Smith—he's a lawyer and a great friend of mine down there since we met. . . . And Martha and Inez, they kept the candy and tobacco store at the hotel and they'd let me keep store for them sometimes. . . . And the elevator man, he let me ride it all I wanted. . . . And Miss Georgia Frye—we all ate at her big house and they'd have good cooking there! Oh, boy!"

Billy Lee is nine and a half years old, and about 150 percent boy. He's a stocky little fellow, with a cheery, respectful greeting for all persons in sight, most of whom he knows by name—at least around the Paramount lot, where he had worked steadily from the time he was about five. Steadily, that is, until a few months before they needed a youngster who could act for "The Biscuit Eater."

"The Biscuit Eater" is the story of a boy and a dog—a hunting dog who doesn't carry on the best traditions of his tribe and hence is dubbed the epithet of scorn which is the movie's title. The boy of the story had to be an emotional actor.

Well, they picked Baby LeRoy for the role—the same Baby LeRoy who was the infant terror of the films of W. C. Fields, Maurice Chevalier, et al. In the early 1930's. After long retirement, Baby LeRoy was selected for a come-back in "The Biscuit Eater." Baby LeRoy went to Georgia and, first thing, took a cold from a water scene. The cold got worse, and a substitute was required—now, without delay.

That was where Billy Lee got the call. Billy Lee, who could dance, sing, yodel, ride, beat the drums and play cute kids—mischievous mostly—had been "released" a few months before. So they called him back, as the best prospect available. They sent him to Georgia and—as above reported—he had a swell time.

But he also gave an emotional performance (I base the report on May Day Program Is Held At E.C.T.C.

Miss Dorothy Reed Miller, Wilmington, had the May Queen crown placed on her head as East Carolina Teachers College's Queen of May for a second year, in the celebration held Wednesday evening at 6:30 at the College. Miss Miller was crowned by her Maid of Honor, Miss Christine Harris, Thomasville, Tenn.

After Trumpeters William Basden and Spencer Hatley had announced the opening of the program, the procession moved out across the front campus to the music of the "Touchlight Parade" by the college orchestra, the Queen in white, accompanied by her Maid of Honor and her Ladies in Waiting—Misses Mary Helen Gullidge, Mildred Taylor, Sarah Ann Maxwell, Millie Gray Dupree, Eloise Bone, and Marguerite Britt—all in soft pinks, blues, yellows, and greens; her crown bearer, Sophia Frazelle in a rainbow dress, and her train bearers—little Louise Baughan and Barbara Tabor.

Lords and Ladies of the Court were Betty Blanchard, Herbert Wilkerson, Juanita Etheridge, John David Bridges, Mary F. Irvin, Floyd Hinton, Frances Roebuck, O. D. Andrews, Frances Southland, Spencer Hatley, Margie White, James Dempsey, Lois Williams, Samuel Crandall, Fay Bateman, and Norman Wilkerson.

The crowning, the Queen descended from her throne and knelt on the grass while her Maid of Honor carefully placed her crown of white flowers on her head.

Around 75 girls took part in the dances, two of which—Cornish May Dance and Morris Hancherchief Dance—preceded the crowning of the Queen. The Maypole Dance and the procession from the campus closed the program.

Miss Miller, the Queen, is a senior. She came to East Carolina Teachers College in her sophomore year, and has been well known on the campus since her first year. She has been included more than once in the E. C. T. C. annual feature section of beautiful girls on the campus.

The May Day Committee has been composed of Juanita Etheridge, president of Women's Student Government Association, chairman; Ethel Gaston, William Shelton, Patsey Montague Glass, Annie Laurie Beale, Dorothy Spence, student members; and Miss Helen McElwain, Miss Katherine Holtzclaw, Miss Mary H. Greene, Dean C. Tabor, Al Dittmer, and William McHenry, faculty members.

"I just did what the director said to do," Master Lee will dismiss that feat of acting. "Of course, when the dog was dying, it was so real I guess I forgot it was for a picture and—well, you know how it is."
