LINER ARRIVES AFTER BRUSH WITH U-BOAT

Washington Docks At New York With 1,786 Aboard

Disclosed That Captain Had Been Petitioned to Omit Stop at Galway, Ireland

New York, June 21.—(AP)—Safely home after a dramatic brush with a submarine, the United States liner Washington docked today with 1,786 passengers, most of them American citizens who fled the European war zone.

It was disclosed that a group of passengers headed by Donald Harper, New York and Paris lawyer, petitioned Captain Harry Manning to proceed directly to the United States after the submarine encounter instead of making a scheduled stop at Galway, Ireland, to pick up additional refugees.

Captain Manning communicated with the State Department direct and the next day posted a bulletin which said that authorities considered it unwise to change the ship's course as outlined to belligerent nations and that any change might jeopardize the vessel's safety.

It was disclosed, too, that some members of the crew held a meeting at Lisbon to consider a protest against stopping at Galway. Some of the crew were said to have been alarmed over the presence on board of a number of belligerent nationals.

Ship's passengers said a notice posted at the United States consulate at Bordeaux warned that "American citizens taking passage on the vessel are advised that each must, of course, assume the risk of the journey for himself and that the government of the United States can make no guarantee as to the safety of the voyage."

NYA Boys And Girls To See Lost Colony

Manteo, June 21.—The first Special Day during Paul Green's "The Lost Colony," which opens its fourth summer season here June 29th, will be held by the state-wide membership of the National Youth Administration as North Carolina Youth Day, Friday, July 5th, according to T. P. Davis, chairman of arrangements.

Approximately half of the 10,000 NYA boys and girls in the State will take advantage of this opportunity to visit the Nation's Birthplace and to see Paul Green's historical drama of the first pioneers on this historic site, Mr. Davis said, in commenting on plans for the event.

Only Three Cases In Today's City Court

Only three cases were tried in Municipal recorder's court at the regular Friday morning session. All three defendants were charged with drunkenness.

A nol pros with leave was taken in the case charging Helen Johnson, white, with giving a worthless check.

James Freeman, colored, convicted of being drunk and disorderly, was given a 30-day sentence, suspended upon payment of court costs; William Morris, white, convicted of drunkenness, was given a similar sentence; William Whitchard, colored, convicted of being drunk and down, was given 30 days to be spent in working about the municipal building as janitor.

In Conference

Berlin, June 21.—(AP)—Negotiations between the French and German representatives over an armistice still were going on at 7:30 o'clock tonight (12:50 p. m. EST). DNB, the official German news agency announced.

The French retired to the tent set aside for them at 4:25 p. m. (9:25 a. m. EST) to discuss the armistice terms handed them by Wilhelm Keitel, German chief of staff, and also to contact their government by telephone.

At 6:10 p. m. the French envoys returned to the railway car. DNB said this was to allow them to continue discussions with Keitel and other representatives of Adolf Hitler.

Economic Unity Included In Pan-American Defense

AIM DECLARED BY ROOSEVELT

Plan Designed to Protect Economy of Republics From Repercussions of European War

Hyde Park, N. Y., June 21.—(AP)—President Roosevelt asserted today his program for Pan-American economic cooperation involved "economic defense designed to supplement our military defense program."

In a statement issued at a press conference shortly after he arrived from Washington, Mr. Roosevelt asserted the contemplated measures for achieving economic unity among the Pan-American nations were "intended as a further safeguard for the peace of this hemisphere and as a means of protecting our economy and the economies of the other American republics from the repercussions of the disturbed international situation."

The program for economic unity was approved by the President last night and ordered submitted to the other American nations for their approval.

When the conference turned to the topic of the appointment of two republics to the cabinet reporters reminded the chief executive that Alf M. Landon said he assumed the two appointments had received assurance that there would be no third term.

Mr. Roosevelt was asked for comment on that. He chuckled and asked whether Landon really had said that. He added he had seen all kinds of things in the newspapers this morning and if he started commenting on all of them he didn't know when he would get through. But he said he had been thinking after he retired last night that there was some sort of difference between people that there were those who think in terms of patriotic motives and those who think with partisan motives and that this is a very difficult time.

To a question of whether his remark could be regarded as an answer to some critics who contended he was establishing a "war cabinet," Mr. Roosevelt replied in the affirmative.

The President did not disclose details of how his plan for Pan-American economic cooperation would work out but he added that perhaps a series of corporations might be formed, each to handle a specific export commodity. Or perhaps one corporation might be set up, he said, to have divisions in charge of separate commodities.

Many Participate In Institutes Of Safety

Raleigh, June 21.—Over 800 high school principals, teachers, county superintendents and general summer school students participated in the college summer school safety institutes held in the state last week.

The institutes, sponsored by the Highway Safety Division in collaboration with the Center for Safety Education of New York University, the education division of the National Conservation Bureau, the State Department of Public Instruction, and the directors of summer schools of North Carolina colleges, got off to a splendid start last week, representatives of the Safety Division said.

Institutes included one at East Carolina Teachers College. The institutes last week were conducted by Milton D. Kramer of the Center for Safety Education, New York University; Dr. Walter Cutter and Mrs. Bill P. Flythe of the Highway Safety Division; and David Miller and Charles Spencer of the State Department of Public Instruction.

Mrs. Lillie West Claimed by Death

Mrs. Lillie West, 73, sister of the late G. E. Moore of Farmville, died in Raleigh yesterday afternoon at 6:45 o'clock following a lingering illness.

Funeral services will be conducted tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Moore in Farmville by Rev. C. B. Mashburn, Christian minister. Burial will be in the Farmville cemetery.

U. S. Warns Axis 'Hands Off'

This map shows territory belonging to European nations on which attention was focused by warning from the United States to Germany and Italy that this nation opposes transfer of any western hemisphere possessions from one non-American power to another. The largest of such possessions in North America and South America are indicated by shaded areas. Others, too small to show shading, are denoted otherwise. Coincident with the American warning, the United States cruiser Quincy, in South American waters on a good neighbor mission, is on its way to Montevideo, Uruguay, where Nazi activities have been under investigation.

Rumania Adopts Regime Patterned After Nazis

FIGHTING HAS SLOWED DOWN

Italy Fails to Offer Offensive Along Alpine

Bordeaux, France, June 21.—Despite official declarations of continued French resistance, it was believed here this evening that fighting had slowed down in general—if not virtually stopped—during the armistice negotiations.

The morning military communiqué said German troops during the night had pushed to Blois, about 25 miles southwest of Vichy, and that the French were putting up energetic resistance in the Vosges mountains.

It was thought likely the French negotiators who received Germany's armistice terms would return here today.

Then the cabinet was expected to meet and decide whether the government should remain here or move to another spot.

France's reorganized army of the Jura and the Alps, reinforced by many units which retreated from the Maginot line, was reported not only to have held German motorized units south and east of Lyon, but to have driven back advanced Nazi columns northwest of Grenoble with heavy losses.

German forces at Lyon apparently were awaiting strong reinforcements before trying to break the strong line of French troops south of the city.

Although the Italian army had been expected to launch a big offensive on the French as soon as the Germans reached the Rhone river, there has been little action along the Alpine front.

ABC Stores In Pitt Closing For Primary

All ABC liquor stores in the county will be closed tomorrow because of the second primary.

Dr. Chas. O'H. Horne, chairman of the local board, in announcing today that the stores would be closed, explained that the state law provided for the closing of the stores on primary and election days.

Sweeping Political Victory For Germany

Bucharest, June 21.—(AP)—A sweeping German victory in the battle for political influence in Rumania was scored tonight by the announcement King Carol was forming a new totalitarian political party of the Nazi pattern.

The party is to be known as "the party of the nation." It will supersede the present party of national rebirth. The pro-Nazi iron guard will play a big part in the new organization, whose bases were announced as "nationalistic, Christian and racial."

This was interpreted as meaning that King Carol was prepared to put a full Nazi program into force, even including a return to anti-Semitism in an attempt to win favor with the victorious German Reich.

It was learned that a royal decree was drafted providing for the complete reorganization of the national birth front to take in all opposition elements, the iron guard along with the peasant party.

Electric Co-ops Change Title To Escape Taxes

Reflector Bureau. By HENRY AVERILL. Raleigh, June 21.—For several years the federally-backed rural electric cooperatives in North Carolina have been organizing almost indiscriminately either as "mutual" associations under an old law on the state's books or as "membership corporations" under the Rural Electrification Act of 1935.

At the time of organization it didn't seem to make much difference which route was chosen.

But now the "mutuals" are scheming mightily to become "memberships" if it can feasibly be done under the law, as both Director Dudley Bagley of the REA and the attorney general's office believe possible.

Reason for the change of mind is not far to seek, and once mentioned is so obvious as to leave no grounds for further speculation about motives.

WILL CONSIDER APPOINTMENTS

No Action Expected At Least For One Week

Washington, June 21.—(AP)—The Senate Military committee today ordered hearings on President Roosevelt's nomination of Henry L. Stimson to be War Secretary and Stimson himself was called to testify.

As a momentous Senate debate over foreign and defense policies shaped up around the Stimson appointment and that of Col. Frank Knox to be Secretary of the Navy it appeared there would be no action on confirmation for more than a week.

Chairman Sheppard, (D-Tex.), said that Stimson would be called for testimony "in a week or so and it was expected to be at least that long until the Naval committee acts on the Knox nomination."

In the House, debate was set off yesterday by the cabinet changes flared up today when Rep. Fish (R-N.Y.) asserted that the Democrats under President Roosevelt should bear the label "war party."

Majority Leader Rayburn of Texas jumped in. "The gentlemen on the Republican side have been groping many months for an issue," he declared. "They now have seized on the hope that the Republican party is the peace party. If they want to be the peace party at any price they can have it."

"They are trying to create the impression that the Democratic party may be the war party. The Democratic party is not a peace party at any price. The Democratic party is the one party that will not be the war party, but it will be the party of defense of America and its great ideals."

The House adopted today a joint Senate-House conference report on legislation appropriating $1,158,000,000 for relief purposes in the next fiscal year. Of this sum $50,000,000 was set aside for Europe war relief to be administered by the Red Cross. In addition to the relief items, the measure provides non-combatant training for CCC boys.

Big Gain Is Shown In Births In This State

Raleigh, June 21.—(AP)—There were 32,471 babies born in North Carolina during the first five months of 1940, which was 712 more than were born during the corresponding period in 1939 and 18,049 in excess of the 14,422 deaths reported so far during the present year.

These figures have been compiled by the State Board of Health's Division of Vital Statistics, of which Dr. R. T. Stimpson is the Director. The report shows that deaths thru May this year numbered 612 more than the 13,610 reported for the corresponding period of 1939. So there are increases reported in the number of both births and deaths for the current year.

Greater Paris has a population of about 4,933,000. Greater London contains about 8,655,000.

NAZI LEGIONS EXTEND GAINS AGAINST FOES

Military Machine Drives Deeper Into France

NEW SUCCESSES ON SEA AND LAND

Include Capture of 700 New Tanks, Sinking of Merchant Ships and Capture of Warships

Berlin, June 21.—(AP)—Germany's military machine shoved steel spearheads deeper into France "on schedule" today as representatives of Germany, Italy and France met in the forests of Compiègne for armistice talks.

Reports of additional booty came from the Germans as they mopped up sections of the Maginot line and took new places in Normandy, Brittany and the region between the Loire estuary and the Rhone valley.

The newspaper Der Angriff said two 35,000-ton French battleships were seized at Brest, where they are being built.

The high command reported these successes: Capture of 700 brand new tanks, the sinking by submarine of four British merchantships, one of them a royal mail steamer of 11,000 tons and the sinking by torpedoes and dive bombing of a 10,000-ton transport and a 4,000-ton auxiliary warship.

The French were reported "stoutly resisting" in the Maginot line in Lorraine and Alsace while encircling groups in the western Vosges mountains are continuing their fight against the Nazis.

The Germans, reporting continued British air raids last night, said 16 persons were killed in British bombings of Cologne last night and Wednesday night and on Düsseldorf on Wednesday night.

VIEWS HEALTH AS ESSENTIAL

Physical Fitness Necessary Part Of Defense

Reflector Bureau.

By HENRY AVERILL.

Raleigh, June 21.—Physical fitness is an integral and essential part of an program of national defense and preparedness, Dr. Carl V. Reynolds, state health officer, stressed today in a statement designed to promote greater interest in a general health program.

He called attention to the emphasis now being placed on universal service and pointed out that to bring large groups together in training centers without proper health training and inspection is to invite epidemics or epidemics in these centers.

"We should lose no time in preventing the preventable, protecting the protectable and curing the curable," he said.

This program should be undertaken immediately and without any sort of reservation or hesitation, he declared.

In it every means at the disposal of governmental agencies should be employed, with full aid from cooperating Federal, State and local agencies.

In a prepared statement, Dr. Reynolds said: "Today I saw nine billions of dollars being appropriated for national defense."

"Today, I saw plans in the making for universal service."

"Today, and tomorrow, we need the man and the woman who is sound in mind and in body, to guide, direct and operate our preparedness program."

"Delay means waste of both time and opportunity. Procrastination is the thief of time whose loot is never recovered."

"Man's physical fitness is essential in war or peace—it is an integral part of preparedness."

TWO CONTESTS ON TOMORROW

Reflector to Stay Open to Give Primary Results

Pitt county voters will go to the polls tomorrow to fill two posts, one of the county's seats in the State House of Representatives and register of deeds.

The second primary will provide only local contests, no second primaries having been called for any of the state offices.

Although war has claimed major interest since the first primary, many predict that a vote in excess of 6,000 would be cast tomorrow.

The register of deeds contest will be between Amos O. Clark, high man, and Roy T. Cox, runner-up. The legislative contest will be between S. O. Worthington and John A. Staton. The representative race was led by Dr. W. I. Wooten, who was declared winner of one of the county's two seats. Mr. Worthington was second high man and Mr. Staton third.

The Reflector will remain open for the purpose of advising citizens of the results of the two contests but no special election edition will be issued.

The usual cooperation of the registrars and other election officials will be appreciated and all news will be passed on to the general public.

The Reflector office will remain open until the count is completed for the purpose of giving information on the primary. Interested persons are invited to visit the office or call us over the telephone, number 3356.

With only two tickets to count, the returns should be tabulated much earlier than in the first primary. The polls will close at 7 o'clock and The Reflector office will be open from shortly thereafter until all votes have been tabulated.

Congestion In Chest Developed by Maxwell

Raleigh, June 21.—(AP)—Revenue Commissioner A. J. Maxwell, desperately ill with paralysis since late in May, had evidences of "slight chest congestion" today and his temperature had risen again, his physician reported.

The commissioner showed evidences of lung congestion and ran a fever 10 days ago, but then had appeared slightly better until last night.

Axis Terms Include Complete Demilitarization And Handing Over of Industries and Wealth to Be Used in War Against Britain

By The Associated Press. Adolf Hitler crowned his hour of triumph by personally meeting France's peace-seeking envoys today in the shell-torn forests of Compiègne, scene of the signing of the World war armistice on November 11, 1918.

The Nazi Fuehrer met the French envoys in the same historic railway car in which Marshal Foch dictated the terms on which Kaiser Wilhelm's imperial armies laid down their arms.

Col. General Wilhelm Keitel, chief of the Nazi command, first read a preamble to the armistice conditions, with Hitler remaining silent nearby.

Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop and Col. General Walter von Brauchitsch, commander in chief of the German army, were present.

The meeting took place at 3:30 p. m. (8:30 a. m. EST). "Today's action in the forests of Compiègne has wiped out the wrongs done to German military honor," said the official German news agency.

"The dignity of the action toward an enemy honorably defended stands in contrast to the eternal hate-sowing monuments at this place where Gallie bassness once shamed the undefeated German army."

Three aims of the German armistice terms were announced:

1. To prevent continuance of the war in France—apparently the complete demilitarization of the French.

2. To obtain full guarantees "necessary for continuance of the war against Britain." This indicates French industries, materials and wealth will be taken over by Germany to fight England.

3. To produce "pre-conditions for a new European peace."

Immediately after the reading of the preamble Hitler departed. The Allies in the world war, supported by American troops, "did not successfully in any way conquer the German army, navy or air force."

Citizens Support Leaf Referendum

A representative group of Pitt county business men, in a special session held at the court house last night for the purpose of organizing an educational campaign for the July tobacco control referendum next month, unanimously endorsed control.

Similar meetings were held elsewhere in the tobacco areas last night or will be held tonight. A large number of prominent citizens spoke at last night's session and pointed out the necessity of farmers voting for control and the advantages to be derived from favoring a three-year program.

Farmers will be provided with ballots whereby they can favor a one-year program, three-year program or vote against control, but there is expected to be only a very light vote against control in this county.

The business men attending the meeting pledged to work for the control program in an attempt to pile up a large favorable majority in this section.

String Quartet Enjoyed.

The Chicago string quartet, with its well-blended program of heavy and light numbers in alternating groups, delighted not only the audience in the Wright Auditorium of the College last night but the listening audience.

The Rink String Quartet, all-American in birth and citizenship as well as training, in spite of their foreign-sounding names, inaugurated a new feature for College entertainments. It was the first to broadcast over the local station. Dean Tabor announced the program and gave explanations.

The artists from the very first strains definitely proved themselves accomplished musicians by their exceptional interpretations of the "Quartet in D Minor" by Mozart, the master composer for stringed instruments. The four parts ranging through the "Allegro," "Andante," "Menuetto" and "Allegretto" gave the audience full opportunity to judge their musicianship.

Contrasting with this, the second group was composed of popular folk dance tunes with arrangements by composers of note. These were the familiar Irish folk songs, "London-derry Air," the fiery "Polka," a dance form used by all nationalities, and an Irish reel, "Molly on the Shore," arranged by America's great pianist-composer, Percy Grainger. One's Quartet for strings in three parts, romanza, andante, and allegro movements, was played with fine artistry.

The Scherzo, a blues tune composed by Florian Mueller, first oblate of the Chicago Symphony, opened the last group. The arrangement of the Negro spiritual, "Deep River," was by Alfred Pochon, the second violinist of the Svergel String Quartet, and is similar to that for the voice by Burleigh. Pochon also arranged the next number, "Think to Me Only with Thine Eyes," and the encore "Turkey in the Straw."

"Indian War Dance" the last number, an original Cheyenne dance, was arranged by Skilton of the University of Kansas, who is an authority on Indian dances.

The men in the quartet are members of big symphony orchestras for the regular season. Carl Rink, the leader of the Quartet, is with the Chicago Symphony and the other two, with the Kansas City Orchestra. The cellist, who holds a scholarship with Wallstein, had a number of solo engagements last season.

The Quartet begins its tour when the symphony season closes. They were in the West in the late spring, going as far as Utah, and are now making a tour of colleges and universities. This is the only engagement this far south and they left here for a tour through Indiana, Ohio, on to Wisconsin, travelling in a private car.

The Quartet has as its mission, the leader says, to show that Americans can give as good chamber music programs as imported Europeans. All the members are of American birth, but of European descent, so combine both in their musical heritages. The leader, Carl Rink, says the first part of his name is German, but the second part Dutch. Michael Rink is of Hungarian descent, Guido Rink, of Italian, and Vera Rehberg, of Swiss.

Mr. Rink, when putting up his instruments, showed with pride a Tuxedo violin with the date 1700, which was used by Paganini's only pupil, Giovanni.

It is a tragic tale, slow in getting under way, but interesting and moving for its performances and central situation.

"Torrid Zone." William Keighley directing Ann Sheridan, Pat O'Brien, James Cagney.

O'Brien is manager of a banana company somewhere in the "torrid zone" of Central America. Cagney is his confidant, about to desert for the softer life of a Chicago office. Just as Managing Editor Burns deters Hildy Johnson in "The Front Page," O'Brien lures Cagney into "one more month" on the plantation where trouble, in the form of a revolutionary enterprise fostered by the excellent character actor, George Tobias, is at hand. Miss Sheridan is the intendant, card-sharpping café singer, bounded by O'Brien and befriended—and more—by Cagney.

Cagney and O'Brien carry on a Flagg-Quirt feud through the rapid melodrama that ensues, and Annie again shows that all the "oomph" is not on paper. "Torrid Zone" is good, fast stuff. Its "torrid" atmosphere is excellently projected.

Sights And Sounds

By Robin Coons

Hollywood. — "Waterloo Bridge." Screenplay by S. N. Behrman, Hans Rameau and George Froeschel, from play by Robert E. Sherwood. Directed by Mervyn LeRoy. Principals: Vivien Leigh, Robert Taylor, Lucille Watson, Virginia Field, Maria Ouspenskaya, C. Aubrey Smith.

With several pre-Scarlett movies on the screen now, Miss Leigh offers in "Waterloo Bridge" a new characterization to save her from the stamp of "one-picture" stardom. There is nothing of Scarlett, though more than a tinge of scarlet, in her role of a sweet girl buffeted by war's cruelties. And she brings appeal and dramatic conviction to the assignment.

Besides proving again that the academy award winner really can act, the picture has other news in Taylor's most mature, best-handled part to date. Even without the stumpy moustache he sports, he would have managed, acting as he does here, to be taken seriously.

Myra (Leigh) is a ballet dancer; Roy (Taylor), a young army officer about to leave for the front in World War I. They meet in a bomb shelter, plan to marry, but quarrel by a legal technicality. Having lost her job, Myra with her friend Kitty (Field) is unable to survive in war-disrupted London; waiting to meet Roy's mother (Watson), she reads his death notice in a newspaper; shock and the effort to conceal the news cause her to behave so rudely as to estrange the mother, from whom she might have expected help.

When desperate Kitty and Myra have taken what they (with Hays' office sanction) insist is not "the safest way," Roy returns. Keeping her secret against her better judgment, Myra consents to marry him, goes with him to his country home. There she is confronted by so many evidences of his high family standards that she confesses to the mother and insists upon fleeing. By the time Roy has learned the truth and is off in eager pursuit, Myra has come to the end which in the movies is always destined for her type, regardless of extenuating circumstances.

It is a tragic tale, slow in getting under way, but interesting and moving for its performances and central situation.

"Torrid Zone." William Keighley directing Ann Sheridan, Pat O'Brien, James Cagney.

O'Brien is manager of a banana company somewhere in the "torrid zone" of Central America. Cagney is his confidant, about to desert for the softer life of a Chicago office. Just as Managing Editor Burns deters Hildy Johnson in "The Front Page," O'Brien lures Cagney into "one more month" on the plantation where trouble, in the form of a revolutionary enterprise fostered by the excellent character actor, George Tobias, is at hand. Miss Sheridan is the intendant, card-sharpping café singer, bounded by O'Brien and befriended—and more—by Cagney.

Cagney and O'Brien carry on a Flagg-Quirt feud through the rapid melodrama that ensues, and Annie again shows that all the "oomph" is not on paper. "Torrid Zone" is good, fast stuff. Its "torrid" atmosphere is excellently projected.

"La Conga Nights." You'll want to see Hugh Herbert play himself and a half dozen other guys—and ladies—in this rather bright little number.

Straight-and-narrow is this new-silhouette dress designed by Jo Copeland of brown silk crepe, with drapery and seamings indicating a lowered waistline. The Alaska seal skin hat has a back-draped swag of orange velvet. Shown at the preview of American designs in New York.

Straight-And-Narrow Styles Have Won Over America

The straight-and-narrow silhouette has conquered the fashion world.

Its quick victory surprised, even fashion experts, who had felt that the new slim line would not be accepted generally until fall. First introduced in Paris mid-season last April and May, the straight-and-narrow won buyer approval. By way of preparing for fall acceptance, a few American stores presented experimental slim fashions in summer linens and sheer crepes. The moment they appeared the public gobbled them up.

The very women who've been heard to protest against the return of tight skirts are among the first to buy them. When a salesgirl showed a New York style leader a full-skirted print, she objected. "But it looks so much like last year's prints. Haven't you something new?"

A slim crepe dress with a stinging bit of fullness confined to the center front pleased her, and she bought. Now slim-liners are everywhere. Unless you haven't bought yours yet.

This new silhouette is reminiscent of the styles of 1928, with skirts of chemise-like slimmness, with an easier not-so-tight look through the waist, with the waist-line itself dropped an inch or two, and with seamings and pockets placed well below the beltline to emphasize the drawn-out look.

Jo Copeland, American designer, says the new silhouette is good luck for short women. It definitely makes you look taller and thinner. Tall women won't fare so well in it, though. They have all the drawn-out look they want without exaggerating it.

But most women will like the easier waistline. Miss Copeland thinks. Most women past 25 have a bit of bulge above or below the waistline, and the away-from-the-body midriff conceals bulges better than the tight-diaphragm line of the last few years.

"You won't have to hold your breath to look nice through the middle in new clothes," Miss Copeland says.

Another good point—the slim silhouette generally means greater elegance, less fluff-ruffle "cuteness." We can wave goodbye to the cutest silhouette of all time—the dirndl, that unpronounceable peasant fashion, and all its full-skirted offspring. Only the very young look well in really full skirts, and this fall only the very young will have them.

In coats, there'll be a return of dolman sleeves and slightly bloused backs, along with straight-and-narrow skirts. Shoulders will be more natural, though still squared off with modified pads.

It Had To Come
Los Gatos, Calif.—(AP)—The city fathers here seem to agree pretty well. When Councilman Stanley Mills cast a "no" vote on a minor appropriation. It was said to be the first dissent in ten years.

Strength For The Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

A PRAYER.
Lord God of Hosts, by whom our swearing hearts are strengthened and our broken lives led to triumph strengthen the peoples of the earth today with a new sense of Thy presence and power. Keep us from that falseness of mind, that apostasy of spirit, which would lead us to turn from the gospel of Thy wisdom.
Have mercy, O God, upon those who bear the pain of battle, and upon their loved ones whose anxious hearts are torn by an even deeper agony. Touch the unselfish spirits of men everywhere into an eagerness to serve, a new delight in bearing burdens and assuaging pain. May Christ be lifted up above the turmoil of these days and may we be confident with an assurance which cannot be shaken that He, if He be lifted up, will draw all men unto Himself. These things we ask in the name of Jesus Christ Who died that we might live. Amen.

● A second primary for the naming of two county officers—Register of Deeds and one member to the House of Representatives—is to be held in this county tomorrow.
As a rule there is far less interest in a second primary where the number of contests is less, but voters should remember that the importance of choosing our officers by majority rule is just as great. We urge the voters of this county to go to the polls tomorrow and express their preference for the men who are to occupy these two offices for the next term. To vote is your duty and privilege.

● There is nothing so vile as one who starts an unfounded rumor to hurt somebody else, except the person who is willing to give ear to and continue to spread such rumors. Of late there has been a lot of tall talk about "Fifth Column" activities on the part of some of our most respected citizens and a hysterical public has apparently been willing to gobble up such unfounded and ridiculous stories and pass them on adding to or taking from as they saw fit. At first these stories were laughed off because of their absurdity but they have reached the stage that if they are not the entire community. Our public can rest assured that if and when any "Fifth Column" activity is attempted in this section it will be quickly detected and halted by federal agents. In the meantime we urge our people to decline to even listen to these wild stories, let alone repeat them. To aid in bringing about a state of hysteria in a community by repeating unfounded stories designed to hurt our own people could prove just about as bad as the actual presence of "Fifth Column" activity in our midst.

Washington Daybook

By Jack Stinson

Washington—Footnote on defense: If you have any convictions about compulsory military training (or a "selective service" plan of some kind) you better sit down and write your congressman or senator because something is going to be done about it—and quickly.
The primary reason: The President, the army and many Congressmen feel Congress already has devoted more billions to defense machinery than a voluntary army will be able to man.
The reasoning is this:
1. Defense isn't any good without man power. You could spend a billion a day on the best ships, planes, tanks and guns in the world and you couldn't hold off two parachute units armed with beachshooters if you didn't have trained men to operate the machines.
2. The army doubts if you could get half a million men through voluntary enlistment. Our experience at the beginning of the World war is most recent proof, but it has been a recognized military fact since the revolution.
Therefore, compulsive military training seems inevitable and since this country is a democracy and recognizes the equality of men chances are that it will be universal compulsory military training—probably going under the name of selective service—unless somebody finds a more appealing name.

A Potential 17,000,000
One effort to make military training compulsory among boys in CCC camps has failed. The concen-sus of those opposed, as it has been of those opposed to drafting men on relief, is that there must be no class, social or economic distinctions in building up our fighting force.
They argue it should get the Tom Joys, all right, but should get the Johnny Wall-Streeters, too.
In my meanderings around the legislative and military corridors, I've heard one proposal to put up a law to require registration (that's just registration, mind you) of all men between the ages of 18 and 48.
This would put about 25,000,000 on the rolls. On the basis of World war experience, about 8,000,000 of these would be found physically unfit for military service.

That would leave a potential army (hypothetically, of course—there would have to be exemptions of 17,000,000 men. Actually, strategists consider only men from 19 to 35 for combat purposes and in this group there are only about 12,000,- 000 men.
From these rolls, then, would be drawn the men who would receive military training. Now, if we went into military training on the same basis that we went into armed force in the World war, we have 4,900,000 men in training before 1942. That's possible, but it means the United States would have to turn itself into an even greater armed camp than it was in 1917 and 1918.

Couldn't Stand The Gaff
From what I can gather, it is not the intention to put forward anything as drastic as that now. Our present defense program, even traveling "full speed ahead" couldn't stand the gaff.

What is more likely is that a program will be worked out to draw from very narrow age limits, perhaps 19 to 21 or 22, to put 1,000,000 young men into training immediately.

Even that has to clear its "bottlenecks," and they are numerous.
There are arms, tents, planes, shoes and uniforms. Let's just take the last.

Only a few weeks ago, Gen.
George C. Marshall, chief of staff, said: "The situation regarding uniforms is critical. If it should become necessary to mobilize the national guard at peace strength, we would not have on hand the cloth to commence the manufacture of uniforms for the 85,000 additional men. I would say for possibly four or five months."

Other army officials have estimated that the 25 firms now manufacturing uniforms might turn out 10,000 a week. If there were one uniform to a man and nobody were wore one out or slipped and ripped his breeches, it would take two years to get 1,000,000 recruits into the trappings of war.

There are other problems to compulsory military training, you see, than just getting out the men, but it's this last that you'll be writing

HIGH TIDE

Chapter 35 Party

FIRMLY mapping out a course of distraction for herself, Jan selected a dove gray outfit, and went out to breakfast. Following breakfast, she asked directions to a sightseeing bus, climbed aboard and glued her eyes to the window, figuratively speaking, and determined not to miss one single thing.

In the afternoon, gaudy banners still flying, she took a bus across town and visited Lance in his pleasant room at the hospital, telling him of the concert the night before, of Doctor Murray's kindness, of how the enormity of New York made her feel very small and unimportant.

"As long as you've so much time to put in," Lance suggested,
"why don't you call up this magazine editor and find out if they've decided to accept your last batch of sketches?"

"Never thought of it," she said, jumping up to rearrange the fluffy chrysantheums she had brought him. "I might have a nice, fat check waiting, you know?"

"I wonder how much Doctor Murray will ask us?" Lance fretted. "If I turn out all right, I can fly again and pay off our debts in a month or so, but if I—Jan, I'd rather die on the operating table than come out still crippled! Oh, I know I shouldn't talk this way to you. I've never been very considerate of you."

"You have so," she contradicted stoutly. "If I'd been in your position I dread to think how miserable I'd have made everyone. You're brave and good, Lance. I had a letter from Norma this morning, she changed the subject cheerily.

Lance moved his head and shoulders restlessly, appearing drawn and pathetically tired. "Did you hear from Rose? Did I get any mail?"

"No, dear." She wanted to talk to him about Rose and Norma, but she could not. Not yet, she cautioned herself again. He mustn't be upset before his operation.

"Jan," he asked, reaching for her small, brown hand, "you'll be here at eight in the morning? I want you here when they take me to the operating room. You're all I have, Sis. Shouldn't I sign over papers on the house to you in case something goes wrong?"

"Silly," she chided. "Nothing will go wrong. And Lance, you're all I have, too. It sounds awfully childish to say this, I suppose, but let's be good mariners, darling, no matter how rough the old ocean gets! Mother and Dad, if they knew, would like it that way."

"Yes, Jan. Thank God they don't know," he breathed.

When Jan, tired, feeling it not looking bedraggled, arrived back at her hotel, the clerk handed her a thick sheaf of telephone messages along with her room key.
All of the messages were from Derek.

"Lennie!" she sniffed scornfully under her breath and marched to the elevator. "Ricky! Well, he can just phone and phone and leave a thousand messages, but I won't see him and that's that!"

'Jealous?'
BUT it wasn't. As she fitted her key into the door a tall shape loomed around the corner of the corridor and she had to see Derek.
for he stood suddenly between her and the door. He took her by the shoulders and shook her a little, and when she started to protest he bent down and kissed her suddenly.

"Now slap me," he taunted, "for I feel a slap coming on and I don't care at all. Young woman, this is less than number one on how to treat a celebrity!"

"You just go away and leave me alone, Ricky!" she commanded furiously.

"Oh," he nodded, cocking his head to one side, "so that's it.
Jealous, eh?"

"Will you prove it?"

"Certainly," she declared with dignity.

"Then come to a party at my father's house tonight," he baited.
"I'll wait for you at nine."

"All right," she agreed, sparks in her deep blue eyes, "but presented to Mr. Knowles, the I'm properly presented to some handsome young man. I," she declared, "desire a handsome young man to take me places."

"Jan," he started to pull her close, then for some reason he changed his mind, bowed mockingly, and strode off down the hall.

Promptly at nine o'clock a chauffeur in dark maroon livery called for her, saying politely:
"Mr. Knowles asked me to tell you he called several times but was unable to reach you. He had to meet the Countess von Lurwitz, his mother, at her boat and will join you at the house later."

Countess? Boat? Jan somehow resisted the impulse to murmur something about a headache and flee to her room; instead she sank back into the deep cushions of the car and tried to get her whirling thoughts under control. Of course, she thought first of all, Derek could not reach her for hadn't she, this morning, given strict orders about his calls? She could not possibly feel affronted by his non-appearance. But what of the Countess von Lurwitz, his mother? He had never told her anything of his parents except that they neglected him. How little she really knew of him, yet once she had been so sure she knew all about him.

Therefore it was with mixed feelings and something approaching awe that she later went alone into the pillared colonial home on Long Island. The luxurious rooms were so full of resplendent people and talking and music and glitter that she thought, "I feel as bewildered as Dick Whittington's cat visiting the royal court!"

An imposing manservant admitted her, a footman directed her upstairs, and a prim English maid took her wrap. What if, during the throng below, she slid down the polished stair banister and winked, very drolly, at the butler. This fancy provoked a giggle, the giggle provoked the amazed glances of several women in the suite of rooms, and Jan retreated, blushing, to an orchid-tiled sanctuary which, she supposed, was a bathroom, but which, she decided on closer inspection, looked more like a mausoleum. Anyhow, she could lock herself in, and did.

There was a floor-length glass before which she could sit cross-legged and observe her smooth, tanned young arms and shoulders rising above the bouffant swirl of jade green net. She'd bought the dress only three hours ago, following a call to the magazine editor, who cordially invited her to luncheon on Friday and who told her the staff had decided just that day to buy her kitten sketches. Therefore she'd been extravagant. Her hair, once more, was piled high on her head, a stray curl tucked up with a small barrette fashioned of silver shells, and she assured herself that she liked herself in the hair and the dress, so there!
And she would not permit herself to be dismayed by grandeur!

Foreign Swing
DEREK had not yet arrived when she braved the strangeness below. Neither, she observed carefully, had Lenore Page. At least, she consoled herself, if she knew no one, no one knew her.
And so, in a blissful state of anonymity, she wandered around the rooms. It was beautiful, but it was not a home. How could Derek bear all this? Or did he like it?
Perhaps he'd wondered how she could bear the old red house with its pictures of ships, its knickknacks, its faded carpets and chairs.

Eventually she came to a door leading out on a wide veranda.
She sat down in the sort of porch swing she'd seen in newspaper ads and never expected to own. She swung back and forth, gently, loving the breeze off the Sound, looking at the crescent moon and idly counting stars. "If I could only spend the evening out here," she said, half aloud.

"I wish the same," sighed a tired voice from a lounge chair at the other side of the swing.

"Isn't it dreadful?"

"Terrible," agreed the voice.

"Why on earth did you come?"
As her eyes accustomed themselves to the semi-gloom, she observed that her sympathizer was a middle-aged man in dinner clothes with a grizzled, hard-bitten face and heavy jaw.

"Because I was invited," she answered. "But thank goodness I don't belong to the four hundred —or is it the six or eight hundred by now?"

"Then you must be a celebrity or a visiting firewoman," deduced her porch companion. "At least you must know that Page woman.
For this party is her doing. I understand. Is she a friend of yours?" he asked cautiously before committing himself further.

"A bloody enemy," she declared. "May I ask what you are doing here?" Jan pursued, swinging one foot up and the other down in tempo with the music drifting through the door.

"I," he said in a grumbling, irritable tone, "can't help it. I'm Gregory Knowles and I own this resort."

"Derek's father! Oh, dear!"

"Why so surprised, young woman? Didn't you know he had a father?"

"Yes," she said shyly, wishing her tongue hadn't wagged so freely. "Doctor Burlingham spoke of you yesterday."

And then, somehow they got to talking about doctors and Jan found herself telling this very nice person about Lance and about herself and her sketching and Sea Tide. When she finished he told her about the little boy named Derek who had grown up all wrong and yet turned out well, amazing, even.

"He just tolerates me," his father confessed sadly. "I don't know that I blame him. He was such a thin little shaver and his mother insisted on tutors and nurses and later, private schools.
I saw little of him for years and when I finally tried to be friends with him it was too late for he resented my neglect and his mother's unwillingness to be burdened with a big growing son."

"But the chauffeur said something about a Countess." Jan faltered.

"Yes, Derek had to meet his mother's boat tonight. The Countess von Lurwitz is tripping over from Pisa for a few days." He snorted rudely. "I suppose that chubby husband of hers is with her. I never could stand him, but then, she never approved my choices either, so I suppose that makes us even."

Jan remained painfully silent, beginning to understand what motivated Derek's resentment against a social system which had deprived him of home and parents.

Reflector Bureau.
By HENRY AVERILL.
June 21. A few weeks ago there appeared in a weekly of national circulation a cartoon showing a magnificent dwelling, situated right in the middle of what highway folks know as a "cloverleaf", with fine modern super-highways leading to it from all directions.

It was captioned "This Is Where Our Road Commissioner Lives."

Thinking to have a bit of a joke, sub-officials of the State Highway and Public Works Commission heretofore the cartoon out and sent it to Tom Wolfe, one of the district Highway Commission members.

These pranksters were just a little disconcerted when at the next meeting of the Commission here it came to light that Mr. Wolfe, with two copies, received fewer than any other member of the board, some of whom reported having received documents.

One of the cartoons mailed to a commissioner was elaborately framed.

"In these days when our minds are filled up with the horrors of war, it is well to remember that the traffic toll for the last two years greatly exceeds the American dead in the world war, and that traffic deaths in the last seven years have exceeded the total number of Americans killed in all the wars in the nation's history," says Ronald Houtt, director of the State Highway Safety Division.

He added that North Carolina's record, while improving this year, is still as bad as the country at large when it comes to comparisons with war dead.

There has been, and still is, a lot of talk over the state about the Bo-lshak bill, placed on North Carolina's statute books by the 1927 legislature, and requiring registration of all aliens.

Technically it is Section 1, Chapter 185, Acts of 1927. It required every alien then in the state to register within 90 days and all entering thereafter to register within 90 days of entry.

Under it the alien is required to give the following information:

1. Name.
2. Nationality.
3. Date of Birth.
4. Previous nationality (if any).
5. Profession or occupation.
6. Address of residence.
7. Names and addresses of five persons who have known the regis-trant for the longest period.
8. Address of last residence outside of North Carolina.
9. Government of military service.
10. Name and dates of birth of all children under 16.
11. Must present a passport with proper visa admitting such alien into the United States under the United States statutes, treaty, or regulation in force at the date of entrance into the U. S.
12. Must furnish two passport-size photographs, one of which shall be retained by the clerk for his record, and the other attached to the registration certificate of such alien and stamped with the official seal of the clerk of the Superior Court.
13. Failure to register, or alteration of a registration certificate is a misdemeanor punishable by fine or imprisonment or both.
14. A registration fee of one dollar shall be paid.

Rube's Greenies Win Both Afternoon and Night Games

FREDDY HURLS EVENING TILT

Caligiuri Holds Kingston Scoreless, And Gets Two Hits

Greenville pulled within four games of the first division yesterday by taking both the afternoon and night games against the Kingston Eagles at Guy Smith park.

Rube's boys won the afternoon engagement 5-4 and came back after supper to take the night contest 4-0.

Caligiuri was the big star in the night game. In addition to doing a fine job at hurling—allowing only six hits and striking out seven batters—he got two safeties. Shelton and Kracke also got two each in the after-dark contest.

Bill Shelton, who graduated from ECTO diamond, drove the winning run home in the afternoon. His infield hit sent Manager Wilson home to end the game.

It was an uphill fight for the Greenies in the afternoon contest. They were trailing 4-2 after scoring one in their third and neither team was able to score for the next three frames. The Greenies made one each in the seventh, eighth and ninth, however, to claim victory.

TONIGHT'S GAMES
Double Cola vs. Water and Light.
Tadlock vs. Blount-Harvey.

Patty's home run in the seventh inning with one out last night gave Carolina Dairy a 10-9 victory over R. C. Cola in the second game of the softball double-header. The Pepsi Cola team was held scoreless for the last three innings of the game, but their lead proved sufficient.

In the Carolina Dairy-R. C. Cola game each team scored two in the first frame, but the dairy took the lead in the second when they pushed another across after holding the R. C. team. The R. C. team, however, went out in front with two in their half of the third, but the dairy countered with a like number to regain the lead and added three more in the fourth.

Trailing 6-4 at the opening of the sixth R. C. scored two in that frame and allowed the Dairy to get one. The R. C. team was behind 9-6 at the start of the final inning, but they pushed three across to knot the count on an error, singles by Mosier, Peede and E. Waldrop. An outfield fly and another hit by Warren.

Sermons, first man up for the Dairy went out, short to first, but Patty found one to his liking and clouted out the game-winning homer.

New York, June 21.—(AP)—Stock market dealings almost came to a halt today and prices shifted narrowly as many traders remained inactive pending publication of the German-French armistice details.
Apathy, prevailing at the start, continued during the remainder of the session and transfers approximated 300,000 shares.
Losses of fractions were pretty

All these were organized as "mutu-als" on direct advice of the Federal REA authorities, who of course were not then aware that "mutuals" and "memberships" would be ruled to stand on different footings as to taxation.

Now, quite logically, the Federal folks are seeking cooperation of the State REA setup in working out some plan whereby the inequality in treatment of the cooperatives (all organized for identical purposes) can be eliminated.

The total amount involved isn't so big, but it's big enough to mean a lot to the cooperatives. Most of the counties which have put the mutuals on the tax books have assigned a $350 per mile valuation to the lines, which on the full 2,266 miles would come to $793,100. On an average levy of $1.00 per thousand this would make the county ad valorem taxes involved about $7,931 annually.

Then there is the state's six per cent gross income tax. Figures on one cooperative of moderate size and perhaps typical character show a gross annual income of about $20,000. Applying this to the 2,266 miles of mutual lines, the total gross income would run around $110,000, with a resultant tax load of $6,600 per year.

And so the entire tax at stake is in the vicinity of $15,000, perhaps a bit less. The question before the State REA is complicated by the fact that it has to determine something of a state policy—shall or shall not the electrical cooperatives be taxed? In the final analysis only the legislature can determine this matter of policy, but right now the REA is going to be asked to level out an existing and quite apparent inequality.

PITT

To The Citizens Of Pitt County

I have pledged the people of Pitt County my best and faithful service if nominated and elected Register of Deeds. I believe my training and business experience qualify me for this office. I shall endeavor or if elected to render the same friendly service which has been characteristic of this office in the past.

I am glad to reaffirm my statement made at the opening of the campaign that I will, if elected Register of Deeds, appoint Mr. John H. Manning, who has been faithful in office for many years to serve as Deputy.

I will appreciate your active support and your votes for Register of Deeds in the Second Democratic Primary, Saturday, June 22, 1940.

Sincerely,

Amos O. Clark

High Man for Register of Deeds of Pitt County

IT'S 3 INCHES DEEPER

Maybe it's the increased tempo of life... maybe it's because more and more people realize that the best way to keep up is to learn the secret of relaxing when one lies down! Whatever the reason, we've received so many inquiries for a mattress which will aid relaxation that we decided to print the answer.
Here it is. It's called the Pil-O-Rest—and it's made by Karpen!
It consists of a full sized, 7-inch innerspring unit completely
