MODES of the MOMENT

by Adelaide Kerr

If this girl would come in out of the wind, you'd see she's wearing a straight-lined dress, prophetic of narrower skirts for fall. It's white crepe, with bright red corsages. Note the covered-up look—the long sleeves, the not-so-low neckline—it's the trend to modesty.

elty to him and shyness is not a part of his nature. I remember an incident one night in a Broadway night club when the master of ceremonies was about to introduce Congressman Sol Bloom, who had just come in with a party of friends on a sightseeing tour. Maxie had won an important fight, and feeling that this laudatory introduction was intended for him, he leaped to his feet, clasped his fists over his head in traditional pugilistic fashion, and took a bow. No. Maxie is not shy. He never was one to turn his back when the multitude clamored, no matter for whom.

"I got a good tip on a horse," Maxie suddenly yelled. "An 8-1 shot. Can't give you his name because I gave my solemn word I wouldn't tell. Well, maybe I didn't give my word. That horse is Grand Union. . . . He can't miss." (Note: Grand Union ran 4th.)

And what does Maxie do on the stage? There are, frankly, no set rules, and no holds are barred.

REQUEST 4,600 BALES COTTON

Application Made for Mattress-Making Program

Raleigh, July 11.—North Carolina has applied for 1,942 of the 4,600 bales of cotton allotted to this state during the calendar year in connection with the cotton mattress-making program for low income families. It was announced today by Miss Ruth Current, State home demonstration agent of the Extension Service. She is co-director of the cotton mattress project with John W. Goodman, assistant extension director.

Miss Current said that 1,565 mattresses have been made in the counties, with county farm and home agents and Farm Security supervisors cooperating in directing the local programs.

Applications from 19,395 low income farm families in the State have been approved by the State College Triple-A office, which is handling the administrative details of the program. These orders have come in from 68 of the State's 100 counties, and Miss Current says that the other 32 counties are expected to come in to the program within the next few weeks.

"In fact," she reported, "five other counties have already placed their initial orders but these are being held up pending the completion of technical details in filling the applications."

Anson county is leading in orders with 158 bales of cotton requested for 1,560 families. Other counties, in the order of their applications, are: Nash, 990 families; Bladen and Brunswick, 720 each; Johnston and Watauga, 620 each; and Person, Robeson, Union, Wayne, and Yancey, 480 families each.

Low income families in 260 communities in the State are participating in the program, Miss Current declared.

The Business and Professional Women's Club will meet tonight at 8 o'clock at the home of Mrs. J. D. Simpson.

All members are urged to be present as pictures of the State Convention at Blowing Rock will be shown.

Mrs. Hannah Honored.
A lovely bridge party honoring Mrs. Pierson Stancill, Jr., a bride of June 22, was given Tuesday evening by Mrs. R. R. Bennett and Mrs. C. D. Griggs.

The guests were greeted at the door by Mrs. Bennett, who introduced them to Mrs. Stancill and Mrs. Jack Powell, a recent bride. Mrs. Stancill presented a corsage and other guests were given dainty nosegays by Mrs. Griggs. At the conclusion of the game an ice course was served. Mrs. J. H. Harrell was awarded prizes for high score and slams. Consolation went to Mrs. A. E. Gibson. Mrs. Stancill and Mrs. Powell were also remembered with gifts.

Unique Entertainment.
Tonight at eight o'clock a unique entertainment, the "Bubbles Concert" will be given in the Austin Auditorium of the College. The public is again invited to attend free of charge. The town has shown its appreciation of the courtesy extended by giving good audiences for the summer series of entertainments.

The word "bubbles" means literally soap bubbles, not the nursery kind in size or quality, but in competitions and rhythmic patterns that make a good show. "Concerto" indicates the musical program harmonizing with the bubble blowing.

The company consists of the chief bubble blower, Mr. Plasterer, and his wife who assists him, and the accompanist.

Mr. Plasterer was on the Hobby Lobby program last winter. He has been specializing in long life bubbles and has had one of these to live under glass for 150 days. The longest one recorded was found to be 108 days, this was recorded in a British record.

Some of his open air bubbles have lived for as long as forty-two hours. His bubbles range in size from one and a half to two feet.

Birth Announcement.
Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Patrick of Griffon Route One announce the birth of a daughter, Sara Rebecca, on July 4th at Pitt Community hospital.

Miss Patrick was formerly Miss Clara Belle Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Smith of Winterville.

Man About Manhattan

By George Tucker

New York.—The flits that launched a thousand counter-attacks for dancing, prancing, Slapsie, Maxie Rosenbloom, the reformed pugilist, careased his jaw and his cheeks gingerly as he relaxed in the deep cushions of a wicker divan in his dressing room in the Strand theater on Broadway.

"Don't ever let anybody tell you," said Maxie, "that being an actor hasn't got it all over being a prize fighter. In the ring you've got to stop everything that comes your way with your face. Even now, when I think of some of those fights I've been in, my face automatically begins to swell up. But I never was scared. I wasn't even scared of Harry Greb, and he hurt me more than anybody. Hell, I wasn't even scared to go on the stage."

This was an "interlude" between two of the five daily shows that Maxie has during his three-week engagement at the Strand. He had just roared into town with Rudy Vallee and the personnel of the Vallee show, along with Gene Mann, his manager, who is a sharp, cigar-smoking hombre who likes turning down hats and fast horses, and Sidney Fields, his gag-writer, now doubling as a stooge in the Strand audiences.

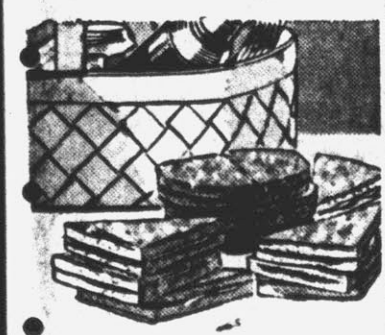

Maxie had never before been on the stage in front of a live audience, although crowds have been no nov-

When something is very easy and pleasant to do, we say it is "just a picnic." Why, then, do so many women persist in making hard work out of a real, back-to-nature picnic? Miles of sandwiches and mountains of fancy fillings are all very well, but how much more of a picnic it is just to take along plenty of Wilson's Certified Canned Meats and Ready-to-Serve Specialties, with stacks of buns and rolls to keep them company! And remember—not all picnics are held in the great outdoors. Porch picnics can be lots of fun, and with these ready-to-eat Wilson Certified Meats, they are a mighty easy way to entertain these hot days.

Hydroponics May Yet Bring Apartment-Grown Vegetables

By SAM JACKSON
AP Feature Service

Berkeley, Calif.—A miniature jungle in the home of Dr. W. F. Gericke forecasts a day when even the most cramped-up apartment dweller may have a garden.

It's another step in the development of "hydroponics," the scientist's widely advertised system of growing plants in water.

In his home here, Dr. Gericke has a series of standardized growing basins, resembling any thing from a saucupan to a suitcase.

As in outdoor water-culture, the unit consists of a tank to hold water and a wire-mesh tray to hold the plant. The wire is covered with vegetable fibre—shredded redwood bark right now—to support seeds and growing stalks.

The roots grow down into the water. About once a month the grower pours in powdered chemicals that supply nutrients plants normally would obtain from soil.

Gericke is cultivating some 30 kinds of plants, some edible, some ornamental, studying their development and apparent needs. All the plants are doing well.

"It appears physiologically possible to grow any field, vegetable or floral crop without soil," says Gericke. But with some of the cost of equipment or of chemicals precludes economic production.

"Crops like potatoes and tomatoes, which are composed predominantly of water, can be grown economically, and that appears true of various floral crops."

When Gericke announced his experiment in 1938 he told of heavy-bearing tomato vines 20 feet tall, giant tobacco plants and potatoes growing so thickly they crowded each other, with one crop succeeding another immediately.

Curious gardeners believed the secret must lie in a closely guarded chemical formula. But in a book he has just published Gericke says the ingredients are ten common chemicals—and that the real secret of success is correct procedure.

Virginia Vaughn sizes up a leafy cornstalk produced in Dr. Gericke's outdoor hydroponics garden.

Warren-Daniels Dispute May Enliven Convention

Reflector Bureau.
By HENRY AVERILL

Raleigh, July 11.—Possibility of a brisk skirmish between Lindsay Warren, First District congressman, and Joseph Daniels, ambassador to Mexico, seems to be about the only chance for any newsworthy controversy in the Tar Heel delegation to the Democratic national convention.

This possibility arises from clashing New Deal and Anti-New Deal views in the delegation and resulting efforts of each faction to get its man on the platform committee.

The North Carolina delegation, like all others, is entitled to have a representative on the committee which will draft the party's 1940 platform. New Dealers are likely to back Ambassador Daniels for the post, anti's will most likely advance Warren as their choice.

Although the delegation is instructed for President Roosevelt if his name is presented to the convention and although there was apparent at the state convention a very strong loyalty to the President's program as well as to his person, the makeup of the Tar Heel delegation is such as to indicate that it isn't wholly and entirely New Dealish in complexion. In fact, if it should come down to actual hostilities and there should be a finish fight over the platform post it is highly probable that Warren would win out.

Of course the congressman has given the utmost loyalty to practically all New Deal measures before the House since 1933 and has on more than one occasion led the Administration forces in his battles; but it is equally true that he is known as a crony of the reactionary Vice President John Garner and as one of the Gardner-Hoey political clique in North Carolina.

This Antis, therefore, would much rather have him on the platform committee than Daniels, who would unquestionably go all out for the program of the President.

The single post isn't worth much fighting for, when the convention business as a whole is taken into consideration, but New Dealers feel that they must be on the alert and ever-watchful to prevent the Old Guard conservatives from getting control of any important function of the party—and drawing up the platform is certainly one of them despite the fact that little or no attention is paid by the public to political planks and still less by the politicians after they have been used in getting office.

Unless there does develop at least a modicum of controversy over this issue there is scant likelihood of any fireworks in the Tar Heel delegation.

Once upon a time there was talk of opposition to Lon Folger as National Committeeman, but this seems to have been talk only.

Once upon a time there seems some possibility that the delegates might have something to say about the identity of the party's presidential nominee, but that possibility seems to have gone up in smoke. It will be either President Roosevelt or his personally picked and presented stooge.

Wherefore, unless the boys can get just a little bit "het up" over a platform committee position, or something of similar nature, it looks like they might just as well stay home.

THEY'LL LIKE THIS DELICIOUS BACON FONDUE

NEXT TIME you are in a quandary as to what to serve for lunch or family dinner, try a bacon fondue. It is as nourishing and palatable as it is simple to make. Its chief ingredients are those twin favorites, bacon and eggs, so that with the generous amount of milk called for, only a fresh green vegetable or salad is required to round out a well-balanced meal.

First cut in small squares eight he-man slices of family style bacon. (Kitchen shears are ideal for this purpose.) This type of bacon is ideal for this use as it is cut somewhat thicker than usual. It comes in thirty two-pound packages,

Offer New Models Of General Motors Truck

Sixteen new Trunk-Line tractors—engineered to meet the most exacting demands of tractor-trailer operators and ranging in gross combination weight from 32,000 to 50,000 pounds—have been announced as part of the comprehensive 1940 General Motors Truck line.

Offered in both conventional and cab-over-engine design, with either gasoline or Diesel power, these new GMC models are designed to provide a brand of performance that will establish new standards in heavy highway hauling.

Featuring high horse-power with low chassis weight, these units offer as standard equipment the next size larger power-plant than corresponding standard models, and dual performance axles throughout.

In announcing these new GMC models, J. P. Little, vice president directing sales of General Motors Truck & Coach Division, said:

"They offer features unmatched in this field—features that operators will want—GMC Super-Duty engines that will outpull all others, engine for engine, size for size; easy-shifting transmissions; friction-free ball-bearing steering; dual performance axles with ten speeds forward with gear spacings that make it easy for drivers to get heavily-loaded equipment up top speed.

"These are but a few of the many features that establish these units as tractors of value."

Local Penders Stores Announce New Hours

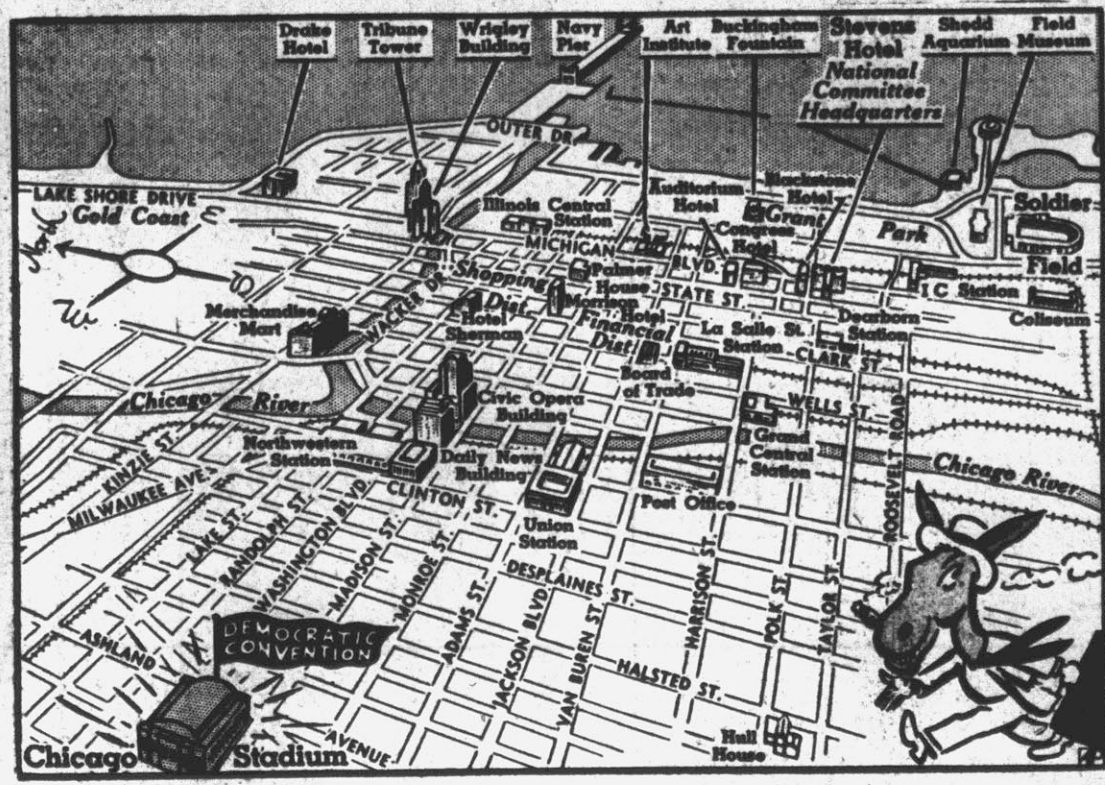

Joe Norman, manager of the Pender Grocery company at the corner of Evans and Fourth streets, today announced that effective Monday, July 15, the stores would remain open until 6:30 each afternoon, except of course, on Wednesday afternoon during the summer months, and on Saturdays.

The store will open mornings at 7:30 and close at 6:30. On Saturdays it will remain open until 10 p. m.

Drillers Find Fish

Alamosa, Colo.—(AP)—Alamosa drilled an artesian water well and got gas and fish. City Engineer D. H. Edwards is conducting tests to determine if the gas that bubbles upward with water may be illuminating gas and of sufficient quantity to heat homes. Likewise he is investigating the source of many little fish that swim around in the well water.

Where Democrats Will Swarm

Democrats will be thick over this area of downtown Chicago about July 15, when the national convention opens. The city expects 50,000 visitors and that they'll spend $1,500,000. The convention meets in Chicago Stadium (lower left), not far from the Loop. But night clubs, cafes, stores, race tracks and ball parks look forward to a share of the attendance.

Allergies are making life miserable for hostesses, especially for those who do their own cooking. That's a thought to take along when you pack your suitcase for a visit this summer.

It's maddening to plan a delicious meal for a guest who comes to the table to say, "I'm sorry I can't eat that. My hay fever, you know." Allergic people ought to find some nice way of telling the awful truth before a meal gets to the planning stage. And if you've let yourself get diet-crazy without real excuse, it's time you backed up, anyhow.

There are other thoughtless guests who let food likes and dislikes rule them—the man who must have a favorite dish every meal, the per-

Some time ago I saw a motion pic-

Fish, when they are small, can eat have fed them for a few weeks, they cannot get out through that same aperture. Then they have to stay.

To keep the numbers from increasing too much, the larger fish are scoured out once in a while and hung up in the fish market.

A generation ago practically every college student was familiar with that famous chapter on habit found in William James' text book of psychology. The present generation knows very little about it. But it might be read with profit by every generation. It gives a vivid picture of how habit grows by feeding until we find ourselves at last prisoners and apparently unable to escape the disadvantage of our ways of life.
Habit formation begins quite naturally and innocently. Like the little fish, we go through a small aperture in response to desire, and then after our desires are fed, we find we cannot go out the same place we went in.

Many a man, like the poor fish, has found himself hung up in the fish market because of an easy, indolent attitude toward life which finally involved him in trouble.

NO MORE BOON-DOGLING

There have been noticeable developments in respect to financing the vastly costly national defense program. First, it is widely urged that the pay-as-you-go plan be followed as much as possible, even though heavy tax increases prove necessary.

Second, there is general demand that all other government expenditures be drastically reduced — and that non-essential bureaus and departments be entirely eliminated.

There never was a time when businesslike planning of the affairs of government was more necessary to the national welfare. No longer can we afford boondoggling.
No longer can we afford the old log-rolling practice, whereby congressmen and senators are virtually forced to vote for unnecessary expenditures in return for promises that other Congressmen and senators will approve pet expenditures for their districts. No longer can we afford "experiments" which disrupt industry and labor, and pamper the incompetent and lazy while the hard-working and efficient pay the bill.

The American people are ready to make great sacrices. They will pay every cent necessary for defense without grumbling. But they are going to insist that every cent goes for an essential rather than a political purpose. They are going to demand that their sacrifices are not in vain. They want real statesmanship, motivated by high patriotism, irrespective of party labels, and they do not want local short-sightedness and selfishness.

Washington
Daybook
By Jack Stewart

Washington.—If you are not thinking about what the nomination of Wendell L. Willkie has done to "the third term" and the New Deal, you should be because Washington is talking about nothing else.

Trying to sift all this talk down and pass it on to you is a chore, but I'm going to try. Eliminating all the guessers who are shooting blind (and still may be right), the situation, as the capital politicians see it, drops into two grooves: (1) Roosevelt must run again; (2) Roosevelt won't run again.

Digest Of Opinion

That may sound trite, but it really isn't and out of a mere summary of these two opposites we may get somewhere. Let's see.
1. There are scads of politicians here who feel that FDR must be drafted to show Flash Willkie up as a mere flash in the pan. They concede that Willkie has some appeal to the susceptible American imagination, but say he really is just a smart Democratic (there was a time back in the home town when they called him a radical and the extremists thought of him as a "dangerous red") utilities man, who has switched his allegiance to the Republicans.

Because Roosevelt is the only man, these observers declare, who can "save us from Willkie," he will have to answer the draft of his party, no matter what his personal inclinations are.
2. Here is where a good many wild guesses, as well as some darn good political reasoning, come into the picture.

Nobody intimate with the President. I mean those who really know him — ever has said that he wants to run again. On the other hand, these persons insist that the President is tired and convinced that his health would suffer from a third term. If he could be sure all the things he has fought for, nationally and internationally, would be carried on, they say, he would be happy to pass the ball to some one else and return to the sidelines.

But in view of the fact that Willkie seems to be a formidable opponent and the Democratic party is certain to demand that Roosevelt run again, what arguments could be put up that would absolve him from the charge of quitting in the middle of the road?
There are several, but only one or two need be mentioned.

Just Suppose . . .
Suppose Roosevelt said: "Nominate (for example) Hull and I'll take the stump in his behalf." Wouldn't FDR be as vital a factor campaigning for his own choice as he would be campaigning for himself? There would then be no "third-term issue." Nobody could assume the President of wanting to be a dictator.

Add to these considerations, the facts that Roosevelt has very little to gain if he runs again and a terrible amount to lose if he loses; that many of his backers feel he could serve the party best by stepping out now and kibitzing through the next four years, no matter who goes in (and maybe run again in 1944); that he really is tired and does need a rest; that his family, including Mrs. R., is against his serving another term; and that, if Willkie should be elected over a New Deal candidate, the Roosevelt ideology would, in its broad lines, be carried forward anyhow, since Willkie and the President really are in accord on most major issues.

These are things being said in Washington. The conclusion, at the moment, is that Roosevelt should not run again . . . but it is far from a universal conclusion. The capital is certain that he will be drafted.
The point is, what will he do then? Right now, the wisecracks feel the odds are that he will name some one like Cordell Hull, Paul McNutt, or Robert Jackson to carry on, throw himself into the campaign as Republican Opponent No.
1, and then, no matter who is named in November, ride the tail of the kite to be sure that it doesn't get too far out of New Deal currents.

tor John D. Larkins, Jr., shut them up after a visit here on the eve of going to the Chicago convention.

The N. and O. "closed" them right after the State convention and again after the primary, but somehow or other Dr. McDonald and Senator Larkins just wouldn't be convinced of it.

North Carolina's Probation Commission is wondering when its work will reach a point where there will be something like a balance between the number of those put on probation each month and those going "off probation" for one reason or other.

So far the Commission had handled, in its approximately two and half years of existence, some 4000 cases, or which about 2900 are still "active" — that is to say there are about that many probationers now under supervision.

When the system was first set up it was obvious that there would be few going "off" probation and many going on, but some of these days there will be a leveling out to where one about equals the other.
Commissioner Harry Sample says that from 100 to 175 probationers are now being added monthly, while only about 50 probation sentences are expiring, or otherwise being ended, in the same time.

Strange as it may seem, of proba-ly worse than a bald headed Shriner with a red fez or an overstuffed Legionnaire in a 40 and 8 smock.

In robes, bathing suits or trousers, the jurists will still seem in-ferably bad interpreters of the common law and the statutes, in the eyes of the losing lawyers.

North Carolina gets three different sets of highway fatalities every month, and they never agree. The Board of Health puts out one, the Highway Patrol another and the Highway Safety Division still a third, and if ever the trio had the same figures it would be nothing short of a miracle.

Explanation of the differences is quite plausible. The Board of Health reports deaths when and as it receives certificates from the counties, regardless of the date of accident or injury. The Patrol reports only the fatalities which occur in accidents investigated by its members. The Safety Division waits until it gets all possible information from its monthly pronouncement.

Still, the three different reports are a bit confusing to the general public, not in the know as to why and wherefore, and it seems that something could be done about it.

Casual Slaughterers

By VIRGINIA HANSON

YESTERDAY: Colonel Pennant, Mini and Felicia leave the beach party but the chaplain regretfully remains, Ivan continues to woo the others. Finally Adam can stand him no longer, drags Ray away, and kisses her.

Chapter 13
Strange Embrace

THIS is not our story — Adam's and mine. But things happen as they happen, and the smallest thing can sometimes determine the course of vital events. Because Adam left for New York on Monday, I was to find myself tossed in tragedy, holding clues I did not recognize, information I could not bring myself to divulge; was to escape losing my life by the narrowest of margins. And though I did not know it until later, Adam went to New York because he lost his head that night and kissed me.

For somewhere in the middle that first lost all pretense of playfulness. I was not surprised.
I had been ready for it, waiting a little, but willing to let Adam do things in his own way.
I sighed as his arms tightened and I felt his heart begin to drum under my cheek.

Then suddenly he was taking my arms from around his neck, putting me away from him gently but firmly. He clamped his lips looking very white, as if he was moonlight, and started to turn away.

"But, Adam, what's the matter?"
"Nothing," he said roughly and began walking on down the beach.

I kept at his heels for a few paces, fighting down the quick temper that, along with my red hair, came to me from an Irish grandmother.

"It's very flattering that kissing me should make such a difference in your life," I said coldly.
"But it's a little confusing, too.
Perhaps you'll explain."

"Not now," he said over his shoulder. "Run along."

"Now?"
He stopped and faced me.
"Not now," he repeated. "And I'm not going to apologize. You're not a fool."

He turned me, gave me a little shove, his hands deliberately impersonal.

"Run along back to the party.
I've got to think, and you distract me." He flashed me the ghost of a smile. "You're not really angry, you know. You're much too proud of yourself."

Words jammed in my throat. I watched him go, a swift, white figure against the sky line. Then I walked slowly back to the log and sank down on it.

Adam was partly right. What I felt was not anger. Neither was it self-congratulation that I had at last pierced his shell. I was scared.

I had always known there was something about Adam that was not like other people, but in the past year when he had come oftener and oftener to see me in Chicago, and I had found in him a rarely satisfying companion, I had deliberately thrust that knowledge into the back of my mind.

They said in the army that he was unchangeable. He was tremendously popular — men liked and respected him, women laid siege to him, with what measure of success only they and Adam could relate. It seemed to me significant that the army, that huge, affectionate, quarrelsome, inquisitive family, were unanimous in believing that no one, man or woman, had ever won past his smiling guard to the real Adam Drew.

I sat on the log and admitted to myself that I had not. Until, perhaps, tonight.

I got up from the log and consciously said goodbye to an arrogant, that had been part of my armor since I cut off my pigtail.
It was too late for armor against Adam; and I was afraid to be arrogant with fate.

But humility was a drab garment. Heavy-hearted, I started back the way we had come.

Something Frightening

IF THERE is comfort in shared misery, I was denied even that; for Julia had cast hers off like a worn-out dress. She and Gerald were turning cartwheels in the moonlight with the effortless precision of a vaudeville team.

"I believe you've got something there," I said, pausing in admiration.

"Soul mates," said Gerald, halting right side up.
Julia stood on her hands and waggled one foot at us. Gerald caught her heels, lowered them to the sand. "Let's wrestle. I'll show you some jujitsu."

"Oh, Gerald! Before all these people?"
I pursued her laughing down the beach. Feeling lonely and disconsolate, I looked about me. All these people had dwindled to one — Jeff, lying apparently asleep, on an army blanket. The chaplain was a small figure ploving through the loose sand and disappearing behind a sparse thicket of scrub. Not poison oak, I hoped; but the thought was not enough to cheer me.

There seemed nothing to do but follow Jeff's example. I straightened another blanket, choosing the one farthest from Jeff, and stretched out on it, glaring re-sentfully at the round, beaming face of the moon.

Naval Drive Aids
State Employment

North Carolina will benefit in increased employment, wages and sales resulting from the new Navy expansion program involving construction of 83 combat vessels at a cost of $1,140,000,000.
R. Leigh Stevens, staff representative for the Office of Government Reports, stated today that North Carolina manufactures or produces cotton goods, canvas, lumber, copper, aluminum, mica, and to a lesser extent many other products used in modern naval construction.

"On the basis of Bureau of Labor Statistics estimates, the construction of 83 vessels will result in $445,000,000 in wages to labor employed in the shipyards," Mr. Stevens said. "But even more will be spent in wages in the mines and factories where the raw materials are produced and in transportation."

"According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics estimate that 41 per cent of total costs in private shipyards is spent for materials, more than $67,000,000 will be expended for materials and manufactured products for naval expansion. There are over 200 major industries producing materials used in ship construction," Mr. Stevens said.

More than 549,000,000 man-hours of work in shipyards and more than 647,000,000 man-hours of work at mines, factories, and in transporting materials will be created by the new program, providing sufficient work to keep the equivalent of 342,- 000 workers employed two full years.
"Although there are more than 40 types of skilled mechanics needed to build a ship," Mr. Stevens said, "the actual building of the ship requires less labor than does the production of the materials used."

KINSTON GETS TWIN VICTORY

RACE TIGHTENING IN GREENVILLE SOFTBALL LEAGUE

Eagles Come From Behind In Each Contest

The Eagles lost both the afternoon and night contests with Kinston by one-run margins yesterday at Guy Smith park, dropping the first game 2-1 and the evening affair 3-2.

The Eagles came from behind in both engagements to overcome Greenville leads.

Skipper Rube Wilson had his charges out in front in last night's game with a homer in the third with Kracke, who had singled, on base. Kinston had tallied one in the second frame. The Eagles made one more in the fifth and eighth to come out victorious.

The afternoon game was a story-book finish—so far as Kinston fans were concerned. With the knot tied at one-all, Roy Kennedy came to bat in the eighth and clouted a homer to win the game.

In the afternoon affair Crowe, who got four for four, made Greenville's lone tally. He doubled in the second, went to third on Jenkins single and came home on an attempted double-steal, Jenkins being caught.

How To Play Second Base

By CHARLES GERRINGER
Detroit Tigers Star
AP Feature Service

So you'd like to be a second baseman? I don't blame you. I think it's one of the most interesting jobs on the diamond—a spot where the good player is divided by only a hair-line from the superb player.

Just that sharper knack of doing things a split-second faster often makes the difference. That element means the difference between an ordinary second baseman and a second baseman who is a whiz at double plays.

The afternoon game was a story-book finish—so far as Kinston fans were concerned. With the knot tied at one-all, Roy Kennedy came to bat in the eighth and clouted a homer to win the game.

B-H TEAM IS IN SECOND PLACE

Water-Light Boys are Dropped To Cellar Of Standings

Now about the fundamentals of his position. He fields all ground balls left to the right of second—even those closer to first—to allow the first baseman to hold his base.

The second baseman's most important backing-up duties are at first when the first-sacker is pulled into the diamond on a fielding play.

Footwork is important for this position. Your good first baseman will field most grounders off his right foot, allowing him to make the catch and throw in almost one motion.

Teamwork with the shortstop is important. I always make my throws to the shortstop, when he covers second, with a counter-clockwise snap of the wrist—never a toss.

Remember the fundamentals first—then work on teamwork. And those fundamentals, again, are: Clean, fast fielding; expert footwork; quick, sharp throws. Get letter perfect in those details and then go on to develop your own specialized technique and teamwork.

Teamwork with the shortstop is important. I always make my throws to the shortstop, when he covers second, with a counter-clockwise snap of the wrist—never a toss.

The second baseman acts as relay man on batted balls to the outfield on the right side of the bag. When a hit goes out over the left side of the bag I take second or back up the shortstop if he takes it.

LAW VAGUE ON INDEPENDENTS

Election Rules Ambiguous As To Candidates

Reflector Bureau.
By HENRY AVERILL

Raleigh, July 11.—Will Lucas, chairman of the State Board of Elections has discovered an ambiguity in the present election laws with regard to the filing of independent candidates. He is probably already drafting an amendment for action by the 1941 General Assembly.

In Pasquotank there appears to have been some talk of an independent candidate against F. Webb Williams, Democratic nominee for the House at the November election, and this may be what has called Mr. Lucas' attention to the statute. The talked candidacy there, however, has nothing to do with the ambiguity.

At the Attorney General's office surprise was expressed that there should be any doubt about the Pasquotank situation. The law, it was said, is crystal clear in its prohibition of any independent candidacy for the House, or any other state or county office at this time.

The governing statute provides specifically that in order to qualify as an independent candidate there must be filed with the board of elections a petition signed by 25 per cent of the qualified voters as of the last gubernatorial election and further provides that this petition must be filed "at or before the time prescribed by law for the nomination of candidates" for the office sought. This absolutely eliminates any possibility of an independent candidate filing after the primary (except to fill a vacancy arising after the primary) but leaves grave doubt whether an independent must file his petition "at or before" the deadline for filing primary candidates or whether the would-be independent may file up to the date of voting in the primary. In other words, it depends on the interpretation of the "time of nomination."

Hollywood

Sights And Sounds
By Robbie Coons

Hollywood. — Lynne Overman should wait a while before collecting a bet he has won. It's a nickel bet with Shirley Temple. It was made six years ago, when Overman was making his first picture and Shirley, then little known, was "also in the cast" of "Little Miss Marker."

"I knew then she'd be the biggest box-office draw Hollywood had ever seen," says Lynne, "because she was the most talented youngster I'd ever met. But I also bet her a nickel I'd last in pictures longer than she would; Shirley has retired, and here I am still struggling along."

Shirley, retired at 11, doubtless

Stimson Becomes New War Chief

Henry A. Stimson, a Republican, became the new secretary of war succeeding Harry Woodring, resigned, as he was sworn in before President Roosevelt in the chief executive's office in Washington. Picture shows Stimson (center) taking oath administered by Percy E. Nelson (right), administrative assistant in the executive service.

can afford to pay the bet, but I say Overman oughtn't to be too sure of victory. Sooner or later, Shirley will be back. . . the overtures had begun even before her "retirement" was officially announced. . .

There's an interesting example of Hollywood's new reckless name-calling in the movie "Mystery Sea Raider." It's a war piece, the City of Flint incident and the Almark prison ship affair combined in fiction. There's no doubt about the countries involved; one of the opening shots shows the giant Bremen leaving New York harbor for its ghostly escape through the war zone; Onslow Stevens plays a German secret agent who commissions a rundown freighter, captained by Henry Wilcoxon, for unknown war duty. The girl (Carole Landis) goes along, of course. . .

Movie decorators, with all that money to spend, aren't infallible. In "Rhythm on the River" Basil Rathbone occupies an elegant, modern penthouse apartment. One entire wall is covered with books to the 20-foot ceiling. The effect is striking, except that—as Rathbone pointed out—he wasn't quite tall enough to reach the top shelf. So practical a detail as a library ladder had been omitted. . .

That Jackie Cooper has grown up for sure, if appearances don't lie, which they do. You can see him on the set of "The Return of Frank James," his jaws working vigorously on a chew of plug tobacco—but it's only old-fashioned licorice root, which is right for technical. . .

Samuel Goldwyn, war or no war was talking of making a picture in England to use some of his cash "frozen" there, and expressed a desire to "borrow" his ex-star David Niven from the British army for it. "Will Sam ask Hitler to 'shoot around' David for a while?" asked somebody with a macabre sense of humor. . .

Madeleine Carroll, planning her flying trip to France, was counting on the refuge of her villa south of Paris. A home for orphans now, the house is equipped with plenty of underground shelters from air raids.
