ORDER PLACED FOR 627 TANKS FOR U. S. ARMY

Represents Largest Peace-Time Purchase in History

TO BE EQUIPPED WITH BIG GUNS

Sub-Committee To Start Work On Latest Request For Defense Funds Next Monday

Washington, July 15.—(AP)—The army ordered 627 light tanks from the American Car and Foundry company today, the largest single tank purchase in peace-time history. The contract price was approximately $11,000,000.

The tanks, about 12 tons each, will be manufactured at the company's Berwick, Penn., plant. Each will be equipped with four 30-caliber and one 45-caliber machineguns and one 37 millimeter anti-aircraft gun.

Meanwhile Rep. Woodrum (D.-Va.) announced after a White House visit that a House Appropriations sub-committee would start hearings next Monday on President Roosevelt's request for an additional defense appropriation of $4,800,000,000.

"We expect to go into the whole defense program very thoroughly," Woodrum said. "In checking up on these vast estimates. There is much routine work to be done and the House committee wants to be absolutely sure that when the funds are appropriated they are going to do two things: 1—Get 100 per cent value for the money spent, and 2—Get quick and effective action."

Ten Defendants In City Court Today

Of the ten persons tried in Municipal recorder's court this morning, five were found not guilty and prayer for judgment was continued in another.

Two white defendants, Clifton Moore and Quinn Bostic, were ordered to pay $5 each, the sums to be applied on court costs, on charges of crashing a red light.

Lindsay Mills, colored, was tried on an abandonment and non-support charge, but prayer for judgment was continued.

Jonah Williams, colored, was given 30 days, suspended upon payment of costs, on a charge of drunkenness.

S. L. Rowland, white, and Cephus Hyman, colored, were acquitted of charges of careless and reckless driving. Jesse Smith, colored, was acquitted of charges of trespassing and assault with a deadly weapon on a female.

Jesse Cannon, white, was acquitted of a traffic violation. James Teel, colored, also was acquitted of a charge of careless and reckless driving.

Price Is Set For Yankee Ball Club

Chicago, July 15.—(AP)—Attorney J. T. Mahoney of New York said today he expected the New York Yankee baseball club would be sold by the Jacob Ruppert estate to a syndicate headed by Postmaster General James A. Farley within two weeks at a price of $4,000,000.

"Negotiations are going along fine," said Mahoney, former president of the Amateur Athletic Union and personal attorney to George Ruppert, brother of the late owner of the world's champions.

"The contract carrying the price of $4,000,000 has been submitted by the Rupperts to Basil O'Connor who is representing Mr. Farley. I know there has been a lot of speculation on this thing, but you can say it's gone from the speculative to the very realistic stage."

Quotas

Washington, July 15.—(AP)—Secretary Wallace approved today blue-cured tobacco marketing quota regulations for the 1940-41 marketing year.

Operations of each tobacco farm will receive a marketing card. If the acreage of tobacco harvested does not exceed the acreage allotment a "within quota card" will be issued for the farm and its production of tobacco can be marketed without penalty. If the acreage harvested exceeds the allotment then an "excess marketing card" will be issued showing the amount of excess and the amount of tobacco marketed on which a penalty will be collected.

Royal Princesses Stay In England To Face War

Other English children have been coming to the United States in boat loads to escape the perils of war—but King George and Queen Elizabeth have firmly rejected suggestions that their daughters, Princess Elizabeth (left), heir presumptive to the throne, and her sister, Princess Margaret (right), be sent out of the country, according to the London Daily Mail. And so here are the little princesses riding in a pony cart at the country residence where they are staying during the war. The king and queen were said to prefer to share "family perils" with other parents whose children could not leave. On July 11 King George narrowly escaped death when a southern England point was bombed heavily by German air raiders a few minutes after he had visited it on an inspection tour.

Ultimatum May Be Served On Britain To Surrender

KELLY CALLS FOR 3RD TERM

Turns Welcoming Address Into Draft Roosevelt Talk

Chicago, July 15.—(AP)—A demand that Franklin D. Roosevelt be drafted for a third term because he is "the kind of man that mankind needs" was sounded during the first hour of the Democratic National convention today by Mayor Edward J. Kelly of Chicago.

The mayor turned his scheduled "welcoming speech" into a "draft Roosevelt" demand as delegates listened through nearly an hour of speeches and formalities which started the convention toward a presidential nomination.

"The salvation of this nation rests in one man because of his great experience and sincere humanitarian thinking," Kelly said. "That is why I am saying that this great democratic convention, with the eyes of an unhappy world upon it, will stand with all unity."

Only a few minutes before the President talked with Chairman James A. Farley by telephone from the White House to wish him a successful convention and asked "how things are going."

Farley's response was "okay."

A burst of applause greeted Kelly's "draft" speech, but Farley cut the demonstration short with his reply.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, told democratic platform framers that if Roosevelt was "permitted" to handle the unemployment problem he would find a solution for it.

Name Officer For Fort Bragg Unit

Washington, July 15.—(AP)—Brig.-Gen. Francis W. Honeycutt, now commanding Fort Stotsenberg in the Philippines, has been designated by the War Department to command the ninth division being organized at Fort Bragg, N. C., and will sail for the United States soon.

Born on Alcatraz Island, Calif., when it was an army post, General Honeycutt was graduated at West Point in 1904, served in the war plans division during the World War and later as a member of the faculty of the Army War college and as assistant commandant of the command and general staff school.

Five Persons Die As Plane Crashes

Santa Monica, Calif., July 15.—(AP)—Five persons were killed in an airplane crash today near Marquette, Calif., the office of the Civil Aeronautics Authority was informed.

A report from the chief of police of Fresno stated that the plane carried two women and two men as passengers.

Axis Powers Would Offer Alternative Of Destruction

Rome, July 15.—(AP)—Authoritative Fascist Editor Virginio Gayda indicated today that Germany and Italy would serve an ultimatum on Great Britain within a few days, offering her a choice between surrender or destruction.

Gayda's editorials frequently reflect official opinion.

"Preparations will be completed within a very few days," he said. "Britain will have to settle her last account. She will have to choose between submission to the renovating restorative forces of Europe or extremely grim violent war in which inexorable destruction, a fateful precipitous step toward final overthrow, will be measured not by years or weeks of which Churchill spoke, but by days or hours."

British Red Cross Committee Active

An American Red Cross Committee, in London, with Ambassador Kennedy as honorary chairman, has been formed as a liaison group to work with the British Red Cross and the Personal Service League.

The committee will recommend relief for the sick and wounded armed forces and civilians as may be furnished by the American Red Cross. Mr. Daniel Grant, an official of the English branch of the Guaranty Trust Company, is chairman. Mr. David E. K. Bruce, a member of the War Relief Advisory Committee of the American Red Cross, has left for London where he will be a delegate of the Red Cross. Bowen McCoy has been ordered from Bilbao to London to act as executive officer for Mr. Grant's Committee.

A total of $781,446 has been expended or committed by the American Red Cross for war relief in England. In addition, chapter produced goods with a material value of $62,000 have been shipped to that country.

The American Red Cross last week cabled its committee in London to purchase material for the making of pajamas for war wounded soldiers. Approximately $30,000 was appropriated for this purpose so that English women volunteers can begin producing the pajamas.

Only four marriage licenses were issued at the Pitt county Register of Deeds office during the past week, three going to colored couples and one to white. The four bring to 152 the total issued here this year.

White couple: Julius Holloway and Julia Morris of Bethel.

Colored: Leslie Matthews and Myrtle Wilson of Pictious; Macon Morgan and Arel Moore of Pountain; John Mann and Ella Burney of Winterville.

Belvoir Resident Claimed By Death

Elmer D. Jayne, 74, Belvoir resident, died suddenly Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at his home with a heart attack. Funeral services were conducted Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock from Gum Swamp Free Will Baptist Church by Rev. D. W. Alexander of Bethel. Burial was in the church yard.

Mr. Jayne was a member of Gum Swamp Church. He was born in the state of New York and had made his home in Pitt county for a number of years.

Negro Being Held On Peeping Tom Charge

William H. Roach, Negro of Swift Creek township, is being held in the county jail on a "peeping Tom" charge. The Negro is alleged to have been caught about the home of Ed Venter about 6:45 o'clock Saturday night.

According to officers, feeling against the Negro was running high in the community and threats were made against him.

The Negro was the only arrest made by county officers during the day week-end.

AIRPORT HERE IS DISCUSSED

CAA Engineer Visits Site and Talks With Officials

H. H. Perkins, engineer for the Civil Aeronautics Authority of Atlanta, Ga., today inspected the proposed landing field site and met with the Greenville Board of Aldermen and members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, sponsors of the project.

Following today's developments Mayor Jack Spain and City Engineer H. L. Rivers will go to Raleigh to confer with WPA officials. Mr. Rivers also was asked to make a topographical map of the proposed site, the Hines property north of Tar River.

Mr. Perkins said there were only two objections to the proposed site and added that these were not serious. He explained that the location is not on the highway and that it was close to the radio tower.

He estimated that a project proposed for Greenville would cost approximately $30,000.

Legion Will Sponsor Marksman's Tourney

Arthur B. Corey today revealed that the state department of the American Legion was sponsoring a rifle marksmanship tournament to be held at Fort Bragg on August 27-28 and urged any local legionnaire interested in entering to advise him immediately.

It is hoped to have at least one three-man team from this port and more if possible. Mr. Corey said he planned to attend the tournament and was anxious to get at least two more from here.

Registration fee is one dollar and the cost, including room, board, use of rifles and ammunition, will be only two dollars per day.

Four Couples Secure Licenses Past Week

Only four marriage licenses were issued at the Pitt county Register of Deeds office during the past week, three going to colored couples and one to white. The four bring to 152 the total issued here this year.

White couple: Julius Holloway and Julia Morris of Bethel.

Colored: Leslie Matthews and Myrtle Wilson of Pictious; Macon Morgan and Arel Moore of Pountain; John Mann and Ella Burney of Winterville.

No Date Set To Open Local Hosiery Mill

Superintendent Adam K. Miller, of the Davis Hosiery mill here, declared today that no date had been set for re-opening the plant, which has been closed for about a month because of conditions credited to the European war.

It was indicated, however, that the mills probably would resume operation in the near future, although nothing definite was stated by Superintendent Miller. He did declare, however, that announcement of the re-opening would be made a day or two in advance.

AXIS NATIONS EXACT TOLL ON BRITISH SHIPS

Both Rome And Berlin Report Telling Blows

CLAIM WINS IN MEDITERRANEAN

British Planes Also Said To Have Been Shot Down By German And Italian Forces

Rome, July 15.—(AP)—Destruction of two British submarines and a destroyer in week-end naval operations in the Mediterranean were claimed by Italy today.

An Italian submarine, the high command said, sank a British submarine and a destroyer in the western Mediterranean. It had reported yesterday that an Italian destroyer also sank a British submarine.

(Loss of a destroyer and one submarine is acknowledged by the British. The Admiralty disclosed yesterday the sinking of the 1350-ton destroyer Escort, torpedoed in the western Mediterranean. It said today the 760-ton submarine Shark was "overdue and presumed to be lost," but did not say where.)

Damage of undisclosed extent was said to have been heaped on British warships in the Mediterranean, pictured by Italy as struggling home to Alexandria under aerial pounding after a hapless foray in the open sea. Battleships and cruisers were reported struck "repeatedly" with heavy bombs.

A total of ten British planes destroyed was counted for the week-end, both over the Mediterranean and in Africa where, the communiques said, Italian scouting planes also machinegunned British troops near Buna, East Africa.

On the debit side, the Italians acknowledged one of their submarines was missing and one of their planes had failed to return to its base.

Berlin, July 15.—(AP)—Three British merchantmen totalling 17,000 tons were sunk and a destroyer, an auxiliary cruiser and four other merchantships were damaged Sunday by German bombers which raided convoys in the English channel, the German high command declared today.

During the night of July 14-15 British planes "dropped bombs aimlessly" in northern and west Germany, causing slight property damage, the communiques said.

Two British planes were reported shot down by anti-aircraft fire while German fighting planes accounted for another.

Tallest Man Dies Of Foot Infection

Manistee, Mich., July 15.—(AP)—Robert Wadlow, the 22-year-old Alton, Ill., "giant" who was eight feet nine and one-half inches tall was believed to be the world's tallest man, died here early today from complications following a foot infection.

Wadlow, who was making a professional appearance as the "world's tallest man," suffered an infection in his left ankle less than a fortnight ago.

One Wreck Reported By Local Patrolmen

One automobile accident was investigated by State Patrolmen during the week-end, this being at Hanrahan's crossroads on the Ayden-Grifton highway about 6:45 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

According to Patrolman Teague who made the investigation, cars driven by William M. Cheek of Kingston and J. C. Rasbury, also of Kingston, were involved in a collision when Rasbury entered the highway from a side road. Two women in the Cheek car were taken to a Kingston hospital, but injuries were not believed critical.

Mrs. Ange was formerly Miss Annie Smith, daughter of B. T. and Mrs. Pauline Evans Smith of Pitt county. She had made her home in Florida for the past 38 years.

Mrs. Annie L. Ange Dies In Orlando, Fla.

Word was received here today of the death yesterday of Mrs. Annie L. Ange of Orlando, Fla., but a native of Pitt county.

Funeral services and burial will be conducted at Reedy Branch church, at a date and hour to be designated later.

Last Rites Held For Little David Dixon

David, Jr., seven-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. David Dixon, of the Sheldermine community, died Sunday morning at Tayloe hospital, in Washington.

Funeral services were conducted at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon from the home of the grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Sutton of Calico Cross Roads, by Rev. Duff Toler of Chocowinity. Burial followed in the family cemetery near the home. Besides the parents, a sister, Mavis Dixon, survives.

Contribution Of $5.00 Boosts Relief Fund

One contribution was made today to the Red Cross war relief campaign, a $5 donation by the Belk-Tyler store.

The total now stands at $1,730 as the fund continues to grow, although not as fast as officials had anticipated.

The county has a goal of $4,000.

All Indications Point To Third Term Nomination As Democrats Begin Sessions

"Floating Garage"

Described by the navy as a "floating garage," the U. S. S. Albemarle, 8,900-ton seaplane tender, is shown as she slid down the ways at Camden, N. J., after its christening by Mrs. Lewis G. Compton, wife of the assistant secretary of the navy. The vessel, which will carry supplies, tools for repair and quarters for officers and crew, is expected to be delivered to the navy early next year. The vessel is named in honor of Albemarle Sound, North Carolina.

British Children Sent To More Safer Regions

AGREED CLOSE BURMA ROUTE

Britain To Take Action If Japs Will Seek Peace

London, July 15.—Authoritative British circles said that Britain had told Japan she would close the only route by which war supplies, mainly American, reached the Chinese Central government for three months if Japan would use that time to seek a peace.

These circles said the United States government had been kept informed of the offer to close the supply route, the Burma road, and thus far had made no objections.

Washington, however, has sent "detailed comment" on the British-Japanese negotiations, it was said. These authoritative circles said that although some critics might say Britain had let China down, the biggest assistance Britain could render China would be to defeat Germany. Then Britain would be free to wield a stronger hand in the Far East, they said.

Merchant - Directors Meet Tuesday Night

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Directors of the Greenville Merchants Association will be held in the association's offices tomorrow night.

The meeting was postponed because of the absence of several members and officers who were at the state-wide meeting at Elizabeth City. A report on this meeting will be made. Mrs. Cora S. Powell, executive secretary, advised members having some question in mind for discussion at the meeting to advise her office.

Contribution Of $5.00 Boosts Relief Fund

One contribution was made today to the Red Cross war relief campaign, a $5 donation by the Belk-Tyler store.

The total now stands at $1,730 as the fund continues to grow, although not as fast as officials had anticipated.

The county has a goal of $4,000.

PREDICT FALL OF TRADITION

Roosevelt, However, Reiterates Statement He Is Not A Candidate; Farley Insists Own Name Will Be Presented; Delegates Convinced President Will Yield To Draft

Chicago Stadium, July 15.

—(AP)—With a precedent-breaking glint in their eyes which augured ill for the third term tradition, Democratic National convention delegates assembled today to clear away the routine between President Roosevelt and another nomination.

Even as the delegates streamed into the stadium, third term advocates spread the report that although Mr. Roosevelt's only word had been "I am not a candidate," they were convinced he would accept the nomination which two-thirds of the delegates are pledged to bestow upon him.

Shortly before James A. Farley began the gavel which began the opening session, he reiterated that his own name would be placed before the convention.

The nominating report will be made by Raymond Fisher of Nassau, N. Y., who succeeded Farley as chairman of the Rockland county democratic committee in 1939, in the event Senator Glass of Virginia, detained in Washington by his wife's illness, is unable to reach Chicago.

In a press conference shortly before he called the delegates to order Farley voiced the opinion that dominates this convention. He was asked "do you anticipate that before the results of the first ballot are announced the nomination will be made unanimous?"

"I think so, yes," replied the post master general.

For his part, Farley said, he favored making the nomination unanimous. He made clear, however, that he was not releasing his own delegates prior to that first roll call and did not attempt to speak for other contenders, such as Senator Wheeler of Montana, Vice President Garner and Paul V. McNutt of Indiana.

In Washington Presidential secretary Stephen Early said that the White House is connected with Chicago by a direct telephone wire, but it "has not been used" so far.

Early disclosed the telephone connection in talking with reporters at the start of a history-making week in which political leaders believe President Roosevelt will accept re-nomination by the Democratic party and thus challenge the tradition against any man serving three terms in the White House.

Decrease Shown In State's Fatalities

Raleigh, July 15.—(AP)—Traffic deaths in North Carolina numbered only 363 during the first six months of this year, the lowest toll since 1933, the Highway Safety Division reported today.

June deaths were only 61, a 20 per cent drop under the 77 of June, 1939.

The six months' toll was nine per cent below the 396 deaths in the first six months of last year.

Underwood-Wyche

Mr. and Mrs. John Ira Wyche announce the marriage of their daughter Alma Virginia to Mr. Samuel Bobbitt Underwood, Jr. on Saturday, the thirteenth of July. Nineteen hundred and forty

Weldon, North Carolina. At Home after the twenty-eighth of July 414 East Fourth Street Greenville, North Carolina

Of interest throughout the state is the announcement of the marriage of Miss Alma Virginia Wyche of Weldon, and Samuel Bobbitt Underwood, Jr. of Greenville, which took place in a quiet ceremony at the home of the bride's parents in Weldon Saturday. The Rev. B. P. Robinson of Weldon officiated at the ceremony. Only the immediate families were present.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Ira Wyche. She received her Bachelor of Arts degree from Duke University and her Master of Science degree from Wellesley College. She is a member of Alpha Delta Pi national social sorority. For the past few years she has been a member of the faculty of the Woman's College of Duke University in the Department of Physical Education.

Mr. Underwood, son of Mrs. Samuel Bobbitt Underwood and the late Mr. Underwood of Greenville, received his Bachelor of Arts degree from Cumberland University Law School. He was admitted to the North Carolina Bar Association in 1937 and is now a practicing attorney in the city of Greenville.

Following a wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Underwood will be at home at 414 East Fourth Street in Greenville.

Greenville N. Y. A. Playgrounds

The Greenville NYA playgrounds have been running now for a week, and the children are getting down to pleasant profitable work.

The West Greenville Playground has a total enrollment of 107 children, and an average daily attendance of 47.

The children have been taught four folk games, are sewing, have started working on a little play to which their friends will be invited. There are story hours held for different age groups, some of the boys are making bird houses, a pigeon roost, and all of them are playing base ball. There is an hour each day for free play. This includes such games as dodge ball, cat and mouse, pretty girls' country, stealing steps, etc.

The programs for the other three playgrounds are practically the same. All hold morning exercises at which time a devotional is held, and volunteers add to the programs with their various talents.

Enrollment at Third street 79, daily attendance 65.

Enrollment at high school 64, daily attendance 40.

Enrollment at Fifth Street colored 196, daily attendance 135.

Total enrollment 449, total daily attendance 187.

A very live dramatic club has been formed at Third Street school. Here the children delight in pantomimes. They are making stage settings for several children's plays. Some are making scrap books of actors, of babies, of scenes which Pinafores and poke bonnets are playing to a applause down south. Senorita Gwin Mata (left) wears a floral striped cotton pinafore over a white pique play suit and caps her curls with a big straw hat. Miss Frances Webb (right) tops her blue and white striped ballerina beach frock with a sunbonnet of white pique.

July half gone.

Thursday is the day for the big barbecue at Black Jack.

The street sprinkler has been shipped two weeks and is now expected most any day. Main street will be particularly glad when it gets to work.

Misses Bessie and Sudie Hardins are visiting relatives in Greene county.

Miss Lucy Johnson left Sunday evening to spend several weeks in the southern portion of the county.

Congressional convention at Elizabeth City Thursday.

might be used for stage settings. Story hours are being held and stories told and discussed which may be used for plays. These children hope to select a good story and make their own dramatization to which the public will be invited.

This playground has also started wood working such things as the racks, book ends and house markings.

A very lively ball game was held on Friday between Third street and the East Greenville playgrounds, the score being 16 to 9 in favor of Third Street. Games are being scheduled between the three white playgrounds.

At the Fifth Street playgrounds there are 199 children. They have the same schedules as others and are working hard on making cloth clothes and embroidering. On visiting there Friday, it was found the children are interested in checkers.

One checker board and 26 boys grouped around it eagerly watching the game, all wanting to play. There is a great need for, and a scarcity of quiet games on all of the playgrounds, such as checkers, parchesse, these games and not using them.

These games and not using them. Please give them for the use of the children of Greenville, phone 3327 and they will be called for.

Garris-Evans Lumber company has donated six large seesaws which have been divided among the playgrounds and the children are happily playing on these.

There are 25 people working with the children to make their summer mean something worthwhile.

Any children between the ages of 4 and 14 are cordially invited to join at anytime, and we feel sure they can find something to do that will interest them.

Library News

Self-Help from New Books.

Someone has rightfully said that if at sixteen a girl is not attractive it is God's fault, but that if at forty she is still unattractive it is her own fault. Knowledge about the care of the body and the mind is so plentiful nowadays that there is no excuse for a man or woman not looking like their best.

Certainly no one in Greenville need be ignorant of how to care for their skin, their hair and their body when the Sheppard Memorial Library has so many self-help books on its shelves. No one unless they have glandular trouble, which can be remedied, has to weigh more than they should. And no one has to be dowdy in appearance when they can so easily learn how to be well-groomed. Are you aware of your good points and do you play up to them in your manner of dress? It is possible to make of yourself what you want to be. So scan the pages of these books and find the answers to your problems.

SAFE CONDUCT—Margaret Fishback. Here's a book for the person who needs a little help with his manners. It is not the voluminous etiquette type of a book but rather a small book cleverly written in a sort of story form. It answers all important questions on how to conduct yourself. In fact it is a road way through Courtesy Land—for people who want to DO IT RIGHT in a world of reality.

FOOD FOR BEAUTY—Helen Rubinstein—This book is dedicated to the women of America who believe in their natural heritage of the unending spirit of youth. Diet and exercise are carefully explained from the first chapter. Eating for Beauty, to the last, Youthful Posture. Recipes for modern dietetics are also included. Every woman who is interested in her appearance (and who isn't?) should be guilty of reading this book.

DESIGNING WOMEN—Margaret Byers—The woman who wishes to move with ease and social security in a chosen sphere of society, but who needs help in dressing the part, will find this a most helpful book. It aims to teach her to dress impeccably and correctly, yet with that arrogant casualness which permits her to turn her attention to conversation and conduct. Mrs. Byers is a well-known and highly esteemed fashion writer. Her knowledge is factual, not fictional, and she can help you to choose clothes that "do something for you."

GARDENING FOR FUN HEALTH AND MONEY—Frederick Collins—The three ennobling things that we, the salt of the earth, desire earnestly to have are (a) a good time, (b) a sound body and mind, and (c) enough of the lucre to "answereth all things". These can be attained to a moderate degree by gardening. The purpose of this book is to acquaint you with the fundamental facts about gardening, and if you heed them you will have the finest flowers and vegetables that can be grown, and a body glowing with health.

His Hat Still In The Ring

Here's smiling Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana shown at his headquarters in Chicago after saying he still was a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination and would remain one unless President Roosevelt announces his candidacy. Wheeler said he would support his party's nominee, thus setting aside reports he would bolt the Democrats and organize a third party.

Bobby Goes Back 23 Years

Bobby Jones, the grand slam champion of golf, went back 23 years when he unwrapped his clubs at New York to play an exhibition match for the Red Cross European relief fund. In 1917-18 Bobby also took part in golf series for the Red Cross which netted $150,000. Incidentally, Jones is proudly displaying the new woolen "shirts" his mother knitted to protect his club heads.

Hollywood

Sights And Sounds

By Robbin Coons

Hollywood.—The big "cycle" in the movies right now is not westerns, not war movies, not musicals—but youth.

A few years ago the youngsters played second fiddle to the seasoned troupers. The heyday of Will Rogers, Marie Dressler and Lionel Barrymore saw film stories created to glorify the middle-aged and beyond. It was the era of "characters."

The "Characters" still are in the running, and strongly so, but the kids are in there fighting. And they're pushing against the positions now held firmly by established stars of the Colbert, Lombard, Dietrich class.

The war, oddly, may be the cause for the rush to youth, and for two reasons. First, there's the war-born desire for light, sweet stuff in the films, and youth supplies the demand. Second, the war and its direct effect on the studios' foreign markets makes the culture of "new blood" of vital interest. With lessened revenues the lots will find it harder to meet the "fortune a picture" demands of the top names. With upcoming youngsters in reserve (at comparatively small salaries) they can beat down the demands or, failing this, can thrust the newcomers upward to take the choice spots.

The trend is especially noticeable at 20th Century-Fox, where Zanuck's oldest feminine star, Alice Faye, is 25. Zanuck has been giving newcomers unusual opportunities right along, and has cashed in handsomely already on Linda Darnell, stands to win again on Mary Beth Hughes. Lynn Roberts (who was Mary Hart in Republic's westerns) has the lead in "Street of Memories" with John McGuire, a young fellow who is making his second try in films. Sheila Ryan (who was Paramount's Betty McLaughlin) is spotted in a "Cisco Kid" yarn, and Anne Baxter is coming along in "The Great Profile." Nancy Kelly, Marjorie Weaver and Arleen Whelan are other youthful doing consistent service in the lot's pictures, any of them a possibility for a starrng "break" one of these days. And Betty Grable, rejected by Paramount but a quick come-back after a Broadway click, is showered with starring opportunities—first in Alice Faye's role in "Down Argentine Way," which Alice left to get a rest, then in the Irving Berlin musical, "Say It With Music." The lot also has Gene Tierney, only 20 big-time because she arrived via a Broadway hit in "The Male Animal."

So "Youth Will Be Served," which is a Jane Withers movie title, is going to be more than that.

Social Item: The Wichita, Kans. friends of Ted North (of the Wichita acting Norths) will be happy to learn of the ovation Ted received at the sneak preview of his first movie, "The Bride Wore Crutches."

Mr. North, who was invited by the producer to attend with the usual small group from the studio extended the invitation to 25 of his friends who were here from Kansas.

ON THE AIR

Mr. W. H. Laughinghouse, Representative Dillon Supply Co., has just signed a contract with the local broadcasting station, starting on Tuesday, July 16, an ad will be on the air each week-day at 7:10 a. m.

This broadcast is for the service of every farmer in Pitt and adjoining counties having some product for sale, or wishing to buy some farm items; also having lost, strayed or stolen farm property or having found same.

For any amount you wish to put on the air, phone 2355 or see Mr. Laughinghouse and he will gladly put on this free service for you.

This free service is made possible by Dillon Supply Co., Rocky Mount, and they hope this will be valuable service to the farmer served from this station. (adv.)

It's Not Bright To Sit All Day In The Sunlight

By BETTY CLARKE
AP Feature Service Writer

It really isn't smart to sun-tan to excess.
Not only do the doctors say that, but the beauty experts too, this year. Too much tan is out.
It's possible for anyone to get too much of the sun's rays, of course, and there are thin-skinned beauties and red-haired lovelies who simply cannot take sunlight.
"It's a case of some folk being allergic to sunshine," says Ann Delafeld, a New York beauty director. She thinks sun has caused more damage to American beauty than anything else in recent years.
"No woman over 25 should sun tan from the neck up," is Miss Delafeld's admonition. That's because sun dries the skin, resulting in wrinkles. She adds that any woman who is more than 40 who sun-tans her body is adding three years to her looks.
If you still want tan, it's well to sun only about five minutes on your back and five minutes in front each day. The rest of the day stay out of the direct sunlight. Wear a large sunhat, carry a gay parasol or wear a goodlooking beach robe.
Summer is a grand time to even the color of your hair. You can wrap the ends, that bleach more exercise all winter, don't try to come quickly, in a kerchief, leaving the oily top exposed. The result will be hair all one color when fall comes.

In case you've been going light on bine your exercise and sun. And be as moderate in exercise as you are in sunning.
When you're in the sun, bathe yourself with a good lotion, one of the new ones that serves both as lotion and powder base, or use a good cream. You can even take vinegar or strong tea from the kitchen to protect your skin and get a light even tan.

Fashion Colors Chosen So You Can Match Them

By AMY PORTER
AP Fashion Writer

Every year about this time, the fashion industry goes into a huddle to decide what colors shall be good for fall.

High-powered executives meet, look at swatches, argue, make speeches, call in artists and dye experts.

Finally, they make a solemn announcement. Black and brown will be good for fall. Wine and green and blue and beige will be good, too.

The National Retail Dry Goods Association has just made such an announcement, endorsing these very colors for next fall. It took a committee of 16 to select them.

To a woman who has nothing to do with fashions except as a shopper, it all looks pretty silly. Black, of course. Brown, of course. What else would they pick for fall?

It's Precision Work

The reason for the fuss is that there are so many shades of each color—even of black. From many browns, the committee this year has selected two of the best—a nutria shade and a milk shade. So with other colors. Precise shades are selected, then the committee issues color cards to retailers, manufacturers and designers, for their guidance in assembling their fall clothes.
To you as a shopper, this careful attention to color means that if you buy a teal blue coat, you'll be able to find a teal blue hat to match it exactly. It means that if you want bright brown accessories to go with your green wool frock, you'll be able to find gloves, shoes, hat and bag in the same shade of brown.

With the industry taking all this trouble to bring you good colors, you might well give a little more attention to color yourself.

Do you have prejudices about colors? Perhaps you "can't wear" black, or green, or wine—and perhaps you're mistaken.

This season, try out the new colors you'll find in the shops. Try combinations of coppery brown with black, try gray and brown together. Don't just shake your head when the sales girl brings out a dress in an odd shade of green. Try it on. It may have just enough yellow in it to do something for your hair and eyes.

Experiment With Paper

Don't be hampered in your choice of color because you consider yourself a blonde, a brunette, or a brownette. The color of your hair does not mean nearly so much as the color of your skin. Men brunettes look well in the traditional blonde color, chardreuse. Many blondes, and redheads, too, look best in red.

If you can't trust your judgment in a shop, experiment at home. Buy big sheets of crepe paper in different shades and drape them around your shoulders. Sit in a good light in front of a mirror and see what each color does—or doesn't do—for you.

You may decide to break away from the drab colors you've been wearing. And you may emerge as a more colorful personality than you've ever been before.

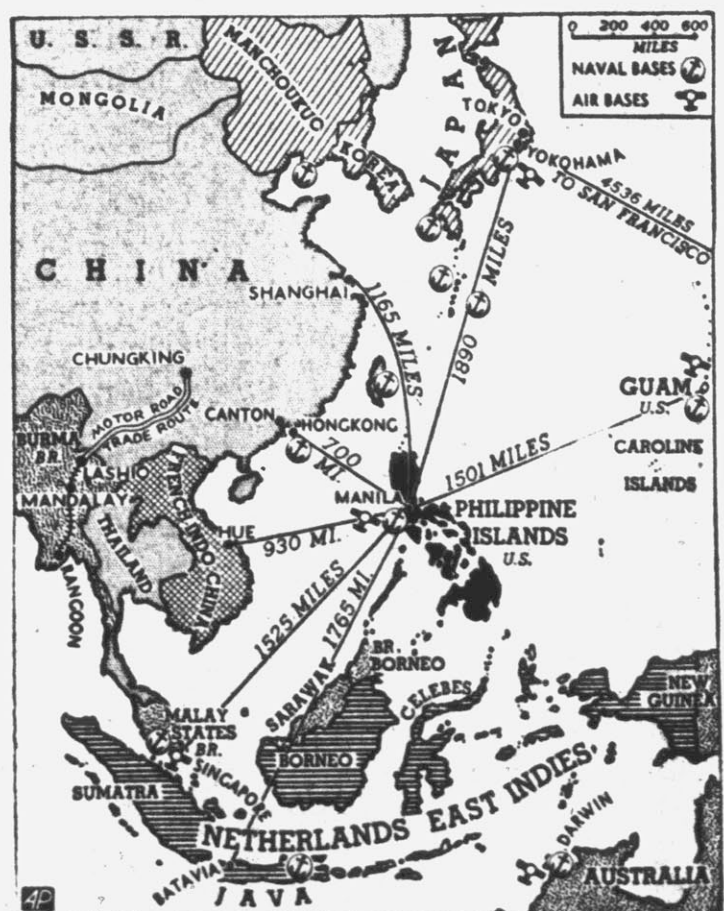

of the American nations. It recognizes the freedom of the American nations to handle their own affairs, and warns off foreign systems, except for those areas where Europe states already held sway, such as

Warns Against Any Delay In Immunization

Reflector Bureau.

By HENRY AVERILL

Raleigh, July 11.—Pointing out that in past wars greater losses were sustained by delays in immunizing recruits and draftees until they were assembled at mobilization centers, Dr. Carl V. Reynolds, state health officer, has issued an advisory warning that in the present emergency every individual citizen should take measure to protect himself against communicable diseases.

They show you the economic and financial advisory committee assistance against foreign systems.

This, he said, should especially be done by those who plan to attend citizens' military training camps, or who belong to the National Guard or the Officers' Reserve Corps.

"Today the health of every individual is of paramount importance to the government, and always of social concern," said Dr. Reynolds. "Remember that it takes time, two months in most instances, to develop an immunity against disease. Remember that assembled groups of unprotected or susceptible individuals exposed to infection will contract the disease before an immunity can be established."

"Remember that in past wars, greater losses were sustained by delayed immunization (that is, until men were assembled at mobilization camps) than by shot and shell. Endemics, epidemics and pandemics were the cost of such a delay."

Dr. Reynolds urged that the "mistake of 1917" be not repeated. He pointed out that then it was found that one third of our manpower was physically unfit.

"Billions have been appropriated for armament but little has been said as yet as to the equipment of the human machine for prosecuting the war, should it come, at the front and at home. It seems to me it is high time for us to take stock of our physical assets and liabilities lest our liberty, freedom and the pursuit of happiness be torn away from us in the twinkling of an eye."

He left his successor a city with a population of 7,000, with sidewalks, uniformed police, a paid fire department and a balance in the city treasury of $500.

WANT ADS PAY

WHAT IT MEANS

By MORGAN M. BEATTY

AP Feature Service Writer

Washington.—Behind the Monroe Doctrine headlines you've been reading is a deliberate battle of wits between Washington and Berlin—with Washington on the offensive.

The primary aim in Washington is to bring strikingly to the attention of the American public—both above and below the Rio Grande—the original Monroe Doctrine and its championship of independence for the nations of the Western hemisphere as well as its warning to European powers to keep off.

In effect it is a curtain raiser for the meeting in Havana late in July of the 21 American republics. It might even portend a mutual Monroe Doctrine for the hemisphere to supplement the purely United States doctrine pronounced by Monroe in 1823.

American state department officials have been itching for some time to get the Monroe doctrine on Page One, so to speak, in the same breath with the strange talk of Monroe Doctrines in Europe and Asia, and to show them in contrast with each other.

These officials have been ready to leap at a chance to prove Uncle Sam is on the level and devoid of all desire to set up any puppet regimes in this hemisphere.

Almost, But Not Quite

The conquest of Holland almost gave them the opening they were waiting for, but not quite. For the sovereignty of Holland is obscure her possessions in this hemisphere small.

The conquest of France was a different story, a perfect example. For officially at any rate, France retains her independence, even though a conquered power, and therefore has the right to keep or dispose of her possession as she sees fit.

So the state department got busy. A round-robin note went to France, England, Germany and Italy. Those nations were flatly advised that the United States would not recognize any transfers of possessions in this hemisphere, nor acquiesce in them. The Monroe Doctrine was not mentioned.

It was implied, however, that the incident at Martinique, where French and British warships are playing hide and seek, is just as much in focus as, say, French Guiana.

That note was delivered in Berlin on June 18. On July 1, Berlin struck at the bait. It was Berlin that brought up the Monroe Doctrine.

Joachim von Ribbentrop, the German foreign minister said the Monroe Doctrine interpretation "implicit" in the American note would amount to conferring on some European states the right to possess territories on this side of the Atlantic, but not others.

Says Mr. Hull

That was what the State Department was waiting for. Secretary Hull did not even reply to the German note. Instead, through his regular press conference he addressed himself to the American public in the United States and Latin America. Others could listen, of course. Said Secretary Hull:

"The Monroe Doctrine is solely a policy of self-defense which is intended to preserve the independence and integrity of the Americans. It was, and is, designed to prevent aggression in this hemisphere on the part of any non-American power."

"It never has resembled and it does not today resemble policies which appear to be arising in other geographical areas of the world which are alleged to be similar to the Monroe Doctrine, but which would in reality seem to be only the pretext for the carrying out of conquest by the sword."

That gave the President an opening to carry the whole theme a step further two days later. Through Secretary Stew. Early he suggested to Japan and Germany, in effect, that they apply the principles of a true Monroe Doctrine to the problems of their continents, that each nation be allowed its own voice in continental settlements.

There might be the germ of the mutual Monroe Doctrine.

The net result of all this from the American government point of view is, first, to get the original Monroe Doctrine before all the republics of this hemisphere, not as a dead document, but as a live instrument of the United States, as vital today as it was in 1923. It is our policy, not the collective policy

Strength For The Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

WHICH YOKE?

It should be of interest to us in this generation to recall the fact that Jesus came into the world at a time when the totalitarian form of government was at the very height of its career. He was born in the reign of the emperor Augustus and was crucified in the reign of Tiberius. The word of the emperor in those days was law, and his sway extended over the lives of all his subjects.

It is also interesting to observe that as the Christian Church became established, the totalitarian form of government disintegrated. The stronger the Church became, the weaker the Roman Empire became. It is never possible in historical reasoning to put our finger on one event and say that it alone brings about some other event, but certainly there is a connection between the rise of the Church and the disintegration of political totalitarianism which may well make us ponder thoughtfully in these days. If totalitarianism is on the up and up, may it not be because the Church has lost some of its ancient power? And if this is true, does it not suggest that the best way for any country to guard against totalitarianism is to improve and deepen its religious faith?

It is hard to put men under the yoke of the State when they are already bearing the yoke of Christ and liking it.

NO EXCUSE FOR FAILURE

In times such as these, fire waste is a national calamity.

Every fire, great and small, represents economic loss. It has no mitigating circumstances. Materials are destroyed. Production is stopped. Energy and time are consumed.

Today we are embarking on the greatest military expansion program in our peace-time history. The successful and swift fulfillment of that program means that all our resources, all our energies, must be given to it without stint. We lack essential materials, and in many industries we lack skilled labor. The drain that fire makes upon the nation is certainly inimical to the defense program.

Fortunately, fire is not a thing we must take for granted, on the theory that little or nothing can be done about it. Fire is a luxury. There are unpreventable fires—but they constitute an extremely small part of the total. The great majority of fires are the consequence of carelessness, ignorance, slothfulness. The human element is to blame. Some one takes a chance, someone doesn't think, someone is lazy—and fire strikes. If we are lucky, damage is slight. If we are unlucky, a ghastly toll of death and property destruction follows.

At this time we should regard fire prevention as a factor of national defense—a factor that can make the completion of the arms program more sure and swift. And the cause of fire prevention needs all of us as volunteers in a great anti-fire army. It is an easy matter to learn the principal causes of fire, and how they may be eliminated. And there can be no excuse for any man's failure to do that.

Chicago—Meet Lloyd Crow Stark, gentleman farmer, convention delegate at large, candidate for the senate, and governor of the state of Missouri.

I did, and here's why. As delegates and lobbyists assembled for the quadrennial Democratic shindig, there was a lot of national defense talk. And oddly enough, Stark's name kept popping into it. It was "Stark would be a good man for this . . . or that . . . or Why not Stark?" or even "The war or navy cabinet jobs should have gone to Stark."

Served On Submarine. What was there about Missouri's tall, soft-spoken governor that had folks figuring he would be a good man in the defense set-up? I went to the record and there it was.

He undoubtedly has a distinction that no other man in the upper political brackets has today. He not only was graduated from Annapolis and served four years at sea, but he also was field artillery officer during the World War.

Stark got his stripe at Annapolis in 1906 and sailed on the U.S.S. Montana. Later, he was in charge of the Montana's starboard battery, which, under his direction, won the highest gunnery record in the navy for submarine duty. He also did a stretch of submarine duty.

He had returned to Missouri and business when the World War came. Stark enlisted in the army. Commissioned a captain, he was promoted to major and for part of the Argonne offensive, he had complete command of the 135th Field Artillery.

That ought to qualify any man for knowing about arms and the men on land and on water. But add this: He is an exceptionally successful business man and a politician who has battled one of the most powerful machines in any state . . . and won . . . and you have Lloyd Crow Stark.

In spite of all his going to sea and to the wars, the governor is really a country squire—just as President Roosevelt is a country squire. What the Roosevelt is to Dutchess county, N. Y., the Starks are to Pike county, Mo.

The governor, however, goes in for country acquiring on a little grander scale than his long-time friend, the YPresident. Stark has three farms and one of the largest orchards in Missouri.

registering percherons, Hereford cattle, Hampshire hogs, and sheep. That's squiring with a vengeance. His business, before he relinquished the management to become governor, was Stark Bros. Nursery which, he says, is the oldest and biggest nursery in the world. It has been in the family for five generations. It was the governor's father, an associate of Luther Burbank, who developed the "Delicious" apple. The nursery is a 4,500-acre establishment, has about 1,000 clerical and production employees and 21,000 salesmen.

In politics Stark had the blessing of "Boss" Tom Pendergast, but he scarcely had gotten into office before he broke with the machine and led the fight which ended in the machine's being crushed and Pendergast's going to jail. For a while Stark was referred to as the "boss buster" . . . but he never liked the title.

Stark led a nationwide battle to break down interstate trade barriers and got himself elected chairman of the national Governors' conference and president of the Council of State Governments, both posts that pointed him up as more than a mere local stature.

Stark has one of those families, too. It was an ancestor of his, Revolutionary Gen. John Stark, whose little pep talk ran: "Boys, we must beat the redcoats today or Molly Stark sleeps tonight a widow." Convention chatter had it that Missouri's governor will be in the national picture next year—come what may.

And . . . oh yes, his home is in Louisiana, Mo.

The REA office has been moved to the suite formerly occupied by the Attorney General. There seems to be just about the proper space for the agency to function without crowding. Established in 1935, the Authority was for a long, long time penned up in tight quarters on the fifth floor of the Revenue building. At one time when the State ABC board was organized and set up on that same floor, the REA was jammed into one room.

Casual Slaughters

By VIRGINIA HANSON

YESTERDAY: Sandra comes to Kay's room for a private talk with Jeff. She wants to marry him immediately. Gerald suggests to Kay that a wife cannot testify against her husband.

Chapter 18 Definitely Murder

SANDRA'S eyes were unnaturally bright and her cheeks were crimson—not, I thought, with rouge. She wasn't just the idea of the radiant bride—she was more feverish than radiant, more excited than happy, more determined than eager. But while I never for a moment doubted that she was getting what she wanted—she had the air of achieving a long-felt purpose—she could not recognize the air with the swollen eyes and twisting hands of the girl I had admitted to my room only an hour before—a girl who had lost her lover and was wracked with grief. That Sandra was genuine.

Her tortured words came back to me: "They made fun of him. They're glad. They thought he wasn't good enough."

And now all that forgotten in feverish triumph. Or was it forgotten? What's that quality of malevolence, of vindictiveness in her excitement? Was she, in some way I could not imagine, planning to avenge Ivan's death?

I am altogether too imaginative, a fact which is always being pointed out to me. I mentally shook off a chill of foreboding which I knew was nothing but an Irish ancestor hanging creepily; but I could not shake a reasonable question which kept asking itself of me. Why was she marrying Jeff?

"Sandra," I said, without premeditation—if I had thought twice I might have kept silent—"have you considered that people will say you are marrying Jeff to keep from testifying—because you think—"

For some reason I was unable to finish; and it was not necessary, I saw. She understood what I meant and it was not a new idea to her.

"I've thought of that," she said patiently, as one explaining to a backward child. "But I'm doing what I think best."

Her eyes met mine perfectly steadily, but without candor. She was not rebuffing me; but on the other hand she was making me no present of her thoughts.

I gave up. After all, it was no business of mine.

It was a Sunday I shall not forget.

Sandra made no move to go. She curled up in a chair and, like a well-behaved guest, turned the pages of magazines. The sound, repeated too often to permit her to do any reading, so annoyed me that all I could do was sit and lower at my typewriter and decide that I'd better be going back to Chicago where the roof of the I seemed to have no tendency to "rail my train of thought, and there I could get some work done before I had to break out my safety fund and start spending it. Here I was again, mixed in murder."

I quit listening to the annoying rasp of the turning leaves and wondered why I thought it was murder. I remembered that Gerald had so referred to it and that I had not challenged his assumption. I wondered now if he knew or was only guessing. And he knew, how?

After the discovery of the body the night before, Adam had sent Gerald to take up some of the garbage for the last time and to bring back help. Adam had stayed there, keeping a lonely vigil, and I had not seen him since. What discoveries had they made down in that horrid black hole—what clues to murder—and to a murderer?

'Very Painful'

FELICIA rapped twice and opened the door. She was dressed, hatted and gloved, and looked moderately devout. "Going to church," she announced self-righteously. "Where in town?" I asked, and she said, no, the chapel. "Services announced for today. Want to come?"

Sandra said "Yes," eagerly, before I had time to reply. "If Katherine will lend me a hat and gloves?"

I said that I would lend them gladly, and I meant it. I was one of those moods when I felt there was a conspiracy to keep me from doing any work and that if I persisted I might as well cut my throat before I starved to death. A mood common, I dare say, to most writers.

While I sought out the required articles Felicia was expressing her sympathy to Sandra. "It was rotten way, she said, to lose an old friend."

"Yes," said Sandra. "Very painful."

She said it quite steadily, and I began to wonder if I had imagined the grief-tortured face she had brought to my door.

Thankfully I watched her depart. Now I could work. But first I ought to see Julia. After all, it was Sunday, a day of rest. And I really ought to see Julia.

Because it was Sunday I had dressed with care; I would not need to change. I fixed my hair and my face briefly, feeling a sudden urgency, and set out along Officers' Row at a brisk walk.

There were two cars in front of the colonel's quarters. One of them was Adam's, and at sight of it I hesitated, wondering if I would think I was forcing my way into matters that did not concern me. But the other car—a police car from the neighboring town—decided me. I had to see Julia.

Bulky black Cora answered the doorbell and grudgingly admitted me. She would see if Miss Julia was home. She went upstairs scattering about morning callers and Sunday diners. I waited in the hall, hearing men's voices indistinctly beyond a closed door and trying, with a horrible sense of guilt, not to know that something was scorching in the kitchen.

Cora must have gone down the back stairs—surely, no doubt—for I did not see her again. Instead, Julia came to the landing in a tailored satin robe the shade of a red peony and beckoned me with gestures warning silence.

"Well go to my room," she whispered as I reached her, and led me, feathered mules hurrying along the corridor, to a room at the end of the hall—a neat room of Quaker simplicity, furnished in early American maple, with two brown hooked rugs on the floor, a white candlewick spread on the poster bed, tailored yellow curtains at the windows and two framed photographs on the plain, cream-colored walls.

The pictured woman must have been Julia's mother—a woman in wartime fashions—a woman of that same strange, salty ugliness but with a light of great happiness in her eyes such as I had not seen in Julia's.

The other picture was of Jeff, in cadet uniform. And his eyes, too, surprised me. Though it must have been taken no more than two or three years before, he looked much younger, much more trusting. I thought of a dog who had lost a good home and found that the world is not all cracked marrow bones and an easy chair by the fire.

Driftwood

JULIA said, in a voice pitched very low, "You haven't told anyone what we saw on the barge?"

"Of course not. That's what I came to warn you about. . . . How do they know it was murder?" She motioned me to a low slipper chair and, dropping down on a rug at my feet, leaned back against a pine chest.

"I listened at the landing before they shut the library door. When they moved him—the body—there was a stick of driftwood under it. The stick was still pretty dry, especially the bar—he was lying on. And there was blood and hair on it from a wound on the back of his head."

"So they think someone hit him over the head and pushed him in?" I don't see why he couldn't have fallen in and struck his head or the stick—it may have already been in the water."

"No, because it wasn't wet enough, or something. I don't know just how they know, but they do; it was murder, all right."

We stared at each other, and I saw dread in her eyes.

"I wonder if Sandra knows that," I said, thinking out loud. "How could she? She's still asleep."

"You mean to say you haven't missed her?"

Julia looked shocked, so I told her of Sandra's early call, of her interview with Jeff, and of the construction Gerald had put upon it.

Julia's face was flushed when I finished.

"She can't do that to him," she said angrily. "I'll tell her she can't."

I felt bound to point out to her something which had just occurred to me—belatedly.

"There's a chance she may be right. Maybe she does know something she'd rather not be forced to tell about Jeff."

"That's the same as saying you think he murdered that—that screwball," Julia retorted with heat. "It's what everyone will think. I'll talk to her—I'll show her what she's doing to him."

She paused, looked suddenly tired. "I suppose they'll both think I'm foolish," she added bitterly. "Where is Sandra?"

In church, I told her. She stood up and dropped the cerise robe at her feet and stood, high-breasted and proud in a belted white georgette gown. For a moment she might have posed for a Red Cross poster, or something equally noble and self-sacrificing. Then a weariness twisted her face. "All-right," she said. "I am jealous. So what? Let them think what they please. People aren't going to have a chance to say things like that about Jeff if I can help it."

She swirled the gown over her head and dropped it to the floor with an expression of defiant disdain.

I watched her dress and told her that it wasn't any use, that I had tried, that no appeal on behalf of Jeff would move Sandra because it was Ivan she had loved; but Julia dismissed that with a little frown.

Greenies Score Five In Ninth Inning To Defeat Bears

KRACKE OPENS SCORING SPREE

Skipper Wilson's Hitting Had Kept Locals In Game

Trailing 5-6 at the start of the ninth inning in the game with the Bears at New Bern yesterday afternoon, Rube Wilson's Greenies got their eyes on the old pill after two men were down and before they were retired five runs had been sent across the plate to give the locals a 10-6 victory.

At the end of the third the score was tied at four all, New Bern having made two each in the first and third and the Greenies four in the third. Neither team scored in the fourth, but each made one in the fifth. New Bern went ahead with one in the sixth. It rocked along like this for two frames, but then in the ninth the Greenies really got busy.

The Greenies had been kept in the game during the early frames principally through the hitting of Manager Wilson. Hitting first righthanded and then lefthanded, depending on the pitcher, the skipper got a homer off Archer in the third and another off Hammond in the fifth. He got two singles to claim four for five trips and lead both teams at bat.

In the ninth Kracke singled, Dices flied out, but Wilson singled. Crowe walked to fill the bases and Jenkins bounced a hard one off Hug's knee for a three-run double. Samocki singled to score Jenkins and Thornton's single sent Samocki in.

Lazy letter writers in Argentina need only to telephone the post office when they desire to send letters. Their call is connected with the recording room; their voice taken down on a phonograph record, and then mailed to any place in the world. The call is charged to the telephone bill. Odd, isn't it?

Trackster Tomboy Becomes A Top-Flight Golfing Gal

The harum-scarum tomboyish Babe Dirrikson—whose running and jumping turned the 1932 Olympic Games into a one-girl show—has matured into a pleasant, snappily-dressed young lady who is just about tops in another sport, golf. After she went professional, following the Olympics, Babe took a fling at exhibitions in various sports, then concentrated on golf. She recently won her first big title.

Babe gained international fame by bettering world javelin and 80-meter hurdle records in the 1932 Olympics at Los Angeles. She was hailed as "the greatest woman athlete" on the basis of these accomplishments.

She turned pro late in 1932 after a mix-up over an advertising testimonial affected her amateur status. There followed a series of exhibitions, some featuring her as a baseball pitcher.

Then golf. Babe was medalist in her first tourney in 1934. Next year she won the Texas crown. Then she was ruled ineligible for amateur golf because of her professionalism in other sports.

She discovered lipstick.

and beauty parlors. Babe married Wrestler George Zaharias in 1938. She kept working on her golf. She'd like to be reinstated as an amateur, thinks she can beat the girls who play in the simon-pure ranks.

Babe won her first major championship at Milwaukee the other day—the women's western open. "No other woman in the world can hit like she does," says a rival, the veteran Mrs. Opal Hill.

WILSON LEADS THE GREENIES

Bennie Crowe Is Next Highest Hitter of The Club

Manager Rube Wilson and Bennie Crowe are this week's members of the "300 Club" of the Greenville team, according to figures released today by James Whitfield, official scorer.

The Greenville skipper leads his mates with a .310 percentage. Crowe has an average of .297. Dal Thornton, third with an average of .297, likely should be elevated to membership in the club if there is no recession in his hitting. Calliguri is batting .295 and should be back in the groove again next week.

Run To Ground

Mrs. Willkie Is Pleasantly Chatty, But Won't Discuss Politics

By ADELAIDE KERR
AP Feature Service Writer
Mrs. Wendell Willkie is a woman's woman.

She likes women and women seem to like her. And, judging from work women have done already in his behalf, she thinks they could swing Wendell Willkie's election to the presidency.

She said so at her first New York reception after her husband's nomination, but she didn't say so publicly. Mrs. Willkie makes no public statements on political subjects. She said so in quiet agreement to a question, and then turned quickly back to greet the Republican women filing by.

A Good Time

They streamed past at a tea given in a friend's home, when she was the focal point of hundreds of curious eyes. She seemed to be, having a good time—and so did the women who came to see her. A quick smile and hand clasp, and then a pause and words spilling out in a friendly stream. "Hello, my dear. How's John?" "Helen, how nice to see you—and what a pretty frock!"

I felt that, if there had been a little more time, she might have stopped to exchange a recipe.

But she talked no politics. She parried every leading question neatly and retreated with grace, determination and a smile to safer more inconsequential ground. Edith Willkie is a little woman slender as a girl. Her smiling gray-blue eyes are set in a face that is wide at the cheekbones, slightly pointed at the chin and framed in short, softly curled, silver-tinged hair.

MRS. WENDELL WILLKIE
She likes pretty clothes.

On the afternoon of the reception she wore a simple dark blue crepe frock, whose wide rippling white collar was anchored with a flower corsage and topped by a neat little chapeau crowned with white violets. Something about the tilt of that hat said, "Edith Willkie likes pretty clothes." But something she said to a friend seemed to indicate that she feels clothes aren't worth too much fuss, either.

"Will I get a lot of new clothes for the trip we hope to take before the campaign? I doubt if I'll have time. I'll probably just have to telephone some shop and tell the salesgirl to send up what I want in size twelve. It generally fits."

Enough Food And Sleep

Mrs. Willkie gives her time to her husband, her home, her son, Philip, who is twenty. She spends much of it since her husband's nomination, in superintending his home schedule and seeing that he gets the right food and enough sleep. She keeps a friendly, homey atmosphere in the roomy, book-filled apartment on upper Fifth Avenue, where the Willkies live.

The Republican women who help her handle the bushel-baskets of mail that pour in these days say that if they don't watch her, she is likely to wait on those who are there to help instead of letting them wait on her. The other day, when they were having a hasty lunch, she disappeared into the kitchen and came back a few minutes later with a tray of iced orange juice, because she thought they "might like a cool drink."

But she gets time for other things. She reads a lot of economics and her friends wonder if she isn't a help to Wendell Willkie in keeping him primed on events and on reading for which he has no time. Be that as it may, they say, she has followed every step of his career. They suspect she may be one person to whom Willkie's nomination as the Republican presidential candidate came as no surprise.

Conventions Always Have Been Crazy

Political conventions are a form of AP Feature Service
American madness—and always have been. These pictures, from a contemporary newspaper, show that delegates in the 1860's had a pretty wild time picking candidates. Negro Bible School Is Brought To Close

The Community Daily Vacation Bible School for Negro children, had its closing exercises last Friday night in the Fleming Street school, where the school was conducted. An introductory play was given by the intermediates. This group had studied the Bible, its divisions and important facts. It was under the direction of M. H. Spence and Claude Edwards. The Junior and Primary Groups presented a Bible play, and songs they had studied. God's Beautiful World, directed by Jessie Jones, Ethel Wilson and Lorraine Forbes. The beginners presented a story in songs. Their theme was God's Love, taught by Daisy Daniels and Lillian Arts. Every day at 10:30 a worship period was held. The theme was "Obedience." There were the following speakers each day: Milton Daniels, Dr. C. R.

Appointment Blocked By College-Department Fued

By HENRY AVERILL
Raleigh, July 15.—The perennial feud between State College and the North Carolina Department of Agriculture is blocking the appointment of a research head for the college.

It is thereby blocking establishment of any real plan for agricultural experimentation and greatly handicapping the efforts of those who are steadfastly seeking to jolt the state out of the "cash-crop" rut. Your Raleigh reporter hasn't found anybody who will take the responsibility for this thesis by permitting himself to be quoted but it is no trouble at all to get any number to endorse it, always provided "you mustn't quote me" or "completely off the record."

Such meager facts about the situation as are available back it up to the limit, too.

There is, for instance, the recent polite rejection by Cornell's Dean Bradford of the important State College post of Director of Experiment Station. Quite obviously the Dean didn't come right out and say "No, thank you, gentlemen, I've heard all about your squabbling and bickering and I want no part of that sort of thing." It is equally obvious, however, that he did seriously consider the post; that he seemed about to accept it; that he made discreet inquiry about general conditions; that he heard all about "in this corner, Dean Schaub," and that thereafter he lost all interest. There is no doubt that President Frank Graham of the Greater University is deeply interested in and concerned over the situation. There is no doubting the zeal of the "Advisory Committee to the President on the Agricultural Set-up and Policies of State College" (this group should be sharply differentiated from the so-called "coordinating" committee which has never held a meeting, so far as anybody has been able to learn). This committee, headed by Dr. Clarence Poe, has held several sessions and has threshed out all manner of plans for a better school of agriculture at State College. It has probably with good judgment, given out few details of its deliberations; but it is known to have evolved a well-considered plan for making State College's agricultural school second to none in the South.

Graves, Dr. J. A. Battle's wife, Dr. W. M. Capehart, Rev. J. E. Nimmo, Belle Atkinson, H. B. Brown, Father Maurice and Dr. R. H. Boyd.

The school was sponsored by the Women's Societies of the Presbyterian, Methodist and Christian churches, and was directed by Thelma Moore. This is the fourth year that such a school has been held and it should have an increase from 50 children the first year to 252 this year.

It met again Saturday morning, your reporter learns, in an effort to select a suitable Director of Experiment Stations. Some half a dozen "big name" professors with nationwide reputation have been considered and it is in connection with this consideration that it has become crystal clear that the College-Department row is the main obstacle in the way of getting an outstanding man for the job. The prospects all show definite interest until they hear about the feud, then it's all off, the gentleman suddenly discovering he's very well fixed and not in position to consider coming to State College.

Meanwhile absolutely nothing is being done to end the long-drawn out battle, unless it is being done so quietly that no details at all have leaked out. There is a growing impression that nothing ever will be accomplished toward genuine pacification so long as I. O. Schaub is cock of the walk at State College and W. Kerr Scott is head of the Department of Agriculture.

Nevertheless, the Poe committee is working hard to find means of putting into effect its whole plan for reorganization at the College. The aim is to set up an agricultural unit which will include a division which shall be one of real research (not merely an adjunct for testing a few specimens of this and that brought in by farmers and a chain of show farms used mostly for political and pious).

It seems that Dr. Graham can work with Dean Schaub. He can work with Commissioner Scott. The committee hasn't had much of it to do, but it probably could work with either Scott or both. There are clear indications, however, that Scott will never be able to work in harmony with Schaub, nor, to show complete neutrality, will Schaub ever be able to work with Scott.

In addition to Dr. Poe members of the advisory committee are Charles F. Cates of Faison, Edwin Pate of Laurinburg, Thurmond Chatham of Winston-Salem, John Sprunt Hill of Durham, Leslie Well of Goldsboro, W. E. Fenner of Rocky Mount, J. H. Poole of West End, Dudley Bagley of Moyock and W. D. Barbee of Seaboard.

STATE SERVICE HELPING MANY

Total Of $54,648 Distributed To Unemployed

The Greenville State Employment Service office, serving the area embraced in Pitt County, has distributed $54,648 in benefits to unemployed workers in this area in the first six months of 1940, while benefits distributed in the 32 months of payments reached $226,264. It is announced by C. E. Brewer, local office manager, based on figures compiled in the central office of the N. C. Unemployment Compensation commission.

Benefits have been distributed by the local office this year by months, as follows: January, $6,213; February, $9,086; March, $10,321; April, $9,666; May, $10,004; June, $9,349; total $54,648.

Benefit payments on a state-wide basis have shown reasonably large increases during each of the six months of this year, over the preceding month, indicating a marked increase in the extent of unemployment in the state. Payments in the six months, totaling $2,262,624.4, were as follows: January, $286,382.35; February, $308,145.51; March, $352,225.98; April, $417,426.27; May, $438,712.05; June, $490,789.88.

Total distributions of the jobless benefits in the 32 months of payments from January, 1938, through June, 1940, were $14,903,248.27, which includes $273,646.32 sent to residents of other states who had previously earned credits in North Carolina.

These benefits have been distributed by 46 local white offices, with 10 branches which serve colored people in the immediate areas of the offices. The 46 white offices serve white people in their immediate areas and also white and colored people in outlying sections by means of regular visits of representatives to about 125 "service" points; and, at present, to about 175 "spot" points in rural or urban sections where plant lay-offs may occur.
