LAW IS SIGNED
BY ROOSEVELT

Act Curbs Political Activities Becomes Law

EXTENDS LAW TO
MANY WORKERS

No Persons Paid In Part By Federal Government Allowed
To Take Part In Campaign

Washington, July 20.—(AP)—President Roosevelt has signed legislation extending to many thousands of state and local government employees existing restrictions on political activity by federal workers and limiting the size of campaign contributions.

The new law, which will affect officials and employees working on projects financed in any part by federal funds, becomes effective at once.

Persons covered by the act would be forbidden to use their positions to influence the result of an election or to take an active part political campaigns. They would also be prohibited from coercing other employees for political purposes.

Individual political contributions for campaigns in federal offices would be limited to $5,000 in any calendar year and no political committee would be permitted to spend or receive more than $3,000,000 in any one year.

In 1936 the Republican National Committee reported expenditures exceeding $5,000,000, while the Democrats National Committee reported an outlay of more than $3,000,000.

Penalties for violations would range from dismissal and, under certain circumstances, withholding of federal funds to a fine and imprisonment.

No Serious Injuries
In Auto Wreck Here

City officers last night were called to investigate a collision of two automobiles at the intersections of Pitt and West Fifth Street and both drivers were cited to court. The wreck occurred about 11:30 p. m.

The drivers were Miss Mary Jenkins, white, driving east on Fifth Street, and Linwood Woodard, colored, driving south on Pitt. No one was injured.

Loyalty

C. E. Atkins, Orange county farmer left his home early this morning—before the polls were open in the tobacco referendum—but only after he had made arrangements yesterday to vote in another county.

Planning to visit relatives in Greenville today, Mr. Atkins arranged with the Orange county agent to cast his ballot in another county and have it transferred. He stopped in Falkland long enough to buy some gas and and he voted "right" too, having favored the three-year plan.

Hitler Warns England To Quit

This picture, sent by radio from Berlin to New York, shows Adolf Hitler (center) as he addressed the Reichstag and the world, warning Great Britain to withdraw from the conflict or see destruction of her world empire and terror for millions. Hitler said this was England's last chance. Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering is standing above and behind Hitler.

Bullitt Back In U. S.,
Reveals Narrow EscapeEscape From Bomb
Much Narrower
Than Reported

New York, July 20.—(AP)—William Bullitt, United States Ambassador to France, disclosed on his return from Europe aboard the Dixie Clipper today that his escape from death or injury by a Nazi air bomb in Paris was narrower than first reports indicated.

Censored dispatches described the bomb that dropped within 10 feet of Bullitt as a "dud." Today the Ambassador revealed the projectile was a time bomb which exploded an hour later, demolishing the room.

"We were having lunch at the French Air Ministry office when we heard the air raid signal," he said.

"The first bomb landed in a vacant field 100 yards in front of us. The second bomb demolished a small building closer to us—a French hospital—killing three sick men and injuring eight others. Then they started dropping all around us.

"We concluded it was time to go to the basement, and it was about that time that a bomb came through the roof of our building and lodged in the ceiling without exploding. It was a time bomb and it went off an hour later, blowing the room to pieces."

He said he had returned to confer with President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull after having been out of effective contact with Washington for more than five weeks.

He indicated that he expected to return to France.

Bullitt praised highly French Marshal Petain for having done, despite his advanced age, "everything possible" to restore order in such disrupted fields as communications.

Bullitt's fellow-passengers included former Empress Zita of Austria and her daughter, the Archduchess Elizabeth who had to leave their Belgian exile because of the war.

Farmers In County
Vote For Control

Voting in Pitt county in the tobacco control referendum was considered "heavy" today with landowners, tenants and share-croppers trekking to the polls.

As indicated by an unofficial report by observers at the court house polls—Greenville township—the farmers were voting preponderantly in favor of the three-year plan.

An observer at the court house voting place said at mid-afternoon that 1,400 farmers had voted for the three-year plan, compared with only 14 against control.

Twenty-One Republics
Gather For Havana Conference

"FIFTH COLUMN"

Secretary Hull Looked To For Some Means Of Bringing
Argentina In Line
With Sister States

Havana, July 20.—(AP)—The conference of American republics, called at Washington's suggestion after Nazi invasion of the low countries to discuss Western Hemisphere defenses and economy, looked to United States Secretary of State Cordell Hull today for some formula for emphatic action against "fifth column" activities.

Delegates expressed a hope that Secretary Hull, arriving on the steamer Florida this morning for tomorrow's opening sessions, would produce a solution to the problem of bringing Argentina into line with her 20 sister republics. Argentina frequently has expressed unwillingness to cooperate in any plan which might jeopardize her trade relations with Europe's totalitarian states.

Rumors that Hull was bringing "secret" proposals from Washington were heard around the National hotel, headquarters of most of the delegates, but went without confirmation.

The American Secretary of State and members of his delegation reached Havana in mid-morning.

Hull, who left Miami last night for his first visit to Cuba since he came here as a captain of Marines-see volunteers in the Spanish-American war, said United States aims were to prevent "the calamities of other parts of the world" from reaching our shores to any greater extent than they have through the dislocation of trade and commerce and of free interchange of things worth while.

The Secretary termed the 21 American nations "friends in a common cause" and expressed the purpose of the conference as promotion of friendship and cooperation among nations wholly from any thought of aggrandizement or domination, a policy applicable "not only to the American republics, but to every nation of the world that is willing to meet us on that basis."

Favors Movement
Against 3rd Term

Washington, July 20.—(AP)—James A. Reed, former Democratic senator from Missouri, offered today to cooperate with Senator Burke (D-Neb.) in organizing Democrats opposed to a third term for President Roosevelt.

Burke, who announced he would bolt the Democratic party and support Wendell L. Willkie, Republican nominee, received a telegram from the Missouri Democratic leader suggesting a conference in Chicago next Thursday, July 25 of Jeffersonian Democrats.

Office assistants to Sen. Burke said he had not answered the telegram.

Sound Tax Program Needed
Babson Warns Against Making Tax
Collectors Out Of Business Men

Gloucester, Mass., July 19.—Talk in Washington about a new excess profits tax worries me. Obviously, we cannot spend $14,000,000,000 for defense without raising at least part of the money "as we go." The basic formula, however, should be that all new taxes should hit every person's pocketbook to make everyone realize that this country is entering a changed order—a new era. All should realize that we cannot go on living in the next five years the way we have in the past five.

It is unpleasant to say so, but I have seen no indication yet that the average worker, business man, or politician is ready to give up anything for the sake of the new defense program. This thought struck me forcibly during the past few days here in Gloucester. Each year I spend my birthday in this old colonial city where I was born. This community is the seat of religious freedom in the United States. It is a city whose principal livelihood for centuries has been from the sea. I come here each year to "reorient" myself, to view national and world affairs through the perspective of the traditions of my ancestors.

Italy Acknowledges Loss

VOTING TODAY

Take Time Out From Work To Go To Polls

By The Associated Press
Cigarette tobacco growers took time out today from their task of preparing a multi-million dollar crop to vote on production limitations designed by the government to bolster sagging income.

Some 250,000 farmers, tenants and share-croppers were expected to indicate their preference on three bright leaf tobacco plans presented through the Agricultural Adjustment Administration referendum.

The first, urged by farm officials throughout the six-state belt as the best influence on depressed markets, would establish acreage quotas for 1941, 1942 and 1943.

The second plan would extend the control another year. Third choice would be to discard quotas altogether.

First referendum returns came from Camden county, North Carolina, where all three eligible voters cast their ballots in favor of the three-year plan.

Warns Nazi Attack
On Britain Matter
Of Days

Rome, July 20.—(AP)—Italy today acknowledged loss of the cruiser Bartolomeo Colleoni, but claimed the sinking of a British warship in a three-hour naval battle in the middle Mediterranean yesterday. At the same time she declared that Germany's attack on Britain was only "a question of days."

This word came from the authoritative Fascist weekly Relazioni Internazionale, which described Nazi air raids against England as merely a preliminary to a great naval operation.

"A certain time is necessary for extending military operations over English territory," the weekly said. "The English may be more clever on defense than on attack, but this is a war of constant offensives in which the initiative always is Germany's privilege."

The weekly said reconstruction of Europe would be begun by Adolf Hitler and Premier Mussolini alone only after "absolute and complete victory."

The Balkan countries, particularly Yugoslavia, were warned that they would have to realize there is a new European order in which the Rome-Berlin axis "is not inclined to tolerate" outmoded "mentalities and ideas."

The Italian high command declared that two Italian cruisers had inflicted serious damage on British warships in naval battles yesterday near the Greek island of Crete. Sinking of the Bartolomeo Colleoni by a British shell was admitted.

The Italians reported one British warship was sunk in flames by bombs from an Italian plane.

BRITONS SAVE
ITALIAN CREW

First-Hand Story Is Told By British Officer

Cairo, July 20.—The British rescued 545 men from the Bartolomeo Colleoni, Italian cruiser sunk in a Mediterranean naval battle yesterday, a British communique asserted.

No casualties were suffered by the British in the action, the British said, although the Italian air force bombed their ship several times while they were rescuing the Italians from the water and while the fleet was returning to its base.

One British officer told of the fight:

"We sighted two Italian cruisers and immediately opened fire. One Italian cruiser turned tail in a hurry but the Bartolomeo Colleoni tarried long enough to answer our fire, then started a mad dash in any direction that seemed to represent safety."

"One of our shells hit the boiler room of the Bartolomeo Colleoni. We continued shelling, but the Italians ordered the crew to abandon ship because they had started stripping themselves of their clothing."

"We immediately started picking up what Italians we could while continuing to shell the cruiser, then we launched two torpedoes which landed squarely amid ship and started her on the way down. Another torpedo reached the cruiser's magazine so that her ammunition started exploding like an American Fourth of July celebration. That was the end."

Alvah Hardee, 22, and Walter Hardee, 31, both of whom live near Greenville on the Washington highway, are being held under bond of $200 each on charges of transporting illegal liquor after having been arrested last night by Pitt county ABC officers.

The two were arrested by the officers last night about seven and a few hours later were given a hearing before U. S. Commissioner Gray and bound over to the October term of Federal court to be held in Washington. Bond of $200 each was provided.

Officers drove up behind the men on the Washington highway about a mile east of Grimesland, both cars headed toward Greenville. When the siren was sounded, officers said, Walter Hardee began throwing jars of liquor out of the car and when all of it had been disposed of the pair stopped. One of the officers went back to the scene and mopped up some of the liquor with his handkerchief and squeezed it into a bottle for evidence.

Planes Swarm Over
England In Worst
Raids Of War With Heavy Casualties on Both Sides; Germany Attempting to Sow Distrust of Leadership In Minds
Of British Public

By The Associated Press
Germany turned radio propaganda guns on the British public today, warning of the death and destruction it may face if it persists in refusing to take Adolf Hitler's "final" road to peace.

German bombers blasted the length of Britain in pointed emphasis to the peace offer.

The Nazi objective seemed to be to sow distrust of their leadership in British minds. An English translation of Hitler's speech yesterday was broadcast again and again to England.

Elsewhere the impression grew that Hitler's long-threatened attack in force against the United Kingdom had come closer.

Informed sources in Berlin agreed the first reception in Britain of Hitler's "appeal to reason" was discouraging, "rowdy" and "crude," but said this was the plutocratic clique speaking. German expectations turned instead upon the British "man in the street."

Roaring across the coast in the early morning, German planes swarmed over England throughout the day in one of the worst raids of the war.

The day-long attacks were capped in mid-afternoon with a lightning raid on ships anchored in a southern English harbor. Seventeen planes let go their bomb cargoes, but apparently no ships were hit.

Anti-aircraft guns and fighting planes kept busy fending off attackers and broke up this foray. One German plane was believed shot down in the channel and observers said two others might have been downed by anti-aircraft fire.

The German high command reported new operations against Britain in a report that Nazi bombers had blasted harbors, anti-aircraft defenses and supply stations, sunk a 5,000-ton merchant ship, damaged three other vessels and a destroyer.

In these forays, said the high command, only three German planes were lost against 27 British planes shot down. The British claimed 16 Nazi planes have been downed in the past 24 hours.

Official Britain scornfully maintained silence on the Nazi Fuehrer's "last appeal to reason"—meaning peace on his own terms, but there were intimations that Prime Minister Churchill—who already has declared "we shall stand or fall, we shall tolerate no parley." Nazi deliver Britain's answer in the House of Commons Tuesday.

In Berlin informed German sources said any British hint of interest in Hitler's offer would hold off for the time being the long-threatened mass attack on the British Isles.

The marimba has become an important concert instrument for musical entertainments that are different. It is a kind of glorified xylophone, standing on legs, and capable of a wide range of beautiful tones.

The entertainment will be varied by having some piano and monologue numbers. Miss Peterson will be assisted by Miss Evelyn Fisk of the Chicago Conservatory of Music.

Miss Peterson has won a number of honors as a marimba player. She was soloist with the 100-piece Marimba Orchestra that toured Europe five years ago, just after she left high school. Two years later she won the title of National Champion of Marimba and Xylophone Players.

GETS SUPPORT ON LABOR LAW

Wage-Hour Legislation Backed By The Lumber Industry

Reflector Bureau. By HENRY AVERILL

Raleigh, July 20.—State Wage-Hour legislation along lines similar to the federal laws is getting support from an unexpected quarter as the result of the current checkup on North Carolina's lumber industry by combined state-federal inspectors.

Heretofore the lumber interests have been among the most uncompromising and unyielding foes of any wage-hour legislation of any sort, but as the checkup has proceeded, inspectors have found an increasing sentiment for state legislation.

It isn't because the lumbermen have all of a sudden been converted to any great system of social reform and progress—on the contrary there is the most selfish motive in the world behind the sudden support for a North Carolina wage-hour law.

The lumber men who have been shown to be engaged in interstate business have been forced to meet the requirements of the federal law; that's where the rub comes in. There are quite some lumber plants, small for the most part, but still large enough to stay in business) which are engaged in intrastate business only, and these are competing with the firms engaged in interstate commerce with a resultant advantage to the intrastaters because they do not have to meet the federal law, while the intrastaters do.

Commissioner of Labor Forrest H. Shuford reports that his inspectors have found considerable sentiment therefore, among the lumber people for state legislation which will place them all in the same category and thereby free them from the competitive disadvantage.

No Hookey Played By First Graders

Reflector Bureau. By HENRY AVERILL

Raleigh, July 20.—Figures from the State School Commission show that during the school year recently ended North Carolina's school children were not prone to "play hookey." In fact they seem to have been right regular in their attendance.

The figures show that against total enrollment for the year of 891,485 the average daily attendance was 791,425. That's 88.77 per cent; and if what is technically known as the "average daily membership" were available it is certain that the mark would be better than 90 per cent.

Average daily "membership" is arrived at by subtracting from total enrollment all withdrawals, transfers, deaths and discharges for one reason or another; then dividing this by the actual number of days school was in session. It is a much fairer method of ascertaining regularity of attendance than is total enrollment divided by average daily attendance.

For the 1939-40 school year the comparative total enrollment and average daily attendance for various categories were:

Whites and Indians: High school—162,795 enrolled, 148,413 daily attendance. Elementary schools—456,326 enrolled, 413,379 daily attendance. Total—619,121 enrolled, 560,792 attendance.

Negroes: High school—40,327 enrolled, 35,193 attendance. Elementary schools—232,037 enrolled, 195,440 attendance. Total—272,362 enrolled, 230,633 attendance.

Compared with the previous year North Carolina had a slightly lower total enrollment—891,485 to 892,543 than in 1938; but average daily attendance was slightly higher—791,425 to 790,502.

Light Docket Faced After Week's Recess. E. F. Tucker, clerk of the County court, said today that unless several cases came in between now and Tuesday, a light docket would be faced when the tribunal resumes hearing after having been in recess this week.

Only two or three cases have been docketed so far, but others probably will come in Monday. A few cases also have been continued for Tuesday.

No session of the court was held last week because of the absence of Judge Dink James.

Home and farm practices of interest were noted. These tours offer a day for visiting as well as for gaining information. As George Haddock said, "We either come back feeling satisfied with our methods or we find that by comparison we fall short and make a resolution that we will improve them."

Hillman's First Move In Defense Post May Head CIO, AFL Toward Peace

By MORGAN BEATTY AP Feature Service Writer

Washington.—Butte as a school-union way to the old antagonist labor leader Sidney Hillman sets out to do the impossible again as a member of the National Defense Commission.

This time it's his job to get America's idle men and idle plants to get to work, and when that's done, to all the gaps still left with youth, newly trained and disciplined for the national defense job ahead. And if he's not swamped along the way, he's expected to help settle or prevent strikes.

That's a big order. But Hillman's as confident as he was that day in 1910 when he led and won the seemingly hopeless strike in Chicago's open shop clothing industry.

He's as confident as he was in 1914, when he led his little band of 105 delegates out of the American Federation of Labor, formed the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America. As urbane as that day in 1933, when he accepted AFL's invitation to march the Amalgamated, now grown strong and powerful, back into the fold. And as unconcerned as he was more recently when AFL kicked him out again.

European Accent. "Don't you feel out of your element in this white marble Federal Reserve building?" I ask.

He laughs. "Not exactly; Julius Rosenwald once told me the Amalgamated's quarters in Chicago were as fine as his club. We have two banks, you know."

Sidney Hillman's accent is definitely old world. His English is exact, grammar fair. He was born in Lithuania.

His clothes throw you off. He's dressed like a business man, maybe a bit on the smart side. Summer-cool pastel blue, white socks and shoes. With his gold rimmed glasses, neatly parted hair, you might mistake him for a Rotary club president.

ident. You'd think him not a day over 40. The record shows he's 52.

He's tough, Cockish. However confident Hillman may be, his job's not easy.

The man's working with a labor movement whose house is divided against itself. He's dealing, too, with Army and Navy men whose everyday work leaves them indifferent to labor movements, and many of whom fear—off the record—that union labor will insist on limiting apprenticeships in key industries to protect high wage scales, national defense or no national defense.

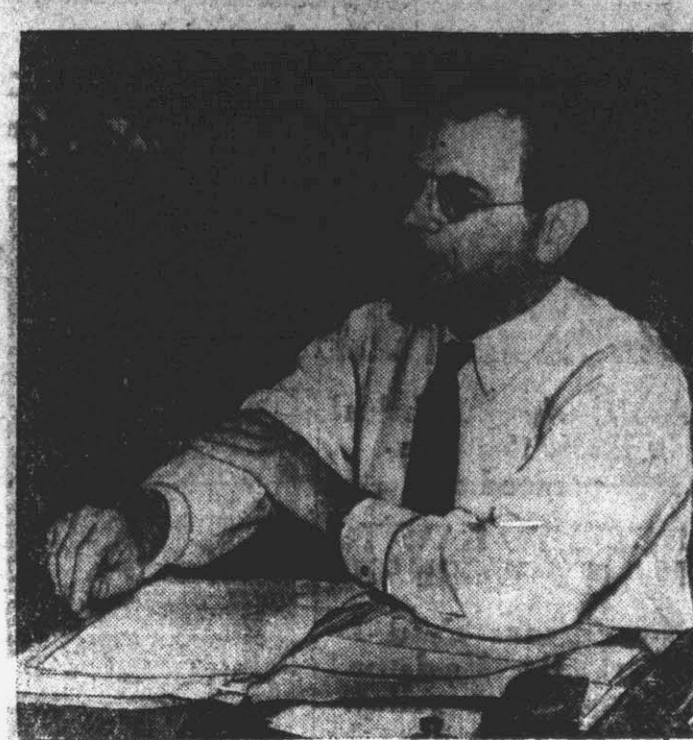

Also watching Hillman's step and trying to oust him in favor of a military youth administrator, is Georgia's Congressman E. E. Cox, and a bloc of other lawmakers. They say "Sidney Hillman" and "Fifth Columnist" in the same breath, even though they don't actually charge he's a communist. For Hillman's on record as fighting communism, barring it from leadership in the Amalgamated. Ben Gitlow, renegade red, in his "I Confess" calls Hillman two-faced, opportunist.

Seeks Labor Peace. Sensing labor's own struggle as his No. 1 hurdle, Hillman has already struck first—for peace!

"I have asked a joint committee of CIO, AFL and the railroad brotherhoods to advise me," he says. "They will help with the apprentice problem and other labor difficulties. They will work together. National defense comes first. They know it. I know it."

A high official in AFL who holds no brief for Hillman tells me privately that first bold stroke might snowball into a drift toward permanent peace between CIO and AFL.

Sitting at Hillman's right hand as administrative assistant for labor supply is Floyd B. Reeves, of the American Youth Commission, and deputy for the nation's most famous champion of youth—Owen D. Young.

Defense Commissioner Sidney Hillman He Dwells In Marble Halls

of General Electric. That's Hillman's and the President's answer to Congressman Cox, although the congressman obviously considers it no answer at all, not even a pacifier.

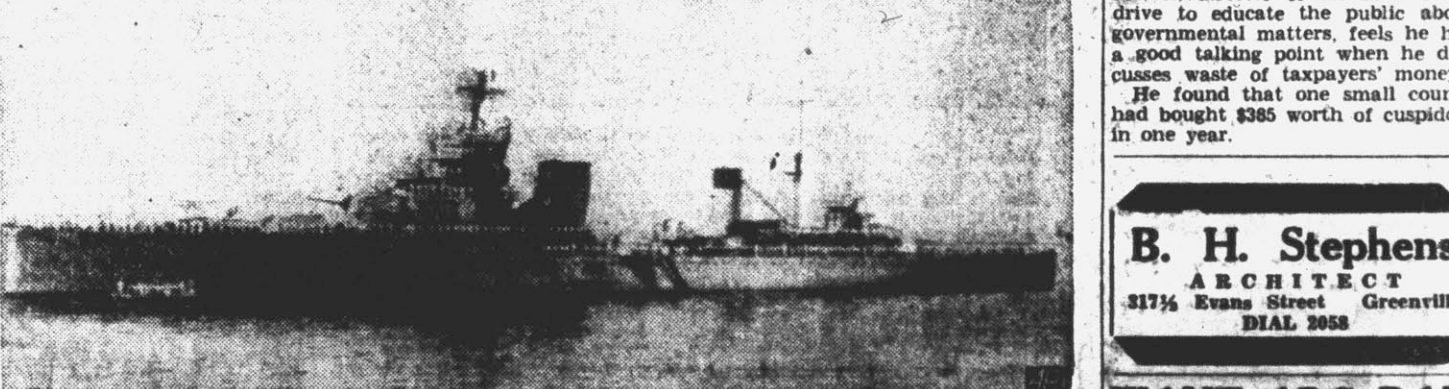

He Coordinates. "How do you propose to train the nation's youth?" is my next question. He's talking rapidly, against time.

"That is first a question for the President, the cabinet, the Congress to decide. Compulsory or voluntary, that is not my job. Once decided, then it will be up to the regular government agencies to train the youth—the army, the navy, the civil aeronautics administration, the office of Education's vocational schools, CCC, National Youth Administration, and the rest.

"The National Defense commission will merely co-ordinate. It will not be super-government. My particular job is to find out what the demand for labor is, to supply that demand through the regular government departments and agencies, and without duplicating effort."

It's that simple. But not that easy. And Hillman knows it.

British Report Italian Cruiser Sunk

The British admiral announced that the Italian cruiser Bartolomeo Colleoni (above) had been sunk in the Mediterranean by the cruiser Sydney of the Australian navy. This is the first Italian cruiser reported lost in the European war. The loss was acknowledged by Italy.

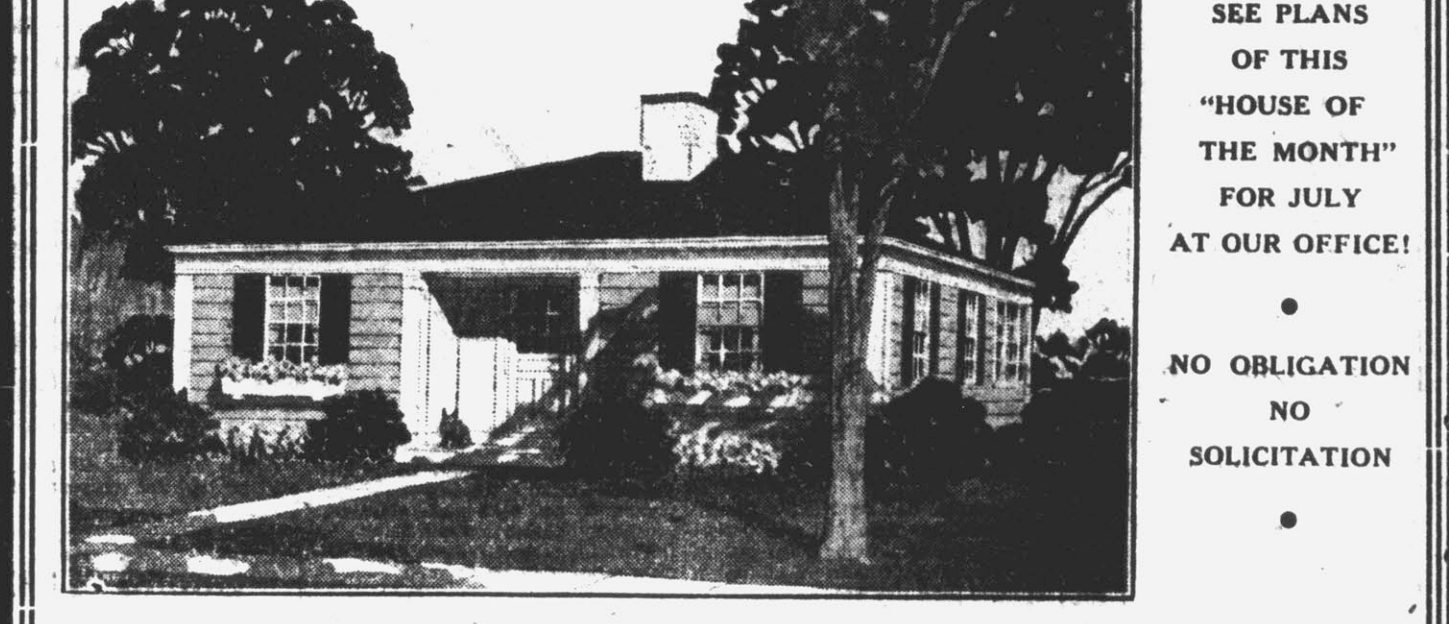

Like Their 'Eatin' Tobacco Longview, Tex. — (AP) — Curtis Morris, director of an East Texas drive to educate the public about governmental matters, feels he has a good talking point when he discusses waste of taxpayers' money.

He found that one small county had bought $365 worth of cuspidors in one year.

Strength For The Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

UNSELFISHNESS EASES THE LOAD

The best way to get rid of our own burdens is to help some one else bear his burden.

If you have a deep sorrow in life and you think about it day by day the time comes when it rests like a heavy weight upon your mind and soul. But forget about your own sorrow for awhile, talk with some one else about a very real sorrow in his life or hers, feel for awhile the weight of that poignant grief upon your heart, and the result will be that your sorrow will become tolerable in comparison. And the fact that you have helped some one else bear a sorrow will ease the weight of your own. You will still grieve, of course, but you will find a new strength of soul to bear up under this grief. Help some one else solve a great life problem, and suddenly you find yourself well on the way toward the solution of your own problem. Something mysterious has happened as you have helped yourself with others. You have turned from preoccupation with your own problem, and after helping others solve theirs, have returned with a new strength and insight to confront your own.

Many a person has turned from personal disappointment which could not have been borne with strength and sanity many years and has found healthy and joyous living in identifying his life with the burdened lives of others.

● This usual week-end reminder is not out of place. If you are planning an outing or an out-of-town visit or just a ride on the highways during this week-end, remember that the exercise of caution on your part might save a life. Drive a little slower and live a lot longer, is a good motto for everyday in the week, but it is even more important on week-ends when there is an increased amount of traffic on the highways.

● The eyes of the world today turn to Havana, Cuba, where representatives of the American countries will gather to discuss steps toward joint action for the protection of the Western Hemisphere both economically and against any foreign invasion. Naturally the delegates from the various countries will arrive at the meeting with as many varying plans and each probably with some pet project of its own, but it is to be hoped that the discussions will lead to a complete understanding between the Americas and result in truly a union of "Good Neighbors" for the common good of the new world. If the Americas fail to stand together in this crisis they may expect in the end to suffer the consequences.

Washington Daybook

By Jack Stinner

Washington. — Looking back on the early days of the Chicago convention, I can say honestly that neither I, pretty much a freshman in the field of politics, nor any of my seniors ever saw anything like it. When the last chapter in the history of American politics is written, the conventions of 1940 will take a lot of explaining.

At Philadelphia, it was because a recent political change-coat, Wendell L. Willkie, wanked in and ran off with the nomination while old-time Republicans gasped for breath and cried for time to catch up with the march of amazing events.

In Chicago, it was because the silence of "the man who wasn't there" left everybody in a state of utter confusion.

"Sweeping" The Convention
For a columnist to weep for words is hereby... but I haven't the verbal left jabs and right hooks to explain the consternation into which the Chicago convention was thrown by the silence of Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

Nevertheless, with this little perspective, I'm going to try to put it down.
Let's take the press first. Far be it from me to turn on my journalistic brethren. Whenever I want the facts in a case and want them right, I go to the newsman. There have been times when they were baffled, as, for example, when they knew more than they are able to get into print. Good taste, journalistic integrity, editorial policy demands, and other factors sometimes forbid putting down every guess and calculation, but they very rarely forbid putting down the known and tenable facts.

But what happened in Chicago? In the course of 48 hours, I saw John N. Garner, Burton K. Wheeler, Paul V. McNutt, Cordell Hull, and James A. Farley announced very solemnly as "sweeping the convention" in a drive for the presidential nomination.

I heard all of these plus Governor Lloyd Stark of Missouri, Senator Scott Lucas of Illinois, Senator "Jimmy" Byrnes, William O. Douglas, of the Supreme Court, Attorney General "Bob" Jackson, boomed as Roosevelt's definite selection as a running mate.

They Didn't Know
Through it all, I talked to Byrnes, Secretary of Commerce Hopkins, and Frank Walker, of New York. All Roosevelt hawks. I talked to McNutt, Farley and Wheeler. It wasn't that they wouldn't tell. They just didn't know. All were certain Roosevelt would run again if he were nominated by an overwhelming vote, but more than that they didn't know. The confusion of these men was too real to be simulated. Whom did he want for vice-president? What else? The answer: Blank.

What was the man who wasn't there waiting for? Why didn't he say what he wanted? He, although absent, was running the convention and everybody knew it. Some of them guessed that Roosevelt wanted to know by what overwhelming majority he was wanted by his party. That the offer was made, how could he say?
In the light of events this certainly was a pretty true picture of the situation, but if it ever has happened before... if it ever left more delegates to a national convention sitting at a limbo for so long, I've failed to find any trace of it in the record.

Perhaps I can sum it up. Wandering around the lobby of the Stevens hotel one night, I ran across an old friend. He was a member of the national committee, a politician of many years though he had never run for office. He was haggard, insomnia-ridden, almost hysterical. What he said was:
"I don't know, Jack. I don't know a damned thing. Why, oh why doesn't some one give us our orders and let us get some sleep?"

Raleigh, July 20.—Time limit for filing applications for the American Legion's Tar Heel Boys State, has been extended until July 31, according to a special bulletin from Richard L. Young of Charlotte, chairman of the commission directing selection of personnel for the Boys' State.

Legion officials are unanimously in agreement that this year's session of Boys State will be the greatest ever staged. It will, incidentally, be the third annual.

Boys State, which will be held at the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill the last week in August is just what the name implies—a real State for the week, run by the youngsters who do all the things that are done in government.

Its purpose is to train and inspire the youth of North Carolina in full realization of their responsibility to God and Country and to teach them the duties, rights and privileges of Citizenship, through participation in governmental functions.

Albert Coats, head man of the Institute of Government will be director. Roy L. McMillan, Raleigh attorney, will be assistant.

Eligible are boys who are members of junior or senior high school classes.

Boys may be sponsored by individuals as well as by organizations. However, all such sponsorships must be handled through an American

This comes from the State Employment Service: Asked by an itinerant service interviewer if he has ever been injured on a job, the claimant replied: "No sir, Boss, I ain't never been fired yet."

The Federal Wage-Hour folks quite obviously saw the point to the argument of North Carolina Commissioner of Labor Forrest H. Shuford. He pointed out to them that all credit in the current wage-hour inspection of the lumber industry has been going to the Feds while the State unit was doing most of the work.

Yesterday there were handed out by Mr. Shuford a release telling all about what the State men have done in the lumber drive. The release had been prepared in Washington by the Feds and sent along to the Raleigh officials.

The North Carolina Industrial Commission is planning in connection with the WPA, conduct of first aid schools simultaneously in every county of North Carolina.

The idea is one of the many which have grown out of the national defense program. It is figured that nothing reduces the speed of industrial production more than accidents, and nothing keeps down them (more) than general knowledge of first aid.

The University's president Frank Graham will make the main speech at the 15th annual Farmer's Field Day at the Blacklands Test Farm, Wenoona, next week. He will be introduced by Commissioner of Agriculture Kerr Scott.

Busiest offices in Raleigh are the recruiting stations of army, navy and marine corps. All are located in the postoffice building. While most state and federal offices are sunk in a sort of sweltering lassitude these days, there are a few doughboys, gobs and boots, Raleigh and North Carolina, incidentally, are consistently leading the nation in the matter of recruiting.

Kinston Again Defeats Greenville To Sweep The Series

Greenville Blanked Last Night For Six Frames

The Greenies will open a new series, with Goldsboro, at Guy Smith stadium tonight after having dropped both ends of the two-game series with Kinston.

The Greenies were blanked for six innings last night as the Eagles defeated the locals 4-2.

Greenville could make its eight hits—no two by any one man—account for only a couple of runs. Three hits brought in one Greenie in the seventh and Crowe's double scored Wilson who had doubled in the eighth.

Meanwhile, however, the Eagles had garnered one in the fourth, two in the fifth and one in the seventh.

Groundwork For Good Golf 3. Find Your Own Swing Pattern

Every golfer should have a position pattern. The golfer with aim at the ideal swing which requires time, patience and practice. The average top flight golfer should try for a slightly modified version of the ideal swing, with most golfers striving for a still further modified swing pattern. Fundamentals are almost standard but every case is individual, thus the need for personal professional supervision in aiding you to decide upon a definite swing plan and to see that you consistently adhere to it. Every swing and every golfer is an individual unit and must be dealt with separately. The catch-as-catch-can method of unrelated approach is bad. Begin each season with a definite swing pattern and make certain there is a clear understanding as to this objective as well as the outline of building toward it. Check occasionally to see that you are on the right track as practicing, incorrectly is usually worse than no practice. With a clear conception of the fundamentals, a good game can be developed with a moderate amount of practice and play. Most golfers make what I consider a great mistake in contacting an instructor only when they are in unusual distress. This often results in emergency sort of treatment. It would be much better to consult with a professional and lay plans that would prevent emergency situations. Engage the golfing doctor to keep you well.

MONDAY NIGHT'S GAMES

Car Sales vs. Water-Light.
Tadlock vs. Pepsi Cola.

The underdogs walked off with honors in last night's softball games with Pepsi Cola defeating Blount-Harvey 9-7, to pull within a game and a half of the second-place department store team; and Carolina Dairy beating Water-Light 14-8 to drop the utility team into the cellar position, long held by the dairy-men.

Pepsi Cola got off to a good start to come out with the victory. The boys scored four in the initial frame on three hits, an error and an outfield fly. Blount-Harvey got two in the third, but the Pepsi Cola team added three more in the fifth to hold a seven to two lead. In the sixth, however, Blount-Harvey got five, including home runs by Cleveland Potts. This knotted the count, but the department store boys were never able to get another, while Pepsi Cola came back in its half of the sixth to make two. It was Potts' first loss in the past several games.

Carolina Dairy had one big inning and produced enough—eleven—in the frame, the second, to win the game. One each was added in the fourth, fifth and sixth. Water-Light got four in the fourth and kept nibbling at the Dairy's lead, getting two in the fifth and one each in the sixth and seventh, but the 11-run inning was too much to overcome and the Dairy dropped the utility team in its old place in the cellar.

Surtaxes Unsound

Congress must be extremely careful in seeking new methods of raising money for our defense program. So far the talk seems to center on "excess profits" taxes. Aside from the practical difficulties of determining "excess profits," this is dangerous for two reasons. First, every person—not just business corporations—must be made to feel the burden of this defense program for the sake of our national spirit. Second, we must not discourage business men. We have plenty of evidence to show that high surtaxes defeat their own purpose. Such taxes do not raise the anticipated revenue; they discourage employers; they penalize expansion; they cripp

Roosevelt, A Frosh At Harvard, Won Where Gop Bigwigs Failed

From the start of his administration, President Roosevelt has been known as a precedent breaker but most Americans do not realize on what a broad foundation this reputation rests. This is the first of three articles in which Morgan Beatty tells about precedents Roosevelt has broken—from Harvard to third term nomination.

By MORGAN M. BEATTY
AP Feature Service Writer
The forbidding front doors of the Charles W. Eliot home swung open and in strode Freshman F. D. Roosevelt, all set—so he thought—to bust his first precedent.

Suddenly it dawned on him that he was a mere freshman standing within a few paces of the awesome presence. Not only was Dr. Eliot president of Harvard but he also was fortified behind the fanciest set of classroom sideburns in America.

Yet, wonder of wonders, Dr. Eliot would see Mister Roosevelt.

"I am a candidate for the Crimson," explained jittery young Franklin, shifting his tall frame from one starchy leg to the other. "I should like the honor of reporting for the paper how you will vote in the coming election."

One Precedent The Less
For a terrible moment Dr. Eliot was silent.

He had refused consistently the pressure of New England's Republican bigwigs to come out for McKinley.

"It is against the rules," began Dr. Eliot, "for a candidate for the Crimson staff to interview the president of Harvard; in fact, unprecedented."

Maybe Roosevelt blood just naturally boils at the word precedent. Anyway, young Roosevelt stuck out his fuzzi-fested jaw and argued. At length, Dr. Eliot yielded and an eager youth won where political wire pullers had failed.

This was precedent-busting on a nation-wide scale, although the public of 1900 never suspected neither did he, that one day this man would reach the political precipice that yawns between any man and a third term. The big metropolitan papers merely reported that the Harvard Crimson said Dr. Eliot would support McKinley.

The board of the Crimson took on young Roosevelt, and with him acquired a peck of trouble and a booming circulation. He busted everything in sight. And precedents were about the only thing in sight on the Harvard campus in those days. He panned the football team, and the students, too, for faint-hearted cheering. Then he took on the overseers and forced them to put fire escapes on the dormitories.

One of his scoops was a story that his distant uncle, the Vice President, would address a Harvard class. He admired the political tactics of unpredictable T. R., the trust buster.

Like most young men, Franklin took a bride, Eleanor Roosevelt, his sixth cousin. With her at his side on his wedding day, he tasted the joy of riding down Fifth Avenue between waving throngs. But they were not cheering for him. They were yelling for Teddy, who had given the bride away.

Franklin broke no precedents when he turned his post-graduate law course in Columbia University. He took the bar examination anyway, and passed.

Nothing unusual, either, was his work with an upstate law firm in New York; his settling down as a country squire in Hyde Park with his wife and young children.

But came 1910 and the little red Maxwell—a four-wheeled contraption that passed in those days for a motor car. Franklin D. Roosevelt was 25, vigorous, sometimes bored with moldering law times. And that red Maxwell tempted his venture-some soul.

He would be the first man in the history of New York state politics to campaign for office in an automobile.

They Laughed
Democratic leaders in his county laughed indulgently gave him the nomination to the New York state senate. Since the year of Franklin Roosevelt's birth (1882), Dutchess county had been sending Republicans to the legislature. No Democrat had even made a fight of it until young Roosevelt cranked up that Maxwell. The horse and buggy farmers loved it. He won.

The story of his fight in the legislature to keep Tammany Boss Charlie Murphy from sending Blue-eyed Billie Strohman to the United States Senate is a classic. And Murphy had never before been put out for the count by a 28-year-old neophyte. Neither had his colleague, Big Tim Sullivan.

"Better drop him off a dock somewhere," said Tammany's sage Big Tim. "The Roosevelts run true to form. He's likely to do for us what the Colonel is going to do for the Republican party—split us wide open."

T. R. did split the Republicans wide open two years later.

BUDDING ROMANCE in "MY SON, MY SON"

Here's Louis Hayward and Madeleine Carroll who contribute to the romance in "My Son, My Son" at the Pitt today and Sunday.

the scene" and they had to move back to get it again.

Then the camera began pivoting on its tripod, began to look around from side to side. Then it limbered up some more and climbed on a truck, or "dolly." This permitted it to travel a little, to move up close to the actors and move away from them without "breaking" the scene or cutting.

After a while a "dolly" wasn't enough of a trick. The camera called for and got a crane. This allowed it not only to move forward and back, but to swoop down on or away from a close-up.

Directors, especially the imports from Europe, espoused the jittery camera and vied with each other in obtaining trick effects. The camera developed "monkey blood" and swung from ceilings, stood on its head, and climbed rafters. It went on a spree, and then talkies brought the morning after.

The jittery camera had to be enclosed in a "sweatbox" to deaden its operating sounds. Actors worked and perspired in tiny, stuffy sets, practically stood still directly under microphones so their voices could be recorded. This lasted nearly two years, until the engineers began to take the mystery out of sound and learned to control it and the talkies went outdoors again. It wasn't long before the microphone, as well as the camera, was traveling. Rouben Mamoulian had himself a dolly spree on his first picture.

ture, "Applause." He made that camera and mike wander down and up corridors and streets and rooms until the audience got fairly dizzy trying to keep up with it.

Lately John Ford made a picture called "The Grapes of Wrath." His chief cameraman was Gregg Toland. Together they slipped the camera a powder; they made it stand still through most of the footage. More recently they made together a picture called "The Long Voyage Home." They doubled the powder. The picture has no "dolly" or crane shots. They "panned" only when strictly necessary. They let the characters do the moving while the camera stood still.

Toland says the method helps to keep audience attention on the story and characters and away from movie mechanics. It keeps the camera out of the scene, gives better "composition," eliminates softness and blurring, gives clear definition and character to actors' faces.

It also saves time, he says.

And time saves money, and—for that reason if no other—the cameras of Hollywood may be expected to calm down even further in the near future.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, July 20.—(AP)—The buying urge was too feeble to count for much in today's stock market and leading issues generally followed a narrowly irregular lower route.

Price changes on the whole, however, were meaningless because of the continued laxness of dealings. The turnover of about 130,000 shares was one of the smallest for a Saturday in more than a year.

Brokers still blamed apathy mainly on the reluctance of speculative forces to take a decisive position pending the next major European war move.

Hollywood
Sings And Sings
By Eddie Cantor

Hollywood—The camera has taken a sedative. It's calming down. It's shaking off the jitters. In fact, it's so calm that it's standing still—which is practically revolutionary.

"Reactionary" would be a better word for its standing still. It is going back to the habit it formed of necessity in pioneer film times.

For, once upon a time, the moving picture camera never moved. It stood on a tripod and aimed its lenses in one direction, and the actors moved in front of it. If they moved too far, they were, "out of the scene" and they had to move back to get it again.

Then the camera began pivoting on its tripod, began to look around from side to side. Then it limbered up some more and climbed on a truck, or "dolly." This permitted it to travel a little, to move up close to the actors and move away from them without "breaking" the scene or cutting.

After a while a "dolly" wasn't enough of a trick. The camera called for and got a crane. This allowed it not only to move forward and back, but to swoop down on or away from a close-up.
