BOMB-AND-RUN NAZI RAIDERS STRIKE ISLES

Continue To Harass Wide Section Of England

NO COMPROMISE SEEN IN LONDON

Foreign Minister Lord Halifax Prepares Speech Reiterating Churchill's Statement

London, July 22.—(AP) Bomb-and-run German raiders kept up harassment of the British Isles today while Britain anticipated an emphatic "no compromise" from their government tonight to Adolf Hitler's "last chance" peace overture.

With Nazi bombs exploding in widely scattered areas, Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax arranged a speech expected to reiterate what Prime Minister Churchill has said repeatedly, that Britain is in for a fight to the finish.

Churchill may follow it up with a speech of his own on the same subject when he goes before the House of Commons tomorrow. The Germans directed their attacks today at the midlands industrial part of Britain, northeast and southeast Scotland.

One Dornier 17 was shot down in flames bringing to 30 the number of raiding craft believed downed since Saturday.

The ministry of Home Security said some casualties were inflicted during incendiary bomb attacks on three towns in Scotland, but that property damage was slight.

The Admiralty announced the loss of the 1,260-ton destroyer Brazen, sunk while being towed to port after being damaged in an air attack.

Negro Boy Drowns In Tar River Here

A 16-year-old Negro boy, O. C. Corey, son of Louis Corey of 528 Douglas avenue and an employee of the Flanagan Buggy company drowned in Tar river in the River-dock section here shortly before noon today.

The boy, in company with several companions, was in swimming. It was not known whether he developed the cramps, or stepped in a hole and was unable to swim to the bank. Funeral directors where the body was taken said they did not know whether the boy could swim or not.

Bank Of Fairbluff Victim of Robbery

Fair Bluff, N. C., July 22.—(AP)—Two armed white men concealed themselves in the Bank of Fairbluff last night and when Cashier A. G. Rogers appeared forced him to allow them to enter the time lock vault.

R. C. Tucker, president, said between $1,500 and $2,000 was stolen. The robbers were masked and wore rubber gloves.

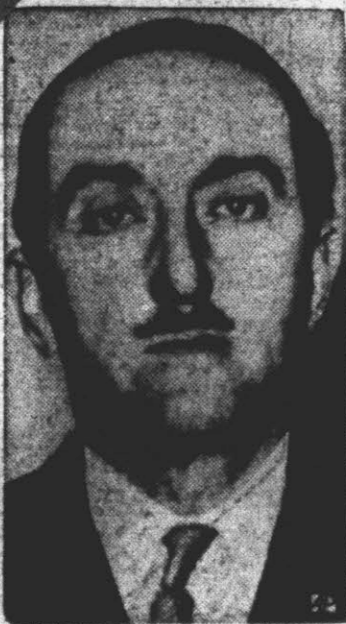

The robbers bound and gagged the cashier and then calmly waited until the time lock on the vault allowed it to be opened without giving an alarm.

Tucker said the robbers informed Rogers they had companions waiting outside the bank, but that none were seen.

Rogers was left in the bank's vault, the door of which was left standing ajar, Tucker said.

WILLKIE GAINS MORE SUPPORT

J. W. Hanes Among Those Joining GOP Camp

Colorado Springs, Col., July 22.—(AP)—An offer of support by two former new deal office holders prompted Wendell L. Willkie, Republican presidential nominee, to suggest today a movement to organize Democrats and independents of like belief.

Lewis Douglas, budget director in the early days of the Roosevelt administration, and John W. Hanes, former assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury, offered to work for Willkie's election.

Democrats who recently have pledged their support to Willkie include Irvin S. Cobb, the author; Vance McCormick, former Democratic national chairman; Stephen Chadwick, former national commander of the American Legion; and William H. "Alfalfa Bill" Murray, former governor of Oklahoma.

In a telegram to the Republican nominee Douglas and Hanes said they would "seek to enlist in your behalf the support of Democrats who believe with you that loyalty to country takes precedence over loyalty to party."

In reply Willkie requested Douglas, Hanes and others to "commence in your own way the organization of Democrats and independents of like belief."

Douglas once served as budget director under President Roosevelt.

Hanes, a native of Winston-Salem, N. C., served as assistant secretary of the Treasury until recently.

102-Degree Mark Hit Here Sunday

Greenville citizens sweltered under a 102-degree temperature yesterday—the hottest of this summer according to the official airways station figures.

At 1 p. m. today the mercury was standing at 98, but was gradually climbing to a higher mark and by 8 o'clock had reached the 99-degree mark.

No Relief Sighted From Hot Weather

Chicago, July 22.—(AP)—No immediate relief was in prospect today from the mid-summer heat wave which has engulfed most of the nation for three days.

FDR REQUESTS FUND FOR AID OF NEIGHBORS

Would Increase Capital Of Export-Import Bank

SEEKS TO AID NORMAL MARKET Asserts War In Europe Preventing Flow Of Surplus Products Into Usual Channels

Washington, July 22.—(AP)—President Roosevelt asked Congress today to increase the lending power of the Export-Import bank by $500,000,000 so that it might be "of greater assistance to our neighbors south of the Rio Grande."

In a special message coincident with the Pan-American Congress at Havana, Mr. Roosevelt said that war in Europe was preventing the flow of surplus products from the Western Hemisphere to their normal markets.

"It is to be hoped," he said, "that before another year world trade can be reestablished, but pending this adjustment we in the United States should join with the people of the other republics of the Western Hemisphere in meeting their problems. I call the attention of Congress to the fact that by helping our neighbors we will be helping ourselves."

"It is in the interest of the producers of our country as well as in the interest of producers of other American countries that there shall not be disorganized or cut-throat markets in those commodities which we all export."

No sensible person would advocate an attempt to prevent the normal exchange of commodities between other continents and the Americas, but what can and should be done is to prevent excessive fluctuations caused by distress arising from temporary interruption in the flow of trade or the fact that there has not yet been re-established a system of free exchange. Unless exporting countries are able to assist their neighbors they will be forced to bargain as best they can."

21 REPUBLICS OPEN SESSION

Commissions Set Up To Deal With Many Problems

Havana, July 22.—(AP)—The emergency conference of the 21 American republics set up commissions at a closed meeting today to deal with vital problems of hemisphere defense and economy.

This pre-conference work set in motion the delegates, adjourned to wait for the various governments to define their positions in formal declarations at the opening session later today.

The United States took a place only on the important peace commission which is to consider the whole question of continental defense, including the future status of European possessions in the western hemisphere.

The conferey rules, however provide that any country submitting a proposal to a commission automatically becomes a member of that commission.

The address of Secretary of State Cordell Hull in the late afternoon was expected to assume the status of a policy-guiding declaration on all important phases.

Model Plane Club Wins 1st Honors

Yesterday six members of the Hub City Modelers, a local model airplane club, went to a statewide model airplane meet in Rocky Mount sponsored by the Lions club there.

The best flight of the day was made by G. A. Taylor, Jr., one of the local contestants. His rubber-powered model airplane went out 800 feet over the airport after flying 20 minutes. However, due to the fact that it was not an official flight it did not count in the contest.

Christian Science Church.
"Life" was the subject of the lesson-lesson in all Christian Science churches and societies, Sunday, July 21.

The golden text was from John 17:3. "This is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent."

Among the citations which comprised the lesson-lesson were the following from the Bible: "And I saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and be their God, and people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away." (Revelations 21:3-4).

The lesson-lesson also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Life demonstrates Life. The immortality of Soul makes man immortal. If God, who is Life, were parted for a moment from His reflection, man, during that moment there would be no divinity reflected. The ego would be unexpressed, and the Father would be childless—no Father. If Life or Soul and its representative, man, unite for a period and then are separated as by a law of divorce to be brought together again at some uncertain future time and in a manner unknown—and this is the general religious opinion of mankind—we are left without a rational proof of immortality. But man cannot be separated for an instant from God if man reflects God."

Some More Self-Help Books.

In this day and age when expert advice is available in books and over radios, "there is no possible pardon for drabness and dullness, for dowdiness or despair." Better health, better grooming and better clothes improve your appearance, and more and better reading will improve your personality. If you can't be beautiful, you can be attractive, and if you can't be brilliant and gay, you can be pleasant and interested.

Each of us has something. Are you making the best of that something? Are you taking advantage of your resources? Do you realize that you can slough off mediocracy? That it is being done by thousands every day. When have you done any mental housekeeping? Are you polishing of your speech, any dusting of ideas, or purging of prejudice? Are you casual? Do you have plenty of common sense and good judgment in your storehouse? Do you keep up with current thought? What are you doing to keep from being left behind? We have to work at this business of living so why not read these books at the Sheppard Memorial Library and get where you want to go?

"Ohanna"—Marjorie Wilson—The author of this book does not agree with Sir J. M. Barrie that you are born with or without charm. Rather, she believes that charm can be attained by definite and careful study, that the world's most charming people have cultivated this attribute to a high degree. Miss Wilson has helped thousands of women in public life and society to become what they desired to be. She can help you, too, if you take time to read this charming book about charm.

"Be Your Own Age"—Marjorie Barstow Greenlee—An enlightening book for every woman, written by the wife of a psychologist. The author is sympathetic with her sex, but intolerant of any woman being otherwise than her most charming self. However, she thinks every woman should be her own age, thereby attaining a part of that charming self. She believes that every age has its attraction, its joy and its compensation, and she tries to show these to her readers. In the present changing conditions of society she has brought to light some interesting facts, not entirely modern, but most adequate for present day living.

"Handbook of English"—Clarence Stratton—Polish your English with this authoritative American guide to correct usage. Just reading it through from cover to cover should provide good fun, for it is lively, fresh and entertaining, and there is a quality about it far from that of the usual dry-as-dust handbook. The book contains literary and grammatical terms, disputed pronunciations, slang definitions, and many other most questions.

"Your Life As A Woman"—Margaret Devereux—Is life passing you by? Do you have a secret and ceaseless sense of your own inadequacy? Then you need to read this book. It is hopeful and helpful, written in a positive vein, easily read and can be as readily followed. It is a book about your metaphysical side that urges upon you the necessity of your personal development. The intensive and intelligent knowledge of your worth and capacities. Mrs. Devereux believes that every one has some kind of personality, the trouble is that they are not aware of their personality, that advantage is not taken of it. And she believes that you can always be in control of yourself, your emotions and your problems.

A splendid self-help article is found in the Reader's Digest for July, "Linger Up Your Imagination," by Ray Giles. Also in the May Forum was one entitled, "I'm a New Woman," by Enid Griffin. Both of these magazines can be found on the magazine table in the library.

Man About Manhattan

By George Tucker

New York—Talbot Patrick is the publisher of the Goldsboro, N. C. News-Argus, and every now and then he likes to take a run up to New York. On his last outing here he went out to the fair, realizing as he got off the train that his pass book had just two tickets left. It was one of those books that may be refilled after the last ticket is used.

To get his refill in a hurry, Mr. Patrick used one ticket entering the Fair grounds. He promptly left the grounds through an exit and presented the book for re-entry, using up the last ticket. It was at the moment he presented the book the second time that he realized, to his amazement, that he was using last year's book—from the San Francisco fair.

One of our favorite waiters in Manhattan is Julius, who has been at the Pennsylvania hotel "Nineteen years and eight months," says Julius, the sort of picturesque old Manhattan character you don't forget. He looks like the man who carries the drum in the Spirit of '76. He has a special dessert which he makes himself whose ingredients are rum, strawberries, and ice cream. It's a Russian dessert. He would be proud to fix it for you some night, if you are there, and ask him to.

Another tip for those who enjoy an occasional splurge in distinctive cuisines is this. Let Miro at the Coq Rouge fix you a perfectly swell dish which contains lobster and tuna. It hasn't even got a name. It's just something Miro thought up. There are other ingredients, but then Miro won't talk. It's his secret and it is something worth keeping.

If you have tears to weep, prepare to weep them now. Weep for poor John McCartney, who left the other day for Lake Placid and a season of toil. As you know, Kate Smith has a daily 15 minute broadcast period. To broadcast there must be an engineer. But Kate is broadcasting from her summer home on Lake Placid. Therefore, Johnny is off to Lake Placid for three months, to work just 15 minutes a day.

And what then, John? "The day after I get back," says John, "I leave for my vacation."

Strange how the name of Judge Crater bobs up in the diary of Manhattan. Every few months he is supposed to have been seen in some remote sector of the world. In New York his disappearance and whereabouts is as much a mystery today as it was twelve years ago. One night he was here in the flesh, smiling and handsome. He had dinner at a Broadway restaurant. Some time during the dinner he got up, excused himself, and walked out into the street. Not a single solitary human who ever knew him, or has his interest at heart, knows where he went or what happened to him. Yet it hasn't been so long ago that someone "recognized" him in Death Valley. Another account had him in some African refuge. I have talked with men who are sure that he is in China. Now comes a school teacher from New York who thinks she saw him in Mexico two months ago, sitting in a country store, smoking a pipe.

Bomb Was No Dud, Says Bullitt

William Bullitt, (right) U.S. ambassador to France, is shown in New York upon his arrival by Clipper plane as he disclosed to reporters that a German air bomb which he escaped in Paris was not a "dud" as had been reported in censored dispatches. He said the projectile was a time bomb which exploded an hour later, destroying the room at the air ministry.

He was sentenced to serve 17 days, and for his first meal in jail received the usual meal—bologna, bread and coffee. The jailer found the offender's food untouched.
"What's the matter?" he asked. "I don't like bologna. Let me out of here. I'll pay the fine."

DR. REYNOLDS PRAISES MOVE

Employees of New N. C. Industry To Be Examined

Raleigh — Necessary equipment is being set up for the complete physical examination of approximately 1,000 men to be employed by the Aluminum company of America on its new $10,000,000 hydro-electric developments at Mantabala and Sylva, it was announced here Friday by Dr. Carl V. Reynolds, State Health officer and T. A. Wilson, Chairman of the North Carolina Industrial Commission. The work will be done by the Division of Industrial Hygiene, a conjoint activity of these two State agencies, of which Dr. T. F. Vestal and M. F. Trice are co-directors.

Each prospective employee will undergo a complete pro-employment examination, including an x-ray check-up of the chest and a serological test. Dr. Reynolds pointed out, declaring that "this will be a striking example of what every employer should do to aid in the preparedness program whether for the performance of duties within the community, in training, or at the front.

"Of course, the government sees to it that men actually engaged in military service are physically fit," he went on, "but why not correct at the source, conditions which made a third of our man-power unfit in 1917?" he asked.

"The cooperation of the employer in this instance and the responsibility assumed in the physical preparedness program as relates to the employee was well illustrated when the request came that we make these examinations. According to published reports, these hydro-electric developments are being made for the purpose of supplying the government with materials necessary for adequate national defense.

"Representatives of the contractors called on the State Board of Health and requested necessary information relative to the State's requirements for the examination of men engaged in dusty trades. They explained they were about to begin operations which would subject their employees to siliceous dust hazards in the drilling and the handling of thousands of cubic yards of silica-containing rock, and that they desired to take all necessary precautions for the protection of their employees on the two projects.

"The Division of Industrial Hygiene," he continued, "is now engaged in setting up the necessary offices and equipment on the site of the operations for the purpose of giving these men the complete physical examinations referred to. Stone is to be drilled out of the mountainsides and used in the construction of dams and power plants. Since the stone contains a high percentage of silica all modern methods of dust control known to science are to be employed.

"The State Board of Health appreciates this cooperative spirit on the part of the employers in this instance and every effort is being put forth to aid this project and hasten it along.

Hollywood Sights And Sounds

Hollywood.—Deanna Durbin, who always wanted to do a costume movie, is getting her fill of costumes in "Spring Parade." She plays an Austrian peasant girl of the Frank Josef era, and has to dance a couple of tough ones—aside from the inevitable waltz that must be in every Viennese movie.

The call sheet on "The New Yorkers," which usually tells only what actors and props will be needed for the day, was more specific today. "The boy is day-dreaming and the girl is worried," it said.

"That's so the director, Preston Sturges, won't have to speak to us in the morning," explained Dick Powell, the boy of the call sheet.

The worrying and day-dreaming (the latter by Ellen Drew) was being staged amid the 8:50 bustle in a large business office, where in the script Powell and Drew are employed. The entire office force marched in, on the dot of 9, to take seats at the 80 desks and typewriters, row on row, awaiting them. Bringing up the rear, and late and worried, came Miss Drew, who gave a very convincing performance—she used to have to be on time for the soda fountain, too. . . . And if Madeleine Carroll doesn't get back in time from the European war zone, it's this same Ellen Drew who'll take her role in "Virginia."

Come-Back In Spite Of Paralysis Solves Political Riddle Of U.S.

AP Feature Service Writer

"That," said Eleanor Roosevelt gravely, "is Franklin's own problem." Then her face lighted. And she smiled a fleeting, enigmatic smile. Her smile that summer day in 1928 paved the way for Franklin D. Roosevelt to set his greatest precedent—find the answer to an unplumbed riddle of politics.

Would the American voter send a man with a physical handicap to the White House?

Eleanor's smile was flashed on Al Smith in Rochester, N. Y., where presidential nominee Al was hunting for a man to carry the New York state ticket for him. He and Jim Farley had gone to Mrs. Roosevelt. Would Franklin run? She obeyed her rule of a lifetime, refused to make other people's decisions. But she smiled.

Seven Long Years Down in Warm Springs, Ga., the President-to-be was on the last lap of his infantile paralysis rest cure. Another year, the doctors had said, and he might walk. All through the seven years after Roosevelt was stricken at Campobello, Me., in the summer of 1921, Roosevelt worked like a Trojan to move the least muscle of his big toe.

"You don't know," he told a friend later, "how hard it was. Each effort had to be thought through, like a problem in algebra. When I began to walk, each step took planning."

A man of great faith, the late Louie Howe, long-time Roosevelt adviser, still believed in 1928 that Franklin D. Roosevelt could be President. He had believed it for 15 years, and he refused to let infantile paralysis interfere with his dreams.

So when the New York leaders phoned Roosevelt from Rochester in 1928, he knew what they wanted.

"Drafted" For Governor To him, and to Louie Howe, it was more than running for governor. It was the big test along the comeback trail. If he took that step without tripping, others would follow.

On the first call, Roosevelt refused. Al Smith phoned, pleaded. Again he refused.

"Let me present your name to the convention?"

"No."

"Let the convention nominate you."

"If the convention nominates you anyway, will you refuse to run?"

Silence, a heavy sigh. And finally: "That's an unfair question. Al, you're hitting below the belt."

Franklin D. Roosevelt had taken the plunge on the comeback trail. All his conditions had been met. He would not force himself on the party or the voters. They must force him if they wanted him. They did.

FDR's Wife, As The First Lady, Set Precedents To Suit Herself

By SIGRID ARNE AP Feature Service Writer

Washington — Since the gray morning in March, 1933, when Eleanor Roosevelt entered the White House, she has shattered the traditional pattern followed by American First Ladies.

Before the inauguration she had held her first press conference and announced it would be a weekly event. No other President's wife had done that. It started conjectures, but no conjecture came within shouting distance of the Eleanor Roosevelt the country was to know.

The 50-odd women writers at that first conference were a little awed, but their awe quickly melted at Mrs. Roosevelt's "Good morning." She shook hands with each, then opened a box of candied orange peel. "Will you please pass this around? It's near lunch time and you must be hungry."

She Goes Her Own Way A few days later she made it clear she did not need a police guard. She drove up to the Women's Trade Union League offices in New York. "My word," she said, to four policemen she found there, "what are you doing here? When she found they were detailed to guard her she telephoned Police Commissioner Mulrooney. The guard left, and she finished the day happily, walking alone down Fifth avenue to buy a tea strainer for the White House.

That was news in those days. But now no gas station attendant is greatly surprised if he sees Mrs. Roosevelt in her little roadster. She even has been scolded by a traffic cop who found her doing so. "The children have always wanted this to happen to me," she said, chuckling. Unafraid Of Gridiron Two weeks after she arrived in Washington people living in the city's slums saw her picking her way around garbage cans with some housing experts. Some of those slums are gone now.

She attended a gridiron dinner given by the Women's National Press club; the first President's wife to thus expose herself. She pulled off the best witticism her-

Roosevelt receives the congratulations of the "Happy Warriors" after his election as governor of New York in 1928.

Roosevelt was elected and Louie Howe could go right ahead with his President-making.

Two years later the precedent of 1930 was child's play. He was re-elected governor by a 725,000 majority, the biggest in state history. He traveled 12,000 miles, spoke in every county in the state. No governor had done that before.

"Happy landing," shouted Louie Howe's small grandson as the Roosevelt plane took off from Albany for Chicago. Aboard was the first nominee who ever thumbed his nose at the precedent that a man must remain in official ignorance of his nomination until he is duly informed by a committee.

When he appeared in Chicago, a tumult broke out. "Let it . . . be symbolic," he said, "that . . . I broke traditions . . . let it be from now on the task of our party to break foolish traditions. . . . I pledge myself to a New Deal for the American people!"

Next: Breaking precedents wholesale.

He was out early, a morning glory candidate. A fatal precedent, the rail birds said. But they were wrong, and Roosevelt knew it.

Break Foolish Traditions On June 5, weeks before the Chicago banners were going up, Roosevelt told his advisers he had made plans to accept the nomination on the scene.

Schools Handicapped In Aid To Defense Program

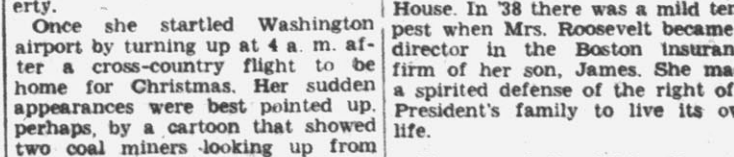

Reflector Bureau. By HENRY AVERILL

Raleigh, July 20.—Lack of adequate "shops" in North Carolina's schools is seriously handicapping the training of skilled workmen to aid in the national defense program for industry.

There is available to the state a fair share of the $15,000,000 recently appropriated for vocational training classes in industries essential to national defense; and quite a number of such classes are being, or will be, set up, T. E. Browne, director of Vocational Education for the Department of Public Instruction, said today.

The lack of available school shops will seriously affect the entire program, and will limit the number of schools and trainees, he said. This is particularly true, he added, because regulations for the program specifically prohibit purchase of "equipment" for the classes. All self. She was the first President's lady to fly. The most spectacular trip was in 34 to the Virgin Islands, where she gathered information for her husband on schools, illness and poverty. Once she startled Washington airport by turning up at 4 a. m. after a cross-country flight to be home for Christmas. Her sudden appearances were best pointed up, perhaps, by a cartoon that showed two coal miners looking up from their digging. Said one, "For gosh sakes, there comes Mrs. Roosevelt." She lectured, spoke on the radio, wrote for magazines and turned out a daily newspaper column. Autobiography Unprecedented Her lectures could have been a political boomerang to a woman less sure of herself. She was heckled at the American Youth Conference this year when a youngster shouted, "We want jobs, not theories." Mrs. Roosevelt eyed the gallery. "You

1940 Is Milestone In Women's Political Progress

Covering both the Chicago and Philadelphia conventions, Sigrid Arne has had excellent opportunities to see just how much women count in practical politics today, 20 years after universal women's suffrage. Here she tells you.

By SIGRID ARNE AP Feature Service

Washington.—Now that convention smoke has cleared away, women in both parties have turned up with such a wealth of new privileges and duties that they are virtually on an equal political footing with the men.

At Philadelphia the Republican convention agreed that come 1944 women will have equal representation on all convention committees, which will sit on the platform committee that decides the party's policy.

At Chicago the Democratic convention passed a resolution giving women 50-50 representation immediately on the platform committee. Twenty-four women joined the last day's deliberations.

Both convention floors were bright with women's hats and huge corsages. Both groups had increased numbers of women—delegates and alternates—accredited.

Republican women had garnered 78 delegates' posts, 231 alternates. Democratic women had 202 delegates and 387 alternates.

In the hotel suites where state delegations argued issues the change was most obvious. Women spoke up, argued, buttonholed and voted with their men colleagues.

Even in the convention sessions there was a noticeable change. Women were spot-lighted on the speaker's platform. None so much as they are veterans of local soapboxes.

But they kept their femininity. Most of the women had special dresses for the occasion.

They Manage Campaigns

money must be expended for instructional purposes only and where there are no shop facilities there can be, consequently, no training.

Despite the handicap of limited facilities, numerous courses will be offered in North Carolina in the trades for which they may be set up. These include aircraft, manufacture, maintenance and repair; machine tools; shipbuilding; automotive manufacture, maintenance and repair; electrical; forging; welding; drafting; internal combustion engine mechanics, etc.

The courses authorized under the federal program are of two kinds—(1) supplementary for employees in occupations essential to national defense, and (2) pre-employment refresher courses in preparation for such occupations.

The first type will be largely night courses of some two hours daily, and those taking the courses will be employed personnel desiring to take up some special branch of training. For these courses all employees in occupations essential to national defense will be eligible.

The "pre-employment refresher" courses will be open to only two classes—those now on WPA or NYA projects and those listed on the rolls of the North Carolina Employment Service as seeking jobs in the occupations for which courses are offered.

Three courses have already been opened at State College here and a few in other sections of the State. It is the purpose of Mr. Browne and the vocational education division to make them available in as many places as there can be found the proper facilities.

There are courses for Negroes now at Greensboro A. and T. Mr. Browne said, and courses of one sort or another will soon be started in Canton, Greensboro, Durham, Wilmington and other cities.

Every effort is being made to confine the courses to occupations in which there really exists a shortage of skilled workers. Mr. Browne

In Philadelphia the convention was treated to two women managers for candidates' campaigns. Brown-eyed Mrs. Robert A. Taft spent 14 hours a day greeting the people she hoped would vote her husband, the Ohio senator, into the nominee's post. She was a good loser, too. Said, "well, maybe it's best for the family."

At the Thomas Dewey headquarters in Philadelphia the co-manager was tactful, elderly Ruth Hanna McCormick Simms, daughter of legendary Sen. Mark Hanna, and a former member of congress, herself.

In Philadelphia another precedent was broken: A woman nominated a candidate. Many have seconded nominations. But none had made the introductory speech until Gladys Pyle, former South Dakota state legislator, named Gov. Harlan Bushfield. It was admittedly not a nomination that would ride to victory, but, then, that's the way most of the women's political paths have started: From the unimportant to the policy-making. In both conventions the women had small committees that presented women's platforms. The Democrats' committee of 18 women was an official part of the convention for the first time. In previous years they had met unofficially and coaxed a man to read their views to the drafting board.

They Seek Reform The women's emphasis on both sides has always been for social reforms. This year both women's groups were most interested in foreign policy because of their hatred for war. Both planks probably would have been more belligerent and had not the conventions been so well attended by women.

Secretary Frances Perkins gives a large share of the credit for the past eight years of the New Deal to women workers. She recalls that in 1924 there was a small group of determined New York women who met informally in her down-town office to draw up a women's platform.

pointed out, for example, that there would be no point whatever to giving courses in textiles in North Carolina, despite the fact that at present the textile field is, of all those essential to national defense, the only one in which this state is equipped to be of much assistance. There is already a surplus of textile workers, he added, and to train more for that industry would merely be to glut the market further.

Although the immediate program is being set up on the theory that it is immediately important to the defense program, Mr. Browne feels that it will be of very great value to the state's general program of vocational education.

Service By Publication NOTICE North Carolina, County of Pitt. In the Superior Court of the State of North Carolina, vs. Lillie Bell Braxton

The defendant Lillie Bell Braxton will take notice that an action entitled as above has been commenced in the superior court of Pitt County, North Carolina, to obtain absolute divorce, and the said defendant will further take notice that she is required to appear at the office of the Clerk of the Superior Court of said county in the courthouse in Greenville, North Carolina, on the 17th day of August, 1940, and answer or demur to the complaint in said action, or the plaintiff will apply to the court for the relief demanded in said complaint.

This the 17th day of July, 1940 J. P. HARRINGTON Clerk Superior Court. 18-1twk-4wks.

They wanted to protect women and children workers, to get better health and housing standards. They had no voice in the platform committee, so four of the women sat up all night in a hotel corridor waiting to find some champion who would take their small draft into the platform committee. Those four women are still known today: Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Rep. Caroline O'Day of New York, Miss Perkins, and Marian Dickerman, principal of the school where Mrs. Roosevelt once taught.

Miss Perkins says, with obvious satisfaction: "The reforms we wanted in 1924 are all laws today."

You'll Hear From Them When the campaign speeches begin rumbling across the land in September there will be almost as many sopranos as basses on the air. The Democrats have 30,000 women trained in speech and New Deal ideology who go out and lead educational sessions on such subjects as public power and foreign policy. There are an additional 150,000 women who are responsible for keeping an eye on the local running of New Deal laws.

The Republicans are busy organizing as many as possible. Their Federation of Republican Clubs is new since the last campaign, but the director, Marian Martin, from Maine, claims 250,000 membership. These women meet locally and talk over issues preparatory for door-to-door canvassing.

It's a long way from the start. In 1922 three women slipped quietly, conservatively attired, into the Republican convention.

In 1926 the Democrats seated three similarly decorous women delegates.

It wasn't until 1940 that a woman addressed a full convention on anything but purely feminine interests. Then it was pretty, vivacious Mrs. Thomas McAllister of Michigan, who heads the Democrat's women's division. In a jade green silk suit, two orchids microphone to speak on foreign policy. She got more than her share of applause.

The defendant Lillie Bell Braxton will take notice that an action entitled as above has been commenced in the superior court of Pitt County, North Carolina, to obtain absolute divorce, and the said defendant will further take notice that she is required to appear at the office of the Clerk of the Superior Court of said county in the courthouse in Greenville, North Carolina, on the 17th day of August, 1940, and answer or demur to the complaint in said action, or the plaintiff will apply to the court for the relief demanded in said complaint.

WANT ADS PAY

Advertisement for the North Carolina Department of Conservation and Development. It features a large graphic of a hand holding a pencil writing on a ledger. The ledger lists: 'Credit to NORTH CAROLINA', 'More Tourists', 'More Factories and Additions', 'More Wages', 'More State Revenue'. To the right, a vertical list shows monetary values: '$100,000,000', '$100,000,000', '$40,000,000', '$1,000,000'. Below the graphic, text explains that advertising campaigns can be credited with increasing revenues and income. It also states that investment in new factories and additions to existing plants since the campaign started totals approximately $100,000,000. Gasoline and sales tax collections from tourists now total over $1,000,000 annually. The Department of Conservation & Development is located at the New State Building, Raleigh, N. C. The advertisement concludes with 'ADVERTISING PAYS NORTH CAROLINA!' and 'To inform North Carolinians about the State's Advertising Campaign, this space is gladly contributed by THE DAILY REFLECTOR'.

Strength For The Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

GOD'S RELENTLESS PURPOSE

Napoleon Bonaparte once declared that there are only two powers in the world, the power of the sword and the power of the spirit; "and in the long last," he continued, "the spirit always wins."

These are days when we need to understand our minds with the conviction that blitzkreigs have no effect upon God, and that when nations surrender and old orders pass away, God is not defeated. Victor Hugo said of this same Napoleon that God became bored with him and at last destroyed him. Jesus said, "He that taketh the sword shall perish by the sword." The sun still shines, the earth brings forth her increase, in spite of the agony through which the human race has passed during centuries of conflict. All history confirms Napoleon's judgment that in the long last the spirit always wins.

After the modern dictators have passed, after their empires have crumbled, God's spiritual power will still be thrusting itself relentlessly through the disordered affairs of the world. Men who talk that they conquer by the sword are foolish little puppets dangling from strings held in Satan's hands. God smiles at man's presumption and presses on to triumph.

Men may believe they slay with the sword, but the sword never slays anything which has real and abiding life.

QUIT DEPENDING ON TOBACCO

The farmers acted wisely Saturday in voting for the three-year tobacco control program for such action assures them of all the help possible from the government while they are adjusting themselves to the situation that confronts them. In the face of the temporary if not permanent loss of most of our foreign markets for tobacco our farmers must be given to realize that in the future they must not depend solely upon tobacco for a livelihood and the sooner they begin to diversify their efforts the better off they will be. No one can yet foretell what the final outcome of the European struggle might be but we do know that for some time to come our economic conditions in this country will remain in an unstable state and the government cannot continue to purchase a yearly surplus of a product no longer in demand outside America. Therefore the safest bet for our farmers is to produce as much of their home supplies as possible with a surplus for market and quit depending solely on tobacco as a money crop. Tobacco as a sideline crop will be all right but first of all the farmers should see to their home needs. There are wonderful opportunities in Eastern North Carolina for certified seed production, cattle and stock raising and dairying, and as we have often said in this column, our farmers are foolish to continue to put all their eggs in one basket by sticking to a product for which there is not enough demand to pay a living price to the producer.

During the next three years in which our farmers are assured of government aid is a good time for them to put the necessary changes into effect on their farms.

Washington.—Notes from the cuff of an old shiver worn at Chicago: Was there ever a convention like this one? I'd say not. All the delegates were angling for second place. Paul V. McNutt even had a 30-by-20 foot picture of President Roosevelt hanging in his headquarters. You could ask headquarters a half a dozen other candidates and never find out whether they were running for President or Vice President. The McNutt headquarters, by the way, themselves deserve more than a paragraph. Acres and acres of red, white and blue bunting, draped along the walls of a palatial suite, any room of which, with its crystal chandeliers, might have been used for a grand ballroom for the annual Elks' frolic out in my home town.

As one wanderer put it: "Reminds me of Babylon. But when I asked him if he'd ever been to Babylon, he said no. It was just those pictures he used to see in his granddaddy's illustrated history of the world."

"Salting Room" McNutt had picked "God Bless America" as his theme song when the Democratic national committee did likewise. Whereupon McNutt told his entertainers to learn something else. I can't tell you what they learned. Sounded like an Indiana medley to me. And persons passing within earshot would yell: "We want Willie!"

Best crack of the convention: "Say, looks like there's some sort of convention in town; what do you suppose it is?" "I don't know, but from the looks of things, I think it's got something to do with the school teachers."

platform. Talk about turn-coating! Just a few years ago, in Carnegie Hall in New York City, I heard Maury, congressman then, make a rip-roaring speech about keeping out of foreign entanglements and preserving peace at any price. I don't mean to insinuate that Maury is wishy washy. It's just telling you what phenomenal things have happened to one of our dyed-in-the-wool pacifists because of the foreign situation.

Biggest surprise (to most Democrats) was when Guy Warren, the Texas oil man, opened his Palmer House headquarters for the "Nominating Willie" campaign. One delegate said, "Say, what's that guy want to do, eat his cake and eat it? Willie already has been nominated once." And a half dozen listeners replied: "You're tellin' us."

Biggest build-up to a terrific let-down was when that Milton, Wash., donkey, "Boston Curtis," that had been named a Republican precinct committeeman, hot-footed into the Stevens lobby, "to return to the Democratic fold." All the boys had been tipped off and were planning to make a big story out of it. When the donkey walked in he had on a blanket advertising a beer stove.

It is widely pointed out that North Carolina's delegation was for Roosevelt not because of its political bosses, but in spite of them! for everybody knows that Governor's Clyde R. Hoey and most of the state administration stalwarts were desperately opposed to Roosevelt and only went along for his nomination because they were literally forced to do so by the strength of public opinion.

One old line Democrat who didn't want to vote for Roosevelt anyhow, got much comfort out of the Wallace nomination for vice-president. "Thank goodness, I can vote for Willie now!" he said. "If I've got to vote for a Republican, I might as well vote for one I like."

Lieutenant Governor Wilkins P. Horton, runner-up in the gubernatorial primary, wasn't so generally regarded as a hot Roosevelter during the pre-primary and pre-Chicago campaigning, but he's quite satisfied with the President's renomination and sees easy success for the ticket in North Carolina.

"Why when we Roosevelt's get started, it will be just about like 1936," he told your Raleigh reporter.

Casual Slaughters

By VIRGINIA HANSON

YESTERDAY: Sandra tells Adam that soon was a highborn Russian emigrated out of Russia during the revolution by devoted servants. She becomes agitated when Adam mentions the possibility of spies.

Chapter 24 Goodby Kiss

"When are you leaving?" "Tomorrow morning — as soon after the coroner's inquest as it can be arranged. The body is at a mortician's in town. There will be a brief formal inquest — murder — the usual thing."

"Oh! I'd forgotten about the inquest — do we all have to be there?" "No. Just Gerald and I, to describe the finding of the body. Colonel Pennant has arranged that you girls won't be called, except possibly Sandra, who may have to identify the body. These things are only a formality. You won't need to attend unless you want to."

"I don't." I shivered. "I didn't suppose you would. It's scheduled for ten o'clock tomorrow morning. I expect to get a train out before noon."

"I'd like to go with you," I said, and surprised a quickly veiled gleam in his eyes. "I'm afraid Ivan would make neither a pleasant nor an adequate chaperon," he said lightly. "At least as far as Chicago," I continued, as if that were what I had meant all along. "It's time I was terminating my visit here. You so aptly suggested last night."

"Please don't. Don't terminate it; and don't remind me of that. I was not myself last night — how get insulted about that, too, if you must. But you know it's true. I think you must like me or you wouldn't continually try to put me in the wrong. And I particularly want you to stay until I get back — I'd like you to keep an eye on Sandra. Cultivate her, see if you can get her to talk. She'll be right here in the building. You may stumble onto something. I have a strong hunch that she's not telling all she knows."

I thought, she isn't the only one. A feeling of helplessness descended on me, and with it an impulse to tell Adam all I knew. I was getting too tangled up in this thing. Why should I let a new loyalty to Julia make me forget that Adam was my friend here — the only one on the post who really mattered?

It isn't easy to jump right into an acknowledgement that you've been holding out on someone you like. I cast about in my mind for ways of leading up to it gradually, but the little moment of intimacy was already gone. Adam was deep in his problem again and the eyes that were fixed on mine were veiled by abstraction. He did not see the words trembling on my lips. And he took my silence for consent.

"I'll try to be back by Wednesday," he said. "If I'm detained I'll let you know. Promise you'll not go out alone at any time. Use my car, by all means, but take someone along. And be back here by day."

I promised, and he went off to communicate with Colonel Pennant, to arrange about leave and to pack his grip. I know he had not thought of any possible danger to me beyond that covered by his admonitions. He has told me that nothing of the kind even occurred to me. Certainly it did not to me. I did not want him to go. Not because I was afraid, but because I would be lonely without him.

Secret Rapping
I SAT down with the play and that was distraction. She apologized for interrupting me, thanked me for letting her stay with me, but still with that reserve which made no explanation and forbade questioning. I asked her about the inquest. It had been much as Adam predicted — formal identification of the body, medical testimony, a brief account by Adam of the beach party and the finding of the body. Verdict of murder by person or persons unknown. And Adam, with his grim companion, had started on their journey.

of yourself. And I want you right here when I get back. He was gone so quickly that I had no time even to say goodby. It must have been about midnight that I heard the light, secret rapping on my door as if whoever was there wanted to attract as little attention as possible. My room was dark. I had been lying there, smoking and thinking for about an hour. Sleep was still far from me.

It didn't occur to me to be frightened. I turned on a bedside light, went through the sitting room and opened the corridor door. Sandra slipped in. She had on a terry cloth robe over her nightgown. It slid down for an instant to reveal a red mark on her shoulder — a mark that might have been made by an ungentle hand.

She saw the direction of my gaze and caught the robe together. Her face looked white and still. "May I stay with you tonight?" she asked bluntly. "I know you have twin beds. I could ask Felicia for another room, but I don't want her to know. I trust you."

What could I say? She volunteered no explanation and I certainly could not ask for one. I led her into the bedroom and watched while she turned down the vacant bed and got into it, facing away from me. Then I turned out the light and lay down, respecting her silence, but passionately resenting the invasion of my privacy. My thoughts had been company enough without the intrusion of this alien, uncomfortable presence.

I could not sleep. And though she lay quiet, not turning, breathing evenly, I knew that she was awake. And as the night wore on I could feel her thoughts, too, a dark and dreadful company, between us in the room.

Offer Of Help
I MUST have slept toward morning. I roused at the sound of the reveille gun. It woke Sandra, too, if she had been asleep at all. I heard her stirring, heard the bed springs creak when they were released from her weight. She was trying to be quiet, so I did not open my eyes or let on that I heard her; and presently I knew by the slight creak of the closing door that she had gone.

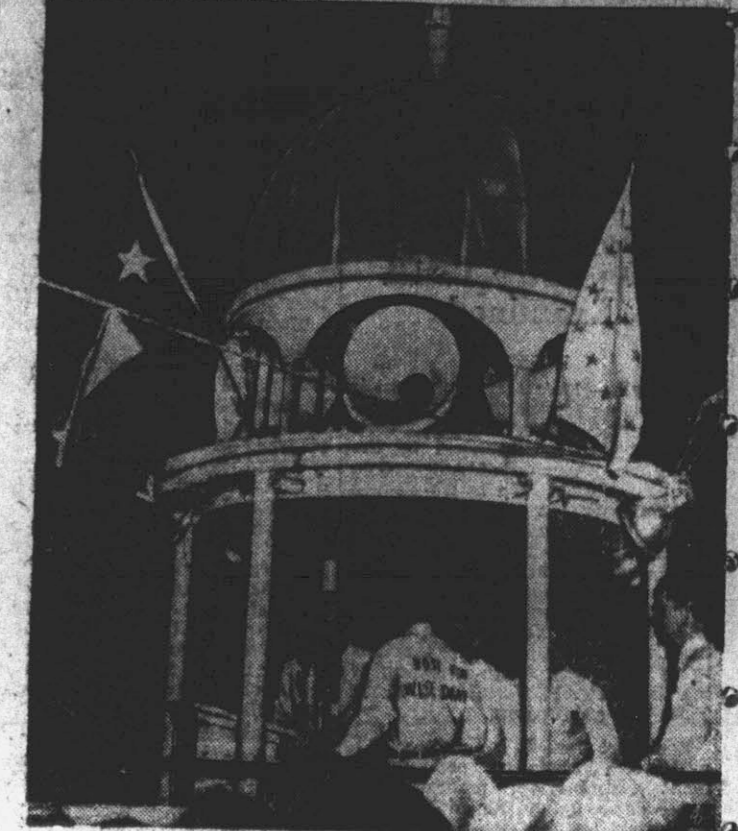

I got up then and showered and dressed. It was too early for breakfast, so I solaced my hollow stomach with cigarettes and settled down to my typewriter until I heard sounds from the kitchen.

The mess hall was empty when I went in — it was still early. I breakfasted hurriedly and escaped before the crowd. My brain was seething with plots and characters and I wanted no distraction. Sandra came to my room about eleven-thirty. She had just returned from the inquest. She apologized for interrupting me, thanked me for letting her stay with me, but still with that reserve which made no explanation and forbade questioning.

I asked her about the inquest. It had been much as Adam predicted — formal identification of the body, medical testimony, a brief account by Adam of the beach party and the finding of the body. Verdict of murder by person or persons unknown. And Adam, with his grim companion, had started on their journey.

Sandra looked tired and rather cold, as one might who has closed a chapter in her life forever and faces an unknown future. I remembered that Adam wanted me to cultivate her, so when she rose to go I stopped her. "Stay and have a cigarette with me. I'm ready for a recess!" "What are you doing?" she asked curiously, looking over my shoulder at the half-typed sheet of white paper.

"Copying a story I finished this morning. It's been hanging around for a couple of weeks — I want to send it off today." "Oh, I see you write it first on this yellow paper, then you have to copy it. I thought writers just wrote."

Greenies Take Week-End Series From Goldsboro Nine

MEET WILSON HERE TONIGHT

Rube's Boys Finally Break Jinx Held By Bugs

Rube Wilson's Greenies took the week-end series with Goldsboro for their third and fourth victory over the Wayne team of the season. The locals won Saturday night's game at Guy Smith stadium by the score 3-1 and went to Goldsboro yesterday to win 5-4.

Greenville was out-hit in both games, but the local boys made the best of every advantage to take the double victory.

The Greenies face the league-leading Wilson team here tonight.

In Saturday's game the locals got two runs to break a 1-1 tie and give Freddy Caligiuri his 13th victory of the season. Hal Forbes doubled to start the seventh. He scored on Thornton's triple and Thornton came home on Caligiuri's outfield fly.

In Goldsboro yesterday afternoon the Greenies scored four in the second frame after Goldsboro had pushed one across in the first. The Bugs got another in the fourth and two in the eighth, but meanwhile Greenville had scored one in the sixth and this proved sufficient to provide victory.

MANY ENTRIES IN EASTERN N.C. SOFTBALL TOURNAMENT

HORTON SMITH'S Groundwork For Good Golf 4. Study The Impact Position

Just as the pay-off on every hole is at the cup, the payoff of every swing is that all-important impact position. That is where proper club face position produces direction and where clubhead speed spells distance. In other words, if you have swung properly, your body action has generated great momentum which has been climaxed by the hands increasing the clubhead speed as it swings into and through the ball. The lower body has set up a foundation on which the arms and hands can operate, the left arm has served as the guide or measurement into the ball with the proper grip permitting the hands and arms to unite placing the clubface at a right angle position to the intended line of direction. The action near impact is so rapid that it is difficult to see and appreciate but when studied by an expert it can be understood and properly analyzed. It is important to check this impact position to see if you are getting the proper firmness and the proper union of body, arms and hands as your clubhead meets the ball. There is yards difference between a sloppy contact and firm and secure union. Trace your swing and investigate this vital part of your swing.

widen crowded streets with CONCRETE

When your streets jam up with traffic, there is just one thing to be done—WIDEN THEM!

The addition of new lanes of smooth-riding concrete helps traffic flow easily and safely. Makes it easier to go shopping, visit friends, reach school and church.

Property values improve when congestion is eliminated, and the whole city progresses.

And when street widening is done with concrete you get a pavement low in first cost, saving in maintenance, clean and modern looking—and skid-resistant rain or shine. Ask your city officials about widening your streets with concrete—the real low cost pavement.

FEWER DEATHS ARE REPORTED

Sharp Decline in Rate Among Children 1 to 14

New York, N. Y.—American boys and girls, from age 1 to age 14, now have a mortality rate only one-fifth of what it was three decades ago, despite the special hazard from automobiles to youngsters playing in the streets, and their general liability to accidents of all kinds, according to the statisticians of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. This general improvement in mortality among children was the best made by any age group during the thirty-year period from 1911 to 1939.

Defense Program Of U.S. Affects N.C. Government

Reflector Bureau

By HENRY AVERILL

Raleigh, July 22.—There is scarcely a unit of North Carolina's governmental machine which has not been touched by the current National Defense program.

In many of them, of course, the effect has been slight; in others the emergency has galvanized previous inertia into lively activity.

In some cases the agency is actually and actively pushing some phase of the program really essential to the nation's defense. In others, quick advantage has been taken for a seemingly fine opportunity to press some pet plan of the division which had previously been lagging for one reason or another.

Direction and coordination of the state's part in the defense scheme has fallen upon Governor Clyde R. Hoey and he has been quite busy with it. He has quietly steered departmental activities into proper channels; while he publicly has directed attention to the need for a united public, unshaken by hysteria but completely resolved to do its share.

Under him, more than a dozen departments or divisions have been pushing specific programs.

Obviously, the Adjutant General's office, nerve center of the National Guard, has been the unit most directly affected. General Metts and his staff are hard at work; but have been able to say very little publicly about the nature of their activities. The job of reading the Tar Heel citizen-soldiers to take their place in the first line of defense is clearly not one about which all the details can be shouted from the housetops.

Taking up in detail some of the departments and divisions affected by the defense program:

(1) The Department of Revenue hasn't any direct specific connection or activity; but Acting Commissioner Lee Gregory and his division heads are anxiously watching the possible effect of the emergency on Tar Heel tax revenues. Gov. Hoey has warned that the strictest economy should be observed in order to cushion any slump in revenue resulting from the tobacco crisis which is seen in the offing or from any other unexpected upheaval of business.

(2) So far the Highway Commission hasn't been called upon for any direct action but already Chairman Frank Dunlap has verbally transported troops from Washington to Atlanta over an extended and expanded Blue Ridge Parkway; so it seems that if the department does nothing else it is going to leave no stone unturned in an effort to get more, better and bigger roads out of the straits.

(3) In the Department of Conservation and Development there is much activity. The division of Commerce and Industry, under General Jim Anderson, is actively seeking to convince war industries that North Carolina is the ideal place for them to locate. This is not wholly due to a selfish desire to get what can be had for the state, but with the sincere belief that there are real and genuine advantages which will advance the aims and ends of the defense program.

In this department, too, there is being made a strong effort to educate in the necessity for a substantial and coordinate program of forest protection and reforestation of waste area. Timber is concededly a vital raw material for any program of national defense and North Carolina is capable of supplying its share only if proper measures are taken. Surveys are also being made to ascertain the state's supplies of essential mineral products.

(4) The Industrial Commission, in cooperation with the WPA, will soon set up schools for first aid instruction in every county of North Carolina. This is to be done in the belief that reduction of time lost from work because of serious injury is a drag on production essential to national defense. Chairman T. A. Wilson is convinced that a wide knowledge of first aid would be of material help in reducing the time lost by reason of accidents. He points out that quite often the seriousness of an injury can be greatly reduced by the prompt administration of first aid measures.

(5) Dr. Carl V. Reynolds, State Health officer, has launched a veritable crusade designed to teach the importance of personal physical preparedness. He has pointed out, time and again, the heavy percentage of young men who were rejected in 1917-18 because of physical defects. He is calling on the public to cooperate in measures designed to promote better health and in all steps to prevent or limit spread of epidemics. He is urging that all take advantage of immunization "defenses" against diseases such as typhoid fever, diphtheria, etc.

(6) Under the Department of Public Instruction, Director T. E. Browne of the Division of Vocational Education is directing a program designed to give two types of occupational courses to speed up industrial production for national defense: (a) Courses for employees in occupations essential to defense, and (b) pre-employment refresher courses for workers on WPA or NYA projects and on rolls of Employment Service, who are basically qualified for occupations essential to national defense. These courses are to be set up in some half-dozen cities where there are adequate "shop" facilities in the schools.

(7) The Attorney General's office has not yet been assigned any definite place in national defense work; but it will be represented at a Washington conference early in August designed to coordinate the activities of the different states.

(8) The State Bureau of Investigation and Identification is cooperating to the utmost with the FBI in turning down all reports of espionage, sabotage or general subversive activities. Director Fred Henshaw has asked that all citizens report to the FBI any facts coming to their attention about any such activities.

When received, these reports are given what Mr. Handy calls a "preliminary" investigation. Those for which no substantial basis is found to exist, are dropped. Those to which there appears to be some foundation are turned over to the FBI personnel for further action.

Too, the FBI is undoubtedly engaged in a great deal of secret and confidential work in connection with the defense program—work about which nothing whatever can be made public.

(9) The Department of Labor is seeking to hasten the setting up of a real apprenticeship program in the state as authorized by the 1939 legislature; but of necessity this is progressing only slowly. Chief emphasis is to be placed on the metal trades and an intensive effort made to "sell" the apprenticeship plan

(10) Utilities Commissioner Stanley Winborne says that his department has had no direct contact with the defense program, but he added that reports from the telephone, power and other utilities under his jurisdiction indicate that the defense plans are likely to cause higher operating costs which, in turn, might bring requests for higher utility rates.

Winborne said that plans are being made by some of the companies to place guards, at a moments notice, on vital links in their systems in order to forestall any sabotage attempts should a real emergency develop.

(11) Department of Agriculture marketing specialists are redoubling their efforts to aid national defense by converting Tar Heel farm crops to diversification of crops. Food crops and livestock are sure to be vitally needed in a hungry world, even if the United States is never directly involved in the war, these specialists point out.

Commissioner W. Kerr Scott has seized the opportunity to push for enactment by Congress of the so-called Bailey Marketing bill, under which North Carolina would get something more than $100,000 annually for a marketing program.

(12) The State ABC board emulated the famed King of France whose twenty thousand men marched up the hill and then marched down again. The board announced that prices of all sorts and kinds of liquor would go up as a result of the new Federal National Defense taxes, then very shortly was prevailed upon to reduce the price list in order to forestall criticism that the liquor business is being conducted strictly as a revenue-producer and not in the interests of temperance and real control of the traffic in intoxicants.

There are probably other state governmental units directly affected by the defense program, but at the moment they escape your Raleigh reporter's memory.

In addition to the state agencies, numerous county units are more or less directly affected. In Wake, as in other counties where a drive has been launched to enforce the 1927 law, the clerk of Superior court has been busy for several weeks with registration of aliens under the Bolich act.
