OPENING DAY GEORGIA AVERAGE ABOUT 18 CENTS Britain Makes Bid For Further Support From India

MAKES PLEDGE TO POSSESSION

Bid For Help From India's Wealth And Manpower Backed With Pledge of Free And Equal Partnership In British Commonwealth; Italy Meanwhile Menaces Lifeline

(By The Associated Press) Britain bid today for further help from India's fabled wealth and vast manpower as Italy menaced the empire's Mediterranean-Suez Canal-Red Sea lifeline and the Royal Air Force beat off a powerful Nazi air attack on English channel shipping.

"Free and equal partnership" in the British commonwealth was Britain's promise to her greatest Asiatic possession.

The British said the Nazis lost at least nine planes and the British themselves lost two as air fighting raged over the channel and the southeastern coast of England for an hour, filling the air with the roar of cannon and chatter of machine guns.

The announcement on the Indian situation, made simultaneously in the House of Commons and in the House of Lords and in India, said the government was willing to let Indians "devise the framework of a new constitution" at the end of the war in the hope that India's 250,000,000 people, overcoming their own differences, would at last attain "freedom and equality within the British commonwealth" of nations.

Britain herself, the statement said, was unwilling to undertake "fundamental constitutional issues" at this time.

The British account of the air battle said at least 50 German bombers and a large number of escorts took part against only a dozen British fighting planes. Sometimes they swooped down to within 1,000 feet of the rooftops of sea. At other times the planes vanished high in the clouds.

By satisfying India's claims Britain would be in a position to marshal overwhelming forces to crush Italian expansion in the Mediterranean area, according to the British view. With Japan threatening to expand southward and Italy seeking to rule over the Moslem world, India's interest in a British victory has become increasingly keener.

In Africa, Italians held the port of Zeila, seized in a short march from French Somaliland and aimed a drive across British Somaliland toward Berbera. The British said massed Libyan troops had not yet pushed across the frontier into the west Egyptian desert.

In France, the new Supreme Court was called to its first session today at Riom with its number-one job a lengthy far-reaching investigation to fix the blame for France's war blunders and to punish the guilty.

PITT SCHOOLS JOIN IN MOVE

To Cooperate In Nation's Preparedness Program

The Pitt county school system is planning to do its part in the nation's preparedness program, according to information revealed by County Superintendent D. H. Conley today.

In discussing plans for the opening of the term on Monday, September 2, Mr. Conley disclosed that a new bulletin had been issued by the State Department of Public Instruction on physical and health education and added that this bulletin would be taught in the various county units.

"This year we will try to emphasize this phase of education in the schools," declared the county superintendent, adding that school principals, teachers and other authorities would try to create an awakening of patriotism among the students and patrons. He also declared that parents may expect a stricter form of discipline than applied in former years.

Declaring that he did not desire to create any alarm, Mr. Conley said that it was up to everyone to do his and her part in cooperation with the defense program undertaken by the country.

The superintendent disclosed that everything was about ready for the (Continued on Page Two)

Calls On Every American Regardless Of Creed Or Denomination To Ask God For Righteous And Permanent Peace Not Only For This Nation, But For All The World

Hyde Park, N. Y., Aug. 7. (AP)—President Roosevelt has set aside Sunday, September 8, as a day of prayer, when Americans of every creed and denomination should ask God "to grant to this land and to the troubled world a righteous, enduring peace."

"When every succeeding day brings sad news of suffering and disaster abroad," he said in a proclamation, "we are especially conscious of the divine power" and "it is seemly that we should" pray for God's blessing "on our country and for the establishment of a just and permanent peace" among all nations.

The proclamation, dated yesterday and made public today at the President's Hudson valley estate, said in part:

"The American heritage of individual freedom and of government deriving its power from the consent of the governed has from the time of the fathers of our republic been proudly transmitted to each succeeding generation and to us of this generation has fallen the task of preserving it and transmitting it to the future. We are now engaged in a mighty effort to fortify that heritage.

"Mindful of our duties in the family of nations, we have endeavored to prevent the outbreak and spread of war and we have raised our voices against international injustice. As Americans and as lovers of freedom we are humbly sympathetic with those who are facing tribulation in lands across the seas.

"When every succeeding day brings sad news of suffering and disaster abroad we are especially conscious of the divine power and of our dependence upon God's merciful guidance.

"With this consciousness in our hearts it is seemly that we should at a time like this pray to almighty God for his blessing on our country and for the establishment of a just and permanent peace among all the nations of the world."

Canning Projects At Various Pitt Schools

Conley, county superintendent, has visited each of the projects and reports many cans have been put up at each place. The vegetables will go to underprivileged children who otherwise would not get the proper food.

At Ayden more than 1,700 jars have been canned.

SEEK TO WORK OUT SCHEDULE FOR SALARIES

Education Board And School Commission Hold Meet

ALLOCATION OF $406,000 IS SEEN

Indicates That White Teachers With Eight Years Of Experience Will Be Given Increases

Raleigh, Aug. 8. — (AP) The State Board of Education and the School Commission worked in joint session today on new pay schedules for superintendents, principals and teachers, with indications that about $460,000 would be allocated.

Governor Hoy informed the School Commission that $30,000 it saved on its operations last fiscal year would be made available for use this school year and commission members said that "cutting corners" had saved $126,000 for use for pay raises in addition to $230,000 appropriated.

One Commission member said it appeared that the pay of all superintendents would be adjusted "with none getting a cut."

In teacher schedules, he said, the plan was to raise the pay of a white teacher with eight years of experience by $2 or $3 a month with others remaining at about the same level.

The pay of Negro teachers with "A" certificates, however, would be increased about $6 a month in each classification.

That would be gone to try to avoid any possible litigation by Negroes to force equality in salaries, the member said, referring to a recent United States Circuit court decision that pay differentials between white and Negro public school teachers were unconstitutional.

If such a plan is followed white "A" teachers would start at $96 a month and Negro "A" teachers would start at $82 a month, instead of the present pay of $76 a month.

Arrest Two Negroes On Whiskey Charges

Two Greenville Negroes, Sylvester Wilson and Arthur Tyson, were arrested by ABC officers last night on charges of possession of illegal liquor.

Officers were searching for another Negro when the two were arrested. As one of the agents went to the back of a house occupied by Nancy Cherry at 700 King Row he saw Arthur Tyson pouring illegal liquor from a jar into a water bucket. The officers said Sylvester claimed the whiskey, saying that he had just returned from a beach and preparing to give Arthur a drink.

MAKING PLANS FOR BIG EVENT

Tobacco Market Dinner To Be Held Here August 22

With a meeting of the program committee scheduled to be held in the Chamber of Commerce offices tonight at 8 o'clock, plans for the second annual Greenville Tobacco Market dinner are rapidly taking shape.

The dinner, to be attended by the various business and professional men of the city, will be held in the college dining room Thursday night, August 22.

Last year's dinner was declared one of the most enthusiastic and successful similar events ever held in the city and plans for this year call for an even greater affair.

The various civic and commercial organizations of the city already have signified their intention to participate, with the various clubs dispensing with regular meetings in order to attend the community affair.

The purpose of the dinner meeting is to create greater interest in the market among those persons not directly affiliated with the industry and to work out plans to advertise the market in more effective methods.

The following local organizations are participating in the event: Kiwanis, Rotary and Lions clubs, Merchants Association, Chamber of Commerce, Junior Chamber of Commerce, Tobacco Board of Trade and Greenville Warehouse Association.

R. C. Rankin, supervisor of sales on the local market, is chairman of the dinner and Willard T. Kyzer, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, is secretary.

The program committee which is meeting tonight, is composed of H. L. Ormond, G. V. Smith, R. R. Taylor, C. H. Edwards and J. S. Picklen.

In a letter mailed out yesterday officials of the dinner called attention to the fact that "Uncle Sam advertises our tobacco market."

Washington, Aug. 8. — (AP) — The Agriculture department forecast this season's cotton crop today as 11,429,000 bales of 500-pounds gross weight based on August 1 crop condition.

Production was 11,817,000 bales last year and averaged 13,547,000 bales in the 10 years 1929-1938.

The forecast was based on the area in cultivation July 1, less the 10-year average abandonment from natural causes, making 24,616,000 acres for harvest, and one the condition of the crop on August 1.

The condition was 72 per cent of a normal, compared with 74 a year ago and 71 the 10 year average. The harvested acreage was 23,928,000 last year and the 10-year average was 31,235,000 acres.

The indicated yield of lint cotton per acre is 223.3 pounds, compared with 237.9 pounds last year and 198.1 pounds the 10-year average.

Ginnings from this year's crop to August 1 were reported by the Census Bureau to have totalled 31,966 running bales, compared with 137,254 bales a year ago and 157,865 bales two years ago.

North Carolina's cotton crop, the condition of which was reported to be 84 per cent normal, is expected to yield 342 pounds per acre for a total production of 588,000 bales, as indicated by the August 1 condition. The state is expected to harvest 822,000 acres, less the 10-year average abandonment.

Presidents James Monroe and John Tyler both were buried at Richmond, Va.

The report follows:

"Eastern Carolina had its last good general rain July 13. Since that time this part of the state has experienced an extremely hot and dry spell, broken only by occasional local showers. In some communities these showers have been frequent enough to furnish sufficient moisture for the maturing crop; in others, they have been inadequate and the result is a decidedly spotted crop. Where seasons have been unfavorable, tobacco had ripened prematurely; it has become sun baked, blistered and burned in the field, losing in weight and quality. Because of these reasons, there is going to be more than a normal amount of nondescript leaf this year, but a close check of reports from all sections prompts the statement that there is also going to be much more good leaf than many expect. However, taking the East Belt as a whole, tobacco this year is below the 1939 crop in both weight and quality.

FIRST REPORTS ARE REVIEWED

R. C. Rankin States Last Year's Georgia Prices

R. C. Rankin, sales supervisor of the Greenville tobaccomarket, today issued a statement regarding first reports from the Georgia-Florida tobacco market centers.

The statement, which was issued in behalf of the Greenville Tobacco Board of Trade, also contained the average prices paid on the Georgia markets for the first four selling days of last year, during which time a little less than 25 per cent of the total crop was sold. The statement follows:

"This is primarily a report on the opening sales of the Georgia and Florida tobacco markets, based on estimates received from a number of markets in those two states. However, it may be best to first say something about the crop down in that belt.

"The latest available figures show that 87,340 acres were allotted to tobacco growers in the Georgia-Florida belt. Crop reports received from time to time show that growers in Georgia and Florida were late getting their crop transplanted, and that they had a certain amount of unfavorable weather; but on the whole, they have had much better seasons than we have had in East-Georgia.

Some N. C. Tobacco Crops Damaged By Lack Of Rain

Although local showers have been frequent within the past few days, Eastern Carolina had its last good general rain July 13 and tobacco growers have suffered in some sections, R. C. Rankin, sales supervisor on the Greenville tobacco market, stated today in his report on crop conditions within a 50-mile radius of Greenville.

"Eastern Carolina had its last good general rain July 13. Since that time this part of the state has experienced an extremely hot and dry spell, broken only by occasional local showers. In some communities these showers have been frequent enough to furnish sufficient moisture for the maturing crop; in others, they have been inadequate and the result is a decidedly spotted crop. Where seasons have been unfavorable, tobacco had ripened prematurely; it has become sun baked, blistered and burned in the field, losing in weight and quality. Because of these reasons, there is going to be more than a normal amount of nondescript leaf this year, but a close check of reports from all sections prompts the statement that there is also going to be much more good leaf than many expect. However, taking the East Belt as a whole, tobacco this year is below the 1939 crop in both weight and quality.

"Premature ripening has hastened the curing season and at this time the amount of the crop in the barns ranges from 50 to 60 per cent in the upper counties to 60 to 75 per cent in the middle counties and 75 to 90 per cent in the southern part of the belt.

"The latest available government figures on East Belt acreage is 263,000 acres. Estimating this year's crop at 800 pounds per acre, this will give the East a crop of approximately 210,000,000 pounds, compared to 422,730,000 pounds produced last year. The decrease of more than 50 per cent in weight is due to an acreage reduction of 40 per cent plus, and to a right much lower yield per acre."

Growers Of Belt Appear Pleased At Price Range

Majority Of Opening Day Sales On Florida And Georgia Tobacco Market Range Between Six And 25 Cents; Warehouses Comfortably Filled But Less Congestion Reported

(By The Associated Press) Buyers of cigarette type tobacco cheered growers throughout the bright leaf belt today by bidding around 18 and 19 cents average for first offerings in the Georgia-Florida market centers.

Early reports from the 17 markets in the belt indicated bids were running slightly higher than those for the opening day last year, when the average was 15 to 18 cents.

Among bidders at Valdosta were representatives of the Imperial Tobacco Company, big English firm that normally takes a large percentage of the cigarette type leaf, but it could not be determined what was to be done with the stocks they were buying.

There was no evidence of direct price bolstering by the federal government, although the AAA has pledged assistance if the price falls below a 15-cent average.

Some leaf sold for as low as four cents a pound, while better quality baskets reached 34 cents. The bulk of the buying appeared to be concentrated in the 18 to 23 cents range, however, and from Live Oak, Fla., came reports of growers speeding additional leaf to the sales centers upon hearing the range of prices.

Georgia markets generally were less congested than last season, as farmers heading plans to withhold their tobacco and work for a more orderly auction instead of jamming warehouses and hurrying the bidding.

Statesboro reported a noon-day average near 19 cents, with bidding ranging between 10.50 and 30 cents. Blackshear reported the first 25,000 pounds sold for 18.44 cents average, the range running between seven and 28 cents.

Prices at Ahirra ranged between seven and 32 cents, with the bulk moving at 22 and 23 cents. A morning sales average of 18.97 was reported at Baxley, ranging between six and 28 cents.

Moultrie sales ranged from a low of four and a half cents to a high of 27 cents, with most selling around 16 to 18 cents.

At Valdosta, the first row of baskets sold from a low of six cents in a high of 25 cents, with the sales moving rapidly. Warehouseman H. P. Foxhall said the first row price range in the Statesboro market was 10 and one-half to 25 cents. At Ahirra the sales supervisor said prices ranged from an eight and three-fourths to 28 on the first row.

Editor Robert Herring of the Tifton Gazette reported "most farmers pleased with prices" after the first Tifton row brought between 14 and 28 cents. At Hazlehurst a warehouseman said the first row averaged 19 and one-fourth cents, while the range was between four and 34 cents.

An average price of 11.70 was paid for 7150 pounds in the first row at Douglas. All houses there were (Continued on Page Three)

The bridge has long been in rickety condition, but thinking it would not be used much longer, nothing was done to it.

Shirt Waist Man Is Numerous.
The "shirt-waist man"—that is the man who goes about in a negligee shirt, without a coat, is becoming more numerous in public places in New York every day. It is thought that by next summer the fashion will have established itself thoroughly. filled.

Principals for the various schools in the county this year will be: Arthur, J. W. Webster; Ayden, W. M. Jenkins; Bevoir, H. H. Deaton; Bethel, G. N. Nobles; Chicod, Newman Lewis; Farmville, J. H. Moore; Fountain, Hyatt Forrest; Grifton, H. C. Oglesby; Grimesland, G. P. Carr; Pactolus, H. L. Hart; Stokes, W. C. Latham; Winterville, C. D. Ward.

Renovations at the several plants are being completed and erection of the new auditorium at the Fountain school is already under way.

The change meant a substantial promotion in rank for Mr. McDonald, a substantial increase in his salary. While Mr. Harris suffered no loss in pay, he did suffer reduction in title, and his hopes for increased pay went glimmering.

What the other Broughton campaigners cannot quite understand is why one of their friends should be so definitely penalized in order to reward another, under the guise of "pleasing" Mr. Broughton.

The hazards of political activity are appreciated by all who particiweek. Those who complete their reports will receive reading certificates during fall Book Week. The little readers have been particularly enthusiastic this summer because they were offered a number of new books. They have enjoyed the "career boys," girls and boys in medical work, journalism, radio, etc. Books for the little ones have been popular. A new group is to be placed on the easy shelf today.

The attendance at the story hours in the reading garden has been excellent. Practically the same group of children have been present each week. There have been some mothers present each time. Last Friday, Mrs. J. D. Simons gave a program of Bible stories with related poems, action songs and games. This was one of the best programs of the year. The children particularly liked the rainbow story.

The many people in Greenville well qualified to direct the story hour have been very generous in giving time and care to this activity. Mrs. W. L. Hall, Miss Christine Johnson, Miss Janie Eakes, Miss Beatrice Cherry, Mrs. Agnes Simpson, Mrs. J. D. Simons and Mrs. Anne Robeson have given excellent story hours programs.

Dean Hudson to Play For Atlantic Beach

Atlantic Beach, Aug. 8.—Dean Hudson and his orchestra will furnish music for a special dance Saturday night in the ocean casino. It was announced today by manager John H. Singleton. This band is considered one of the best in the country. Already rated an outstanding young leader, Hudson will be tops in a year or so, predict musical observers.

With Miss Frances Colwell as vocalist, the orchestra has been featured on the Lance Toasteech radio programs broadcast over the NBC red network. When the band played at the Terrace Beach Club at Virginia Beach, all attendance records were broken. Originally from the University of Florida, Hudson is from Lake Worth, Fla., and the orchestra has been featured at the Aragon and Trianon ballrooms in Chicago and at many other favorite dance resorts.

Large crowds continued to flock to the beach during the week, record throngs for the season being here last week-end. Fishing is reported to be good in many of the coastal waters. Attention is now centered on the varied programs to be staged here and at Morehead City during the third annual Coastal Festival, August 15-17.

William P. Dunn, vice president of the Manufacturers Trust Company, New York, is spending a vacation at Atlantic Beach. He and members of his family have the Chinese pagoda cottage on the oceanfront.

Changes In UCC Mystify Supporters Of Broughton
Reflector Bureau.
By LYNN NISBET
Raleigh, August 8.—Certain changes and promotions in the field forces of the State Unemployment Compensation Commission, just become generally known, have some of the leaders in the Broughton organization during the recent primary puzzled. Ostensibly, the main promotion was made upon representation that it would be very pleasing to Mr. Broughton. It now develops that neither the governor-nominate nor any high ranking members of his campaign organization knew about it until after its consummation. And the reaction of several campaign strategists is anything but pleasant.

All employees of the UCC are under civil service. Merit examinations ordered by the federal government, which participates in all activities of the commission, were nullified by the last legislature in an act blanketing all persons then on the payroll without taking the examination. Later, federal officials made it clear that such subterfuge would not be tolerated and examinations must still be taken. Despite the legislative act, many employees did take the tests a year ago. Promotions in rank or title, increased pay, etc., are supposed to be based upon the result of these merit examinations. There isn't supposed to be any politics in the commission. Collaterally, employees are not supposed to be unduly active in partisan political campaigns.

When the gubernatorial primary campaign began to warm up last spring, Carlton McDonald of Moore county, a field deputy in the appeals division, asked for and obtained leave of absence without pay so that he could aid in the nomination of Mr. Broughton. When that campaign was over he resumed his duties with the commission.

Other active supporters of Mr. Broughton, who may have looked for some "help" when he became governor, were surprised to learn a few days ago some radical changes in the commission set-up had already taken care of the field deputy.

Heretofore the state has been treated as a single unit in claim appeals, with Charles U. Harris, a brother of North Carolina's senior superior court judge, and himself a supporter of Mr. Broughton, having title as chief deputy in that division. Now the state has been divided into two districts, eastern and western, with Mr. Harris as chief of the western district and Mr. McDonald as chief in the east. The joke in that is that the industrial western half of the state occasions about four times the work that originates in the agrarian east. But the two chiefs have equal standing and equal pay.

One Left Dead In Hurricane's Wake

Port Arthur, Tex., Aug. 8.—(AP)—A tropical hurricane blew itself out inland today after killing at least one person, injuring 10 and damaging property in the Sabine area of Texas and Louisiana.

Scores were marooned as 75-mile winds roared into Texas from the east and struck Port Arthur, Orange and Beaumont.

Houses were unroofed, trees uprooted and advertising signs sent whirling through the air. Six persons were injured at Port Arthur and three at Beaumont, where damage to windows and small buildings was widespread. None of the injured was reported hurt seriously.

Officially damage was estimated at Port Arthur at $100,000. Jefferson County Agent J. F. Combs said damage to the rice crop in that section may reach $500,000.

The center of the storm passed inland between Sabine Pass and Port Arthur and winds at the peak registered more than 80 miles an hour.

WOULD REVOKE BEER LICENSES

Bain To Ask Action By Several County Boards

Reflector Bureau.
By LYNN NISBET
Raleigh, August 8.—The Brewers and North Carolina Beer Distributors committee, Col. Edgar H. Bain, director, plans to petition several boards of county commissioners for revocation of beer licenses recently granted to wives of men whose licenses had been revoked.

In several instances the committee, in its "clean up or close up" campaign, has secured revocation of the retail beer license of a man, only to have another license issued to the wife. Prior to a recent ruling of the attorney general, county commissioners had interpreted the law as leaving them little discretion in such cases.

A few weeks ago Attorney General Harry McMullan ruled that "the commissioners would be justified in refusing the license . . . would be justified in concluding that the wife of the convicted violator would operate . . . under the control of her husband." In some instances the man continued to work in the place where beer is sold.

It is such flagrant instances of subterfuge that has aroused the ire of Col. Bain and his associates on the committee, and plans are now being worked out to present petitions to county boards to have these licenses revoked.

The petitions will be based upon the attorney general's opinion cited above, and upon the statutory provision that when a license has been revoked for cause it shall be unlawful to re-issue said license for said premises to any person within a period of six months after revocation.

Raleigh, August 8.—The work of the North Carolina Department of Labor co-operating with the Federal government in enforcement of provisions of the wage-hour law has proven so satisfactory that the policy of state co-operation is being extended.

The idea of using state inspectors to enforce federal statutes originated with Major A. L. Fletcher, then in charge of enforcement of the law for the entire country and now regional director for North and South Carolina. Former Commissioner of Labor for North Carolina, Major Fletcher knew of the efficiency of this state's labor department. He had trained Forrest Shuford, now commissioner, as well as most of the inspectors. An experimental co-operative agreement was signed last November.

Similar working agreements have been made with Connecticut and Minnesota and negotiations are under way with five other states as a direct result of the very satisfactory experience in North Carolina. Under these agreements state inspectors, in addition to their other duties, make inspections of the federal statutes.

At present a number of North Carolina state inspectors are participating in the nation-wide information and inspection campaign in the lumber industry.

Commenting on state-federal co-operation Major Fletcher said: "It is a distinct advantage to the government to have available services of State inspectors. For the employer, it also has distinct advantages. It saves him the annoyance of having both state and federal inspectors making a series of call and requiring separate records. At the same time it facilitates work of both the state and federal agencies."

That sort of stuff hasn't gone in this town for some years now. It never did go with Jimmy Cagney. For one thing, he's not the partying type. For another, he couldn't be the type if he cared about it. The only picture Cagney ever had without at least one scrap was "A Midsummer Night's Dream." Usually, if it's a real Cagney picture, the hero gets embroiled two or three times.

Sales of cloth coats are declining. Manufacturers of such coats think one of the principal reasons is that, for the price of a good fur-trimmed cloth coat, a woman can buy a fur coat these days.

Coat makers have thought up two attractive answers to that problem—the untrimmed casual coat, neither sports nor dressy, but one that can pinch hit for both, and the coat which is half covered with detachable fur. The casual coat is a good buy because it is suitable anytime, anywhere. Often it is combined with a matched-up dress, increasing its usefulness.

Detachable fur is this fall's most important development in cloth coats. A fur stole or jacket may be worn over the coat it was designed for, or with a street dress.

Knowing how to buy meat should be part of every woman's culinary education. If you do not know the geography of beef, pork and lamb, I suggest you write me for some good meat charts and learn the various cuts and for what uses each cut is best suited. When it comes to buying meats in the tin, however, the task is even simpler. All one has to do is to look for the name Wilson Certified on the tin and you can be sure of getting finest quality, full value and exactly what is represented on the label.

TENDER MADE HAM BONELESS, IN TINS

One large, solid piece of the best flavored and most tender ham you have ever eaten—this is what you get when you buy a Wilson Tender Made Ham, boneless in tin. Whole, half or quarter (family) ham sizes. No waste, ready to eat. Or remove from can and heat in a moderate oven, allowing 5 minutes to the pound for a whole ham and 7 minutes for 1/4 or 1/2 ham.

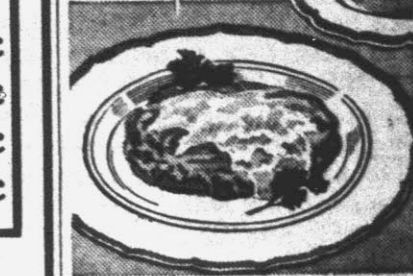

Ham and Eggs a la Rector

Cut 2 thin slices of boneless Tender Made Ham for each person. With a sharp knife or scissors fringe each slice all the way round. Heat a skillet till sizzling hot. Grease lightly with cooking oil. Fry the fringed slices quickly until they are crisp and hot. In the center of each curled slice, place a freshly poached Clear Brook Egg.

The MOR the Merrier

Canny housewives are buying MOR at least three cans at a time. Keep one can chilled in the refrigerator at all times, for sandwiches and cold platters and a couple on the pantry shelf ready to be made into hot dishes for breakfast, lunch and dinner. MOR is the all pork shoulder meat that is more tender, more delicate, more perfectly seasoned than any you have ever tasted. No waste—12 ounces of solid meat. One can serves six.

EGGS FOO YONG OR CHINESE OMELET

1 cup MOR (1/2 can) cut in strips
6 Clear Brook Eggs
1 cup bean sprouts
1/2 cup shredded onion (optional)
Salt and pepper to taste
Cooking oil
Beat eggs slightly. Add the MOR cut in thin, short strips, bean sprouts, very well drained and onion (if desired). Season to taste.
Heat 5- or 6-inch skillet and add cooking oil to depth of 1/4 inch. When oil is very hot, pour about 1/2 cup of the egg mixture into the hot fat. Brown on one side, turn, set aside on hot plate, and continue cooking. Serve with a sauce made of 1 cup soup stock or consommé, thickened with cornstarch and seasoned with Chinese soy sauce. Makes 6 individual omelets.

MAKING GOD A PARTNER

Brother Lawrence was a devoted monk who lived several centuries ago. Upon entering a monastery, he took a vow that he would attempt to do everything, be it great or small, as if he stood in the majestic presence of God. He was assigned to menial duties in the monastery, but he did not consider it at all derogatory to his exalted conception of the presence of God to take the presence of the Almighty with him into the kitchen, the stable, or the field.

His dictum is that life is the stewardship God accords His children, and that He alone administers it. He is continually conscious of the kindly presence of God. He maintains, in this little book of his, that a man can practice the presence of God, and by constant practice become aware of this divine presence at all times.

A COMMON PERIL CALLS FOR MUTUAL DEFENSE PREPARATION

Military strategists agree that England's most vulnerable area of attack is from Irish shores. It is believed that Hitler's long threatened blitzkrieg against the island kingdom is based upon complete encirclement, and that Eire is a vital point in the strategy. Should actual invasion of England or Scotland fail, it is pointed out that possession of Irish shores would complete the Nazi blockade and Great Britain might eventually be starved into submission.

Few believe that the Republic of Eire, headed by Prime Minister Eamon De Valera, is a willing party to such a design. Yet Eire, almost wholly lacking in paraphernalia of modern warfare and with a mere 15,000 poorly trained regulars, consistently refuses to allow English troops and war equipment to enter the country.

It is said that the price of cooperation is the incorporation of the six counties of North Ireland within the Republic. Mr. De Valera and his ministers are not fooled by the situation. Mr. Aiken, Minister for Defense Coordination, recently acknowledged the probability of invasion and declared that if Ireland is attacked by the forces of "one belligerent power" he will invoke the aid of "the other belligerent." Britain, with no thought of invasion, takes some comfort from this statement.

It is incomprehensible that the traditional hatred of England should overshadow fear of Germany. The Prime Minister undoubtedly is familiar with the fate of Denmark, Norway, Holland, Belgium and other small nations that have "co-operated" with Germany. He undoubtedly knows that if Ireland's independence is to be preserved, it must be defended by British guns and men.

The inability of the leaders to get together on a strong realistic policy may be a reflection of the attitude of the Irish people. Recent visitors to Ireland report that the alarm of the Government is not shared by Ireland's citizenry. This may account for the almost total failure of a recent recruiting drive.

It is possible, of course, that Hitler may never strike through Ireland, but even if he does not, Irish freedom depends upon England. If the Nazis gain control of St. Georges Channel and the Irish Sea, Ireland's economic life line would be cut. England depends on Ireland for foodstuffs—but Ireland is just as dependent for existence upon the English market.

That is not the only danger, if recent dispatches from Dublin are true. German "tourist" infiltration in recent months has been unusually heavy and the German embassy staff of more than sixty persons is ten times as large as that required by the United States to maintain diplomatic relations. German "fifth column" methods are well known, and apparently the ground work is already laid in Ireland.

Ice is so rare in parts of Alaska that when Swan Lake near Sitka froze over last winter the city schools were closed so pupils could have a day of skating.

Washington Daybook By Jack Stinson

Washington—Capital talk: In recent weeks, no man has so covered himself with what passes for success in diplomacy as Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

When the conference was called, the capital was full of skepticism. These Pan-American conferences always had been sessions of sound and fury signifying nothing much and this, everyone said, was going to be just another one. The economic situation was too full of antagonistic selfish interests. As for the Monroe Doctrine, that always had been the United States' own baby.

A United Front That's the way talk ran around here before the assembling of the delegates of the 21 American nations at Havana. Secretary Hull arrived on the scene and went to work.

One of the men who was at the conference said: "No man worked harder than he. No man was more patient, more tolerant, more deeply solicitous of the wishes and views and attitudes of the other delegations and he said also that no man enjoyed more esteem."

True it is that Argentina is a little cool to the whole business and its congress may not ratify that "act of Havana," but that does not keep official Washington from showering Hull with such phrases as "the crowning achievement of your long and illustrious career."

Paring Budgets The talk continues to circulate about Wendell L. Willkie and President Roosevelt getting together for conferences on vital matters in the foreign situation. But hard-headed politicians argue that the Republicans would be against it because it would shoot holes in their campaign contentions that the Pres-man, is also writing a book. Rather ident is leading us into war. The Democrats would be against it because they are taking all the responsibility for our foreign policy and will continue to do so through those vital days ahead (until next January at least, even if the electors go against them) and that there should be no question of sharing the credit, if any.

Raleigh, Aug. 8.—The first solemn High Mass ever to be celebrated at the Waterside Theater at Fort Raleigh is scheduled for Sunday morning. The service will be directed by Rt. Rev. Vincent G. It has been this custom, ever since the Lost Colony Theater was built, to have religious services each Sunday and leaders in all denominations are invited.

Samuel Selden, director of the Lost Colony pageant, has just completed a book entitled "The Stage in Action," being a technical study of acting and directing. Sponsored by the Guggenheim Foundation, Mr. Selden has worked on the book for several years, spending a good deal of time in Europe studying the background of theatrical technique.

Casual Slaughters By VIRGINIA HANSON

YESTERDAY: Key drives Jeff back to jail. She leaves from Jeff that Sandra may have married him thinking his worthless property had silver on it. Back in her room Key looks for the shorthand notebook. It has vanished again.

Chapter 39 What Safe Place?

I SHUFFLED through the papers on top of the table. I opened the table drawer. I even delved into the wastebasket. But it wasn't there; it wasn't anywhere in the two rooms or in the small bathroom.

I gave up the search, finally. Jeff must have taken it after all. I felt a flash of resentment. He hadn't trusted me, even though I knew what the notebook might contain. But did I? Too late I realized that there might have been more that Sandra could have told, information more damaging than the bit of scandal about Mimi and Jeff.

Jeff needn't have told me anything he was afraid Sandra had put in that notebook! I'd been a fool to believe him, to let it get out of my hands. What had he done with it—hidden it, destroyed it? There had been plenty of time to do either on his way to the garage. I felt sure he no longer had it, when I saluted him at the hospital. It was too large to be concealed in a pocket, and he had not been carrying anything.

Was there any use trying to find it? Was there anyone to whom I could appeal for help? Gerald? I felt again that sinking of my heart, the unwilling, frightening realization that Gerald was an impostor.

Felicia? The chaplain? But I would have to tell them that Jeff had been here, and I was reluctant to do that. Perhaps he had not destroyed the notebook; he might have hidden it in the car. The garage was locked and the key in my bag, but I shrank from going out there alone in the dark. If the notebook was there, it was safe until morning. Morning, I told myself, would be time enough.

I got my wardrobe suitcase from the closet and packed my things, putting my papers all together in a compartment which served very well for the purpose. The rejected manuscript, still unopened, went in with them. Then I emptied the closet and the drawers of the mahogany chest, took a look around the bathroom and sitting room for forgotten articles, closed my typewriter in its traveling case and prepared to leave. At the door, however, I turned back on an unexplained impulse and dragged the wardrobe suitcase far as the sitting room. But it was too heavy for me. So I abandoned it there, locked both the suitcase and the typewriter and put the keys in my bag. Then I turned out the lights, went out and shut the door.

There was a light in Felicia's sitting room, but she was in bed, snoring a little. Remembering not to be too quiet, I prepared for bed, but she did not stir. And when, presently, I turned off the light and stretched out on the vacant bed her soft little snore was still at work.

Normally that snore would not have bothered me, but tonight I was overwrought. The instant I relaxed and about to drift into sleep, unwelcome thoughts would swarm around me like mosquitoes. There were mosquitoes, too, in the flesh—their own and mine. And there was that softly persistent snore that gradually became maddening.

Elemental Fear EVENTUALLY I resigned myself to trying awake. I doubled the pillow against the head of the bed and sat up, staring at the gray shape of a window, wishing it would begin to grow lighter, wishing I had a cigarette but afraid to get one for fear the smell of the smoke would disturb Felicia. I thought once of going into the sitting room, closing the door behind me, but that reminded me too vividly of the night before—of Sandra meeting death, alone, in my sitting room.

I felt the roots of my hair tingle with elemental fear. For the first time I thought of that snore as a comforting reminder that I was not alone.

Then I began to hear little things, small sounds such as are always audible in a sleeping house, but which tonight my disordered imagination magnified into evidence that evil was creeping on stealthy feet through the corridors of the building.

Over the heavy thudding of my heart I heard boards creak under the slow weight of those feet, heard the little stirrings of secret errands, the whisper of pages as if someone were leafing rapidly through a magazine. My thoughts went back with mounting horror to the picture of Sandra, sitting dutifully quiet while I worked, turning the pages of a magazine until I was ready to scream at the relentless regularity of the repeated sound. My heart hammering painfully, I pictured her sitting there now, turning the pages, waiting—waiting for what? What had she left undone?

Then, so distinct that I knew I had not imagined it, loud in the quiet night, I heard the click of a door latch.

That sound woke me to a his efforts are directed toward a "paper" on the history of the Raleigh Baptist Association for presentation at the fall meeting. Softball And Baseball Cards Rained Out Last Night

PLAY PLANNED HERE TONIGHT

Both Sports To Be Resumed If Weather Permits

All sports cards in Greenville were rained out last night, but weather permitting both softball and baseball will be renewed here tonight. The Greenies are slated to engage the New Bern Bears, while play is scheduled to be resumed in the Eastern Carolina invitational softball tournament under way in this city.

The Greenies were to have engaged the Tarboro team here last night. The locals now have two games to make up with the Edgemont team, one here and one at Tarboro. Greenville has played 103 games to date, having won 46 and lost 57. The schedule calls for 23 more games, in addition to the two to be made up with Tarboro. This gives the locals 25 more contests to overcome a six and one-half lead held by the Kingston Eagles, now in the bottom of the first division. The chance of getting into the finals, however, is not impossible, if the Greenies come any where near the home stretch record they established in 1938 they will be in the play-off.

Center Terriers Get 7-5 Win Over Tigers

By LOUIS DUPREE
Thursday morning the Center Terriers played the West Tigers and you've guessed it—won by a score of 7-5.
West scored once in the first, and Center tallied four to take a lead they never relinquished. Center bunted two more in the second and West also scored two in the third and added one more in the fourth and fifth, but Center came back with a single tally in the sixth to make the final score 7-5.
Leading the winners was Edmund Curry with two for three and M. White with the same percentage. G. Garret and L. Dupree were next best for the Terriers with two for four and one for two respectively.
Jack Mines and Bill Sugg each with one for one lead the Tigers. W. Garrett for the Terriers and J. Mines for the Tigers.

Pepper's Still Poison To Enemy Even Without Old Basepath Skill

AP Feature Service
St. Louis. — Pepper isn't so peppery on those basepaths any more. Thirty-six years of living, 10 of them in hectic National league warfare, are pretty wearing on the legs.

But John Leonard Martin still ranks as an important name in the loop—a guy with a batting average that hangs consistently around .340 just can't be laughed off.
And that's what the Wild Horse of the Osage has been racking up this year. Of course he hasn't been playing consistently but he's appeared in more than 50 games and batted 135 times. That's often enough to show that Pepper is real consistent poison at his ripe old age.

Timely Hitter
Lest you get the mistaken impression that Pepper's .341 average could be misleading, consider that his 46 hits have brought in 25 runs. He's no powder puff hitter. Several of his blows have been homers and almost half of them for extra bases.

Even if Pepper finished up with a .400 average for the year, though his feet wouldn't overshadow the galloper's original claim to fame—base-running.

He doesn't do much stealing now but tales of his base-running prowess are tall and plentiful. The one John Corriden, Chicago Cub coach, tells is typical:
"In 30 years of watching this danged game I've never seen a guy who was as dangerous on base when he was carrying the big run—the one that would win or tie a game—as Pepper Martin."

"I remember one day six or seven years ago at Wrigley Field. It was the only time in 30 years that I've seen a guy have a play made on him at ever base and still score

Four attempts we made to put him out and we had a good chance every time. We had 'em beat 4-3, as I remember it, when Martin hit a ball to Billy Herman's right with one out in the eighth. Bill made a great play but Martin just simply beat the throw.

Fools 'Em Again
"That was chance No. 1. Then, with Orsatti at bat, Martin stole second on the first pitch. They had him there, too, but he came flyin' in and knocked the ball away. That's chance No. 2 gone bad. Then Orsatti hit back over second and Herman made another great stop. He knew he couldn't catch Orsatti at first but he figured Martin

WILL BE HELD IN SEPTEMBER

Event Held Here Last Year Slated For Rocky Mount

Last year the East Carolina Council Boy Scouts held the finals of the Council's Swimming Meet here in Greenville before some 500 spectators. For five years now the Scout Council, late in August or early in September following each District's elimination, have met to decide on which District of the East Carolina Council has the best swimming team. Some years ago it was the Tarboro Scouts but for the last two years, Kingston Scouts have won the honors.

The East Carolina Council Swim Meet is usually the last of the summer vacation program before school reopens. Greenville will compete against Wilson, Rocky Mount, Washington, Williamston, Plymouth, Roanoke Rapids, New Bern, Tarboro, and Kingston.

If the new swimming pool, now under construction in Rocky Mount is ready by Friday, September 6, the Council Swim Meet will be held there to decide on the Council Champion. Approximately 100 of the 2,800 Scouts of the council will compete. It is to decide on Greenville representation that the Scouts of both the rural and city troops will meet next Wednesday at 7:30 at the Municipal Pool. Farmville and Fountaine troops particularly are slated to give Greenville Scouts keen competition. Mr. H. A. McDowell, of the local swimming pool is cooperating and has arranged for certain members of the Greenville Senior Swimming Team to serve as judges, starter, and in other official capacities.

Officials of the East Carolina Council has ruled that Scouts must not be over 18 years of age on August 3, or have competed in any college competition.

The public of course, as always is especially invited to both the District Swimming Meet next Wednesday and the Council Finals on September 6.

There are ten events. Two of these do not score points. The eight scoring events are: (1) One length of the pool medley relay in which three scouts compete. The strokes will be back, breast and free-style; (2) One length freestyle; (3) The diving number with the plain front plain back and a half twist and two options; (4) One length pool medley in which one scout entrant from each district swims one length of the pool in each of three strokes; (5) Two lengths freestyle. A rest event is a "no scoring" plate-diving follows in which in one surface dive scout of each district endeavors to bring up more pie plates than any other entrant.

Event Number 7 is a length of the pool breast stroke; (8) one length back stroke followed by a novelty string distance diving from the 1 meter board. The last event will be four scout free-style relay with each Scout swimming one length of the pool.

1940, at 5 o'clock.

This "sing" is sponsored by the civic league of Greenville for the purpose of raising funds for the community center. No admission. A silver offering will be taken.

Caligiuri Sold

Manager Rube Wilson of the Greenville baseball club has been advised by the Wilmington, Del., club of the Class B Interstate league that terms outlined for the purchase of Freddy Caligiuri, Greenville hurler, were acceptable.

The Greenville club will receive 1,500 for the ace hurler. Caligiuri will remain with Greenville until the end of the season, however.

The Wilmington club is a farm of the Philadelphia Athletics and the purchase was negotiated by Chief Bender, scout for the Athletics.
Caligiuri's home is in West Hickory, Penn. He has been with the Greenville club since the 1937 season, when the Coastal Plain league returned to professional ball. The season now drawing into the final stages is regarded as his best year in baseball, although he showed signs of developing in 1937 and 1938. He was handicapped last year by an attack of influenza.

Second One-Hitter

Sid Hudson, a former member of the Florida state league and now pitcher for Washington, after finishing off Philadelphia Athletics in his second one-hit game of the season. Sam Chapman's single in the seventh spoiled it. Washington won 11 to 0 on their home grounds. This, incidentally, is Hudson's first season with the majors.

as a character more than as a playwright. He makes good talk. He never merely comes onto a scene. He arrives with a ringing Saroyan burrah. He is impetuous, loud, and altogether sincere. He thinks his plays and his short stories are great. The people in them almost without exception are from the half-world of the underprivileged. They labor at rude chores, and they are lairs and boasters. But, down deep inside, each is fundamentally a philosopher and each has an abiding faith in the goodness of human nature.

This, I am positive, is Mr. Saroyan's own point of view. In sum, he is a sort of adult Tom Sawyer whose Mississippi is the broad American theater and whose Aunt Polly is an audience which, however chastised and teased, always forgives him in the end.

State Poultrymen Reporting Losses

Raleigh, August 8.—A flood of reports from poultrymen telling of huge losses in their flocks prompted C. F. Parrish, extension poultry specialist of N. C. State College, to warn today against improper handling of birds during hot weather.
Especially during the heat wave were complaints heaviest. Parrish and other extension poultrymen found after an investigation that most losses were resulting from overcrowding or overheating, this being particularly true where the birds had been handled.

In some cases, Parrish explained the fowls were handled when they were vaccinated against pox. Ill results occurred when the birds were piled into tight houses, causing them to become overheated after the vaccination.

Even in culling flocks, the State College specialist pointed out, it is unwise to permit the birds to crowd themselves and become overheated, since serious respiratory troubles may result.
If the flock is to be culled, the operation should be undertaken at night if possible. By using a flashlight, the cull birds may be picked from roosts without disturbing the others.

If the birds are to be vaccinated against chicken pox, Parrish suggested that they be placed on racks in summer shelters or that adequate housing facilities be provided. Sufficient range is highly desirable during this period.

Man About Manhattan

By George Tucker
New York—Looking back on a lackluster Broadway season, now empty as a sheet strung on a back yard line, one name comes especially to mind. The owner of this name is a somewhat windy prophet in the sense that Dizzy Dean, before he went gloomily back to Tulsa, was windy with his promises of what he would do in the future.

What made Dean such a curiously compelling figure was that most of his boasts stood up. William Saroyan is a good deal like that.

Saroyan is an American-born Armenian. He is only 32 now, yet he has written eight books of short stories and three plays, one of which was awarded this year's Pulitzer prize for the drama. "This play was 'The Time of Your Life.' Personally I didn't care much for it. But when the award was made and Saroyan was asked to comment on it, he said 'Probably it is a great play.'"

Those who know Saroyan are not offended by his supreme self-assurance. His is an ingratiating sort of personality that makes you want to like him. He has a long head in the sense that his chin is a long way from the top of his forehead. He has a lot of hair on that head which is dark. His chin is strong and affirmative. He likes to write about the people who haunt waterfront bars in his native San Francisco. He also likes to loiter around the Broadway shops and talk with his cronies of the theater and press.

There is a waiter in a 52nd street bar who always waits on Saroyan when he has dinner in that piteous inn. This waiter has been dubbed after the name of one of New York's better known columnists because he always seems supplied with so much lively gossip. I happened to walk in there one night just as Saroyan and George Jean Nathan, the critic, were leaving.

I said, "That was Saroyan, wasn't it? What was he saying?"

The waiter laughed and said, "He was quoting Ernest Hemingway." It was a remark Mr. Hemingway once made about Mr. Saroyan. It was, "Merely being an Armenian, Bill, isn't enough to insure literary greatness." Probably Saroyan and Hemingway don't think so much of each other. I wouldn't know.

But I can tell you that Saroyan thinks a great deal of Saroyan. He should. So should Broadway, and America for that matter. I like him
