

EXPLOSIVE FIRES RAGE IN BERLIN, LONDON

Huge Waves Of Bombers Over London

Several German Planes Sighted Directly Above Associated Press Offices In British Capital; At Least Eight Raiders Reported Shot Down Only After Starting Numerous Fires

London, Sept. 7.—(AP)—Huge waves of German bombers, attacking in groups of more than a score each, swept in against London late today and the dull boom of bombs reverberated over the city.

The sky directly over the Associated Press building in the heart of London was speckled with anti-aircraft bursts as nine of the raiders roared high over the center of the capital in the worst attack within 16 hours.

Buildings shook with the thud of bombs and the crash of anti-aircraft fire.

At least eight of the raiders were reported shot down, but their bombs started numerous small fires.

The waves of attackers spotted from the Associated Press office broke up into formations of from five to more than 20.

It was the heaviest attack thus far on London.

The constant chatter of the anti-aircraft batteries ceased for a few seconds and one could hear people in the streets below shouting with excitement.

There must have been at least 50 dive bombers attacking in groups of 10 over one section, while others wheeled and waited their turn.

As the air raid continued a blanket of smoke rolled out of the east. Out of this cloud 35 German planes emerged in a group, wheeled leisurely to the northeast and continued on their way. Behind came 15 more planes at about 12,000 feet.

The streets, which for a time were crowded with the curious, by now virtually had been deserted.

One formation of German planes flying above a balloon barrage was seen to drop 15 bombs. A moment later British fighters dove into them.

Other bombs were heard as the aircraft disappeared.

In the distance big columns of smoke were visible.

A parachute blossomed out from one winged German plane.

An Associated pressman counted well over 150 planes in the air at one time. As usual, the German bombers were heavily escorted by squads of fighters.

Broughton Sounds Campaign Opening

Henderson, Sept. 7.—(AP)—J. M. Broughton, Democratic nominee for governor, opened the party's North Carolina campaign here today with the fervent hope that the British will be victorious.

"Let us rejoice that our party, under the leadership of Franklin Roosevelt has had the courage and vision to give every aid short of war, and in this has had the support of North Carolina congressmen and senators," he said.

Several thousand persons at the rally.

Broughton said the campaign was being opened in the most momentous and eventful year ever witnessed by man—a year in which a desperate battle was under way to determine the existence of the world's greatest empire.

He predicted victory for the state Democratic ticket and that President Roosevelt would carry North Carolina.

More Area Lost

Sofia, Bulgaria, Sept. 7.—(AP)—The Bulgarian government announced today that a formal agreement had been signed with Rumania for return of southern Dobruja.

The agreement returns to Bulgaria 1,725 square kilometers (2,833 miles) of territory and a population of 375,000.

Occupation of the ceded territory is expected to begin September 14 and military occupation four days later, authorities here said.

'Great Profile' Cast In Concrete

For many years one's fame in Hollywood has been signalled by the placing of that particular film star's footprints in wet concrete blocks in the forecourt of Grauman's Chinese theater. But Actor John Barrymore—lie of "the great profile"—went several steps further on fame's path by literally planting his profile in the concrete. Here we see him making the impression in the moist block with the aid of Sid Grauman, Hollywood impresario.

SEEKS TO KEEP EMPIRE INTACT

Petain Acts To Hold French Colonial Possessions

Vichy, France, Sept. 7.—(AP)—Confronted by so-called British-inspired rebellion in French-Africa and a Chinese border attack in troubled Indo-China, the newly reorganized Petain government has taken strong measures to keep the French empire from breaking up.

Frontier vigilance was redoubled in Indo-China and measures taken "to face any eventuality" after Chinese troops crossed the frontier two days ago and clashed with French colonial forces. (The Central Chinese government fears a back-door attack by Japanese, now negotiating for a military foothold and right-of-way in Indo-China.)

The Chinese, according to an official dispatch from Hanoi, were repulsed after a sharp engagement which left French losses at one dead and 10 wounded.

The Petain government has commissioned General Maxime Weygand, former allied generalissimo, to go to Africa with broad powers to assure the defense and security of the French empire.

(General Charles de Gaulle, the leader of Frenchmen still fighting alongside the British, has declared in London that French Equatorial Africa is behind his movement breaking away from the Petain regime.)

Would Allow King Cross Swiss Line

Berne, Switzerland, Sept. 7.—(AP)—Swiss authorities were reliably reported today to have given former King Carol of Rumania permission to come to Switzerland.

A responsible source said the permission was granted for a "temporary" stay.

It was understood here that the ex-monarch would arrive in this country soon, but his exact destination was unknown.

Diversified Occupations Course Offers Training

By C. B. ROWLETT

Under the supervision of C. Wallace Bourne, the Diversified Occupations class of Greenville High School is getting well under way. At the present there are almost twenty students placed in various business houses in the city. Almost all of the students are new members of the class, but there are a few old members of last year who are still interested in the course and are working in the particular field they intend to follow upon their graduation in the Spring. Most of the entire class is composed of seniors.

Diversified Occupations is regarded as one of the most useful courses ever established in a high school in any city. The purpose of the course is to permit students to become acquainted with whatever career they (Continued on page six)

U. S. PROFFERS USE OF BASES

Made Available To Other American Republics

Washington, Sept. 7.—(AP)—The United States notified all other American republics today that naval and air bases recently acquired from Great Britain would be made available to them on the fullest cooperative basis for the "common defense" of the Western Hemisphere.

Secretary Hull informed the Latin-American nations of this intention in instructions sent to the United States diplomatic missions in the American republics.

The Secretary of State asked that the other American governments be notified that the United States had acquired the bases to "strengthen its ability not only to defend the United States, but in order the more effectively to cooperate with other American republics in the common defense of the hemisphere. He added:

"The resulting facilities as these bases will, of course, be made available alike to all American republics on the fullest cooperative basis for the common defense of the hemisphere and in entire harmony with the spirit of the pronouncement made and the understandings reached at the conference at Lima, Panama and Havana."

ASSERTS KING FORCED DOWN

General Antonescu Takes Credit For Abdication Of King Carol, Whereabouts Of Whom Remains Secret; Indications Of Opposition To Premier

Bucharest, Sept. 7.—(AP)—Rumania's new military dictator, General Ion Antonescu, who has hitched his wagon to the Rome-Berlin star, explained to his people today that he forced the abdication of King Carol, II, to save the shrunken nation from civil war.

The whereabouts of the abdicated monarch were the subject of secretive official confusion.

As Antonescu went on the radio to give his account of events leading to the retirement of Carol and accession of his son, Prince Mihai, some reports were that Carol had slipped across the border en route to Switzerland; others that he was aboard the royal yacht on the Black sea with his red-haired friend, Madame Magda Lupescu.

There were some reports that he was en route to the United States or South America.

Antonescu, presented to the nation as "the chief of state," declared in his radio address he forced Carol out "to save my country."

That Antonescu might encounter difficulty in building a new government was indicated by a peasant party communiqué which expressed confidence in Mihai, but made no mention of the dictator.

Editorial attacks were leveled at Carol, one paper accusing the former king of having recently deposited $4,000,000 in a London bank along with $500,000 worth of shares in the Suez canal in anticipation of his exile.

Police rounded up scores of prominent persons regarded as enemies of the pro-Nazi Iron Guard and adherents of Carol.

Antonescu dispatched especially warm telegrams of allegiance to Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini who have guaranteed Rumania's shrunken boundary against further amputation.

Funeral Sunday For Heart Attack Victim

Toby Price, 40-year-old farmer of near Robersonville, died suddenly yesterday afternoon on the streets of Robersonville while on his way to see his physician.

Funeral services will be held at the home tomorrow afternoon, with burial to follow in the Bethel cemetery.

Mr. Price is survived by his wife, formally Miss Elma Martin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Martin of Bethel, and several brothers and sisters.

Business Only "So-So" Babson Returns From Seeing America

Babson Park, Mass., Sept. 7.—Let me pass on to you a bird's-eye view of the United States. This is based upon the trip from which I have just returned. It was a great trip.

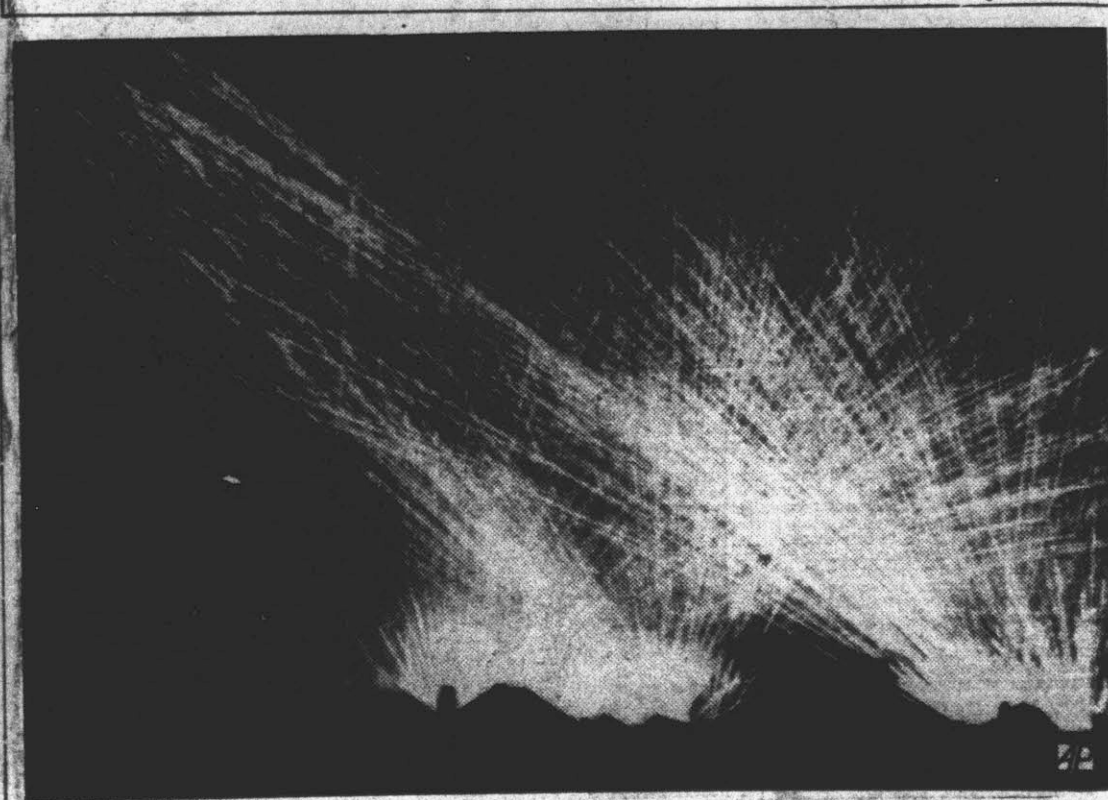

—4,000 miles by automobile from Boston to San Francisco, returning by train from Los Angeles. I covered nearly 25 states, addressed 18 Chambers of Commerce and other big gatherings, gave radio broadcasts, and—most important of all—talked with the publishers of scores of important papers.

How's Business? Speaking frankly, business is "so-so" about everywhere. It is what farmers would say—"neither hay nor grass." Retail trade is holding up well and manufacturers are hopeful; but peace industries are playing safe while the war industries have only partly got under way, I believe, however.

December 31 will justify my favorable forecast for the second six months and—in fact—my forecast for the entire year 1940.

I was especially interested in vis-

House Hopes To Complete Conscription Bill Today

BRANDS TRADE AS ARBITRARY

Willkie Assails FDR For Transfer Of Destroyers

Rushville, Ind., Sept. 7.—(AP)—Proposals for expanding the rural electrification program and for a variable system of farm taxation were included today in Wendell L. Willkie's agricultural recommendations.

The Republican presidential nominee offered these suggestions to 70 farm paper editors after telling them that the agreement to trade 50 over-age American destroyers for military bases in British possessions was "the most dictatorial and arbitrary act of any President in the history of the United States."

"If we can not defeat the dictators through the processes of democracy," said Willkie, "then it will prove that the Democratic way is not the effective way."

The editors' conference brought from the candidate an outline of his farm views.

First, he said, although the farmer is forced to buy in a protected market and sell in an unprotected market, immediate removal of tariff barriers would bring "economic and financial chaos."

Second, he continued, every effort should be made to increase foreign markets when the European war ends.

His third contention was that fixed valuation of land provides an unsatisfactory base for farm taxes. A preferable system, he suggested, would be based on farm income, allowing farmers to pay lower taxes in bad years.

SEC. WALLACE UPHOLDS DEBT

Declares Nation Need Not Fear Mounting Figure

Champaign, Ill., Sept. 7.—(AP)—Hearing the end of a five-day campaign tour of Illinois, Henry A. Wallace, Democratic vice presidential nominee, said today that the people "need have no fear" of the mounting national debt.

Even though the federal debt has increased $22,000,000,000 during the Roosevelt administration, Wallace said in a prepared address, interest charges have dropped so sharply that "it is easier to carry the debt than it was in 1933."

Speaking at Effingham last night Wallace said the Republican party was the "party of appeasement."

He accused the GOP leadership of "obstructing again and again the efforts of President Roosevelt to defend this hemisphere against the Nazi war machine."

Wallace said he was referring to Republican criticism in Congress of the destroyer-naval base trade agreement the United States and England.

"The American people are back of the President in his trade of the destroyers," Wallace said.

Proponents May Not Oppose 60-Day Voluntary Clause

Washington, Sept. 7.—(AP)—An amendment to the Burke-Wadsworth conscription bill designed to facilitate financial settlements of installment plan purchases by drafted men was adopted by the House today.

The plan, sponsored by Rep. Harness (R-ND), would permit the buyer and seller of an automobile for instance, to negotiate an agreement on payments falling due during a draftee's 12-month training period.

Harness explained that under present law the owner of the car could repossess it only by going through the courts.

The House, which usually is in recess on Saturday, met at 11 a. m. today. Leaders strove for passage of the bill by night.

House Leaders, seeking a wide margin of approval for the conscription legislation, were reported about ready to drop their fight against a tentatively approved amendment providing a 60-day try-out of voluntary enlistments before invoking the draft.

While all said they had reached no actual agreement on the 60-day provision, there was known to be strong sentiment among them to close the conflict over this section approved Thursday 185 to 155, but subject to another vote should opponents demand it before the bill finally is disposed of.

A primary consideration was said to be that inclusion of the amendment would heighten the entire bill's acceptability to house members. Leaders have predicted passage by a margin of at least 50, but have worked to increase this all possible.

END 1ST WEEK OF LEAF MART

Prices Paid Higher Than Opening Week Last Year

The first week of auction sales of the 1940 season on the Greenville tobacco market was brought to a close yesterday afternoon after the four days had seen a preponderance of inferior grades of tobacco offered on the warehouse floors.

The quantity, as well as quality was below that of last year and the reduced offerings were believed to have been the result of the late crop also because farmers were kept busy with other crops following the recent rainy spell.

Despite the fact that offerings were of inferior quality, prices paid here during the past week were anywhere from $1.50 to $6 higher than for the same grades opening week last year.

Prices rirmed following the opening day break and, grade for grade, farmers received substantially more for their 1940 sales than for the opening week last year.

The opening day break was cleared by Wednesday night, and the market settled down to schedule on Thursday. The floors also were cleared yesterday and tobacco already is being brought to the local warehouses for Monday's sales.

Business activity in general throughout Greenville swung upward during the week as the opening of the market brought thousands of farmers here. The opening of the market was reflected especially in stores as farmers began receiving money for their year's labors.

N. C. Farm Bureau To Wage Campaign

Raleigh, Sept. 7.—(AP)—North Carolina State Farm Bureau leaders today planned a state-wide organization campaign following a conference with Governor Hoyer regarding unification of all agricultural agencies and organizations.

Governor Hoyer said the group discussed with him plans for obtaining for agriculture a "stronger voice" in Washington and in this state by unification of the organizations behind a farm program.

Negro Being Held On Old Larceny Charges

Geesh Number Two, as LeRoy Reid, Negro, is known to local police, was arrested yesterday on three warrants charging him with larceny more than a year ago.

The Negro left this section before officers could arrest him on the larceny counts and had not been apprehended until he returned yesterday. He is charged with larceny from M. L. Ballard's store, from the J. C. Penny department store and from C. T. Reid's store in the spring of last year.

Two Capital Cities Fired In Air Raids

Royal Air Force Carry Out Spectacular Three-Hour Assault On Berlin In Defiance Of Hitler's Threats; London Subjected To Sustained Bombing By German Aerial Force

By The Associated Press Bomb-set fires blazed in both German and British capitals today.

London, given a momentary breathing spell from aerial attack after its worst day and night of the war, gathered its dead from the debris of smashed buildings today, while the German air force made new attacks on England in the northwest, the southwest and the southeast.

The Royal Air Force made a spectacular three-hour assault on Berlin after midnight, halting explosives and incendiary bombs on the capital in defiance of Adolf Hitler's threats that he would raze England's cities in 100-fold reprisals.

The Germans claimed to have set fire to docks in east London and Oil tanks at Thames Haven east of London. The British acknowledged a number of civilian dead south of London.

Nazis minimized the effect of the British raid in Berlin.

It was the German capital's most spectacular raid of the war and coincided with widespread attacks in which British bombers ranged over the industrial Ruhr valley and other areas in Germany.

Some of the bombs dropped by the British raiders fell squarely in the heart of the Nazi capital, starting fires which burned long after the all-clear signal was sounded.

The British raid followed a day and night of sustained German aerial attacks on England during which the London area was subjected to the heaviest assaults in its history—six air raid alarms in less than 18 hours.

The Germans continued their assaults on scattered objectives throughout the night.

William A. Garriss Succumbs at Home

William Adolph Garriss, 73, died at his home, 1401 Broad street, at 3 o'clock this morning after several weeks of illness.

Funeral services will be conducted by his pastor the Rev. Gilbert Davis of Arthur, assisted by Rev. W. A. Ryan, pastor of Eighth Street Christian church of Greenville, Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home. Interment will follow in Greenwood cemetery.

Mr. Garriss was born and reared in Pitt county and moved to Greenville about 25 years ago. For a number of years he operated a grocery store on Wade street. He was a member of the Timothy Christian church near Chocoma.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Corneilia Forbes Garriss; one brother, L. B. Garriss of Greenville; five sisters, Mrs. Alonza Phillips of Vanceboro, Mrs. Mettie Garriss, Mrs. Guy T. Evans, Mrs. Hannah Forrest, and Mrs. C. L. Bowen all of Greenville. Active pallbearers will be Messrs. Guy C. Evans, Plato Evans, David Evans, Richard Forrest, Rudolph Phillips, H. L. Bowen, W. H. Forbes, Jr., and Reynolds May.

Spell-Clark.

One of the loveliest weddings of the current season was solemnized at 5:30 o'clock this afternoon in the Immanuel Baptist Church, when Miss Mary Emma Clark became the bride of Mr. LeRoy Penn Spell. The Reverend Clarence Patrick, pastor of the church, officiated at the impressive ceremony.

The altar of the church was banked with palms and ferns, forming a background for large pedestal baskets of white gladioli and lilies. At either side of the altar burning cathedral tapers were arranged in seven branched candelabrae.

As the guests assembled at the church, Mrs. Paul Davenport, at the console of the organ, presented a program of nuptial music. Prior to the entrance of the wedding party, a choir composed of Mrs. Wilbur Shearin and Miss Mary Closs Spell, sisters of the groom, and Miss Vada Whitfield Tart of Roseboro, Misses Frances and Virginia Ross, cousins of the bride of Burlington, and Miss Frances Clark, cousin of the bride, of Greenville, sang Schubert's "Serenade" and "Still As The Night." The members of the choir wore dresses of white chiffon with long full sleeves, made shirtwaist style. They carried bouquets of white Star of Bethlehem dahlias showered with ribbon.

During the ceremony Mrs. Davenport softly played "Liebestraum."

Miss Lela Clark attended her sister as maid of honor. She wore a gown of blue chiffon with long sleeves and a large chignon hat. Her bouquet was of pink and blue asters.

The junior bridesmaids, Misses Carolyn and Eleanor Clark, wore becoming dresses of pink net with heart-shaped pink net hats. They carried pink and blue asters on fans.

The bride was escorted and given in marriage by her father, Mr. James W. Clark. Her wedding gown was of white slipper satin, with sweetheart neckline. The sleeves, extended in points over the hand. From the waistline the skirt of the gown fell into a graceful train. The bride's veil of illusion, with lace in the back and tiered in three rows across the front, was caught with orange blossoms. The bride's bouquet was a beautiful arrangement of white bridal roses showered with ribbon.

Mr. Spell was attended by his brother, James Owen Spell, of Roseboro, as best man. Ushers were James Clark and Ollie Clark of this city, brothers of the bride, Dallas Clark of High Point, also a brother of the bride, Dr. W. P. Starling, cousin of the groom, Wilbur Shearin and Wade Howard, all of Roseboro. The gentlemen of the wedding party were attired in white linen suits. Mrs. Clark, mother of the bride, was dressed in a gown of powder blue with black accessories. Her shoulder corsage was of pink roses. Mrs. Spell, mother of the groom, wore navy accessories, and at her shoulder was a corsage of pink rosebuds. For traveling, the bride changed to a smart suit of soldier blue wool with brown accessories. Her corsage was taken from her wedding bouquet.

After a wedding trip to unannounced points, Mr. and Mrs. Spell will be at home in Roseboro.

Immediately following the wedding, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Clark entertained the wedding party and out-of-town guests at an informal supper on the lawn of the home on West Third street.

On Friday evening, following rehearsal, Mr. and Mrs. John G. Clark entertained at a cake-cutting, and today at one o'clock, Mrs. W. C. Clark, Jr., and Miss Frances Clark entertained the wedding party and out-of-town guests at luncheon.

Mrs. Spell has been extensively entertained since the announcement of her engagement several weeks ago.

Among the out-of-town guests attending the wedding were: Mr. and Mrs. S. T. Ross, Miss Frances Ross, Mr. and Mrs. S. T. Ross, Jr., Mrs. William Guignard, Miss Virginia Ross, Mr. William Ross, of Burlington; Mrs. D. C. Clark, of High Point; Mrs. H. C. Spell, Miss Mary C. Spell, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Shearin, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Carr, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Butler, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. West, Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Spell, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Starling, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Crumpler, Dr. and Mrs. W. P. Fix The Bridges

We have been requested to call the attention of overseers of the county roads to the condition of bridges along the public roads. In some places they are so bad that farmers coming to town with loads of tobacco and produce, find it very difficult to cross them. They should be looked after.

Looking at other people work makes some people tired. If the seasons are going to do anything like even up, a plenty of cold weather may be expected the coming winter to balance the dry siege of the summer.

A good size tobacco break now and then sets some of the little two and three warehouse markets by the ear. Mr. J. L. Little, cashier of the Bank of Greenville, who tells us his bank paid out about $14,000 for tobacco that don't look like Greenville is selling tobacco, we don't know what does.

GOLD PRESSED GRAPE JUICE
—Select firm ripe grapes for making juice. If large quantities are used, a grape crusher will be necessary. For small quantities a potato masher or a bottle can be used with satisfactory results. After the grapes are crushed, pour them into a cheese cloth bag to strain off the juice. Allow the juice to stand in buckets for one hour, to settle, then filter it through a flannel jelly bag. Pour at once into hot sterilized jars. Partially seal the jars and place them in a hot water canner. Cover the jars with water. When the water begins to boil vigorously remove the canner from the stove immediately, remove jars and complete the seal. The inside temperature of the jars will be approximately 185 degrees F. when the water begins to boil around the jars. Higher temperatures will injure the flavor of the juice.

GRAPE PASTE STOCK—Remove the hulls from the crushed grapes left in the cheese cloth bag. Cook the grape pulps slowly in a large dish pan until the seeds begin to separate from the pulp. Stir the pulp with a wooden spoon during the cooking as the pulp scorches easily. Remove the pan from the stove. Pour the pulp through a colander or use a potato ricer to remove the seed. Pour the hot pulp into hot sterilized jars and process in a hot water canner for 30 minutes at boiling temperature. Remove jars from canner, complete the seal and store until read to make the paste.

GRAPE PASTE—It is best to make the finished paste in small quantities. Two cupfuls of pulp and one cupful of sugar will give good results if cooked in a large flat-bottomed dish pan. Cook carefully, stirring constantly with a wooden spoon until the mass will hold its shape. The paste should be the consistency of fudge. Pour the finished paste on a platter or a marble slab to cool. When cold cut in one inch squares and roll in granulated sugar. When thoroughly dry the paste can be packed in wooden boxes.

GRAPE JELLY STOCK—8 lbs. of grapes (one-half under ripe); one quart water.

Crush grapes and boil with water 20 minutes; strain through cheese cloth and pour juice through a flannel bag. Pour into sterilized jars and process 20 minutes. Store in a cool place until ready to make jelly. In grape jelly stock the cream of tartar crystals slowly settle to the bottom and by this method crystallization in the jelly is reduced to a minimum.

GRAPE JELLY (made from stock)
—Test juice with alcohol and add required amount of sugar. Grapes usually require from one-half to three-fourths as much sugar as juice. Cook to 225 degrees F. or until the jelly sheets from the side of the spoon. Pour into hot sterilized glasses and seal.

BELL ARTHUR NEWS

Birthday Party.

Bruce Strickland, Jr., entertained a large number of his friends Thursday afternoon in celebration of his sixth birthday. The children enjoyed a number of indoor games, and heard the WPTF birthday party, at which time Lady Margaret announced Bruce, Jr.'s birthday and told him to find a string on his desk and follow it to the end, at which place, in the corner of the dining room, he found a pink box laden with a variety of gifts. After playing outdoor games, the little guests returned to the dining room to find the pretty pink and white cake with six candles. The table cover was of Irish lace with the cake as centerpiece and pink baskets of mints and nuts around it. The little host cut the first slice of cake and then his mother, assisted by Mrs. Sherrod Smith of Hyattsville, Md., and Mrs. Heber Strickland, served punch and cake to the youngsters. Among the guests was little Miss Shirley Mae Smith of Hyattsville, cousin of Bruce, Jr.

The faculty had supper Friday night with Mr. and Mrs. Robert McArthur.

Miss J. W. Crawford was in Farmville Wednesday.

Miss Edna Browning spent Thursday night with Rev. and Mrs. Davis. Miss Browning is from St. Louis, Mo., and director of Religious Education from the national office of the Christian Church.

Those attending the meeting at Red Oak Thursday night to help Miss Browning were: Mr. and Mrs. Mark H. Smith, Mrs. Mack G. Smith, Mrs. Bruce Strickland, Mrs. R. E. Willoughby, Rev. and Mrs. Davis, and Mrs. Robert McArthur.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Hunsucker of Winterville were here Thursday afternoon.

Arthur P. T. A. Activities.

The Arthur P. T. A. met Monday night, September 2, to welcome the teachers and make plans for the coming year. Mrs. Bruce Strickland, the president, presided.

The meeting opened with the song "America." Mr. Mack Smith, chairman of the school board, then presented all the teachers. A representative from each church welcomed the teachers. Mr. Webster, principal of the school, spoke a few words of improvements of the school in the past few years. Miss Janie Gray Hemby rendered a solo "God Bless America." Mrs. Bruce Strickland spoke on "The P. T. A., Its Functions in a Democracy." Mrs. Strickland also announced committees for the coming year and presented the school board.

The meeting closed with all singing "God Bless America," after which refreshments were served.

The officers and committee of the P. T. A., for the coming year are as follows:

Here's a view of decommissioned United States destroyers, built in 1920 and lying idle at the navy yard in Philadelphia before the current European war. The United States has recommissioned 100 out of 123 over-age destroyers like these and some of them may figure in the agreement by which this country will send 50 of the vessels to Great Britain in exchange for a chain of naval and air bases in British possessions in the western hemisphere.

This unusual picture shows how Lou Webb of Los Angeles, an automobile racer, was killed in a race on the New York State Fair grounds track at Syracuse. Webb's car is shown hurtling over the machine driven by Kelly Petillo. The ill-fated automobile turned end-over-end three times after this picture was made and broke up in front of the grand-stand. Another driver, Paul Russo, speeds onward, intent on the race.

UTILITY HEAD—Lee T. Crowley (above) plans to resign his government post as chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation to serve as president of the Standard Gas and Electric Co., succeeding Bernard W. Lynch.

FLIGHT COMMAND—Maj. J. S. Macede of the Brazilian army air corps is scheduled to lead the delivery flight of six North American Aviation NA-44 bombers from Los Angeles to Rio de Janeiro. The flight covers about 10,000 miles.

Claude Wickard's A Pure Dirt Farmer Even When He's Wearing City Clothes

By ALEXANDER R. GEORGE

AP Feature Service Writer

Washington.—Even in his city clothes, Indiana's chunky Claude R. Wickard wouldn't be mistaken for a "look farmer."

The new Secretary of Agriculture first spon-pure dirt farmer to be given that position since Iowa's "Tama Jim" Wilson in 1897, looks, talks and walks like a farmer.

The barrel-chested, 47-year-old Hoosier has the big hands and strop, stubby fingers of the soil tiller, and he walks with the characteristic leg-lifting movement of the plowman.

He has the farmer's deliberation in coming to a decision. Fellow workers say: "Wickard's mind sits on an idea like a hen sits on eggs."

Wickard succeeds Henry Wallace after six-and-a-half years of administrative work in the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

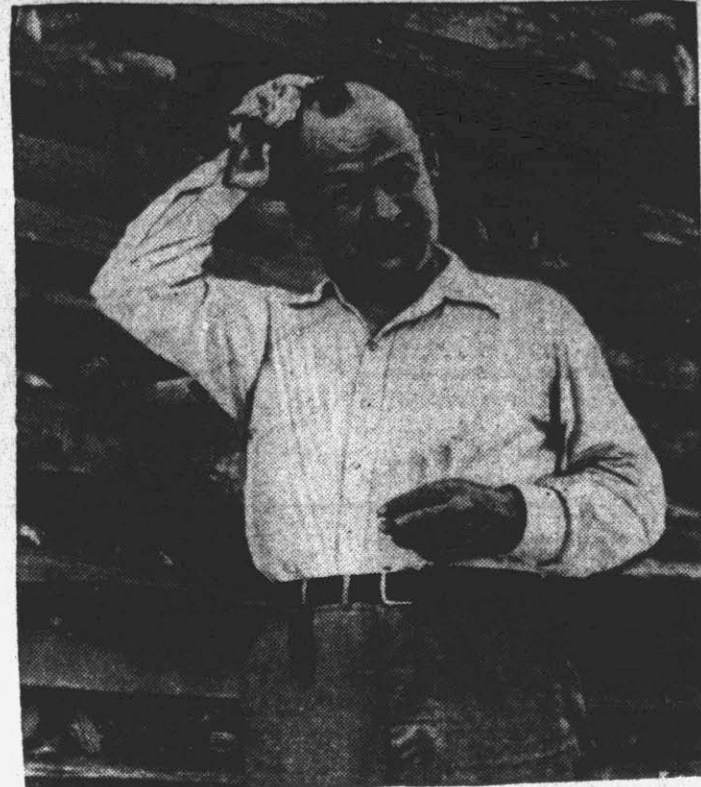

His specialty is corn and hog production control.

In periodical trips to the Corn Belt, he finds time to get into overalls on his farm in Crawford county. It's just 40 miles from Wendell Willkie's home town of Elwood.

Family of Democrats

The farm, now 380 acres, has been in the family since the 1840's. On it are grown wheat, corn, alfalfa, hogs and cattle. The Wickards long have been staunch Democrats. Father and grandfather of the new secretary were named Andrew Jackson.

Wickard started farming with his father while he was attending high school. Following graduation from Purdue university in 1915, he took over complete management of the farm.

He was associated with the Farm Bureau and other organizations. At 34 he was adjudged a "Master Farmer" by a midwestern farm journal.

A pioneer in soil-building practices, he is an earnest advocate of crop-production control as a preventive of soil depletion and farm-price slumps.

Resigned State Office

Wickard was elected state senator in 1932, resigned from the office to come to Washington in 1933.

One of his first activities here was the organization of an unofficial intra-departmental committee to study problems of the underprivileged farmer.

The committee meets weekly to analyze the general agricultural program from the standpoint of benefits to the small farmer.

Wickard is not a polished speaker. He makes few prepared addresses but does well in extemporaneous talks to farm groups.

Typical Wickardian appeal to farmers:

"Let's just use some good horse sense even if we have a new rubber-tired tractor."

He married Louise Eckert of Logansport, Ind., in 1918, one of the bride's stipulations being installation of electricity in their farm home.

Young Wickard bought a home generating plant, did lots of tinkering with it.

Now he's a candid camera enthusiast, also likes hunting and fishing. The Wickards have two daughters, Betty, who was graduated from Purdue last spring, and Ann, who will enter Purdue this fall.

Coach Leahy To The Contrary, Boston College Should Be Hot

By STEVE O'LEARY

AP Feature Service

Boston.—Coach Frank Leahy, who made pessimism a fine art in discussing his Boston College eleven, openly confesses these days that his 1940 eleven will be better than the squad he guided to the Cotton Bowl last New Year's day.

But there's a catch in it, of course.

"We probably won't have as fine a record as our nine victories and one defeat last year," he adds quickly. "We're up against a much tougher schedule and that early game with Tulane will be a headache."

But Leahy has ample reason for his reluctant optimism. He lost just four men from his Cotton Bowl squad and he has ample replacements from last year's lettermen and an imposing group of sophomores.

Heavy Graduation Toll
Graduation took Vito Ananias, leading eastern scorer; pile-driving fullback Pete Cignetti; Dick Harrison, pass-snatching end, and Captain Ernie Schowtzer, an inspirational leader at guard.

But he has a deckful of returning aces. There's Gene Goodreault, one of the nation's great ends and the Eagle All-America candidate; "Chuckling" Charlie O'Rourke, dead-end passing left halfback; Quarterback Henry Toczylowski, whom Leahy rates just behind Marty Brill as a blocker, and George Kerr, a topflight guard.

Center again is in the hands of Pete Gladchuk and Walt Dubinski, a pair of seniors, and a sophomore Fred Naumetz, is being groomed for 1941. Joe Zabliski, standout relief man last year, is all set for Schowtzer's post.

Veterans Joe Manzo and John Yauchos return to the tackles and lettermen Al Morro and Steve Zavanitis, with a couple to be weeded from the sophomore crop, will supply depth.

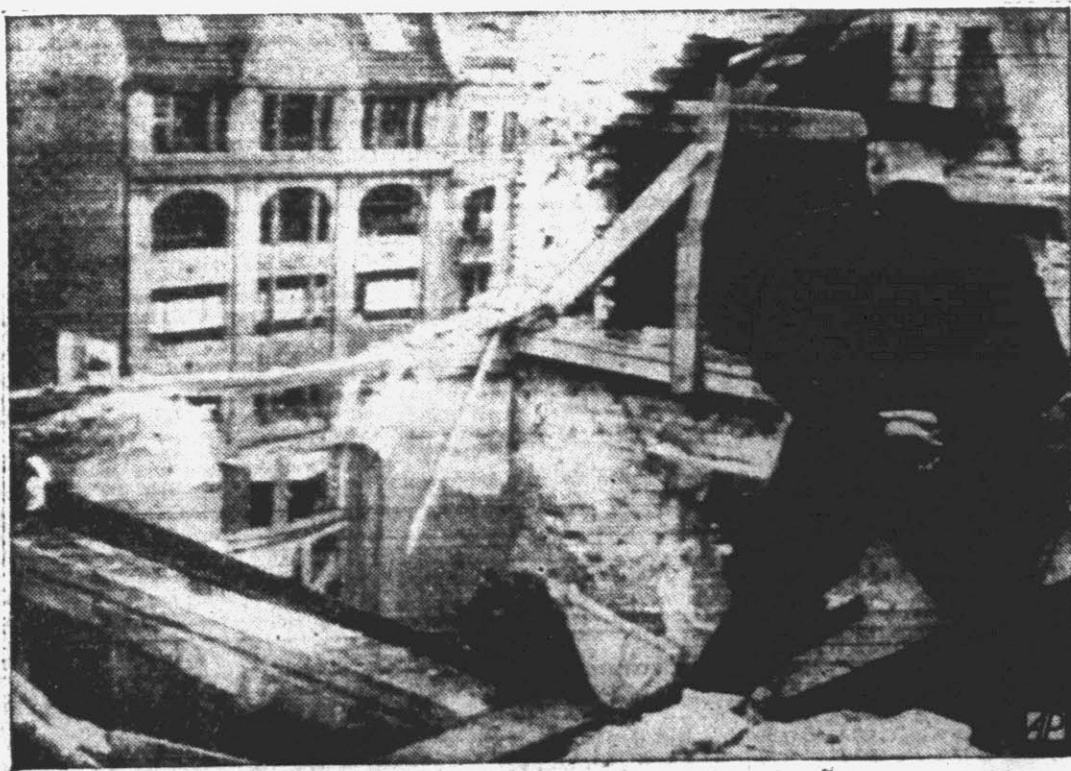

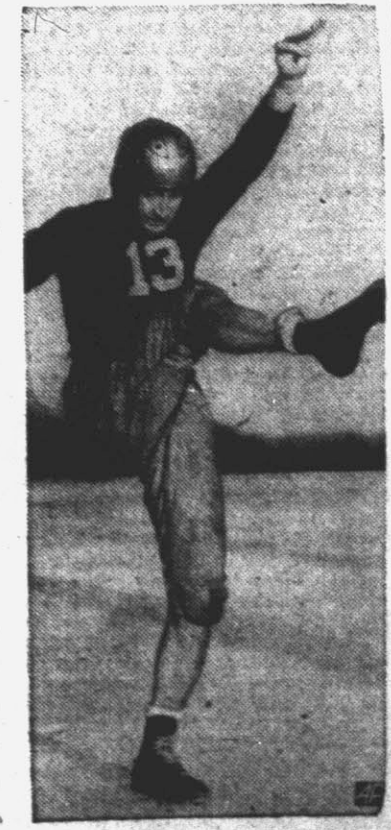

Lukachik Kicks
Opposite Goodreault's flank will be either Al Lukachik, who kicked Boston's field goal against Glenwood in the Cotton Bowl; Henry Wojniak, an absentee last fall, or Don Curran, a wingman from the freshman team.

Mighty Mike Holovak, freshman star last fall, is set for Cignetti's vacant berth. To replace Ananias Leahy can choose between veteran Lou Montgomery, brilliant Notre back, and Frank Maszulek, or Ted Williams, a Notre Dame transfer.

Mickey Connolly, triple threat, will alternate with O'Rourke.

Leahy is certainly correct in his first contention. But he seems unduly pessimistic about his second

Strength For The Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

THE GREATEST OF THESE IS LOVE

As our Lord sat at the table of Simon the Leper in Bethany, there came into the room a woman having an alabaster box of precious ointment and poured it on his head. The disciples, particularly Judas Iscariot, were indignant at the whole procedure. The woman had taken what was her own, a fortune, had invested it in a beautiful bottle of perfume, and had poured the contents upon the head of the man, the town of whose personality had given her new life.

But Jesus was pleased over the whole circumstance. The disciples were shrewd philanthropists who knew how far even a little money would go in feeding the poor, and they who had sacrificed often in this regard looked upon this apparent waste of funds with indignation.

The point Jesus made was that the woman had done a beautiful thing and that it was better to do a beautiful thing than to have an advantageous bank balance. The woman took literally every cent she had in the world and used it to let forth her gratitude. She was in our Lord's sight, the incarnation of the loving heart, and Jesus inferred that it was better to have love in the heart than to have money in the bank.

"The Christian gospel is the gospel of love. Faith, hope, love, these things," said the apostle Paul years later, "but the greatest of these is love."

Tomorrow has been set aside as a day of prayer for peace in the churches throughout our land. There has never been a time that the world needed more to turn to prayer than at this time, and not only pray from the lips, but honestly seek a closer relation with God and make a greater effort to more nearly live a life of brotherly love.

The diversified occupations course now in effect in our city schools should prove of value, not only to the students, but to business houses in general in this community. The course gives the student an opportunity to choose the occupation that he or she would like to follow after graduation, and in addition to receiving school instruction in the studies that will best fit the students, the practical experience received in actual work with the various participating business houses helps to enable the students to become proficient in their chosen lines of work. The result is that when they finish school the students will be better fitted to enter their life's work and the business houses will have the oppor-

Highway patrol reports for this division reveal that during the month of August there were five traffic accident fatalities in this division compared to seven for the corresponding period last year. It is gratifying that there is an improvement in the record, but the five fatalities during the month just closed were five too many, for in each case they were the result of someone's negligence or carelessness. State-wide reports are to the effect that the chief violation of the motor vehicle laws is that of speeding with its corresponding toll of lives and injuries. The human element is the chief factor in automobile accidents and so long as motorists continue to step on the gas without regard to their own safety and the safety of others, the needless slaughter on our highways will continue.

Washington Daybook

By Jack Silas

Washington—If you see a couple of gents measuring the width of a state highway, taking grade elevations, punching soil-test rods into shoulders and measuring the sag in old bridges, you'll know that the highway is a part of the 80,000-mile network of strategic military roads.

You probably won't see any such gents, because most of the state highway departments already have the information. In the next few weeks they will be pouring it into the Public Roads administration here for tabulation and assembly into a report to the Army and the National Defense commission.

Out of that report, with recommendations from the President and action from Congress, our strategic military highway network may be improved and repaired. But don't let anybody tell you that at the moment there is any wholesale plan to make super-highways out of every wagon track—or even any national defense plans to "super" highways that aren't already "super."

Must Support Tanks
About the only military roads that will be built immediately are those which lead from the main arteries or cities to new military and naval establishments. In mileage, these roads probably will be negligible. It is likely they will be built with an eye to modern mechanized warfare—wide and strong enough to accommodate the heavy tanks and new heavy gun carriages.

The 80,000-mile network was worked out by the Army and the Public Roads administration. It spiderwebs over every state, with east-west and north-south arteries tying together the coast lines and the borders and giving clear outlets from industrial centers to military cantonments and naval supply bases.

Bridge Boom Likely
Much of it, according to preliminary surveys, would be satisfactory for military use even now. The principal difficulties are gaps of poor road that link some of the better highways and about 8,000 bridges that are far from adequate for passage of new, heavier military equipment.

It looks to this unexpected eye as if the bridge building business is in for a boom. If there are 2,000 wobbly bridges that need reinforcing or replacement, that means a heap of new spans, even if some of them are no more than glorified culverts.

What effect the survey and subsequent recommendations will have on the country's highway system cannot be predicted now. But you can skip the idea that we are going to have in the near future 80,000 miles of highways that will match the 1,900-mile four-lane, earth-divided autobahn of Germany.

We already have more autobahn here than that and we'll probably have still more, but it would take years to super-highway the whole network and make adequate feeders out of all the horse and buggy roads that lead into it.

Raleigh, Sept. 7.—North Carolina's largest farm gathering is scheduled to assemble next week at the Coastal Plain Station of the North Carolina Department of Agriculture, near Willard, where the 24th annual field day and basket picnic will be staged.

With no less than 8,000 attendance the usual rule, it is no wonder that the occasion is used as something of a political rally as well as for its announced purposes. Only three speakers closely connected with politics are on the program, and their topics will naturally be non-political in nature; but practically all the boys who dabble in the great game of getting themselves elected by the dear people to nice jobs in Raleigh will be in the crowd, back slapping and glad-handing.

On the very day of the Willard meeting, the Young Democratic clubs state convention will be starting in Raleigh; but it's a safe bet that there'll be about as much politics played and talked one place as the other.

Speaking of the Willard field day its sponsors seem to have had a fine sense of the appropriate in naming their "Chairman of the Law and Order" committee. He is J. T. Brown, sheriff of Pender county. The balance of the committee, according to the program is composed of "and his deputies."

There shouldn't be much complaint about the suitability of the traffic committee, either. This is made up of Lieutenant A. T. Moore, State Highway Patrol, Fayetteville; and Sergeant J. R. Smith, State Highway Patrol, Wilmington.

The North Carolina Employment Service doesn't have a tremendous number of job hunters from the professional or clerical classes; but it does have a few, and for the month of July those categories were the only ones in which there was an increase in placements.

The 32 professional men and women who were placed made up only six-tenths of one per cent of the grand total. Clerical positions were found for 164, or 3.1 per cent of all placements.

Other placements by occupations and percentages were: Service, 2,274 and 43.7; unskilled manual labor, 1,558 and 29.9; semi-skilled production, 527 and 10.1; skilled craftsmen, 483 and 9.3; sales, 170 and 3.3.

Confirming a forecast made exclusively by this bureau, selection of "Red" Powell has been announced as research director for the committee studying the need for state wage and hour legislation.

Mr. Powell, who was an active publicist for J. M. Broughton during the gubernatorial primary, will be paid $150 a month on the job while he will last only until the legislature convenes in January, unless

MEMORY OF THE MOON

by Jeanne Bowman

YESTERDAY: Constance meets Carl Pedersen, the dairy man, in San Francisco, and feels confident of his ability. Pedro welcomes her back to El Cabrillo Rancho but something seems wrong.

Chapter 20 Rebellion

JULIANO stood in the little entrance court, and behind him, white, a hostile of eye, dressed in shabby clothes, stood the personnel of El Cabrillo Rancho.

"So this is the welcome you give me," said Constance. Juliano straightened. "Si, señora," he agreed, and the heads behind him added emphatically.

"Juliano, what is wrong? Why are you acting in this way? You were so kind when I went away. Are you sorry I've returned?"

"You weesh to know," stated Juliano. "Bueno, I tell you. For more than one hundred year, our people have herd the cattle of the Caborillos. For them we have work weeth the heart and the hand. Then Pedro he say to us that you will sell to him and they will turn these place to cows . . . cows weeth milk," he spat.

"Then you come and we think: thees Señorita Conchita Caborillo, she is our saviour. She will save us our place in the sun. She will keep our horses that we may herd the cattle on the golden hills of El Caborillo, and we are made happy."

"We would have worked weeth the hand for Pedro, who is bot a gringo, bot when we learn that thees Señorita Conchita say we are to be shavers of debris; meekers of cows, we say no."

"She then is not one true Caborillo. We have no welcome for one who is not a Caborillo." And Juliano folded his arms across his chest and defied her with his eyes.

Constance looked at him and tried to stifle the hysterical laughter bubbling up. She was dreaming. She'd wandered into a wild and woolly western film by mistake.

"Let me get this straight," she said. "You would work for the Taylors because they are gringos and don't know any better, but you refuse to work for me because by turning this place into a dairy ranch, I am proving I'm not a Caborillo and so demean the name, the place, and you?"

"Si," confirmed Juliano, and "si," echoed the others.

"I would make of suggestion," continued Juliano smoothly, "to the señora and let the Don Caborillo, who is the man of thees family, make attend to thees ranch."

Don Caborillo, Constance felt a red-anger, half-Mahoney, half-Cabrillo, sweep over her. So Don, who hadn't cared to visit the ranch, who hadn't been there since child, had more influence over these people than did she who was trying to save it for the Caborillos.

'Worship Of The Past'

ALL of the bitterness she had tasted in that past two months was on Constance's lips as she lashed at the people before her.

"You say I am not a Caborillo. I'm not. I'm a Mahoney. I'm a throwback from the old Irishman who saved this land for your people once. I'm trying to save it for you again."

"I'm going to do, in my day, what Michael Mahoney did in his. I'm going to make the ranch in cattle best fitted to current conditions."

"You outriders know we haven't enough grazing land for the cattle we run. You, all of you, should know that if we cut down our run it will mean that some of you will have to go outside to make a living. Can you? Do you know what it means to have to pay rent and buy food?"

"You pretend a loyalty to the Caborillos. Do you want them to suffer for your stubbornness? Are you so overvalued in your own mind that you would starve the people who would starve if El Caborillo denuded of its last blade of grass, watch the cattle die, merely to save your face?"

"Well, I won't!"

"I've had to barter my future for this land, and I'm going to fight through and save it."

"Now, you men who are men, back to the herds you left unattended, and the rest of you, back to your posts."

"And those of you who are not men . . . get off El Caborillo, for good."

Some of the old riders lingered for translations and were urged out by those who understood English. The children had scurried at the first blast. Only Dolores, as tearful as her name, and Maria, the militant, remained.

"Señorita Michael," wheezed Maria, wadding up, "you have make the speech well, I go now to knock the hell into Beeg Juno." Constance laughed hysterically. "Atta-Maria," she commended. "We women will run the ranch if the men fall down on us."

Constance started for her room, Dolores following.

find a smile on her lips . . . for Pedro.

From the opened wardrobe, where Dolores, to whom keys had been mailed, had hung her clothes, Constance chose a long dinner dress of garnet velvet, and with it wore a belt of the Caborillo's necklace of dull gold squares inset with garnets and seed pearls.

Dolores stood back in rapid admiration. "Def you could bot look like thees when you make the speak, they would have knelt at the feet before you," she murmured.

Constance paid little attention to the thought beneath this, and she was alone with Meg. Meg had gathered her into warm arms and Constance had found nothing incongruous in a Caborillo being so greeted by a "house-keep."

"Divil take them," muttered Meg, when Constance had laughingly told of Dolores' doubtful compliment. "Don't they know thees feudal times are dead? They have to be shavers of debris. We'll let them find out a lady's a lady in heart and not in coverings, these days."

Gold Looked
THE Taylors gave Constance the holiday she should have had with her own family; the welcome the people of El Caborillo should have given her. There was the dinner, with Meg hovering over her, seeing she had the best of everything, and then the Christmas tree disgorged gifts.

A turtle necked sweater to match the beret, knitted by Meg. A scarlet poncho and billed cap from Pedro Senior, and from Pedro, a long jeweler's box.

Constance opened it slowly and frowned a little. It contained an old-fashioned gold chain with a golden heart for a locket.

"Open it," prompted Meg. Constance touched the snap and two faces were revealed, a bearded man and a prim, rosy-cheeked woman. The man looked like someone she knew.

"Michael Mahoney and his bride, Sary," explained old Peter. "Son found it in San Francisco some time back, bought it thinking someone in the family might like it."

Constance closed her eyes to hide the tears. She was the only one in the family who would have looked at it a second time and she loved it. She sensed then, what she later learned, that it had been pawned by a Caborillo who had set no value on it.

"If you don't mind," she murmured, "I'd like to cry . . . just a little bit!"

"You do and I'll sing," threatened Peter Senior, and burst into When Irish Eyes Are Smiling.

He led Constance to the piano, piled music before her, then sat down, his injured leg out before him, to rumble his old, favorite songs.

An hour before the huge fireplace followed, Constance and Peter Taylor talking of the ranch, Pedro sitting back in the shadows, silent.

"Of course I'm still manager here," Taylor warned her once, "but I won't over-ride you if you don't try to over-ride me. I like that Pedersen. He spent a few days here looking over the place, after you first wrote him. We'll work together."

"Pedro is driving me down to San Francisco next week. I intend getting top prices on the cattle before we send them out. That should offset the incoming herds to a good degree."

He went on talking and Constance was puzzled. The man seemed as interested in the replacement and the future of the ranch, as he would have been had she sold to him.

"Mr. Taylor," she asked suddenly, "why didn't you tell us of the proposed railroad right-of-way through the ranch?"

Peter Taylor rumbled under his breath, then looked at his son and sighed. "Well, Michael, it was this way. They bargained with me. They wanted to bring the line in from Fuller's Junction. That wouldn't have touched the ranch proper and we couldn't have used the Beachport depot. So I promised, if they'd come in from the north instead, I'd give them the right of way; providing, of course, they swung the line as far south as the proposed dairy unit, and allowed us the use of the line."

"Oh," breathed Constance, and thought a moment. "How much would they have paid for right of way from the south?"

"Wouldn't run over five thousand, the way the land runs, and that wouldn't pay for the trucks we'd need, nor cover the extra handling. This way, we can shoot straight into San Francisco with the bulk of the goods. The cream can go straight to Beachport without doubling back from Fuller's Junction."

Then they hadn't been trying to "hold out" on the Caborillos. Her face brightened, then clouded and she went over to Mr. Taylor, her hand outstretched. "I'm sorry. I felt I was justified in using your plans because you were double-crossing me about the right of way. Now it's too late."

"Oh, that's all right, Michael," he gruffed. "We'll stick around for a couple of years and see you get your feet under you, then we'll go off somewhere. Kinda like this place, though. I'm getting old, Michael, doesn't matter much about me. But the boy, here, he needs to be working for himself soon."

Kinston Topples Wilson 9 to 7 To Knot Series Count

GAME TONIGHT NAMES WINNER

Eagles Come Back Strong To Upset Tobacconists

The Kinston Eagles overcame a six-run lead piled by Wilson in the second inning last night and went home with a 9-7 victory and left the series standings even with three wins for each team.

The two teams will play in Kinston tonight.

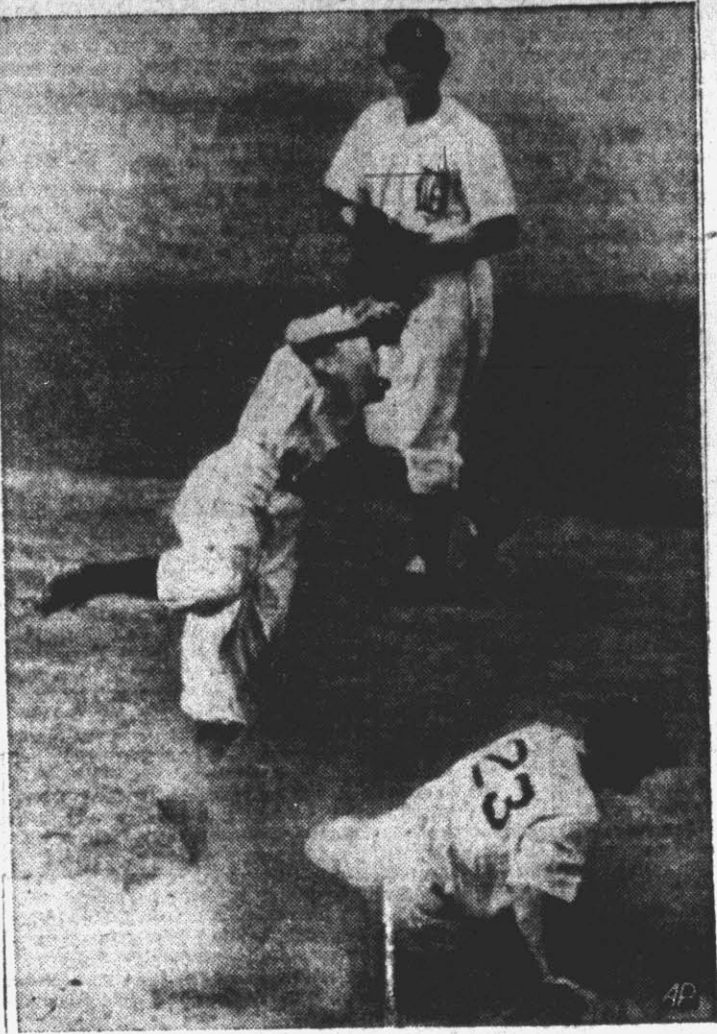

The semi-finalists played 14 innings to a 4-4 tie on Thursday night and last night's game was the play-off.

Tonight's game will decide which team will meet the Tarboro club, winners in the semi-finals play with Goldsboro. The Tarboro team won its berth Wednesday night and therefore is taking advantage of a rest before entering the finals play.

After Wilson had scored six of its seven runs in the second inning, the Eagles got busy and made four in the third and knotted the count with two more in the fourth. They scored their final and winning runs in the fifth, when three more tallies were marked up. Wilson got its final run in the sixth, but were not able to overcome the lead piled up by the Eagles.

Four Tob hurlers were used in an effort to check the Kinston second, third and fourth inning rallies and the last, Gantz, was the only one who proved effective. He took over during the fifth inning and allowed only three hits in his four and two-thirds innings.

Bartell Helps Stop Indians

Dick Bartell, Detroit shortstop is shown falling over the legs of Smith, Cleveland pitcher, after throwing to Rudy York at first base to complete a double play that halted an eighth inning threat by the Indians in a game at Detroit. Charlie Gehringer can be seen in the rear. Detroit won 11 to 3.

Colored Game Is Set For Here On Sunday

The Durham Red Caps will invade the Greenville Black Sox, colored team, at Guy Smith stadium tomorrow afternoon, with 3:30 o'clock set as the starting hour.

The Red Caps defeated the House of David in April. Lefty Black will pitch for the Red Caps and Joe Barber of Norfolk will pitch for the Black Sox.

This will be the first time of the year that this team has played the Black Sox. There will be special seats for white people.

Man About Manhattan

By George Tucker

New York.—It was a red letter day for Peter E. Siskind, though his office personnel, understandably, didn't quite understand what was coming off. Peter E. Siskind is what you might call the Carica King of the Puerto Rico rum industry. He is vice president of American Spirits, Inc. An inspection of any Manhattan directory will reveal that his offices are on the 17th floor of the National Broadcasting building Rockefeller Center.

Peter Siskind was in his office when we dropped in with Chick Olsen. Olsen is a good friend of Siskind's. Olsen, in case you've forgotten—but how could anybody forget—is the Olsen of Olsen and Johnson, the vaudeville Katzenjammers who parlayed a collection of five-day acts into Hellzapoppin and a fortune.

"Peter," said Chick, "we're going up to Connecticut and have some fun. We're going fishing. Get your hat."

The V. P. shook his head. Just then his secretary thrust her head into the office and said, "Mr. Siskind's calling." Kessler is Peter Siskind's brother-in-law and business associate. He was calling from San Juan. "Tell him," said Siskind, oddly, "that I won't be down this week. Tell him I'm going to Connecticut with Olsen to go fishing. Tell him anything."

A dreamy look came into his eyes. "And now, boys," he said, "excuse me a moment." He planted his feet, which were in $27 shoes, on top of his desk. He hauled out a piece of paper with a number on it. He put in a telephone call. That call was for New Orleans. Then he hung up, and put in another call. This one was for the airport. He had some luck here. They found passage for him.

"Boys," said Peter E. Siskind, "I've been at this desk for eight years. I never take a vacation. I work all day and sometimes I work all night. I'm a manufacturer. I make and sell rum. Kessler and I, we work hard. He wanted me to talk to him just now. From Puerto Rico. For the first time in my life I denied a call. If I had picked up that telephone, he would have told me something about a cargo of cane syrup. Or about something that had happened to one of the new labels. It would have been something, I know, and then I would have had to get a train for Chicago, or maybe a plane for San Juan. Any other day I would have done it.

DYKES MAGIC AGAIN—Here's Jimmy Dykes, Chicago White Sox manager, congratulating Bill Dietrich (right), who beat the Red Sox at Boston with five-hit pitching, and then came across in his own winning run in the eighth. The win, 3-2, pulled the second-division White Sox to within one game of the fourth-place Bostonians. It was Bill's eighth win.

"But not this day. This is a special day. This is a day that will never come again. And for once in my life I'm going to neglect business. I'm going to turn my back on New York and get out of here. I'm going South. I'm going to New Orleans. Because this is a special day for me. It concerns my daughter. She's on her honeymoon. She went from Canada to the Gulf. And now she's in New Orleans. And I'm going to fly down there. And surprise her because she never dreams that she will see me until she gets back to New York. It's something I've planned ever since she was a little girl. And if the world has to tumble

CCC Will Develop Sand Hills Areas

Reflector Bureau.
Raleigh, Sept. 6.—First Civilian Conservation Corps camp to be located in the section will be set up in the Sandhills Land Use Area near Hoffman Sunday or Monday and its enrollees will begin development of the 65,000 acres recently taken over by the State under agreement with the Federal government, State Forester J. S. Holmes said today.

The camp has been located near Brevard. It will do fire control and forest improvement work in the Sandhills. The State Department of Conservation and Development recently took over management of the area from the Farm Security Administration.

First among the jobs listed for the CCC boys is construction of a forest fire observation tower and a house for the fire warden and towerman. The enrollees will also work at improving fire trails and doing other fire prevention work before the dead forest fire days of November arrive. They will, of course, be available for fire fighting not only in the immediate area under state management, but in the entire bordering area, Holmes pointed out.

In the winter there will be built dams for fish ponds and other work will be undertaken looking to better conservation of game in the area, which is already a game sanctuary.

"We are especially glad to have this CCC camp assigned to the Sandhills area," said Mr. Holmes, "because there is great need for more truck trails, fire lines and other forest fire prevention work."

GLAD THAT'S OVER.—If Capt. Eror E. Torning (left) and Maj. Frank J. Burns smile, arriving in New York, they've good reason. They brought the U. S. Army Transport American Legion, loaded with royalty and American refugees, from Petsamo, Finland, through mine fields, encountered storms, sickness, averted shipboard clashes between pro-Nazi and anti-Germans.

Postal Oddities

THIS LETTER WAS DELIVERED TO THE LATE WILL ROGERS AT A THEATRE IN N.Y.C.!

YOU LICK 'EM!

WHEN STAMPS WERE FIRST SOLD IN CHINA, NATIVES WOULD NOT BUY THEM UNLESS THE CLERKS AGREED TO LICK THEM!

Reg. U. S. Pat. Office 334-546, May 5, 1936, by National Federation of Post Office Clerks

When postage stamps were first introduced at Kai Feng, China, the taste of the adhesive did not appeal to the natives who, strangely enough were fond of bird's nests and hundred year old eggs. In order to appease them and force them to use the new idea, clerks obligingly licked the stamps and applied them to the envelopes.

Odd, isn't it?

A Postal Oddities program is presented over radio station WGTC each Tuesday afternoon at 4:15 o'clock.

In my absence, it will have to tumble. This is Rosalind Anita's wedding trip. And her old pappy is going to go to New Orleans and see her—business or no business, rum or no rum. Gentlemen, good day."

"Well," said Chick, two hours later, "I thought I knew Peter Siskind. But I guess he isn't such a dyed-in-the-wool fisherman after all."

El Paso Bishop Gives U.S. Its 'Christ Of The Andes'

AP Feature Service
El Paso, Tex.—A huge statue of a hill west of El Paso will be dedicated October 17 as a symbol of tolerance.

The Most Rev. A. J. Shuler, Catholic bishop of El Paso diocese, has supervised financing and erection of the monument as an expression of "protest against propagation of 'isms'."

"To Christians, we hope the monument will be a symbol of their religious faith and their faith in mankind," Bishop Shuler says. "To all others it can become a symbol of those principles upon which our civilization rests."

The monument can be seen from points in Texas, New Mexico and Mexico.

The statue was carved by Urbici Soler. The figure of Christ is suspended on a cross 40 feet high. Cost was approximately $80,000.

The biggest opening in the history of the school was experienced at the Pitt County Training School last Monday. A large number of parents were out to witness the occasion. The enrollment exceeded that of any other record. Two visitors were present from Washington, N. C. Rev. I. B. Turner, pastor A. M. E. Zion church and Mr. W. R. Roberson, manager of the Dr. Pepper Bottling company. All present raised $100 on the bus. The visitors and parents made timely remarks pledging their cooperation with the school.

Monday afternoon a joint session of the committees of the entire Chicod township was held. Mr. Walter Dail of Winterville was present who talked on the bus project and school cooperation. All enjoyed and a great deal of interest was manifested—O. A. Dupree, principal.

3,127 Adults Enroll In Extension Division

Raleigh, Sept. 7.—A total of 3,127 adults enrolled during the last fiscal year in studies provided by the State College Extension Division.

Enrollment was divided as follows: extension classes, 964; correspondence courses, 1,318; and short courses, 845.

Short courses on technical subjects showed a sizeable increase over 1939's total enrollment of 691. Courses were arranged for electrical contractors, plumbing and heating contractors, gas plant operators, truck operators, street superintendents, police photographers, surveyors, coal merchants, water works operators and men working with electric meters and relays and with oil burners. Fifty engineers from every section of the State attended the Engineer's Institute held last January during the heavy snow.

The institute for gas plant operators attracted 102 men to lead short course attendance.

Registration in correspondence courses approximated the 1939 enrollment, while enrollment in extension classes dropped from 1,300.

Expect Big Crowd At N. C. Test Farm

Raleigh, Sept. 6.—More than 8,000 farmers, their wives and others are expected to attend the 24th annual field day at the Coastal Plain Station at Willard Thursday, September 12, to hear outstanding speakers and view agricultural research progress on field trips.

Speakers will be J. M. Broughton of Raleigh, Democratic nominee for governor; Lt.-Col. G. W. Gillette of Wilmington, U. S. Army district engineer; Col. J. W. Harrelson, Dean of Administration, State College; and James H. Clark of Elizabethtown, Commissioner of Agriculture. W. Kerr Scott will introduce Broughton.

ca. Pupils in the course are given part of the school day to work at local business houses. They are paid a salary in return for their usefulness and also receive credit for the work at school.

Those placed at present are as follows: Travis Flanagan, working as an insurance adjuster, is the son of Mrs. R. C. Flanagan of the city. BABSON players take the place of the old "die-hards," a better relation between capital and labor is very noticeable.

It is evident that employers, executives, and foremen are attending to business more this summer than for many years. This has reacted upon the tourist industry. Everywhere were complaints that people are taking shorter vacations this summer. Yet, the managers of both the New York and San Francisco Fairs and the National Parks say that attendance is greater than they expected and appear much pleased. This means that the masses are taking vacations this year—more people, but less money spent.

Investment Outlook
I will not say that investors have the jitters; but they surely have some disease—perhaps sleeping sickness! Transactions on the New York Stock Exchange one day recently dropped to 130,000 shares, the lowest for nearly 25 years. Brokers show how the London Stock Exchange—ever while being bombed—is steadier and more active than ours. They, however, do not tell you that the London Exchange may be pegged by the government and—if the war continues long enough—the British government will have bought a majority of the shares of most of the English corporations.

Of course, the New York Stock Exchange figures do not tell the whole story. A vast amount of "over-er-the-counter" and private sale business is being carried on. Every day the United States and Canadian public are becoming more and more the owners of America's industries. Besides, as a rule, when New York Stock Exchange transactions are very low it is a good time to buy securities, commodities, and land. I am returning from my trip bullish on carefully-selected stocks and productive Canadian real estate, whoever is elected in November!

Attitude Toward War

Well, I must tell you the truth about my attitude toward war. In all my addresses, I would at some point insist that the United States should not let England be destroyed. I explained that the British navy would never desert the Island. Hence, if we should let Hitler overrun England, we would lose the British navy, upon which our safety depends. Hence, for selfish reasons—to save nothing of real reason—we should come to the rescue of Great Britain on November 6 at the very latest.

When I made the above statement in New England, the audience applauded before I got it out of my mouth. When I was in Chicago and Kansas City I got some voluntary applause. In San Francisco and Los Angeles, however, I had to ask for applause! They were all for going over and licking Japan. Some group—whether politicians or military men, I do not know—had told these people that on account of Germany's careful advance preparation and vastly superior air force, England is beyond help. They forget that while airplanes may win battles, character wins wars! The English have vastly superior character—and we should not forget the ultimate power of the blockade.

A Closing Thought
This brings me to the thing that bothered me most about the trip. It was this: Too many people talk only money, crops, wages, profits and other things of temporary value. In fact, by the time I was at Los Angeles ready to take the train home, I was very unhappy and wondering how it all would end. But that last night something happened—I was taken to a most wonderful pageant of the life of Christ called "The Pilgrimage Play." This answered all my questions and removed all my doubts. It seems as if God led me to see this on my last night of a long and solemn trip.

Two boys, C. B. Rowlett and Bernice Jenkins, have entered newspaper work under the employment of D. J. Whitehead and David Mosier, editors of The Daily Reflector and Greenville News-Leader, respectively, and they will act as trainers for the boys. C. B. Rowlett is the son of Mrs. C. B. Rowlett and the late Mr. Rowlett. Bernice is the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Jenkins. George Saad, son of Mr. and Mrs. N. G. Saad, will continue to operate a linotype machine for Mr. Mosier. George has had some experience in this line. Bruce Thigpen, son of Mrs. C. L. Thigpen and the late Mr. Thigpen, is employed by the Person-Farwell Tobacco Company. He will be under the supervision of O. R. Waters. Paul Brooks will continue his work for Carolina Dairy where he has already obtained some experience. He is employed by J. H. Webb. Paul is the son of F. E.
