FDR PREPARES TO PUT DRAFT IN OPERATION

Proclamation To Place Conscription In Action

TO SET DATE OF REGISTRATION

Chief Executive Scheduled To Give Out Explanatory Statement On Peace-time Draft

Washington, Sept. 16.—(AP)—President Roosevelt signed today the peace-time draft bill making 16,500,000 men 21 through 35 years of age subject to military service.

The first contingent of 75,000 to be called up under the measure will go into uniform about a month after all the 16,500,000 are registered. Subsequent quotas will be called in blocks of 100,000 or 125,000 to a total of 400,000 about January 1 and 900,000 in the spring of 1941.

Historic in its significance, the nation's first peace-time conscription was enacted finally Saturday after extended and often bitter debate in Congress as part of President Roosevelt's announced goal of "total defense."

The men drafted will receive initially 12 months of training. They will be liable for service anywhere in the Western Hemisphere, in United States possessions outside the hemisphere and in the Philippine Islands. They will get the regular army pay which the measure raised from $21 to $30 a month for privates.

In addition to the main manpower provisions, the draft law also gives the government new and greater powers over industry in the interest of keeping armament production abreast of needs.

In effect, the law provides that the government may take over and operate with payment of just compensation the factory of any manufacturer who rejects government orders or declines to give them priority.

Such a manufacturer would face possible maximum penalties of five years' imprisonment and $10,000 fine.

Meanwhile it was reported that all married men living with their wives could secure exemption from conscription during at least the first draft of 400,000 for compulsory military service training.

Divorced men paying alimony or supporting children also can expect to be exempted if investigation by local selective service boards shows that such wives and children actually are dependent upon the registrant.

Washington, Sept. 16.—(AP)—President Roosevelt will sign into law at 3 p. m. EST. today the nation's first peace-time conscription bill.

Stephen Early, White House press secretary, said the chief executive probably would issue at the same time a proclamation and an executive order putting the draft into effect and "give out an ABC explanatory statement."

It was indicated that the proclamation would fix the date when 16,500,000 men aged 21 through 35 would be required to register for.

RECORD SET BY LOCAL OFFICE

Army Recruiting Office Enlists 93 In One Month

The local army recruiting office, of which John C. McMillan is in charge, last month set a two-state record, being the only one in North and South Carolina which exceeded its quota.

The local office had a quota of 45, but enlisted a total of 93 men.

Sergeant McMillan also disclosed today that an army recruiting party working out of Charlotte will visit Greenville and other places in Eastern North Carolina during this week and will make headquarters at the post offices of the places to be visited. The party will be at Washington at 9 a. m., Thursday, at Belhaven on the same day at 1 p. m., and at Plymouth at 3:30 p. m., also on Thursday. On Friday the group will be at Robersonville at 9 a. m., Williamston at 11 a. m., Windsor at 1:30 p. m., and Edenton at 3:30 p. m. On Saturday the party will be at Bethel at 9 a. m., and Scotland Neck at 12:30 p. m.

The recruiting party will be equipped with a movie projector and sound equipment to show highlights of the U. S. army of today.

The army is offering excellent opportunities to the young men of the nation to attend the various schools and learn a trade that will enable them to earn a living if they decide to return to civilian life.

It was pointed out that by enlisting a young man has an opportunity to pick the camp he desires, while if he is drafted he will not be able to select a camp. Vacancies are now open at the following post camps and stations: Fort Benning, Ga., Fort Moultrie, S. C., Fort Bragg, N. C., Camp Jackson, S. C., Panama Canal Zone and the Hawaiian Islands.

Benefits offered by enlistment include free board, living quarters, clothing, medical and dental care, all provided "free while you learn."

Interested persons can secure further information by seeing or writing Staff Sergeant John G. McMillan, Army Recruiting Station, Armory, Greenville.

Old Papers Located In Ayden Post Office

E. W. Braxton has in his possession a marriage license dated January 28, 1830, and issued to John Moore and Nancy James by Arch Parker, deputy clerk of court.

The old license is one of two which, along with two old letters were found in the Ayden post office last week. The old documents were in a box and were discovered while the building was being cleaned up.

One of the letters was dated 1828 and the other 1830.

The Halsey gave no further information either as to the cause of the deaths or the damage to the William Hays.

Leave Is Postponed By Rev. C. H. Patrick

At the morning service of the Emmanuel Baptist church yesterday Dr. L. R. Meadows made an announcement to the congregation to the effect that after conferring with the board of deacons, Rev. Clarence H. Patrick, the minister, had decided to postpone his plans to study in the graduate school of Duke University.

Early in July the church had granted Rev. Mr. Patrick a leave of absence. It is the general feeling among the leaders that the church faces the prospects of one of its best years in its history. Also, the conditions both locally and throughout the world, are such that a change in the leadership of the church seems to be unwise at this time. It is likely that Rev. Mr. Patrick will continue his studies at Duke university during the summer of 1941.

MAY SEND JAPS TO INDO CHINA

Tokyo and Vichy Officials Agreed On Principle

Hanoi, French Indo-China, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Authoritative French, Japanese and other foreign sources expressed belief today that early developments may bring the Japanese army into this French possession without any resistance by the French.

But this, they said, may prompt China to send her armies across the colonial frontier and lead to a conflict that would mean the beginning of the end of France's 60-year domination of this 230,000 square mile area in Eastern Asia.

French officials refused to talk for publication. But privately they admitted that negotiations under way here are most likely to result within a few days in an agreement which Tokyo and Vichy have already sanctioned in principle, permitting the Japanese army to land and supply possibly 25,000 troops.

Three Working Classes Earn $25 Weekly In N. C.

By HENRY AVERILL
Reflector Bureau

Raleigh, Sept. 16.—Only one class of workers of North Carolina averaged as much as $30 per week during August, and only two other categories topped the $25 a week average, according to figures released by the Department of Labor's statistical division.

No other group of workers averaged even as much as $20 weekly the report showed.

Top wage earners for August were those employed in insurance and brokerage.

In four such firms reporting to the department 20 employees worked an unreported number of hours a week to earn an average of $31.30 each.

STATE'S GUARD IS MOBILIZED FOR TRAINING

No Difficulties Reported By Adjutant General

LOCAL BATTERY STARTS DRILLING

Unit Here Already Has Been Increased To 117 And Others Awaiting Chance To Enlist

Raleigh, Sept. 16.—(AP) North Carolina National Guardsmen entered a year of active training with the army today.

In many places Guardsmen started their training by undergoing physical examinations.

Starting Friday, under tentative plans, the units will move from their home stations to permanent camps. Most of the Tar Heel Guardsmen go to Camp Jackson at Columbia, S. C., Fort Moultrie at Charleston, S. C., and Fort Screven, Ga.

Adjutant General J. Van B. Metz reported that no difficulties or unusual situations had been reported to him. The Guard passed from his command to that of the federal government at midnight.

Very few resignations were permitted, General Metz said.

Attabay A. 113th Field Artillery, local unit of the National Guard was mobilized at the Army this morning and was immediately placed under military regulations.

The unit has been increased to 117. Although no applications were received today, a number of young men loitered around the Army awaiting an opportunity to enlist. The unit probably will be increased to its full strength of 122 men tomorrow morning.

A military atmosphere was assumed at the Army with the mobilization of the unit and men in uniforms were seen about the city.

Eating and sleeping quarters have been provided in the Army and the men will be located there until they start or Camp Jackson, near Columbia, S. C., scheduled for September 28.

Italian Forces Break Through British Lines

Permanent Fortification Facing Libya Broken

Rome, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Italian forces have broken through the first important line of permanent British fortifications, facing the Libyan frontier in their advance through Salum, the newspaper Il Giornale D'Italia reported today.

It said the Italian forces also had captured many British arms and desert trucks. The high command earlier had reported Marshal Rodolfo Graziani's army still advancing after destroying 50 tanks and armored cars and inflicting heavy losses on British trucks.

The newspaper's editor, the authoritative Fascist spokesman, Virginio Gayda, said the fortified line stretched from the Mediterranean coast at Sium south to Alfaya and Sid, Omar. He described it as a series of strong works with camps, hospitals, lines of barbed wire entanglements, artillery emplacements, machineguns and automatic arms.

Gayda said the line was "well equipped and reinforced." The British, he said, were using columns of armored cars for mobile guerrilla warfare "conducted with the most modern mechanical equipment."

May Provide Loans On Flooded Farms

Washington, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Officials of the Disaster Loan Corporation said today they were considering applications for loans to land owners whose crops and properties were damaged by recent floods in east Tennessee and North Carolina.

They said the flood was being regarded as a disaster which permitted consideration of application for loans for repairs of houses and for the purchase of new farm equipment in the damaged area.

Middle Leaf Belt To Open Tuesday

Nazi Pilots Continue To Rain Bombs On Capital

London Experiences Four Air Raid Alarms; Long-range Artillery Shells Plunged Into Streets Of Dover; British Sources Claim 185 German Planes Shot Down

London, Sept. 16.—(AP) Air raid alarms kept London's millions in shelters for hours today as German warplanes threatened the city three times during the morning and returned in the afternoon to drop bombs and battle British pilots during one of London's longest daylight alarms of the war.

Altogether the people of London were under warning five hours and 43 minutes from mid-morning until dusk.

Despite the almost continuous attacks, the only moderate anti-aircraft activity in the London area greeted the raiders and only occasional bombs were heard to fall during the afternoon raids. Little happened in the morning attacks.

Machinegun fire and the thunder of motors, however, told of a short battle over the London area at the start of the fourth raid.

Salvos of long range artillery shells plunged into the streets of Dover the "invasion corner" injuring 11 persons. The Germans opened fire in reply to a British bombardment.

Dull explosions were heard on various sides as the Germans made sporadic attacks during the fourth raid which began at 2:10 p. m. Machinegun fire, the racing motor and moderate anti-aircraft activity sounded on all sides.

Only scattering anti-aircraft fire was heard in London's three earlier raids.

Mixed with the sounds of warfare was the occasional burst of time bombs dropped in previous raids.

Two of these exploded in south-east London in a little over an hour. One demolished some small houses and broke a gas main. The other tore away the rear of a Catholic school.

The big German shells fell in Dover's streets crowded with shoppers as correspondents in the "invasion corner" continued to report movement of many German troop carriers of all shapes and sizes close to the French and Belgian coast under cover of night and mist.

For the first time in weeks heavy rainfall shrouded the activities of Hitler's bases across the channel.

Veteran seamen hoped a stiff northeaster would soon pile up high waves on the French coast which would make impossible any immediate thrust across the channel waters.

(German forces said that heavy bombers had been taking off in steady procession since early dawn and that a "rolling air barrage was being levelled at Britain.)

Against the 185 German planes reported shot down, the British said they had lost only 25 of their own fighters and declared that the pilots of 12 of these were saved.

The greatest previous day's "bag" of German aircraft was recorded on August 15 when the British said 180 were downed.

The average elevation of the line of perpetual snow in the Rocky Mountains is 11,000 feet.

Pitt Health Dept Activities Shown

The chief activities of the Pitt County Health department during August, as outlined before the Medical society at its monthly meeting by Dr. N. Thomas Emmett, the health officer, consisted of maternal and infant welfare, and V. D. clinics, school sanitation, dairy, cafe and meat market inspections.

The report follows: The contagious disease situation throughout the county for August of this year is decidedly better than for August of last year; for example in August of last year we had four cases of scarlet fever, against two for this year; eight cases of whooping cough against none for this year, and 11 cases of tuberculosis against five for this year.

In the matter of tuberculosis, we find that in the first eight months of last year, that is from January to September 1, we had 47 cases reported, against 34 cases for the first eight months of this year, or a decrease of 38 per cent. We hope that these case report figures represent a true picture of the actual incidence of the disease in our county.

ence of the disease in our county. If they do represent a true picture of the tuberculosis situation, it should be a great satisfaction to the physicians of the county to know that with their fine cooperation, it appears we are making progress in our fight against tuberculosis.

In connection with this report, I am pleased to inform you that Dr. P. P. McCain, superintendent of the North Carolina Sanatorium, has agreed to give us a one-week tuberculosis clinic, beginning December 2. Please keep this in mind and make this clinic of maximum use to you and your patients.

The maternal and infant clinics continue to grow. The total attendance for babies and mothers in August of last year was 127, while for August of this year it was 236, or an 80 per cent increase. The largest maternal and infant welfare clinic in the history of the work in Pitt county was held in the Health Department offices in Greenville on Monday, August 28, when we had 93 patients. The growth of this work must also be a source of pride to the clinic physicians for it is the careful, competent, and patient work of these physicians, more than any other factor, which is responsible for the remarkable growth of these clinics.

The V. D. clinic attendance continues to drop. For July the attendance was 1786, while the attendance for August was 1502. Work in tobacco is a probable factor in this decreased attendance.

The state-county orthopaedic clinic held every first Friday in the month at the Health department offices and conducted by Dr. Hugh A. Thompson, continues to run at full capacity. The work of this clinic is one of the outstanding health services rendered the poor patients not only of Pitt county but several of the adjoining counties as well.

As regards the dairy situation in Pitt county, I am sure you will hear with interest and with satisfaction that, according to a recent survey of the Federal Government, all Pitt county dairies are rated grade A. Not only are all dairies rated grade A, but also the pasteurization plant in Greenville is rated grade A, and the Federal Government reports that the city of Greenville is one of six towns in North Carolina whose regular milk supply is 100 per cent pasteurized.

Right-Thinking People. Pleasureville, Ky.—(AP)—Every person attending the Baptist church in this town of 300 sits on the right-hand side.

The custom has been observed so long that even the oldest members are unable to remember exactly how it started. However, the most plausible reason is that the church was constructed to seat almost twice as many persons as there are in the congregation, and the members began sitting together on one side to avoid being scattered over the large room.

Pews on the left-hand side are practically new. Impurity of rain is due to dust pollen, gases and other substances which it washes out of the air.

$46 Tip From Ford

Pretty Ethel Gaff, 19-year-old waitress, happily counts the $46 tip she received after serving Henry Ford and his party of seven a four-dollar luncheon in a cafe at Fort Wayne, Ind. At first she wasn't sure whether the motor manufacturer meant to leave such a sum—or had forgotten his change. But later Ford sent word from Detroit that he left the money as a tip because "she did a very good job in taking care of us."

Neither Rain, Nor Storms, Nor Night Can Stop Our Pigeons In Their Flight

AP Feature Service

Oceanport, N. J. — Climaxing months of effort, army officers at Fort Monmouth have developed a unique strain of night-flying carrier pigeons.

Experiments with night fliers were started shortly after World War I. But only during the last 10 years has there been emphasis on their training.

When the first experiments were started at Fort Monmouth, the trainers were working against the accepted theory that homing pigeons will roost upon the approach of darkness and will not fly if released after dark.

Some Were Confused

One of the white lofts was set aside for the night fliers. At dusk every day, the birds were released and allowed to return home. Gradually, the distance they flew was increased.

Then the birds were taken short distances from the loft in complete darkness. Some shot straight for home. Others were bewildered. The weak were weeded from the strong and the latter bred more night birds.

Success

By 1930, successes were more frequent than failures. The birds were actually homing from 20-to-60 miles away.

Today night fliers released in complete darkness will shoot unerringly for their home loft. Illuminated at first by the soft glow of red lights, the lofts now are in total darkness.

Instinct alone guides the birds, Captain I. L. Kaufmann, signal officer, says.

Night-Life

Here is a typical night's training: Late in the afternoon, 10 or 15 birds will be taken in a mobile loft to some point on the Jersey coast. After dark, the birds are turned loose.

The trainer carefully notes the time the birds are released to the minute so that by checking on their arrival time at the home loft he is able to determine the speed of the pigeon's flight.

Some have been known to fly 60 miles an hour. In fact, signal officers say, night fliers, supposedly because of their fear of darkness, are faster than day messengers.

FLY-BY-NIGHTS They're afraid of the dark.

Republicans Triumph In Maine

Sumner Sewall, Republican nominee for governor, casts his vote at Bath in Maine's first-in-the-nation state election which swept him and all other top Republican candidates into office. Sewall, ace flier in the World war, defeated his Democratic opponent, J. Redmond, by about 6,000 ballots. Republican leaders hailed the election as an omen for national successes in November.

Willkie Opens His Campaign In Stock Yards

Wendell L. Willkie, the Republican presidential nominee, chose the Union Stock Yards in Chicago for opening his speaking campaign that will take him on a 7,200-mile tour of the middle west and the far west. Willkie (standing at left center with hat in hand) waves to the crowd standing between cow pens and sitting on fences. "If you elect me president," he told them "I shall never send an American boy to fight in any European war."

A CANDID TALK WITH ### A CHAMPION GRAND-DAD

WHO HE IS

NOLIE GABLE FITE, champion young grandfather of Houston, Tex., is 48; was married at 10 and a father at 11; has been married three times, and has nine children and 16 grandchildren. The first Mrs. Fite, whom he married in Mississippi when she was 12, died when he was 19. She told him to "go marry some good girl and keep the children together," and a month later he fulfilled her request. Four children were born of the first union, five of the second. His second wife divorced him. He then married a widow with seven children, giving him 16 young ones to rear. Fite, who turned from Mississippi farming to running a grocery store, went to Texas in 1926. He ran a filling station and cafe for a time, but has retired to live off income from investments and property, and on occasional work on the Houston docks to "keep near my boys, most of whom are longshoremen." At Christmas in 1935 he fed turkey to 107 sons, daughters, in-laws, grandchildren and friends.

"My advice to boys and girls is to marry young. I was very young, of course, when I first married, but it worked out all right."

"All 16 of our children—10 girls and 6 boys—are happily married. There have been no divorces among them."

"When I raised the girls, I taught them to go to church and Sunday school as long as they were under my care and keeping."

"I taught them to take care of the house, so they could make themselves good wives. Every one of my girls can cook a good meal. We'd have better girls today if they were raised like mine."

"My girls were not allowed to go to dances; if they wanted to ride home from church with boys they had to be chaperoned. When boys came calling on 'em, they sat in the parlor with the window shades up. My father taught me that way and I taught them that way. If more families were raised like that, there wouldn't be so much divorce."

"One of my girls married when she was only 11; another one was 12 and another 13, but they are married happily. That speaks pretty well for young marriages, doesn't it?"

"And another thing—everybody ought to raise some children. It brings love into the home. When I first married, I didn't know what love was, but when the first child was born, I couldn't keep away from the house."

"And don't be worried about the size of the family. Every time a child came, I wondered how on earth I'd feed it, but I always did."

"It always gave me a thrill to sit at the head of the table and look down it and see all those kids waitin' to eat."

Know The Law Before Announcing How Soon Wedding Bells Will Ring

AP Feature Service

The threat of conscription may be hurrying young couples into marriage. But in at least 30 states there are laws that require more than spur-of-the-moment agreement by the parties before the knot can be tied.

Some states require a waiting period after intention to marry is announced. Others require pre-marital health tests. Some require both.

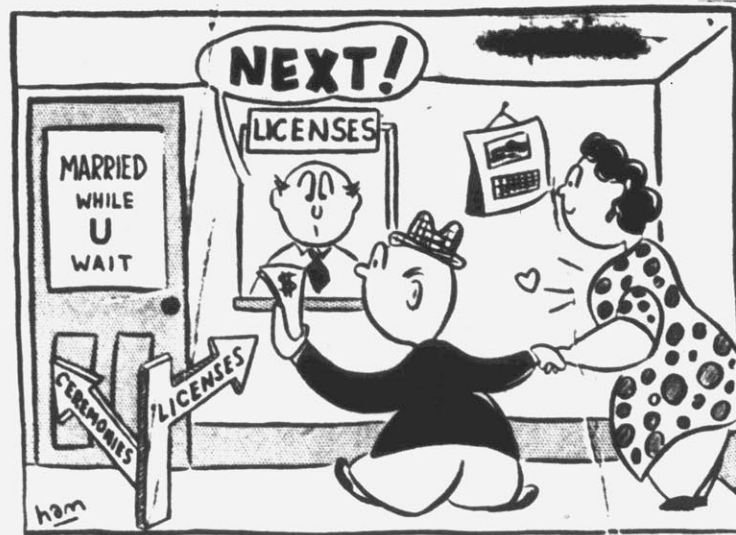

Most of the laws fixing waiting periods are directed at the so-called "Greta Green" marriages which have aroused public opinion in various sections of the country according to the Council of State Governments.

Twenty-three states require either advance notice of intention to wed before a license will be issued or a waiting period between issuance of the license and the marriage.

Eighteen have pre-marital health test laws, eleven of these also having statutory waiting periods.

Longest waiting period is six days, in Rhode Island. Shortest is 24 hours, in Delaware.

States with 5-day waiting period—Connecticut, Georgia, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, New Hampshire, Ohio, Mississippi, Vermont, Wisconsin.

States with 3-day period—California, Illinois, New Jersey, Tennessee, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Washington, West Virginia. Maryland alone has a 2-day waiting period.

Several states subject non-residents to delays.

Pre-marital health test laws were enacted primarily as health measures, but they have also served to hinder hasty weddings.

Health test laws are in effect in Indiana, Pennsylvania, Virginia, Colorado, North Carolina, North and South Dakota, West Virginia, Connecticut, Illinois, Michigan, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Oregon, Rhode Island, Wisconsin. Tennessee and Kentucky have enacted such laws to go into effect in 1941.

Strength For The Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

KEEP IN PRACTICE

The reason why some people do not pray with any astounding results is because they don't pray often enough to keep themselves in practice. They are like the man who combed his hair only once a year and declared when he did so that if he hurt that much, he didn't see how people could stand to do it every day. What he needed, to take the anguish out of the process, was a little diligent application at regular and stated intervals.

Some people never pray until they get sick, or find themselves bogging down in trouble, or lose their job, or find themselves confronted with the possibility of not being able to get something they desperately want. Years have passed, and they have rolled into bed every night without the least realization that it would be only half-way decent of them if they thanked God for some of the day's blessings and committed themselves to His further care.

We cannot bring prayers to our lips when we confront crises unless we have accustomed ourselves to believe that God is in the world, standing ready at all times to help those who turn to Him. There is a technique in everything else worth doing, and it is just as silly to believe that we can pray effectively in the face of great crisis, regardless of the fact that we have had no practice, as it is to believe that we can play brilliantly a musical instrument which we have not touched for years.

(All Rights Reserved—Babson Newspaper Syndicate)

After its long delay while Congress wrangled over it, the conscription bill finally became law today with President Roosevelt's signature, and under provisions of the measure this country's manpower and its industrial resources can be called into the service of safeguarding our land. The final enactment of the conscription law meets with the approval of the great majority of the people of this nation for it is the democratic way to raise the necessary armed forces at this time. In an emergency every section of the country should furnish its share of men for our national defense and the conscription law provides that such a procedure shall be followed.

100,000 NICKELS
Joe Calcutt of Fayetteville, nationally known slot machine operator, now under indictment in Wake County Superior Court, is undoubtedly a smart showman. Perhaps he let his sense of showmanship get the best of him when he walked into court here and furnished the $5,000 bail demanded of him with a single bill. That action probably gave Calcutt considerable satisfaction, the kind of satisfaction that most of his customers get from handling a $5 bill. But, few if any of those customers have ever seen a $5,000 bill, to say nothing of handling or owning one. And that $5,000 did not come to Calcutt in one lump. It represents his share of the toll of his slot machines, a share over and above the huge costs connected with operating machines without, and barely within the law. Most of this tribute is paid in nickels. The one bill which Calcutt nonchalantly passed to the court clerk represents 100,000 of those nickels.

Save Us From Wall Street

The incident dramatized Calcutt. It also dramatizes the "suckers" who made it possible. By displaying his affluence in that manner, Calcutt may have contributed to his undoing. For those 100,000 nickels, which went, along with many more, into Joe Calcutt's slot machines would have bought 50,000 loaves of bread. And, in many cases, there was less bread because of the slot machines.—(News and Observer.)

Short Shots

Raleigh, Sept. 16.—During the Young Democrats' convention here last Thursday, Friday and Saturday, there was observable a definite, unmistakable trend toward complete submission to the desires of the powers-that-be, or rather in this case of the power-to-be, next Governor J. M. Broughton.

Not a decision was made on anything until Mr. Broughton or his representatives had been consulted and his okay been received. Nobody knew anything about anything until word had come down from the Broughton sanctum on what was to be done.

More than one old-timer who has watched North Carolina politics for years and years said that nothing like it has been seen since the very palmist days of the late Senator F. M. Simmons.

In 1924, Governor-to-be A. W. McLean had more than a modicum of influence on decisions of all Democratic groups; in 1928 the Anti-Pope for President campaign threw everything into a state approaching chaos; in 1932 some ears were kept to the ground to learn what then Candidate J. C. B. Ehringhaus wanted, but there were still others who remained independent of the winner's wishes; and in 1936 there were many McDonaldis completely unconverted to worship at the Hoy's shrine.

But this time the completeness with which all hands surrendered their own views, if they have any, to the party head was unique.

There are those who see this willingness to give up all power to anyone willing to take the initiative as a very real menace to our traditional democratic processes.

Those unfortunates who have gotten out of bed betimes in the morn-

MEMORY OF THE MOON

by Jeanne Bowman

YESTERDAY: Pedro tells Constance the only explanation he will accept is immediate marriage. He doesn't wait to hear the reasons for her refusal. The next day the milking suffers because the hands celebrated too well.

Chapter 27

'Old Sour Puss'

IT DEVELOPED that Lamson knew something of cows. He could "strip" them, and he could watch the milker in one barn. Constance could watch another and keep records for the three barns, watch the milk troughs and, by using Pancho, could see that the lone sober man on the ranch didn't fall asleep and let the cans overflow at the depot.

It was nine o'clock when Lamson, donning his coat and hat, saw Constance riding back to the barns. Lamson was in high feather. He had stripped. He had mixed feed. He had tossed hay. He had sung "coo bossy" to his heart's content.

Constance, disheveled, angry and distressed, found Pedro waiting with him.

"You're right in one thing," Pedro, conceded. "You can trust this man. He's worth a dozen Cabrillos."

Lamson smiled happily as Pedro rode off. "A fine young man, Conchita," he murmured. "About those keys, Julianio took them from your desk for Master Don. He took the liberty of telling Mister Taylor."

They rode quietly back to the ranch house. Constance was thinking. "This is a foretaste," she thought. "worth a dozen Cabrillos. She was a Cabrillo, but so was Donna."

The weird whistle of a work train in the hills of El Cabrillo echoed and re-echoed. She thought: "Saturday Donna will ride a train; ride through the ribbon barrier of El Cabrillo; Donna who cares nothing for El Cabrillo. Why? What's wrong with me?"

She arrived at the ranch to find Pedro already in his car.

"Hi, Connie, I'm on my way to Beachport, anything you want there?"

She shook her head. "No. But I want the keys to the wine cellar and I don't want them taken from my desk without my permission." And she told him what had occurred.

Don looked at her angrily. "Who in the devil owns this place?" he demanded. "The keys belong to mother and Donna and me as much as they do to you, remember that. And those men are as much under our direction as yours—"

"They are under the manager," Constance reminded him.

"We'll see," retorted Don. "I'm going to need those matins over the week end, so if you have any of the poor devils milking cows, find someone to take their places. I'm off to buy a station wagon and get some lights in this place."

"Don," Constance cried, "we can't afford lights and . . . and station wagons."

"You can't," Don corrected. "Old sour puss. And he was off."

Constance sought her mother. Mrs. Cabrillo was still in bed with a maribou jacket, fire in the hearth, and yellow sunshine streaming in through the windows, all warming and glorifying her.

"Chita, good morning," she greeted. "Dear, I believe I'm going to like it here."

Constance watched Juanita, Julianio's granddaughter, come in with a tray, watched her rap admiration of the señora and understood Nadine would have the adoration necessary to her existence.

"Now child, tell mother all about your farm. How are things progressing? Are you going to increase our income this year?"

Constance considered telling her the truth. That they could not expect to profit the first year. Nadine would not understand, simply because she wouldn't listen.

cardigan, she conceded that her mother was right. She had worked a great hardship on everyone from the Taylors, the Cabrillos, John, the employees, down to herself.

And for what?

"Señorita Conchita," Dolores rapped on the door, "the Señor John is waiting breakfast with you." John was waiting in the patio, a warm, sunny spot. John's greeting was as warm and cheering.

"Lamson told me you'd been too busy for breakfast," he explained, "so I waited."

He had waited. Would he never stop waiting?

Despite her depression she was hungry, and with food and hot coffee her spirits revived.

"I suppose you're wondering why I intruded," John observed, as he lit a cigarette after breakfast. "I felt you'd need someone here to handle things for you. The Taylors alone are enough for a little girl, but the Taylors and the family combined—"

Constance leaned back in her chair. "You still feel that the Taylors are enemies?"

John looked at her sharply. "Don't you?" he countered.

"I've had no reason to think so."

"I have," he said earnestly. "The old man practically told me last night, that he had stayed on because he thought you couldn't pull through and he'd buy in when you failed."

"The young fellow believes in taking an easier route. He couldn't get you, so now he's trying for Donna. He's taken her on a tour of the place already. They rode out a little while ago . . . that is," he qualified. "Donna rode out to meet him someplace, she didn't say where."

"Donna, up at this hour?" Constance wondered why her heart felt dead, a heavy burden in her breast.

John laughed. "And looking like something off a dude ranch poster—"

Dispute Over Pancho

"SEÑORITA!" The patio door opened and the stableboy stood there, Donna behind him. "Am I to saddle Pancho for these young lady?"

Constance didn't know the cause of her revolt. One thought flashed through her mind; one question, was Donna to take everything that belonged to her?

"You are to saddle Pancho for no one but me," she snapped; and to Donna, "Pancho is mine, and no other person on this ranch is going to ride him."

Donna flashed into the patio. "He's not yours. He's no more yours than mine or Don's or mother's. You don't own this place and you don't own anything on it, alone. I'll ride Pancho Julianio," she called to the major-domo who had appeared as though he'd been waiting for such a call. "I want Pancho saddled and this . . . this boy won't do it, will you?"

Juliano gave Constance one triumphant glance as he passed to follow Donna to the stables.

"It would seem," observed John whimsically, "that you own only one-fourth of Pancho."

Constance looked at him with unseeing eyes. In her mind was a marble shaft, flying Heaven, and at the base was cut the phrase:—"You win what you fight for."

"John, I must attend to some business; can you amuse yourself for an hour or so?"

She didn't wait for an answer. She ran through the patio gate and up the hill to come face to face with Pedro. Here was her chance to unburden her heart; her golden opportunity to explain. She looked at his expressionless face and the anger of the morning rolled into a barrier between them. She hated him.

"You can't," Pedro said, "I'll meet you at your rendezvous immediately," she informed him, bitterly.

Pedro stared at her a moment, then his face became radiant. He laughed at her. "Oh, so my devastating charm still works. Well, be seeing you." And he strode off towards his horse.

Constance arrived in Peter Taylor's office, blinded with anger. "I'm going to buy Pancho," she informed him.

Peter Taylor shook his head as though to clear his eyes of the shaggy brows which had luted forward at the young tornado.

"Thought you owned him," he observed.

"Only his tail," said Constance. "He's a Cabrillo possession, and I'm not a Cabrillo. I haven't even bought a shoe-lace out of that money I borrowed on my soul, and so help me . . . Pancho isn't going to be ridden to ribbons if I can help it. How much is he worth?"

Peter Taylor rumbled like an approaching storm. "You would have to choose the most valuable palmino on the ranch," he burst out. "Why must you buy him?"

"Because," Constance cried, "because . . . oh," her voice broke. "Damn it, I'm going to . . . to cry."

"Michael . . . now Michael," pleaded Taylor, getting up from his chair with difficulty. "I'm not in a singing mood this morning. Don't do that. Hell's bells, girl, I can't afford to buy the horse for you and I'd buy the whole outfit to stop that noise."

"I . . . I'm sorry," sniffled Constance.

"Here," Peter Taylor held out a large bandana. "Now blow."

"YOU may count on the usual income," she evaded. "And things were going very well, mother, until last night."

Carefully she explained what the dereliction of the employees meant. "Mother, you must insist upon letting Mr. Taylor keep those keys."

"Constance, must you take that tone? Here these dear people have looked forward to our return for years; it is only natural that they should want to celebrate."

Constance wondered what other response she had expected. She told then of her conversation with Don.

"Oh Chita," moaned Mrs. Cabrillo. "Don't you see we must keep Don contented? And we need lights. We can't have guests stumbling around in the dark. As for the station wagon, how else could we bring them from the airport?"

"Just remember, Constance, that if you had not been so stubbornly insistent upon keeping this ranch, this condition would not have arisen. You've worked a great hardship on everyone."

Constance went on to her room with that last phrase ringing in her ears:—"a great hardship on everyone."

Here is a little Broadway drama that doesn't exactly have the happy ending. An enterprising young man wrote to a manufacturing concern and advised them that he had obtained one of their sales films, a motion picture designed to pep up field operatives, and had put it into "one of my Broadway theaters." He said he could get several others in theaters on Broadway.

The firm was amazed and delighted. Imagine having a business film exhibited to thousands of people in Broadway theaters! They sent the extra copies of the film in a hurry.

Then one of the firm's representatives decided he had to go to New York and have a look at this wonderful set-up.

When he arrived he found that his films were in theaters all right—but not movie theaters. They had

Whitt Hurls Win For Last Game Of Finals Series

The 1940 season for the Coastal Plain league was completed Saturday night when Tarboro scored a 11-4 victory over the Kinston Eagles to walk off with the championship. Tarboro had entered the semi-finals after having won over Goldsboro in the Shaughnessy playoff. Kinston defeated Wilson in a closely contested semi-finals series with the Wilson Tobs.

The Wilson team had held the lead throughout practically the entire season, only to suffer the same fate as did Greenville last year.

The Tarboro team will leave tomorrow for Lynchburg, Va., where they will engage in a post-season series with that city's Virginia league champions.

DUKE'S DEVILS BUSY AT WORK

Opening Conference Game With VMI Sept. 28th

Durham, Sept. 16—Duke's Blue Devils were to start down the home stretch of their football training period today.

All that is to be done toward organizing the team must be done this week. Next week Coach Wallace Wade will have to busy himself with polishing the attack for that Southern Conference opener with V. M. I. in Duke stadium on the 28th.

Coached by Poole Hubert, quarterback of two of Wade's greatest teams at Alabama, and led by one of the nation's best backs in Abisha (Bosh) Pritchard, the Cadets loom as a grave threat to the "Boys in Blue" who are anxious to start defense of their two-year loop reign with a victory.

In the game at Lexington last year, V. M. I. pushed the Blue Devils around a bit before losing 20-7 and it was a thrilling game all the way chiefly due to the antics of that Pritchard fellow.

While Pritchard leads the backfield attack, he does not have to carry the load alone. Joe Muha, one of the south's best blockers, clears the road and Pritchard is assisted in the ball carrying by two other fine performers—Nelson Catlett and Son Shelby.

With no changes in the No. 1 combine that was selected when fall drills started, it is a right safe bet that Coach Wade will start that team against the Cadets here a week from Saturday.

That team has three 1939 regulars and eight subs from last season. Leonard Darnell and Alex Piasecky, 1939 subs, are the ends; Tony Ruffa and Captain Al Winterson, regulars last season, the tackles; John Nania and Charlie Jett, 1939 reserves, the guards; Bob Barnett, 1939 sub, center; Tommy Prothro, Jap Davis and Frank Killian, 1939 subs, and Wes McAfee, regular last season, the backs.

The Duke mentor has shifted the reserve team around freely evidently endeavoring to give as much experience as possible to as many of them as possible.

If You Get A Letter Like This, Watch Out!

AP Feature Service

San Francisco.—If you get a letter from an imprisoned Mexican banker, offering you a chance to make $100,000 or so in a few days' easy work—well, just skip it.

You are being lured into the historic "Spanish prisoner racket."

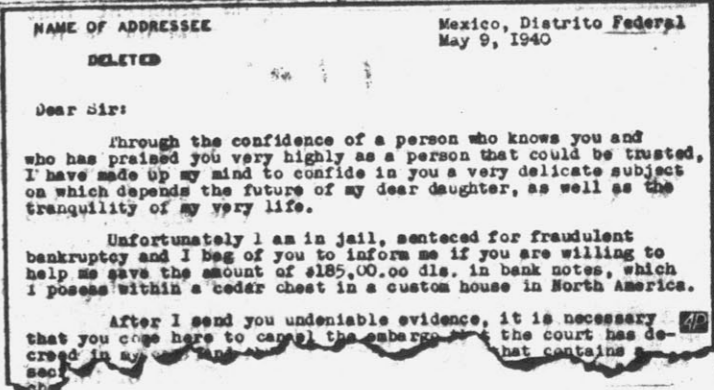

Only this year a San Francisco Clergyman flew to Mexico City and handed over $3,650.

Victor Eil Borden, president of a Mocklps, Wash., cannery, answered an identical appeal and was relieved of $3,750.

The scenario of the swindle is as follows:

A Mexican banker is imprisoned for fraudulent bankruptcy, but he has had time to convert his fortune into American bank notes, hide them in a trunk, and ship the trunk to Texas.

The baggage claim checks, together with a bank check payable to "bearer," are in his suitcase. But the suitcase has been impounded by

Dear Sir:

Through the confidence of a person who knows you and who has praised you very highly as a person that could be trusted, I have made up my mind to confide in you a very delicate subject on which depends the future of my dear daughter, as well as the tranquility of my very life.

Unfortunately I am in jail, sentenced for fraudulent bankruptcy and I beg of you to inform me if you are willing to help me save the amount of $185,000.00 dis. in bank notes, which I possess within a cedar chest in a custom house in North America.

After I send you undeniable evidence, it is necessary that you come here to cancel the embargo that the court has decreed in my case and to take possession of the chest that contains the Mexican court pending payment of a fine.

In a letter supposedly smuggled out of prison, the banker proposes that the American come to Mexico to pay the fine and thus obtain the valuable suitcase.

The fine is where the swindlers get you.

When the original letter gets a nibble, there is an elaborate follow-up, including a copy of the judge's sentence, all faked.

TODAY: Owen D. Young American Youth Com.
"We Must Face Realities"

"It is apparent that the American people feel it necessary for their protection to expand greatly the size of the armed forces, and that they desire this expansion to be carried out with all feasible speed. The only way in which this can be done quickly enough is through the adoption of some form of the selective service draft.

"The fundamental basis for any system of compulsory military service must be found in the doctrine of the reciprocal obligations of the citizen and the state. Among other responsibilities, the citizen has the obligation to serve in the common defense in time of need. This is an elementary duty of citizenship, older than civilization.

"The concern of the American Youth Commission is for youth, for it is youth who will bear most of the burden of selective compulsory military service, even though all feasible steps are taken to spread the burden.

"The Commission recommends strongly that the school systems throughout the country interest themselves more widely in the situation of unemployed out-of-school youth and take immediate steps to provide a program for them in cooperation with other youth-serving agencies.

"The number of youth awaiting their turn for absorption into private employment has not declined significantly in recent months. Possibly within two or three years the number will be considerably reduced, but in the meantime the problem will remain one of the utmost urgency. The existence of these unemployed and unoccupied youth is living evidence of the inadequacy of the resources now being placed back of our effort to achieve national preparedness.

"Under the circumstances, war is a hateful thing. At this stage in the world's history, the necessity we are under to raise a great army is nothing less than tragic. We must face the realities of our situation, but we must face all of the realities, including the very pressing question as to whether democracy is willing to be sincere about its own purposes to the extent of effectively carrying out the things for which democracy stands."

These figures represent, obviously, only a small percentage of the workers in North Carolina and they will be used by the current commission investigating a state wage-hour bill as indicating the necessity for a more comprehensive survey of the actual wage and hour conditions before any action is taken by the 1941 legislature.

This commission, of which Labor Commissioner Forrest Shuford is chairman and Capus Waynick of High Point is vice chairman, recently pointed out the need for a thorough survey and named "Red" Powell, Broughton publicist during the primary campaign, as director of such an undertaking.

Captain Worth Wicker, commanding officer of the unit, was kept busy throughout the morning giving instructions and otherwise getting the guardsmen settled to routine schedules.

Many of the Guardsmen are young recruits who answered the call for enlistments and have never had any military experience before. The men were put through preliminary drills this morning and will continue their training here until the time they leave for camp.

Captain Wicker said that this unit may be called on to supply more than its full strength of 127 and added that he was certain he would have no trouble in securing additional men.

Early said the signing of the historic legislation would take place in the White House cabinet room in the presence of Chairman Sheppard (D-Tex) and May (D-Ky) of the Senate and House military committees and of Secretary of War Stimson and of General George Marshall, army chief of staff.

Early said a movement had been started "throughout the country" to make registration day a national holiday, but "it has been definitely rejected by the President," he added, "because it would throw business and industry out of gear and men would be thrown out of work for the day."

Another announcement by Early was that Wythe Williams, radio commentator, had agreed to comply with a request of the President to organize a group of commentators into a weekly round table for the purpose of putting out "reports on national defense."

Early said Williams visited the White House Saturday and returned to New York to form the organization.

Old Fiddler's Song, 1940 Version Aurora, Colo.—(AP)—A. H. Kramer, a farmer, is proud of his farming ability but prouder still of his talent with musical instruments.

"I am," he says, "the first man on record who planted a tree watched it grow, saw it begin to die, cut it down and from the wood built a violin, which I'll enter in any contest of quality and tone."

The tree was planted years ago. Kramer's children, now grown, played in the shade of it.

He had no expert knowledge of violins, although he played that instrument and others.
