SAYS JAPAN TO AID AXIS IF U. S. ENTERS WAR Spain Expected To Enter War On Side Of Axis Powers

WOULD PERMIT RAID ON ROCK

Inclusion Of Japan In Axis Program Also Appears To Be In Offing, Providing A Four-To-One Combination Against Lone Britain

By The Associated Press
Events shaped rapidly today toward the entry of Spain into the war on the side of the Rome-Berlin axis—apparently to permit an attack on Britain's great Rock of Gibraltar by German troops passing through Spain.

Berlin reported that inclusion of Japan in the globe-circling axis program also appeared to be in the offing—as a counter to possible closer British-American collaboration—making a four to one combination against Britain's lone stand.

The Fascist press spoke openly of Spain's present role of "pre-belligerency" as Italy's Foreign Minister Count Ciano left for Berlin to conclude diplomatic negotiations bearing on the reported "collaboration of Spain and the axis powers."

Other developments in the international picture:
1. A dispatch from Indo-China said 2,000 Japanese troops landed at Haiphong this morning without firing a shot and without meeting French resistance after three Japanese planes had bombed a railway crossing, killing and wounding 15 natives.

Great Britain, smarting under the withdrawal from Dakar after a three-day naval siege of the French West Africa capital, sent her bombers against Berlin in the longest raid of the war on the German capital.

Authorized French quarters in Vichy said heavy damage inflicted on the British naval squadron at Dakar made it impossible for the British to continue the attack without reinforcement from fleet units needed elsewhere. The French Admiralty reported three British warships were hit at Dakar—the 29,150-ton battleship Barham and the 10,000-ton heavy cruiser Kent.

After a dramatic fight on the convention floor, the more than 1,400 delegates roared out a voice against an amendment to the Legion's foreign relations resolutions which read:

Accuse U. S. Of Opposing Nippon Aims In The East

Qualified Spokesman Asserts That Japan Is Convinced This Country Unalterably Opposed To Legitimate Japanese Expansion In The Orient

Tokyo, Sept. 26.—(AP)—A qualified informant said today it is expected Japan would actively support Germany if the United States should enter the European war.

He said the Japanese government finally is convinced that the United States is unalterably opposed to Japan's "legitimate expansion in the Orient."

"This source said that 'strengthening of the anti-comintern pact of Germany, Italy and Japan had become one of the main objectives of Japanese diplomacy in the past year. Meanwhile he indicated, a non-aggression pact with Russia is not unlikely."

"Japan is and always will be opposed to Communism," but this does not mean that a working arrangement with the Russians can not be effected.

"Japan has consistently sought only peaceful economic penetration of the Far East," said this informant, returning to the question of the United States.

"Our sphere of action lies here and we prefer not to send troops and warships to the various corners of the Far East to guarantee that penetration."

However, the United States has consistently attempted to block Japan. Even during times when the British offered conciliation, American policy increased in strength."

These sources said that last year when a Japanese-German military alliance was under discussion an influential group of Japanese still hoped to reach an agreement with the United States, but now there seems to be no further hope in that direction.

Investigate Clues In Woman's Death

Horsham, Penn., Sept. 26.—(AP) Police tracked down meagre clues today in the brutal club slaying of Mrs. Ethel M. Atkins, 35-year-old wife of a Philadelphia bricklayer, and once married to John Cleo Angier, member of the wealthy Duke family.

Angier, nephew of Mrs. B. N. Duke, whose late husband help found the family's tobacco fortune, conferred for more than two hours with Montgomery county District Attorney Frederick B. Smilie. The district attorney's office said he agreed to remain available in Baltimore to supply additional information.

The body of the former Ethel Craft was found in an unoccupied farm house near here. Her head had been beaten, apparently with a blood-stained club found on the floor.

Authorities disclosed that they were seeking for questioning Philadelphia man whose name they did not divulge.

FALSE TEETH

HOW TO HOLD MORE FIRMLY IN PLACE.

Do your false teeth annoy and embarrass by slipping, dropping or wobbling when you eat, laugh or talk? Just sprinkle a little FAS-TEETH on your plates. This alkaline (non-acid) powder holds false teeth more firmly and more comfortably. No gummy, gooey, pasty taste or feeling. Does not sour. Checks "plate odor" (denture breath). Get FAS-TEETH today at any drug store. (Adv.)

Eggs preserved in water glass should be rinsed with cold water before they are used. Never wash eggs before storing them in the refrigerator. Wipe them gently. Eggs have a protective film on the shells which retards evaporation and helps prevent the entrance of odors and bacteria. The film should not be broken.

WILSON'S Weekly MEMO by GEORGE RECTOR

One writer has declared that the meanest woman in the world is the one who gives her neighbor a pet recipe without an essential ingredient left out. I cannot believe this is a common feminine practice. Good recipes should be common coinage, passing freely from hand to hand, or should I say hand to mouth?

You are welcome to any recipes I have, but to be fair to you I must insist that Wilson's Certified Meat Products should be used where they are indicated, because they are what I use in creating these recipes and I cannot guarantee the same pleasing results otherwise.

IT'S TIME FOR SAUSAGES!

The family will be looking for you to serve Wilson's Certified Pure Pork Sausage Links any day now. For your convenience, this delicious, all-pork sausage meat, superbly seasoned, comes in three different kinds of links:

1. Dainty, succulent little links averaging 1 1/2 to 2 to the pound. Come packed in 1-lb. cellophane wrapped packages.
2. Large plump links running 3-7 to the pound. Look for the familiar little yellow "Wilson's Certified Quality" tag placed at intervals between links.
3. Country Style Sausage—the same good sausage meat stuffed in a large continuous casing, averaging about 2 feet to the pound. Use it in any convenient amount and use exactly as you would individual links.

HE LOVES ME . . . HE LOVES ME NOT

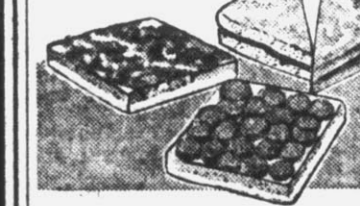

You won't need to tell off the petals of this daisy dish to know he loves you. It is enough to win any man's deepest affections.

Cook plenty of Wilson's Certified Link Sausages, small or large, and arrange on top of a heaping mound of whipped potatoes. Place a generous piece of Clear Brook Butter in the center to complete the picture.

A good way to cook Sausage Links

Arrange links in a cold skillet. Pour over them 3/4 cup of water, cover and let simmer for 5 minutes. Drain, and cook uncovered, over low flame, turning frequently. If you like them brown and crisp, drain off fat as it accumulates. (Save the fat; it has many uses.)

EVER EAT 'EM COLD?

In cooking sausages to serve with scrambled eggs, waffles, sauerkraut or just by their own satisfactory selves, fry all you have on hand. Any that is left over makes an irresistible cold snack later on. Or, sliced thin, cold fried sausages make a perfect filling for lunch-box sandwiches. One side of the bread may be lightly spread with apple sauce or apple butter.

Hope To Make Morehead One Of Principal Ports

By HENRY AVERILL

Raleigh, Sept. 25.—The proposed lease of Morehead City terminals by the Hinkins interests of Baltimore is nothing more than incidental to a concerted drive to make the Carteret port one of the busiest on the Atlantic coast.

The main effort is being made on the governmental front in Washington, with establishment of huge cotton and tobacco warehouses at Morehead City as one of the objectives and turning the port into an entry point for material essential to national defense another.

Back of the drive is Congressman Graham Barden of the Third district, with the close cooperation and assistance of three other House members—Lon Folger of the Fifth, R. L. Doughton of the Ninth and J. Bayard Clark of the Seventh.

It is felt that the influence of Folger, Democratic national committeeman from North Carolina, and Doughton, right-hand man of the administration and chairman of the Ways and Means committee, will be particularly helpful in putting over the program which its sponsors envision as transforming Morehead into a bustling port.

Where the Hinkins lease comes in is in the fact that government agencies will likely be far more sympathetic toward the general program if it is certain that Morehead will be served by a regular steamer line with solid financial support. This sort of support would be provided should the Baltimore interests succeed in forming a new corporation to take over the Morehead terminal.

minals under a twenty-four year lease.

The two-pronged drive in Washington is being directed at the Department of Agriculture and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

The Department is being urged to make Morehead the center for storage of cotton and tobacco the purchase of which has been financed by the government. At present huge quantities of North and South Carolina cotton upon which the federal government has loaned money, are being stored in warehouses at Galveston and other points along the southeastern Atlantic coast and the Gulf. It is argued that transportation costs would be much less if the cotton were stored at Morehead and that it would be much more conveniently located for eventual shipment to textile plants most of which are in North Carolina.

Proponents of the warehouse plans point out that there is absolutely no logic in shipping the tobacco away from where it is raised. They contend that when the government has financed the purchase of tobacco for, say, the British Imperial company, the soundest thing to do is to store it in warehouses located near the growing place—this pointing straight at Morehead.

Then the tobacco would be kept there until the Imperial got ready to export it, when the next logical step would be to load it at Morehead, thus giving the port more business.

In the matter of ports of entry for essential raw material for national defense, the R. F. C. has the power of selection of ports—though nobody seems to know just why it should be vested in that agency. A former U. S. Senator Henderson is in charge and it is at him the Tar Heel Congressmen are directing their efforts to have Morehead used.

It is pointed out that raw material—copper, tin, rubber, etc.—when brought in for use by industry should not be concentrated at any one port, or even in a few; but should be spread out over the entire coast, thus minimizing the chances of successful destruction of the material by enemy air attack or bombardment.

Congressional advocates of the plans realize that they are up against a tough proposition. Time after time intensive efforts have been made to build up business at Morehead and just as many times they have bogged down badly after rosy initial prospects.

They feel that this time the right combination may have been found and there is a large degree of optimism in their view of the chances.

To begin with, it seems practically certain that plans for the Hinkins lease of the terminal facilities will go through. The proposed lease must, of course, be approved by creditors of the port terminal set-up and of the once state-owned Atlantic and East Carolina railroad, now operated by private interests headed by H. P. Edwards of New Bern and Ed Buchan of Kinston.

Strength For The Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

THE BIGGEST WHY IN LIFE

The question which people most often ask a minister is this: "Why has God taken away this loved one of mine, this fine husband, this mother so needed by her children, this promising child, and has left a lot of perfectly worthless people who do neither themselves nor the world any good?" Or, as one plain speaking chap put it to me one day, "Why does God so often take the saints and leave the rummies?"

To which it seems that the only sensible answer is that God wants to give the rummies a further chance. There are many people who finish a well-rounded life long before old age. This does not mean that viewed from our standpoint their work is finished, but that in a comparatively few short years they have learned how to live and so are ready for eternal life. Some people learn this before they reach their tenth year, some in later life, some never. Life is a proving ground.
We are here to get ready to live forever. The disciplines of life tutor us in these matters.

Such an explanation, of course does not cover all cases. Death is frequently an inexplicable mystery.
Human reason cannot explain all of God's acts. But a grief-stricken heart would be soothed if people would just remember that life is a season of training, and that when the training is over, God calls his children home.

IT'S FOR OUR OWN PROTECTION

We feel that the American Legion at its national convention in Boston yesterday was absolutely right when it adopted resolutions urging this nation to give all practical aid to Great Britain at this time and to establish a permanent plan of compulsory military training in this nation.

With regard to the first recommendation, all of us are becoming to realize more and more that Great Britain is our first line of defense, and that without a strong Britain and the British navy America would be more subject to attack. In addition to this, there is also the fact that Britain and America are the last strongholds of a democratic civilization and the fall of Britain would leave America against the world in its form and ideals of government.

Regarding the permanent plan of compulsory military training, distasteful as it might seem to Americans, we might as well admit that for many years to come we must stand ready at all times to defend ourselves and the principles upon which our government is founded, and one of the best ways to avoid actual conflict in this defense is to be so strong at all times that no nation would dare attack us.

We believe the great majority of the country will agree with these recommendations now made by the men who helped to fight the first World War a little more than a score of years ago.

Washington—(AP)— Preparedness Note: Rep. Stephen Pace comes from the peach country down in Georgia.
His home is that city bearing probably the most patriotic of all names, Americus, but his principal interest at the moment is nothing less than peanut butter.

The other day Mr. Pace took himself into the holy sanctums of the Army and there made an impassioned plea for consideration of the defense of the nation.
Peanut butter, said Mr. Pace, is a wonderful food and would contribute to the health and energy of our armed forces. He explained that the estimated peanut crop for 1940 amounts to 760,000 tons, of which at least 100,000 tons is surplus and not even good for grinding into a bread-spread. If the army, he said, should put peanut butter on the bill of fare, not only would be boys be pepped up with good old goober energy, but the peanut industry could write off its troubles.

P. S. The army has the peanut butter suggestion "under consideration."

Addition And Subtraction Gastronomy note: A friend who is a little finicky about his food found himself lunching the other day at the House restaurant. Scanning the menu, he came upon the item
"Welsh rarebit with poached egg" and in the right-hand column,
"40c."

Being somewhat fond of rarebit,
but not addicted to poached eggs, he called the waiter and gave his order:
"One Welsh rarebit, but I don't want the poached egg."

The dish was brought him and even now he has no complaint about its flavor and edibility. What he still is puzzling over is that when he picked up the check, it read:
1 Welsh rarebit 40
Without poached egg 5c
Total 45c

Grin Or Foolish?
Defense Note: Mr. Thomas (senator from Oklahoma)— Mr. President (of the Senate) I ask unanimous consent to submit a simple Senate resolution. I ask that the resolution be printed in the Record and then be printed and he upon the table."

London Bridgework

Thomas's resolution is simply that we should get busy in constructing air raid shelters in all those cities that are not out of bounds for any possible enemy.

So strongly does the Senator feel about this that he has sent telegrams to all the mayors of "all the largest cities on the seaboard." And the telegrams want to know if the mayors have taken proper steps or made necessary surveys leading to the possibility of locating air raid shelters in their cities.

If you haven't received your air raid shelter assignment, call your mayor. I happen to know that New York and Washington already have their surveys under way.

Either this item is pretty grim or pretty foolish. Don't ask me. All I know is what I see and hear in Washington, D. C.

Short Shots

Raleigh, Sept. 26.—To a North Carolina legislator being a member of any given committee in the last Assembly is about as valuable as a last year's bird-nest; but it is interesting, at least, to recall those repeaters for 1941 who were on the Congressional and Senatorial district committees in 1939.

Returning to the House will be Claude C. Abernethy of Nash, Jeter
Burleson (Republican) of Mitchell,
John Kerr, Jr., of Warren, C. E.
Quinn of Duplin, and Dr. Zeno Edwards of Beaufort, all of whom were on the 1939 Congressional District
committee.

Back in the House, from those who were on the last legislature's Senatorial District committee, will be Chairman R. H. Underwood of Hertford, Rupert Pickens of Guilford, W. E. Fenner of Nash, J. B.
LeGrand of New Hanover, Clarence Stone of Rockingham, and Mr. Kerr who was also on the Congressional committee.

To the Senate there will return those members of the 1939 Congressional district committee: Chairman Willie Lee Lumpkin of Franklin, D.
Brad Fearing of Dare and J. Hampton Price of Rockingham.

Back from the Senatorial district group will be W. G. Clark of Edgecombe, Price, and E. C. Gregory of Rowan.

The fact that these men served before is no sign they will serve again, as the North Carolina legislature has no seniority rules like the U. S. Congress. The point is that the assignments last time were entirely unimportant and were handed out more or less in order to give the appointees some recognition without hurting anything. This time the posts will likely be sought eagerly.
It remains to be seen how many of the 1939 committeemen will repeat.

Of course, the importance of the Congressional and Senatorial district committees lies in the fact that this is a census year, with the result that the next Assembly will face the Constitutional mandate to reapportion representation in the General Assembly, while North Carolina has shown growth enough to make it almost certain there'll be a twelfth Tar Heel in the Federal House beginning with the 1942 session.

Whatever is done in the matter of forming a new Congressional district it seems that the present Tenth will be the most radically changed.

All those who profess to be in the know say that Mecklenburg and Gaston will be put into different districts, no matter what other bit of reshuffling is done.

This will give Charlotte and Mecklenburg a chance at a seat in Congress which Gaston's Major A. L.
Bulwinkle has pre-empted for so long.

Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians will give a repeat performance on their North Carolina State College song of 1939—on the seven o'clock broadcast of Pleasure Time of Friday, October 4.

The State Pack will be in Charlotte at the time, waiting to engage Clemson's Tigers the next day. Wade Ison, State publicity director, is planning a big rally of the alumni of the Charlotte section to listen in,
as a group.

Asked about Mississippi State, which will play the Wolfpack here late this season, Ison said: "I only know one thing about them, they'll turn up with a great team this year —everybody we schedule always does."

Theodore Roosevelt was the youngest president when he was inaugurated at the age of 42.

MEMORY OF THE MOON

Chapter 38
To The Victor
DON bent to kiss Constance, patting her hand. "Forget everything; I'm in the saddle now." Donna whisked in gaily. "My word, how you do steal the limelight," she prattled. "Here I spent days and nights being a traitor to my family to try to forewarn Pedro what was going on so he'd save the ranch, and then, just as I was ready for the big denouement, you jump off the deep end."

There was silence for a moment. Constance waited for the next news. Then Donna sidled nearer the bed.
"Connie, will you be my maid-of-honor?"
"No!" The word came out forcefully. This was too much.
"Not that I don't think Pedro will make an ideal brother-in-law," she hastened to say.
"Pedro! Good gracious, Con. that tall, dark and handsome wouldn't have me as a gift. I'm marrying Jack Dea. You know, Santa Barbara and way-points.
We're going to the Islands—"

"But you and Pedro," began Constance.
"Listen, sweet, all I ever had out of Pedro's company was a course of curtain lectures. He was the one who made me see what a nit-wit I was around you. He made me appreciate you. He likes girls like you, girls with a purpose, like that red-headed Irene something or other."

Constance scarcely heard Donna's chatter until she said, "and I think Nadine and the Major are that way."
So she had lost to the red-head.
Constance thought. She had been so concerned with the thoughts of her head that she hadn't listened to her heart. Not that it mattered; she was just fifty thousand dollars behind marrying anyone herself.

"Nurse," Constance awakened from a late nap, "I'm leaving tomorrow. I can't go. I can't go. I don't want anyone to know."
"Well," said the nurse, "if you can pass that man who's waited downstairs every day—"
"What man?" hope flared up.
"John Raskthorne," said the nurse, reading it from a card.

Hope died down. By dint of bribery, Constance left the hospital in the freight elevator. A hired car and driver waited at the ambulance entrance. Constance was glad she didn't have to steer the car past that memorable spot.
El Cabrillo was quiet when she reached there. Then she spied Juliano in sack-cloth, his hair dusted in ashes, Juliano the dramatic, who came to her on his knees.

"It's all right," Constance assured him. "We just didn't understand each other. I'm going away.
Juliano, you can repay me by showing Don and Pedro how El Cabrillo men can make this ranch the best of its kind."

"My Wife"
PANCHO was in his eleven-acre lot, heeled. He came to her with a whinny of greeting. He pranced around when she was in the saddle, then headed for the hills, and she let him take his own way.
She was saying goodbye to El Cabrillo. She wanted to be alone.
Fog was coming in from the west. As she rode up the ridge to the boulder peak, she could see it tumbling in beneath her in silver waves. Perhaps she should turn back, but Maria had assured her, nearly a year ago, that horses traveled by sense.

She patted Pancho and he lifted his head, bared his teeth and trumpeted.
An answering trumpet came from the timberline and a horseman rode out.
Constance watched him, seated so surely, riding so easily, this same requiero who had ridden out at another fog. And she was stirred a thousand-fold more than she had been stirred that other time.

"Señorita," he smiled at her; a conquering, proud smile, dark eyes challenging. "You are lost?"
"I have lost, Pedro," she corrected, smiling as she thrust her hand at him. "Congratulations.
To the victor goes El Cabrillo." Pedro swung off his horse and sent him grazing, then extended his hand to Constance and she stepped down.

They were face to face and Pedro was smiling at her in his old, teasing way.
"You're wrong. I'm just a hired hand on this ranch."
Constance felt the world sway under her. Could Pedro be swinging his help to the red-headed Irene?
"You're not buying in? Why, Pedro, why?"
"My wife needs the money."
This, thought Constance, is defeat.
"You see," he was explaining carefully, "I fell in love with a shrewd young woman. She bargained with love. She didn't know anything about love. You can't bargain with it, because it has to be paid in like kind.
"Well, I can repay her love with mine, consequently I don't need the money and she does."
Constance swallowed, wondering why her throat could be so dry when this wet fog was rolling in, enveloping them.
"I hope you will both be very happy," she offered formally.
"Oh, we're going to be," Pedro assured her. "Dad's retiring and my wife's brother and I am going to run the place. He's a fine kid.
Never had a chance. No discipline, no man to keep his excitability in the right stream. Yes, sir, Don Cabrillo's one of the nicest—"
"Pedro—"
"Yes, Michael?"
"Now will you let me tell you what I've been trying to tell you for months?"
"Now you don't have to," he laughed. "If you can imagine, Don, looking as he does, in the role of cupid—"

Not A Dream
SHE was in his arms. She wasn't dreaming it. And if she were she hoped she'd never awaken.
She did. She pushed Pedro away. "I can't let you do it," she protested. "El Cabrillo has meant too much to you. You need to own part of it."
"I will be owning a half of one-fourth," he assured her. "Community property law in this state gives me that. When I marry you. Besides, didn't Raskthorne tell you, as he told me, that I was trying to marry the ranch?"
"But—"
"There's that argumentative but again. Listen, dear, we're doing old John out of enough, you and I. Let him have the satisfaction of thinking he was right."
"Even if it does cost you fifty thousand?" she asked, and laughed. "I do come high."
"And worth every fraction of a cent to me, Michael."
Constance knew this as surely as she knew she would sacrifice more than that for Pedro. She lifted her face from his arms and the fog curled her hair in wet tendrils, curled the dark lashes back from narrowed eyes and she looked at him with a warning. "Now, Michael Mahoney," he warned, "you can't bargain with me. No time. Let's get John paid off so we can be married right away; I've waited long enough."
"Constance reached up and turned his head to one side so that she could see the rugged profile. "Imagine bargaining with a ruthless one like you," she chided.
"No, I was just thinking, and it's queer Pedro. I've never taken an unearned cent without paying interest. I thought I never could But I don't mind accepting this money from you, why?"
Pedro smiled his teasing smile
"It couldn't be that you loved me, could it? Love neither gives for gain nor accepts for burden. I've learned all this in the past year," he added with mock modesty.
"Now let's go down to Dad. He was pulling for you to fail while he helped you win, because he thought you needed relief from your family. He was going to buy the place and then give it to us as a wedding present. He seemed to know, ever since your first visit, that you'd marry me some time."
"And you didn't?"
Pedro's past doubts were encompassed in two words: "Oh, Michael," as he gathered her back into his arms.
So they delayed their trip to the ranch until the fog found them into a silver cocoon, and Pancho and Midnight, indignantly forced to ride side by side, sensed their way home.

Announcing the big

NEW FORD 1941 FORD

In some years, some cars take a big jump ahead. The Ford does that for 1941.

It has jumped ahead in size. It's the biggest Ford we've ever built, inside and out. It's wider. It has a longer wheelbase. Its seating room is wider by as much as 7 inches. It has new wide doors and semi-concealed running boards.

You'll notice also a new beauty, achieved by a skilful blending of mass with longer flowing lines. Larger wind-shield and windows give better vision all around.

One of its biggest advantages is the new soft ride.

New, slower-action springs give a slow, gentle, gliding movement. A newly designed stabilizer helps absorb road shocks, and maintains balance on sharp curves and in cross winds.

More rapid acceleration to match its familiar speed and power makes this new Ford an even livelier car to drive.

These are only a few of this new car's outstanding features. It represents all the rich experience gained in building more than 28 million motor cars.

Any Ford dealer can give you many good reasons for making this your 1941 car.

DISAGREED ON SPUD WASHING

Growers Divided On Benefits Derived From Process

Reflector Bureau.
By HENRY AVERILL.
Raleigh, Sept. 26.—North Carolina Irish potato growers seem to differ considerably as to the value of washing and drying their spuds before putting them on the market.

This variance of opinion is recorded by Buxton White, fruit and vegetable marketing specialist of the State Department of Agriculture, in a summary showing that a total of 194,811 bags and 23,906 bushel tubs of potatoes were washed and dried during the season. This is the equivalent of about 825 carloads.

White reported the largest single operation as involving 31,351 bags.

Sixteen shippers were polled on their reaction to washing and drying and were asked whether they will continue the practice next season. Nine replied that they will, four that they will not and three were still undecided.

Figuring the additional cost for washing and drying, above that of unwashed potatoes, White had reports ranging from a minimum of two cents per bag to a maximum of twelve cents, averaging about 8 1/2 cents, with a majority stating ten cents per hundred pounds.

The average premium for washed potatoes, over the price for unwashed, was figured from zero to fifteen cents per bag, with one grower answering from fifteen to 35 cents per hundred. One stated that washed potatoes brought a higher premium at the higher price level (ten cents at $1.25 and up) and less advantage at lower prices (five cents at $1.00 and down).

There was considerable uncertainty as to whether the washing and drying helped or hindered arrival condition of potatoes. Generally when adequately dried, it was the opinion that carriage was equally as good on washed potatoes with a few claiming improvement.

The demand for washed potatoes was expressed in a wide range of terms. "Had no calls for washed. Very poor. Limited. Fair. Fair to good. Good early, poor late. Better at $1.25 and up. Good. Excess of supply." This, according to White shows the division of opinion.

The principal advantage obtained from washing was given as ability to pack a better grade of attractive, clean potatoes which met a more ready sales demand on appearance. This advantage was greatest with dark, dirty potatoes.

A number of disadvantages were listed, especially when the driers were inadequate. When properly dried, the principal objection was high cost or lack of sufficient premium. Some objected to the heavier discard from more visible blemishes, and one, the slowing up of the movement.

The report of Mr. White was based on installation of equipment for the washing and drying at sixteen locations in North Carolina during the 1940 shipping season. Two of these were located at each of the following points: Bethel, Elizabeth City, Columbia and Bayboro; and one each at Pantego, Wilkinston, Belhaven, Washington, Aurora, Royal, Alliance and Stonewall.

Most of these installations were made on a rental basis, based on the volume put through. All types employed, of which two were home constructed, seemed to accomplish their purpose acceptably. The driers were still in the experimental stage and lacked perfection.

Most of the machines were intended to run about a 300 bag car per hour. However, reports indicate a volume capacity per hour of from 100 to 300 bags with 200 to 250 bags per hour being the most common experience.

Survey Seeks Source Of Improper Ginning

Raleigh, Sept. 26.—J. C. Ferguson, extension cotton gin specialist of N. C. State College, has instituted a survey through cotton buyers to determine the source of the high percentage of roughly ginned, low grade cotton sold in the state last year. He hopes to correct this situation through educational work with ginners and growers.

In writing to the cotton merchants, Ferguson said: "More than 13 per cent of our cotton was ginned damaged, and the average grade was only slightly better than strict low-middling for the 1939 season. This is an enormous loss to farmers as a result of careless methods employed in harvesting, handling and ginning and we are anxious to help correct this situation.

"We are interested in determining where educational work is needed most, and our only interest is to the extent that we may be of service in improving the quality and value of the North Carolina cotton crop through educational methods."

Butte, Mont.—(AP)—Instructions to Butte policemen to "dampen" all disturbing noises in public places after midnight came in a department order which said: "Music is OK just as long as it doesn't become noise." "We ain't music critics," said another. "I'll let the judge decide."

BIG FIVE 11'S TO TAKE FIELD

College Grid Card Offers Plenty To Choose From

Chapel Hill, Sept. 26.—Wake Forest's seniors, juniors, and sophomores all played on teams that beat Carolina as freshmen but never as varsity men, and the Demon Deacs are expected to shoot the works here Saturday in a determined bid to catch up with the law of averages.

Many non-partisan observers are giving them an even or better chance, too. But the stolid Tar Heels, who have never seen any "law of averages," are ready to contest the point despite the long list of injuries and question marks hanging over their line. And the result promises one of the hottest grid debates and biggest crowds the state will see this fall.

Carolina won last year's battle but Wake Forest showed greater power in later games, gave Duke the closer battle, and led the nation in rushing. The Deacons also looked more impressive in the air as well as on the ground, in their 79-0 opener with William Jewell than did Carolina in its 56-6 win over Appalachian. The arch-rivals stacked up about even in veterans and back-field weight, but the Deacs have an edge in the line, 197 to 191.

Durham, Sept. 26.—It would be a right safe bet to wager that, if Duke can score a touchdown against V. M. I. in their opener in Duke stadium Saturday, that touchdown will count seven points.

For "True Toe Tony" Ruffa, the placekicking tackle of the Blue Devils, has missed precious few as he has drilled daily this fall with his magic toe.

Tony's placekicking record is not a sensational one. It is true that late in 1938 and early in 1939, he had a string of 13 straight which was stopped when he missed one in the Pitt game which Duke lost, 11-13.

In 1938, Ruffa booted eight extra points in 10 attempts and that was a year when Duke was forced to "play 'em close" and those extra points counted. But his chief claim to fame that season was the 23-yard field goal he booted against Southern California in the Rose Bowl which gave Duke a 3-0 lead that held until the Trojans' winning touchdown in the final 40 seconds of the game.

Last year Ruffa booted eight extra points in 13 tries and made one field goal in two efforts. That gives him a scoring total of 22 points in two years of play although he has yet to score a touchdown.

Raleigh, Sept. 26.—The same sort of free-scoring, nip-and-tuck battle that North Carolina State and Davidson fought last year in that sensational 18-14 game in Greensboro is expected to be staged here in Riddick stadium at 8 o'clock Saturday night, when the two Southern conference teams clash.

Both surprised followers with triumphs by substantial margins the past week-end, Davidson bowling over Rollins College, coached by the one-time N. C. Stater, Jack McDowell, by 19-7 and State upsetting William and Mary 16-0 to make one of the most talked-about early season contests in years.

Ticket sales reports Business Manager John VonGish of State spurted early this week and preparations are being made to take care of a capacity crowd. Many fans will come here from afternoon games at nearby Chapel Hill and Wake Forest and Duke and V. M. I. battle.

Second Ballot Returns

Bill Turner and Betsy Hobgood defeated J. Hicks Corey and Jack Edwards for treasurer and vice president respectively.

In the vote last Friday J. Hicks and Betsy received more votes than Bill and Jack but they didn't get a majority of the votes cast, so a second ballot was necessary.

During the few days before the second ballot, Bill got the junior high students who had previously backed Howard Williams to support him in his campaign, and was able to carry a majority of the votes.

FAIR TO HAVE STUDENT DAYS

Tuesday And Friday Set Aside For NC Children

Reflector Bureau. By HENRY AVERILL

Raleigh, Sept. 26—Some people may see the North Carolina State Fair, to be held here October 8 to 12, as a mixture of hot dogs, sideshow ballyhoo and bingo, with a few ears of corn added for decorative purposes. But Dr. Clyde A. Erwin, State Superintendent of Public Instruction calls it "an outstanding educational institution and one which ought to be attended by the school children of the state to the fullest extent possible."

Wherefore, Dr. Erwin hopes that the greater part of 900,000 free tickets will be used up by the kids from Mantoo to Murphy.

Friday, October 11, has been designated as the children's day and tickets for them have been mailed to all county and city school superintendents. Official title of "Young North Carolinians' Day" has been given to Friday.

To keep the fair grounds from being literally overrun with children, Tuesday has been set aside as Wake County school day and the youth of Raleigh and its surrounding county will be admitted gratis on that day rather than along with the visiting kids. "I know of no place in which the resources of our State are exhibited so completely or to such great advantage," said Dr. Erwin. "I am sure that any child attending the State Fair will go away with a finer spirit of state patriotism and with a better appreciation of the magnificent resources and possibilities of North Carolina."

All this may be true, but it's a safe bet that the youngsters will take even fuller advantage of the ample entertainment features on the fair grounds, including the World of Mirth Shows on the midway. These shows will have 42 rides and shows, in all. Then, too, there will be outstanding grandstand acts, fireworks, harness, auto and motorcycle races.

Conoco Bus Visits This City

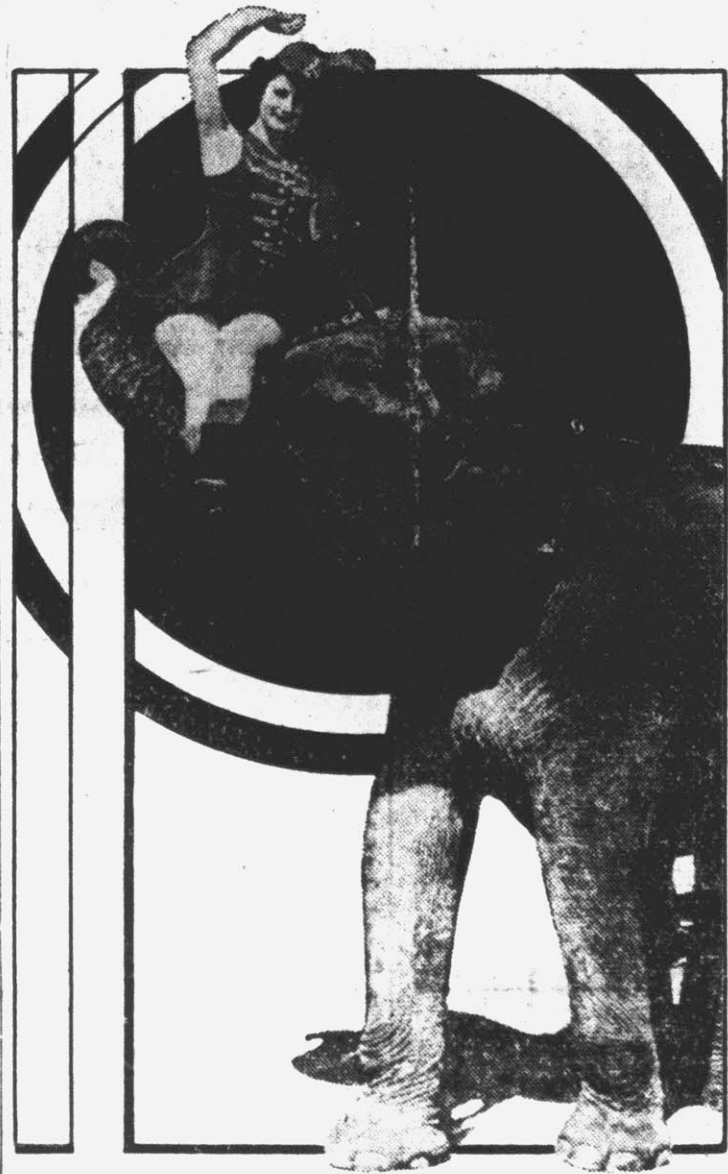

A streamlined history of petroleum, from its discovery in the oil fields to delivery of the refined product to the consumer, is pictured in the mechanical and photographic exhibits in Continental Oil Company's giant display bus which arrived in Greenville today.

The interior of the bus is decorated with photomurals which trace the progress of oil from the drilling well through the pipe line to the refinery, where it undergoes elaborate processes of refining and purification as it is separated into its many forms for use as fuel, lubricants, and the hundreds of other uses to which petroleum products are put.

Installed in this huge motor coach, one of the largest and most up-to-date buses ever seen in Greenville, are diverting devices showing the film strength and oil-plating properties of Germ Processing oil, animated maps illustrating the unusual features of the Conoco Tourade, and many other interesting displays.

The vehicle is powered by a 210 horse power engine set under the floor and has two other engines, one for electric power and the other to run the refrigeration plant.

Elephantine Artists Coming Circus Day

Pictures is Miss Flo Hartzell with Judy, one of the ponderous elephants who will appear in Wallace Brothers Circus in Greenville on Monday, September 30 at the Old Fair Grounds.

Elephants are ever the most loved creatures of youngsters and oldsters; that will again be proven when the Wallace Brothers Circus once again visits Greenville for two performances on Monday, September 30.

The doors will open precisely at 1 and 7 p. m., and the exhibitions starting at 2 and 8 p. m., rain or shine, beneath the huge spread of water-proof tents.

One full hour will be given the early visitors to inspect the mammoth horse fair and zoological arena which also houses three herds of huge tuskers and ponderous elephantine artists who will take part in the magnificent circus performance.

Of course everyone delights in seeing the elephants eat peanuts—and through a course of one day, one elephant can consume as many that you care to give them, besides the regular rations of two bales of hay and buckets of bran mash. Their water consumption can also tire a squadron of eager bucket carriers.

Although the elephant's tricks are many, trainers are continually teaching them new ones or reviving old ones not used for some time, and for proof that an elephant "never forgets," all the trainer has to do is give the "cue" and although not doing one of the tricks for years, will immediately go into a head stand, walk on three legs, do a roll over, or anything that was taught to the ardent pupil who is truly one of the most intelligent beasts known to mankind.

There is an old adage about giving an elephant tobacco—which is said would surely make the elephant mad, in fact if the brute sipped the given years later, and could reach him, would show ghastly vengeance.

Well, Col. Bill Woodcock, who is the boss of the three big herds of Wallace elephants, says "the not forgetting part is all right," but he has one big beast that several years ago when the big circus used to give street parades, would be going down the street continually watching for cigarette and cigar "snipes," and when one was spotted, the elephant would let loose of the other fellow's tail and snuff the delicacy up with his trunk. The pachyderm seemed to delight in chewing tobacco, but one day got hold of a "hot one" and after squealing for several minutes—never picked up another one until long afterwards and then was "always certain that it wasn't a hot one."

Col. Woodcock also explains that the reason for one elephant holding on to the tail of the one ahead is to "keep them out of mischief," not that they are bad, but every elephant is much like every little boy and girl.

If you have an excess of acids in your blood, your 15 miles of kidney tubes may be over-worked. These tiny filters and tubes are working day and night to help Nature rid your system of excess acids and poisonous waste.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sensations shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Believers may need help the same as bowels, so ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

BUT WHY COURT-MARTIAL THE WHOLE REGIMENT?

THERE are bound to be one or two bad soldiers in every regiment. But why court-martial the whole regiment?

The same applies to beer retailing. Out of the 5,000 retailers in North Carolina, there is bound to be a small minority who disobey the law or permit anti-social conditions.

The Brewers and North Carolina Beer Distributors Committee wants even this small minority of undesirable beer retailers eliminated entirely. To that end, the Committee cooperates with law enforcement officers in securing the revocation of the retail licenses of these objectionable outlets. One hundred and two licenses have been revoked during the past year.

Milestone. Principals: Ginger Rogers, Ronald Colman, Spring Byington, Jack Carson, Harry Davenport and Hugh O'Connell.

Some folks said when this picture was started that Ginger wasn't the type for Colman, and vice versa, and that the combination would result in a celluloid mess.

The airy and amusing piece details consequences of the purchase of a sweepstakes ticket by Ginger and Colman, including (these screenwriters think of everything, don't they?) a platonic honeymoon trip to Niagara Falls.

It is very obvious from the beginning that Colman, looking almost boyish with his hair cut short and wearing sweaters, will win this lady of somebody else's choice, even though she is wearing her hair black and in a cumbersome manner (I think) down her pretty neck in something that I am told is a snood.

You know very well that the dope she is engaged to marry doesn't have an outside chance after Colman turns on the personality, but the dope, in the person of Carson, stays in and pitches to complicate matters and thereby amuse you and me. A story so frothy as this has many ways to go astray, but Milestone kept it in the right key except for one deviation into the realm of whimsy. That realm is exclusively Disney's, because he alone does it well, and I wish others would stay out. I refer to that sequence where Ginger and Ronald meet up with Peter Possum.

"The Great Profile." Screenplay by Milton Sperling and Hilary Lynn. Directed by Walter Lang. Principals: John Barrymore, Mary Beahm, Gregory Ratoff, John Payne and Anne Baxter.

Imagine a man making fun of himself. That is what you will see in this. It is no more and little less than the story of Barrymore for the last two or three years, built mainly around the stage show in which he ad libbed and kidded himself and the audience.

Had Adolphe Menjou been cast in this, as was originally intended, it might have been uproariously funny. He could have made the character a clown you wanted to laugh at. Barrymore imitating himself is, I regret to report, a pathetic display. You feel sorry for the guy. You can't be feeling sorry and laughing too, can you?

Man About Manhattan

By George Tucker

New York — The Polynesian motif has finally caught up with swing—at least it has on Broadway—and now the Onyx club is following the lead of the Beachcomber, the Hurricane, the Pago Pago club, and the Hawaiian room, a transition that many wouldn't have believed possible a few years ago. Once the cradle of swing, the Onyx first achieved the limelight around Christmas, 1935, when Farley and Riley drove everybody crazy with "The Music Goes Round and Round." It continued in later years with "Stuff" Smith, a mecca for those who drew satisfaction from listening to ear-splitting music in tight, compact little places. It goes South Seas now, almost over night. The steel guitar, the soft swish of leaves will fan away the fever that for so many years gnawed at the heart of the jitterbugs.

On a round of the town the other night we ran into "Prince" Mike Romanov, who city-slicked New York, Miami, and Hollywood a few years ago with his "old world airs" before somebody exposed him. Mike never blushed at that time and he has never been embarrassed since. An East Side boy whose name is Harry, he posed as royalty and got away with it long enough to build up a tradition. I used to see him around before he headed west. Seeing him this time was the first time I had thought of him in years. While we were talking he drew out an amazing silver cigarette case, which was slightly smaller than a shoe box and said, "My friend Charlie Chaplin gave me this." He pulled out a crisp $10 note and offered to buy a milder water. "I have a suite at the Pierre," he said, "and when I go back to Hollywood I'm going to open a smart bar. My movie friends will be my board of directors." Mike once said: "Certainly I'm a phoney. But people like me—and help me—because I'm the best in the business." Mike was right. People do. And he is.

We were talking the other night about the people who play glamorous, adventurous roles on the stage and screen. Often they themselves have been lifted from dull, prosaic lives. But that isn't the case with Errol Flynn, the movie hero. Actually, he is the son of a Dublin university professor and, before he went into the movies, he traded in copra and prospected for gold in New Guinea. Flynn hobnobbed with pearl divers and beachcombers for months in the south seas. Playing his swashbuckling roles on the screen is a form of make-believe that, to him, is understandably real.

Another Irish hero with a background of adventurous reality is black-headed George Brent, who might be an army officer today if he hadn't come to America. Brent, among other things, was a dispatch bearer for famed Michael Collins during the Irish Rebellion. As a matter of fact, Edward G. Robinson once wanted to manage an art gallery; Frank McHugh hankered after Blackstone and a study of the law; Bette Davis swears she has always wanted to be a nurse. So it goes. Flynn the prospector and Brent the dispatch carrier—both wound up on the funny studio lots of Hollywood.

Gasoline Stolen
J. K. Wood, who lives near the Pitt-Martin line in Carolina township, has reported to officers that some one broke the lock on his oil house and stole 12 gallons of gasoline and a container one night this week. Officers are investigating the theft.

THOSE GOODMAN FANS AREN'T DISCOURAGED
Cincinnati.—(AP)—Ival Goodman's been in a batting slump most of this year but the Goodman section of the Cincinnati right field bleachers is still all for Ival. Every time he trots out there his public stands up and yells. He used to hit a lot of homers to that spot in the bleachers and everybody expects him to start again. Ival is an Oklahoman, with a bit of Indian blood in him.

New Ford To Go On Display Friday A. M.

The new Fords have arrived in Greenville and will go on display to the public at the John Flanagan Buggy Company, local dealers, tomorrow morning.

Showrooms of the Greenville dealers will remain open both Friday and Saturday nights for the convenience of those citizens who do not have time during the daytime to see the new cars.

Many improvements have been made in the new Fords over previous models and officials of the local company invite everyone, whether in the market for a new car or not, to visit their showrooms. Tomorrow's display will mark the 26th time the Flanagan Buggy Company has presented new models in Fords.

COLLECTION OF PIPES DISPELS STATE DIGNITY

Lincoln, Neb.—(AP)—Governor R. L. Cochran likes to maintain informality in his executive office and believes the dozen or so pipes he keeps on his desk help clear the air. "I've noticed that a stranger usually glances at the luxurious furnishings and tightens up, but once he spies these disarming pipes he's all right," Cochran explained. The governor's pipe collecting is not a hobby. "My Scotch instinct won't let me throw any of them away," he explains. "One came from London, one from Sweden, and others from many states. Several are gifts." Cochran has about 30, half of them at home. The only pipe he ever lost was the one he prized most. He bought it in England while serving as an artillery captain in the World war and lost it after his return home. He prefers straight stem models, but has one well worn, curved-stem cornob.

Mountain Takes New Stance
Statesville, N. C.—(AP)—Did you ever see a mountain walking? Well, maybe not, but Southern Railway officials say they have plenty of evidence that one moved. After two successive cloudbursts and floods, railway maintenance men found tracks near Point Lookout seven feet out of line. Electric and telegraph poles over a long stretch of right of way also had moved. Officials could find no evidence of any slides. High up on the mountain they finally found a seven-foot crack. More than 12 acres—a large section of the mountain—had slipped seven feet.
