GERMAN CHILDREN TO BE MOVED INTO RUMANIA

DRAFT SYSTEM IS NOW UNDER NEW DIRECTOR

Dr. Dykstra Sworn In As Head Of Selective Program

TASK NOW UP TO DRAFT BOARDS

Compliance With The Law General Throughout U. S. Yesterday As More Than 16,000,000 Registered

By The Associated Press Dr. Clarence A. Dykstra, Wisconsin University president, was sworn in today as director of the nation's first selective service system for raising an army in peacetime.

Assuming responsibility for supervising the draft of probably 5,000,000 young men from among the more than 16,000,000 registered yesterday, Dykstra took the oath in the office of Secretary Stimson, who was present along with several other high civilian and military officials of the War department.

The approximately 5,000,000 civilian soldiers to be drawn from yesterday's registrants will, according to present plans, be spread over a five-year period with the first call to go out in mid-November.

As the counting and sorting of registration cards began, preliminary reports from across the country said with frequency: "Registration exceeded advanced estimates." Good humored and even gay for the most part, the young men of America from 21 through 35 literally rushed to the 125,000 registration places. Jostling each other and the army in which they may serve, they fell into long lines patiently waiting their turn for the nation's new adventure in peacetime conscription.

Complaints were scattered and disturbances few, although one man was killed in a gunfight at a Nebraska registration place, another dropped dead in Raleigh, N. C., one was arrested and several conscientious objectors caused flurries of excitement.

Compliance with the law appeared to be general, but subpoenas were served on eight theological students who refused to register in New York city and one man was jailed in El Paso, Texas, for refusing.

As soon as registration ended at 9 p. m. last night registration cards began to move from the registration places to county clerks for redistribution to 6,500 local draft boards which were due to begin functioning today. Most boards should have the cards of the men in their areas before nightfall.

The boards first will shuffle the cards and give them serial numbers which will be drawn in a national lottery in Washington to determine the order in which men will be subject to call for service. Within a few days the boards will begin publishing the serial numbers and when they have finished the lotteries will be held some time between October 25 and November 2.

One Man's Library Mooreville, N. C.—(AP)—Moses W. White, 90, has read the Bible from cover to cover once for each year of his life. White says the Bible and newspapers constitute his library. He reads them both every day—and without the use of glasses. He has attended 48 Methodist church conferences, beginning in 1884.

If you are among the nearly 8,000 who registered in Pitt county yesterday and are wondering what your chances are for being drafted into military service during the next 12 months, it will be of interest to know that the chances are better than 100 to 1 that you will not be inducted into service for a year at least.

This percentage was figured on estimates that North Carolina will be called on to provide approximately 5,000 men for service the first year. While Pitt had more to register than some other counties, many of the more populous counties had many more within the age limit than Pitt county. Figuring that this county's registrants was on the average for the state, 75 men or less would be required from this county yesterday.

"Hate Roosevelt Movement" Reported Being Waged

Washington, Oct. 17.—(AP)—Rep. McCormack of Massachusetts House Democratic leader, asked the Senate Campaign Expenditures committee to investigate what he called a $30,000,000 "hate Roosevelt movement."

In a letter to Chairman Gillette (D-Iowa) McCormack forwarded what he said was a photostatic copy of an advertisement placed in the Chicago Tribune on October 10 by the First National Bank of Englewood, Ill.

The advertisement contained a statement of the bank's condition and ended, McCormack said, with: "In a last stand for democracy every director and officer of this bank will cast his vote for Wendell Willkie."

"It is generally known" said Mr. McCormack, "that the Republican National Committee and the various Willkie groups and certain financial groups are trying to obtain control of the Federal government for their own special interest at tremendous sums of money to date and before the campaign is over it is conservatively estimated will spend directly and indirectly $30,000,000 in a 'hate Roosevelt movement,' in an effort to defeat President Roosevelt. "This tremendous expenditure will partially be concealed in many ways, one of which is through the means of advertisements as employed by this particular bank."

McCormack urged that the Senate committee recommend to Congress "legislation that will meet this abuse" if the Hatch act does not already prohibit it.

Men Not In Age Limit Sought To Register

There were no anti-draft demonstrations in the county yesterday and to the contrary a few instances were reported by registrars where men not included in the age limits attempted to register.

At Cox's mill one man was in the process of registering when it was discovered he was 37 years old. Advised that only persons between the ages of 21 and 36 were required to register, the man declared that he would have to register sooner or later and "might as well do it now." He was told to wait for the next call, however. Also at the city hall in Greenville one youth only 19 years of age attempted to register.

U. S. JOBLESS IN SPOTLIGHT OF CAMPAIGNS

Project Abandoned Several Years May Be Carried Out At International Rapids Of River To Provide Power Needed For Defense; President To Advise Congress Of All New Moves

Washington, Oct. 17.—(AP)—President Roosevelt informed Congress today that he had allocated $1,000,000 for preliminary surveys looking to development of additional power for defense at the international rapids section of the St. Lawrence river.

The money came from a $200,000,000 defense fund which Congress placed at the President's discretion and it was assigned to the Federal Power Commission and the Army Engineer Corps for preliminary work to be undertaken immediately.

"The preliminary investigations which I have authorized involve no actual construction or commitments to construct," the President said in his message, and "in taking this means of advising Congress of the surveys I am having made I wish to make it clear that Congress will be kept advised of such further steps as may be necessary."

Development of additional power on the St. Lawrence was a high point of controversy five or six years ago when the Senate rejected a treaty with Canada on the subject that would have provided for making the St. Lawrence an ocean-going navigable stream from the Atlantic to the Great Lakes and for producing additional hydro-electric power to be equally divided between the United States and Canada.

Emphasis has been placed recently on the power phase of the project alone, Mr. Roosevelt declaring that more power was needed in both countries for defense purposes.

The President also issued today an executive order creating the St. Lawrence Advisory committee to advise him, he said, "in planning the work and to cooperate with appropriate agencies of the Canadian government."

DYKSTRA SAYS U. S. IS STRONG

Discounts Theory That Democracy Can Not Move Fast

By The Associated Press Clarence A. Dykstra declared in his first public statement as draft director today that "those who have thought we were soft and supine and as a democracy could not move with effectiveness may be disappointed."

The 57-year-old University of Wisconsin president who had taken the oath of his new position in the office of Secretary Stimson in Washington but a short time earlier added that "the news is that the registration went off more than happily—with enthusiasm."

"It shows the ability of a great democracy to rise to an occasion of this kind," he told a press conference.

Shortly after Dykstra took office President Roosevelt issued an executive order authorizing him to appoint necessary members of local draft boards, appeal boards, government appeal agents and local board physicians. All such work from now on will be under the new chief's direction.

GOP Candidate Calls For Revision Of WPA Program

SAYS HIS AIM IS MORE JOBS

Wallace Advocates Extension Of Social Security Benefits In Reply To Republican Charges

By The Associated Press The problem of America's jobless held the campaign spotlight today as Wendell L. Willkie called for a revision of the WPA program and Henry A. Wallace termed present unemployment insurance too conservative and said it would have to be made more generous.

Willkie charged that the New Deal had made a "stark and shameful" promise of more employment and added that "our promise is more jobs."

In a speech at Evansville, Ind., he called for changes in the WPA, including greater emphasis on public works projects under private contractors and allocation of relief funds to the states according to the amount of unemployment. Willkie's talk was one of a number on the day's crowded schedule of campaigning in Indiana, Illinois and Missouri.

Wallace advocated extension of social security benefits as he replied to Republican charges that the Roosevelt administration's policies would lead to national bankruptcy and failure to meet workers' claims. "I don't see how a presidential nominee spoke at Pittsburgh last night."

"Such talk," he said, "is in the same class with the story that went out in pay envelopes just before the election in 1936 that you would have to wear necktie numbers around your neck like dogs."

"Our system in its present form is far from bankruptcy, it is more troubled with surplus than with deficits."

N.C. COUNTIES FILE REPORTS

376,368 Registered in 88 Of State's 100 Counties

Raleigh, Oct. 17.—(AP)—Eighty-eight of the 100 counties reported at 1:30 this afternoon that they had 376,368 registrants yesterday for the selective service military training program.

Guilford county, expected to have the biggest total, had not reported. Guilford was estimated on the basis of returns from other counties to have something over 21,000 registrants.

In only Durham and Orange counties had the total number registering exceeded the estimates of the War department and officials said this was probably caused by an unexpectedly large number of registrants at Duke and the University of North Carolina.

Wilson county reported first at 9:58 last night and this morning telegrams from other counties came in by the dozens. Several counties reported that upwards of 5,000 registrants had been listed in a single draft board area and immediately steps were taken to adjust some.

Mecklenburg led county registrations so far reported with 21,213.

Draft boards throughout the state began to swing into action this morning. Adjutant General J. Van B. Metts reported. He said a number had organized by electing a chairman and arranging for working space and for clerical help. The local election officials who did the registering yesterday will turn the cards over to the draft board which will handle the entire second step of the program—numbering the cards, posting the list, having questionnaires filled out and other things. Frank Sauliere, a Miami, Fla., Daily News Reporter, was only 12—he claimed he was 16—when he got into the 18th U. S. Engineers and saw 19 months service in France as an interpreter and a runner. He won't be 36 until next January, so he registered for conscription with Miss Lois Sharp. Sharp's scars still show on his face.

7,935 Men Registered In Pitt On Wednesday

Program Is Now In Hands Of Local Boards

A total of 7,935 Pitt county men between the ages of 21 and 36 were registered under the WPA in the county yesterday and today the vice system yesterday and today the County Board of Elections, which had charge of the registration, turned the cards over to the Clerk of Court who in turn is keeping them in a vault for the two draft boards.

Chairman J. H. Harrell, chairman of the election board, declared today "our work is completed" and expressed his appreciation for the volunteer workers who helped in the registration.

The draft boards in Pitt county and throughout the nation will go into action immediately. They will shuffle the cards and give each a serial number. These numbers will be posted in public places and a national lottery to be conducted in Washington between October 29 and November 2 will determine the order in which registrants will be subject to call to service.

Any person who failed to register yesterday may do so with his local draft board without penalty provided he has an acceptable excuse. Persons who were sick are to be required to produce a doctor's certificate.

No disturbances of any kind were reported in the county during yesterday's registration and no unpleasant incidents of any kind developed at the various registration places.

The county was divided into two districts, with the Falkland, highway, Fifth street and the Washington highway the dividing line. District number one registered 4,320 men and district number two 3,615.

The registration in district number one was as follows: Beaver Dam, 226; Belvoir, 176; Bethel, 445; Carolina, 268; Falkland, 266; Farmville, 853; Fountain, 248; Greenville, one and two, 1,621; Pacolus, 217.

Registration in district number two follows: Aiden, 591; Chicod number one, 233; Chicod number two, 162; Chicod number three, 102; Chicod number four, 167; Greenville three and four, 1,513; Swift Creek, 190; Winterville, 408; Grifton, 249.

The total registration was smaller than had been estimated for the county. It had been predicted that slightly more than 9,000 men living in the county were between the ages of 21 and 36.

London Also Takes Steps In Same Line

Nazi Warplanes Renew Daylight Raids On London After Been Hampered By Rain During Night; Ominous Quiet Reported From Other Fronts; Russians And Germans Mass

By The Associated Press A mass exodus of 200,000 German children from Berlin, Hamburg and other large Nazi cities into western Rumania was authoritatively reported today, while Britain also took steps to remove children and mothers from bomb-ravaged districts of London.

Dispatches from Bucharest said preparations were going ahead to house the German children now being removed from the Reich.

A Berlin announcement said German women and children were to be removed "to avoid imperiling their health."

Adolf Hitler's warplanes renewed mass daylight raids on England after heavy rains bogged down some of the German over-night attacks giving London one of its quietest nights since early September.

Other fronts were ominously quiet. In the Balkans, Russia and Germany continued to mass troops facing each other across the Lampa river in Rumania.

In the Far East, Britain arranged the reopening of the Burma road at midnight tonight (12:30 p. m. EST)—and Japanese bombers were reported poised to attack the flow of supplies to China.

Despite bad weather conditions, British bombers pounded German naval bases at Kiel, Hamburg and Cuxhaven during the night, the London Air Ministry reported.

"Extensive fires were caused," the Ministry said, adding that other Royal Air Force squadrons attacked a synthetic oil plant at Lemna and scored direct hits on ammunition factories in Eastony.

Hundreds of German warplanes attacked England, but most of the German fighters and bombers were forced back by anti-aircraft fire and British planes, but some managed to penetrate the London defenses and dropped bombs in the capital area today.

About 16 London districts reported damage in the night assault, but the British said the havoc was comparatively light.

But, so fierce has been the destruction of London that political quarters heard the removal of all persons not engaged in essential occupations from capital districts most endangered by Nazi bombs.

A crowd, a majority of which was children, estimated to have been the largest ever to attend a Pitt county fair flocked to the exposition grounds yesterday and last night despite threatening weather and a warm sunshine and clear skies indicated the attendance today and tonight would set a new record.

Yesterday was children's day and the thousands took advantage of the fair management's courtesy of admitting them free. Endy brothers' shows and rides also reduced prices in order to provide the children with extra bargains for their money.

The various community books and individual entries in the respective departments were judged yesterday.

The Red Banks community booth was awarded first prize in this popular department. First prize carries a cash award of $50. Red Oak won second prize and a cash award of $40. Beaver Dam got third place.

Inter Se Club. The development of a Pacific empire by the United States was not due to any altruistic urge but was due to establish trade routes between the United States and the East. This fact was pointed out by Mrs. P. D. Duncan in her interesting and informative paper "Trends in the Pacific," given at the meeting of the Inter Se Club held at the home of Mrs. A. B. Stallworth.

As a result of this expansion the United States finds itself deeply involved in everything that touches the Pacific. The more important trends were discussed by Mrs. Duncan. Although not an island, Alaska was included because of its strategic position, and it was pointed out by Mrs. Duncan that the United States is now rushing its defenses there. The hub of the wheel of United States defense in the Pacific is Hawaii. The Samoan Islands which lie between San Francisco and Australia; Canton Island between Hawaii and the Fijis; Swains Island, unique because it was privately owned until 1925; Jarvis, Howland and Baker Islands are all flying the United States flag. All are being made useful because the United States has been constantly alert concerning her Pacific empire, and has been constructing lines of communication and transportation and methods of defense. Because Mrs. Duncan's brother is an engineer in the United States Navy and has traveled to many of these islands in the Pacific, several personal and interesting comments were given in addition to the paper, making for an excellent program.

At the conclusion of the program, business was dispensed with, and Mrs. Jack Edwards read a clever poem announcing a surprise kitchen shower honoring Miss Louisa Hooker. The hostess, Mrs. Stallworth, assisted by a committee, brought in the numerous kitchen gifts. Members gathered closer while Miss Hooker unwrapped the gifts and read the witty verses accompanying many packages.

During this lively social hour, Mrs. Stallworth served a delectable frozen salad course. Her house was artistically decorated with yellow and brown chrysanthemums and these colors were deftly repeated in her refreshments.

The club welcomed its two new members, Mrs. Sam Underwood and Mrs. Erskine Duff.

Called To Smithfield. Miss Dora Coates of the East Carolina Teachers College faculty, yesterday was called to her home in Smithfield by the death of her father, Daniel M. Coates. Mr. Coates had been ill for several months.

Funeral services were conducted at Smithfield this morning, and the body was interred in Sunset Memorial Park, near his home.

Atheneum Club Meets. Mrs. C. H. Edwards received the members of her book club and several guests at a most entertaining luncheon meeting Tuesday at one o'clock. The guests were welcomed by Mrs. Edwards, Mrs. Gallup of Rocky Mount, sister of the hostess, and Miss Louisa Hooker, bride-elect.

In the dining room, made colorful with many fall flower arrangements, a fruit cocktail was served informally. The guests were then invited into the dining room where a delicious turkey luncheon was served buffet style. The dining room table was outstandingly attractive with a bountiful arrangement of fruits. On returning to the living room and being seated, each guest found a miniature course at her place. A nice dessert followed the main course. Mrs. K. W. Cobb and Mrs. W. H. Bradsher assisted the hostess in serving.

Mrs. Edwards presented Mrs. P. W. Picklesimer as her guest speaker. Always of peculiar interest to other women is that of the achievements of their sex. The subject was therefore timely and interesting since it took the group into the lives of these great women columnists.

The first one discussed was Dorothy Dix, who has a record of writing for thirty-nine years without a single break in her daily talks of advice to men, women, boys and girls. Mrs. Picklesimer spoke of seeing her at a social in Kentucky and told how greatly she was impressed by Miss Dix's lovely physical appearance that housed such a beautiful character. The second great columnist presented has been called the first lady of American Journalism. She is the only woman who has ever made good as a political commentator and is none other than the amiable, blue-eyed tornado, Dorothy Thompson. The story of her growing up in Europe, of her marriage to Sinclair Lewis and of her interview with Hitler, compiled a dramatic story not to be forgotten. Different but equally interesting was the story of Eleanor Roosevelt, who carried her childhood timidity long after maturity. Her living theory is that she owes society more than society owes her. She who has always been immensely wealthy, is constantly directing attention to the needs of other people. The speaker predicted that long after Eleanor Roosevelt leaves the White House, she will remain the country's unofficial first lady because of her insatiable desire and marked ability to help her fellowman.

Guests for the afternoon were Mrs. E. G. Flanagan, Mrs. K. W. Cobb, Mrs. W. G. Glass, Mrs. James Jenkins, Mrs. Kenneth Gallup, Mrs. W. P. Moore, Mrs. Larry Moore. Additional guests of honor who were remembered with gifts were Mrs. Winnie T. Barnes of Raleigh, Mrs. P. W. Picklesimer, speaker for the luncheon, and Miss Louisa Hooker, bride of November.

Different but equally interesting was the story of Eleanor Roosevelt, who carried her childhood timidity long after maturity. Her living theory is that she owes society more than society owes her. She who has always been immensely wealthy, is constantly directing attention to the needs of other people. The speaker predicted that long after Eleanor Roosevelt leaves the White House, she will remain the country's unofficial first lady because of her insatiable desire and marked ability to help her fellowman.

Guests for the afternoon were Mrs. E. G. Flanagan, Mrs. K. W. Cobb, Mrs. W. G. Glass, Mrs. James Jenkins, Mrs. Kenneth Gallup, Mrs. W. P. Moore, Mrs. Larry Moore. Additional guests of honor who were remembered with gifts were Mrs. Winnie T. Barnes of Raleigh, Mrs. P. W. Picklesimer, speaker for the luncheon, and Miss Louisa Hooker, bride of November.

Funeral services were conducted at Smithfield this morning, and the body was interred in Sunset Memorial Park, near his home.

Atheneum Club Meets. Mrs. C. H. Edwards received the members of her book club and several guests at a most entertaining luncheon meeting Tuesday at one o'clock. The guests were welcomed by Mrs. Edwards, Mrs. Gallup of Rocky Mount, sister of the hostess, and Miss Louisa Hooker, bride-elect.

In the dining room, made colorful with many fall flower arrangements, a fruit cocktail was served informally. The guests were then invited into the dining room where a delicious turkey luncheon was served buffet style. The dining room table was outstandingly attractive with a bountiful arrangement of fruits. On returning to the living room and being seated, each guest found a miniature course at her place. A nice dessert followed the main course. Mrs. K. W. Cobb and Mrs. W. H. Bradsher assisted the hostess in serving.

Mrs. Edwards presented Mrs. P. W. Picklesimer as her guest speaker. Always of peculiar interest to other women is that of the achievements of their sex. The subject was therefore timely and interesting since it took the group into the lives of these great women columnists.

The first one discussed was Dorothy Dix, who has a record of writing for thirty-nine years without a single break in her daily talks of advice to men, women, boys and girls. Mrs. Picklesimer spoke of seeing her at a social in Kentucky and told how greatly she was impressed by Miss Dix's lovely physical appearance that housed such a beautiful character. The second great columnist presented has been called the first lady of American Journalism. She is the only woman who has ever made good as a political commentator and is none other than the amiable, blue-eyed tornado, Dorothy Thompson. The story of her growing up in Europe, of her marriage to Sinclair Lewis and of her interview with Hitler, compiled a dramatic story not to be forgotten. LaRque, president of the Federal Home Loan Bank of Winston-Salem; and Croxon Miller, Albemarle chairman of district presidents.

The afternoon meeting which is in the form of a round table discussion, starting at 4:30 o'clock, will be devoted to subjects such as appraisals, minimum construction standards, and many other interesting topics.

'Bagley Shift Will Have Its Political Aftermaths

Reflector Bureau.
By HENRY AVERILL.
Raleigh, Oct. 17.—Shift in activity of Dudley Bagley from the field of State to Federal governmental service means, first of all, that Lindsay Warren will have an outstandingly capable second assistant when he assumes the duties of Uncle Sam's Comptroller General; but it will also be the cause from which notable political effects will flow in North Carolina.

The Bagley switch of jobs will do these things, if nothing more: (1) Lessen the chances that the State Rural Electrification Authority will be consolidated into the Utilities Commission; (2) increase vastly the chances of School Commission Chairman Lloyd Griffin to retain his job after the Broughton administration takes charge in January and (3) cause Conservation and Development Director R. Bruce Etheridge, Governor's Secretary Hathaway Cross and other appointive office holders from the northeast to breathe more easily.

Not one of these things, however, seem to have been considered in the Bagley move. The Currituck man simply found himself faced with too good a proposition to turn down. His salary as Warren's assistant will be far more than he is now getting as REA head; his appointment is for a fifteen year period after which he will be eligible for retirement on a substantial pension; and his field of service will be widely extended rather than narrowed.

While, therefore, the appointment came at what may be termed a very opportune moment, it is certain that Bagley didn't make the change because he feared he would not be reappointed by Governor Broughton next year. The REA head backed Lieut. Governor Horton in the primary and there has been much speculation over his chances to hold his job.

But though the decision was not reached from purely political motives, it will have the political effects mentioned.

Consolidation of the state REA with the Utilities Commission, of course, was talked over before the primary of last spring; but it seemed such a nice quiet way to ease Mr. Bagley out of office that the subject received great impetus from the primary's result. It was said that upon consolidation of the two agencies, it would be quite logical for Governor Broughton to name someone other than Mr. Bagley because of his geographical status. Commissioner Stanley Winborne comes from Hertford, in the northeast, and it could be so neatly contended that it wouldn't do to have two on the Utilities board from so close together.

Now that reason for consolidation has been removed, Mr. Bagley himself believes that the period of greatest REA construction is over, and that the task remaining is mostly one of filling out the skeleton system of rural lines already built all over the state. The REA board however, at its last meeting discussed consolidation at some length and its members expressed the opinion there is at least two more years of promotion work to be done. The board personnel was absolutely set against consolidation.

From the political angle, Governor Broughton will not now need consolidation to give him appointment of a rural electrification chief. Governor Hoy has named Dr. D. S. Weaver to serve temporarily but the appointment was so made that the incoming governor can replace him immediately after assuming office in January.

On the subject of his intentions regarding this appointment, as on practically all others, Mr. Broughton has kept his own counsel; and the talk about the REA has extended only so far as suggestion that Mr. Bagley would be replaced the gossips have never got round to saying by whom.

Mr. Griffin enters the picture for the reason that he, like Mr. Etheridge, cast his lot with Horton in the gubernatorial primary; and there has been the same sort of talk about his political decapitation.

Where he stands to gain by Mr. Bagley's departure from the state scene is through the same geographical angle. The school commission chairman is also a northerner; and reduction by one of the number of major appointive offices held by men from that section reduces the opportunity to explain a Griffin dismissal on the grounds that there are too many officials from up that way.

That, too, explains why the Messrs. Etheridge and Cross stand to reap some political advantage. The C and D head is from Dare and the Governor's secretary from Gates, both in the Albemarle. Both were loyal Broughton backers during the last primary. Both seem in line for reward, either by retaining their present posts or by appointment to others just as good.

No doubt they would be taken care of, regardless; but the subtraction of a northeastern office holder cannot but make it easier for the next governor to pass them the plum.

It is not intended to infer that either Etheridge or Cross would have taken the slightest part in any ouster of Mr. Bagley; it is simply to state a fact when it is said that they have more reason than their genuine friendship for him to rejoice at the good fortune of Mr. Bagley in moving on to Washington circles.

Public Benefits On Grant's Anniversary

One of the greatest sales in the history of the W. T. Grant Company will highlight its 34th anniversary celebration from October 16 to October 26. This nation-wide event, in which each of the 493 Grant stores throughout the country will participate, brings outstanding values to local customers.

The Grant Company has grown steadily since its start in 1906 at Lynn, Mass., and now ranks among the foremost retail organizations in the country. Its growth has been a tribute to the common sense business methods of its founder, William T. Grant, and to his policy of stressing "Not how much for ourselves, but how much we can give to our customers."

The secret of the success of the Grant Company has been its ability to pass on substantial savings to its customers. This has been done in the form of lower prices and strictly maintained quality. Low prices are effected less by quantity buying than by advance planning—placing orders during slack seasons, whenever possible, or when raw material costs are low.

The management of the company has made sure that this anniversary sale will be the best ever, for it will feature regular Grant merchandise at greatly reduced prices, as well as outstanding special purchases. Mr. N. D. Currie, manager of the local Grant store at 421 Evans street, says that he expects the biggest response his store has ever had.

Strength For The Day. By EARL L. BOUGLASS.

HONOR AND DAYLIGHT. The late John Buchan, who was also Lord Tweedsmuir and served as Governor General of Canada, wrote in one of his books that he was always willing to lift his sword to help anything that had honor and daylight in it. The words "honor and daylight" are striking. They represent the way a great-hearted man of letters set forth those qualities in every enterprise which gave it significance. He said that every project worthy of man's allegiance must have honor in it. It must be ethically sound. It must be such as to call forth the best qualities of a man's character. It must be the type of thing in which he is willing to invest his life, and for which, if needs be, he is willing to lay it down. But, continues Buchan, every good enterprise must also have daylight in it. It must be characterized by vision. It must have about it the radiance of hope and must be filled with the dreams of good men for better things and better days. It must be like a mountain-top which, when all the valley lies in darkness, becomes beautifully luminous with the first rays of the rising sun. Men are indeed willing to lift their swords and lay down lives for causes which have these two things characterizing them—honor and daylight. When causes are right and we are filled with the hope of better days, men everywhere will rally with joy to their standards. All Rights Reserved. Babson Newspaper Syndicate.

Short Shots. Reflector Bureau. By HENRY AYERHILL. Raleigh, Oct. 17.—Despite its prominent display on the front page of the Greensboro News, there was absolutely no element of surprise in announcement by Thurmond Chatham of Winston-Salem; W. B. Kiker of Reidsville; and Miss Carrie McLean of Charlotte, that they will vote and work for Wendell Wilkie. All three had long ago been listed in the Republican column by news men with even an elementary knowledge of the situation. In fact, the News' own Raleigh correspondent Tom Bost, wrote months ago that Miss McLean had slipped the party moorings and put to sea on the leaky Republican ship. Only interesting point the announcement raises is this:—How long will Mr. Chatham last as a member of the Board of Conservation and Development? In the past, reprisal swift and devastating, has smitten every prominent state figure who dared bolt the Democratic party. Mr. Chatham is a very wealthy man who has been given considerable recognition by the Democratic powers—that be. But what will happen to him now politically?

This bureau's efficient secretary Miss Lucille Harris, says she heard Wendell Wilkie on the radio for the first time Monday night. She described her reaction thus: "I was in the room all by myself and all of a sudden I found myself boozing." Dick Reynolds, heading the Roosevelt-Wallace drive for campaign funds in North Carolina, has gone to Washington for a brief trip. Private business is his chief motive but while in the capital he'll probably try to put the bee on some of the Tar Heels there. THE ROAD TO SHANI LUN

Chapter 19. Temu Asain. YNN seems to be that kind of person if she's the heroine I've been hearing about all afternoon," Sam interposed. "What became of your brother?" Peggy asked. "I suppose he's lost, too," said Lynn ambiguously. Other's interrupted them. Lynn's story had spread and enlarged and became a sensation among the foreigners in Lanfou. Added to this sensation had come rumors of international import. A strange airplane was maneuvering about the territory illegally. One of the new low-wing monoplane that was reported capable of piercing the stratosphere had dived down occasionally for observation. The first rumor made it a Japanese plane, another, a Russian, a third, a British, and a fourth had it that Chinese banditry had taken to the air. The Chinese government had rushed in a couple of scouting ships to investigate. Agents of other nations were reported to have chartered private Chinese planes to do the same. Word came that British India had made arrangements to land aircraft on the eastern border of Tibet if necessary. There was talk of a Mohammedan uprising that had already begun in the north. "It's like dancing while Nero fiddles," cried little Mrs. Wallace, shivering with happy excitement. "I dare say a little suffering and hardship would do your tourists good," Lynn agreed. "And ruin me." A tap on the gentleman's shoulder turned Lynn over to one of the Chinese aviators, the best dancer on the boat, she soon discovered. He was very good-looking young man with large, intelligent eyes, perfect teeth, and a serious smile. Lynn surmised that the American college girl had done well in marrying him. She thought of Temu Darin and his master and asked abruptly, "Have you ever seen the Prince of Shani Lun?" The young man shook his head. "No, I haven't. My government considers him a hard person to deal with. I've met his official representative, Temu Darin." Lynn lost a step and recovered herself in a moment. "What do you think of Temu Darin?" "He's an odd-looking man; has the best lip in the air of anybody I ever heard of. The fellows say it's due to that horseshoe scar on his cheek. Aviators are a superstitious lot." She smiled. "Superstition's like magic. There's both white and black." They danced a while in silence. The Chinese tailor had made Lynn a gorgeous and striking dress of blue peony brocade on a rose-leaf print. She was the belle of the party and on the arm of the best dancer on the boat. The orchestra struck up a new and enticing tango. And yet, she felt strangely lonely and restless in a feminine way. Lonely enough to cry for no reason at all. Sudden Panic. HAD there been too much time for thinking since she arrived in Lanfou? She could not dismiss Temu Darin from the recesses of her mind. He seemingly, had shown her the way to the region of the higher dimensions of space, and regardless of where she went or where she stayed, she still felt his disturbing presence at her side. Then, too, not once since she had been in Asia had the dream of the blue tree returned to her. She felt the need of its emotional power which kept her true to some inner guidance. They had stopped near the railing as the music ceased. Suddenly, Lynn turned pale and caught the railing for support. Then her color flooded her face and her chin went up. Mr. Wallace had stepped through the door from the boat saloon. He was not alone. "Temu Darin!" breathed Lynn. Tall and straight in a dinner jacket and black tie, he did not look about the assemblage, but with his eyes straight ahead, followed Mr. Wallace across the deck to meet the plain specialist's wife. The Chinese aviator hastily excused himself to Lynn and went over to him. The twenty-odd people on deck had grown quiet and turned to stare discreetly. Lynn could hear Mr. Wallace explaining in suppressed excitement. Temu Darin was an envoy from the Prince of Shani Lun; he had come downriver in a private junk on his way to Nanking. The host and one or two persons standing near were introduced. The orchestra struck up again and Lynn came to a momentary standstill. He turned and looked across at Lynn as if he had known all the time just where she stood. Their eyes held for a moment, straight and steady. Then Mrs. Wallace required his attention and after a moment he asked her to dance. Sam came to Lynn for the dance, but she had sunk into a chair. She couldn't talk; she couldn't rise. He sat down beside her. "Who's the battle-scarred hero?" he asked. Lynn shrugged her shoulders. Sam soon became slightly sentimental about meeting her in this unexpected way, and he tried to pry an admission from her that she was sorry she had thrown him over. In a light unthinking manner she countered his suggestions and by the time the music ceased, she had regained her self-possession. Mrs. Wallace brought Temu over and introduced him to Lynn. "I've told him your story," Mrs. Wallace added, her eyes shining with excitement. "I think you are a very lucky girl to escape those bandits as you did," he said promptly. "Luck seems to follow some people," she reminded him blandly. His eyes flashed their amusement. "Yes indeed Miss Britton. Your horoscope was read by our greatest astrologers when the Prince first learned that you were to be his—" Lynn trembled for a moment; he looked reckless enough to say anything. "Quest" he finished. "May I have this dance?" She hesitated for a moment, then slipped into his embrace. Lightly, expertly, they circled the floor in silence. Lynn knew for the first time what it meant to dance with a partner whose mind and spirit as well as his body complemented hers. Sing became rhythm, losing all sense of identity and the passing of time. He smiled into her eyes and quietly thanked her, then acknowledged a presentation to Peggy. As he danced with her, Lynn accepted Sam's second invitation. "You're dancing like an angel to-night," he told her. "You mean a goddess." He glanced at her shining eyes, her glowing cheeks. "I guess I do," he said huskily. Quiet Conflict. TEMU had the next dance with Lynn. Afterwards, he drew her to the prow of the boat where various couples had sought seclusion. Every eye followed them these two tall, handsome, exciting creatures. "Won't we make ourselves suspicious by our absence?" she protested faintly. "We have to talk and we can't seem to dance and talk." Seated in a secluded corner, Lynn became objective-minded again. "You have courage," she said. "With a word I could have you put in chains or whatever it is they do with kidnappers in China." "You'd have given the word when you first told your story, you'd wished me put in chains." She withdrew her shoulder from its contact with his arm. "I've been a little sap." "I'm of your people, Tara Lynn. You couldn't cause me harm any more than I could you." Something in the cadence of his low voice shook her nerves. "Why did you come here?" she demanded. "To ask you to finish our journey. The Prince is becoming impatient." She clenched her hands. "I hate your Prince. My answer to him is no, no, and always no." She paused, struck by a thought and looked into his face. "Does he threaten to kill you, Temu, if you do not succeed in bringing me?" "He would cut out my heart. Yet, he smiled as he said it. "What did he say when I escaped being added to his harem?" Temu grinned. "You are his harem, Tara Lynn. According to tradition you incarnated previous lives as two manifestations of the Tara, the green and the white, one, a king's daughter of Nepal, the other, a Chinese princess. He married you both; this time you come as one." Lynn gave a short laugh. "At least, I'm becoming concentrated." "You are all women in one." She turned and looked at him. "Are you speaking for yourself or for the Prince?" "True," he sighed, moving away a trifle. "I must not forget the Prince." Lynn rose angrily. "You've asked me to go to Delun and I've given my answer. It is no!" "I beg your pardon," he said stiffly, rising with a start. "I won't mention the subject again." "You are offended now," she murmured. "I don't mean to offend you. You are real. You are genuine. But these sinister white men who become tyrants in the colored parts of the world; I have heard some dreadful stories." "I am sorry," he repeated. "She gave me a swift look. "I see you are not; you are only angry." And she asked impishly, "Do you sometimes wish you could slap my face?" The orchestra struck up a new melody. "Let's dance," he said abruptly, and they swung along to the waxed floor of the deck. His arm tightened. "Don't think it seemed to say, 'Just feel that I am holding you close this minute.'" She obeyed. As the music died, she whispered, "Good night, Temu. I'm not dancing with you again." To be continued.

Tar Heel Fans Can See Two 1st Class Games Saturday

STATE VS. UNC IN AFTERNOON

Marshall At WFC at Night; Duke To Pla N.Y. Team

Wake Forest, Oct. 17.—(AP)—Football fans of North Carolina and vicinity will have ample opportunity to see two first class contests Saturday without a great deal of difficulty. In the afternoon, North Carolina and N. C. State clash at Raleigh, and that night, the Deacons of Wake Forest entertain Marshall College's Thundering Herd here, just 16 miles from the scene of the afternoon tilt.

Marshall is probably the strongest club in West Virginia this year, undefeated in the first four games, and advance notices from the Herd drum beaters indicate it is stronger than the '39 aggregation that barely lost to Wake Forest 14-13.

Interest is running high in Huntington, W. Va., home of the Herd, for a victory over the Deacons. A large delegation of Marshall backers have announced plans for attending the game, coming by train, auto and air. One group has chartered a special plane that will land them in Raleigh Friday afternoon.

Chapel Hill, Oct. 17.—Wide-open football, which has played no small part in the outcome of recent Carolina-State games, will probably be order of the day again at Raleigh Saturday afternoon when the brother institutions and traditional rivals clash in the feature of Greater University Day.

Kickoff will be at 2:30, and a near capacity crowd of 20,000 is expected. Lalanne is pitching for Carolina again this year alone with Frank O'Hare and Johnny Peora. State has a couple of first-rate pitchers in Dick Watts and Pat Fahley. And all the signs point to another wide-open game Saturday in which passes are likely to play a major and perhaps deciding part.

Durham, Oct. 17.—Duke University's football squad left here today at noon for Hamilton, N. Y., where on Saturday they will return to the grid wars by meeting the Red Raiders of Colgate.

The Blue Devils traveled from here by bus to Henderson where they entrained for Utica, N. Y., which will be their headquarters. They arrive in Utica Friday morning and the plans call for a drill Friday afternoon before moving over to Hamilton Saturday morning. The squad will depart immediately after the game Saturday.

The Blue Devils go into the game with an even break in two battles this season. They opened with a 23-0 victory over Virginia Military Institute but lost to Tennessee's Vols 13-0. They had an open date last Saturday.

The Blue Devils have not been beaten in the four years they have faced Colgate but Duke scouts report this Red Raider team to be the best the Blue Devils have ever gone against.

SAMPLE FARM LEASES DRAW

Copies Of Flexible Forms Are Available Free

Raleigh, Oct. 17.—In an attempt to help in improving relationships between landlords and tenants, the Extension farm management office at N. C. State College has prepared a set of flexible farm leases which are available to farm operators free. H. B. James, assistant in the farm management office, announced today that a supply of the lease forms has been placed in the office of every county farm agent in the state.

"The sample farm leases were prepared by the U. S. Department of Agriculture," James stated, "and they are drawn to fit general conditions, but can be modified to fit local conditions. It is important that a lease be adapted to the purpose for which it is to be used," the specialist declared.

Dean I. O. Schaub, Extension director of State College, has requested farm and home agents in the counties to become familiar with tenancy problems in their areas, and to try to do something to improve bad conditions.

"This matter of improving relationships between landlords and tenants is receiving considerable attention throughout the country, as farm management office is developing a program to deal with landowners and tenants receiving considerable publicity," Dr. Schaub said. "Our tenant relationships in this state."

Man About Manhattan

By George Tucker

New York—Not always, but usually, when the fogs of a new theatrical season on Broadway are fluffed away a new face or two stands revealed. Once it was Burgess Meredith, whom the critics quickly tagged "The Hamlet of 1940." That was five years ago. Again it was Katharine Locke, who gave promise of really being able to act. Two years ago it was Helen Claire, who was wonderful in a dialect role but who since has been condemned to obscurity because only occasionally do rich Alabama accents fit into Broadway dramas and comedies.

Such newcomers are the rookies of the theatrical league. The appearance of each rookie means the professional death of a veteran. There are, after all, only so many plays that can be produced. But this year the tables seem to be turning. So far we have had two honest smashes on the street that has been called so aptly the Rue Regret. Both are musicals. Both marked the return of old timers, once beloved washed up on Broadway. They are Al Jolson and Ed Wynn. Their gurgling foolery has evoked valentines from the hard-boiled reviewers—"drama assassins," as Winchell calls them.

Fred Allen's party, which celebrated his return to the airways was in many ways similar to his scripts. It just went around in circles and everybody had a wonderful time without knowing why. Between the salmon and the waldorf salad I overheard Frankie Far-

Ty Wagner Chosen Duke Alumni Head

Ty Wagner was elected president of the Pitt County Duke Alumni Association at the group's regular fall meeting last night, at which time the principal address was made by Dr. W. T. Laprade, professor of English and European history at the university.

Dr. Laprade's book on English history, is regarded as one of the best authorities ever written by an American.

Other officers named at the meeting last night were Roland Parley vice president; Mr. Sam Underwood, representative on the Alumni council; Mrs. Fitzhugh Duncan secretary-treasurer.

Dr. Laprade's address dealt with the present world conditions and the effect of the European war on this nation and what we could do to help offset the reaction.

The speaker was presented by Reynolds May, retiring president of the association. Following the address moving pictures were shown.

Mayor Jack Spain represented the Pitt County University of North Carolina Alumni Association.

An estimated 60 Duke alumni were present, in addition to a number of invited guests. The address of welcome was made by Ty Wagner.

MAINE'S GEM INDUSTRY EXPANDED BY WAR

Norway, Me.—(AP)—Semi-precious stones dug out of Maine's earth are given their shape and sparkle at home these days.

Maine merchants stopped sending their amethysts and other stones to China for cutting and polishing several years ago because of the Chinese-Japanese war. Then the European war prevented sending the gems abroad.

As a result, machinery available in Maine is being adapted for gem cutting and polishing.
