Forty Years Ago Today

MODES of the MOMENT

by Adelaide Kerr

Mrs. Milton White, Miss Mabel Tomlinson and Miss Lill Wilson are spending the week-end in Aurora with Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Baker.

Miss Helen Flanagan, who is teaching in Littleton, will arrive this afternoon to spend the week-end at her home in Greenville.

Mrs. Edgar Willford is visiting her mother in Sanford.

Mrs. H. F. Primrose of Richmond will arrive this afternoon to spend the week-end with her sister, Mrs. Sara Powell, Prof. and Mrs. G. H. Satterfield and family of Raleigh will spend Sunday with them. Prof. Satterfield is the brother of Mrs. Primrose and Mrs. Powell.

Matrons To Meet.
The Matrons of the Eighth Street Christian Church will hold their regular monthly meeting on Monday, November 4, at 3 p. m., at the home of Mrs. J. B. Cummings, with Mrs. Karl Cahoon and Mrs. Marshall Brinkley assisting hostesses.

Birth Announcement.
Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Nobles of Stokes announce the birth of a son, Richard Earl, on Thursday, October 31, 1940. Mrs. Nobles, before her marriage was Miss Thelma Harris of Stokes.

Local Boy In U. N. C. Band.
The University of North Carolina band, of which Spruill Spain, Jr., of Greenville is a member, will parade from the Waldorf Astoria hotel to the Vanderbilt theatre prior to the UNC-Fordham game in New York tomorrow, and will broadcast over the NBC network some time between 10 and 10:30 o'clock tomorrow morning.

The University band will go on the air for a pep rally with Kay Kyzer, former student and loyal alumnus of the University.

Y. B. C. To Give Dance.
The Young Democrats at East Carolina Teachers College will be hosts at a dance Saturday night in the Robert H. Wright building given for members of Y. D. C. clubs in other colleges and universities making up the college district of the Y. D. C., as well as for their own members. Representatives from a number of other institutions are expected, according to James Whitfield, president of the club.

As one of the activities of the evening there will be a figure formed by officers of the Y. D. C., and student government, among whom are three Greenville students, Whitfield, Walter Tucker, and Kenneth Woodard. The faculty adviser, Dr. L. E. Hilldrup, and Mrs. Hilldrup, will also take part in the figure.

To provide the dance music there will be the local orchestra, the Deans of Rhythm.

The Y. D. C. has a membership at East Carolina Teachers College of over five hundred.

A Correction.
The name of my ancestor, George Moye, was mis-spelled in the writing of a paper on "The History of Greenville" reported from the Clio Book Club and published in yesterday's paper.

George Moye was not only commissioned to build our first court house but he also served Pitt county as many of its most important public offices. He represented this county with John Simpson at the First Provincial Congress in New Bern, one of the earliest popular assemblies in America, called by the people in the presence of the King's officers and in direct disobedience to British authority on August 25, 1774 (N. C. State Colonial Records). It is indeed a sad commentary that this community should have been so indifferent to the historical and architectural value of our first court house that it should have been razed so recently as the year 1926. The building was begun in 1780 and finished before January, 1781. It was used as a court house for fourteen years and it was built to serve also as the first parish house of Saint Michael's Parish. In the masonry of its magnificent double chimneys at one end were the letters I H S, significant of an added religious character of the building.

Miss Hooker Complimented.
In compliment to Miss Louisa Hooker, whose marriage to Mr. Wallace Bourne will take place on Thursday afternoon in Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church, Mrs. John Flanagan and Mrs. Graham Flanagan, were hostesses at luncheon on Wednesday at one o'clock, at the Greenville Country Club.

The hostesses, the honor guest and Mrs. W. E. Hooker greeted the guests as they arrived.

Branches of pine, interspersed with clusters of white chrysanthemums, burning yellow tapers and tall vases of yellow and white chrysanthemums were used to appoint the spacious club room.

An attractive harvest centerpiece of fall fruits and vegetables was used on the table from which Mrs. E. G. Flanagan and Miss Laurine Skinner served a delicious barbecue luncheon, accompaniments to which were served by Mrs. Ty Wagner and Mrs. W. H. Bradsher. Mrs. Travis Hooker and Mrs. W. I. Wooten presided at the coffee table.

Chatham Book Club.
On Thursday afternoon the Chatham Book Club met at the home of Mrs. E. B. Ferguson, with Mrs. W. P. Moore as hostess. The rooms were beautifully decorated with chrysanthemums of yellow, white and lavender. After a short business session presided over by the president, Mrs. Rufus Starke, the meeting was turned over to the program chairman who introduced Mrs. Lindsay Savage, the guest speaker. Mrs. Savage gave a most interesting and comprehensive review of "As I Remember Him," an autobiography of Hans Zinsser, an eminent medical scientist, philosopher, poet, and writer of our day, whose research work has had far-reaching effect upon the medical world.

At the conclusion of the program a delicious salad plate was served with coffee and cakes suggestive of Halloween.

Birth Announcement.

P. W. Picklesimer, head of the Department of Geography at East Carolina Teachers College, who has been ill at Pitt General Hospital for some time, was removed to his home today, as his condition is slowly improving.

He will be confined to his home for some weeks longer.

Mrs. Brown Hostess.
Mrs. Key Brown was hostess to the Sans Souci Club on Tuesday afternoon. The house was beautiful with its pastel shades of chrysanthemums.

The meeting was called together by the president, Mrs. W. I. Wooten. Miss Williams of the college, told about the children's theatre, which the A. A. U. W. is sponsoring and asked for the support of all present.

After the books were passed, the meeting was turned over to Mrs. C. S. Forbes, who gave a most interesting paper on Panama. She said since 1502, when Columbus, on his fourth voyage, explored the Caribbean coast of Panama in search of a way through to India, the Isthmus has been perhaps more frequently the center of world interest than any section of the two continents it connects. It is said that the Indian name for abundance of fish was Panama, and from that phrase, the region derived its name.

Mrs. Forbes called on Mrs. Wooten and Mrs. Waldrop to tell us something about their trip to Panama. They said their first impression was how clean and beautiful everything was. They gave quite a vivid description of their trip and some of their experiences were very amusing.

Mrs. W. M. Scales, who lived in Panama for some time gave an interesting description of the life and habits of the people there.

After much discussion of current events, the hostess served a delicious salad course with hot tea.

Greensboro College Alumnae Meet.
The Greensboro College Alumnae met on Wednesday afternoon, October 30, with Mrs. J. R. Gullede at her home on East Fourth street. The rooms on the home were decorated with fall flowers and a lovely arrangement of pink roses centered the dining room table. After a brief business session, Mrs. A. L. Dittmer, guest speaker for the afternoon, addressed the group informally on the subject of her native state, Utah.

In her usual charming personal manner, coupled with some degree of fervor and enthusiasm, and yet with a becoming restraint and at times with what seemed like an impersonal attitude—with the objectivity of an outsider, Mrs. Dittmer traced the background, history, cities and scenery of Utah and of what is called the Mormon religion. The word Mormon, which has an interesting origin, was a nickname which has somehow adhered to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, founded by Joseph Smith and his six children in 1830.

It was exciting to follow the trek of the early Mormon from New York to Ohio, to Missouri, to Illinois and thence to Utah, where with great determination, faith, energy and ambition they built a religion, a culture and a state which was admitted to the Union in 1896.

The Mormon Temple in Salt Lake City, which has a great organ and a seating capacity of from eight to ten thousand people, required forty years to build. Salt Lake City itself, has been described as "a perfect jewel in a lovely setting." The Mormon people are great theatre and music-loving people who were from the beginning exceedingly and vitally interested in educational and cultural things. It is amazing to note all the wonderful things that these people were able to accomplish under the leadership of Brigham Young, a man of great vision and foresight, where in the midst of a desert place every achievement came as the result of great effort and every accomplishment was built upon the foundation stones of hard-ship and heartache.

At the close of this delightful program, the hostess served delicious refreshments.

The next meeting of the alumnae will be held on Monday afternoon, November 25.

Cihcod Scene Of District Meeting

The Bright Belt Log Rolling Association met in regular session on Wednesday with Camp No. 567 of the Woodmen of the World of Shelmerdine. An interesting program was presented at the Cihcod high school auditorium with L. C. Venters presiding. Newman Lewis is recording secretary.

The principal address was made by John Hill Paylor, Farmville attorney, who was introduced by T. E. Newton. Special music was presented throughout the program. Dinner was served on the camp grounds with the Woman's circle as hostess to the more than 400 delegates and guests from Beaufort, Carteret, Craven, Green, Jones, Lenoir, Martin, Onslow, Pitt, Pamlico and Edgecombe counties.

The business part of the program was conducted following the lunch.

Girl Scout Activities In Greenville

A Court of Awards and program was given last night at the high school auditorium by the Greenville Girl Scouts. The program was as follows: History of Juliette Low Memorial Fund—Mrs. S. M. Crisp. Songs by Girl Scouts. Camping Skit—Troop 3. Songs by Brownies. Pageant—"The Girl of Today, the Woman of Tomorrow"—Mrs. J. B. Kittrell, reader—pantomime by Girl Scouts of Troop 3, and Baby Sister Beauty.

Court of Awards—Inspirational talk by Mrs. J. H. Waldrop, chairman of Awards and Badges for the Greenville Girl Scouts. Five girls received their First Class awards, some Second Class, and others merit badges.

Flag Ceremony—Troop 4. The social hour followed, with guests of honor, the Boy Scouts of Greenville, and parents and friends participating in dancing and refreshments. Punch and cookies were served with the compliments of Mr. Minges and Mr. Norman of Pender's.

Troop No. 1 has arranged an attractive window display in the window, two doors south of the Old Towne Inn. The beautiful painting is a gift, painted especially for this week's celebration by Mrs. Charles Laughinghouse. It is a scene sketched from the actual view from the Lodge at Camp Shirley Rogers, a Girl Scout camp at Roaring Gap, N. C. Mrs. Laughinghouse has presented two paintings to the Girl Scouts to be displayed in the show-cabin, above the two fireplaces in the living room.

Troop 2 gave a splendid radio rendition of the play "Girl Scout Week" over WGTC Monday night. Miss Boerger directing, with Jane Garrett assisting.

All Greenville Girl Scouts and Council members wish to thank the newspapers for their splendid help with publicity during Girl Scout Week; also WGTC for their daily broadcasts. Also to Mr. T. Y. Walkover for his "theatre party" and the many friends who have helped with all the activities.

Meet The Chimp And Learn Why Men Behave Like-Men

By MALCOLM E. JOHNSON
AP Feature Service

Orange Park, Fla.—Diapered babies by chimpanzees in their new nursery at the Yale Laboratory of Primate Biology here are taking many of the same tests a psychologist would give your child.

Reared in isolation from their own parents, the infant apes are expected to show what traits of behavior are natural and how quickly they pick up essential knowledge for themselves.

Results of the experiment may become bases for further study by psychologists of human child behavior and learning.

Little Alf, JoJo, Jenny, Ken and several others—none much more than a year old—are cared for by humans with the idea of making them healthier and inhibiting them less than would Mama Chimp.

They eat regular baby food—fed with spoon and bottle by a nurse. They wear diapers. They play freely in their individual cages.

They are tested to see when they can determine colors or perform such tasks as picking up and throwing balls or figure out that a square block will fit better into a square hole than a round one.

Minimum Of Training
 They are allowed to learn about the world for themselves with a minimum of training.

Records of their physical, mental and behavior progress will be compared with those of children.

Dr. Henry W. Nissen, in charge of the Orange Park Laboratory, believes the chimpanzee in mentality and physique is the animal kingdom's closest approach to mankind.

Many of the experiments carried on here could not be undertaken with man to learn why we do the things we do, so the Yale university research experts have gone to the next best source for hints.

Lower Level Of Emotion
 Results of tests of baby apes reared away from their parents will be compared with tests given to young chimps brought up by their own mothers and with other young apes.

Peter, for example, went through two courses of tests before he was allowed to rejoin other apes in the colony. The scientists found the impression was very definite that the subject showed a lower level of emotionality than young chimpanzees who had been reared together.

Dr. Robert M. Yerkes, who directs all the work here and in New Haven, believes that if there were more imagination among chimpanzees they "might be expected to develop a spoken language."

"As to memory, the chimpanzee is efficiently equipped, for it remembers well and long anything which to be functioning in a business-like manner.

"We wish to extend our appreciation to the Presiding Judge, C. E. Thompson, the Solicitor, D. M. Clark, the Sheriff, J. Knott Proctor, and the officers of the court for their cooperation."

African Tribes Like Bach And Get It Made-to-Order

AP Feature Service
 Berlin.—Johann Sebastian Bach recordings are being sold to African natives in seven negro dialects by an ambitious hard-headed Berlin recording company.

But that's not all. This firm has struck a real African gold mine in making recordings of ebony "blues" singers warbling and selling them back to the African coastal inhabitants to play on their beloved gram-phones.

Trying to force European jazz down their throats didn't seem to be such a business plan, so the company directors sent crews with recording outfits into the jungle. There they set up their "mikes" and a village orchestra wheetzes, whines and boom-booms away. Back to Berlin goes the wax recording, and from it a matrix is made. Thousands of black discs labeled in various negro dialects are then pressed off and returned to the market.

The East African negroes are the ones who take a special liking to one of Bach's pieces. For these customers the lyrics have been translated into seven dialects. Jazz doesn't please the customers like their own music, although some coast tribes will buy a few recordings. The "Hymn for the Birth of the best sellers recorded by native virtuosos.

The firm sends native records back to 58 lands.

Strength For The Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

A GREAT TRUTH SEEKER
"Ben-Hur: A Tale of Christ," was one of the greatest successes in American literature. Over a million copies were sold before 1926, at which time the story was screened.
It is third on the list of most widely circulated popular novels since 1875 and third in order of popularity of all screen productions since the invention of motion pictures.

General "Lew" Wallace, the author, was a distinguished soldier in the Civil War. In his youth he had neglected many educational opportunities and had at last been forced into the study of law by his father. When he could find time for writing, he developed the art, along with that of painting, until he became distinguished in both fields.

One day a man who scoffed at religion so routed the young wallpaper in argument that he decided to study the Bible and see what it really did teach. The result was a religious conversation. Wallace became so enamored of the figure of Christ that he decided to write a novel setting forth the transforming power of divine love, as shown in the life of the Christ.

WELCOME, STUDENT CONGRESS

Greenville today extends a cordial welcome to the members of the North Carolina Student Council Congress gathered in sessions
here today and tomorrow. It is always a pleasure to have visitors in our city, but it is an even greater pleasure to entertain a group of fine
young people who represent the high schools of our state.
We sincerely hope, not only that your meetings will prove a great success, but that your brief stay in our city will prove most enjoyable for you.

DON'T LET IT FAIL

First reports from Community Chest Fund solicitors reveal that only a little more than $1,600 of the goal of $6,500 has been paid in or subscribed. It is very necessary that the goal be reached if Greenville is to continue to carry on its charities and other organizations, including Boy and Girl Scout work, for the coming year. Greenville cannot afford to curtail its activities along these lines yet that is just what will happen unless our people rally to this call and subscribe to the Community Chest fund. Of course, there are a lot of the solicitors who have not yet completed their reports, but the preliminary reports that many persons and firms who can well afford to give even more than heretofore, are cutting down on their donations or giving nothing at all this year. This is a vital matter to our community and we should not let it fail.

almost skinny.

Although he never missed a class,
he never went to luncheon with his classmates and immediately the afternoon sessions were out he would hurry off by himself. The other members of the class dubbed him
"the lone wolf"—made jokes about him, snickered behind his back.

Finally, the course was over and,
on "graduation day," the Lone Wolf came into the office of the assistant director. He said: "There's something been worrying me. I know the fellows don't like me. They think I'm a queer guy. I guess. That's all right. I don't blame them. But I did feel kinda like some explanation
was due you."

At a meeting of Raleigh's American Legion luncheon club he pointed out that one of the major errors of the Civil War draft in the north was that its operation was placed in the army's hands.

The Lincolnian officer, incidentally, made a very fine impression on the Legionnaires, whom he impressed with his obviously full knowledge of the Selective Service act.

A prominent business man who claims to have seen the company's records for the first ten months, tells your reporter that the Carolina Power and Light Company will this year show the biggest profits in its entire history.

One business, apparently, that Roosevelt hasn't ruined. So far as this corner is aware, the C. P. and L. has kept studiously aloof from any activity in the current presidential race, contrary to predictions of many that its executives would be very active for Wendell Willkie
and the G. O. P.

Building permits were issued in 21 North Carolina cities in September, of which only eight were designed to accommodate more than two families.

No less than 307 were one-family dwellings, 32 were two-family structures and 14 were for either one or two families with stores or shops attached.

While the estimated cost of construction declined somewhat from September, 1939, the number of residences to be constructed jumped to 361 from 279 in the corresponding month of last year.

There was likewise a substantial increase in number of non-residential buildings for which permits were issued in September (from 90 to 100), but a 25 per cent decline in estimates (from $775,898 to $577,923).

Raleigh, Nov. 1.—Members of North Carolina's National Guard and Officers Reserve corps who are on duty with the Adjutant General's office here are wearing civilian clothes regularly—not because of personal preference, but because specific instructions have been issued to that effect.

According to Captain Charles Jonas, on duty as public relations officer for the Selective Service division, a strict policy has been adopted to leave operation of the draft entirely in civilian hands; and uniforms even for members of the draft staff are taboo because they might convey the impression that the military is taking over some functions of the local civilian boards.

THE ROAD TO SHANI LUN

By Rita Miller Flannery

YESTERDAY: Lynn Britton
has been conducted by Temu Darin, against her will, across China and Mongolia almost to the city of the Prince of Shani Lun. Lynn is to marry the Prince, Temu insists; she had rather marry Temu. Lynn's camel has run away, and she is waiting with Temu for a Mongolian peasant to come up with horses so she and Temu can buy them to finish the long journey to Shani Lun.

Chapter 32 Battle Of Love

WHEN Lynn woke in the morning, she saw Temu standing tall and straight on a hilltop scanning the horizon through field-glasses. She watched him with brooding eyes, a faint flush on her cheeks. Presently she turned and looked at the camel;
the beast had died sometime during the night.

"Temu's friend," Lynn thought.
She rose, staring at the eastern horizon warmed with promise of the rising sun.

Temu returned and stood at her shoulder. A tremor went through Lynn. "What happens when we die?" she asked.

"According to Sherdock, nothing happens. Tara Lynn, any more than when you turn a page in a book you are reading."

Lynn thought a minute. "I don't believe I'm the emanation of a goddess after all. I'm too stupid about these things of the spirit.
I scheme around to find the three-dimensional explanations for everything. The last few days I've been thinking about the little missionary boy that became your Prince. Why, at the age of six he would have spoken English well
if he were an average child."

Temu smiled. "I'm quite confident he wasn't subnormal."

Lynn refused to be deflected
from her purpose. "Surely, missionary parents would not have taught their son the Buddhist mantra."

"Go on," he urged.

"He must have used English words. He must have said, 'O man, please take me home.' And Sherdock heard the mantra because he expected to hear it, wished to hear it. Do you know what the Prince thinks of the incident?"

"He was pretty young when it happened, and he had the handicap of orphanhood and starvation; he knows only that the words he must have said worked—worked to change him from an outcast into a Prince. And does your explanation lessen any of the mystery of the forces that brought Sherdock and the boy together?"

"I don't know," she acknowledged slowly. "She glanced up.
"Why is the Prince content to stay here instead of returning
home?"

"He did think once he would live in America. He tried it. He found no near relatives, no special place he wanted to do. The old Prince said Sherdock were begging him to come back and take up the responsibilities that belonged to him. He came."

"And because, as Dick says, a typical, native ruler sunk in vice and crime."

Temu looked up at the ridge which concealed the rising sun
before he spoke. "Has it occurred to you that you might reform the man?"

wood bowls and sat down on the rug beside her.

"Are you unhappy?" he asked.
"I don't know." She looked up at him. "You enrage me dreadfully but I can't stay angry long.
Just now I'm in a funny state of mind, reckless, abandoned. Have you ever associated with such a woman before?"

He smiled a little. "Not in these circumstances."

"I don't care what happens to us just so I stay with you."

He gave her a sidelong glance.
"That is encouraging."

"I think you are a remarkable person. I cannot understand why Sherdock should go into the Koko
Nor country looking for prince material and pick out a missionary's son when he had you at
home."

Temu broke into quick laughter. "Lynn, you're the joy of my life."

She bent towards him. "Are you really incorruptible?"

He took her wrists and bade
her, "Look in my eyes and tell me what you see."

She obeyed and presently nodded. "I suppose that's one of the reasons I admire you so much.
Am I no temptation at all to you?"

"O Tara Lynn!" he groaned, and jumped to his feet. He set about packing the things they would carry with them. "We must be going," he said.

The tramp to the yurt was a long and tiring journey to people shod in Mongol boots. It was afternoon before they reached the spot. The tent housed a large family for Mongolia: a husband,
a wife, and four children.

The man could spare none of the horses about the camp. But he sent his eldest son to bring in a pair of ponies from a herd in a lower valley. The boy could not return until the following morning.

Strange Evening
AT Temu's insistence, Lynn lay down and rested a bit on a pile of furs inside the yurt,
while he helped the family beat sheep's wool into felt on a level piece of sod near the well.

At dusk, along with a snow storm, a traveling lama arrived.
He had come to perform religious offices for the well-being of the family and for a bounteous increase to their flocks. When they all crowded into the yurt Temu came and sat down beside Lynn.

"It's late now, you had some sleep
this afternoon," he said. "There won't be much repose tonight
with the lama here."

Cornell Has All Any Good Grid Has—Plus Crop Instinctive Performers

By DILLON GRAHAM
Sports Editor, AP Feature Service
Ithaca, N. Y.—The secret of Cornell's football success may be that Carl Snaveley's striders instinctively do the right thing.

That means a combination of talent, experience, and through drilling in fundamentals. Add generous portions of imagination, and the love of play and you have footballers who make correct moves instinctively.

That's Cornell, voted the nation's No. 1 team in the Associated Press poll of coaches and sports writers October 29.

Cornell doesn't have Minnesota's power, Ohio State's trickery or a triple-threat ace to compare with Michigan's Tom Harmon. But the Cornell can turn on a short blast of power when they need it.

Mort Landsberg not only can muscle his way through a line for a precious first-down yard or two but is also a touchdown threat who can step on the accelerator and zip through the slightest opening.

The backfielders are smooth pigskin handlers although they don't try to copy the Buckeyes' magic. And while Cornell hasn't a Harmon it has a half dozen young athletes of far better than average ability and any one of them can go to town.

Matuszszak and McCullough are good handlers of the ball. McCullough is an able runner and a good passer. Matuszszak has few peers as a blocker. He loves to bowl them over. McCullough is a satisfactory kicker. As for the backfield subs, Lou Buffalo can knife through the tightest opening, run low and tear away the yards at top speed. Walter Schell, a little fellow of 162 pounds who can't take the heavy pounding of a full game, is the best of the passers. Vincent Eickler, a 193-pounder, is the Red's best bet solely as a line puncher.

First Rate Line
The line is good, very good. Heading the forewall is All-America Nick Dishon, at tackle, perhaps a trifle better than a year ago. Then there is Alva Kelley, whom Snaveley calls the best end he has ever coached and the other wingmen, Kirk Hirshey and Jim Schuck, all adept at Cornell's old favorite, the end-around maneuver. Frank Finerman, a ball-hawk, is a mobile center while Howard Dunbar is a whizz a guard.

Time after time, in the second half, this line stopped Ohio State's power and deception cold. Many times the Buckeyes faced fourth-down with still 10 yards to go. The Red wall couldn't be dented or turned.

In the Ohio State affair—major contest for Cornell and a top game for the Buckeyes—Cornell showed that it could take a pounding, stand up under it and come back to win. Ohio State demonstrated that it lacked the fire to retaliate under adverse conditions.

Few teams have appeared as powerful as the Buckeyes who overthrew the forewall is All-America Nick Dishon, at tackle, perhaps a trifle better than a year ago. Then there is Alva Kelley, whom Snaveley calls the best end he has ever coached ahead. That was the difference.

Spirit Not There
It would be foolhardy to say that Ohio State, one of the best in the Midwest as shown by its close games with Minnesota and Northwestern was not as well drilled as Cornell. Or that it had less talent than the Ithacans. It just didn't have the come football instinct and will-to-win.

Cornell's victory in what appears its biggest hurdle—and it is now likely to go unbeaten again this year—is a triumph for the coaching of Carl Snaveley, a precisionist who observes the smallest detail and is satisfied with nothing short of perfection.

There has been a charge that Snaveley signaled plays from the bench. So many of Cornell's long gains against Ohio State were made as a result of instinctive actions that we think a good reply to this charge—whether it is true or not—is, as one writer expressed it: "Snaveley can't signal his boys to reverse their field while they're on the dead run."

G-MEN JOURNEY TO ELIZ. CITY

Locals to Tangle with '39' Conference Champs

By C. B. ROWLETT
The Flying Green Phantoms of Greenville High School will attempt their toughest battle of this year's schedule this afternoon when they invade the highly-touted Elizabeth City Yellow Jackets gridiron. The game will start at 3 o'clock.

The Yellow Jackets, after shelling everything in the Northeast and winning the big gold trophy in 1939, took on several other foes and were beaten out of a chance to represent the eastern half of the state in the Class B conference, only in the final round.

Those Elizabeth City boys have what it takes to win, a fast, shifty, combination, with plenty of spark power, a hard running and kicking backfield with perfected blocking to clear the way.

The Phantoms and the Yellow Jackets did not tangle last season and some dispute was made over it because the local high did not get a chance at the high riding Elizabethians. The Greensies ended up second in the standings, right behind Elizabeth City, so a game was scheduled for this season.

The Phantoms are rated as underdogs in today's tilt but they have a habit of playing their best when the chips are down. Eganoke Rapids can testify for the fact.

But to get back to the Phantoms and our own high team. Although slated for the worst licking of the season the Phantoms don't seem worried and the fans can expect the best from them.

Coach Farley's line-up will probably consist of Larry James and John Collins at ends, Paul Scott and Spencer Carroll at tackle, Sydney Johnson and Noah Lee Edwards at guard, H. R. Goodall at center, GHS's own pony backfield, made up of J. B. Kittrell, Dewey Page, Bill Britt, and John Spearman.

Incidentally the Elizabeth City boys have thwarted all scoring thrusts this season made by their opponents but the G-Men are a hard lot to keep out of the promised land.

Vie For Honors At Duke Saturday

Here are some of the boys who will battle for top individual honors in the Duke-Georgia Tech grid battle in Duke stadium Saturday afternoon. In the above layout are Ralph Plaster, Tech's fine quarterback; Johnny Bosch, the 140-pound engine tailback who is the key man of their "hot magic" display; and Captain Neil Cavette, guard, who is one of the long distance punters of football. Duke boys who are shown are Jap Davis, 200-pound fullback who has been going great guns since recovering from an early season injury. Wes McAfee, the Duke passer who still hasn't ever had intercepted, and Steve Lach, Duke halfback who is looking like another Ace Parker and Eric Tipton in every game.

Man About Manhattan

By George Tucker
New York—About two years ago I dropped into one of the Broadway clubs and saw a lanky, red-headed comedian by the name of Danny Kaye put on his act. To me, he seemed funny. Not all comedians do. A few minutes later Billy Rose walked up to him and told him he thought he was one of the cleverest comedians he had ever seen. That was high praise.

Looking back on that night I recall a little song that Kaye sang. It was "Sweet Molly Malone." "I picked it up in Dublin," he explained. "I heard somebody sing it on some crowded Dublin street, and I liked it."

Today this song has become a great hit in the East. I suppose you can find it recorded by many people, but the one I like best of all is Maxine Sullivan. Her rendition of it is the record of the month.

Hollywood Sights And Sounds

By Robin Coons
Hollywood—Esther Ralston is a girl you can believe when she says she doesn't care about Hollywood any more.

Esther flew into town for a role in "Tin Pan Alley." It wasn't a big part—nothing to compare with the assignments she used to get in her starring days. It took less than a week to put her impression of the late Nora Bayes on the screen—just one of the characters of the colorful (in retrospect) period covered by the film.

She left here two years ago happily married to Ted Lloyd, Broadway columnist and radio man, after two ventures in matrimony had ended in divorce. Her movie career, once brilliant, had hit the doldrums. Today she doesn't even remember the titles of the last three or four pictures she made before saying goodbye.

Many a former star returns to Hollywood briefly, colly ever with hope that this will mean the beginning of a triumphant comeback. Not so with Esther. She's a New Yorker now. She has a husband and a daughter (Mary Esther, nine years old now) and a part-time career in radio and on the stage. She says she'd like to come back once or twice a year for a picture now that the airways make travel so quick

Pitt County Teachers Meet
Pitt county teachers held their regular monthly meeting Wednesday evening at the Pitt County Training school at Grimesland. The group assembled in the auditorium at 6 o'clock for the opening and short business session. At 7 o'clock they retired to different classrooms for sectional meetings and returned at 8 o'clock for the evening program. The program committee presented a program from the Training school. A very fine program was rendered by the choral group. After the program the guests were taken over the buildings on an inspection tour. The Training school has made a number of changes during the summer and fall and presented a very fine appearance in classrooms, lunch room, auditorium and grounds. Work is still going on for the improvements begun by the board of education and will soon present a finely equipped school site. Another bus has been added and the number of high school students greatly increased. Home economics department is also under repair and with the farm agent will be prepared to give more efficient service to the community.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, Nov. 1.—(AP)—Profits looked good to many traders in today's stock market after yesterday's sharp upswing. The result was that an early extension of the drive failed to follow through and gains of fractions to a point or so for steels, utilities, rails and an assortment of industrial specialties were shaded near the fourth hour. Dealings, fast at the start, slowed as prices slipped.

Decline Noted In Building In City

For the successive month residential construction work in Greenville was unusually low, a check today of building permits issued during October revealed.

Permits for repairs were issued during the past 31 days and only two of those were for new buildings, both tenant houses, the other permits being for repairs. Total cost of the projects was estimated at $4-165. No estimate was made for one repair job.

In September six permits were issued for work to cost $5,150. Permits were issued to Reynolds May to erect a tenant house on Ward street at a cost of $1,800, and to Mrs. L. B. Garris to erect a tenant house on Sixth street at a cost of $1,000.

Permits for repairs were issued to the following: Lawrence Anderson repair porch, no cost estimated; Robert Parker, building on West Fifth street, $30; Ella Wood, dwelling on East First St., John A. Bullock, dwelling on Vance, $1,200; K. Spivey, dwelling on Seventh street, $100.

Production of snuff, less than four million pounds in 1880, reached 38,000,000 pounds in 1939.

Roaring Fire Threatens Army Code Center

A roaring fire at the War Department Munitions building in Washington destroyed a newly built addition and did extensive damage to sections housing a mass of records, some of them secret. There was no immediate official statement as to importance of documents destroyed or damaged, but one building guard declared the partially-burned wing was the most important part of the department.

Indications Of Big Vote Seen For State Tuesday

Reflector Bureau. By HENRY AVERILL Raleigh, Nov. 1.—While professional politicians continue to contend that lack of local contests will cut sharply into next Tuesday's vote in North Carolina, there are indications that the total Tar Heel suffrage is going to be tremendous. Certainly, local election officials are in position to tell something about the likelihood of big turnouts in their counties, and it is very significant that almost every county election board is besieging the state board of elections for more presidential ballots, thus showing clearly that the people's interest is at its keepest in the contest between "The Champ," President Franklin Delano Roosevelt, and the challenger, Wendell Willkie.

To begin with the state board had a million and a half ballots printed. All but 5,000 have been sent to county boards; yet yesterday aides of Secretary Raymond Maxwell were busy placing rush orders for the printing of an additional supply of presidential tickets.

The state board's office reports that its information indicates a record registration in almost every county of the state. That doesn't look like a small turnout, particularly in view of the fact that new registrations were ordered in almost two-thirds of the counties this year. With all these facts in mind, your reporter feels inclined to crawl out on the end of a limb and predict that the 1940 presidential vote in North Carolina will exceed that of 1936 when 616,141 electors deposited votes for Roosevelt while 223,283 were voting for Alf Landon. That's a grand total of 839,424.

So here's a forecast of an 850,000 total. Without making an alibi in advance it is obvious that this is based on the presumption that next Tuesday will be reasonably clear. A blizzard or even a day-long drizzle could keep thousands from the polls, particularly in the east where Democrats often feel it isn't necessary for them to go to much trouble, anyway.

The division of this total, assuming it is cast, between the President and Willkie is something else again. On the surface there does not appear to be any great groundswell of G. O. P. strength such as was apparent for Hoover or rather against Al Smith in 1928 when the state cast its electoral vote for a Republican for the first time in decades.

On the other hand there is concededly a percentage of Democratic defection; but what that percentage is will probably remain a deep, dark mystery until the ballots are counted next Tuesday night.

The Democratic state organization has worked harder, perhaps than in years. Rallies have been held in almost every one of the hundred counties. District rallies have been staged in every one of the eleven Congressional units. Independent speakers have made the welkin ring from hundreds of hustings.

Headquarters here, aware of the necessity to depend on its own work and not on local candidates, has even tried to keep touch with every precinct chairman in the approximately 1,913 voting places.

Per contra, according to the word the Latins had for it, the regular G. O. P. hasn't been unduly active; but recently there has been a flood of costly "Democrats for Willkie advertisements." The rebels do not appear to have perfected their organization down into the precincts, but seem to be relying on deep seat re- sentiment at the New Deal and the Third Term.

Your reporter reserves a forecast of how those 850,000 votes will be split. That's another story for another day nearer voting time.

France May Renew Axis Discussions

Berlin, Nov. 1.—(AP)—Sometime, somewhere, under a plan not yet arranged, representatives of France, Germany and Italy may meet to continue discussions started between Adolf Hitler and Marshal Petain, authorized sources said today without, however, committing themselves beyond envisaging such possibilities.

They said the fundamental facts underlying such discussions, however, would be on one hand, that France started and lost the war hence must pay; and on the other hand that the Axis will be guided both by a desire to be decent to a vanquished enemy and by a feeling of responsibility toward a new peaceful Europe.

The Axis will not impose conditions humiliating to France, nor will it strip France of its African empire, but she "must pay for the war" these authorized sources continued, leaving open whether they meant that France might have to give up part of her colonial possessions.

To Call For Bids On Eastern Road

Bids have been asked for building the four miles of highway between the end of pavement on N. C. 115 in Martin County to N. C. 125, at the next letting of the Highway Commission, according to a statement today by N. G. Bartlett, Secretary of the Eastern Carolina Chamber of Commerce, which organization has been actively interested in getting this small piece of road paved for the past two or three years.

When this stretch is completed it will open up a nearer route from Greenville to Norfolk by all paved roads than at the present time. Citizens along the route have been working to get this piece connected by hardsurface for the past dozen years or more.

"It will eventually open up another North and South Route through Eastern Carolina," Secretary Bartlett said. With North-South traffic increasing every year, it is the belief of those most interested in this project that here will be sufficient travel to give all the main highways plenty of business.

Much Interest In General Election

J. H. Harrell, chairman of the Pitt County Board of Elections, declared today that requests for absentee ballots indicated a heavy vote in the election next Tuesday.

In the last general election some over 9,000 votes were cast in Pitt county and Chairman Harrell predicted that possibly that many would be cast next week.

The tickets have been printed and the chairmen will start distributing them to the registrars of the various precincts tomorrow.
