Secretary Hull Defends Roosevelt's Foreign Policies; Willkie Charges Neglect of Defense

By The Associated Press President Roosevelt traveled across New York State today, moving toward Ohio and the fifth of his major campaign addresses, and Wendell L. Willkie prepared one of his final bids for votes in New York City.

Closing the last full week of campaigning before the ballots are cast next Tuesday, the democratic nominee will speak tonight in Cleveland at 9 p.m. EST, and his Republican opponent will make an address in New York's Madison Square Garden at 10:15 EST.

Willkie at the end of an 18,000 mile campaign tour, rested today after replying in a radio address last night to Mr. Roosevelt's speech in Boston Wednesday evening. He charged the President with "deceptive optimism" in declaring that the nation was making "very rapid progress" toward an aircraft production goal of 50,000 planes a year.

ITALY RENEWS ASSAULTS ON GREEK CITIES

Strategic City of Salonika Reported Hardest Hit

GRECIAN ARMEN ATTACK TARGETS

Defenders Declared To Be Holding Italians In Sections Where Invaders Not Pushed Back

Athens, Nov. 2.—(AP)—The Italian air force resumed its attacks against Greece today, bombing Canei on Corfu island and the port of Patras, where about 10 casualties were caused.

About 50 bombs were dropped in the latest attack on Patras.

Athens also had an air raid alarm of 20 minutes, but its watchers sighted no planes.

These attacks followed widespread raids in which the government said nearly 300 were killed and wounded yesterday.

The strategic city of Salonika was reported hardest hit in the sudden burst of aerial warfare with 59 killed and 84 injured in four raids yesterday. The government said "generally no military target was hit" and charged that "all the raids were directed against civilians."

Over the Epirus district in the northwest the Italians dropped pamphlets declaring the invaders had "good dispositions" toward the Greeks and would respect their women, traditions and customs.

The tiny Greek air force pitched in to aid the nation's hard-fighting ground forces, bombing and strafing Fascist troops wherever they could find them in the wild mountainous area along the Greek border.

Exchange Telegraph, British news agency, said Greek planes blasted at two Italian airdromes in Albania. The report added that Greek troops fighting at close quarters with cold steel had occupied a strategic height dominating Koritza, Albania.

In all sectors of the front where they have not actually succeeded in pushing the Italians back, the Greeks said, the defenders were holding firm.

Chest Talk Made By Rev. W.A. Ryan

By WYATT BROWN

Failure of the community chest campaign to raise the budget this year would be evidence of the absence of the desire on the part of the public to support the agencies under the chest, declared W. A. Ryan last night in his address over radio station WGTC.

The public has been informed of the need of the agencies and the part they play in the community life, and it is impossible to complete a canvass of residential districts as well as business and tobacco sections of the city has been made, he said.

Mr. Ryan said a study of the donations this year reveal smaller contributions from persons than in previous drives. With an increased budget, increased pledges are essential to the success of the campaign, he explained.

Appealing to everyone who has not yet donated or who feels their donation might be increased, Mr. Ryan urged that the office of the mayor at the city hall be called where workers are on duty and will be glad to bring a new card.

In view of the nature of the tobacco industry it has been impossible to make a complete canvass of the factories and warehouses in time to get into the press today. The city schools and college have not sent in complete reports yet. Headquarters would like to hear from anyone in the residential districts who have not been called on.

City Truck Will Aid In Removing Leaves

C. K. Beatty, superintendent of the Greenville street department, declared today that anyone who wishes to have leaves removed can do so by calling 3538.

The home-owner is required to pile the leaves, but the city will remove them immediately upon being called. Superintendent Beatty declared.

In connection with the announcement of the city's willingness to help, Mr. Beatty urged citizens to keep the leaves raked up in order to present a cleaner city.

Italians In Double-Header Attack

Italian troops driving into Greece from the Albanian frontier (1) have launched two attacks against defending Greek mountain troops. The principal attack, starting from Koritza, apparently is aimed at Greek positions in ancient Piosideria Pass at the northern end of the Greek-Albanian frontier.

The British Air Ministry news service, even while other forces forecast a mechanized offensive by Italy on the Greek war front.

Authorized military sources in London said Fascists were moving mechanized equipment—tanks, armored cars and artillery—through Albania toward the western coastal zone of Greece and they expected a big-scale drive to follow the "battle of outpost" under way since Monday.

Greek and Italian warplanes exchanged blows; Berlin and London were jarred overnight by the crash of exploding bombs.

The British Air Ministry news service, in a summary, placed Nazi plane losses at 2,453 since the intensive air raids on Britain started August 8—an average of slightly more than 200 planes a week for 12 weeks.

The Air Ministry estimated over 6,000 German airmen had been killed or taken prisoners in that period and declared German losses in bombers and fighters were about three planes and 14 airmen for every British plane and man lost.

The Air Ministry announced new and more destructive raids on railway communications in Berlin and on oil and other industrial plants, including the Krupp munitions works in Essen.

The Nazis aided by Italian planes were equally busy, striking toward London today in the face of strong opposition from ground batteries and squadrons of British fighters.

Nazi planes and long range guns on the French coast bombarded a British convoy, apparently without much success.

Other planes streaked toward London, which had three alarms by noon. Most of the planes were repelled.

With this week's session of Superior court completed, no more criminal courts scheduled for this year, the next session being set for January.

A civil term of court, however, is scheduled to start here on Monday, November 18.

Only a comparatively small number of cases were removed from the criminal docket during the past week of court, two of the cases having consumed much of the time.

Two Negroes are being held in jail awaiting trial in Superior court. One is Charlie Wright, held on a breaking, entering and larceny charge, and the other is Jarvis Edwards on a liquor count.

Fascists Reported To Be Moving Tanks, Armored Cars And Artillery Through Albania For Mechanized Offensive; Total German Plane Losses Stated At 2,433

Facilities of Radio Station WGTC Added For Providing Reflector Election Returns

On next Tuesday night the Reflector will stage its twelfth Presidential Election Returns matinee since the paper entered the daily field in 1894. During all these years the paper has taken advantage of every available means of communication to compile the returns as quickly as possible and make them available to the people of Pitt county.

The building of our local radio station WGTC this year affords another facility for getting our reports to the public more quickly and The Reflector has procured the services of the station for next Tuesday night to broadcast Reflector returns just as fast as they are received. This broadcasting of the election returns does not do away with any of the services we have been rendering, but is just an added service for the people of our county who for years have depended upon The Reflector for first hand information on elections and other news happenings.

Next Tuesday night we will stage our regular election party in front of our office including the posting of returns and announcements over our own loudspeaker system and as usual we will issue our Election Extra just as soon as enough returns are in to indicate clearly the result. But for those who find it inconvenient to be present at our office we have added the facilities of the radio in order that in the comfort of your own home and fireside you may turn your radio dial to 1560, station WGTC and receive The Reflector election returns as the counts throughout the country progress.

We are confident Reflector readers and the citizens of Pitt county in general will appreciate this extra effort on our part to live up to our past reputation and continuous policy of rendering the best possible service at all times.

Draft-Dodging Once Was Legal

By SIGRID ARNE
AP Feature Service Writer

Washington.—It was April, 1775. New England trees were greening. Men were plowing when they heard shots across Massachusetts hills. They rushed home, rammed gunpowder into their muzzle-loaders. The Revolution was on.

Those men were answering this country's first conception of a draft. Not until 132 years later, in 1917 did we adopt the modern conscription plan for raising armies.

In the meantime we had fought five major wars. We had become pretty irritated with each other over the manner in which the armies were raised.

The old idea was that every able-bodied male would spring to the defense of his country. But history shows that volunteers were willing to shoot it out for their own barns, but didn't like tramping hundreds of miles to shoot it out for somebody else's barns.

take command he found 17,000 volunteers collected in various and assorted uniforms. But later as he ranged back and forth across the colonies he had less and less support until by 1781, when he rushed to Yorktown, he had only 2,000 loyal troops. It's nobody's secret that the French at Yorktown saved the day, and incidentally ended the war.

Why the depleted ranks? Because militia had two crutches: The men thought of themselves as local—very local—defenders, and they enlisted only for short periods, three months to a year. So Washington fought with a virtually new army each year.

He grew so bitter he wrote the Continental Congress, "I am sorry to mention the egregious want of public spirit. Such stock-jobbing I never saw before, and pray God's mercy I never witness again."

Finally Congress offered bounties to men to fight. First, $4; finally, as much as $250. Washington suggested they throw in 100 acres of a suit of clothes and a blanket.

After the war, Washington drew up a plan for raising armies requiring at least a year's military training for all young men. It would have meant 21,000 men training each year in his time and some 700,000 now. But the plan didn't go into effect until this year with the universal military training bill.

Fought For Their Homes

Take the Revolution. The first shots at Lexington touched off a surge of patriotism. By the time Washington rode into Boston in set out for home. Scott was bogged down in enemy territory for three months until new troops reached him.

In the Civil war we really began to have trouble.

Again army officers were forced to fight with men who came on deck for three months to a year and then left just as they became familiar with the business end of a gun. So in March, 1863, Congress passed a draft law. It was compulsory, but it left loopholes that raised hob.

One provision said that a drafted man could buy exemption for $300. That raised the cry, "It's the rich man's money and the poor man's blood."

Another said a drafted man could pay for a substitute. That mushroomed a queer business, "substitute brokers." For a price they would find men who would fight. Fees ran up to $250. New York papers carried ads for brokers who guaranteed to find 1,000 substitutes for $100 each.

"Substitutes for $100 each. 'Substitutes' thought up a racket of their own. They would enlist in one state, collect the fee, and desert. The same stunt would be pulled in other states as quick as they could get there. These men were called "bounty jumpers." Many collected enough to buy farms.

Riots in New York

Resentment was running high by the time the draft in New York City started. When it was over such bloody riots had taken place that they stuck up with actual battles in the Civil war.

The draft started on schedule July 11, 1863. But the next day Sunday, crowds milled around saloons in lower Manhattan and by Monday morning a mob had formed to parade uptown. That afternoon a draft office on the upper East side was burned.

For four days the mob of 70,000 seethed over the island, burning killing, hanging. It stopped only when troops were recalled from the Pennsylvania battle fields. Between 300 and a thousand people were slain. Property damage ran up to $5,000,000.

From that time on America's military men knew that another draft must be spread evenly over the whole population.

But anti-drafters were strong, too, rioting for four days in New York.

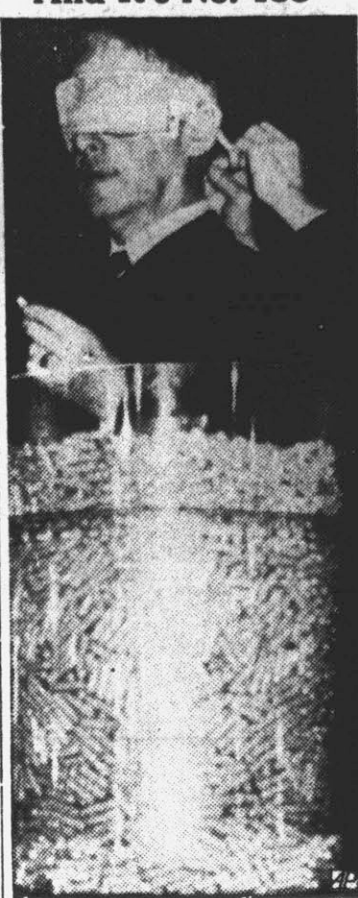

In the World war Secretary Newton D. Baker of war, headed drawing which called up three million men.

In the Civil war many joined up willingly when first draft summoned them...

And It's No. 158

Secretary of War Stimson at Washington holds the capsule he has just drawn from the draft lottery bowl. It was No. 158 and became the first number in the first peacetime draft lottery. In the bowl are the others of the 9,000 capsules which were drawn.

If You Know Yourself, You Know Your Colors

By MARGARET KERNODLE
AP Feature Service Writer

New York—There's a little red-haired woman in Manhattan who has made a big business out of prescribing colors for personality.

You can buy gay rugs and lamps match your draperies and upholstery, paint your walls, select your clothes, and even your cosmetics by her 20th century color cards.

She is Mrs. Bernice Bowser and you can go to her beautiful modern office for a CP rating.

Bernice Bowser sells color, insists on turquoise in every room of her apartment.

Her idea isn't brand new. It sounds so obvious you can hardly believe it ever was a money-making scheme much less, understand exactly how it got involved in so many things you're likely to be buying.

System Used By Others

She sells you your own color personality. That's CP. She determines it by matching your skin, eyes and hair with color cards and letting you see the effects in mirrors. Her system is now used widely by others too.

Right off the bat she'll say, "You can wear your favorite color regardless of your skin and hair if you select the right tint or shade."

If your eyebrow goes up on that one, she'll probably send it higher by this "Nobody can feel poor who sees color."

She'll tell you that only about four per cent of us are color blind physically, but she'll show you case histories that make about 50 per cent of us seem color blind mentally.

Hat Or Bathtub

Her color business is based on charts that show you what color of hat or bathtub you should buy to best suit your skin, hair and eyes.

She utilizes the law of physics which she learned by listening to her husband, a pioneer lighting engineer, and graphs she secured from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

She leans heavily on her knowledge of color gained in studying art in Paris.

Mrs. Bowser hasn't always been a success. When her husband died her life added up about like this: A runaway bride at 18, a wife who carefully watched experiments with the first lamp that switched from daylight to artificial light; an ardent collector of ceramics with never a thought of having to know anything about facts and figures.

Tried Other Fields

Her Paris job as representative of about 20 American manufacturers collapsed. She tried to be a decorator. She invaded department stores and eventually built her business on the only things she knew—lighting color and people.

She was the first American woman to work as a home lighting specialist.

She's learned that men are more logical than women in choosing color for themselves.

She explains that women forget that their skin and hair change color between the ages of 45 and 65.

DOES GOD STILL SPEAK TO MAN?

Is there still communication between God and man? Does God speak to men as He is reported in the Bible to have spoken to them centuries ago?

Not in the same way perhaps. But of this we can be sure. God speaks to the heart of man today as He has spoken to His chosen ones through the ages. He spoke to Moses, Samuel, John the Baptist, Peter, Paul, in words distinct and audible. There were others to whom God spoke not in audible words, but through great circumstances or by the silent rushing of His Spirit into their hearts. Thus did He speak to John Calvin as he saw men burned at the stake, unflinching and counting it a privilege thus to suffer for their faith. God spoke to John Wesley in the heart-warming experience which he had one May in 1738 at a Moravian prayer meeting in Aldersgate Street, London. God spoke to Dwight L. Moody in an experience he had on Boston Common, and on the streets of New York in later years when his heart was raised up to new heights of spiritual power.

THE ELECTION AND THE WAR

All this political talk about either of the presidential candidates getting America into the war or keeping us out of the war is, in our opinion, just so much political propaganda to scare the American people into voting for or against a candidate. All of us realize that America and both the presidential candidates are committed to all possible aid to Britain, short of actual war, and all of us likewise realize, that in our present role of a non-belligerent ally, we can serve England better than if we were actually officially engaged in the conflict. So the question of America's actual entry into the war will depend on the Axis powers. When the stage is reached in the present conflict that the Axis powers feel that they can best curtail America's help to England by having America actually join the conflict, we may rest assured that the overt act or incident to bring America officially into the war will take place and if and when this does take place, America will enter the war regardless of who is elected to the presidency on next Tuesday. In 1916 we elected a Pres. ident of the United States on the slogan "He kept us out of war," and a few months later we were actually in the war, not because the President put us there, but because the President was powerless to prevent it. It is democracy that during our political campaigns there should be a full discussion of the issues facing our country, but we do hats to see this effort to stage a fear campaign that will becloud the real issues upon which the election should be decided.

Washington Daybook

By Jack Stinson

Washington—Answering the mail orders: T. C. Garrison, N. Y.—The present session of Congress will have to last until December 23 to break the record for the longest sitting on record. It already is the second largest and the "gentlemen's agreement" for three-day recesses now in operation does not come to an end until November 18, so there is a good chance that the record will be broken. The longest sitting of Congress was the second session of the 65th—the World War Congress—which convened on December 3, 1917 and adjourned November 21, 1918 remaining in session a total of 354 days. The present "gentlemen's agreement" is actually a long recess of some five weeks, during which a "skeleton staff" meets every three days and recesses for another three days. The principal part of the agreement is that no effort will be made to handle any official business—thus allowing the representatives and those senators up for reelection to go home and mend their political fences with a clear mind and a certainty that no one will try to slip over any legislation to which they are opposed.

D. L. K. Amarillo, Texas—My prediction was right that if John J. "Jack" Dempsey, New Mexico representative, were defeated in his race for the Senate nomination, he would remain in the national political picture. "The man who saved the Hatch act in the House" has been appointed a member of the United States Maritime Commission to serve six years. The four-year-old Maritime Commission is a very powerful independent agency charged with development and improvement of our merchant marine and any member of it is in a position to do the government a real service. The Senate has not acted on Mr. Dempsey's appointment and will not act until the regular sessions are resumed late in November but so far indications are that he will be confirmed without opposition.

R. B. Grand Rapids, Mich.—It is true that the Civil Aeronautics Board has licensed manufacture of a "spineless plane" but you will have to write the board here for details. I can tell you that the present price is about $2,500 and that it is flown with a steering wheel but NO rudder bar. The board is conducting a series of tests to determine how long it takes a person to learn to fly one and how much longer it takes licensed pilots for this type of plane to learn to fly the regular type. The tests have not been completed, but early indications are that a person can learn to fly the spineless plane in about 20 hours, and adapt this knowledge to a regular type in 10 more. Incidentally, if you are interested in these small planes, you may want the opinion of aviation experts here that barring a rise in costs because of the defense program, there may be "fiver planes" on the market in two or three years that will sell for less than $1,000.

Mrs. M. J. Colorado Springs, Colo.—Application for the position of hostess at one of the army cantonments should be made to the commander of the corps area in which you wish to serve or to the commandant of the camp where you seek such appointment. There are only 99 such positions to be filled and the War Department here reports a flood of applications. Hundreds of these will have to be thrown out immediately, as it is apparent on the surface that the applicants are not equipped for the position. (The reason most frequently given for application for the job is that "I wish to be near my son.") If you are, as you say, a "motherly person" with years of experience as hostess-manager of a large tea-room, it would be my guess that your application would certainly receive consideration.

THE ROAD TO SHANI LUN

Chapter 33 Struggle By Night

AT five o'clock the boy returned with the extra horses. Temu paid for them and for the hospitality they had received, and shortly afterwards, led the way across the snow-clad plain under a threatening sky.

"We'll save time by crossing the mountains here," he said. "Do you know where we are?" Lynn asked, gratefully tucking her hands in the long sleeves of her Mongol coat and letting her pony have his head. The horses kept side by side at a steady pace.

"That's on the knees of the gods," he said shortly and urged his horse ahead. He did not seem to want to talk about it. They began a climb through a rocky gorge that looked like the dumping ground the contractor had used when they were finishing the mountain peaks for the Creator. The trail wound interminably hour after hour through the waste. They stopped a few minutes at noon for a bowl of hot tea and then pressed on into a rough plateau, thinly covered with snow in the places where dry grass lay abundantly around the rocky outcrops.

Temu said that Lynn was becoming tired and cold. "We'll soon reach a stone hut," he promised. "Can we sleep out?" she asked, drowsy and a bit breathless from the high altitude. "No," he said. "The night is cold with snow on the ground." He urged the horse forward at a faster pace, crossed another divide, and followed a stream around a mountain peak to an alpine valley where the hut with a few stone catapenas stood on a shelf above a perpendicular canyon wall. Tethered near the hut were three saddle horses.

Temu stopped. "Someone else is here tonight," he said in a troubled voice. "I don't like it." "Why?" asked Lynn, halting her horse beside his. "The place has a reputation of being a robbers' rendezvous. I don't think a moment before dismounting. Stay here," he said and disappeared into the hut through a low door, across which hung a camel skin. Lynn's pony sighed wearily and cocked an inquiring ear back at her.

"You don't feel any worse than I do," she answered, and looked up at the sky. Low, threatening clouds were smoothing themselves out in preparation for another snowfall. Temu reappeared. "Three of them," he said, leading the horses into one of the stone-fenced corals. "They're none too prepossessing but they're staying. One giant a fellow looks as if he might be a renegade professional wrestler from some Prince's retinue."

Lynn slid down into the snow. "Wait until I can go in with you," he advised, giving the horses their nosebags of grain and loosening the saddle. He concealed his field-glasses and electric torch in a saddle-bag. Then he turned to Lynn and began unwinding the sash from about her waist. He spoke crisply. "Keep on the fur cap, pulled low. Do not look the men in the face; they'll consider it an invitation to strike. He thrust a small pistol into her hand.

"It's loaded and on safety," he showed her how to handle the weapon. "Hide it in your blouse and do not use it unless I give the word. Do you understand?" She nodded, unable to speak. "Then put your saddle on your horse and follow me. Lynn drew back. "If it's that bad, can't we go on?" "We're between the devil and the deep blue sea. Keep up your courage. We'll come through all right."

Alone with Death LYNN followed him, stiff and white with apprehension. The inside of the small hut was bare except for the accoutrements and packs that the men had brought in. A small argol fire burned in the center of the room under a smoke hole in the sod roof. The floor was a bed of animal chips. Temu stacked the saddles and saddle bags in a pile and spread a robe for her.

The three men watched them in silent inhospitality, sitting them both up and their few belongings. Later, in the blackest part of the night just before dawn, Temu's senses were brought alert by the pressure of Lynn's hand on his shoulder. He turned over and her fingers explored his face and tilted it so that she could put her lips to his ear. His arm went around her, outside the robe, drawing her close. They lay for a while in tense silence.

Suddenly he made a spring and gave a twist to the stealthy arm that had been searching in the dark. A man half groaned, half screamed. A bullet from one of his comrades sang not far above Temu's head. He snatched the electric torch and turned it on. Never having seen such a light before, the two on the opposite side of the fire dropped their weapons and fell back, their hands in the air.

"Hold the light and keep them covered with your gun," Temu commanded Lynn. He had glimpsed the giant whose arm he had twisted preparing to come after him, a knife in his hands. Obeying instantly, Lynn was on her feet ready for action. One of the pair opposite started to lower his hands. She sent a bullet into the ground at his feet. It was all the warning they needed.

From the corner of her eye she watched Temu's struggle, his skill and agility matched by the other's maniacal strength and size. Temu managed to get the knife flipped away but could not break the fellow's hold on himself. They had gone to the ground almost immediately, Temu fighting for his life, the other fighting to kill.

Quickly Temu managed to get on top and clutch the man's neck, ram his thumb joints violently into the windpipe and jerk until the fellow's grip on him relaxed and the death gurgle had ceased. Then he rose panting. "On your guard still, Lynn!" He went to the door and cut strips of hide from the camel skin that hung across the opening. With this he bound the other man hand and foot. "Now," he said, coming back to Lynn and taking the gun and the flashlight from her hands, "now your job is done. Are you going to faint?"

"The question was just what she needed. It jolted her. "No," she replied, "I'm not going to faint. Is the man dead?" "Quite dead, poor fellow." "Would it help any to kill the other two?" He gave a quick, surprised laugh that eased the tension. "Not at all, Lynn, dear. They can fire themselves after we are gone. We must brew tea and get on our way." He sat about enlivening the fire and brought in snow to melt. "Can't we go at once?" she asked, crouching down near him. "It's best to eat first. Take the grain bag and go feed the horses."

She did as he bade her, and then washed her hands and face in the snow. When she came back, she saw that the dead man had been taken to a corner and decently covered with his sheepskins. His friends lay trussed like cattle. "Will they bury him?" she asked. "That's not the way Mongols usually do." Temu looked at her keenly. He caught her fingers and drew her down near the fire and gave her a bowl of tea.

"MORE snow fell last night," she said. "The horses carry white roofs on their backs." That day they crossed another bleak plateau and dropped over another divide, striking the trail that would take them down to the border of the desert. "Shall we reach the town tonight?" she asked. "I don't know," Temu replied, looking anxiously at his horses' hoofs and ankles. "This nag is going lame on me. I've an idea I'd better walk him the rest of the way."

She said, "If the revolutionists have taken the country it will not be safe for you to enter Dorchi." "Don't know it, Lynn?" "What?" she asked diffidently. "What will you do if such is the case?" "Let's not face it now." "Perhaps—perhaps you and I could work out something together." "I don't think so, Lynn." He refused to talk about it. "We know we have the present together. Let's play. Dine with me tonight in Peiping." "Make it San Francisco," she suggested, entering the game. "Not so good," he objected. "Your friends would take you away from me." She looked at him remembering his fine appearance in army uniform. "They'd probably take you away from me. We'll make it Peiping." "I'll take a table in an alcove and I shall forget the Prince and make love to you." "Then I must look very beautiful. It would be fun, Temu, to make you lose your head." "You don't know whether it would or not." She wished she wouldn't look at her so steadily. She lowered her head. "Wear white with blue violets to match your eyes," he told her. "There's a soft, white velvet dress I brought from San Francisco."

"Tell me about it." Her eyes were starry. "It has a train, and not too much above the waist and not too little. Really, Temu, I hardly know myself in it. I look like a dream." "I imagine you do, Tara Lynn. I've seen pictures of you in almost everything, in cap and gown, in tennis dress, in bathing suit." She looked startled. "Did Dick show around all those silly snapshots I sent him?" "He gave them to the Princess Mother."

Phantoms Overpowered 19-2 By Elizabeth City Jackets

E. CITY ELEVEN TOO POWERFUL

Locals First To Score On Jackets In Two Years

By C. B. ROWLETTE

Bo Farley's Flying Green Phantoms journeyed to Elizabeth City yesterday and ran into one of the er put on a field by a high school er put on a field by a high school coach. Although the Phantoms took a 19-2 licking at the hands of the Yellow Jackets they marred the record that the Elizabeth City boys were so proud of, not being scored on in two years of conference play.

Elbert Fearing, tailback, quarterback and captain of the highly touted Yellow Jackets proved to be too much for the boys in the Green and White. With the game three minutes old, Fearing high-tailed through the Phantoms for 75 yards and a touchdown. A little later on the part of one of Fearing teammates brought the ball back to the line of scrimmage and there the referee hung a 15 yard penalty on Elizabeth City for holding.

Fearing again came into the lime-light again later in the first period when he skirted end from the twenty yard line for a touchdown. Three first downs took the ball from the Elizabeth City thirty-five yard marker to the Phantoms twenty and that is where Fearing took the situation in hand. Allen Berry drove through center for the extra point and the Yellow Jackets led the Phantoms 7-0.

The Phantoms made an attempt to follow up the Yellow Jacket marker with a score by driving the ball to the Elizabeth City thirty yard line but a pass interception by Joe White, Yellow Jacket guard, broke up the threat.

It was Fearing again in the second quarter when he tossed the oval to wingback Charles Jones who took the ball to the Phantom eleven. Allen Berry, Jacket fullback, took the ball on a reverse from Fearing on the next play and the result was a score. An attempted place-kick for the extra point went wide but the half time whistle left the Phantoms on the short end of a 13-0 count.

The third quarter brought another score to the Yellow Jackets in the form of a pass from the hand of Fearing to the waiting arms of Ike Perry, right end. It was a 40 yard pass and that concluded the Yellow Jackets' scoring for the game but with the fourth quarter coming up and the Yellow Jackets on the big end of a 19-0 count, things looked a little on the dark side for the Phantoms.

Early in the fourth quarter a boot from the toe of Larry James went into the end zone where Fearing scooped it up to attempt to run the ball. Noah Lee Edwards and Spencer Carroll slowed the Elizabeth City ace up and Spearman and Musselwhite put the finishing touches on the play and the result was two points for the G-Men. This was the breaking of the no-score record which Elizabeth City has sported for the past two years, but even a two-point-year record is hard to beat.

Fearing was the big gun in the 16 first downs racked up by the conference champs against seven for the local boys. Fearing proved he was the triple-threat he was supposed to be when he continually dashed off yardage for the Yellow Jackets, did a fine job of booting, and completed three out of four passes.

Collins and James, Phantom ends, did a fine job in alternating in the kicking spot for the G-Men when they booted six times for a 39 yard average. This was eight yards better to the kick than Fearing could muster.

The entire Greenville eleven played a good brand of ball from the beginning to end but size and weight were too much for the light Phantoms.

Local Negro Boys Defeated In Ring

The boxing program held last night at the Ritz club on West Fifth street under the auspices of the local colored unit of the American Legion, Post No. 22, proved disastrous for the home talent.

Two of the three Greenville boys participating were defeated. Bobo Young was knocked out in the third round by Dick Faison of Farmville. Lee Phillips of Durham won on a technical knockout from George Williams of Greenville. Yung Pavlor of Greenville also won on a technical knockout over Tiger Taylor of Farmville.

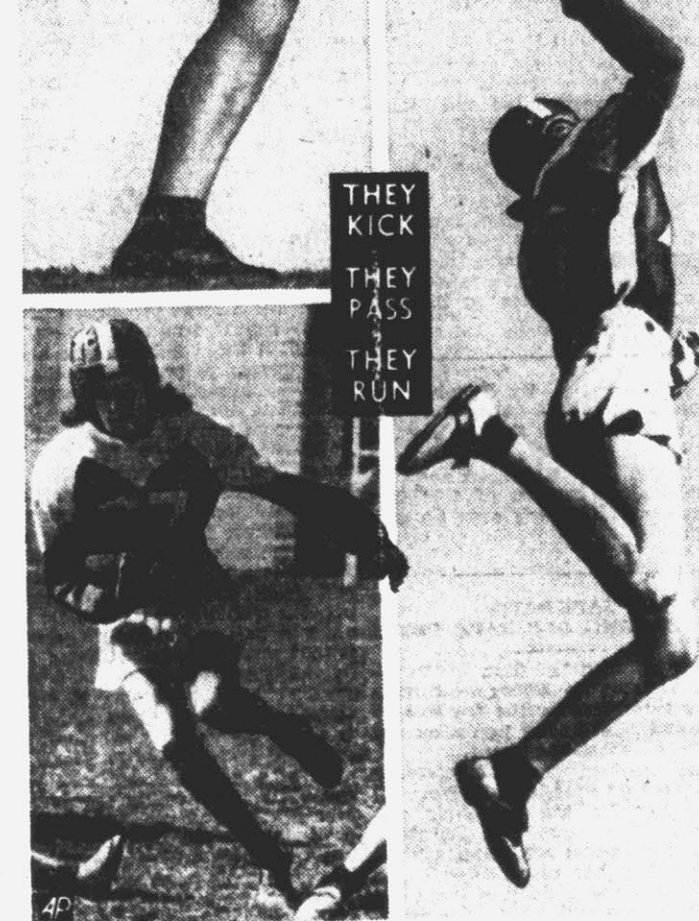

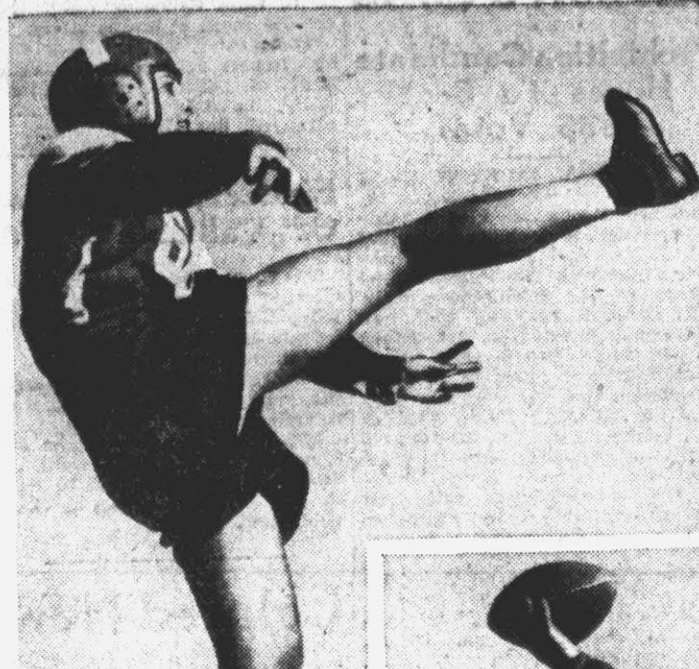

TRAFFIC COP KNOWS 1,000 LICENSE NUMBERS

Topeka, Kas. (AP) — If you have trouble remembering your license number you'll appreciate the accomplishment of Patrolman Bill Curry. He knows the license numbers and names of at least 1,000 drivers.

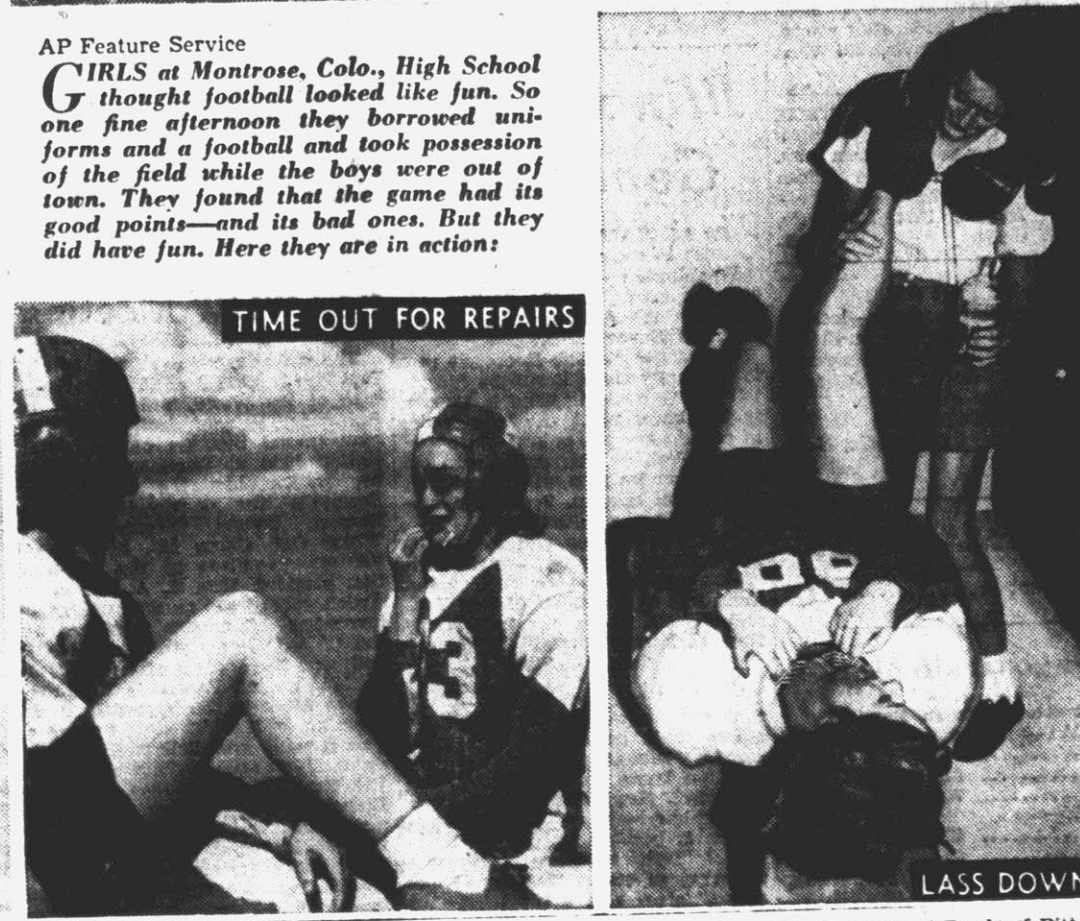

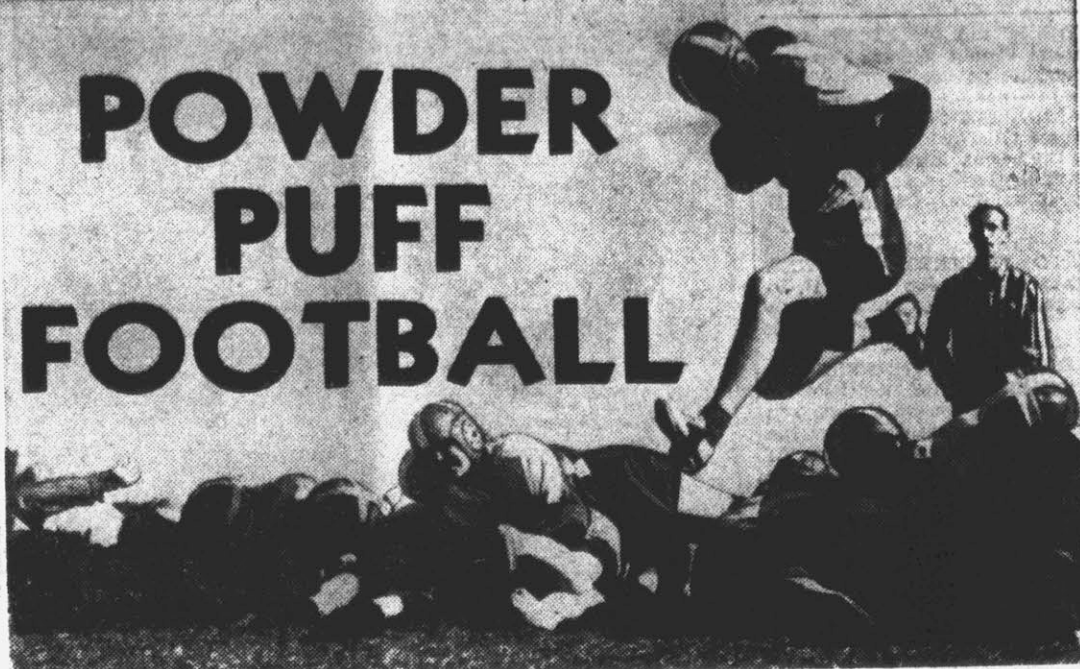

Curry keeps tabs on parking downtown. He knows from memory where a car was when he chalked the tire and whether it has been moved. It takes him about a month to memorize numbers at the end of the year.

Braille Extended To Cash Register. Terrehaute, Ind. (AP) — Hugh McGuire, blind manager of a post office machine stand, uses a cash register with keys numbered in Braille.

The invention is his own. A business machine company made it for him, but he had to explain the Braille system to company officials.

Illinois, New York Vote Good Indication of Trend

By ALEXANDER R. GEORGE AP Feature Service Writer Washington.—You can do your own "experting" on the election outcome as the returns come in the night of November 5. Unless the Wilkie-Roosevelt race is unusually close, it will be easy to tell which way the wind is blowing if you know what the vote trends in certain key states and cities portend. (Perhaps you can figure out the winner by 10 p. m. central time—11 p. m. eastern, 9 p. m. mountain and 8 p. m. Pacific.) Vote statisticians and non-partisan political observers are in general agreement as to such major indicators as the states of New York and Illinois. These two, particularly New York, may foretell the story. South Is Clue

Virtually all the experts figure that if Roosevelt carries both those states, he's in. Many believe he can lose Illinois, along with a flock of other large northern states, and still win if New York is in the Democratic bag. This is because Roosevelt's backlog of "sure" southern states, plus an array of states "leaning Democratic," gives him a big head-start statistically in the electoral column. However, if Wilkie is running close to Roosevelt in such Democratic strongholds as New York City and Chicago (Cook county), G. O. P. chances of corraling New York and Illinois will be very favorable. And Republican prospects for a national triumph will be excellent.

F. D. R. Took Both in '36 If Roosevelt's parallels, on the other hand, are piling up at 3-to-1 ratio in New York City and at better than 12-to-7 in Chicago as they did in 1936, then indications of his re-election will be impressive. Four years ago New York City gave the President 2,049,000 votes and London, 665,000—a Democratic plurality of more than 1,300,000. Outside New York City the state gave London 1,514,000 votes and Roosevelt 1,251,000, a Republican lead of 263,000.

Some statisticians believe Wilkie will have a fairly good chance to take New York state if he holds Roosevelt to a 3-to-2 lead in the nation's largest city. That's assuming of course that the Republicans will amass a maximum plurality upstate. Hoover won the state in 1928 when Al Smith led almost 3-to-2 in the city.

Industrial Cities Also Key These experts, however, consider it virtually impossible for the Republicans to overcome upstate a 2-to-1 Roosevelt margin in the city. That would give F. D. R. a city plurality of some 900,000 if the total vote were the same as in 1936.

Returns indicating Wilkie was making it a horse race in such industrial centers as Detroit, Pittsburgh and Cleveland, as well as running well in New York City would make the outlook rather dismal for the New Dealers. Roosevelt's greatest strength, outside the "solid south," is concentrated in the big cities. Should Roosevelt show 1936 vote-getting form in the big northern towns and run neck-and-neck with Wilkie in the small towns and agricultural districts, a Democratic victory would be rated a sure thing with a landslide as easy possibility. A decisive Wilkie lead in a majority of the border states—Oklahoma, Missouri, Kentucky, Maryland and West Virginia—would be a likely indicator of a Republican sweep. It usually takes a Republican landslide to put a majority of these states in the G. O. P. column.

MILLION VOTES BABSON'S GOAL

Prohibition Candidate Hopes To Beat 1936 Votes

By SAM JACKSON Los Angeles.—Roger Babson, famous for a generation as a business prophet, is doubling in politics this fall. He's carrying the presidential banner of the Prohibition party, and, although realizing that he's pretty well overlooked, he thinks he will make enough noise to attract a million votes. In 1936 the Prohibition vote was 350,000. It's a different, wider kind of prohibition that the 65-year-old analyst is preaching—one that appeals "not to liquor alone, but to all the commercialized evils that are undermining the character, health and earning power of the nation." "Our watchword is self-denial for the nation's good," he explains, "and we're going to have to force that self-denial on about 20 per cent of the population. We can leave the remaining 80 per cent to their consciences. But statistics show that 20 per cent of the American people are irresponsible, lawless or greedy and they have to be regimented and disciplined to protect the rest of us." Babson doesn't advocate "the fatal mistake of national prohibition." Regeneration from the bottom up is the party's aim, he says, and that regeneration may as well take in gambling, vice and naughty magazines. Above all, it must mean personal, self sacrifice, in Babson's opinion.

Palace Hit By Bomb

London, Nov. 2.—(AP)—Kensington palace, where Queen Victoria was born in 1819, has been damaged by incendiary bombs. Authorities permitted publication of this fact today, but said there were no casualties.

"STUKA" JACKDAWS KILLING OFF RARE BIRDS

Corpus Christi, Tex. (AP)—"Blitzkrieging" jackdaws are threatening extinction for the few roseate spoonbills and snowy egrets on the North American continent. The Audubon society maintains a sanctuary on an island in San Antonio bay for the spoonbills and egrets. This year the jackdaws started an aerial campaign against them. The big black birds sing out a nest and a flock of them begin swooping and diving around it. When the parents leave the nest the jackdaws gobble up the eggs.

Seeks To Reduce Fertilizer Rates

Raleigh, Nov. 2.—(AP)—J. G. Kerr of Atlanta, chairman of the Southern Freight Association today asked the State Utilities Commission for permission to make changes in fertilizer freight rates, which would result in lower charges on long hauls. H. M. Nicholson, director of the transportation in the commission, said the railways wanted authority to drop their 40,000-pound minimum schedule and lower the 60,000-pound rate for distances beyond 300 miles. Nicholson said the proposed change would "sharply lower" the charge for long hauls. He said the railways were seeking to make similar rate schedule changes throughout the southeast.

Britain Looks For Italian Offensive

London, Nov. 2.—(AP)—Authoritative British military sources say they expect Italy to launch a big-scale offensive against the Greek defense line on the southwest wing of the Albanian-Greek frontier battle line. The Italians are reported to be moving up artillery along this coastal flank. These sources said the fighting after almost a week is still a "battle of outposts."

BABSON

(Continued from page one) intellectual classes. Among the 27,000,000 voters on the winning side there was a large proportion of the highly educated and well-to-do. In considerable percentage of the so-called middle-class, not exactly intellectuals and certainly not rich. It would appear that out of the 44,000,000 votes cast for the two major candidates there were 34,000,000 voters who tied each other—one vote for, balancing another vote against. I am considering now the popular vote, not the electoral vote where the ratio made the result seem like a thunder clap of popular opinion. The 17,000,000 voters who backed London do not see it that way. They know that a shift in less than a million votes, some say 300,000, in a number of crucial states would have given London a majority of the electoral votes and put him in the White House. If even in a landslide like four years ago shift in less than two and a half per cent of the voters might have changed the final result, what can we expect now where the contest may really be close?

Armies Of Independent Voters

On November fifth, more than ever before, party lines will be ignored by millions. Great numbers of Wilkie Democrats have declared themselves, and, as was the case four years ago, there is a flood of Roosevelt Republicans. I am now making no definite forecast, but it certainly seems to me that the results next Tuesday will be determined by the independent voters. What makes independent voters? Certainly one factor is discontent with blind partisanship and disgust with party leaders. Again it is sheer restlessness and dissatisfaction with the way things are going. As the veteran Arizona Senator Ashurst gracefully declared, on his enforced retirement after forty years in the United States Senate: "It is the privilege of the people to displace an official and substitute another one, or for no reason, or for a bad one, or for no reason at all." That implies what we all know, that there is no accounting for what the electorate may do in any given situation. Facts, reason, vision, principle, may all play their part, but so do ignorance, prejudice, and passion. Remember that people are governed by their emotions far more than by their intellect. These confusing doubts are the marks of sovereignty of the world today who, in his right mind, would want to swap the American electorate for any other system of government? Are our voters wise? Will they do what is fundamentally right next Tuesday? Yes, I believe they will. The natural automatic checks and balances in our religion and body politic, representing among the voters every creed and element, provide a great saving grace. Remember, however, this free flow of human elements at the polls, combined with the provisions of our Constitution, give us the only security upon which we can count.

Nazi Bombers Are Repelled

(Continued from page one) Oil targets and 15 airdromes elsewhere in German-held territory also were attacked, the Air Ministry said. In the attack on Berlin, it was said, repeated hits also made by heavy bombs on railway communications. In Berlin it was said that a surprise attack by RAF raiders shortly after other British planes had bombed German-held Amsterdam caught thousands of Berliners in cafes and on the streets last night and set the capital's defense guns thundering in a volume not often equaled. A communique said at least 27 persons were killed in Amsterdam and "several" Berlin civilians were killed and injured.
