FEARED SEVEN ARE DEAD IN TEXAS FLOODS

Two Homes Swept Away In Southern Section Of State

STATE GRIPPED BY 3-DAY STORM

Galveston Experienced Worst Flood In History as Ten Inches Fell Within 24-Hour Period

Dallas, Texas, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Flood waters which swept away two homes in south Texas left seven persons missing and believed dead today as rising temperatures brought the menace of falling ice to harrassed Amarillo in the Panhandle.

A fishing camp employee in West Galveston, whose boat overturned, was the only known fatality in the three-day storm siege, which sheathed the Texas Panhandle in ice and sent eastern and southern Texas rivers raging.

(By The Associated Press) A snowstorm, blown before strong winds, whipped through the Midwest today as Texas rained from damaging floods and the east shivered in its coldest weather this season. The storm raced in a northwesterly direction from Texas. Snow was piling up in parts of Kansas, Nebraska, Missouri, Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, and was about to enter Michigan. At many points in Illinois and Indiana sheet ice preceded snow and the highways and damaged power lines. Storm warnings were displayed on all the Great Lakes.

But coast guard ships and volunteer workers were searching for a family of five and another family missing since the Brazos river washed their homes away at Brookshire, 30 miles west of Houston. The Galveston section poked out of a 10-inch rain which fell in 24 hours—heaviest in Galveston's history. Coast Guardsmen and Red Cross volunteers reported at Galveston they had saved hundreds of lives. New crests swept down central east Texas streams toward the inundated southwestern area. Southwestern Bell Telephone Company officials hoped to establish two-way communication between Amarillo and Fort Worth today. Power was restored to Amarillo located beneath its ice cap since early Sunday, in a limited downtown area last night and crews dug in to restore full power for pumping water. Temperatures above freezing and a mist started the ice melting last night, creating a hazard for pedestrians as the chunks fell.

Moves To Curb Strikes In Defense Industries

Bill Passed

Washington, Nov. 26.—(AP)—The Senate passed the controversial Logan-Walter bill today, 77 to 25.

The bill, designed to facilitate appeals to the courts from administrative rulings of executive agencies of the Federal government, has already passed the House. It now goes back there, however, for action on several amendments.

The Senate action came sooner than members had expected after Democratic Leader Barkley of Kentucky announced that despite his opposition to the measure and his belief that action should be deferred, he was prepared to vote at once.

NEED ENGINES FOR AIRPLANES

To Curtail Commercial Orders as Big Shortage Looms

Washington, Nov. 26.—(AP)—The War Department acted today to freeze plane production for commercial airlines at the present level and simultaneously disclosed that "a very large shortage" of engines for the nation's expanding military and naval air force was in prospect for next spring.

Secretary Stimson announced at a press conference that the department had asked the War Relocation Authority to prevent an increase in the number of planes going to commercial air services. The request was made, Stimson said, in the interest of supplying American and British needs for bomber and fighter airplanes.

At the same conference an aide of the War Department chief explained "a very large shortage" of engines similar to those used in commercial transports was in prospect for the fighting forces early next spring because of the time lag required to get new engine facilities into production.

At the moment, the aide added, one make of big four-motor bombers "are being accepted without engines." General George C. Marshall, chief of staff, announced recently that in order to power such motorless planes, the army had obtained rights to engines being manufactured for the British, giving the British priority instead to other bombers already rolling off the production line.

At the outset of the conference, Stimson declared the Douglas Aircraft Company was now delivering planes to commercial lines at the rate of 12 a month, although it had been 80 days behind schedule in delivering the test plane on an army order for 186 dive bombers.

Winterville Coal Robbery Cleared

The Pitt county sheriff's department has broken up what it believes to have been a big-scale coal stealing and selling racket in Winterville, with the Winterville Cotton Oil Company the victim.

Sheriff J. Knott Proctor declared that quantities of coal have been stolen from the company over a period of two or three weeks. They were called to investigate a day or so ago and last night made several arrests and secured confessions from some of the defendants.

Theodore Cannon, laborer for the concern, was described as the ring leader and was aided in stealing the coal by Wallace Moore, alias Dad, and Johnnie Respass, alias Monk, all Negroes, who sold the coal to Frank Worthington, operator of a pressing club, Jesse Hooks and other Negroes in the Winterville community.

Conference On Problem Called By Chief Executive

Washington, Nov. 26.—(AP)—President Roosevelt announced today that he had called in defense advisors today for a conference on strikes in national defense industries.

Invited to the afternoon meeting were Secretary Stimson, Secretary Knox, Attorney General Jackson and Sydney Hillman, labor member of the Defense Commission.

Stephen Early, White House press secretary, said in announcing the conference that the men were called to "discuss labor in relation to national defense, including the difficulties of strikes, etc."

The discussion started at 2 p. m., EST, and followed a luncheon conference between the President and Bernard M. Baruch, New York industrialist, who was chairman of the War Industries Board in the World War.

At the capitol, meanwhile, members of the House Judiciary committee gathered at the call of Chairman Sumners (D-Tex.) to consider possible legislation that might be enacted to curb strikes in defense plants.

NO NEED FOR U. S.-JAP WAR

Envoy Says Issues Can Be Settled Peacefully

Tokyo, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Admiral Nomura, who expects to leave for Washington next month as Japan's new ambassador to the United States, declared today there was no issue between Japan and the United States that could not be solved without recourse to war. Official announcement of his appointment, succeeding Ambassador Horinouchi, who was called home from Washington last September, was withheld. Because of this, Admiral Nomura said he had not conferred yet with the cabinet on a concrete program for improving relations between the United States and Japan.

"In many ways," Nomura said in an interview, "the fate of the world hangs on American actions just now."

"If the United States becomes involved in conflict either in Europe or in the Pacific, civilization will go up in flames. There are few—if any—Japanese who want war with the United States. What is important now is how to prevent the situation from reaching its worst stage."

The admiral declared he was neither pessimistic nor optimistic about the possibility of improving relations between his government and Washington.

Those relations, he added, "apparently depend largely on Japan's continental and South seas policies."

Probe Ordered On Cost Of Campaign

Washington, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Attorney General Jackson announced today that officials of all national political parties and committees and their records of contributions and expenditures would be called before a federal grand jury in connection with an investigation of alleged violations of election laws.

The attorney general said that a special grand jury would be convened here December 3 by order of Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat of the district court for the District of Columbia.

Maurice M. Milligan, federal district attorney at Kansas City, who is here on a special assignment to investigate election complaints, will present evidence to the jury. Numerous reports have been received the attorney general said, that $3,000,000 limit fixed for campaign expenditures by the Hatch act had been violated or evaded.

If the law has been violated there should be prosecutions, Jackson said, "if there have been evasions the loopholes should be tightened up."

Drew Middleton Reveals Britain Turning Increasingly To This Country For Aid; Action Of Censorship Board In Permitting Transmission Of Story May Indicate Change In Attitude

(The following revealing dispatch on the seriousness of England's condition is from Drew Middleton, Associated Press correspondent, who was with the British expeditionary force in France and who has spent much time with all arms of the British war machine. It is significant because it passed through a censorship board which heretofore has frowned on such statements.)

(It may mean that the British have changed their attitude and believe that a dark picture of their danger would arouse more sympathy in the United States than the confident optimism displayed so far by the government.)

By DREW MIDDLETON. London, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Britain struggling with bomb wreckage and confronted with a continued German stalemate is turning increasingly to the United States as a potential savior in these darkest hours of the war since the German Panzer division reached the channel coast last May.

British capacity for understatement is working overtime, partly through patriotism and partly through propaganda — "casualties were few having regard to the weight of the attack."

Complacency, distortion and reluctance to admit the truth, even privately, to correspondents who have no hope of getting some news through the vigorous censorship perhaps are the danger to the British cause as nighty bombings.

Why these darkest hours? First, there probably is no answer to night bombings outside of mastery of the air and for this Britain frankly is looking to America.

German night raiders have dropped tons of thousands of tons of bombs from thousands of planes, yet one is asked to believe there is no military damage, that only churches, hospitals, schools and tenements are hit, plus of course, "slight damage" to utilities.

Bombers that hit Buckingham palace, unable to hit the sprawling factories of the Midlands? Believe it, if you can.

The Germans have killed thousands of civilian men, women and children without really damaging morale. They've also done damage to shipping and railroads without demoralizing the war effort.

Second, Britain still rules the waves, but needs more American help to do it. Much of the recent staggering shipping losses can be traced to deficiencies in escort vessels.

Unless Britain can get more U. S. destroyers, shipping losses likely will continue at a high level.

Third, Britain, the greatest financial power in history, is reaching the end of her financial tether. If she is to buy in the United States and German bombing of industries will force her to buy in increasing quantities—the United States will have to put it on the cuff.

LOCAL MEN ON CLUB PROGRAM

Dr. Meadows and Dr. Boyd Discuss Thanksgiving

Dr. L. R. Meadows, president of East Carolina Teachers College and Dr. R. S. Boyd, Presbyterian pastor, delivered Thanksgiving addresses before the Greenville Rotary club last night, speaking on the subject "For What Are We Thankful," and "The Meaning of Thanksgiving," respectively.

Among the things Dr. Meadows listed for which we are thankful the first was our Democracy. He declared that we enjoyed freedom of speech, freedom of the press and freedom of religion, all of which are taken for granted and are sometimes overlooked.

Another thing for which we are thankful, he declared, is the fact that our nation is not at war.

Hope and faith in the future and that Democracy is not a failure, but will continue to live were other factors listed by Dr. Meadows. He pointed out that many famous and important persons are now declaring that Democracy is a failure and already has been destroyed.

Dr. Meadows was followed by Dr. Boyd, the other featured speaker of the evening.

In discussing why we observe Thanksgiving, Dr. Boyd pointed out that Thanksgiving day is an American custom with a spiritual beginning.

He reviewed the history of the holiday and in discussing the chance in date adopted by some states spoke of the "perils that beset us in this commercial and profiteering of American customs."

Referring to the change in date as for the purpose of further commercializing the holiday, Dr. Boyd declared that other days and customs are in danger of commercialism.

The meeting was presided over by Jonathan Overton, who read a letter from the president of the Montreal, Canada, Rotary club, stating that the border was still open and urging Americans to spend their vacations in that neighboring country.

The program was in charge of Ty Wagner, chairman of the program committee. Guests were Ed Thomas, H. T. Smith, Henry Martin, P. A. Jordan, Ray C. Gable, Dr. Grady Dixon of Ayden and the two speakers.

New Act Will Aid Tobacco Farmers

County Agent R. R. Bennett today disclosed that tobacco farmers throughout the country probably will receive an additional $43,000,000 for their 1941 crop as a result of a bill enacted by Congress and just signed by President Roosevelt.

The measure in question provides for adjustment of the base for reckoning parity, which was declared to have been out of proportion prior to the adjustment provision.

The county agent said he was unable to say immediately what this would mean to Pitt county, but added the result would prove of great benefit to Pitt, the largest flue-cured producing county in the world.

City, County Schools To Observe Holidays

City and county schools tomorrow will begin their Thanksgiving holidays, with the former ceasing work at the noon recess. Both the city and county units will also observe a holiday Friday.

Both units will start their Christmas vacation on December 20—the Friday preceding Christmas which comes on the following Wednesday. The county schools will return to work on January 2, but the city schools will remain closed until the following Monday, January 6.

NAZIS PLAN NO AID FOR ITALY

Informed Source Says Nazis to Keep Hands Off

(By The Associated Press) Germany has decided on a "hands off" policy in Italy's fight with Greece, well informed sources in Rome said late today, at the same time scouting widespread rumors of an imminent German thrust against Turkey and the Dardanelles.

The informant asserted that only a few German troops were in Rumania and none in Bulgaria, although previous reports have placed an estimated 1,250,000 Nazi soldiers in the Balkans.

Germany, it was said, is attempting to keep Turkey from entering the war on the side of Greece. Meanwhile the Greeks were said to be sweeping the Italians back everywhere.

Greek reports from various sectors of the 30-day-old conflict indicated that all Italian columns were attempting to turn toward the Adriatic sea in their retreat.

Winter gripped the battle areas. Cold rain drenched the valleys and lowlands and snow fell in the mountains, impeding operations on most fronts.

Says British Aid Bill Is Premature

Washington, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Immediate legislative action toward giving financial assistance to the British was described by Chairman George of the Senate Foreign Relations committee today as "impractical and somewhat premature."

In his first public comment on current issues since he was chosen to head the strategic Senate committee, George (D-Ga.) had this to say on a pending resolution by Senator King (D-Utah) which would clear the way for granting credits to Britain:

"I believe it is impractical to secure action now and somewhat premature."

He expressed this view after visits to the State Department and White House, which he concluded by telling reporters at the latter place that he was in "general agreement" with President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull on foreign policy.

George said he had a "general discussion" of the international situation with the President, but had not touched upon financial aid to the British.

Lord Lothian, the British ambassador, had said yesterday after a conference with the President that finances would be a problem for Britain during the first half of 1941.

HOSIERY MILL IS IN COURTS

Order Restrains Sale Of Goods Under Labor Liens

A restraining order was signed today by Judge C. E. Thompson of Elizabeth City, enjoining Sheriff J. Knott Proctor from selling property allegedly owned by the Lansdale Hosiery Mills, Inc., and held by the Davis Full Fashioned Hosiery Mills, Inc.

Sale of the property, ladies' hosiery, had been advertised for December 2 under labor liens secured by Attorneys Arthur B. Corey and Jack Edwards for 45 employees who claimed the local mills owed them a total of $2,992.05.

The mills, which were established here about two years ago, closed on October 26, this year, according to the complaint, which declared that the plaintiff had been advised and so believed that "mismanagement and defalcation of its officers" were responsible for the failure of the firm.

The restraining order was made returnable before Judge Thompson in Snow Hill at 2:30 p. m., December 16th.

The order sets forth that the local company knitted hosiery for the plaintiff concern on a commission basis and that the Lansdale corporation paid the commissions regularly. It also is set forth that the employees agreed that they were to receive no wages until the knitted goods had been returned to the plaintiff company and the knitting charges paid, the employees to be paid out of the knitting commissions.

It was contended that the employees thereby waived their rights as laborers.

The order contends that the actual value of the plaintiff's property held by the Davis Company is estimated at $3,000, while the knitting commissions could not exceed $1,500 and that the restraining order was necessary to protect the plaintiff's interest.

The order specifically enjoins the sheriff from making the sale of the plaintiff's property December 2 as advertised, until final hearing and determination of the action; enjoins Attorneys Edwards and Corey from selling said property; proposes that a receiver be appointed; and contends that the North Carolina law under which the labor liens were filed is unconstitutional and be so declared; and proposes that the amount of indebtedness due by the plaintiff to the Davis Company on account of commission knitting be determined, payment directed and plaintiff's property be surrendered.

Advance By Greek Army Continues

British Planes Penetrate Dense Night Fog to Strike at Big German Naval Bases as RAF Continues Blows in Effort to Smash Blockade; Greeks Said to Have Captured Another Albanian Town

(By The Associated Press) Britain's Royal Air Force struck widespread blows in its drive to smash the Nazi sea blockade, the London Air Ministry reported today, while in the month-old Balkan war the Greeks were reported to have captured Pogradetz, 30 miles inside Albania.

The British said Royal Air Force planes, flying through dense night fog, bombed the big German naval bases at Kiel, Wilhelmshaven and Hamburg, and a number of Nazi air-dromes.

Simultaneously, the London Admiralty noted evidence that the counter campaign against crippling attacks on British shipping is proving successful. A communique said that during the week ended November 17 only 17 British allied and neutral merchant ships, totalling 59,534 tons, were lost through "enemy action"—approximately two-thirds of the weekly average since the German blockade was intensified last May.

Dispatches from Athens said a counter attack by fresh Italian troops rushed direct from Rome to stem the Greek advance into Albania, had been repulsed in the central zone of the 100-mile front.

Two Greek bayonet charges, it was said, overwhelmed the Fascist ranks despite a desperate rallying attempt by the Rome 42nd regiment.

Advices from the Yugoslav border said 350 truck loads of Italian reinforcements had arrived in the north to bolster the retreating Fascists. Greek reconnaissance pilots, however, said that the Greeks were pushing ahead in the sector and that the Italians were offering little resistance as they fell back.

London military quarters said the Greeks had taken Pogradetz, some 20 miles north of the fallen Italian supply base of Koritz, captured last week, and were pressing close around Argirocastro on the northern front near the Adriatic sea.

Authoritative military circles in London said Greek troops had landed on the Adriatic shore in Albanian Epirus and cut behind the Italian flank in a movement to "bottle up" Fascist columns still fighting in Greek territory on the southern front.

Premier Mussolini's high command asserted "enemy detachments" which made the landing were either slain or captured.

Probably the fiercest action centered around Argirocastro where Athens dispatches said battered desperate Italians were battling to save the town—Italy's last "invasion" base in southern Albania.

The order specifically enjoins the sheriff from making the sale of the plaintiff's property December 2 as advertised, until final hearing and determination of the action; enjoins Attorneys Edwards and Corey from selling said property; proposes that a receiver be appointed; and contends that the North Carolina law under which the labor liens were filed is unconstitutional and be so declared; and proposes that the amount of indebtedness due by the plaintiff to the Davis Company on account of commission knitting be determined, payment directed and plaintiff's property be surrendered.

Mixed fall flowers were used to decorate the rooms where tables were set for play. The bride-elect's place was marked with a lovely corsage.

Dainty prizes were awarded to Miss Martha Bland and Mrs. L. B. Kinlaw, Jr., respectively, for high and second high score in bridge, and Miss Louise Corbin received high at bingo.

Miss West received a shower of miscellaneous gifts from the guests and the hostesses presented her with silver in her chosen pattern.

Miss Kelly Smith, bride-elect of December, and Mrs. Kirby Loftin, a recent bride, were remembered with attractive gifts.

Strength For The Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

JUNGLES PREFERRED

A man who returned recently from a South American tour said that in Colombia he found naked savages in an almost impenetrable jungle just around a river bend from one of Colombia's large, modern cities. These denizens of the jungle apparently never visited the city, had no interest in it, lived in precisely the same degradation their ancestors had known for a thousand or perhaps for several thousand years.

Just around a river bend from a great city, yet buried in the jungle and liking it! St. Augustine, centuries ago, wrote a treatise entitled, "The City of God," in which he pointed men to higher ideals than even the highest then cherished. In the Epistle to the Hebrews it is said of Abraham that he looked for a city which hath foundations whose builder and maker is God.

Many a highly educated, well-thought-of citizen is spiritually a naked savage living around the river bend from the city of God, from the city that hath foundations whose builder and maker is God, yet preferring the jungle—the comfort, his appetites, his love of material things. The indifference of poor savages to the benefits of modern civilization is no more shocking than many a man's indifference to the benefits which God daily offers his soul.

He scoffs at the church and laughs at the pretensions of religion. Living in a jungle just around the river bend from the city of God and preferring the jungle.

A COMMUNITY SING FOR CHRISTMAS

It has been suggested to us that a community sing in Greenville during the Christmas holidays, participated in by as many of our people as possible, would be a worthwhile part of our Christmas observance, and the more we think of the suggestion the more convinced we are that such a thing could and should be undertaken. In recent years it seems that we are placing more and more of the commercial value on Christmas and to an extent are overlooking the real meaning of the season.

A real community sing, say on the courthouse lawn or some other outdoor spot, weather permitting, would make it possible for all our people to get together in a spirit of fellowship and good will and enjoy singing together the Yuletide songs. We already have a well organized symphonic chorus in Greenville with a competent director, and we believe the community sing could be built around this organization or that this organization would be glad to lend its cooperation with some other organization that might like to sponsor the affair.

Such a community sing would not only make an enjoyable occasion for those in attendance, but it is possible that arrangements could be made to broadcast it in order that shut-ins and others throughout our county who found it impossible to attend in person, might also enjoy it.

As stated in the beginning, the idea was not our own. It was suggested to us by Rev. D. A. Windham. But the more we give thought to it, the more convinced we are that it will add greatly to our Christmas observance, and we are passing the suggestion on to our people for further consideration. Is there not some organization or group of organizations in our community that would like to sponsor this program? At least we would like to know your reactions to the proposal.

Washington Daybook

By Jack Stuenkel

Washington.—Out of the flood of talk about "good neighbor policies," exchanges of culture between North and South America, and nebulous schemes for welding the two continents, there are developing a few concrete plans for laying an economic foundation which really may support the dreams of the dreamers.

To attempt to discuss even briefly all of these would be to clutter this column with things of scanty meaning, but I hope from time to time to report on the really solid things that are being done to bring South and Central America into a hemispheric family that can stand united against economic, political or military onslaughts from any source whatever.

Experiments Under Way
Among the larger plans of the realists is one to provide our neighbors to the south with enough capital and credit so that they can spend in the United States on a basis never thought of before.

One government department recently estimated that if one-third of the former U. S. tourist trade to Europe could be diverted to South America, our southern neighbors would have credits enough to make all their necessary purchases from the United States. But that's another story and herein I'm going to consider only what the Department of Agriculture is doing and plans to do along this line.

There are at present four experimental field groups from the department in Central and South America, working on the single crop of rubber. Last year, congress appropriated a half million dollars for this work, and if that seems a lot, let's examine the possibilities.

Rubber originated in South America and until about 1910 most of it came from there. Then the Far East—Malaya, Ceylon and the Dutch East Indies—began to come to the fore, until last year, when U. S. imports were approximately 600,000 tons, only about 20,000 tons came from South America. About 20,000 tons more came from Portuguese plantations in Liberia, West Africa and most of the rest from the Far East.

A Flood Of Money
Let's not even consider the possibilities of our Far Eastern source of supply being closed. Let's just consider what it would mean to southern Mexico, Brazil and the others if we were to purchase nearly 600,000 tons of rubber at a price which would allow a profit over production costs of 10 cents a pound! That is why U. S. agricultural experts are in the tropics to develop a disease-resistant domesticated rubber tree. They make no great claims for their progress. If the U. S. has to have rubber tomorrow, it must get it somewhere else—even from the synthetic rubber factories where it will cost upward from 25 cents a pound to produce. But, five them and South America 15 years and this country will have no worries about its rubber, and South America will have a great new agricultural industry which will provide millions of dollars annually for purchases of our manufactured products.

Hard-Headed View
I have taken the case of rubber because it is easiest to illustrate and because work has been no more than started or just planned on other crops.

Agricultural experts are positive that Latin America could produce our total needs of cinchona, from which comes quinine; of abaca, from which comes manila hemp; of tea, and perhaps a dozen other things which we cannot grow ourselves and which would double and double again the purchasing power of the countries to the south.

That, say these practical hard-heads, would lay a solid economic foundation on which you could construct all the towers you wanted of "cultural exchange" and "good neighborliness."

Short Shots

Raleigh, Nov. 26.—There is as much difference between the Uzzell and Mull reports of a gathering of legislators from the northeast as there is between the British and German accounts of the same air raids.

Say those who support Mull for the House Speakership: Fourteen legislators from the northeast recently held a session at which it was determined that nine of them will back Odus Mull for the Speakership. That report is said to have been given to an Elizabeth City newspaper man by the legislator who presided.

Say those who are for George Uzzell for the Speakership: Fourteen legislators from the northeast recently held a session at which it was determined that eleven are for Uzzell for Speaker and three are for Mull. The only reason these figures didn't become publicly known is that the presiding legislator, who happened to be one of the Mull trio, refused to put it to a vote.

Those are the conflicting reports of the one meeting.

Carl Barefoot, statistician of the Highway Safety Division and Keith Saunders, publicity man for the division, held a big safety meeting in Robbinville.

Kelly says the presiding officer, with a perfectly straight face and apparently convinced of his accuracy introduced the figure field as "Carl Bearcat" while Mr. Barefoot himself tells of the chap who told him: "I'll be easy for me to remember your name, because I've got a bear skin at home."

State Treasurer Charles M. Johnson missed quite a razzing from State Auditor George Ross Pou and Secretary of State Thad Eure Monday.

He wasn't in town when the two started looking for him to read him the piece in Sunday's Charlotte Observer by its Raleigh correspondent, Stanley Wold, which said:

"Friends of State Treasurer Charles Johnson say he nurses ambitions to become a political dictator."

George and Thad wanted to find out, if the Johnson friends said that about him, what are his enemies saying!!

Here's an item from Raleigh which this corner doubts if even Ripley can better by much.

For thirteen years, Mrs. W. E. Williams has been trading regularly (practically daily) with the Cutler Street Grocery, located less than two blocks away. In all that time she has been inside the store only twice and had never seen the proprietor, Melvin Kirk, who happened to be out both times that she came in.

Mrs. Williams phones her orders daily and pays the delivery boy weekly, thus making it unnecessary to visit the store, which is one of the best of the "neighborhood" groceries and which almost every morning looks like a club, there are so many ladies gathered for a bit of gossip as well as for trading purposes.

George Uzzell, Rowan representative, scoffs at claims of his Speakership rival, Odus Mull of Cleveland. The Salisbury lawmaker insists that the fight probably will not be settled until the very night of the caucus.

There are more than 1,000 asteroids revolving around the sun.

The quota immigration law admits about 153,900 aliens annually.

Who Killed Aunt Maggie?

By MEDORA FIELD

YESTERDAY: Although Aunt Maggie was murdered the night before, cut-throats have been at work on the puzzle all night, nobody has the least idea who killed her. But the guests at Sally's houseparty are all victims, and Sally herself is starting for the third floor to look among Aunt Maggie's papers for something that might explain it all. She privately thinks the secret room supposed to be somewhere in the old house has something to do with it all.

Chapter 18 Gloomy Search

I ADMIT that by then I was beginning to feel rather apprehensive about the law, for the conversation between Bob and Kirk had given me an idea of what we were in for. It seemed to me that my only hope lay in finding what Bob called a motive. Once we had a motive, maybe, we could find a clue to the third floor again, this time to look through the papers Aunt Maggie had left in the study. I felt reasonably certain she had not considered the secret room of interest except as a family curiosity. This being the case, she probably would not have hidden the clue. If the directions were complicated, she might have had the paper with her when she went downstairs. But if the directions were easy to understand, she had probably left the clue among the other papers or had stuck it somewhere in her room.

But there were no papers in her bureau or desk drawers and nothing in the drawers of her chest. The collection of papers in the study was formidable. An old family Bible, several volumes of family records, half a dozen packets of letters and a number of loose papers and Aunt Maggie's brief case which inclosed her usual working materials.

I sat down in the chair she had occupied and got busy. A lot of reading of old-fashioned, esoteric writing was necessary, for I had no idea what the clue she had spoken of might be like.

It was slow work and I had begun to feel pretty hopeless when I heard a step outside.

"Here I am, Bill," I called.

But nobody answered and nobody appeared. I waited a minute, for I knew that I had heard someone, then got up and looked out in the hall. But I saw no one. Ordinarily if I had thought I heard a footstep outside a room and found myself mistaken I would have dismissed the matter without further thought.

But too much had happened lately for me to maintain any such casual attitude now. I looked first in Aunt Maggie's room, then in all the other rooms on the floor. As usual, I saw no one at all.

But in Aunt Maggie's room it seemed to me that the books and other things on the desk had been moved about. I felt sure of it, for the blotter was askew and surely I would have straightened it automatically when I looked in earlier.

I went back to the study, feeling a little too remote from the rest of the household for absolute comfort, yet anxious to go on with my search. I would make Bill help if he ever got through with his road mending.

I worked on and on and to my ears, tuned now to hear the slightest sound, it seemed that the house was very still. I knew that it was only because one whole floor separated me from everyone else, but I found myself listening for noises and, when I finally heard footsteps again, I jumped from my chair and rushed to the door breathlessly.

New Helper
KIRK, looking very forthright and dependable, was coming down the hall. "Beaure said you were up here," he explained. "I came to see if I could be of any assistance."

"I was just going through Aunt Maggie's papers to see if they would throw any light on the situation."

"Not a bad idea," he agreed. "May I help? And by the way, Sally, I've been thinking this over, and while there doesn't seem to be any rhyme or reason for it, there's got to be one somewhere. You remember Aunt Maggie told us about finding a clue to the secret room? Do you suppose there could be any connection?"

I felt my face flush. Here was Kirk suggesting the very thing I about, I must confess that for a moment I wondered if it were not just the thing the murderer himself might do. But, after all, maybe it was a more obvious conclusion than I had thought.

"I had wondered about it myself," I admitted. "That's why I am looking through these papers."

"Ah, I see. Well, let me help you, have you any idea what we should be looking for? I mean, did you gather from Aunt Maggie any suggestion as to what sort of clue she had found?"

There was nothing for it but to accept this offer, so I said, "No. No idea at all. Suppose you check through these. I may have missed something."

We worked quietly for a while, then Kirk asked, "You—you don't suppose there's some crazy person hidden in there, do you? Did you ever hear of a relative who was not quite right?"

"Bill asked the same question this morning," I answered. "I never heard anything to make me think so, but it seems that anything is possible."

"I wondered about it when Alice claimed to have seen a ghost," Kirk said. "Of course, we all thought Alice was just imagining things because of overwrought nerves. But Bill ran into somebody in the hall—"

I looked at him guilelessly, but in my heart there was still a question. "Could it have been Kirk who collided with Bill? After all, the stairs are nearest the dining-room door and Kirk had come back into the library from the dining room. But he met my glance squarely and it was I who turned away."

"Alice couldn't describe her ghost," I recalled. "She said it was just a shape." I shuddered at the thought that perhaps Alice might have been right. That there was some monster concealed in the house awaiting an opportunity to pounce upon innocent victims. Why had Bill used the words "ghost" or "hairy ape"? Had there been something in that brief contact in the hall which had caused him to do so unconsciously? "It's too awful," I said to Kirk.

"I shouldn't have frightened you with such ideas," he said contritely. "If Alice saw anything, it was not a ghost, but something human. By the way," he went on, "was there anyone who might not want you to have this house? Any jealous relative who might have wanted it himself or herself? Anyone who might possibly feel that it was left to you—unfairly, and who would try to scare you away? Has anyone offered to buy it from you?"

"But why? What would that have to do with it?"

"Have you heard of cases where people tried to scare off the owners by making things disagreeable for them? Maybe so they could buy the property at a reduced price?"

"But that's too fantastic," I said. "Judge and Mrs. Warren, who live at Roswell, did say if I would be interested in selling the place. They seemed to approve my decision to keep it and said they had only thought I might be selling it to—Yankies or somebody disagreeable."

"Yankies?" Kirk grinned. "It's absurd, of course. But the Warrens are very old fashioned. And these old houses are rather in demand in Georgia because Sherman left so few of them."

"So you don't think the judge is a likely candidate to be putting on a campaign to terrorize the present owners?"

"I certainly don't. And as to relatives, the only one I can think of who might have envied me the house would have been Aunt Maggie, and she, of course, was free to come and go as she liked. As things have turned out, I don't see how it could be Aunt Maggie."

"Well, that's that," said Kirk, and we both worked busily for some time. Then I picked up Aunt Maggie's brief case, which I had already gone through, and started scanning the papers it held.

The Map
"HELLO, what's this?" he asked suddenly, a note of excitement in his voice. "Looks like some sort of diagram."

And it was a diagram, with a line beginning at the top left-hand corner and meandering downward toward the right. Here and there along the line were names and at certain points there were large black dots.

I could not help smiling when I saw it and Kirk's eager expression. "That," I told him, "is one of Aunt Maggie's genealogical maps of Georgia. That black line is Sherman's march through Georgia to the sea. The black dots indicate towns he burned, or at least towns in which he burned the courthouses. Aunt Maggie marked them because it means that all records prior to 1864 have been destroyed in those towns and it was therefore useless for her to trace family trees through deeds and marriage licenses and other papers which are usually on record."

Kirk regretfully replaced the diagram. "And I thought I had really discovered something," he lamented. "By the way, Sally, all this genealogy stuff. Could we find a clue there, do you suppose? Aunt Maggie never kept anybody out of the D. A. R. or from being presented at court or anything like that by proving the family tree had a few rotten limbs, did she?"

I shook my head. "It would be a perfect solution, but I am afraid it won't."

Voices came floating in from the hall and a moment later Claire and Alice and Bob crowded in through the doorway.

"What's going on?" they wanted to know.

"We are looking for the clue to the secret room," Kirk announced as he rose to his feet. "Would you like to help? We hope it will throw some light on what happened last night."

Well, it was out. Everybody knew now. And anyway, it probably didn't matter.

Man About Manhattan

By George Tusher

New York.—Pipe smoking is frowned upon in a majority of New York's hotel dining rooms, night clubs, and restaurants. . . . But occasionally some calloused bird will give way to the urge and build a comforting smoke in his brier. . . . We mention this because one night last July we were in Leon and Eddie's and did just that. . . . And then we walked out, some time later, and left the pipe on the table. For some reason it wasn't until last night that we got back around to seeing Leon and Eddie. . . . First thing Leon said was, "It's upstairs on my desk." Just as if we'd left it there only five minutes before.

At the Waldorf the other night, during intermission, Kay Kyer, walked over to the pianist of the orchestra that was playing the "Till in" period, and said, "My pianist is helping out over in the Sert Room tonight. Could you keep on playing until he gets back?" The fellow agreed. What had happened was this: Carol Bruce, who was supposed to sing that evening in the Sert Room, had been prohibited from appearing because of contract trouble. . . . At the zero hour the management hurried in and asked Kyer if Ginny Simms could fill in for her. . . . Ginny wanted Kay's regular pianist.

Ginny looked mighty fetching in a candy-stock dress and an old, old bracelet that was her grandmother's. . . . She also wore a little locket that was bent curiously. . . . Close examination revealed several small dents. . . . "I did that when I was a baby," she explained. "I used this locket as a teething-ring."

Five Broadway shows have new lines for their comics. The old ones, based chiefly on pre-election political debates, had to be re-written. . . . We can't tell you what the gags were because ladies and little children are present. . . . Harry Carey postcards that he is going to come east for several months so that he can be around when his kids, a boy 20 and a girl 17, get their starts in the theater. . . . The old "Trader Horn" has just finished "Shepherd of the Hills."

Neatest trick of the decade: The other day we read where Lawrence of Arabia spent three years in a British library and over that period read 20 books a day. . . . He could tear the heart out of any book in an hour," this author said. . . . We believe every word of it, and we also believe that cows have wings.

Ninety-nine of 100 popular songs are 32 bars in length. Occasionally, some composer oversteps this mark as Cole Porter did in using 60 bars in which to express "Night and Day." The record has been smashed, however, in a new song called "African Intlude," which Bing Crosby will introduce, soon in "The Road to Zanzibar." It has 200 bars or more than six times as many as the average song. It was written by Jimmy Van Heusen and Johnny Burke last week at Palm Springs where they were the house guests of John Scott Trotter.

Six Lettermen Finish High School Career Wednesday

PLAYING LAST GAME FOR GHS

Four Linemen, Two Backs End Career With High Team

By C. B. ROWLETT

On Wednesday night when the Greenville High School Phantoms invade the Washington High school park there will be a tough battle and it will be the last game that six of the first-string Phantoms will ever play for Greenville High school.

Those boys who will go down in history as belonging to one of the scrappiest teams the local high has ever produced are J. B. Kittrell, Dewey Page, Larry James, John Collins, Paul Scott and Sydney Johnson. While some of them are old veterans all of them have been on the squad at least two years and some of them as long as four.

The "41" Phantoms will be without the services of two of the best backs in the conference, J. B. Kittrell and Dewey Page. J. B. has been on the squad for three years and has played a brilliant brand of football during all three seasons. Although his position at blocking-back does not usually show up as spectacular as some of the long runs that the Phantoms have gone off with this year, it is one of the most important tasks on the field. It is usually the blocking backs that are depended on to take out the would-be tacklers. Not only can Kittrell block with the best of them but when necessary puts him carrying the ball he usually comes through Kittrell has also been the quarterback this season calling plays and signals.

The other back that next year Phantoms will be without is Dewey Page. Dewey has two years of credit as a varsity football player, one year as an end and the other as a full-back. Last season Dewey was second-string end but with ends like Collins and James on the flanks it would take an extraordinary flank-man to edge either one of these boys. This year Coach Farley was in bad need of a hard-driving, hard-hitting fullback that could carry the mail, to fill the spot left by Marvin Stocks of those "39" Phantoms. In Dewey Page he found one. Not only one of the best backs in the conference he is probably the best fullback that Greenville High school has ever produced. Page has proved his ability time and time again when he has broken through the enemy ranks on long gains.

With three years of experience behind them and playing their last game for GHS are Larry James and John Collins, long, lanky, and tough ends on this year's squad. For the past two seasons both boys have been first string ends all the way and were for the most part the year before. Time after time they have reached up into the clouds and pulled down passes that spelled defeat for the opponents. Their ability is a proven fact when they were selected to participate in the annual North Carolina-South Carolina football classic to be played December 7, in Charlotte. GHS is proud of the boys and the fans and students alike are confident that they will do their part in a Phantom triumph against Washington Wednesday.

Two more vital factors in this year's squad are Paul Scott and Sydney Johnson. Up until midway this season Paul has been one of the stalwart guards but a hole appeared in one of the tackle spots that couldn't quite be filled so "old reliable" Paul was shifted over to fill that spot. As it is generally known a lineman doesn't get the credit that a backfield ace does but those linemen have to be depended on and they are depended on. Paul is finishing his high-school career as a third year man. Another lineman who is leaving the field Wednesday for the last time with a GHS uniform will be Sydney Johnson. Sydney has been trying for a chance on the Phantom squad for four years and continuous effort and lack of discouraging qualities drove him on and this year gave Sydney his starting assignment.

Hole In One

Dr. J. M. Barrett Sunday experienced the thrill that comes to only a comparatively few of the thousands of golfers when he scored a hole-in-one.

Dr. Barrett was playing on the new course at Plymouth in a foursome with Alton Barrett, George Geer and Aubrey Tilley. He was using a number five iron when he scored his ace on the 125-yard, par three hole.

Twenty Answer 1st Call For College Cage Team

First Basketball Practice At ECTC Yesterday

By BURTON DANIELS

Twenty men answered Coach Christenbury's call for the initial basketball practice yesterday at East Carolina. This number included seven lettermen from last year's squad, and three non-lettermen that saw action with the Pirates cagers of last season.

The initial drill was confined to fundamentals, shooting, dribbling and passing the ball with a short scrimmage session toward the last of the workout. The entire outfit appeared to be fine shape for so early in the season, and the offensive work of big Don Brock, and George Lautares was little short of sensational for the first time out.

The men reporting for the practice session were: Lautares, Dempsey, Watson, Riddick, Brock, Hinton, and Cox, lettermen; Simpson, Frink and Crandall were the non-lettermen holdovers from last year's outfit reporting. The newcomers included Mann, Brown, Sparrow, Sisk, Schuerholz, J. Young, B. Young, Peterson, Ellis, Roberts and Dellinger.

Height will be the big keynote of this year's Pirate squad as the twenty men reporting to date will average just a fraction above the six foot mark, only five of the number falling below that level. The one sour note of the setup is the fact that the squad will lose the services of Brock after the holidays as the big center is riding out of school on a sheepskin. He will be sorely missed, as he has been the keystone of the Pirates offense for the past several seasons. There is no man appearing on the roster at the present time that looks capable of filling his shoes, but that is not strange for a man like Brock comes but once in many seasons.

The Pirates will not open their collegiate season until after the Christmas holidays according to the present set up of the schedule which is yet to be completed, but there is the probability that several independent teams of the vicinity will be met ere the boys go home for Christmas.

Coach Christenbury said that the present squad has more ability than any that he has worked with in the past, and is looking forward to an excellent year on the hardwood.

DEACONS PLAY TURKEY DAY

To Meet South Carolina At Charlotte Thursday

Wake Forest, N. C., Nov. 26.—The Gamecocks of South Carolina and the Deacons of Wake Forest are all set and primed for their Thanksgiving game in Charlotte's Memorial Stadium Thursday afternoon. This will be the last game of the year for Wake, but the Gamecocks have another to go—with the Citadel in Charlotte.

Coach Peabody Walker's Deacons will, no doubt, rate the favorites position for the Turkey Day meeting, but if you remember well, they rated heavy tops in the N. C. State game and that turned out to be a real thriller, the Deacs barely winning 20-14.

And it appears now as if the favored team is the one to take the drubbing this year. Just look at some of the upsets that have gone down in history—Wake over North Carolina, North Carolina over Duke, State over William and Mary, Tennessee over Duke, Iowa over Notre Dame, Southwestern's tie with Clemson and Richmond over North Carolina. Of course, for the Gamecocks to beat Wake Forest it would not be as great upset as any one of these, but it just goes to show that the favorite's position is mightily perilous.

Both South Carolina and Wake Forest have had spotty seasons this year, playing great ball at times and looking just the opposite in other games. However, with fourteen seniors playing in their last game for the Deacons, it should be a sure bet that these boys will be bearing down with all they've got to wind up their careers in a creditable fashion.

Officials Inspect NYA Center Here

By DR. N. THOMAS ENNETT

We had an unusual experience Friday.

Mrs. Mattie Moya Gaylord, Pitt county supervisor of N. Y. A., and Mrs. Mabel Randolph, foreman of the N. Y. A. Home Practice project invited the N. Y. A. advisory committee and the Pitt County Board of Commissioners to a "come and see" luncheon at the Home Practice Center. The center is located at the foot of Summit street, overlooking the Tar river.

We came and we saw. And what we saw was an inspiring revelation. We saw a group of happy girls (eligibility ages are 17 to 24) busy in learning the art of home making.

Mrs. Gaylord explained that there are 34 girls in the county enrolled in this type of project and that there are two types of projects in the county, one the Home Practice Project and the other the Clerical or Office Project.

The project is housed in a six room brick bungalow. You enter an attractively furnished living room just back of the living room, and a nicely furnished dining room, and back of this is a well equipped, sanitary kitchen. On the other side of the house there are three bedrooms and a nicely appointed bath.

Since this is a working center, none of the bedrooms are now furnished but have been converted into utility rooms. We found in the front bedroom an old fashioned quilting frame set up and a comfort being made. In the next bedroom, sewing was going on and several girls were sewing ticking preparatory to mattress making and it was remarkable to note the efficiency of these young seamstresses. The back bedroom was used for storing cotton-lint and other materials for the project.

We understood that the luncheon was prepared by the N. Y. A. girls and we had the opportunity to observe them as waitresses. The food was well prepared and the service was efficient.

We were told that these girls not only get experience in sewing, marketing, cooking, and general house work, but they also get experience raising vegetables and canning, and cultivating a flower garden. Already certain of the girls from the center have given private employment as waitresses, and we understand that the Pitt N. Y. A. in October led the whole Eastern District in placing workers in private employment.

I don't know how you feel about it but it would be difficult for me to imagine a more worthy project. Girls in this center, according to the natural course of events, will soon set up a home of their own. With the training, practice, and experience afforded them in this Home Service Center, they should go out well qualified in the art of "home making."

It is our opinion that the money put in this project must of necessity yield large returns in both economic and social betterment in Pitt county for I know of nothing that tends more to good substantial citizenship than a well planned, well organized well managed, happy home.

CLUB IS URGED VISIT CANADA

Local Rotary President Gets Letter From Montreal

The following letter has been received by Jonathan Overton, president of the Greenville Rotary club, from the president of the Montreal, Canada, Rotary club, urging Americans to visit that country:

"Montreal Rotarians send your members greetings.

"Our nations are deeply concerned for the preservation of our birthright of freedom. The United States has assumed leadership in the defense of Democracy in the Western Hemisphere, while Canada is associated with her sister nations of the British Commonwealth in giving battle to the powers that are sworn to banish this Democracy from the earth. In this dire struggle, Great Britain and her allies have been encouraged and inspired by the practical aid and moral sympathy of America.

"During the past few months there have been many false stories abroad regarding the difficulties of travel in Canada. It is the duty of Rotary to foster understanding and goodwill, so we desire to place the facts before you who can help to combat these subversive activities.

"We believe we are justified in pointing out that Canada is an ideal vacation land both in winter and in summer. The opportunities and comfort of travel in Canada have not changed because of the war, and awards of $125 for the best decorated homes and $25 for the best stores.

Mrs. Powell also disclosed that plans were going forward on the parade and indications were that numerous floats would be entered.

the benefits to Canada from such travel will be a considerable aid in carrying out the enterprise in which we are engaged. We would point out that there are no difficulties for good Americans in crossing or re-crossing the boundary line, and further that your American dollar is worth one dollar and ten cents here.

"We need all the war materials we can buy from the United States—our purchases are limited only by the amount of American exchange available.

"We would assure you that our government and civic authorities, our business houses and our people are more eager than ever to have visitors from your country, in the knowledge that it is so vital to us at this time. Rotarians in every section of Canada crave the opportunity of welcoming you."

Truckers Seeking Triple-A Changes

Wilmington, Nov. 26.—(AP)—"Amend the 1941 Triple A program as it relates to truck crops to make it afford us better treatment, or face a fight on its constitutionality in Federal court."

"That ultimatum was handed down here last night by truck and potato growers of Eastern North Carolina and business men of Wilmington and vicinity as they met with Triple A officials and congressional representatives to discuss the Triple A program and provisions in it which they considered unfair to the growers of truck crops and potatoes.

The meeting adopted a resolution requesting "the State Triple A com-growers if they overplant their allotments, with the understanding that this in no way shall restrict the amount.
