BRITAIN DISCLOSES CRUISER SOUTHAMPTON SUNK

U. S. INVASION IS LIKELY IF BRITAIN FALLS

Sec. Stimson Fears Threat If British Fleet Is Lost NAVY TRANSFER IS ENVISIONED Head of War Department Questioned at Length By House Foreign Affairs Committee

Washington, Jan. 16. — (AP) — Secretary Stimson declared today that "I think we are in very great danger of invasion by air in the contingency that the British navy should be destroyed or surrendered."

The War Department chief made this statement to the House Foreign Affairs committee in response to an inquiry by Rep. Fish (N.-N.Y.).

Stimson previously had endorsed President Roosevelt's bill for aid to Britain.

At a subsequent point in his testimony, Stimson told the committee he could foresee conditions under which the navy could be transferred under conditions very advantageous.

He made that statement when Fish asked whether the War Secretary had any objection to putting into the bill a prohibition against giving away any part of the United States navy.

Under the lease-lend bill as now drawn warships could be turned over to the British under whatever terms Mr. Roosevelt found acceptable.

Fish asked Stimson whether he thought that this country's naval strength any foreign nation could invade our shores.

"Not now, probably not," Stimson replied. Fish then raised the question whether the United States army could repel a force of 50,000 troops should they be landed.

"I think they probably would if the gentleman means a land invasion," Stimson responded, adding that he thought that an airplane would accompany an attempted invasion by infantry.

"Does the Secretary believe," Fish continued, "that our navy would remain locked up in our harbors if any such invasion were attempted?"

"No," said Stimson, "but where is our navy now?" (Most of the big ships of the navy are now based in the Pacific.)

Fish then inquired whether there was "fear of invasion" and the Secretary replied that there was danger of air invasion if the British fleet were destroyed or otherwise rendered ineffective for this country's protection.

N. C. ASSEMBLY BUSY AT WORK

Many New Measures Offered In House And Senate

Raleigh, Jan. 16. — (AP) — The House of Representatives received today a bill which would make workers thrown out of employment because of floods eligible for unemployment compensation.

The outgrowth of disastrous floods last summer when numerous plants were closed because of high water, the measure was introduced by Rep. Weeks of Edgecombe.

It removes floods from the list of catastrophes causing unemployment without compensation.

Weeks also sent forward a bill to provide that the driving license of a person arrested for drunken driving would not be revoked on his first offense if the trial judge recommends to the Revenue Department that the driver be allowed to keep it.

At present suspension of the license is automatic upon conviction of drunken driving.

In the Senate, Price of Rockingham sent forward a bill to provide a state-wide system of permanent grand juries.

Senator Stacy of Robeson introduced a measure to require superior court judges in burglary cases to charge juries that they might return a verdict of guilty of second degree burglary.

Senator White of Vance presented a bill to permit the use of school buses to transport vocational agriculture students to and from demonstration projects.

Senator Brooks of Durham sponsored a bill to provide that when indigents are taken to hospitals the county of their residence shall pay the bill.

War Secretary As-sets Essence of Proposal Is to Make United States Government Purchasing Agent For All War Materials Produced In This Country

Washington, Jan. 16. — (AP) — Secretary Stimson told Congress today that "the essence" of President Roosevelt's plan for aiding the British and other nations "resisting aggression" is to make the United States government the sole purchasing and distributing agency for war materials produced in this country.

The War Department chief, testifying before the House Foreign Affairs Committee, urged approval of administration legislation to authorize the leasing or lending of munitions to embattled "democracies" at the President's discretion.

He took the stand today after Treasury Secretary Morgenthau declared yesterday that England's war orders here have virtually been halted by a lack of ready cash.

Meanwhile, it was learned that Joseph P. Kennedy, retiring ambassador to London, would testify before the House committee next Tuesday. Opponents of the lease-lend bill have claimed Kennedy would support their view; supporters, however, have questioned that.

Stimson said it was "much more acute" than was that of 1917. At that time, he said, "the munitions factories and supplies of Great Britain were so abundant that they were able to supply and did supply to us the great bulk of the weapons which we then needed."

Today, Stimson said, "instead of being assisted by other nations in obtaining the weapons needed for our own defense, we are obliged to prepare our defense in consideration of their needs."

Anderson was the first Carolina city to place a ban on public gatherings.

CCC Posts Open To Boys In County

K. T. Futrell, Pitt county welfare officer who is in charge of local enlistments in the Civilian Conservation Corps, today said that the county had an opportunity of enrolling several more youths in the agency if applications were filed immediately.

Only white youths are needed, the colored quota having been filled, Mr. Futrell declared.

Youths between the ages of 17 and 23, years of age who are not on probation or parole and who have not had two years' service in the CCC and are unemployed are eligible for enrollment.

Enrollees receive $30 a month with $15 being sent to dependents. $7 kept in reserve until the youth is released and $8 in cash given the enrollee for spending money.

Thirty-five Pitt county youths were enrolled January 6.

Damage Suit Is Filed Against Greene Men

$6,000 damage suit has been filed in Pitt Superior court by Ida Joyner, Farmville Negro woman, against Edward Bowen and Harvey Bowen, farm operators of Greene county.

The complaint alleges that the Negro woman was employed as a cotton picker by the defendants last October 14 and while being transported in a truck owned by Harvey Bowen and driven by Edward Bowen she suffered injuries which necessitated the amputation of her arm when the truck, allegedly being operated at a high rate of speed and in a careless and reckless manner, collided with another vehicle.

The plaintiff is represented by R. T. Martin and Albion Dunn.

MUCH OF CROP BOUGHT BY CCC

One-Third of Flue Cured Leaf Taken By Agency

Washington, Jan. 16. — (AP) — More than one-third of the flue-cured tobacco sold on warehouse floors last fall was bought with Commodity Credit Corporation money.

The CCC reported it allotted $46,000,000 for loans and advances to finance purchases by companies which formerly bought for the British market, now closed to flue-cured imports because of the war.

Under the arrangement the companies purchased tobacco they normally would have bought had war not interfered with the export market. But instead of shipping the tobacco abroad it was stored in American warehouses to await betterment of export conditions.

The CCC taking a lien against it. Of the amount allotted, the CCC said $44,937,000 was actually expended in 1940 to buy 223,069,000 pounds of flue-cured leaf. Total warehouse sales last fall were 723,000,000 pounds.

NAVY REQUEST IS SANCTIONED BY COMMITTEE

House Committee Approves Erection of Small Ships

PLAN TO BUILD 400 NEW VESSELS

Action Brings to $1,209,000,000 Naval Outlay recommended by Committee in 24 Hours

Washington, Jan. 16. — (AP) — The House Naval committee gave prompt and unanimous approval today to an urgent navy request for strengthening the fleet's defense against dive-bombers and other aerial attacks.

No funds were carried in the legislation, but the navy announced it would seek a large part of the money soon via a supplemental appropriations bill.

The 400 new ships, to cost approximately $465,000,000, would consist chiefly of sub-chasers, seagoing escort vessels, mine-sweepers and torpedo boats.

The navy already has signified its intention of asking funds for 280 of them.

Of the $315,000,000 for new shipbuilding facilities, Rear Admiral Samuel M. Robinson, chief of the Bureau of Ships, testified that about $25,000,000 would be used to create or expand facilities for the construction of the 280 new craft.

The bulk of these are to be built on the Great Lakes, Robinson said, but the specified yards have not been selected.

Reach Settlement In Civil Actions

A compromise settlement in the case of Margaret Forbes vs. Quinn Bostic was reached in Pitt Superior court yesterday in which the 11-year-old girl, daughter of Joseph J. Forbes, was awarded $2,200 for injuries received when she was struck last August 5 by an automobile being driven by the defendant at a point near Greenville on the Greenville-Washington highway.

The settlement also stipulated that the defendant pay the costs of court and hospital, medical and nursing fees incurred by the plaintiff if such had not already been paid.

A settlement also was reached in the case of L. A. Randolph vs. J. E. Winslow company involving a disagreement over accounts. The plaintiff was awarded $550, with the court costs to be divided equally between the two.

A jury yesterday afternoon ruled in favor of the plaintiff in the case of Bessie Brown, administratrix of the estate of W. B. Brown vs. Joseph Daniel and wife. The plaintiff sought to recover for timber sold off a certain tract of land. The amount of recovery was not immediately fixed.

Pactolus Pushing Efforts For Road

A group of Pactolus citizens went to Kinston today to confer with Highway Commissioner Webb relative to having the Greenville-Pactolus link restored to the primary road proposed from Washington to Farmville.

The decision to confer with the commissioner was reached at a meeting attended by a large number of Pactolus citizens last night. The original plans for the "super-highway" called for the route to be run from Washington to Pactolus from Pactolus to Greenville and from Greenville to Kinston.

The Pactolus-Greenville link has been removed from the plans, but efforts are being made to have it restored.

Admiralty Also Announces Two Italian Supply Ships Sunk; RAF Continues to Pound Wilhelmshaven Naval Base; British Forces Prepare For Assault on Tobruk; Greeks Rout Italians

By The Associated Press

The British Admiralty announced today the British cruiser Southampton had been sunk.

A communique said the 9,100-ton cruiser was sunk by British forces when fire made it necessary to abandon the ship.

The Southampton was one of three British warships previously reported damaged by German and Italian forces off Sicily January 10.

The Admiralty said the majority of the crew was saved.

Another British Admiralty communique announced that a British submarine had sunk two Italian supply ships in the central Mediterranean.

Meanwhile, British Royal Air Force bombers pounded the Wilhelmshaven naval base overnight and smashed at the new German air base at Catania, Sicily—springboard for a Nazi aerial offensive against the British Mediterranean fleet.

Even as reports were made on these assaults, fresh details emerged today of the "seven hours of hell" rained on the aircraft carrier Illustrious by German dive-bombers January 10. The carrier was attacked in the same engagement in which the Southampton was sunk.

Hitler's high command acknowledged 20 killed and 35 wounded in the Royal Air Force's night-long assaults on Wilhelmshaven, which the British described as "the heaviest and most successful" in a series of forty attacks on the port.

An Associated Press correspondent aboard the Illustrious reported 40 to 50 Nazi planes dropped 100,000 pounds of high explosives and "many torpedoes" whose concussion, he said, shook the 23,000-ton ship "as a cat shakes a rat."

The Italian high command declared that British night raiders inflicted only "minor damage" at Catania, with several killed and "a few" wounded.

Still another success in the concerted Axis aerial drive against British Mediterranean sea power was reported by a Rome newspaper which declared that the British aircraft carrier Eagle was hit recently by an Italian plane-launched torpedo in the Mediterranean.

Round Table Meets. The Ladies of the Round Table met on Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. Paul Fitzgerald at her home on East Fifth street.

The president called the meeting to order. After a very short business meeting and exchange of books, the meeting was turned over to the chairman of the program committee, Mrs. W. C. Vincent gave the program for the afternoon. She was assigned the driest subject in the world, "Deserts," but handled it in a most interesting manner. She merely mentioned the fact that there were cold deserts and hot deserts, but confined her paper to the hot, sandy deserts of the world. She discussed at length the animal life in the desert, and told how the animals' coloring takes on the different hues and colors of the shifting sand. They are physically constructed to protect themselves from the hot suns and sand storms of the desert. Mrs. Vincent told how modern inventions had speeded up the transportation of the desert. She explained the voices of the desert, that attract so much attention as due to the regularity with which the sand is constantly shifting. She ended by quoting from Dr. VanDyke's experiences with his horse and dog in the desert.

Mrs. Charles Howard and Mrs. R. Taylor were guests of the club for the afternoon.

Mrs. Fitzgerald, assisted by Mrs. Howard served a salad plate with hot coffee and pineapple ice.

Forty Years Ago Today

THE DAILY REFLECTOR
January 16, 1901

It has rained all day long. Electric lights would have done good service today in dispelling the darkness.

Unless all sign fall there will be some spring weddings in this neck of the woods.

The doctors say there is much sickness now, many cases of pneumonia and grippe being among the people.

The first white shad of the season was caught by skimmers in the rivers today.

Miss Sallie Cotten left this morning for Raleigh.

Mrs. R. J. Cobb went to Kinston Wednesday evening and returned this morning.

Miss Ruth Gold, of Wilson, who has been visiting friends here, left this morning.

The new hotel, which is now nearing completion, will be ready to open by February 1. The building is beautifully finished inside and will be well furnished. It has its own electric light plant and water-works.

Duo-Pianists To Appear Here.

The pianists, Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff, who appear in a two-piano recital at the college tomorrow night will be making their second appearance this year in North Carolina, as they played to a crowded auditorium in Greensboro last fall.

Though they have been on tour together only three years, they have given around 200 joint recitals and this season are being featured by the Carnegie Hall star series, on which such artists as Kreisler and Marian Anderson are appearing.

These pianists are seasoned musicians. In spite of their comparative youth, as both began studying music as very small children, and have been playing in public for many years. Luboshutz, a Russian, is an honor graduate of the Conservatory of Moscow, and has studied under the leading teachers of Paris. He made his debut as guest soloist with the Kouissevitzy orchestra in Moscow, and later appeared in a similar role with the New York Philharmonic Symphony orchestra under Toscanini.

Nemenoff, the wife as well as the fellow pianist of Luboshutz, was born in Paris of Russian and French parents. She studied in Paris, and made her recital debut there before coming to the United States to marry Mr. Luboshutz, she toured France, Holland, Belgium, Spain and Germany.

These musicians say that they have been much impressed in their tours throughout the United States to find that the small towns they visit compete with the cosmopolitan centers in demanding the best music they have to offer.

These duo-pianists will be heard in recital here Friday night at 8:30.

Hostess To Sans Souci Club.

On Wednesday, as hostess to the Sans Souci Book Club, Mrs. S. T. White had its members and many friends from Greenville and surrounding towns to a most elegantly appointed luncheon honoring her friend, Mrs. Daisy Hendley Gold of Wilson, whose book "It Was Forever" has been read with much interest by the people of this section.

The home, spacious and always lovely, was beautifully alive with carnations, snapdragons and crystal lights.

Following a friendly session with cocktails, the guests were invited into the dining room where Mrs. Hortense Move and Mrs. J. B. White served the delicious lunch, assisted by Mrs. G. B. W. Hedley, Mrs. W. L. Best, Mrs. J. L. Fleming, Mrs. Key Brown, Mrs. L. C. Skinner, Mrs. J. H. Blount, Mrs. C. A. White, Mrs. C. S. Forbes, Mrs. H. L. Hodges and Mrs. J. B. Hawes.

A page from Mrs. Gold's own book might have described this occasion, so typical it was of those North Carolina social gatherings which she depicted as happening in Martinsburg. The charm, graciousness and bounty that so characterizes Southern hospitality was all there—the same friendly ease, the same friendly chatter, folks from all around knowing each other without having to be introduced.

Followed a social hour, during which Mrs. Knott Proctor and Mrs. J. H. Waldrop sang selections and won much applause. The guests were loathe to leave except for the eager anticipation to hear Mrs. Gold review her book.

For this, Mrs. White planned a meeting at the Woman's Club to which she invited all the club women of Greenville, who upon their arrival, were greeted by the officers of the Sans Souci Book Club.

Mrs. White welcomed the guests who literally filled the building and then very informally introduced her out-of-town visitors. Again music was enjoyed. "On Wings of Song" and "Trees" were sung by a trio consisting of Mrs. James, Mrs. Bullock and Miss Fullilove, with Mrs. Guy Smith as accompanist. Then, not to be neglected of patriotism, "God Bless America" was added, with the audience joining in the chorus.

Introducing her as a person of charm, versatility and unusual ability, Mrs. White next presented her friend, Mrs. Daisy Hendley Gold as the author of "It Was Forever" and Mrs. Gold proceeded to a review of the book. Mrs. Gold won her listeners immediately. With unaffected charm and eager enthusiasm, she launched into a discussion of the situations involved with the writing of fiction. She told of how the plot had to be planned, the characters developed, the emotions studied, the words chosen, all of the things that are inclusive with the success of a novel. It was easy to realize that the characters that Mrs. Gold had conceived in her brain had become vital living people in her imagination as they were in her book.

Nan and Julian erred on the moral side, which is justly condemned, but Nan lived in many respects a noble life and Julian had a wonderful gentleness and tenderness with that strength made of weathered storms. They both had the weakness and the strength of which the human are made. It is hoped

Strength For The Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY
WE GET AS WE GIVE
We value anything to the extent that we invest in it.

A father once gave his little daughter a pocketbook, and she promptly lost it. After that for several years she lost pocketbooks as fast as he gave them to her. At last he conceived the idea of putting a little money in the pocketbook, and after that the child never again lost her pocketbook. An empty pocketbook was one thing; a pocketbook with a few pennies or a dime in it was something quite different.

Friendship, happy domestic life, success in business—all these things depend for their value upon the amount we invest in them. If we invest little, we get little. If we invest much, we get much. We can have as many friends as we are willing to buy with the generous spending of an unselfish spirit. We can make ourselves and our homes happy or otherwise, depending upon the extent we are willing to sacrifice. In business, it is true natural aptitude and the circumstances of the business world have considerable to do with business success, but all things else being equal, the hard worker passes the shirker on the home stretch every time; the reason being that he is willing to give unselfishly of himself to the winning of the race.

"Give and it shall be given unto you," is the Biblical explanation of how the serious giving of the best one has results in satisfactory returns.

The bill now before the legislature that would prohibit the sale or use of firecrackers in this state except for authorized public displays such as fairs, pageants and the like, is no doubt a measure that most of our people would like to see enacted into law. In addition to being dangerous to both life and property, the usual run of fireworks is certainly a nuisance to everyone, especially around Christmas time when their use is most prevalent in this section.

Secretary Hull was absolutely right in his plea yesterday that America wake up to the seriousness of the world situation and lose no further time in its preparations to aid Great Britain, and defend itself. Hitler's one hope of defeating Britain, and in time pushing his gains to the shores of this hemisphere, is that we will delay too long in getting aid to Britain. Two things are vitally necessary in this country at this time if the democracies are to survive and that is that we act immediately on the lend-lease law for aid to Britain and then declare a national emergency whereby industry and industrial manpower can be drafted to manufacture the necessary implements with which to aid Britain and protect ourselves. We can talk all we please about our defense program and our aid to Britain, but there is little aid we can give as long as we permit strikes and threatened strikes in our vital industries to slow down our preparations.

Washington Daybook

By Preston Grover

Washington—Political observers see in the election of Sen. Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, as president pro tem of the Senate another definite step for the preservation of unity in Democratic ranks.

Less serious probes into things behind the news see it merely as Senator Harrison's coming to his own, after nine years in the House of Representatives, 21 years in the Senate, and 30 years of being one of the most consistently popular men on Capitol Hill.

The two observations fall into a pattern. The Senator's acid tongue has for many years made him one of the most feared adversaries in debate. In other days, when the Democrats were in the minority, he was the "Democratic gadfly" sailing about the Senate and stinging the Republicans on every issue that came up. But through it all, he managed somehow to save the wounds he made and pull out his stingers with a soothing word that invariably left his victims more deeply in his friendship than before.

Third Term Supporter

In the intra-party fracas of recent years, Senator Pat has been on both sides. He has scored the New Deal on occasion and, ripped into administration policies. But he also has fought just as hard with his shoulder against that of the most rapid New Dealers and when the third term issue popped, he was one of the first to declare the President for another four years. And this in spite of the fact that when the pet of majority leader was won and he definitely was in line for that important party assignment, President Roosevelt threw it to Senator Alben Barkley.

There is a story that Senator Harrison agreed to take the job of president pro tem, provided Vice President Roosevelt should give him the job. The Senator said he did not want to be a "vice" president, but he was assured that he would not be, but the laugh may be on the Senator on that score, for the conviction is growing that the new Vice President is going to spend much of his time on good-will missions especially to Latin and South American countries.

born. He has been a politician all his adult life, serving six years as county attorney right after he finished college and coming to the House in 1910. In recent years, as chairman of the finance committee he has had a hand in framing tax laws to raise the huge sums required for the New Deal expenditures and national defense.

Short Shots

Raleigh, Jan. 16.—Ruper Pickens of High Point has been given an additional nickname to go with "Watchdog of the Treasury," "Professor" and others.

Rupe and Victor Bryant were kidding each other about the Durham man's explanation of the Budget at Tuesday afternoon's session. Pickens suggested that Bryant had stressed points which are generally favored and had rather glossed over other sections not so satisfactory and on which there is sure to be more than a little controversy.

"Oh, yes," rejoined Mr. Bryant, "I cut a glance over at you once in a while and I thought I saw a glint in the pruner's eye."
So now Mr. Pickens is "The Pruner."

About the only House member absent from the oyster supper given by the W. C. Foot Dealers Association was R. H. Underwood, chairman of the Committee on Oysters.

Representative John Umstead, pictured as having something of a State Hatch Act up his legislative sleeve, denies flatly that he intends to introduce any such measure.

"I would like to make a speech on some of the things that happened in the last campaign," he admitted, "and if I did introduce a Hatch Act to keep state officials and employees out of politics I'd try not to have as many loopholes as there are in the federal law. But I'm not going to introduce any such bill because I don't want to give anybody the satisfaction of knowing he's successfully evading the law."

Champion oyster eaters in the legislature are both westerners, according to unofficial scores established at the food dealers oyster party Tuesday night. For a time it looked like Senator Marshall of Stokes and Representative Hutchins of Madison would tie, but the Madison Republican was finally conceded honors.

Visitors at the state library are unanimous in expression of thanks for the new fluorescent lights. The old light fixtures were supposed to give an indirect light over the whole room, but succeeded only in being inadequate. It is now possible to read without screwing up the eyes, and twisting around in chairs so that light fell from the proper angle.

President pro tem John Larkins of the Senate has a flock of titles including one as Kentucky Colonel, and of course as Senator. But yesterday afternoon Lieut. Governor Harris apologized to the Senate for calling him a gentleman! As speaker of the House some years ago Mr. Harris recognized rising members as the "Gentlemen from So and So." Senate custom calls for recognition by title, as the "Senator from So and So." When Senator Larkins arose to make a motion, and was greeted as the "Gentleman from Jones," Mr. Harris quickly apologized to the Senate, stating his reason for the apology, and making it clear that he did not mean to imply that Senator Larkins and the other 49 Senators are not gentlemen.

Asked to explain a local bill providing for extension of the city limits of Lexington, Senator Lee Wilson frankly admitted that he hadn't read the bill himself, but that since it had been prepared by attorneys representing both factions he presumed it was what they wanted, and was a good bill.

David and Polly

YESTERDAY: David and Polly just have repaired the swimming pool at the old inn David's aunt left him when she died. Nobody has ever been able to make the inn pay, and it is vacant now. But Polly thinks it can at least have some fun out of it. Now Margo Powers, who is glamour personified and the daughter of David's boss, is on her way to the inn. She has decided that she wants David—Polly or no Polly.

CHAPTER 14 Four's A Crowd

"Did you bring your suit, Polly?" David wanted to know.
"Certainly I did. You don't think I'd let you two do all the swimming do you?"
David laughed, and watched Peter getting a bundle out of the car. "I hope my trunks aren't full of moth-holes," he said.
"There were a few in them," said Polly.
"How do you know?"
"Peter brought them over to me to mend."
"Well, I give up!" said David. "And Peter acting as though he had just discovered the trunks in my closet."

Polly was also watching Peter now. She turned to David.
"How can he swim with that awful brace on?" she asked.
"You know he can't walk without it, though. Remember how he fell that day in the parlor? You told me about it, David, and—how's he going to walk down to the pool after he gets his swimming trunks on?"
"I'll carry him."
"I won't like that. It'll make him feel so helpless."
"It's the only way. Sweetness. Don't worry, we'll make a sort of game out of it."

"Oh, David, you are a dear!" said Polly. Then she called out to Peter: "Don't forget the towels!"
"No," said Peter. "I got 'em." He came hurrying back to them as fast as his lameness would permit. "We can all go inside the hotel and dress, can't we?"
"Yes," said David. "Polly, you take the inn parlor, and Peter and I'll take the dining room."
"Why not use two of the bed-rooms, Cousin David?" Peter asked.
"They're pretty dusty. I'm afraid. Don't forget, all the cleaning we've done has been confined to the larger rooms downstairs."
The trio went on into the big empty house.

In the lobby David glanced at an ornate fountain that was built in the center of the room, and shrugged.
"Uncle Fred sure had highfalutin ideas," he said. "Imagine putting a thing like that in the middle of the lobby."
"Why not?" said Polly. "It must look lovely when the water is turned on—especially when the colored electric lights are in use. The sound of a fountain is always soothing and nice."
"Well, see how it works one of these days," said David. "I'll have to do some work on the fountain's piping before it'll be in working order. But come on, we've got a date to go swimming. Had you two forgotten?"

"Oh, gee, not by a heck of a lot!" said Peter.
He went hobbling off to the dining room.
David turned to Polly. "Walk into my parlor, said the you know what?" he invited. "We'll meet you down at the pool."
He went on into the dining room where Peter was already unfastening the iron brace. He stood for a few moments looking over the double row of tables, and the heaped-up chairs. There wasn't, he thought, anything quite so depressing as a deserted hotel. Hotels, especially resort hotels, ought to be bright with lights, and singing with gaiety. Freddy's Polly certainly looked its name.

First Swim
"Cousin David," Peter said, "I— I— guess you'll have to carry me down to the pool."
"Sure," said David. "But I won't be doing it long. You're getting to be a better walker every day."
Peter, now dressed only in his swimming trunks, looked down at his leg. "But—but—how'll I stand up in the pool?" he asked.
"The water will hold you up," said David. "All you've got to do is stand on that fine left leg of yours and learn the breast stroke—Don't worry about that, boy. We'll manage—you and I."

A few minutes later, he, Polly and Peter were in the water. He tried not to feel a great wave of pity sweeping over him when he saw Peter's shrunken leg. And somehow or other he hated for Polly to see it. But she acted as though there was nothing at all wrong, and he followed her example.
While Polly swam and dived, he stood in the shallow end of the pool giving Peter lessons in swimming. The boy caught on rapidly, and he was soon doing wonders with his strong young arms, and his good left leg. Holding to the rod that ran along the pool's edge, he worked his legs in an effort to get the crawl movement—the right leg moving only feebly.

"You're doing swell," David encouraged. "Exercise is all you need. In no time at all you'll be kicking practically all the water right out of the pool!"

Peter laughed gaily. "Go on, now, Cousin David, and dive," he said. "I want to see you dive."
"Okay," said David, "but you stay away from the deep water." He swung himself up to the pool's edge and stood poised there. "I'll fix a diving board one of these days," he said. Then, he sprang into the air and did a perfect swan dive, hitting the water with scarcely a splash. "How was it?" he called out to Peter, when he came to the surface.
"Gee, you were swell!" said Peter. "You looked just like Weismuller."
"Exactly!" said a voice that was not Polly's.
David looked up. Margo Powers was standing close by watching them.
"Hello, Margo!" he called.
"Hello, yourself!" said Margo. "I'm sorry I didn't bring along my swimming things."
David again swung himself out of the water.
"Hello, Peter—Hello, Polly!" Margo said, but her eyes were no David's.

He was all that she had imagined he would be in swimming trunks. Straight, brown legs; broad shoulders; golden-brown torso. And again she thought of him on Long Island's beaches, gay and happy at resorts she had visited. What a shame for such a perfect specimen of young manhood to be wasted on an isolated swimming pool.

"Do you swim?" Peter asked, eyeing Margo's slacks and stocking-less feet.
"Of course!" Margo laughed. "Gee!" said Peter.
Polly laughed and said: "Peter probably thinks you're far too ornamental to get wet with us."
"Do you know what I think I'll do?" Margo said suddenly. "I think I'll race right back to town and get my bathing suit!"
"But it's getting pretty late," said David. "Maybe you'd better wait until another time."
"But, David, I do so want to swim!"
Party's End
Polly shook out her hair. "I've got to get back to town now," she said. "You can drive me in if you don't mind. Then you three can have a swim in the sunset."
"Oh, that will be fun!" said Margo.
"You mean you're going to leave us now, Polly?" Peter asked.
"Yes, Peter, honey. I've got to get Aunt Susan's supper, you know."
"Then I'll go too," said Peter.
Margo looked at David. "It looks," she said, "as though we're to swim alone."
"I think we'd better all drive back to town," David said. "We can make a date for a swim some other time."
"Very well," said Margo, disappointed. "I do hope I haven't broken up your party."
"Of course you haven't," David assured. "We weren't going to stay late anyway."
"Well, go on with your swimming and diving," Margo urged. "I'll have a smoke and watch you."
Polly turned, did a neat dive, and swam out. David followed her.
"I'll run in and dress now," Polly said. "You and Peter have another lesson. It takes me longer to dress than it does you two."
She ran across the grounds through the lengthening afternoon shadows, and into the inn.
Margo watched her. Cute little figure, she thought. But probably the sort of girl who would soon become plumpish and matronly. No! at all the sort of girl David Wiley should marry. She would neglect him just as soon as she had a baby or two.

She'd give all her attention to her children, and practically forget that her husband existed. David Wiley ought to have the kind of wife who would appreciate him all the time who wouldn't even let mother-love keep her from always being a sweetheart to him—
She dropped down cross-legged near the edge of the pool.
"Let me see you do that swan dive again, David," she said. "I want to learn how to do it myself."
"It'll be easier to do it," said David, "when I get a diving board fixed up."
"You do it all right without a diving board," said Peter loyally. "Nobody ever does it any better, not even Weismuller or—our better fellow, Buster Crabbe."
"You're prejudiced, Peter," said Margo.

David.
He took his place not far from Margo. He poised for a moment, his toes curled over the cement, and then once again sprang into space. "The dive was perfect, more graceful even than the first one."
"I'll never be able to do it that well," said Margo.
"You beautiful—beautiful—beautiful man, you, she thought. You ought to have an audience, other swimmers and divers, women to exclaim over your magnificent body men to envy you your diving and swimming ability. You oughtn't to be diving just for my benefit. You should be where I could show you off—be proud of you."
"Come along now, Peter," David said when he had swum to the shallow end of the pool. "We must get dressed. You mustn't get chilled."
"This water sure feels good," Peter said. He took hold of David's hand. "I'm going to keep on trying until I'm as good a swimmer as you and Polly."

No Change Recommended As To Slot Machine Law

Reflector Bureau.
By LYNN NISBET

Raleigh, Jan. 16.—Despite the crusades of several superior court judges, the sentencing of a number of the slot machine operators to prison, and perhaps the most vigorous editorial ever waged against an industry, the new budget revenue bill fails to recommend any modification of the slot machine section of the 1939 act.

Neither does the budget commission take any cognizance of the recent decision of the United States supreme court voiding the attempt to collect taxes from out of state dealers in merchandise who establish temporary show rooms in this state for the display of goods and the taking of orders.

Revenue Commissioner A. J. Maxwell yesterday afternoon recommended to the joint finance committee that the merchandise display slot machine section be amended so as to leave no doubt whatever of the effectiveness of the Flannagan act of 1937 and the illegality of the pin board type of slot machines.

Receipts from out of state merchants were small and a good part of the tax paid was paid under protest and so never got fully into the state coffers. But during the past year the state received about $173,000 from license fees on the pin board type of slot machines. A

A crusade organized at the judicial conference last summer reached its highest point when Judge Hunt Parker came to Wake county last fall to preside over superior court. Upshot of the several trials was that thousands of dollars worth of slot machine equipment was destroyed and operators, distributors and lessors of the illegal slots were assessed heavy fines and sent to jail. The king bee of them all, Joe Calcutt of Fayetteville, pleaded guilty to possessing unlawful machines and was sentenced to pay a fine of $10,000 and serve 12 months in jail. From the sentence he appealed, claiming it excessive and appeal is now pending. Meantime there are no applications coming into the revenue department for license for pinboard or marble board slots, and Mr. Maxwell predicts that the state will derive no revenue from the section ever if it kept in the law.

Another reason he would like to have that section eliminated entirely is because it will relieve his department of the necessity of determining whether a machine is a gambling device or not. Such determination is of course impossible. The revenue department can only grant license on basis of the application, and if the machine later becomes a gambling proposition the department can no more be held accountable than if an automobile licensed for legal speed is caught speeding or transporting liquor. But it admittedly looks bad for the state to take money for slot machine license and then take and destroy the machine.

Observers, however, see implications in the suggestion for striking the two sections above mentioned out of the revenue bill that may plague members later in the session. The revenue act is supposed to be a "continuing act." Suggestion was made two years ago that little change would need to be made in it this year. Pursuant to that suggestion the budget commission suggested amendment of revenue act to propose amendments, one of them at least material in its nature, establish precedent for other interests to press for modifications in their favor.

The fact that the budgeteer made no suggestion for eliminating the slot machine license after all the court action and ado last fall gives point to the contention that they were zealously looking for every dime of revenue possible. Preliminary and casual survey of sentiment among finance committee members, however, leaves the very definite impression that there will be licensing of pinboard slot machines in North Carolina next year.

Says Judge Webb Drafting Dry Act

Reflector Bureau.
By HENRY AVERILL

Raleigh, Jan. 16.—Do not bet the family jewels on any report in connection with the proposed drive of the Drys to jam a state-wide liquor referendum bill through the current General Assembly.

With that warning and advice, your Raleigh reporter now passes along the report that Federal Judge Yates Webb of Shelby, is drafting the referendum bill which will eventually get before the legislature with the official blessings of the United Dry Forces (Cale K. Burgess, generalissimo), the W. C. T. U. and other ardent advocates of absolute abridity.

There is passed along also, the report that Representatives A. C. Reynolds, Jr., of Buncombe, and C. E. Quinn of Duplin will be the introducers of the measure. It is also reported in some circles, which think they are well informed, that a strong effort is being made to get the signature of Rupert Pickens of Guilford as a third sponsor.

Such a lineup would give to the bill paternity representing each of the three great sections—west Piedmont and east.

When the Yates drawn (if it is being so drawn) bill will be introduced (if it ever is) by these gentlemen (if they accept the responsibility) isn't even reported.

From the tone of this piece the reader doubts less no doubt that the liquor referendum is clouded with doubt. That's right—you're right.

Bobby Jones Says He'll Never Win Another Tourney

ADMITTS TOUCH IS LONG GONE

Bobby's Children Are Proving Adept At Sport

By ROMNEY WHEELER
Atlanta, Jan. 16.—(AP)—Bobby Jones, a decade ago America's emperor of golf, says he'll never win another tournament.

The grand slam winner of 1930, who "abandoned" an undefeated U. S. amateur U. S. open, British amateur and British open champion, competes regularly in the Augusta, Ga. masters' tourney and is eligible to enter the U. S. open—but he'll tell you without hesitation that his championship touch is gone.

His golf still is expert. On days when he is swimming, just right he can come close to beating any pro or amateur in the game. It's the tournament concentration that has been lost.

"You can't win in tournament play unless you concentrate on every stroke," he explains. "That's why I never expect to win the Masters. And that's why I never expect to play again in any tournament elsewhere."

"I like to get together with the gang and play a few rounds for the fun of it. I guess it's really the main reason I play at Augusta every year. But the open—forget it."

Bobby's son, Robert Tyre 3rd, 14, is doing all right for a 14-year-old, says his famous dad. But he'll hardly be a tournament player—and Bobby would just as soon he wasn't.

"Right now he's growing fast," he says. "He thinks more about how far he can hit a ball than where he's hitting it. He's playing in the 90's, which I guess is fair for his age. I'll be satisfied if he gets where he can do 18 holes in the low 70's. Just good enough to get a lot of fun out of the game."

And daughter Clara? She's now 15 and taking a mild interest in the game. But nothing sensational says Bobby.

Getting back to his own game, the 38-year-old former champion (He'll be 39 St. Patrick's day) is looking forward to his eighth annual competition in the Augusta Masters' over a course which he designed. His back injury, suffered just before the 1940 tournament, has disappeared completely and he is shooting in the 60's at Atlanta's East Lake course.

"I'll be there," he says with a grin, "but just for the fun of it. I don't expect to win."

ANNUAL MEETING HELD BY FIRST FEDERAL SAVINGS

threat of war from abroad, yet our main defense is not in our money. It is in the American home and its way of life. That way of life viewed in the economic light is partially embodied in the freedom of a worker, having earned his work's worth, to decide himself how he shall use the money. It means that those who have used their earnings to buy property shall determine how they are to enjoy its use.

"The association lent $362,036.98 in 1940 on home mortgage security. Roughly, it was used by borrowers for the following amounts and purposes: $165,614.58—construction of new homes; $81,644.64—purchase of existing homes; $6,790.00—repairs and modernization and refinancing of properties of which borrowers already held title; and $108,077.76 for miscellaneous purposes. By this lending we added 125 borrowers to the list, making a total of 350 persons whom this institution is now financing. In the course of the year, 79 of our borrowers paid off the indebtedness and acquired free and clear title to their properties. We have thus freed 79 persons to the list of debt-free home owners in this community.

"Loans outstanding as of December 31, 1940 were $626,528.24 a gain of 24.8 per cent for the year. Against them the association holds mortgages on properties appraised conservatively at $1,069,960, the security thus giving a substantial margin of protection. Our charter for the year under which we operate provides a maximum percentage of 80 per cent of loan to property value, and it can readily be seen that we are considerably on the safer side of this margin.

"New money invested in this institution in 1940 totaled $394,338.98. Offsetting this gain partially by withdrawals which were normal in most of the month and which totaled $114,643.39, our net gains in savers' and investors' capital was $190,295.48.

"We paid dividends of $21,297.10 totaling the distribution for the two dividend periods, June 30 and December 31. Distribution was made at the rate of four per cent, which has been this institution's reward to thirty savers and investors since the beginning of the association. These two were the sixth and seventh consecutive dividends paid by the institution.

"Reserves, which are a financial institution's bulwark of safety, were increased by $3,084.12 of allocations from the 1940 earnings.

"The association's cash position was improved during 1940. A glance at the balance sheet will show that we have $18,676.80 more cash than at the close of 1939."

ARTHUR TEAMS SPLIT 'LEADER

Girls Win, But Boys Lose to Grimesland High

Bell Arthur, Jan. 16.—Arthur high school split a double header here Tuesday night with Grimesland. The Arthur girls eked out a 30 to 25 victory, and the boys lost 24 to 23 in the last thirty seconds of play. This was the second time that the girls won from Grimesland this season. Also the Arthur boys had previously defeated Grimesland.

The Arthur girls were off to a good start and piled up 23 points in the first half. Grimesland got ten Elsie Lave Sutton with her left hand bandaged, used her right hand effectively in shooting and kept the team out in front. In the fourth quarter, Grimesland girls exhibited an improved brand of play and came within five points of overcoming Arthur's lead. Once more the Arthur girls turned on the steam and fought off their opponents rally, but it surely looked as if the Arthur girls would be outdone several times. Spectators were completely stunned by Grimesland's great comeback. Those who saw action were: for Arthur, at forward, Sutton, 8; Tyson, 6; Crawford, 14; Z. McLawhorn, 2; Rhodes, Hemy, Mazingo, McLawhorn, Jones, Wooten, Worthington, Forrest; at guard, Smith, Carraway, Mazingo, Willoughby; Tyson; for Grimesland, at forward, Majette, 14; Elks, 7; and Porter, 4; at guard, Bates, Tally, Bates, and Little; Referee, Lewis (ACC) and Crawford (Arthur High) umpire, Cothran (Meredit).

The boys' game was like a fairytale. Arthur boys rolled up 14 points during the first quarter. Grimesland got 6 at the half. Arthur led 29 to 10. That was the end of the game as far as Arthur was concerned. In the second half Grimesland played rings around the Arthur boys. Grimesland wined out a ten point lead, scored 14 points while Arthur scored only three, and went on to win 24 to 23. Never was LONGS FOR AFRICA—Life on a little farm at Oakham, Mass., seems pretty tame to Dr. James B. McCord (above), 70, who spent more than 40 years as a doctor in South Africa, pitting his wits and medicine against savage witch doctors. His African curios are heaped on the table, while in his hands he holds the rather skimpy beaded "dresses" worn by native girls.

The old saying, "A game is never over until the final whistle," more true than it was tonight. Edward Willoughby was best for Arthur with nine. Referee Crawford. Arthur high plays Stokes high next Tuesday night.

Sen. Cherry Still Up To Old Tricks

Raleigh, Jan. 15.—Senator Gregg Cherry, who earned reputation for "active" during his overlordship of the 1937 house of representatives, presented the congressional district bill in the senate Monday night, simultaneously with introduction of an identical bill in the house by Jarvis of Buncombe.

Mr. Cherry doesn't like the way the bill rearranges the counties in his district, and so he offered it with the statement that he was doing so "by request, and with reservations."

Presiding officer Reg Harris was quick to take up the challenge and he flashed back "Referred to committee on congressional districts, without reservation." Senator Cherry is chairman of that committee and so will have further opportunity to use the iron-handed control of its deliberations that gained him fame as speaker.

post in North Carolina, while Johnson's home unit is one of the smallest ones in the state, there wouldn't appear much doubt of the result—but the difference in size has, in fact, become the burning issue of the campaign. Johnson supporters are raising the old one-gallon boy from the country against the sleek city slicker war cry and are bending every effort to convince the little posts that the Legion in North Carolina has been run too long by the big posts.

The Chatham county man is chairman of the state oratorical contest sponsored by the Legion; while McMillan is head of the boys state committee—facts which have put both in the Legion spotlight recently. Both have outstanding records of long service to the Legion.

When Twins Meet Twins

It was a happy occasion for Mrs. George Demeris (above) of Chicago when her two sets of twins met for the first time. Left to right are George, Jr., William, James and Georgianna. The older twins were born January 4, 1940, and the younger ones less than a year later, on December 16. George Demeris is produce manager in a grocery.

LOCAL GIRL SCOUT DINNER MEET HELD

There are 13 leaders and assistants that meet with the six groups each from two to three committee women. There are 15 in all.

There are five consultants available for all Girl Scouts.

There are four organizations in Greenville that sponsor one troop each. One camp scholarship is given each year by the Greenville Service League.

The Girl Scouts are indebted to the American Legion Auxiliary for their flags.

In 1940 there were 152 registered Girl Scouts. The total registered at national headquarters actively appeared in girl scouting in Greenville is 187.

A survey made of the city schools show approximately 612 of scout age, that is from 10-18, and 230 of the Brownie age 7-9. Total of 842 possible Girl Scouts.

The two outstanding events of the year were the two courts of honor. One was held in the week of March 12th, the birthday of Girl Scouting. The other court of honor was held the week of October 12, birthday of Juliette Low, the founder of Girl Scouting at the same time the cookie sales were held. A tea was given for the Brownies and a party for the Boy Scouts. The girls enjoyed a free movie, a courtesy extended by Mr. Walker of the Pitt Theatre.

In May a rally was held in which the Kinston girls participated. Under the direction of Miss Boerger three radio plays were given by the Girl Scouts. Three programs have been given by council members.

In way of community service, our girls have helped with the Red Cross drive, filled Christmas baskets, donating one box of Girl Scout cookies to each basket. They washed the faces and dressed all the dolls given by the firemen at Christmas. Knitted baby caps and several garments for the lavette project for the Service League under the supervision of Miss Ginn and Mrs. James T. Little.

A group of girls from troop three meet each Thursday with Eleanor James to knit for the Red Cross. Troop 4 dived, stenciled and made the curtains for the scout cabin.

The cabin at 14th and Elm streets has been made more comfortable, attractive and suitable for the Girl Scouts under the supervision of Mr. J. H. Rose, with NYA labor.

A trip to the cabin to see your time just to see the two pictures hanging over the two fireplaces in the living room that were painted by Mrs. Charles Laughlinhouse.

Miss Boerger has organized a Girl Scout chorus. Another feature of the Christmas activities was the two mother-daughter banquets. The banquets were planned, the decorations and place cards were designed, planned and executed by the girls themselves. They were a credit to anyone.

One troop took an Opportunity for Christmas.

The council feels gratified that the girls have responded so enthusiastically during the past year and are looking forward to greater and better things for the Girl Scouts of Greenville in the coming years.

Man About Manhattan

New York—So many bleak headlines and announcements of war and disaster have filled the public mind in the last year that Dinah Shore barely shrugged when someone telephoned and told her there was a fire at her house and for heaven's sake to hurry home.

She said all right and hung up and put on her coat and hat and bought some magazines before getting into a taxicab, which she read all the way home. When she got there she went inside and there was a shout from her sister and brother-in-law, who had arranged a little going away surprise party for her, and they thought a fire would be the best thing imaginable to build up her imagination for the surprise. So they led her into a room where a gathering of her friends were waiting and grinning, and there was a plum cake that had been doused with brandy and set afire. That was the fire. Everybody had a good time and next day Dinah went out to California, because Eddie Cantor is out there and she is singing in his show.

And that's all there is to the story except perhaps to point out the trend toward a calm acceptance of things that seems to be growing in the minds of the people. Today the thought of a fire held no undue alarm; a year ago she probably would have fainted.

There used to be a little shop in Third avenue where such diversified items as birdseed, inner-soles, for shoes, and rosaries were sold, but it isn't there now. It has been replaced by another proprietor who sells fancy blankets and collars for dogs.

It has only been about five years since 52nd street took most of the play away from the night life side of Broadway, and now the trend is continuing northward. There is a definite "northward urge" in nightclubs. The newer ones are opening on the sidestreets between 52nd and Central Park. The Sixties are getting a play as well. But I doubt if the time ever comes when 52nd street will be passe. Too many old stand-bys there, such as Leon and Eddies, who modestly bill their place as the world's 8th wonder, and also Tony of speakeasy fame, who dreamed of singing opera but who wound up as a successful night life operator. Tony's wife is also opening a place, known simply as "Tony's Wife," and wouldn't it be ironic if the time should ever come that he is remembered simply as the husband of the owner of "Tony's Wife?"

There is a girl in Brooklyn who makes a fine income from handmade purses. She weaves the purses out of old silk neckties, which her brother collects.

Quick now, name me five seas that border on the Balkans. This was a question that bobbed up at a party the other night, and very few people could give the answer. The answer will probably surprise you.

Another stumper at parties is to ask someone to name something that everyone who is present but themselves has done.

What Do You Know About U.S. FINANCES?

1. The book before Sen. Alva B. Adams is filled with figures. The scales and expression on his face ought to tell you what they are about.

2. The United States expects to spend $17,485,528,049 in its next fiscal year—the 12-month period beginning when?

3. President Roosevelt recommended the 62 per cent, or $10,811,314,600, of 1941-42 budget expenditures be for defense, bringing estimated cost of the armament program to: $28,480,000,000? $11,959,000,000? $52,000,000,000?

4. The present statutory limit of our national debt is $49,000,000,000. After 1941-42 expenditures the debt will be: Still below that figure? About even with it? Above it?

5. Will total spending in the 1941-42 fiscal year exceed or be less than that during the World War year, 1917-18?

Each full question counts 20. A score of 80 is good.

ACTIVITIES OF THE BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONAL WOMAN'S CLUB

The Greenville Business and Professional Women's Club is sponsoring a movement for clubs of North Carolina to furnish a complete mobile kitchen to be sent to England. A cablegram from Miss Haskett, former president of the British Federation of Business and Professional Women and at present employed in the Ministry of Labor, says these mobile units will be a valuable contribution at this time to relieve suffering.

Dr. Moffet, national vice-president of the Business and Professional Women, has asked for contributions of 25 cents per member. The executive board of the local club voted last week to send that amount on to national headquarters.

The movement started today is only state-wide and it is proposed that the state federation raise enough money to purchase a mobile unit independent of contributions made to the national agency.

Letters outlining the program instituted here are mailed today to presidents of all clubs in North Carolina.

New York, Jan. 16.—(AP)—Scattered favorites displayed mild recovery tendencies in today's stock market, but the list as a whole continued to fall.

EASTERNERS IN SENATE POSTS

Section Holds Margin On Important Committees

Reflector Bureau. By HENRY AVERILL. Raleigh, Jan. 16.—The east (political and geographic) holds a big majority of the important committee chairmanships in the Senate, in some contrast to the situation in the House where the Piedmont and far west received about two-thirds of the juicy places.

In the Senate the extreme western section—that vast expanse of mountains west of Asheville—drew almost a complete blank as far as worthwhile chairmanships go; while the Piedmont's portion was more notable for the headaches in it than for the importance of its share.

Look down the line, the east holds:

Agriculture: L. Y. Ballentine, Wake, (balanced the House by L. L. Burgin, Henderson); Appropriations: Willie Lee Lumpkin, Franklin (John Kerr, Jr., in the House makes a sweep); Conservation and Development: Van Watson Nash, (balanced by C. P. Rogers of Polk in the House); Education: H. E. Stacy, Robeson (unanimous for the east with Arch Allen, Wake, in the House); Labor: J. H. Clark, Bryde, Hoke (where's Durham from which comes Victor S. Bryant in the House?); Labor: J. H. Clark Bladen, it's east in the House, too with Laurie McEachern, Hoke); Judiciary: Archie Gay, Northampton (it went west in the House to Rupert Pickens of Guilford); Health: Dr. T. W. M. Long, Halifax (east again with Dr. C. T. Johnson, Robeson); Roads: Jeff D. Johnson, Sampson (balanced by Clarence Stone, Rockingham in the House).

The Piedmont and West have: Banks: Gordon Gray, Forsyth (also west with J. D. Ross, Randolph in the House); cities, counties and towns: Hampton Price, Rockingham (another all-west with J. B. Vogler, Mecklenburg in the House); Insurance: J. C. Pittman, Lee (again all-west with H. C. Dobson, Surry, as House chairman); Judiciary: I. Tom Gold, Guilford (easterly W. I. Halstead in House).

The headache committees are all west: Senatorial districts: "Curly" Sanders, Alamance, Seneca, and W. B. Austin, Ashe, House; Greg Cherry, Gaston, Senate; Hubert C. Jarvis, Buncombe, House.

Brody's was closed all day today, to begin their final mark down on the balance of the stock. Opening day of the sale was attended by hundreds of people and plans are being made to have an even larger crowd when the store opens Friday.
