FASCIST FORCES WITHDRAW FROM TEPELENI

FORSYTH ASKS CURB ON SALE OF BEER, WINE

Bill Would Ban Sale Between Midnight And 6 A. M.

MORE MEASURES BEEN OFFERED

Bill Providing Retirement System For All State Employees Approved By Education Committee

Raleigh, Jan. 31. (AP)—The legislative war on alcoholic beverages took a new turn today when the Forsyth House delegation introduced a bill to prohibit the sale of beer and wine in Forsyth county between midnight and 6 o'clock in the morning.

The legislature already has a measure to prohibit the sale of fortified wines in the 74 counties legally dry and a bill is ready for introduction to provide a state referendum on prohibition.

The joint Education Committee favorably reported a bill to provide a retirement system for all state employees, including school teachers, and it was sent to the Appropriations committee.

Proposing that the Highway Commission allocate in advance funds to be paid to counties on the installment plan as reimbursement, Rep. Halstead offered a bill to facilitate the construction of roads to connect county seats with larger towns and cities within counties. The bill set up no specific funds, but said the commission could allocate in advance the money expected to be appropriated in the future for construction of such roads.

Passed and sent to the House was the Staebli bill to require judges to charge juries that they may render second degree verdicts in cases in which persons are charged with first degree burglary.

The Senate ordered ratified into law a bill to provide cooperative law enforcement for New Hanover, Onslow, Pender and Brunswick counties.

The joint Roads committee held another session with Chairman Frank L. Dunlap of the Highway and Public Works Commission and many members by their questions indicated opposition to the present district setup of the commission.

Drops Bill Aimed Retaining Permit

Raleigh, Jan. 31.—(AP)—Rep. Weeks of Edgecombe killed his own bill today when he asked House Judiciary Number One to postpone indefinitely consideration of a measure to permit first offenders convicted of drunken driving to keep their driver's licenses if judges so recommended.

"It is apparent that the public does not favor this bill relating to operators of cars while under the influence of intoxicants or narcotics," said Weeks. "Therefore, I have asked the committee, of which I am a member, not to give the bill consideration. Superior court judges state solicitors, county judges and county solicitors whom I have consulted concerning this bill highly favor it, but although that may be true, my personal views, whether with or without merit, ought to and do yield to the public view."

With some horse play the committee reported favorably the Taylor-Quinn bill to provide that persons being married be given official marriage certificates. Now no certificate is provided unless a minister gives one.

Bundsmen

Newton, N. J., Jan. 31.—(AP)—Wilhelm Kunze, national leader of the German-American Bund, and eight other Bund associates were sentenced today to serve one year to 14 months in state prison on charges of violating New Jersey's "race hatred" law.

Two of them were also fined $2,000 each and the other seven $1,000 each.

The men had been indicted on charges of making or permitting anti-Semitic speeches at the Bund's camp Nordland. They elected to file a demurrer challenging the constitutionality of the law and denying the seriousness of the charges instead of standing trial.

Judge John C. Losey overruled the demurrer January 7 and imposed the sentences today. An appeal motion was immediately filed.

Sec. Knox Asserts Nazis Ready Attempt Invasion

Germans Stress U-Boat Threat

Well-Informed Commentator Dienst Declares Hitler's Statements Regarding Torpedoing Of Neutral Ships Important Part Of Address

Berlin, Jan. 31.—(AP)—The well-informed commentator Dienst Aus Deutschland regards Adolf Hitler's dictum that U-boat warfare is only about to begin in the spring as probably the most important section of his address yesterday.

"Germany has overlooked no possibility to expand her U-boat weapon, both materially and regarding personnel, in the best manner imaginable," Dienst said today.

"That applies not only to the number, but also to the training of submarine crews which cannot be surpassed."

Authorized sources reiterated emphatically that Adolf Hitler referred to ships reaching the English combat zone when he spoke yesterday of torpedoing vessels at sight.

"The Fuehrer in his anniversary speech yesterday said: 'Let there be no deception about one fact: whoever believes he can help England must at all events know one thing: 'Every ship with or without convoy that comes within range of our torpedo tubes will be torpedoed.'"

"They said the entire context of the speech showed no other interpretation was possible. They acknowledged, however, that the warning to neutrals also was addressed to the United States not to send ships, convoyed or otherwise into this combat zone."

Ball For Colored Set For Tonight

With the President's Birthday Ball for the white citizens of the county over, attention today was focused on the ball to be held tonight for the colored citizens.

The affair will be held in the new gymnasium on West Fifth street with the program scheduled to get under way at 9 o'clock.

A special program will be held at 10 o'clock informally dedicating the new building, for which $500 was subscribed by local colored citizens.

Mayor Sugg, city aldermen and members of the city school board will be present, as well as other specially invited white guests.

The gymnasium will be formally dedicated at a date later in the spring, at which time WPA officials and others will take part on the program.

Professor C. M. Eppes of the colored schools will preside over the meeting at the outset, but later will turn the program over to Dr. J. A. Battle, chairman of the Infantine Paralysis campaign among colored citizens.

Both Professor Eppes and Dr. Battle have devoted their time to arrange an interesting and entertaining program for tonight. The county and city colored teachers are combining efforts to make the affair a success and indications are that a large crowd will be present for the dance and program.

Holds High Point Move Was Illegal

Raleigh, Jan. 31.—(AP)—The city of High Point can't change status in the middle of litigation, the State Supreme court ruled in effect today in remanding to Guilford county Superior court a case in which certain taxpayers had sought to block construction of a High Point hydro-electric project on the Yadkin river.

The court, in handing down six opinions, also dismissed an appeal from a Yadkin county decision holding an injunction against proceeding with the project, but the opinion in this case was made subject to final determination to the Guilford case.

The Guilford case was bought by J. W. McGuinn and others and the Duke power company intervened. The hydro-electric project was first proposed in 1936, but has been held up by litigation ever since then.

Addressing a gathering of Nazi party leaders in Berlin's Sportsplatz to celebrate the 8th anniversary of his rise to power, Adolf Hitler warned that "Germany has no quarrel with the American people," but if Great Britain, "every ship that comes within reach of our torpedoes will be torpedoed." In this radiophoto from Berlin, Hitler salutes the crowd.

CITY PLANNING IS ORGANIZED

Committee Named by City Already Busy At Work

The City Planning Committee, recently set up by the Greenville Board of Aldermen, already has swung into action with indications that it will play a big part in civic affairs.

At the first meeting held by the body, M. K. Blount was named president, J. B. James was chosen as secretary, with Mrs. J. H. B. Moore and Mrs. W. E. Hooker serving as ex-officio members of the committee.

A general discussion on several projects which the committee considered of importance to the community were considered at the meeting. Among the projects discussed were the super-highway, bus station, airport, curb market and fire tower.

Mrs. W. I. Wooten was appointed to confer with the mayor regarding a site for the curb market and fire tower and President Blount was appointed to make an investigation in regard to certain street projects.

The possibility of developing the Cotanche street site for playground purposes was discussed and the committee went on record as recommending to the Park and Playground committee that they take such a project under consideration.

A committee composed of Chairman W. A. Ryan, Mrs. J. Key Brown and Mrs. W. I. Wooten was appointed to investigate numerous projects and report to the next meeting as to what it considered the most important needs of the community at the present time.

The group decided to hold meetings the second Friday night in each month.

Members of the committee and their terms of office follow: R. M. Garrett, three years; J. S. Ficklen, three years; M. K. Blount, five years; Mrs. J. Key Brown, four years; J. B. James, two years; Mrs. W. I. Wooten, four years; W. A. Ryan, one year; Mrs. K. B. Pace, five years; Mrs. J. H. Blount, two years.

ARE AWAITING GOOD WEATHER

Navy Department Head Testifies Before Senate Foreign Relations Committee in Support of Administration's Bill to Aid Britain

Washington, Jan. 31.—(AP)—Secretary Knox testified today that this government had information the Nazis were now watching long-range weather forecasts for a period of expected good weather in which to launch an invasion of England.

Appearing before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in support of the administration's British aid bill, the Secretary of the Navy said there were certain "menacing developments" which indicated that "a very grave crisis" would come within 60 or 90 days.

These developments, he said, centered around two things: That the German air force had changed its tactics from indiscriminate bombing of London in a fruitless effort to break the British people's morale to the "far more effective" bombing of industrial centers.

That the British yet have been unable to find any successful convoy method of combating increased German submarine activity.

"Right now," Knox told the committee, "they are watching the long-range weather forecast for a period when they will have good weather for a long enough time."

Knox said it was "wild fancy" to believe that a negotiated peace now could bring stability to Europe.

The Navy Department head recalled a recent suggestion for a negotiated peace by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and mentioned Lindbergh's assertion that the United States was not vulnerable to attack.

"I have the greatest respect for Col. Lindbergh," Knox declared. "He has great knowledge of commercial aviation, but his knowledge of military aviation has been slight."

"The conclusions that he has drawn indicate that lack of knowledge."

British Seaplanes Leave N. C. Coast

Elizabeth City, Jan. 31.—(AP)—Two long-range reconnaissance seaplanes bearing the British insignia rose out of the Pesquotank river here this morning and set out for an unannounced British Atlantic possession where they will be taken over by the British government.

Three planes remained tied to their buoys, where they have been awaiting flight orders for several weeks.

The two ships that left this morning bring to seven the total of planes that have left here for service in war zones.

Work And Fun Mixed At Session At Chapel Hill

Reflector Bureau By LYNN NISBET
On the Campus at Chapel Hill Thursday, January 30.—The General Assembly of North Carolina took a one day "short course" in higher education by assembling for its regular separate and a joint session today on the campus of the first state university in America to open its doors to students.

Traveling by special buses, seven of which were supplied by the Carolina Coach Company, the assemblymen, their wives and girl friends, clerks, pages and hangers-on such as newspaper men and lobbyists, were greeted upon their arrival in the university town by its mayor and a group of distinguished citizens, including faculty members.

But the most attractive part of the welcoming committee, as it was the occasion for the sessions here were the charming senioritis from South America. One hundred and ten representatives of seven South American republics are attending the first Inter-Continental Institute a six week period of study, and they chose the North Carolina University

Stars And 'Uninvited' Girl Help Roosevelt Celebrate

WILLKIE SEES GUNS IN ACTION

American Visits Dover Defenses At Hell's Corner

Dover, England, Jan. 31.—(AP)—Twice during a whirlwind inspection of "hell's corner" at the Dover defenses Wendell L. Willkie saw anti-aircraft guns in action today against a Dornier "flying pencil."

The thin-bodied German plane crossed the coast above the cover of clouds.

The first time the guns went into action Willkie was standing at the end of the eastern arm of Dover harbor, about 20 miles from the German-occupied French coast.

Anti-invasion guns mounted at the extreme end of the harbor fired several rounds for him to see.

After inspecting a giant gun named "Winnie" for Winston Churchill, Willkie drove back to London.

It was announced that he would visit Coventry and Birmingham two of the most heavily bombed cities, on a Sunday trip into the Midlands.

Invite Exposition Meet Here In 1942

County Farm Agent R. R. Bennett and Willard T. Kver, executive secretary of the Greenville Chamber of Commerce, went to Greensboro today to attend the annual State Seed Exposition and extend an invitation that the 1942 exposition be held in Greenville.

The exposition was held here last year and was declared to have been one of the most successful ever sponsored by the North Carolina Better Seeds Association.

The invitation to meet here next year was issued by the two local officials in behalf of the city and Chamber of Commerce, with the farm agent's office lending its support and cooperation.

The exposition is held in the East one year and in the West the next

Aid Bill On Floor

Washington, J. p. 31.—(AP)—The administration's British aid bill was sent to the House floor today for a momentous debate starting Monday.

After a brief session, the House Rules Committee gave the bill a legislative right-of-way under procedure calling for three days of general debate and permitting the unlimited offering of amendments.

Committee members said the action was a voice vote. Advocating such a course, Chairman Bloom (D-NY) of the Foreign Affairs Committee had stated frankly that the United States was "not neutral" but "just as neutral as any other nation."

CONSIDER ACT TO AID LABOR

War Dept. Contracts May Require Law Compliance

Washington, Jan. 31.—(AP)—Under Secretary Robert P. Patterson testified today that the War Department was considering inclusion in all army contracts of a provision requiring compliance with all labor laws, but was not ready to recommend "coercive" legislation to curb labor disputes on defense projects.

He made the statement to the House Military Committee during questioning as to why the Ford Motor Company was refused a contract for army trucks to cost about $10,000,000.

After repeated questions, Patterson testified that the labor provision to which Ford objected had been included in the contract prospectus at the request of Sidney Hillman, associate director general of the office for prohibition management.

In awarding a contract for 11,761 half-ton trucks to the Fargo Motor Corporation of Detroit rather than Ford, the low-bidder, the department announced last night that the latter firm had "excepted as to the labor clauses" which have been written into army contracts since mid-December.

Fargo's bid was $10,298,128. I. A. Capizzi, Ford attorney, said at Detroit that his firm's bid was $20,000 lower and declared that "labor groups have the ear of certain officials in Washington whereas the Ford Motor Company does not."

Surviving are two sons, William G. Leary of Bear Grass, and Jessie G. Leary of Gold Point, nineteen grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Vanceboro Native Claimed By Death

Mrs. Louisa Leary, 68, died suddenly at the home of her son, W. G. Leary, near Bear Grass, yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Funeral services were conducted from the Presbyterian church of Bear Grass at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon by the Rev. Z. T. Piephoff, Presbyterian minister of William-Cowan and burial followed in the Cowan family cemetery nearby.

Mrs. Leary was born and reared and had spent her entire life in the community in which she died. She was a member of the Presbyterian church of Bear Grass.

Surviving are two sons, William G. Leary of Bear Grass, and Jessie G. Leary of Gold Point, nineteen grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Even more applause was accorded the bill offered by Senator Leary upping the pay of school teachers. (Continued on page five)

Greek Drive For Valona Is Extended

Armistice Ends Undeclared War Between Thailand And French Indo-China; Berlin Raiders Assault London's Balloon Defenses; British Troops Continue Drive In African Desert

By The Associated Press
Military circles at Belgrade, Yugoslavia, reported today that Italian troops had withdrawn from Tepeleni on the central Albanian battlefield, a key point in the Greek drive toward Valona.

In the Far East an armistice agreement ending the undeclared warfare between Thailand (Siam) and French Indo-China was signed on a Japanese warship anchored off Saigon, French Indo-China.

The pact merely established the positions of the opposing forces pending peace negotiations under Japanese mediation at Tokyo, it was said by participating officials.

A Greek spokesman reported that Greek forces pushing forward in the area north of Klisura were reported to have found heaps of Italian dead and many wounded in abandoned Fascist positions.

The spokesman said four Italian counter attacks had been repulsed, with 200 Italian prisoners taken in two days, and later reports from the Albanian front said the charges had such disastrous results that Italian commanders had to call off offensive action in order to reorganize their forces.

German daylight raiders reported striking at England's barrage balloon defenses, diving with machines bombing airports, troop camps, anti-aircraft positions, automobile columns, factories and rail lines.

A day behind the official British announcement, Premier Mussolini's high command acknowledged the fall of Derna, the third major Fascist stronghold taken by Britain's Army of the Nile in less than a month.

London military quarters said British troops were pressing on beyond Derna toward Apollonia, 40 miles west on the Mediterranean coast.

Military circles in Cairo expressed belief that Marshal Rodolfo Graziani's Fascist legions intended to make a determined stand at Benghazi, an important naval base with a population of 50,000, which lies 150 miles west of Derna.

The empire capital had three air raid alarms by early afternoon.

The German communique stressed "audacious attacks" in southeast England, with low-flying Nazi gas, an important naval base with a population of 50,000, which lies 150 miles west of Derna.

Funeral Held For Mrs. Louisa Leary

Thomas McDuffy Spruill, 32, died at Tucson government hospital in Tucson, Arizona, early Thursday morning after a lingering illness.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed pending the arrival of the body in Greenville.

Mr. Spruill was a native of Vanceboro and had been in the government hospital in Tucson since January 3, 1940. He had spent all of his life in Vanceboro except for six years that he had spent in the service of the United States navy.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Beatrice Powell Spruill who was at his bedside at the time of his death, his father, McDuffy Spruill, five brothers, Willie, Arthur, Clyde, Ralph and Jack Spruill all of Vanceboro.

Forty Years Ago Today

THE DAILY REFLECTOR
January 31, 1901

There is much complaint now of bad roads. Still Pitt county is way behind times in taking steps to improve the public roads. We send convicts to work the roads in other counties and let our own roads get almost impassable.

The greatest barrier that Greenville has had to her progress, and this has kept the town behind more than anything else, is that there have always been some of her citizens ready to oppose and protest against any movement made for the improvement of the town.

Among the bills that passed third reading was the one authorizing Greenville to issue bonds. The bill to allow alimony in case of divorce was defeated by a close vote.

Takes New Post

Miss Ethel Nier, home demonstration agent for Pitt county for the past 13 years, left yesterday to assume a similar position in Madison county, Indiana, with headquarters in Anderson, Ind. Organized home demonstration work showed much progress in the county under Miss Nier's direction during the years she held the post here. Women of the clubs in the county gave a dinner in her honor a few days ago.

BAILEY BEGINS ADVANCING BID

Cooley Also Noted to Be Backing Popular Issues

Reflector Bureau
By HENRY AVERILL
Raleigh, Jan. 31—Without insinuating that either is animated by other than the purest of motives, it is still permissible to point out that United States Senator Josiah W. Bailey and his most-talked-of rival for his job in 1942 are breaking into the current public prints upon issues calculated to win, rather than lose, public esteem.

In short, both men seem to have thrown at least one leg astride a horse with heavy popular backing. The Senator is riding "North Carolina isn't getting its share of defense spending," while Fourth District Congressman Harold D. Cooley has saddled up the "Federal funds for a North Carolina marketing program" and is preparing to give it another brisk workout. Mr. Cooley is generally regarded as a likely primary opponent for the senior Senator when the next campaign rolls around. In fact, it is said in many quarters that he is even now running just his hardest, hoping that the incumbent will voluntarily retire, but running just the same, retire or no retire on the part of Mr. Bailey.

Nobody can find fault with either of the gentlemen's activities. Everybody feels that North Carolina should get its fair share of defense spending. Everybody in the least familiar with existing limitations upon the state's marketing program realizes that Federal aid would be of incalculable value in advancing the state's prosperity. This is merely to point out that both Mr. Bailey and Mr. Cooley are very much alive to the fact that they are on unassailable grounds and are in line for much favorable publicity in connection with their current activities. In short, these activities are just another sign that another campaign year will be here before we know it.

Smiths Lose All Their Fire.
Pineville, Ky. (AP)—Acquittal of a defendant on arson charges here was a blow to the Smith family.

The case was prosecuted by Commonwealth's Attorney Daniel Boone Smith and County Attorney Walter B. Smith. Chief prosecution witnesses were Rosa Smith, Willie Smith, Mrs. Willie Smith and Susie Smith. There was a Jack Smith on the jury.

Commonwealth's Attorney Smith commented: "I wouldn't object but for the reflection on the Smiths."

Man About Manhattan

By George Tucker

New York—Lay this morning a long time, having been awakened near dawn by my son, who hath a tooth out, and who, finding that no fairies had come in the night to replace it with a dime, set up such a howl as had not been heard since the wind blew shut the door on the cat Cynthia's tail, pinching it off.

So pell mell into his quarters, and I slipped a coin under his pillow, though not very adroitly, and he skeptical at first, and then scornful, and this, methinks, for him marks the end of a thrilling adolescent illusion.

So back to bed, where I have lain these eight days past, and so made a breakfast of coffee and figs; and there came a cheerful note from Lanny Ross, and another from John Cairns, the advertising executive, who funs me with a merry ballad about my mumps, which he composed himself. And there was one too, from Fay Thomas, whom I used to know in Cleveland and who is now at the Hotel New Yorker; and another from Mel Graff, the artist, who has sent me a book on fishing by Ray Bergman, who, like Gaff, lives in Nyack, N. Y., which is where the actress Helen Hayes also lives.

So all morning reading from John W. Thomason's biography of Jeb Stuart, which I found mighty fascinating, though I have already read it three or four times, and I much moved by the rich beauty of the last few passages which summarize Stuart's passing, thusly:

"So in the thirty-second year of his life, and in the fourth year of his country's independence, as he would say it, passed Jeb Stuart. All his life he was fortunate. It was given to him to toil greatly, and to enjoy greatly, and to taste no little fame from the works of his hands, and to drink the best of the cup of living. He died while there was still a thread of hope for victory. He was spared the grinding agony of the nine month's siege, the bleak months that brought culminating disasters, and the laying down of swords, at Appomattox. He took his death wound in the front of battle, as he wanted it, and he was granted some brief hours to press the hands of men who loved him, and to arrange himself in order to report before the God of Battles, Whom he served."

I think in these words you will find the pattern of a magnificent life, and if I had them on parchment I would frame them, and look at them every day; for there was only one Stuart, and he rode to war with a plume in his hat, and a French sword over his gold cavalry sash, and when he fell, at Yellow Tavern, a color and a gleam went out of the Southern armies that never came back again.

By post in the late afternoon came news from observers along the rail, and the new drama by Tennessee Williams, which hath Miriam Hopkins for its star, has closed down for repairs on the road, and it will be five weeks at least before it comes to Broadway.

Betimes hungry, and ate a fine dinner of hot spoon-bread and fish pie, which I like, and a salad which I care not for but which I was compelled to take, and some date-nut loaf which was mighty elegant, and coffee, without which no meal however simple can be worth a fig; and I hope you remember this if I am ever invited to your house.

Tried To Sail

Shirley Dale (above), 23, of Flint, Mich., wanted to stow away on a destroyer sailing from San Diego, Calif., for Hawaii. And she almost did. She was found in the engine room a few hours before anchor weighed. Miss Dale said she just merely went aboard the ship from a shore boat loaded with sailors.

EAST DOES NOT RUN ASSEMBLY

Figures Disprove Contention Of Long Standing

Reflector Bureau.
By HENRY AVERILL
Raleigh, Jan. 31.—In connection with the prospective fight over reapportionment of the General Assembly, the statement is often heard that "The East has run the legislature for years, although the west ought to have had more seats." Actual figures on the chairmanships of important committees during the last half dozen legislatures, however, disprove that statement quite conclusively. If it be assumed as it usually is that the legislature is almost invariably controlled by its important committee chairman. This assumption is so generally held as to indicate there's more than a trace of verity in it.

Taking that as the test, and considering the eleven conceded most important committees, session in and session out, for all General Assemblies since and including that of 1931 and it becomes apparent that East and West have enjoyed almost an even break.

There have been a grand total of 132 chairmanships, one for the House and one for the Senate for each committee in each of six legislatures.

Of these 132 chairmanships, the East has held 68, the West 64; and the difference is more apparent than real, because such a border-line county as Chatham has been classed as "East."

In the matter of the two big "money" chairmanships, there has been exactly an even break, with a dozen each; and the biggest single difference exists in the finance committee where the West has won the post five of six times.

When it comes to a consideration of individual counties, it is very noticeable that some have produced many, many chairmen, while other more populous and important industrial units have had none at all. For instance Guilford leads all

The Indian Laughs Last

AP Feature Service

Once upon a time the Indian was a savage and the chief interest of the U. S. government in Indians was to keep them in their place and out of the way of advancing civilization. The Indian didn't have much to laugh about.

Now, the U. S. government has been instrumental in getting together the largest exhibit of Indian art in the United States for showing at the Museum of Modern Art in New York. Says the catalogue:

"For centuries the white man has taken advantage of the practical contributions made by the American Indian to civilization. We have hardly ever stopped to ask what values there may be in Indian thought and art... It is very misleading to refer to Indian art as primitive art... Most Indian art is the result of a long period of development in which Indian craftsmen devoted all their inventive skill to perfecting specialized styles and techniques... The close relationship between aesthetic and technical perfection gives the work of most Indian artists a basic unity rarely found in products of an urban civilization."

After such a postscript to the Indian wars, the modern Indian might well claim the privilege of the last laugh at civilization.

Hollywood Sights And Sounds

By Robin Coons

Hollywood.—Here's looking at ZaSu Pitts, which is a pleasure. You may be seeing her now as the maid in "No, No, Nanette," a role she first declined.

She told Herbert Wilcox, who wanted her for the picture, "I'd do it for you if I would for anyone but I'm tired of doing comedy."

The producer-director reassured her. She wouldn't have to "act tired." She would have fast talk, wisecracks, a tempo just the reverse of the usual. He sold her. She still remembered that Wilcox, in "Nurse Edith Cavell," had given her the first Pitts chance at anything like drama in years. She played the Belgian bare-woman—and went right back to comedy.

With 1941 ZaSu will be on her touching scene with Lew Ayres

23rd year in pictures. She began when she was 18 (in 1918) playing with Mary Pickford in "The Little Princess." Born in Kansas, reared in Santa Cruz, Calif., she was lanky slow-speaking, and looked vaguely wistful even as (in most of her roles if not in real life) she looks today. She was burning to be dramatic—and all these years in comedy haven't soothed the burn.

She got her big chance at it when Erich Von Stroheim made "Greedy" from Frank Norris' novel "McTeague." Von Stroheim cast ZaSu in the feminine lead. "Greedy" was a typical "Von" epic of its time—starkly real, a masterpiece and much too long for showing in commercial theaters. Even when cut for release, the picture established ZaSu as No. 1 tragedienne of the movies. But Hollywood didn't know it. She could flutter her hands and use her expressive face more profitably in comedy.

Lewis Milestone cast her as the German mother in "All Quiet on the Western Front." She had a touching scene with Lew Ayres home on leave, and that was practically all the role offered, but ZaSu was delighted.

ZaSu was splendid in the role. But at the sneak preview in Long Beach, the audience spotted her the minute she flashed on the screen—and it howled in anticipation of laughs. ZaSu left the theater in tears, the scene was reshot with Beryl Mercer, and ZaSu was stamped comedienne from there on in.

In her new Brentwood home the kitchen is big. She is proud of being a practicing cook. Players and workers on her sets know her cakes and cookies are good. She passes them around.

One day after working in maid's costume at the studio she attended a bridge party in Beverly Hills still in costume and via the back door. She picked up a tray of sandwiches and served the guests for several minutes before she was recognized.

"It proved," she said, "two things. I maintain: that I'm a wonderful character actress and that women at bridge parties chatter too much to know what's going on."

FALSE LIGHT

Turner, the great painter, used to keep his guests waiting in a darkened room before he took them in to view the glories of his handiwork. He maintained that it was necessary for men to get false light out of their eyes before they could appreciate the values in great paintings.

One reason why we are not overly anxious to live better lives is because we do not know the value of excited living, and the reason we do not know is because our lives are filled with too many things which, from the spiritual standpoint, are tawdry and cheap. Our eyes are filled with false light. Our hearts are surfeited with desires for life's lesser blessings.

A man without ambition is a man without purpose in his life, but to put ambition first, or anywhere near first, is to look out upon life with false light in our eyes. Prudence demands that we prepare for a rainy day, and love requires us to make provision for our descendants. But to brood over the treasures which moth and rust corrupt and forget to lay up treasures in heaven, is to prepare for ourselves and our loved ones not security but tears.

False light in the eyes, false longings in the heart. We see neither the glory of great paintings nor the glory of life under such conditions. All Rights Reserved.—Babson Newspaper Syndicate.

One out of every 1,000 automobile operators was killed in highway accidents in this country last year. A good goal for autoists this year is for each driver to strive not to be that thousandth person and make every effort to avoid being a contributing factor in the death of the thousandth person, whomever it might be.

Throughout this county farm women will regret the leaving of Miss Ethel Nice, who goes to Indiana to accept a new post of duty. For a number of years Miss Nice has labored faithfully in home demonstration work throughout this county, and there are hundreds of farm homes that are much more comfortable, and families much happier, as a result of her work among our women. We join our farm women's groups in wishing Miss Nice success in her new field of operations.

Hitler addressed the German people and the world at large again yesterday with another of his tirades in which he bragged upon the havoc he has wrought, and threatened destruction for any and all who might stand in the way of the accomplishments of his desires and ambitions. Again it was the boast of a being crazed with a lust for power, but instead of having the desired effect of cowering those people who are determined to defend and preserve freedom and democracy, this latest outburst of words from him will cause them to be even more determined to crush Nazism and all other "isms" that threaten the freedom of the world. Hitler's threats to America, included in his ravings yesterday, should cause our Congress to lose no more time in enacting the necessary measures for all possible aid to England and the other democracies. There can be no peace on earth so long as there is a Hitler or those who would endeavor to carry out his ideas of government by force.

Washington—In a good many years of batting around in the news game, I have found a lot of people in the theater who have no business there and darned few who should have been on the stage and aren't. George H. O'Connor certainly is one of the latter.

From President McKinley to Roosevelt II, probably more people have called O'Connor "George" than ever called all the nation's Pullman porters by that name. For the purposes of this little story I'm going to join the fond parade.

Once George was spotted on a banquet program with another native Washington boy, who had done quite a bit of wandering—Al Johnson. Will Rogers was in the audience and when the two finished their little numbers, Will turned to his neighbor and remarked, "Looks to me as if the wrong boy had stayed home."

Not so long ago George was in top form at the White House correspondents' annual dinner. He sang "Little Tommy Murphy" and a mournful ballad called "Saloon." When he had finished a waiter handed him a card. On it was scribbled, "Dear George—Like rare old wine, you grow better with age." It was signed, "F.D.R."

vaudeville stage in the land in half a dozen forms, but it was fresh enough then to make the unsmiling Mr. Coolidge guffaw.

Numerous Stories

A few months later, at a banquet Coolidge attended, George sang his vitriolic lampoon, "Cohen Owes Me $97." As the applause died down, one recalcitrant guest "booed." The President turned to his dinner partner and asked, "Who's that? Cohen?"

George's life is full of stories like that. There was the time at the Lambs' Club in New York when Wilton Lackaye, the actor, introduced him this way, "Gentlemen, you think you're good. But I want to introduce you to a man who plays New York as a one-night stand."

Wilson Thanked Him For Had Taken Office, George sang, "My Cousin Caruse." When he had finished, President Wilson came over and put his arm around O'Connor's shoulders, took him over to a corner and thanked him profusely. It was three months before George could fight his way out of the flood of job-hunters who beseeched him to say a word to the President in their behalf.

At one party some years ago George and the late veteran speaker of the House, "Uncle Joe" Cannon, put on an act together. When they had finished, an excited theatrical agent in the audience rushed up and offered them a contract at $1,000 a week to tour the country. They turned him down, of course. Probably they were right. But you still can find a lot of banquet habitués around Washington who would have been glad to put it on the line and see that the agent came out on top.

By Henry Averill and Lynn Nisbet Raleigh, Jan. 31.—If consistency be, in fact, a jewel the legislature no editorial voice has been louder to use a safe to lock up its precious stones.

Getting specific: In the recent hulloballoo of condemnation at the methods used and the speed with which the salary raise for Thad Eure, George Ross Pou, Charlie Johnson and Clyde Erwin was rushed through the current legislature.

Yet in 1917 when an almost identical situation had arisen, the News and Observer was of a diametrically opposite opinion.

Senator Seales of Guilford, it seems, had proposed that the Governor's salary be raised to $7,500 and, at the same time, the superintendent of public instruction should be paid "the same salary as that paid the other state officers named in the constitution."

There then existed exactly the same reason for haste, to-wit: that to postpone action would mean that no increase could take effect until four years later.

On January 10, 1917, the News and Observer said, in an editorial: "This is a measure which should appeal to the people as being simply a matter of fairness. The General Assembly should give it prompt consideration to these matters, for unless acted upon before the inauguration of the state officers they will prove of no avail for the next four years."

Clark and Hallfax's Dr. T. W. M. Long are the principal "repeaters" as chairmen of important committees in the Senate. Each has had a major chairmanship four times in ten years.

The ease with which both congressional and judicial reapportionment has been solved by the General Assembly is something like the absence of air raiders over England for more than a week—frankly alarming.

Observers believe that the legislators are saving up all their verbal ammunition to cut loose when the really important matter of senatorial and House redistricting comes up.

There is some dispute which is the correct quotation: "Comparisons are Odious" or "Comparisons are odorous," but there general agreement that this one is both. The value of all equipment for industrial arts instruction in all of North Carolina's public schools, as disclosed by a thorough survey made by the vocational education division, is $156,650. One school in the city of St. Louis has similar equipment valued at $250,000.

The Rocky Mount recorder court judge recently said from the bench that the undershafts workers at Fort Bragg are mulcted of from $50 to $100 in union initiation dues for the privilege of working.

A story from Fort Bragg said that officials there know nothing about any such thing and intimated that nobody at the Bragg job has had to join a union.

The truth appears to be just what this bureau reported about a month ago. Most of the jobs are open without tribute to any labor organization; but about 500 workers (welders, plumbers and electricians) must be union members and dues of $2.50 monthly, plus $1.25 a week to the union's business agent.

They don't shut down Saturday afternoons like out at the mill. "Okay," said David. "I'll give my afternoon to you, and shall see if I can give my evening to Polly."

He telephoned the millinery shop Saturday morning. "Dated up this evening, Polly?" he asked. "No," said Polly. "Then how about a movie?" "I'd like it."

Can Draw Out Fortune Any Time. Oklahoma City, Okla. (AP)—John Burnett, special agent for the Rock Island railroad, has a revolver he is almost afraid to shoot—because the diamonds might fall out.

Besides being diamond-studded the gun is gold and silver plated and is engraved with Burnett's fingerprints and signature; his picture and a picture of his horse. Eight California $1 gold pieces, dated 1900, also are embedded in it, along with lodge and railroad emblems. To top it off it has a ruby-eyed, bulldog pearl handle.

Fights Texas Way Or Not At All. Topeka, Kas. (AP)—The tall Texan walked into the army recruiting office and said he was a bronc breaker. "If I join your cavalry can I bring along my own boots and saddles?" he inquired.

"No," said the corporal in charge. "But I can't ride them army saddles," the Texan explained. The corporal didn't waver: "Sorry, but that's the way it is."

"They'll have to draft me, then," and the weather-tanned bronc buster stalked out.

Magic Spring

YESTERDAY: It looks as if one of the things which have been keeping David and Polly apart is about to be removed. This is the glamorous Margo Powers, who is the daughter of David's boss, and a young woman with a yen for David. She just has called at her father's office to tell David goodbye, and to make one last attempt to interest him.

Chapter 27 Margo Falls "I do like you," said David. "But after all, Margo, a man does have to think about making his living—plan his future."

"So Warren says," Margo retorted. "But I think neither you nor he gives much thought to the part a girl plays in that future you talk so much about."

"I do," said David with emphasis. "Oh, well, what's the use of talking about it?" said Margo wearily. "I'm going back to the people who think as I do. I hope you and Warren never regret sticking in a town like this."

"We won't!" Again that emphasis. Margo looked up in David's face. She smiled sadly. "What a shame," she said, "that you're throwing away a possible chance to see the world. If things had turned out differently, we might have had fun David—you and I."

"I have fun right here." "Yes, I know. But—" Margo touched David's cheek lightly. "But I think you'd have learned to like my world."

"Fraid not," laughed David. "You know what they say about old dogs and up-to-date tricks." Margo held out her hand. "Goodbye, David," she said. "I'm taking the express north tomorrow evening. I shan't be seeing you again."

"Goodbye, Margo," David held her hand a moment. "I hope you change your mind and come back to us." Margo said nothing more. And presently David saw her yellow roadster passing between the wide gates of the lumber yard. He went back to his work. A sense of confusion got hold of him, the confusion that Margo often made him feel. He couldn't tell to save him whether or not she was in love with him. He didn't think it possible, and yet she was always saying things that would lead him to believe that she was.

Oh, the devil! Why waste time thinking about it! He had other things to think about. If he didn't have to work too late that night he wanted to drop in to see Polly. He would tell her about Margo going away. Maybe this would convince Polly that there was nothing between them—that he didn't want all those advantages Polly had said Margo could give him.

"Here," said the bookkeeper, "address these pay envelopes, will you David?" "Sure," said David. He took the envelopes the man was holding out to him, and went to a typewriter.

The bookkeeper chuckled and said: "The cashier at the bank's going to get a surprise when he sees the amount of our payroll. I can just see his Adam's apple bobbing up and down, and his eyes popping."

"He'll probably get a bigger surprise," said David, "when he sees the balance Mr. Powers has in the bank at the end of the month."

Presently the two men were giving all their attention to work while in the office of old Doctor Ben. Warren McNeill was also busy.

Doctor Ben "Let's see, Doc," he said, looking over a pencilled list of names; "you want me to take over these people right away, is that it?" "Yes," said Doctor Ben. "I'm keeping the octogenarians for myself. By the way, Mrs. Lester Blue will probably be wanting you pretty soon. But it's her eighth baby, so you oughtn't to have a very hard time, you and Mrs. Blue." He chuckled. "It's not your first delivery, is it?"

"No," said Warren. "I had a couple while I was stopping off in my home town."

"Good! Then I'll not give it another thought."

"Just what did you say was wrong with this man, Percy What's-his-name?" Warren asked. "Nothing's the matter with him actually," Doctor Ben replied. "But he thinks there is. He ropes everybody to death describing his ailments, all of which are purely imaginary. Oh, well, he's a bore, anyway, Warren—so he might as well talk about himself, the most boring subject of all."

But what am I supposed to do get-out? Give him some harmless medicine with a vile taste. Percy thinks medicine that doesn't taste like the devil is no good." Doctor Ben laughed. "I gave him some for a sore throat once—some medicine that was supposed to have real curative qualities. But Percy brought it back. He said, 'Doctor, this medicine will never cure my throat; I can't even smell it, much less taste it.'"

"He must be a character. I have an idea, Doc! I'll give him some pills made of Blue Mass. Nothing tastes worse. I remember my grandmother trying to make me take some of it when I was a kid. I couldn't swallow it to save me, and wasted a whole box. What worried me, though, was wasting Grandmother's medicine, since I loved her like all git-out."

"Go to it," said Doctor Ben. Percy seldom pays his bills, anyway, and since there's nothing seriously wrong with him, we might as well have our fun. He picked up his old slouch hat. "You take the car. I can walk to see the folks who're expecting me, or have Mose hitch up the horse and buggy."

Warren watched the tall, straight, white-haired figure cross the room. "One of these days, Doc," he said, "I want to make my calls with the horse and buggy. Do you mind?" "Of course not!" said Doctor Ben. "But what in blazes does a young doctor like you want with that sort of transportation?"

"Oh, I just like the horse and buggy atmosphere," said Warren. "I used to ride around with my grandfather when he drove out to see his patients. He used to let me hold the reins. The horse was white and slow, but he knew everyone of Grandfather's patients, or where they lived, rather. He also knew when there was an emergency, like the time old Mrs. Whiteside had her triplets. He went so fast then it was practically a runaway. Grandfather said afterwards it was a wonder he didn't land on his head in a field someplace."

"My horse is like that, too," said Doctor Ben. "Automobiles are all right, I reckon. But they don't have under their hooded horses have inside their heads." He reached for his small black bag. "I won't be gone long, boy."

"What a grand old man!" Warren said under his breath. Then he pocketed the list Doctor Ben had given him, picked up his own small black bag, and went out. He got into Doctor Ben's seven-year-old car and drove off down Main Street.

Peter came limping out of a grocery store. "Hi, there, Doctor Warren!" he called. "May I thumb a ride?"

"Sure!" said Warren. He stopped the car. "Hop in, I'm going right by your house on my way to call on Polly's Aunt Susan."

Peter's Worry Peter took his place beside Warren. "Is Aunt Susan sick?" he asked. "Oh, she's got a 'miser' in her tummy," Warren said. "See, that's all!"

"You sound disappointed. Don't tell me you want Aunt Susan to have something really serious?"

"Oh, no, sir—nothing like that," said Peter. "Only—well, you see Doctor Warren, just as long as Aunt Susan goes on having things wrong with her, like her stomach miseries, Polly won't marry David."

"I see," said Warren. "And you want her to marry David. Is that it?" "Well, so long's he's got to marry somebody—" Peter looked up into Warren's face. "Listen, Doctor Warren," he went on. "Do you think me coming to live with Cousin David like I did has kept him from marrying Polly?"

"No, Peter. I don't. David's got sense enough to know it takes money for a man to marry. All he and Polly are doing is waiting until they have a little more."

"But maybe if I wasn't living with Cousin David, maybe if he didn't have to feed and clothe me, he would have more money, and he and Polly could get married right now."

"Nonsense!" Warren said. "Get such ideas out of your head. When David and I get the old Inn to paying, everybody can get married."

"Meaning you, too?" "Maybe—" Warren thought of Margo, of her determination to go away where it was gay and colorful. "That remains to be seen." He stopped the car in front of the Wiley cottage. "Here's where you get out, youngster."

Three Greenville High Teams Take Courts Tonight

GHS FAVORED TO BEAT FOES

Boys Teams At Washington; Kinston Girls Here

Tonight is a big night for Greenville High School's basketball teams with all three teams slated to meet an opponent and incidentally all three teams are favored to win. While Coach Robeson's Lady Phantoms are attempting to down Kinston in the local gym the Phantom varsity and Junior teams will journey to Washington and invade that city.

Coach Farley's strategy in changing line-ups proved to be a vital point to the fast-fading Phantoms. With three successive two-point licks marked up against them, Farley's flying quintet came back and took revenge upon Elizabeth City and drew first blood with Kinston by wide margins.

Three fast-stepping teams can answer the local mentor's call to arms, and answer they have right lately this season. Although the Phantoms have been on the short end of the grid contests with Washington, records cannot be found that show a Washington win on the courts. Slated for high honors tonight are Washington's Deane Bell Swanson Graves, Pete Gerard and a number of others but the Reflector remains with the locals and will pick them to come home on top.

Most of Coach Farley's team is seeing action for the first time this season and doing a fine job for themselves. Some of these boys are Troy Riddle who has gained a name for himself as a high-scoring Gene Johnson, an ace on defense, Bill Turner another sharpshooter, Henry Andrews, scrapping center.

Coach Farley's starting line-up will include two of these boys. Riddle will start at one forward and Johnson will run with Clark in the guard positions. Burney Warren will start in the pivot slot and Hicks Corey will get the call at the other forward.

Those Girls

With an earlier season licks at the hands of the Lady Devils of the Grainger High School in Kinston running through their minds, the Lady Phantoms of GHS are going to be a hard lot to handle for tonight's contest.

Coach Mary Shaw Robeson's proteges will be looking for revenge from that earlier defeat and the fans and players alike believe they will get it. Kinston pulled an upset when they topped the local sextet but the local cagers were short three important links in the chain of victory.

A full team will answer Coach Robeson's call, and the starting line-up will probably include two and possibly three of those missing links. Marked up to start for tonight's contest are Captain Joy Flanagan, Betty Tyson, Peggy West or Jane Scoville at forwards, Doris Roberts, Jane Harrison and Lib Wells at guards. All of these girls were first string starters of last season and will be a big jump ahead of the girls from Kinston with the start.

Fulkerson's Juniors

Probably or even definitely the most successful team on the GHS line-up is Heman Fulkerson's Baby Phantoms. Only one defeat out of four tries mars their record of an undefeated season. Wilson Class A Baby Cyclones edged out a four point win over the local juniors.

Crabtree, Boone, Rapids, and Kinston fell before their attack and the Reflector feels secure in saying Washington will fall too.

As both other high teams, Fulkerson's boys have been crippled all season with a nice case of influenza spread among the team. Billy Sugg who returned to the team for only one game, last week returned to the bed and it is doubtful whether he will be back again this season.

Fulkerson's starting line-up will probably include Sidney Dunn and Connor Merritt at forwards, Jack Teel at center, and Joe Register and Ben Harrison at guards. Ledger Ross, Half-Pint Murphy, and a host of others are slated to see action.

WORK AND FUN MIXED AT SESSION AT CHAPEL HILL

Coach Farley's starting line-up a flat ten per cent. The lobby, filled with students and teachers, left no doubt of its approval of that proposition.

Courtesy Day

As proceedings of the assembly got under way, first in separate sessions of senate and house, and then in joint meeting, it became increasingly a "courtesy day." A meeting of university trustees this morning had brought many distinguished citizens to the hill, and all of them were accorded courtesies of the floor and lobby when they were recognized. Then, like the ancient Greeks who erected an altar to the "unknown god," motions were made according to courtesies of the galleries to all the good-looking girls, all the student body of the university, and all members of families of legislators.

South American Democrat

Biggest hit of the senate session was the speech by a member of the Parliament of Peru. (Note to reader: I can't spell it; you probably couldn't pronounce it; so we'll skip his name). Presented by Senator Howell as a "Democrat from South America" he was greeted with prolonged applause and brought official greetings to the state and the senate from the president, parliament and people of Peru.

Too Early Or Too Late?

A little humor was added to the sessions when it was found that a joint resolution, introduced simultaneously in both houses, invited the governor, the mayor of Chapel Hill and a South American spokesman to address the joint session at 12:30 a. m. It was quickly corrected to read 12:30 p. m. and passed.

The assembly also had some difficulty with President Roosevelt's age. Title of the adopted resolution congratulating and felicitating him read his 58th birthday, while text of the resolution, when it came over the assembly left no doubt of its pleasure that he is president of the United States. The senate adopted the resolution, then it came over by messenger from the house of representatives. Governor Harris had to ask for a motion that the house version be adopted. Senator Howell obliged by making the motion, and the message was sent on its way to Washington.

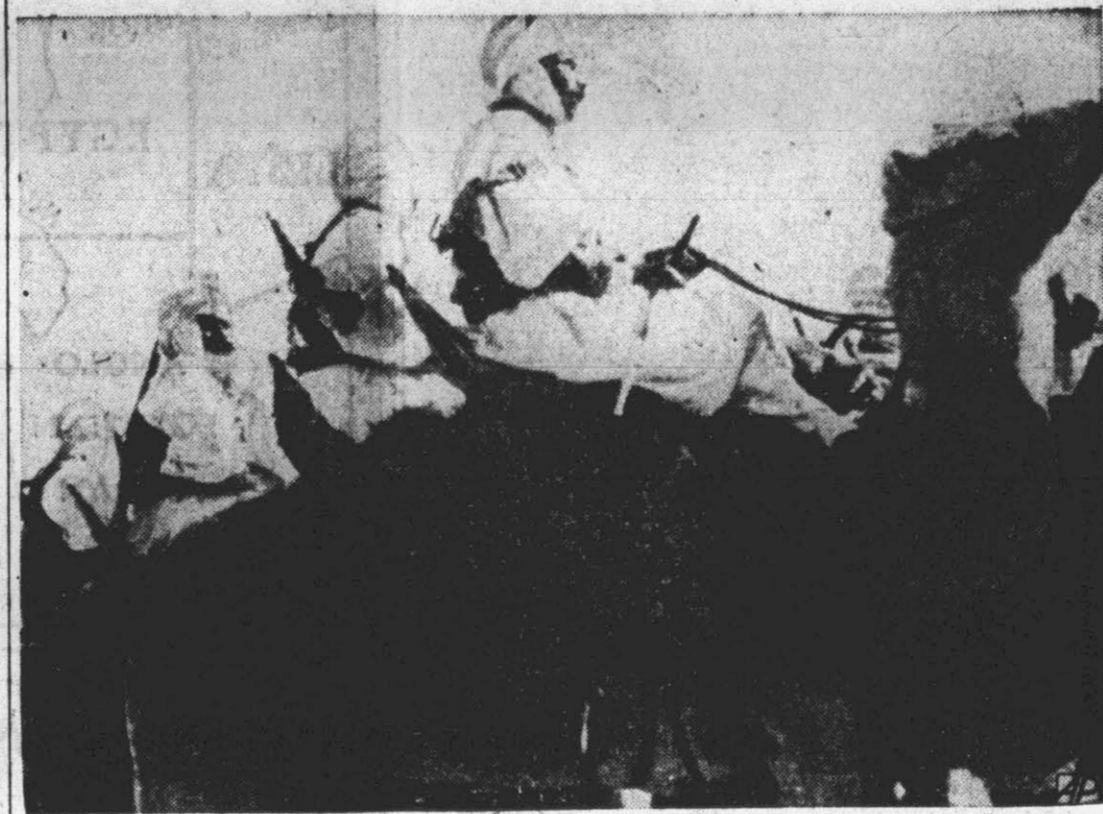

Mull, Broughton, Graham Speak

When Lieut. Governor Harris called to order the joint session in Memorial Hall, Mayor J. M. Foushee of Chapel Hill welcomed the visitors, and Speaker Mull of the House, presented Governor Broughton. The House presiding officer took occasion to assure the South American visitors that our country wanted nothing but love from them. Not in boastful manner but in simple candor he claimed that God has so richly endowed our own nation that we need nothing our neighbors have except their good will.

Governor Broughton declared that the inter-continental institute was not casual, it is rooted deeply in a sincere desire and determined purpose to maintain continental solidarity.

President Graham of the University pointed out points of historic 22, all-America quarterback at ornia last year, has been inducted now he's a buck private. He called Rose Bowl games of 1939 and 1940. York Giants, pro team, this fall.

South American Scholarships

The governor received more applause for his announcement that the board of trustees of the greater university had that day voted to recommend provision of scholarships, two each at each of its three units, for South American students. Former Senator Emmet Bellamy of Wilmington offered the resolution at the trustees meeting, and was named as chairman of a committee to get the necessary $4,500 a year from the general assembly.

The Voice of South America

High spot of the day was the address by Senator Victor Andrea Belandine of the San Marcos University at Lima, Peru. In faultless English and with eloquence he spoke for his whole continent. He declared that South America is united in its aim and has utmost confidence in the United States. The guiding spirit of South America, he said is "Faith in the absolute value of the educational order." He brought greetings to the oldest state university in the United States (opened in 1793) from the oldest university in Peru, established in 1551!

Future development of the American continent will be in direct relation to the attention given in both North and South America to three essentials, he continued. These are Freedom, Work and Friendship.

Could Say Car-o-lina

It was noted that South American speakers, while having some difficulty in enunciating some English words at least could go some of the native Carolinians better in getting in all of the syllables in "Carolina."

Potato Train To Visit This Section

Next week will find the Norfolk Southern's second annual Demonstration Potato train touring East-ern North Carolina early commercial Irish potato section. Cooperating in presenting exhibits and other materials to aid in rehabilitating the Irish potato industry are the Agricultural Extension Service of North Carolina State College, the N. C. and U. S. Departments of Agriculture, and other agencies. The first stop of the train will be at Morehead City on Monday, and on subsequent days the train will be in Bayboro, Belhaven, Columbia, Elizabeth City, Camden, and Shawboro. Above are scenes from the first annual tour of the train last winter. At the top is a section of the train being inspected at Bayboro, and the lower picture shows a corner of one of the ex-hibit cars making up last year's train. The exhibits and size of the train are being expended for its 1941 tour.

Liberty Man Killed In Saw Mill Accident

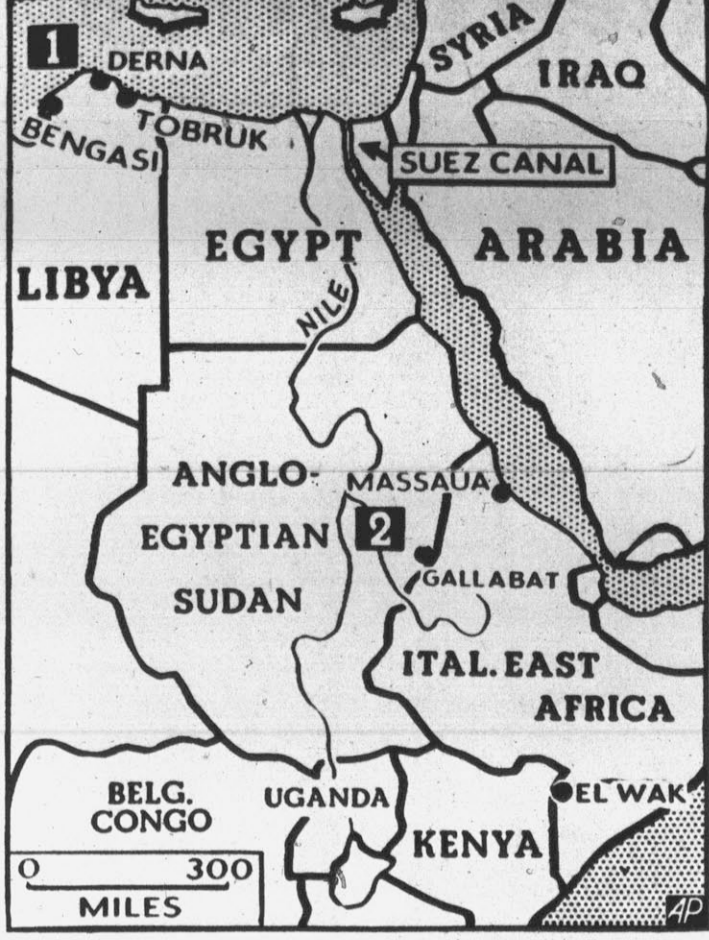

Word has been received here of the death of Con P. Smith of Liberty, whose wife is the former Mrs. Naomi James of Pitt county. Mr. Smith died in a hospital Sunday shortly after having been injured when a large piece of wood was thrown from a blade at his saw mill, puncturing his chest and lungs.

In addition to operating a saw mill, he also conducted a dry cleaning business and was a tobacco farmer.

Funeral services were held at the home in Randolph county Tuesday. Besides his wife, he is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John M. Smith, three sisters and three brothers.

British Claim Capture Of Derna

British headquarters at Cairo announced that the British army, driving across Libya, has captured the city of Derna (1), third major Italian base in Libya, and that troop concentration and patrol work are continuing on the southern front (2) in East Africa. The British said Axis warplanes raided the Suez Canal area January 30 but their bombs caused no casualties and no damage. Italians claimed their forces on the southern front attacked in "three different sectors and put enemy columns to flight."

Argument For Special Work

By HENRY AVERILL
Raleigh, Jan. 31.—When the organized teachers of North Carolina more or less casually asked the Appropriations committee for a flat ten per cent raise in their salaries, they were asking that the state spend on this increase twice as much as all spending in North Carolina for vocational education.

That means all spending, by state, county and federal governments. If reduced to terms of state expenditures it means that more than six times the state's present and five times its recommended spending for all vocational education activities be used to give the teachers a raise.

On the basis of present teacher salaries a ten per cent increase would mean between $2,000,000 and $2,500,000 a year. The current salary bill being between $2,000,000 and $2,500,000 annually.

From all sources less than a million dollars a year has been spent in recent years on vocational education and the expenditures for the current fiscal year will reach only to the approximate million mark. That is less than half what a ten per cent teacher salary raise would cost.

As for the state's share of this vocational spending, there was appropriated for the last fiscal year $325,000 and for the current period $350,000—in either case less than one-sixth of what a ten per cent teacher salary raise would cost.

The salary increase was not specifically set out in the so-called "five-point" program of the education groups which are besieging the legislature for more money; but it has been tossed in as a suggestion, if not a demand on the General Assembly.

Faced By Charges Following Wreck

Corporal C. R. Williams of the State Highway Patrol today signed a warrant charging Robert G. Casey, towel truck driver of Goldsboro, with careless and reckless driving, following a wreck Tuesday night in which two Negroes were critically injured.

The wreck occurred just across the Tar river bridge as Casey started to turn to cross the highway to his left directly in front of a pick-up truck occupied by the Negroes. The Goldsboro man was traveling north and the Negroes were coming toward Greenville when the cars collided. Two Negroes, William Harris and Otis Price, are in Pitt Gen-

Contest Open To Colored Students

Featuring a $100 scholarship and a $50 cash award, the North Carolina Tuberculosis Association announces that it is again sponsoring the Negro essay contest for colleges and high schools being conducted by the National Association. This is an annual contest open to any bona fied student now enrolled in a Negro college or high school in North Carolina.

"Why, What, and Where" and "The Opportunity of the Control of Tuberculosis" are the two possible titles that the high school student may use in his essay. The college student has a slightly broader choice with the chance to use "How Can I in My Future Profession Help to Control Tuberculosis," "College Essay Contest on Tuberculosis," or "National Student Health Association" as subjects for his work.

Awards this year include prizes for both high school and college groups given by the local tuberculosis associations or committees to local winners, by the North Carolina Tuberculosis Association to state winners, and by the National Tuberculosis Association to the national winners. High lights of the national prizes include a $100 scholarship and a gold medal to the
