CLOSER COLLABORATION BY AXIS POWERS HINTED

Sen. Wheeler Concedes Victory For Britain Aid Bill

FDR SIGNATURE IS DUE MONDAY

Montana Democrat Who Has Led Fight On Lend-Lease Bill Declares That Fight Against War Has Just Begun; Administration Continues To Beat Down Amendments To Proposal

Washington, March 8.—(AP)—Senator Wheeler (D-Mont.), a leading foe of the British aid bill, conceded today that the Senate would approve that legislation, adding that "the fight against war has just begun."

Wheeler declared that he would "fight harder than ever" after the measure's passage to keep the United States out of war.

"This bill," he said, "gives the President power to wage an undeclared war anywhere in the world. I will fight against that everywhere as long as I am able."

Wheeler made his declaration while the Senate considered an amendment by Senator Walsh (D-Mass) to forbid the transfer of navy vessels or aircraft which could not be replaced by better equipment within three months.

Walsh argued that if the British aid bill were approved in its present form Congress would be telling the President he could "loan or sell or give away" the American navy "as you see fit."

Responding, Chairman George (D-Ga.) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee declared that "this amendment entirely scuttles the bill." He added:

"Essentially, Britain needs naval help. If she does not get it when she needs it the bill is no good at all."

Democratic Leader Barkley asked the Senate whether "we are willing to make this bill an army relief bill only."

Barkley declared earlier that Senate opponents of the aid legislation were "cooperating to obtain a final vote today."

He predicted that the momentous legislation would be on President Roosevelt's desk by Monday night.

The powerful administration forces knocked down 12 proposed amendments yesterday and last night and when the Senate concluded an 11-hour session shortly before 10 p. m., EST, leaders declared they were on "the straight road to passage."

Only two amendments were approved in the course of the long meeting. One, presented by Senator Ellender (D-La.) as an administration compromise on the issue of sending troops abroad, provided that nothing in the bill should change existing law regarding movements of land and naval forces.

The vote was 65 to 24. Critics called the provision "meaningless."

The other, put forward by Senator Clark (D-Mo.), an opponent of the legislation, was written in on a voice vote after Majority Leader Barkley had termed it acceptable to the administration. It substituted the words "transfer title to" for the word "transfer" in a section empowering the President to supply defense articles to other nations.

Proponents of the bill said the change was more or less technical.

RUG DEALER'S SHORT CUT LEADS TO TROUBLE

Chicago.—(AP)—Harold Hajek carefully painted a 9x12-foot section of his living room floor, then covered it with his new 9x12 rug. Three inches of paint showed on each side.

Hajek measured the painted space again and proceeded to minimize court. The rug dealer was fined $25 for misrepresentation and ordered to refund the price of the carpet.

Busy Saturday Session Held As Assembly Plans To Adjourn Next Week

Asks Stand

Belgrade, March 8.—(AP)—Authoritative diplomatic sources said tonight they had been informed Greece had asked Turkey whether she was prepared to fulfill Greek-Turkish mutual assistance treaties should German troops attack Greece from Bulgaria.

A clear statement of Turkey's position with regard to the expected Nazi invasion of Thrace and Eastern Macedonia has been sought from the Turkish foreign office by the Greek minister at Ankara, these sources said.

Turkey and Greece signed a mutual assistance treaty in September, 1933, which guarantees their frontiers in Thrace and pledges use of military force to defend it. They also are bound in mutual defense pledges by the 1934 Balkan Entente treaty.

AVERT STRIKES IN TWO STATES

Progress Made In Efforts To Head Off Walkouts

By The Associated Press Progress was reported today toward heading off threatened shut-downs in two large New Jersey industries and an agreement between a power company and its union employees virtually had dissipated the menace of an electrical blackout in southern Michigan.

The two New Jersey firms, both with large defense contracts, were the Aluminum Company of America plant at Edgewater and the Thomas A. Edison, Inc. Industries with three plants in the state and one in Pennsylvania.

CIO employees of the Aluminum company empowered their leader to call a strike unless the company meets wage demands, but the union president declared "the strike will not be called unless our demands are flatly refused."

Spokesmen for the Edison company and the CIO Electrical Radio and Machine Workers reported "progress" last night after a conference on the union's demands for a closed shop, wage increases and overtime pay for Saturday and Sunday work.

The threatened strike against the consumers' power company, which serves 2,000,000 southern Michigan residents appeared definitely headed off as American Federation of Labor electrical workers began balloting on ratification of an agreement calling for a wage increase and a preferential shop.

Mrs. J. Thomas Moore Succumbs In Raleigh

Word was received here today of the death of Mrs. J. Thomas Moore of Raleigh, formerly of Tarboro, who died at her home this morning at 4 o'clock following an extended illness. Mrs. Moore was in her 80's.

Funeral services will be conducted in Raleigh tomorrow morning after which the body will be taken to Tarboro for services at the Carlyle mortuary.

Mrs. Moore was well known here, having a number of relatives and friends in the community.

Institute Held For Girl Scout Leaders

A training institute for Girl Scout leaders under the auspices of East Carolina Teachers College and the Greenville Girl Scout Council, was conducted today, with Mrs. J. B. Kitterell, chairman, presiding at the morning session, and Mrs. J. B. Smith, leadership chairman, at the afternoon session.

Among the prominent leaders here for the institute were Miss Helen Oppenlander, regional director of Girl Scouts, and Miss Frances Lee, Girl Scout field adviser at large.

The morning session began at 9:30 with registrations and was followed by addresses of welcome by Dr. L. E. Meadows of the college, J. H. Rose of the city schools, and Mayor B. B. Sugg for the city.

Following luncheon in the new classroom building, afternoon sessions were held with interest group meetings being conducted by local Scout leaders.

Crash Tax Bill Sponsored By Late Sen Long Defeated In House; New Measure Would Place Aeronautical Affairs Under Utilities Commission; Greenville Voting Places Changed

Raleigh, March 8.—(AP) The House today killed the "crash tax" bill which Senator T. W. M. Long of Halifax county sponsored in the Senate before his death earlier in the legislative session.

The measure would have provided the addition of 50 cents to the cost of each automobile license for a fund to pay hospital expenses of accident victims.

Rep. Abernathy of Nash had moved for reconsideration of the vote by which the House rejected the measure yesterday on second reading, but the bill died when the representatives adopted a motion by Rep. Pickers of Guilford to table Abernathy's motion.

Pushing toward adjournment, now virtually assured by the end of next week, both houses considered general business today and not just local legislation, as is usual on Saturday sessions.

The House received from Burgin of Henderson a bill to provide $50,000 a year for emergency marketing work by the State Department of Agriculture.

Senator Ingram of Stanley sent forward a measure to authorize the State Utilities Commission to supervise aeronautical affairs and set federal regulations.

The Senate also received from Cherry of Gaston two measures introduced at the request of the State Elections Board—one to allow men in military services to cast absentee ballots in primaries and the other to allow commanding officers to certify absentee ballots in place of notary publics.

The House Appropriations Committee placed its stamp of approval on a 12th grade in public schools, but rejected a proposal to provide teachers with five days of sick leave with pay yearly.

The committee also killed bills to provide $50,000 for Japanese beetle eradication; to establish a school for delinquent Negro girls; and one to set up a pension of $15 a month for every person 65 years of age or older.

The House passed and sent to the Senate House bill 594 to regulate fees of justices of the peace in Wilson.

The House passed and ordered ratified Senate bill 192 to rearrange voting places in Greenville; Senate bill 236 to extend the city limits of Snow Hill; Senate bill 243 relating to delinquent taxes in Edgecombe.

Rep. Moore of Wilson introduced bills to require the Wilson county commissioners to increase justice of the peace fees in Wilson and to end the terms of Wilson county officials on the first Monday in September.

Legion Comma'der Denounces Strikes

R. Dave Hall, commander of the North Carolina Department of the American Legion, in an address before a meeting of the Farmville post yesterday, expressed disapproval of strikes at defense projects.

The commander asserted that men in uniform were serving their country for only $21 monthly and added there was little excuse for men in overalls serving their country by working on defense projects to strike when wages and working conditions are satisfactory.

He said these men in overalls were vital to the defense program and that by striking they were depriving the men in uniform of the necessary equipment, arms ammunition etc.

The commander declared that this state was the first to go over the top in its 1941 membership campaign.

Also speaking on the program was Robin Kirby of Charlotte, American legion commissioner.

The two men came here yesterday afternoon and, along with J. H. Rose, former state commander, attended a Legion district meeting in Scotland Neck last night.

Arthur B. Corey and Mr. Rose attended the Farmville meeting.

AXIS ANNOYED AT REPORT OF AID FROM U. S.

FDR Said To Have Suggested Help For Yugoslavia

MOVE DECLARED AIMED AT AXIS

Unconfirmed Reports Declare Roosevelt Seeking To Keep Yugoslavia Out Of Axis Sphere

By The Associated Press Although substantiated on the surface by nothing except a Hungarian newspaper dispatch, Germans and Italians reacted with annoyance today to a report that President Roosevelt had suggested some manner of aid to Yugoslavia to keep that nation out of the Axis.

State Department officials at Washington said they "never heard of it."

German and Italian newspapers hammered on the theme. Pressed for additional substantiation of the Budapest report, an authorized Nazi spokesman commented: "We have the impression it is authentic."

One Italian newspaper regarded as expressing government views said editorially "we are in the presence of the first scandalous intrusion of the United States of America into Europe's politics and war."

"Roosevelt's proposal of war aid to the Belgrade government so Yugoslavia would not adhere to the tri-partite pact and thus would maintain a hostile attitude toward the Axis powers obviously exceeds the American policy of simple aid to Britain."

Virgilio Gavda, a Fascist editorial spokesman, indicated that Yugoslavia would be asked to "clarify her position and intentions" toward the Axis powers.

Yugoslav official circles declined to issue a denial of the Hungarian press reports that the United States had offered aid to Yugoslavia. They said no denial was necessary "because the whole business is so ridiculous."

To Confer Here On Air Defense Plan

J. H. Rose, in charge of the Voluntary Aircraft Warning Service for the Eastern North Carolina district, disclosed today that Lieut. Harold Kuppinger of the Air Defense Command, would arrive in Greenville Monday morning for a conference on selection of Legion posts to sponsor bases.

Mr. Rose said that he had wired Lieut. Kuppinger to fly to Greenville and land at the new City County airport.

Following the lieutenant's conference here, Mr. Rose plans to call a meeting of district chiefs to arrange for tests to be conducted during this month. Extensive maneuvers are being planned for the summer months.

The area includes the territory from just north of Wilmington to a point just west of Oxford.

Under the plan, volunteer observers would be used to determine the efficiency of civilians in detecting enemy aircraft.

What Can We Believe? Babson Discusses Foreign Propaganda

Savannah, Ga., March 8.—I have just come from the dining car, but permitting free speech by Americans is very different from printing lies from abroad. When the newspapers receive dispatches from abroad, through regular channels, how do they know whether these are true or false? People who criticize newspapers should spend a day at a managing editor's desk and see the mass of stuff which comes in from all over the world. Based on my own experiences in World War I—I do not believe two-thirds of the dispatches from the capitals of Europe, Asia, and Africa, Christian-ity today is so ignored that every nation believes it is "right" to lie.

Greeks Draw Battle Line On Struma River

With German troops reported ready to launch an attack from Bulgaria within "48 hours," Greece prepared a natural defense line (spiked line) on the Struma river. Apparently the Greeks have abandoned northeast Greece as indefensible. The general direction of the German movement (black arrows) is indicated on this map, along with the possibility Struma defenses would be vulnerable from the rear (checked arrow). Seattle Blackout Test Is Declared Successful

WRECKS CLAIM NINE PERSONS

Seattle, March 8.—(AP)—All the lights of Seattle—well nearly all of them—flicked off for 15 minutes last night in the first defense blackout test for a major American city but that didn't blackout the festive spirit of most of the city's 400,000 residents.

The experiment went off on schedule with almost complete cooperation of all the citizens and without reported accidents.

The only emergency call reported by police was one asking them to "stop a man beating his wife."

Thousands paraded the downtown streets, shouting and whistling for the duration of the blackout. Hundreds gathered before a hotel and yelled a warning to one guest who had neglected to douse his room lights.

Patrons deserted the movies for the quarter hour to join the joyous crowds, then returned to their seats.

There were no traffic mishaps. All automobiles within the city were stopped and those entering were halted at the city limits.

During the period from 10:40 to 10:55 p. m., only navigation lights in the harbor, running lights on a moving train, a few isolated lights and blobs of illumination from an aircraft company and a shipyard working on defense orders broke the "island of blackness" for which blackout organizers had called under a special city ordinance.

Tablet Proposed For Cemetery Wall Here

F. M. Wooten, who has requested the City Board of Aldermen to erect an appropriate tablet in honor of the late Mrs. Hattie C. Skinner, who at her own expense, had the brick wall erected around the Episcopal section of Cherry Hill cemetery, said today that reports of the move had left an erroneous impression.

Judge Wooten said it was not proposed to erect a monument, but only a tablet or plaque on the wall in recognition of Mrs. Skinner's gift.

Mrs. Skinner dedicated the wall to the public, but no official recognition ever has been given and no ceremonies were held upon completion of the wall.

First Experiment By Any Major American City

San Francisco, March 8.—(AP)—Two veteran police officers pointed out in a lineup of 68 policemen were suspended temporarily from the force today, accused of beating two Stanford university freshmen picked up as vagrants last Saturday night.

Deputy Police Chief Michael J. Riordan announced formal complaints charging unprovoked assault would be filed today against the officers, Patrolmen Joseph Green and John J. Desmond.

They were picked from the lineup of unformed policemen yesterday by the two 18-year-old students Don Allan and Cater Barber. Both officers denied the accusations.

Allan still wore a large bandage across his broken nose and another on his right leg as he walked slowly through the lines of officers.

The students, wearing old clothes, had come to one of the toughest districts in town to make a "sociological study" of life on "Skid Row."

They were jailed at the southern station and, they claimed were beaten one by one with fists and clubs and then were transferred to the city prison.

Ex-King Carol Grants Interview

Lisbon, Portugal, March 8.—(AP)—In the first interview he has granted the press since he abdicated the throne of Rumania last September, former King Carol asserted today he was very grateful to Portugal for giving him asylum.

"I want to rest," the ex-ruler said. Signs of the worry and anxiety of recent months were clearly marked on Carol's face, although he gave the impression that he was far from down-hearted.

The former king, who fled from Spain last Monday with his red-haired companion of many years Magda Lupescu, said he wished to express his gratitude to Portugal as well as to the American public for the interest and sympathy shown in his plight.

"I appreciate their sympathy," Carol said, "and I want to thank them."

The interview took place at the residence of the wealthy Portuguese business man, Augusto Lopes Joly—the ex-king's long-time friend.

68 Defendants Tried In City Last Month

Sixty-eight defendants were tried in Municipal recorder's court during February the monthly report of Clerk H. H. Duncan disclosed today.

Fines levied during the month totaled $139.25 the money to go to the school fund. Costs amounted to $238.10 and will be turned over to the city general fund.

The Department of Justice and the Police Pension fund each received $26 defendants taxed with court costs having been assessed an additional dollar for each item.

Jap Leader Leaves For Berlin Visit

One Objective of Premier's Visit To Axis Capitals May be Formulation of Common Program Against Britain And U. S.; Turkey And Greece Continue To Ignore Nazi Pressure

By The Associated Press A hint of tightening cooperation between Japan and her European Axis partners came today in an official German announcement that Japanese Foreign Minister Matsuoka would reach Berlin shortly for "personal deliberations on all questions arising from collaboration as set forth in the three-power pact."

One suggestion for Matsuoka's visit to Berlin and also Rome was that the Axis might be contemplating formulation of a common program of action against Britain and the United States, both in Europe and the Far East.

The possibility also was suggested that Japan is loath to participate actively in the war against Britain and wishes to explain her position to Adolf Hitler.

Three Nazi bombers were reported shot down today in dogfights off the English coast as the Nazi air force resumed its attacks on Britain after a night of comparative quiet.

The German high command said a Nazi submarine and Nazi speedboats had sunk two British destroyers and 11 armed merchantmen, totaling 61,400 tons, in attacks on convoys.

Balkan observers intimated that Germany's price for staying a threatened attack on Greece would cost the Greeks every hard-won mile of their gains against Italy and return their troops within their old frontiers.

Some diplomats were said by some sources to have promised Greece that she could retain all the territory she held before October 28, when the Italians first attacked if she would sign a peace giving Premier Mussolini a "paper victory" in Albania.

But despite 150,000 Nazi soldiers poised for action on the Greek-Bulgarian border, the Greeks battled grimly on in central Albania without a word of additional comment from Athens, where German diplomatic pressure so far apparently has fallen flat.

Turkey continued urgent defense measures and Turkish statesmen made ready to state the country's position in the tense situation. The government-inspired press expressed defiance of Germany and urged Yugoslavia to resist Axis overtures.

From Albania came Greek claims of new successes on the central war front, in which 1,050 Italians were captured. These reports coincided with unconfirmed advice of another shakeup in the Italian high command in Albania—the fourth since the campaign began.

"I think I left my hat here," said the thief.

Mr. De Panthenau grabbed him, then called the police. A charge of attempted burglary was filed.

In Major Roles

Miss Garnett Cordie, left, and Jimmie Dempsey, right, play two of the leading roles in the play "Applesauce," which was presented at the college last night by the Varsity club and will be repeated again Monday night by popular demand. Also playing leading roles in the play are Norman Wilkerson, Wilkerson and Robert Musselwhite, both of Greenville. The play will be repeated in the Austin auditorium Monday night at 8 o'clock.

bursts of laughter from the audience.

According to the annual custom the announcement of the selection of the "Varsity Club Sweetheart" was made at the play, Frances Roebuck of Washington having been chosen. Bill Merner, president of the club, presented Jean Wendt, "Varsity Club Sweetheart" last year, who named the club's selection for this year. At this time acknowledgements were made to Miss Lena Ellis, adviser, and Bill Dudash, director.

Robert Musselwhite of Greenville, as Pa Robinson, who objected to being called "peevish" and being asked questions in general, and Norman Wilkerson also of Greenville, as Rollo Jenkins, the fiancé of the heroine who looked upon his future happiness as if it were a mere transaction in the day's business had important roles.

Others taking part were Sybil Taylor, as Ma Robinson, whose questions always upset Pa; Edith Harris, as Mrs. Jennie Baldwin, whose husband couldn't have pleased her had he been a made-to-order Romeo; Garnette Cordie, as Hazel Robinson, whose aim in life was to find happiness and peace; Howard Adams as Matt McAllister, whose "bark was worse than his bite," and Jimmy Dempsey, as Bill McAllister, whose idea of a happy life was to keep everyone else in good spirits by handing them some "applesauce."

The play will be presented again on Monday evening in the Austin auditorium.

Doing Fine Work.
The women's organization of the Eighth Street Christian Church are rendering a splendid service to the missions hospitals of China through the preparation of bandages and other hospital supplies. For two weeks several groups have been meeting for this work and during the coming week at least four groups will meet to continue this work. War conditions in the Far East have seriously affected the work of the hospitals in China, both in the number of workers available and in supplies. When word was received of the existing conditions, the women of the local congregation immediately organized for service in meeting the needs.

Christian Church Service.
The topic scheduled for discussion at the meeting of the discussion group in the Eighth Street Christian Church tomorrow night at eight o'clock, is one that should be of interest to every community-minded member of the church: "What the Church Can Do For the Community." The guest speaker for the meeting is one of the best qualified to discuss the question, since he has made a distinct contribution to the betterment of the community life in the section of the city to which his parish is located. The expert who recently made a survey of the recreational facilities of Greenville reported to a committee of the Board of Aldermen that the only well-planned and properly equipped recreation center in Greenville was located at colored Catholic Church. Since there is a definite movement on foot for the planning of the community life, it is to be expected that the church will be interested in discovering the way in which it may best serve. The public is cordially invited.

Presbyterian Circles.
The circles of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Presbyterian Church will meet as follows:

Without these improvements the town will make no progress for years to come. We must either go forward or retrograde, and without the contemplated improvements the latter is inevitable. SOLONS SPEED ANOTHER BILL

Governor's Measure Acted On With High Speed

Reflector Bureau
By LYNN NISBET

Raleigh, March 7 — Another of the departmental reorganization bills sponsored by Gov. Broughton passed the senate without so much as a flutter of an eyebrow against it. This was the proposal to abolish the elective office of utilities commissioner, and to set up instead three full time appointive places as a utilities commission.

The bill was called in the senate and Senator Ingram, chairman of the utilities committee and author of the bill, just rose and stated:

"I haven't got any speech to make. I'll answer any questions I can. I think this is a good bill. The governor wants it passed."

That was all, but that was enough. The senator waited a minute, there wasn't a question asked, and there wasn't a dissenting vote.

Such easy passage of this bill gave rise, however, to some lobby discussion of the whereabouts of a bill establishing a tax commission, headed by a "tax expert," which was supposed to have been introduced Tuesday. Capitol rumor has it that the "expert" will be A. J. Maxwell, present commissioner of revenue, and that his appointment to such a post will leave vacant the effect of making price-fixing a policy of state government.

The bill is designed to protect Irish potato growers in eastern counties from outside interests which come in every year and seek to make contracts with growers on a share-crop basis. But in the opinion of marketing experts it really is an out and out price guarantee measure and will ultimately injure far more than it will aid the growers.

The bill would require every firm or person putting out potato seed or fertilizer on "shares" to guarantee the grower at least $5.00 per bag for the potatoes which he produced. The bill got a favorable report from the committee on agriculture in the House, and there is considerable sentiment for its passage. There is also the fear that its passage would bring an end to the present custom of share crop contracts and so leave small farmers and tenants without facilities for getting seed and fertilizers. Even those who voice this fear readily admit that something needs to be done to assure the man who does all the actual work of planting, cultivating and harvesting the crop of a larger share in its yield.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Settle attended a luncheon at A. C. College Tuesday.

Strength For The Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

Shopping grudges at their source.

A certain man of splendid character, living a life of usefulness among his fellows, told recently how his mother always straightened out difficulties between the children. She would never allow the war to go down on the wrath of any of her children. If there had been quarreling during the day, she saw to it that it was settled and forgotten by the time the shades of night had fallen. She never allowed a child to go to sleep cherishing a grudge against another child.

Modern psychologists rise up to tell such a woman blessed. She knew the tendency of resentment to eat into the mind. And she was particularly aware of the devastating effect of such suggestions just as the child went to sleep. Furthermore, she knew that the time to stop any evil is at the beginning. She understood that a little precaution taken to pull out weeds just as they appeared above the ground would save much trouble on a later day when they had grown up and threatened to choke the growth. Perhaps, of life itself.

It would do us all good if we balanced the books every night and carefully wrote off the loss which the day and malice of others had brought about. There is nothing which we can do about injuries but write them off the books. They are as uncollectable as most bad debts. Revenge is not only unprofitable; it is impossible, because every time we start out to injure someone else, we injure ourselves more.

IT'S HIGH-TIME

We are glad that Washington is at last taking note of the seriousness of the unsettled labor situation in this country and that the President has declared that all these uncalled-for strikes that are slowing down our national defense program should no longer be condoned. We hope that these words from President Roosevelt will be followed by drastic action, if necessary, to put a stop to all these unnecessary strikes and get production in our vital industries moving on an unprecedented scale.

A NEEDED IMPROVEMENT

Postmaster T. T. Hollingsworth has advised the Board of Aldermen that he has made a request of the Post Office Department for the extension of city delivery service to certain sections of the city not now being served, and that an inspector will come to this city in the near future to make a survey of the situation. Greenville has grown considerably since the last extensions were made in the city delivery service and the proposed extensions are now badly needed. It is to be hoped that Mr. Hollingsworth will be successful in his efforts to have this service provided.

WE SHOULD CONTINUE

We are not trying to get mixed up in local politics, nor are we trying to bar anyone who might want to run for political office, but the action of the Board of Aldermen, at its meeting Thursday night, in calling the regular city election for May reminds us that the time is almost here again for us to elect a mayor.

Mayor B. B. Sugg, who took office only a few months ago, has in our opinion, accomplished much for our city in a very short length of time, and we believe it would be a loss to our city if he did not remain in office. Frankly, we do not know whether or not Mr. Sugg is even considering announcing his candidacy for another term, but we do feel that if he can see his way clear to continue to serve in his present capacity the city would be most fortunate.

Washington Daybook

By Jack Stinson

Washington — I belong to the school of the UN-Mechanically minded. Time was when I could clean a spark plug on an old Model T. If I have to I can get another ribbon into this typewriter, but mechanically, those are about my limits. Besides, I was born a land-lubber. My knowledge of the sea starts and stops with ferry-boat rides across San Francisco bay and a few Sunday afternoon putts-putts around Long Island sound.

This isn't worth mentioning, except that it undoubtedly explains why I stood bug-eyed the other afternoon before a machine in the Coast and Geodetic Survey offices and watched L. P. Disney turning a crank, glancing at dials, and as simply as that copying down the figures on the high and low tides at New London, Conn., in March, 1942.

If tides just came and went, all around the oceans just the same every day in every harbor, it would be no trick at all. But they don't. Tides are caused by the gravitational pull of the sun and the moon. The sun and the moon change their relationship — therefore the tides change. That isn't all. Tides are different in different harbors. The tide in a round, deep harbor with a narrow mouth is entirely different from that in a long narrow, wide-mouthed harbor, bottomed with a comparatively shallow shelf.

These variations in the tides from place to place are called "constituents" (they are known factors gathered by observation). There may be as many as 37 of them and when all or part of them are brought to bear, working out tide tables on pencil and paper would be so laborious that probably even if Disney quadrupled his staff in the Section of Predictions Division of Tides and Currents, the boys couldn't get 'em out.

Yet the C. and G. Survey's tide-prediction robot can swallow all these "constituents," mix them up with the "constants" (the factors which apply to all tides anywhere) and with a simple turn of the crank give you, on dial and graph, the exact height of the tide at any given second for years to come.

The tide predicting robot is 11 feet long, six feet high and two feet wide. It's a well-ordered conglomeration of wheels, pulleys, chains and cogs with a couple of score of little gauges and dials which have to be set to the spitt hair before the operator starts grinding. It is not the only tide machine in the world, but it is the only one that has been developed to such perfection.

At any port where observations have been made for this so-called "harmonic prediction," it is no trouble at all for Disney and his staff to set out tide tables for any year. That goes for Singapore, Tokyo, Calais and Seattle. As part of our "good neighbor" policy it soon will go for the west coast of South America, for, although tide predictions have been made for some ports on the east coast, they had never been made for Pacific harbors there. C. and G. Survey men are in the field making the automatic gauge observations that are necessary for harmonic predictions.

One Result of War.

Just as a labor-saving device, a number of nations, including France, Germany, England and the United States have exchanged tide tables for years.

Since the present war, an amusing thing has happened. Germany has refused to send over the tables on those ports for which she was predicting. None of the conquered or Axis nations which formerly submitted their predictions have been allowed to send them out.

It's amusing, because although the tide-tables in any harbor of a country are in the field making the information to the enemy, there's not a port from the Baltic to Gibraltar where Disney's staff couldn't give you the highs and lows to the inch and within split seconds. And when the 1942 and 1943 tables come off the press, the tide tables for all those ports will be right there.

Raleigh, March 8.—The State Highway and Public Works Commission, like most other spending agencies, surrenders only as last resort any claim it may have to the handling of money. The matter of allocation for streets in cities and towns is a case in point. Present law divides that money two ways: half on street mileage and half on population. New proposals is for one-third on mileage, one-third on population, and one-third on basis of need. Affect of which is to give the highway commission control of one-third of the money, where now it is allocated entirely by statute. When it looked like the amendment might be voted down, Charles Ross, attorney for the commission, walked onto the floor of the senate, talking and prompting in his statements. The commission got what it wanted.

Resignation Long Deferred

Capitol hangers-on were chuckling yesterday about the acumen displayed by Cutlar Moore, chairman of the state ABC board. Mr. Moore tendered his resignation to the governor, effective next August. The chuckling was occasioned by the fact that common gossip has had it that Mr. Moore would be asked to resign soon after adjournment of the general assembly. (He supported Horton in the primary last summer). By beating the governor to the draw, as it were, and resigning now but making the effective date nearly six months away, it is believed that Mr. Moore saved his job for several months at least.

Honorary Page and Pagette

The senate got two more honorary employees Friday. Archie Gray, Jr., son of the senator from Northampton, was held up by Governor Harris while he was appointed an honorary page. The appointment being accompanied by prediction that the lad would one day sit in one of these seats. Little Miss Tony Rowe daughter of the Pender senators, was made a pagette.

Hopeless—But SAYS Game

Senator Tom O'Berry doesn't like the reapportionment of representatives any more than most senators like the reapportionment of their own membership. When the matter came to a vote, Senator Tom said: "I know you senators are going to pass this bill, but I wish you wouldn't." He was right; they did pass it —a loud and resounding "no" from O'Berry being the only audible dissent.

Brooks Still After Bus Lines

Senator Brooks of Durham, who has waged a sort of one-man war on bus companies since the opening day of the assembly, held up the bus station eminent domain bill Friday, with a motion that it go over until Monday night. The bill already passed by the house, confers on bus companies the right to condemn station sites in the larger cities of the state. Senator Brooks doesn't like eminent domain much for anybody, and doesn't like anything much about bus lines. When the combination occurs he is dead set against it.

ALONG CAME CINDERELLA

YESTERDAY: Roger Cosgrave has been wakened by the news that his vivid young wife Lovely has been injured in a motor car smash. They had quailed before she went out, and when Roger fearfully went to the scene, Lovely was not there. Emily, the family friend to whom he had been engaged before his marriage to Lovely, has tried to comfort him. And now Roger finds a half hysterical note from Lovely in their room.

Chapter 28

Message From Lovely

"When you read this," Lovely wrote, "you'll know what happened tonight because I saw you go when they called you. You are right, shouldn't have gone. I didn't want to really. I don't know why I did. It wasn't any fun. I was the only one not hurt. I ran away from it because I didn't want your name mixed up with it. I wanted to come home and ask forgiveness. And then Emily told me I saw you and she and I looked so right together. And I knew then that everything I've ever done has been wrong. I brought only unhappiness. I should never have stepped between you. I haven't been the sort of wife you should have had. And so now I'm going. Roger my darling. Don't try to find me. You never will."

That was all. And there on the floor was the scuffed mate to the slipper Roger had brought back with him. She must have walked to the house in her stocking feet. Yes, there were the stockings, one was a mass of holes.

Roger was stunned. He was too disturbed for sane thought. Lovely had left him, as she thought, to her love for him. But that wasn't the way things were disposed of. He'd find her, of course, and bring her back. No matter what had happened she was Lovely and he wanted her back. He knew her waywardness was not a matter of the heart, that it was purely a surface gesture that had nothing at all to do with her love for him.

Meaningfully Roger forced her out of the slushy parkway to New York with the peculiar luck of the reckless. She automatically headed for the west side and found herself stopping in front of the tenement where Gert lived. She was shivering with something more than cold as she got out of the car and walked up the four flights of stairs. On the landing, at Gert's door, her uplifted hand halted just before it touched the bell. She remembered with clarity so painful it was like a knife cutting into her heart the last time she had stood so.

Slowly turned then and started slowly down the stairs. That night a thousand years ago, she had not had the courage to face the quarter that ragged out at her from behind that shabby, thin, closed door.

Now she couldn't muster the courage to break the spell of the deep silent peace that lay over the place.

So she drove the few blocks to where Joe and his mother lived. She made no apology when the old door opened to reveal Mrs. Hulse, a shawl over the shoulders of her outing flannel nightgown. Nor did Mrs. Hulse apologize for her appearance. Their lives had been too familiar with extremity to apologize for trivialities.

Mixed Welcome

"Lovely! Oh, Lovely, dearie!" Mrs. Hulse opened her arms and took Lovely to her ample bosom. The faint odor of Lovely's expensive new perfume glorified the narrow hall.

"How did you get behind his mother's eyes, just narrowed and hardened slightly as they looked at the girl."

"What are you here for?" he asked.

"You certainly know how to welcome an old friend," she said, and laughed up at him.

But Joe wasn't to be fooled. The hardness of his eyes was in his voice as he said: "I told you not to come in, and now you've gone and done it!"

"You don't know what you're talking about," Lovely flared, anxiety and contrition feeding the flame of anger like oil flowing steadily on a fire.

"You get out of here," Joe said sharply. "Go back where you belong, you made your choice! Have the guts to stick by it!"

"Keep still, Joe." Mrs. Hulse seemed to take on height and dignity. There was authority in her voice. "No one's being put out of this house if they need to come in. Least of all Lovely."

"But, Ma, I tell you she's running away from something she's done herself and—"

"Flush your mouth, Joe! Hulse! What she's done makes no difference," his mother said. "It's not for you or me to question Lovely. If the good Lord had meant that you should judge His people you'd have been born with a scepter in your hand."

Joe was looking at Lovely steadily. "Little idiot," he said. "Just be getting to value what you've run away from—what most people give their lives for."

"Stop that, Joe!" said Mrs. Hulse. "Lovely's never done a wrong thing purposely in her life and she's probably got good reasons now."

Lovely could have cried wildly at

SEEING THROUGH MY WINDSHIELD

By ROSE ELLWOOD BRYAN
(H. D. Agent at Large)

Another most pleasant week has passed while I traveled over your good Pitt county roads. I have met more of your lovely and most hospitable Home Demonstration Club women.

Home Demonstration Agent

Monday your County Commissioners appointed Miss Veronica Lee Joyner to fill the vacancy of Home Demonstration Agent. She is one of our own splendid Pitt county girls. She lives in Farmville. At present she is Vocational Home Economics teacher in the Farmville high school and serves as critic teacher for East Carolina Teachers College. She is fine, young, full of pep and has done splendid work in the six short years since she graduated at East Carolina Teachers College. Farmville high school's loss will be Pitt county's gain, when Miss Joyner takes over her new work as Home Demonstration agent.

Home Demonstration Clubs

Well! Red Oak Club tops the list for attendance. Thirty-eight club women met at the home of Mrs. C. S. Hunter for one of the finest club meetings it has been my pleasure to attend. They received the National Defense Program to be followed by the Home Demonstration Club women of North Carolina with enthusiasm. You can count on them to give their part. The recreation program was a scream. Each woman introduced her own and told me what she thought of me. You will look forward to an operation at the Joe, at his mother's instructions, opened the stove so it flared up in warm flame and Mrs. Hulse got out an old china tea pot and went through the rite of warming it first with hot water before she put the tea in.

"There's nothing," she said, "like a dish of tea when your soul at your flesh is tried beyond endurance."

"And your own people," Joe added, looking at Lovely. "It was his apology and she understood it. It was taking her back into the fold."

They talked of everything but the things they wanted to talk of.

"I suppose I'd better go now," Lovely said, finally without too much assurance.

"And where to at this hour?" asked Mrs. Hulse. "You haven't slept. You'll stay right here. That couch makes a good bed. And maybe you don't want to believe it but I've got extra sheets and blankets—it's almost like I expected this!"

Mrs. Hulse said good night first and went to her room. Then Joe and Lovely stood facing each other in the living room for a tense, silent moment. Every honest detail of the room was imprinted on Lovely's mind, and she looked toward the wall paper and carpet were faded to a monotone. There was an ugly mid-Victorian mantel that had never known the first faint curl of smoke from an honest fire. The mirror over the mantel was spotted and dimmed. There was a little figure of the Virgin in blue and on each side a china vase of faded artificial flowers. On the other wall was a colored framed print of the Lord's Supper and near it was an enlargement of a photograph of Joe's father.

"That's the kind of people they are, though," Lovely, clausen and family. She was aware of thinking too, that was the kind the 'Coug' graves were. So different. Yet so alike.

"When did you come back?" Lovely's question broke the silence.

"Last night."

"Funny," Lovely said, "we're both right back where we started."

"With some difference—you aren't staying. I am."

"I'm not so sure, Joe," Lovely's voice was a trace unsteady.

"I am. My love wasn't strong enough to hold you here, Lovely, but it's going to be strong enough to send you back."

Lovely looked at him with misted eyes. The big awkward fellow, looking on heroic proportions in the boathouse room. Even so, Lovely had no faith that he could perform miracles. She knew in her inmost heart that finally her mad pursuit of fun had taken her one step too far.

Lovely searched

Lovely looked at the sounds of night—garbage cans banging in the hands of collectors, trucks pounding along on night hauls, a tug whistle in the distance. And then came daylight. Quickly. As if a gust of wind blew darkness away.

Mrs. Hulse looked in on Lovely and she started out.

"Don't you get up till you feel like it, dearie. Joe's on the job already and I'm heading out. There's not a thing to disturb you. There's coffee in the pot and some wild grape fell in the pantry."

Rain was a dismal gray curtain against the window through which Lovely saw the shabby city only dimly.

And in Westchester the day dawned bleakly. Thick heavy clouds looked as if any moment they might shower the earth with snow. Emily, awake early, heard Roger pass her door and followed him downstairs. Her face was pale and a little drawn. Her slim white hands looked more helpless than ever.

"I'm going to the city," Roger told her. He didn't have to tell her why. "Hold the fort will you? I mean, don't let mother or dad know what's happened. There's no need. We'll be back before any explanations are needed."

"I hope so. Oh, I hope so, Roger." Roger made straight for Katie's flat. Katie had lost some of her dewy rosybud prettiness. Her eyes widened with wonder as she heard Roger's story, but there was no help she could give him. She had not seen Lovely.

"But she loved you so," she said in slow awe. "And there's Gert! Poor Lovely! She must have been terribly unhappy! She's never been like that before!"

And Gert was angry for the first time in her life angry with Lovely.

"Like always," Gert said disgustedly. "Quitters. Runs all through the family. Make a bargain and then run out on it. Pop did it and Mom did it and now Lovely."

"You haven't," Roger said, looking at her plain honest face.

"No, well, maybe it's because I don't dare. Not being good looking makes a difference in you. You don't feel so sure of always getting another chance. I'm not taking any credit for it."

Roger stood and looked at her. He didn't know where else to go to look for Lovely. He had been so sure she would seek one or the other of the women closest to her.

Gert added slowly, as if she were not sure she should tell: "But she was here. Sunny found her handkerchief right here at the door this morning. Here, you'd better have it."

16th century coffee drinking was forbidden in Constantinople because it stimulated thinking amongst the common people. It is said that the first offense was punished by beating and the second by death! Yet, in my visits to Constantinople, it seemed as though most of the people spent the larger part of the day sipping very strong coffee.

Propaganda In America

We can discern by 65 2-3 the news items from abroad; but it is difficult to keep calm over what is said within this country. The talk about "secret weapons" that a "new world order is inevitable" and that "democracy is doomed" is very bad. I also dislike talk about the futility of war and "I did not raise my boy to be cannon fodder." I recently listened to a communist speech stressing the "plutocratic democracy" by our "plutocratic democracy." Much of such talk we've heard in the halls of Congress during the past few weeks. Most of it has been honest; but some of it may have been enemy-inspired.

How far shall we go in suppressing such opinions? How can we distinguish between honest opinions of Americans and hired propaganda of foreign agents? It is more and more difficult for conscientious Americans to speak their minds if they disagree with the "higher-ups," or even with their intolerant neighbors. If we get so that those born in the U. S. or Canada cannot freely speak their honest thoughts without being persecuted, is democracy worth fighting for? Certainly, the treatment in some cities of John L. Lewis, Norman Thomas, and Marian Anderson is a disgrace to us all.

Censorship Ahead

Newsmen in Washington have already been photographed and fingerprinted. The Secretary of the War has sent a "confidential" letter to newspapers asking them not to print certain facts. While making studies at Washington relative to the war uses and supplies of arsenic, I am at a loss to know whether the Chemical Warfare Service is telling me the truth or stringing me along. All of this reminds me of World War I when I worked for the Committee on Public Information under that able genius, George Creel. Although we now have no such "Committee," yet Mr. Lowell Mellett heads a great press bureau in Washington which, indirectly, has the spending of millions of dollars of taxpayers' money. This bureau may be used to prepare the large statistical organization, securing the country for facts. I am utterly bewildered at times trying to separate the truth from falsehood.

What Is The Remedy?

Of course, the real remedy for our difficulties will be found in the twelfth verse of the first chapter of Deuteronomy. Since the time of moral, lying has been recognized as one of the ten basic sins. In fact the only hope of world peace is to get back to the teachings of the Bible which all nations have, for the Bible which, thrown out of the window.

As a second suggestion, I believe that all persons who are not citizens of the U. S. or Canada should be compelled to keep their mouths shut on political and social matters especially in connection with the war. My church friends will not back me up in this. They say that if the U. S. and Canada should prohibit foreign propaganda in their countries, all the Axis Powers and their friends would immediately throw out from their countries all American teachers, preachers, and missionaries, especially those who are paid with money from the U. S. and Canada. So the plot thickens!

Mr. R. R. Bennett, local farm agent, introduced Mr. D. E. He pointed out the things one should consider in purchasing electric equipment for farms and home use. Local merchants had loaned equipment for the demonstration. He also estimated the cost of the use of the appliances and of current used for water supply, farm motors, etc. An open forum led by Mr. R. A. Joyner was held at the close of the meeting and many questions were asked.

Phantoms Again Champs; Win Over Goldsboro 35-30

JAMES LEADS LOCAL CAGERS

Third Conference Championship for Local Boys

By C. B. ROWLETT

Greenville high school's Flying Green Phantoms ran true to form last night to down the Goldsboro High Earthquakes 35-30 and take the Eastern Conference championship for the third year in succession. Goldsboro and Greenville met in the finals after the two teams eliminated Kinston and Tarboro on the preceding night in the semi-final round.

Immediately after the contest Frank Ruble, Secretary-Treasurer of the conference and principal of the Washington High school presented Captain Burney Warren with a handsome bronze trophy awarded to the winners. After demands from the crowd could not be side-stepped Coach Boley Farley gave a short talk.

Larry James and Clyde King shared scoring honors last night with twelve points each. James was credited with three field goals and six free throws. King's total came by way of five field goals and two gratis shots. Besides gaining high score honors both boys were credited with a brilliant defensive game and tops in ball handling. Burney Warren of the heels and Rusty Nickens of Goldsboro were next high with 10 and seven respectively.

It would be had to pick an outstanding star from the contest so I won't attempt to. Just take any two men of both teams and you will be almost sure to get three of the four on an all-star list.

Typical of all OHS teams for the past few years, the boys were a little slow getting started but when they start they are even harder to stop. Nickens, Weathers and Heyward paved the way for a Goldsboro first quarter lead with a field goal each. Larry James kept the Phantoms in the running with a five point barrage during that first quarter. Two of his points came by way of a field goal and the other three when he capitalized on three of four foul shots awarded him after he was fouled both times by Charlie Weathers.

From the beginning of the second period the Phantoms began to pick up speed and overcame the Quakes lead and pushed ahead by 2 points. Snaz Clark was Greenville's big gun that period with a four point spurt, on field goals. One of the

TESTS BRAKING SPEEDS

In this specially equipped automobile Mr. Harry M. Pontous will demonstrate the distances required for stopping a car traveling at varying speeds.

Demonstrations will be made at Stokes at 10:30 Tuesday, March 11 and at Grifton at 1:30 on the same day. The public is invited to attend.

The distances required for application of brakes and for actual stopping are marked on the pavement by an ingenious arrangement using revolvers and yellow bullets.

BEAUTY COMES IN A SMALL PACKAGE

Here in this March "House of the Month," designed by the nationally famous architect, Randolph Evans, for the Monthly Small House Club, is as efficient and livable a four-room apartment as you have ever seen under its own tiny, square, peaked, shingle roof. Consisting of a spacious living room that serves for dining as well, two comfortable bedrooms, bath, and a real kitchen, this small house design reduces the enclosed living unit to the minimum consistent with American living standards.

Only 24 feet by 28 feet, the floor area is less than 700 square feet. Being almost square, it is the most economical type of house to construct. Yet a study of its delightful exterior shows that attractiveness was not sacrificed, as is so frequent in small homes, for either efficiency or economy. The trellises at the front door, the slightest back and roof break in the kitchen wing, and the oversized chimney may add fifty dollars to the construction cost, but they certainly stamp the house as architecturally correct.

Architect Evans in his rendering shows the outside walls, that might well be either clapboards or shingles, painted a soft weathered grey to give the cottage the mellowed, comfortable look of "belonging." The roof will look well in a green, or in a dark slate tone to match the slatted shutters. Corner boards and trellis should be white, and of course pink or red rambler roses are a must, climbing the trellis and cascading over the entrance roof.

Adequate wiring, good lighting and enough electrical outlets and light switches properly spaced provide for the extra livability of dual purpose planning that is characteristic of this compact little house. Without exceeding a limited standard for minimum adequacy, the wiring is designed to make it easy to attach portable lamps wherever they are needed and to use household appliances with economy and efficiency in a flexible living scheme.

Standard lumber sizes have been carefully used in this house design so that a minimum of waste and cutting will be had, an important angle when striving to hold the cost of a small home down to absolute minimum. Any form of desired heat may be installed but it will heat comfortably in any weather with a pipeless furnace, which of course is the cheapest possible form of central heat.

Mr. Tadlock enthusiastically describes this March "House of the Month" as small house design at its best. Detailed working drawings are available at the office of the

NIGHT SESSIONS APPEAR LIKELY

Calendars Of Both Branches Are Congested

Reflector Bureau
By LYNN NISBET
Raleigh, March 6.—With calendars in both houses more or less congested, and with local bills pouring in by the dozens at every session, the legislature is facing night sessions from now on to adjournment date—whenever that may be.

Administrative leaders are now hopeful of adjournment by March 11, though there is definite sentiment, very poorly concealed, of adjournment against virtual orders from the governor's office that the legislative branch finish its job to the governor can take a trip to New Orleans on March 16. The conference of state governors meets then and Governor Broughton would like to leave the legislature in session.

The appropriations bill, only absolutely "must" bill yet to be considered, is likely to be out of the way within the next few days. There remain many important items, however, that will require debate and study for intelligent handling, and which cannot be adequately disposed of in the usual number of legislative hours. There is some doubt whether they can be disposed of even with night sessions by the last of next week.

Committees begin sessions this morning at 10 o'clock and go right into the formal sessions at 11:30 or noon, and then more committees in the afternoon and formal sessions at night. By this means the machinery is being speeded up and laws are being manufactured with dispatch—if not with deliberation.

Some of the legislative veterans are willing to lay small bets that sine die adjournment cannot be reached before the 20th.

On The Baseball Fronts

Things are warming up out on the West Coast and down in Florida as the baseball teams get down to serious, full-time training work. Here are some of the figures—old and new—playing a part in the spring drama.

MACK MISSES! Imagine Connie's embarrassment. The venerable Philadelphia Athletic manager, attempting to demonstrate proper bunting technique, slipped up on one little detail. He missed the ball. His pupils (left to right) are Pitchers Nelson Potter, John McCollum, Herman Besse, John Leovich and Bill Beckman.

'LISTEN, SON! Ten Lyons, right, who started with the Chicago White Sox a year before Rookie Warren Martin, 18, was born, gives the young pitcher a few words of advice. Lyons is a 40-year-old veteran. Martin is up from Jonesboro, where he won 12 and lost 10 last year, for a tryout with the White Sox at Pasadena.

QUESTION MARK! Many baseball experts figure the world champion Cincinnati Reds are going to be even stronger this year than last. Whether they are depends greatly upon at least two of the three pitchers in this picture. They are Johnny Vander Meer, left, of no-hit, no-run fame, and Monte Pearson, right, former Yank. And if Rookie Bob Logan, 19-14 pitcher with Indianapolis last year, should come through, too, that'd be so much velvet.

shots was one of the best witnessed throughout the entire tournament. It was a one-hand hooker from the corner that skimmed off the backboard and dropped cleanly into the net. James and Warren took the runner-up honors that period with two free throws. These boys made good on the throws after being fouled by Heyward, King and McClenny. Clyde King, Goldsboro's sharp-shooting guard, scored five points on two field goals and a free throw after being fouled by Warren. Score at intermission stood at a 13-11 count.

Going into the third quarter with a two-point lead, the Phantoms stepped up the pace and at the end of the third period held a 25-17 edge. Captain Warren picked the net to the tune of three field goals and James sunk another free throw and an action shot to keep it company. Musselwhite and Briley accounted for the other points on another free throw and a field goal. It was King again keeping challengers in the race when he dropped in two more field goals and another free throw. Smith accounted for the other point on a free toss.

Goldsboro began with the whistle of the final quarter to attempt to overcome the seven point deficit and they nearly did it. King dropped in a field goal to start the rally and Nickens and McClenny dropped in free throws to add three more points and the score stood at 25-22 but the Greenville boys did not like that and they proceeded to change it. Musselwhite sunk a free throw to start the rally and James, Riddle, Warren and Clark sunk a field goal each and the result was a 34-22 lead with the Phantoms on the long end. Greenville garnered one more point that period a few seconds later when Musselwhite capitalized on another foul. With the score at 35-22 the Quakes began another try. Nickens sunk a field goal and Smith followed with another. With only a short time remaining Smith tossed in another and the score stood at 35-28 and Greenville called time-out with 25 seconds left to play. Time in and the two teams began to scrap for the ball and Goldsboro got it. Nickens cut loose from way out and the ball whished through the net just as the final whistle blew. Final score 45-30.

N.Y. Stock Market

New York, March 8.—(AP)—Buyers stepped into the stock market for sugar company issues today, but paid scant heed to leaders in other departments.

Aside from scattered specialties minor fractional variations either way ruled from the opening on New York issues were unchanged at the close.

Fire! Fire! Same Wasn't Fooling!

"Fire, fire, fire!" squawked Sam, the parrot, and members of the M. S. Awe family in Minneapolis, watching an amateur fire movie, laughed heartily. But Sam continued to squawk about fire and so the family investigated, found a blaze in the kitchen, and fled the burning building. Sam was still yelling "fire" when Richard Awe, 8, and Sandra Borglum, 1, congratulated him.

New York Covered By 10-Inch Snow

New York, March 8.—(AP)—New York's heaviest snow storm in six years deposited 10 and a half inches of damp flakes on the city today—three days before anniversary of the famous blizzard of 1888.

The forecast was that snow would continue falling until late today.

The storm moved on New York at 7:30 o'clock last night after covering Washington, D. C., with 10 inches for the capital's record fall of the season.

Travel by land, sea and air was disrupted along the Atlantic seaboard. A man was killed in a skidding automobile in Maryland, a freighter ran aground off Ocean City and three boys were missing in two small boats in the Severn river in Maryland.

Winds of gale force were predicted later today as storm warnings went up from Maine to Delaware.

The rest of the nation was spared from the storm and in general experienced average temperatures, under cloudy or rainy skies.

Rabbi Lefkowitz Heard At College

That democracy can meet the challenge of totalitarianism only with the ancient Jewish concept later carried on into Christianity, of sacrifice for an idea, was the theme of a talk made at the College assembly yesterday by Rabbi Lefkowitz, of Cumberland, Md. The visitor also reviewed for a group in the afternoon, Robert Sherwood's play "There Shall Be No Night."

Presented by Miss Sallie J. Davis as speaking on "The Power of an Idea," Rabbi Lefkowitz introduced this theme by telling of a scene in the play "Our Town" in which the presentation of the dead soldier shows the power of an idea, the willingness in this instance, to die for the preservation of the union.

Then the speaker turned to the Old Testament to cite as our first example of willingness to sacrifice for an idea Abraham's preparator for offering Isaac on the altar in the wilderness. He showed the effect of this idea on the history of the Jews and then on the early Christians. The whole history of the Protestant church, he said, is a record of such sacrifice. Indeed the history of human civilization itself is a record of a long series of idealists who gave their lives for their ideas—a Socrates, in philosophy; a Pasteur, in medicine.

Hitlerism, he said, no matter what we think of it, has repeated the idea of pan-Germanism until he has made it a religion to die for—a missionary crusading movement for a new world.

The war between Germany and England is a struggle of ideas which will decide our future mode of life he declared. Democracy must meet the challenge by its willingness to sacrifice for its ideals of racial, social, educational, and religious equality. In closing the speaker pointed out that the Ram's horn to Jews is a symbol of sacrifice and a symbol of freedom, and that there can be no freedom except through sacrifice.

Head Of Elections Board Keeps Eye On New Laws

Raleigh, March 8.—If you ask him why he's here, Will Lucas will tell you in his most urbane manner that he's just looking on and doing nothing in particular; but it's really an open secret that the chairman of the state board of elections is keeping an eye on any effort to weaken the laws he was so powerfully effective in getting written into the North Carolina code two years ago.

It was no easy job abolishing absentee voting and markers in primaries and equally as tough going when it came to throwing more drastic safeguards around those practices in general elections. So Mr. Lucas hasn't any idea of staying down in Wilson, even though that's not so far off, while there exists the possibility of a last minute foray against the election laws as re-written in 1939.

Mr. Lucas is primarily interested in the proposal (House Bill 710) introduced by Basil Whitener of Gaston and many others for the purpose of permitting voters now in military, naval or marine service to vote in primaries by absentee ballot.

He doesn't see how anybody can object to the principle—everybody must agree that the "boys in service" ought to be permitted to exercise their sovereign rights as voters. On the other hand, Mr. Lucas intends to see to it that every precaution is taken against making use of the admitted need of legislation giving them this right as an excuse to weaken the election laws structure which was so recently overhauled.

The principal change in the bill likely to be advocated by Mr. Lucas is the insertion of a time limit. The bill contains none.

The bill simply gives to "electors who in service in the army, navy, marine corps, air force, coast guard or any other branch of the armed forces of the United States" the right to vote by absentee ballot in primary elections; and provides that any American diplomatic or consular officer, consular agent, or any commanding or commissioned officer in any branch of the U. S.

Armed Forces Shall Be Empowered To Administer The Oath, Mark or Attend Marking of the Absentee Ballot Under Section 5, Chapter 159, Public Laws of 1939.

Mr. Lucas may ask that there be added a section providing that the act shall be in force only during the period of the present emergency—or even more likely, he will insist on a provision that the act shall apply only to primary elections held in 1941 or 1942. Another legislature will meet in January, 1943, and if there is still an existing reason for the bill it could be re-enacted.

Another bill now in the hopper (House Bill 760) will probably draw the attention and fire of Mr. Lucas. This measure, introduced by Transylvania's Representative Galoway would amend the existing absentee ballot law to allow any person designated by the voter to apply for an absentee ballot for the voters.

Around this point there was waged one of the fiercest fights of the

N.C. Flower Gardens Are Affected By War

Raleigh, March 8.—One little thought of way in which the war in Europe is making itself felt, in North Carolina is the inability of flower gardeners to get crocus and other bulbs. Within recent years certain sections in eastern Carolina have made long strides in developing bulbs for market, but there are yet many kinds which have to be imported. Raleigh gardeners calling at seed stores for their usual supply, were sorrowfully told that none could be had.

Plans are being shaped for our mass meeting to be held at Ayden March 30th.

I hope each local president with a delegate will attend to hear the church's message of aspiration and its record of achievement that will be told during this meeting.

Because of the new field we must move forward with new zeal. The trail may be dim and the perils hard but let us like true missionaries keep constantly on the march, driven by a heavenly vision that will not let us rest in this new field.

Let us be as Peter when he said unto Christ, "It is good for us to be here." Christ taught that God in a life means self-sacrificing.

Let us have a greater vision of our work in the mission field this year as never before.

Let us not be disobedient unto this beautiful vision.

I have had several reports from the new societies on the district saying they mean to do more for missions this year than ever. What is accomplished without work? I am very pleased with our local president of the parent body. In a meeting last Thursday night Mrs. Tatano told those present that "He that sent her as a missionary is still with her." Hold up your president's hands.—Etta Dupree, district president.

She had been a member of the Mt. Zion church for 50 years or more, and is survived by one daughter, Eliza Dawson; three sons, Will, Arden and Herman Dawson.

Miss Dawson had spent her entire life in the Haddock Crossroads and Cox's Mill community.
