U. S. TO EXPAND
ARMORED FORCE

Information Being Analyzed to Determine Adequacy of Present Plans For Eight Such Units

Washington, March 21.—
(AP)—New data on how Germany's panzer divisions were used in the conquest of France are being studied carefully by the army general staff, Congress learned today, in connection with plans for possible greater expansion of the army's new armored force.

General George C. Marshall, chief of staff, told the House Appropriations sub-committee on March 5 that the army had received more exact data about two weeks earlier than had been available previously as to the employment of the German mechanized and motorized forces, particularly the former, and the "break through into France and the plunge to the channel."

The testimony was made public today.

The general said that information was being analyzed to determine the adequacy of the United States' present plans for an ultimate armored force consisting of eight divisions plus the equivalent of a ninth division and 15 armored battalions.

Discussion of the subject was precipitated by Rep. Collins (D-Miss.), who questioned whether the plans to have four divisions in the armored force by the end of June were "sufficient to go on the offensive" in view of Germany's reported possession of 14 mechanized divisions.

"It depends on where you go, sir," replied Marshall. "The four divisions are the number that we would have material for. Material is a limiting factor."

Meanwhile, Democratic Leader
Barkley expressed confidence that the full Appropriations Committee would endorse the House-approved legislation for providing $7,000,000 British aid without change by tomorrow. He told reporters there seemed to be no substantial opposition and that a Senate vote Monday "was quite possible."

Civil Court Session
Is Brought To Close

This week's civil session of Superior court was completed this morning after only two cases had reached the jury stage during the week.

David Washington, local Negro, was awarded a $30 judgment in his case against George Knight and Luther Locke after most of yesterday had been taken up in trial of the case. The plaintiff also brought action against the Carolina Dairy, but the case was dismissed as to this defendant. The plaintiff alleged that he was struck by a Carolina Dairy truck being operated by Locke at the request of Knight, employee of the dairy company.

The only other case tried during the term involved an action over a cow in which the plaintiff was awarded $50.

Judge Luther Hamilton of Morehead City will preside over another week of civil court here next week.

The Carteret jurist traded with Judge J. Paul Frizzelle, who in turn had traded with Judge Leo Carr, assigned to this district for the Spring term. Judge Frizzelle will go to Charlotte next week.

Olde Towne Inn Gets Experienced Manag'r

of many years' experience who for the past 14 years has been affiliated with S and W Cafeterias, has assumed his duties as manager of the Olde Towne Inn, popular eating place on East Fifth street.

Mr. Camp comes to Greenville as one of the leading restaurant operators in this state and the management of the Olde Towne Inn expressed much satisfaction at securing his services and expressed belief he will be a great asset to the restaurant.

Thumbs Up For Rickenbacker

In spite of serious injuries suffered in the crash of an Eastern Air Lines sleeper plane near Atlanta February 27, Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, World War flying ace and president of EAL, was all smiles and "thumbs up" in an Atlanta hospital at his first interview with newspaper men since the accident. Eight persons were killed in the crash and eight others were injured.

QUICK TO ACT

Approves $7,000,000-
000 Fund To Aid
Great Britain

Washington, March 21.—(AP)—A Senate Appropriations sub-committee approved without change today the administration's $7,000,000,000
aid to Britain bill.

The bill already passed by the House, is expected to receive prompt approval from the full Senate Appropriations Committee. It will be taken up in the Senate Monday, and some leaders forecast passage without major change by Monday night.

Senator Byrnes (D-S.C.) said the sub-committee defeated on a voice vote a proposal by Senator Nye to cut the appropriation in two. Nye later voted for the full amount,
along with all members of the subcommittee. Byrnes said the full Appropriations Committee would act on the record-breaking appropriation at 11 a. m. tomorrow.

William S. Knudsen assured senators today that the "full amount of the $7,000,000,000 aid fund would be committed" during "his fiscal year starting July 1."

After testifying for more than an hour at a closed session of the Senate Appropriations Committee, the director general of defense production said his testimony dealt largely with matters previously presented at a similar House hearing.

"We may not be able to spend the entire $7,000,000,000 in the year, but we will make commitments for it," Knudsen told reporters waiting outside the committee room.

"We already have our plans for expansion well under way," he added.

Tonight at 8 o'clock in the high

Amicable Adjustment May Result
From Conferences

Detroit, March 21.—(AP)—James
P. Duesey, federal labor consultant, announced today that prospects for an amicable adjustment of the dispute between the United Automobile Workers and the Ford Motor Company have been greatly enhanced by mediation conferences of the last few weeks.

Dewey indicated that steps taken by the Ford company and the National Labor Relations Board had relieved the tension between union and the company since the union declared its "intent to strike" at the Rouge and Lincoln plants here.

The Ford company employs approximately 100,000 workers in the Detroit area and has $154,000,000 worth of defense contracts.

Dewey said the company had reemployed "most" of the 1,000 Rouge plant employees that the UAW had charged were dismissed for union activity over a period of the past several months.

He explained further that Harry Bennett, Ford personnel director had agreed "to work out any problem with me that warrants my attention, such as reinstatement of men whose work has been satisfactory."

The Ford company, Dewey said had given assurance "that it is unlikely that any further layoffs will occur" from lack of business.

LARGE QUANTITY
HELD ON OPTION

Senator Particularly Interested In Sending Some of Tobacco Now Being Held
By Independents

Washington, March 21.—
(AP)—Senator Bailey expressed belief today that some of the fine-cured tobacco stored in the south for the British trade soon would be moving toward England.

The tobacco, more than 300,000,000 pounds, was purchased from 1935
and 1940 crops with Commodity Credit Corporation financing after Britain cut off her American buying to conserve foreign exchange for war purposes.

British-American companies and independent buyers, whose facilities were used to purchase and store the leaf, were given two-year options on the tobacco. None of the options has as yet been taken up.

Bailey said he believed a plan would be worked out under the lease-lend law to send Britain "all the tobacco she needs."

He explained tobacco was a prime source of government revenue in England, which imposed a tax of about $2.50 a pound on the leaf.

Bailey said he was particularly interested in sending to England some of the tobacco held by independent buyers. He explained many of them would not be able to go on the market this year unless some of the optioned leaf was taken off their hands.

While the Senator gave no estimates of the amounts he believed would be sent to England, it was learned from other sources that about 10,000,000 pounds a month was being considered.

Hearing Asked On North-South Line

Paul T. Ricks, Greenville bus service operator, has asked the State Utilities Commission to grant him a hearing "at the earliest possible convenience" in his application to operate a north-south bus route between New Bern and Roanoke Rapids.

An approved north-south bus service claimed the attention of the local board of Aldermen at a recent meeting and it developed that the Ricks Transfer Company already had an application on file with the Utilities Commission, but that a date for a hearing had been delayed.

Yesterday Mr. Ricks wrote the Utilities Commission, asking for a hearing at an early date. He pointed out that the mayor and aldermen were anxious that this service be inaugurated at the earliest convenience and added that he was ready to start operations.

William H. Bland
Dies At Pactolus

William Herman Bland, 56, died at his home near Pactolus at 11 o'- clock last night after a lingering illness. Funeral services will be conducted from the S. G. Wilkerson and Sons Funeral Home at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon by Rev. Gilber-
Davis, Christian minister of Bell Arthur, and burial will follow in the Epworth church cemetery near Vanceboro.

Mr. Bland was born and reared in Grifton, but he had lived in Gardner's Cross Roads section until the first of this year, at which time he had moved to the Pactolus community. He had been a life-long member of Timothy Christian church at Gardner's Cross Roads.
He had engaged in farming practically all his life and had been employed by the various warehouses in Greenville during the tobacco season.

Mr. Bland is survived by his wife

BASE IN N. C.
UP FOR DEBATE

Bill Carrying Funds
For Project Near
Passage

Washington, March 21.—(AP)—
The House began debate today on a supplemental national defense appropriation bill carrying $14,575,000 for establishing an east coast marine training base on the New river in North Carolina.

Sponsors expressed hope it would be passed today, speeding it to the Senate for action there.

The marine base already has been authorized by Congress, and the navy also is preparing plans for a $25,000,000 marine air station on the Neuse river, about 40 miles from the site for the base.

Rep. Barton of North Carolina, in whose district the two marine establishments would be located, said he believed Congress would be asked shortly to authorize the air base.

The House Appropriations Committee recommended today that Congress grant the navy's request for a $14,575,000 allocation to construct the marine base.

Appropriation of the money would pave the way for work to begin on the training station, which the navy has said would be one of the principal marine establishments of the nation.

The committee's recommendation, included in a favorable report to Congress on a supplemental appropriations bill, followed hearings at which Major General T. Holcomb, marine commandant, said the North Carolina base would be more or less a permanent establishment.

Published hearings disclosed the testimony to the effect that the base would cover 106,000 acres of land, contain 400 buildings and accommodate a full division of marines, with a total complement of 14,500 men and 782 officers.

Asks Larger Fund
For Leaf Grading

Washington, March 21.—(AP)— Democratic Leader Barkley said today he had urged a Senate Appropriations Committee to increase from $422,000 to $650,000 the appropriation for the federal tobacco grading service.

Barkley said he hoped eventually the government would provide $900-000 annually for the service, thus making possible adequate grading for every market in the United States.

The Kentucky senator declared that tobacco taxes provide more than $600,000,000 yearly in federal revenue, and that $650,000 is little enough to ask for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

He said that precise federal grading should result in increased prices to tobacco growers.

Two New Enlistments
In Local Home Guard

Two new enlistments in the Pitt organized to replace the National Guard, now in active military service at Fort Jackson, were announced today by Captain Arthur B. Corey.

The new recruits are James Levy Corey and Banks Cozart, both of Greenville.

The two new men bring to 37 the number already having volunteered.
A minimum of 45 men is required and Captain Corey expects to reach this quota by tomorrow night. A maximum of 50 is set and this number probably will be reached by the time drills start next week.

WRIGHT FIELD
STRIKE ENDED

Dispute Terminated
In Avowed Interest of Defense

Dayton, Ohio, March 21.—(AP)— In an avowed interest of national defense, an AFL leader today terminated a 17-day strike that had paralyzed work on an essential $2-900,000 expansion program at Wright field, the army air corps' huge testing laboratory.

John Breidenbach, president of the Dayton Central Labor Union, informed Col. Lester Miller, field commandant, that 400 men who left their jobs March 4 would return to work Saturday, along with 150
electricians employed by the Peimer Construction Company.

Col. Miller described settlement of the dispute "as a fine American act where any thought of personal and factional differences had been set aside for the good of the entire nation."

The expansion program, involving a wind tunnel for testing new plane models, was described by the War Department as essential in making Wright field "one of the most important military aircraft centers in the United States."

Breidenbach's strike settlement action followed reports that the War Department would take over the construction work with federal civil service laborers.

"Taking the right of way" caused more injuries than any other factor involved in American traffic accidents in 1940. Approximately 235-700 persons were hurt in accidents listed under that cause.

He pointed out that the city and county are working jointly on the project, a procedure followed on the local program. He also stated that the War Department had failed to allot defense funds at the present time to the Washington project and recalled that Greenville had to get its field in shape before the department approved funds for the local field.

Despite the failure to secure funds at the present time, the city of Washington and county of Beaufort are proceeding with plans for the establishment of the field there and expect to start immediately on development of the work as a WPA project.

Mayor B. B. Sugg today called attention to the similarity of the efforts of Washington and Beaufort county to secure an airport to the campaign conducted recently to acquire the modern project developed here.

Eastern N.C. Truck Crops
Are Far Behind Schedule

Reflector Bureau
Raleigh, March 21.—Truck crops in Eastern North Carolina are making slower progress this season than for several years past, according to R. P. Handy, junior statistician in the State-Federal crop reporting service.

The slow progress is attributed to the cold weather, which while not extremely severe has been continuous for much longer period than usual. Windy weather and cold nights have been prevalent throughout the area.

Normally fields in New Hanover county are green by March 15, but this year they have the appearance of mid-winter. Beets have been planted as many as three times.
Lettuce has made little progress since the January setting. In fact many of the plants actually look smaller than they did when first set out. With respect to lettuce and cabbage, however, the plants are rooting well and a few days of warm

There will be services at the Primitive Baptist Church on Saturday and Sunday morning at eleven o'clock by the pastor, Elder S. B. Denny. The public is cordially invited to attend.

Installation of Officers.
Greenville Chapter No. 149 Order of the Eastern Star held a public installation for the newly appointed and elected officers on Tuesday evening, March 19, in the Masonic Hall. Mrs. Louise W. Wells, District Deputy Grand Matron of the Second District, was the installing officer. Those appointed to assist her were Mrs. Carrie Munford, Installing Marshal; Mrs. Vivien Hines, Installing Conductress; Mrs. Mollie Brown, Installing Chaplain; and Mrs. Mattie Hooker, Installing Organist.

The ceremony was beautiful and very instructive to the large number of visitors who were present. Officers installed were: Mrs. Edith Harrington, Worthy Matron; J. Frank Harrington, Worthy Patron; Mrs. Nell Moore, Associate Matron; A. R. House, Associate Patron; Mrs. Maude Earhart, secretary; Mrs. Josephine Rawl, treasurer; Mrs. Beulah Brown, Conductress; Mrs. Florence Lewis, Associate Conductress; Mrs. Mellie House, Chaplain; Mrs. Carrie Munford, Marshal; Mrs. Lena Galloway, Organist; Mrs. Celeste Cox, Adah; Mrs. Eva Corbett, Ruth; Mrs. Charlotte Morris, Esther; Mrs. Lucille Cox, Martha; Mrs. Dessie Elks, Electra; Mrs. Kathleen Whitehurst, Warder; J. S. Elks, Sentinel.

The hall was beautifully decorated with spring flowers and potted plants. A most enjoyable program was given after the installation, including an "Address of Welcome in Rhyme" by Bobby Bryant and "Response" by Clarence Allen of Aurora. The incoming Worthy Matron, Mrs. Edith Harrington, in a short talk, stated her aims for the year ahead.

Musical selections were rendered by Dan Windley, III, and Clarence Allen of Aurora. Judge J. Frank Harrington gave a fine talk on the "Principles and Objectives of the Order." The Past Matron's Jewel was presented to the outgoing Worthy Matron, Mrs. Thelma Joyner, and other gifts were presented. Mrs. H. H. Broome of Washington gave a delightful reading and songs were sung by all present. During the social hour delicious refreshments were served.

Soup Strainers Work in Reverse
Lubbock, Tex.—(AP)—Jackrabbits and prairie dogs in time of drought absorb sufficient moisture through the whiskers to sustain life. E. G. Pope, district fish and wildlife survey agent has learned.

"When you see a rabbit browsing in the grass in the waste lands he's soaking up water," Pope ventures. "When there's no water to be had for drinking, he gets it through nature's way."

No Bars On Bears
Cheyenne, Wyo.—(AP)—Bears have been classed as game animals in Wyoming this year. Open season will be from April 1 to June 16 and from September 15 to November 15.

Farm boys and girls in New York state will plant more than a million and a half trees on waste lands this year.

At Home

An "At Home" was given, Friday evening by Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Munford, complimentary to their niece from Columbia.

A very interesting feature of the evening was an art exhibit in which the articles were ingeniously arranged for the guests to guess at what they represented. Miss Bessie Jarvis made the best guesses and was awarded the first prize, a handsome picture.

After the exhibit was over the guests were invited into the dining room where an elegant supper was served by Misses Glen Forbes, Mary Higgs and Lizzie Higgs.

It was an occasion of much pleasure and delight to all present.

MANY MAJOR BILLS FAILED

Far-Reaching Measures Not Adopted By '41 Assembly

Reflector Bureau.

By LYNN NISBET
Raleigh, March 21.—While the recent General Assembly enacted into law some very important and far-reaching measures, it may be judged in the perspective of history as much by some bills that it did not pass.

Outstanding among omissions of this kind was legislative attitude toward proposed labor laws. "Three wage and hour bills were introduced, but all three died in committee without floor consideration. Heartened by the assembly's refusal to tighten rules governing hours and wages, proponents of legislation designed to take off some present restrictions tried to get through an act taking the ceiling off hours in seasonal occupations—such as fruit harvesting, canning, etc. But the assembly bucked on this. The labor laws remain just about as they were. One of the hardest battles of the

EURE TO HEAD OLD VETERANS

Secretary Of State New Confederate Commander

Reflector Bureau

By LYNN NISBET

Raleigh, March 21.—Thad Eure, North Carolina's youthful secretary of state, is the proud recipient of a letter from General Julius F. Howell, commander in chief of the United Confederate Veterans, naming him as state commander for the Department of North Carolina. Mr. Eure has held commission in the UCV as colonel and Judge Advocate General for a year or more. His new commission entitles him to rank of Major-General. One of the youngest men to hold such rank, being the grandson of a veteran, he has also a very small army.

In October of last year there were sixty veterans of the Confederate Army living in North Carolina. Since then several are known to have died. Even so, the October rating put North Carolina second among all the states, exceeded only by Virginia with ninety veterans.

Present commander of the Army of Northern Virginia, of which the North Carolina Department is a unit, is Lieut. General J. M. Lenz of Winston-Salem.

Mr. Eure confesses a feeling of pathos along with pride in his new commission. He feels that he has been named to wind up affairs of the organization, and predicts that he will be the last state commander. The fifty odd veterans now surviving cannot last long, since the youngest of them must be 92 years old. It is 76 years this spring since Appomattox, and the junior home guard lads of '65 were not under 15 years of age.

"I try the rider but sentence the bicycle," he says. "Sending the bike to jail for a period ranging up to 30 days is a cure that works like a charm."

HEART'S HAVEN

Ruth

YESTERDAY: Mrs. Marbury and a party of friends have flown to an island off the North Carolina coast to look at an old and handsome house she may want to buy. But the plane that was to have taken them away has not returned, and there is a storm brewing, and everyone is nervous. There is also a tangle of personal interests—Eve and Nell and Brett make a triangle, and Gina, Brett and Ham make a second and interlocking one. And finally, there is a sinister, yet unexplained air about the house and its two caretakers, the Jacksons.

Chapter Nine

Masquerade

By four o'clock Julie had taken to peering out of the library window and giving weather reports at ten-minute intervals.

"The storm is getting worse," she announced with an air of resignation.

"You're exaggerating," said Jim Drouillard. "It couldn't be worse."

The plane had not returned. Yes, the pilot had been told to call for them about one o'clock. Ham reported over and over, but of course was delayed by the storm. No one seemed particularly alarmed; even Brett Rodman accepted his fate with calm. Only Mrs. Jackson watched them suspiciously as if she suspected that this might happen all along.

"Is this a hurricane region?" asked Mrs. Marbury, looking up anxiously from a collection of old prints somebody had found in a drawer below the bookshelves.

"Hurricanes get around," said Julie gloomily. "They turn up in the oddest places."

"Nonsense!" Mr. Howe took off his eyeglasses, nervously polished them, and set them back on the bridge of his nose. "This is nothing but a rainstorm."

"I wish Gina would come back in the house—and Eve, of course," Mrs. Marbury added remembering her duties as a hostess. "She tried to worry about her guests as well as her niece."

"They're coming now," and Julie. "That's Lordy Mac scooting along under the bushes, I think. The animal is so wet it might be anything."

"They don't have anything on this island," Robert Howe laughed "except ghosts, and I haven't heard anything about animal ghosts." He was playing solitaire and did not look up as he spoke.

The noisy arrival of the two girls and three young men, who had gone out exploring some time before made everyone in the room turn toward the doorway. Gina and Eve came in first and the three men brought up the rear.

"Did you have a nice swim?" inquired Mr. Howe with heavy sarcasm.

"They're probably all headed for pneumonia right now," Julie exclaimed sharply.

"I told them there was no use going out," the lawyer retorted, shuffling the cards again. "There's no use banging your head against the inevitable. That's one of the facts of life that our friends here might as well face."

Neil said goodnaturedly. "Anyway we got a chance to stretch our legs a bit. I don't see how you can hang around the house all day—the house especially. It gives me the jitters!"

"That's just because it needs a good cleaning," said Mrs. Marbury. "It's really a lovely old house. I'm going to buy it."

"You said that before," observed Mr. Howe. "If you want my advice—"

"She doesn't," said Hamilton Millard. "If she wants this moth-eaten old wreck of a place she certainly is entitled to it."

"Listen—Gina teetered back and forth on her heels. "Don't I make the squishiest sound?"

"Gina! Your throat!" wailed Mrs. Marbury. She turned beseeching eyes on Julie. "She gets tonsillitis every time she gets her feet wet!"

"She'd better not get it here," answered Julie with decision. "Both of you girls go upstairs and change everything."

"Change?" giggled Eve. "What will we change to? This was only to be an overnight outing. Don't you remember, Julie dear? We can hardly dress for dinner."

"Well, go take those things off anyway," retorted Julie. "Throw your wet things outside the door. I'll send Mrs. Jackson up for them. She can dry them in the kitchen."

"Does that go for the boys, too?" put in Neil plaintively. "Or doesn't anybody care what happens to us? We're ready to be wrung out this minute!"

Julie, having had her executive instincts aroused, met this situation with another burst of decisiveness. "Go find Mr. Jackson," she told the three men. "He'll have something you can put on—overalls, or something. Go along now, all of you. Get out—shoo!"

She waved her hands decisively at them. "You're ruining Mrs. Jackson's floor standing there making puddles!"

The men laughed and withdrew. Julie ran after them and opened the door. "Call Lordy Mac, Ham," she shouted. "He's got to be wrung out, too."

Obediently, Ham whistled and Lordy Mac bolted through the door almost upsetting Julie in his haste.

Upstairs Gina and Eve, toweling their hair, were making suggestions to each other about possible apparel. Gina was possessed with a desire to dress up.

"You'd think, in a lovely old house like this, there'd be scads of old-fashioned dresses," she said. "And there may be—if we look around. I want something really picturesque—something that will make that iceberg of a Brett Rodman look at me, instead of at the furniture."

The closets in both their rooms yielded nothing whatever, and, though they pulled out bureau drawers and opened chests, they still found nothing.

"Look," said Eve suddenly, "there must be an attic to this house. And there are always old clothes in attics."

"You're smart," said Gina admiringly. "I would never have thought of that. I'll bet there's an attic full of old clothes."

But it was found only after the opening of many doors, with much laughter, and more than one startled "Oh—I" when one or the other ran into a cobweb. They climbed the stairs and came out into a dim raftered room full of the usual odds and ends that accumulate in an attic. A trunk in a corner proved to contain just what they had hoped to find: dress after dress, carefully packed away, exuding a faint fragrance of lavender when they were shaken out of their folds.

"It's just as if we'd stepped between the covers of an eighteenth century novel!" Eve exclaimed. "I do hope some of them fit us."

Gina finally chose a garnet red frock of thick rich satin, and Eve decided on a flowered muslin. They even found little heeled slippers with ankle ribbons, that would go on their feet if they handled them with great care, for the materials were fragile with age, and felt as though they might fall apart in their hands.

Like a couple of conspirators the girls, with their bundles under their arms, hurried along the gallery to their rooms.

"Lock your door," said Eve in parting. "Don't let anyone see you until the bell rings for dinner. We'll go down together, after everyone else is in the dining room."

Later, when Mrs. Marbury called upstairs, "Are you all right, children?" they were almost ready.

"Never better," sang out Eve. "We're fixing a surprise."

Surprise

The dinner gong sounded soon afterwards. Eve waited behind her door, listening until the sound of footsteps outside had died away. She turned the key then and opened the door softly, just as another door creaked further around the gallery and Gina tip-toed out. Prepared as they had been for each other's appearance, both girls were, for a second, startled at the complete transformation the beautiful old gowns made.

Gina's fair hair had dried now and was pulled up on top of her head in a top-knot and tied with a ribbon. The skirt of the heavy satin gown was very wide and full and billowed out her slim waist, emphasized by a tight plain bodice that left her white shoulders and arms bare.

Eve had merely run a comb through her cloud of dusky hair, and it tumbled down over the shoulders of the sprigged muslin dress with its long tight sleeves and square neckline. There were pink ribbon bows at the shoulders and at the narrow waist, and the skirt was ruffled and frilled until it stood out like a ballet dancer's skirts. On tall Eve the hem came only to the top of the satin shoe ribbons crossed at the ankles and tied in back.

"We're too quaint," said Gina. "Now aren't we?"

They linked arms and went down to the dining room. Side by side they stood in the open doorway. At that moment the door at the opposite end of the room opened and Mrs. Jackson came through from the pantry. She was carrying a silver tureen, and, as the door swung shut behind her, she glanced up and saw the two girls.

Everything seemed to happen at once. With a roar, the wind burst open the double French doors opposite the table and the candles went out as suddenly as if snuffed out by one huge distinguisher. At the same instant, the tureen in Mrs. Jackson's hands crashed to the floor and the cover rattling and clattering across the bare floor, making a metallic accompaniment to a thin wailing cry that rose high above the uproar.

Gina and Eve stood as if petrified in the doorway, their figures outlined dimly by the hanging lamp in the hall behind them. The group around the table were equally motionless for the space of a heartbeat, then Brett Rodman's voice rang out with steady clearness.

"Here!" he cried. There was a click and as everyone turned toward the sound of his voice, they saw the tiny flame of his cigarette lighter flickering in his hand. Jim Drouillard leaped to his feet and forced the French doors shut, while the others, fumbling for their own lighters, helped relight the candles.

Behind Mrs. Jackson, the pantry door swung open and the faint light of her husband peered cautiously in. Mrs. Jackson, hand on heart, tried twice before she could control her voice.

"Get—get a mop," she remonstrated her husband, and stooped to retrieve the silver tureen.

"Was it you who howled like that?" Ham demanded. He crossed the room and picked up the tureen lid in the corner.

1941 Coastal Plain Baseball Schedule Is Adopted Here

SEASON'S PLAY STARTS MAY 8

Greenies, Again Paired With Wilson, Open There

The 1941 Coastal Plain baseball schedule, providing for the opening of the season on Thursday, May 8, and closing on September 3, was adopted at a meeting of the board of directors of the loop held at the Proctor hotel here last night.

All clubs were represented except New Bern, officials of which were having a local meeting at which the New Bern fire department took over the operation of the club.

W. L. Rawlings, president of the Goldsboro club, was unanimously elected vice-president of the league.

The schedule adopted here last night was drafted by A. T. Moore of this city, brother of D. C. Moore, secretary of the Greenville club. The schedule was one of the most complete in every detail ever drafted for the loop and was readily accepted by the directors.

Opening games, in addition to the Greenville at Wilson affair, are "Tarboro at Williamston, New Bern at Kinston, and Snow Hill at Goldsboro, the first day's game reflecting the pairings in effect for the past several years.

The schedule calls for 120 games, including double headers on May 30 and July 4. The all-star game will be played on July 14.

General plans for the opening of the season were discussed at the meeting and the general opinion was that a successful season was ahead despite the fact the loop encountered some difficulties in getting ready for the year's play.

Umpires were announced by President Ray Goodmon, showing that of the nine umpires employed, four have served the loop before and five are newcomers. The four holdovers are Tim Hanna, umpire-in-chief, Jim Stroner, Deacon Joliff and Harry King. New umpires on the roster will be Roy Greene, Jim Bagby, Sr., Helmer Ericson, Frank Albright and G. F. Delm.

OPEN TOURNEY BE HELD HERE

Fourteen Matches To Be Played By Each Member

Play in the Eastern Carolina Golf Association will get under way on Wednesday, March 26, and matches are scheduled each Wednesday through June 11, according to the schedule released today by Tom Smoot, member of the team and local golf enthusiast.

Eight cities are represented in the association this year, Henderson having been admitted at a recent meeting held in Wilson. The other seven cities are Greenville, Wilson, Kinston, Goldsboro, Tarboro, Rocky Mount and Farmville.

It also was revealed that the annual open golf tournament for Eastern Carolina would be played in Greenville the latter part of May, the tourney formerly having been played in Wilson.

At the opening matches next week Greenville will play in Farmville, Wilson at Kinston, Tarboro at Goldsboro and Henderson at Rocky Mount. Each team is scheduled for 14 matches during the season.

Greenville will play on the home course only five Wednesdays, journeying to other cities for seven matches. Several doubleheaders are scheduled, including one with both Wilson and Henderson playing here on Wednesday, May 14, and another with Goldsboro and Rocky Mount here Wednesday, May 28.

Greenville has 14 matches scheduled during the 12 weeks, seven counting the twin-bills, to be played here, and seven away from home. Therefore, the locals will meet each team once on their home course and once on the opponents' course.

All clubs in the Coastal Plain League now have secured managers. They are: Greenville, Rube Wilson; Wilson, Bill Her-ring; Goldsboro, Mack Arnette; Kinston, Cowboy Henry; New Bern, Southern; Tarboro, Whelan; Snow Hill, McCaskill; Williamston, Frank Rodgers.

Hollywood

Sights And Sounds

By Robbin Coon

Hollywood—Hollywood is getting along. There is no stopping progress.

Once (I take the word of a cynical friend, doubtless dyspeptic) there were producers who made pictures with no idea what they were doing—from start to finish.

Today there are a couple of pictures in progress whose producers have everything in hand except one—the finish. They have ideas on that score, too, but they haven't made up their minds.

"Tom, Dick and Harry" is one. George Murphy, Burgess Meredith and Alan Marshall are the three men in Ginger Rogers' life. Ginger can't decide which to marry. You won't know until the end of the picture which she chooses—and to make the suspense genuine, Ginger isn't knowing either. Neither is anybody else as the shooting progresses. It's to be decided later.

"The Night of January 16" is the other. Ellen Drew is on trial already for murdering somebody, but who has been murdered hasn't been decided yet. The killing occurs at the start of the film, but the producer hasn't selected the victim. In the play, on which the script is based, the audience by jury vote had to decide the guilt or innocence of the heroine, thus leaving her fate in doubt from performance to performance.

The screen play, which has changed the plot considerably, now has a half dozen possible endings from which one will be chosen—not before it's decided who is to be killed.

So here's Ginger not knowing whom she's to marry, and Ellen not knowing whom she's killed, and the suspense is killing us all. If Robert Taylor were Tom or Dick or Harry there'd be no doubt, but with a title like Murphy, Meredith and Marshall, none of them fore-ordained girl-winners. Ginger has a problem. Ellen's is on the whole simpler. She knows, at least, that the killer is not going to be Robert Preston. He can't be erased because he's co-star.

In "Sergeant York," the Gary Cooper film, audience old-timers may not recognize an old familiar blackface—now washed, as white as the minstrel shows it once made happier.

Lee ("Lasses") White, now 52, has traded away his blackface and is trying for a character niche in the movies. Pictures, he says, did away with his specialty, minstrelsy needed intimate theaters, not picture palaces, and it lost its footing when the loudspeaker era dawned. In his year here "Lasses," who got the name from his fondness for hot cakes and syrup, has appeared in 20 pictures and he thinks he's doing well.

It has been five years since he took out a minstrel show—condensed for picture houses—and 12 years since he had a "real show" on the road, but for four years down in Nashville he had a minstrel program on the air.

"Lasses" today is a plump, bright-eyed, stocky little fellow with a map-of-Ireland face behind his (temporary) red whiskers. In "Sergeant York" he plays the mountain mail-carrier who travels muleback and sings mountain music.

Why don't the SPRING-AIR MATTRESS have a nine-point spring center?

To give you COMFORT that FITS

Instead of using the identical coil spring throughout its construction (as practically all other mattresses do), Spring-Air employs nine different types of spiral springs. Thus does one get softness where it is wanted, and firmness where it need be. Stresses and strains are counter-balanced, and edges are made straighter and stronger.

WHAT IT MEANS

By MORGAN M. BEATTY
AP Feature Service Writer
Washington.—The Battle of England is to a large extent the battle of the flying power plants. The battle of the flying power plants may be won or lost by a nose—the nose of the fighter plane that climbs the fastest, flies the highest, and stays on top the longest. That plane, multiplied by thousands, is the ship that can beat enemy planes.

of opinion can be summed up about like this:
1. The vision of the pilot seems more nearly complete behind an engine built with one cylinder right behind the other—in-line—rather than behind the radial-circular-engine. Most high-powered liquid-cooled engines are built in line. Most high powered air-cooled jobs are circular. There are practical air-cooled engines in-line, of course. One type runs as high as 550 horsepower, has had a hard struggle to reach 100 hours of flawless performance, without an overhaul.

4. It is necessary for both commercial interests and governments to keep concentrating on the development of both motors until the uses for each shall be demonstrated over a period of time. Our navy is concentrating on air-cooled motors but our army favors liquid-cooled for some types of fighters.
In all the maze of argument, claim, and counterclaim, the most important thing to remember is this: up to now, neither of these motors has demonstrated that it is better than the other for all purposes. The air-cooled has shown it-

AIR-COOLED CURTISS P-36

Blunt nose for air cooling reduces speed.

APP. HORSEPOWER—1,000
APP. SPEED—323 MPH

Extra Ventilators pass hot air, lubricate plane's passage.

The army planes shown here are alike in every respect except motors and the details of design affected by the type of motor in each.

Naturally the hunt for the ultimate fighter has been, still is, frantic. The search has produced a war within the war—the struggle of engineering brains.

These brains are now backing two types of power plants, one liquid-cooled, the other air-cooled. Each side claims its motor will carry a fighter plane faster, highest, and longest.

The development of aerial power plants would be a slow process if it were not that governments are spending millions for research. Finally, young men by the thousands are risking their lives daily behind both motors.

The status of the war within the war changes from day to day. What was the latest word a few months ago, may now be obsolete. At the moment, the situation sums up like this:

Both the major air forces in the World war—the German and British—are using liquid-cooled motors for fighter planes. The United States army prefers them for fighter planes, too, but the Navy stands by the air-cooled engine for fighters. On the other hand, about four-fifths of all military planes, except fighters, are using air-cooled power. Bombers, transports, cargo ships reconnaissance, and most heavier ships have installed air-cooled engines.

The main reasons for the division

N.Y. Stock Market

New York, March 21.—(AP)—The stock market swung moderately lower today as buying in the buoyant senior utilities of the preceding session tended to fade.

While scattered shares managed to contest the trend with modest advances, declines of fractions to a point or so were fairly well distributed near the fourth hour. Dealings picked up a bit in the forenoon, but dwindled later.

power, and engineers are working on much larger ones. But they are not yet ready for military fighters.
1. The liquid-cooled motor seems to give the plane a faster take-off speed. It's cooler at the take-off. Because of streamlining, the liquid-cooled motor seems to give a plane a more delicate touch, a faster turn in fighting, etc.

3. The air-cooled motor to date has developed more power. It's generally more reliable and economical. Air-cooled engine makers have claimed they have run their power plants 1,000 hours without a major overhaul. One of the hardest problems of the liquid-cooled people, up to now, is to match air-cooled power and stamina. In extreme high power ranges, liquid cooling, to self to date to be useful for many purposes, the liquid-cooled, for special purposes—primarily the high-flying military fighter plane. But, again, that's merely up to now.

The best impartial engineer I know tells me there's no reason why either of these motors should hold its supremacy in any certain kind of efficiency. For instance, the air-cooled motor is more economical now to make in this country, because manufacturers are set up for it. But there's no reason in the future why it wouldn't be cheaper to build in-line, liquid-cooled motors than air-cooled jobs—for the air-cooled motor must be manufactured by cylinder, while the liquid-cooled job can be turned out en-bloc, just like your automobile motor of today.

The motor that best answers these two questions is the one that will win the ultimate struggle for supremacy:
1. Which motor ultimately can stay the coolest? A motor delivers maximum power around 400 degrees. When the heat developed within the motor goes above 475 degrees it begins to lose power. First the fuel taken in is already expanded by heat when it gets in the explosion chamber, and therefore has less expansion range when it explodes against the piston. Second, oil begins to break down at extremely high temperatures, and ceases to lubricate the engine. Third, metal can stand only so much heat.

2. Which motor ultimately can be streamlined the most, to prevent the drag of the air against gadgets that stick out beyond the streamlining and interfere with the vision of the pilot? At the present time the liquid-cooled people have the best argument on this point, so far as single motored planes go. But that doesn't mean the argument is settled.

Where will the race end?
So far as engineers now know, the race will end when a motor is found that can push an airplane 750 miles an hour, and keep pushing it at that speed for hundreds of hours on end.

Seven hundred and fifty miles an hour is about the speed of sound. When an object begins to approach 750 miles an hour, a mysterious "compressibility bubble," or wall of air, builds up impassable resistance prevents higher speeds.

Until the law of compressibility is repealed, or circumvented, planes must be limited to 750 miles an hour. Up to now, speeds slightly in excess of 400 miles an hour have been developed. That leaves a margin of more than 300 miles an hour for the war in the air.

Nearly twice as many students at Pennsylvania State College are studying Greek this year as last.

EMPLOYMENT OFFICE IN NORTH CHINA NOW

Peiping (AP)—A labor information bureau has been established here to supply the 1,300,000 Chinese laborers needed each year for work on projects in Manchoukuo, Mongolia and Japanese-occupied Central China.

North China is a cheap labor market and has supplied the needs of other parts of this country in former years. Officials estimate that Manchoukuo requires 300,000 coolies, Mongolia 600,000 and central China 400,000 annually to work on railroads, highways, irrigation and other projects.

Tulsa, Okla. (AP)—What America needs is more discussion and less argument, asserts Mrs. Rebecca Nelson, coordinator of family life education in Tulsa public schools.
"We have not developed the art of discussion without argument," she believes. "Democracy demands group solution of group problems by group thinking."
She sees a hopeful sign in the trend toward symposiums and forums and away from public debate "where a person took a certain position and proved it right or wrong whether he believed it or not."
