Chief Executive Opens Red Sea To American Vessels

WAR SUPPLIES TO BE SHIPPED

President Indicates There Will Be No Tendency On Part Of Government To Explore Question Of Whether Supplies For Belligerents Through Neutral Countries

Washington, April 11. (AP)—President Roosevelt today reopened the Red sea and Gulf of Aden to American vessels.

The Chief Executive announced at a press conference that he had taken out the stopper from the mouth of the waterway so that American vessels now may enter it.

The ships will be permitted to go all the way to the Suez canal, since Egypt is neutral territory. While American vessels are not permitted under the neutrality act to carry war supplies to belligerents, the President made it clear that cargoes destined for a neutral country could be carried up the Red sea and Gulf of Aden.

And, he indicated, there will be no tendency on the part of the government to explore the question of whether supplies consigned to a neutral might ultimately get to a belligerent.

As a matter of fact, the President said, he was not sure whether under the neutrality act it was forbidden for supplies sent to a neutral to reach belligerents ultimately.

Mr. Roosevelt made it clear that American vessels could use the Suez canal since only the Mediterranean sea, of the waters in that area, remains in the restricted combat zone. Ships could not sail out of the canal into the Mediterranean.

Rev. B. B. Slaughter Speaker On Thursday

By WYATT BROWN "A man might go to eternity trying to get to the 'pearly gates' and never get there; he must run the risk of traffic in the public and put his one talent to use," said Reverend B. B. Slaughter, district superintendent of the Elizabeth church, in his sermon last night at Jarvis Memorial Methodist church in the fourth series of pre-Easter services before held this week at Jarvis Memorial.

Mr. Slaughter indicated that the transitory physical life ended in the grave but that things of the spirit went on to eternity. The great value placed on physical life as shown in the way one strives to maintain life in the body ends in death but the spiritual life goes back to the God who gave.

"Christ was talking of the spiritual life when he exhorted men that those who lost their life would save it," he said. Then Mr. Slaughter told how by just doing nothing one could lose life and illustrated the idea with the parable of the talents. The way to lose one's life and save it he illustrated with the parable of the ten virgins—five wise and five foolish, the foolish neglecting to have enough oil—and with the parable of going the second mile.

He brought out that saving one's life did not involve reward for reward comes without seeking. In exhorting his hearers to let their good life shine before men, the minister cautioned that it be not goodness but good works that be seen.

"This life that Christ is speaking about is a spark of the heavenly flame which will outlast the stars," he explained. In conclusion, Mr. Slaughter compared the luxurious existence of the rich man found all vain with the statement of Paul in prison after a life of considerable abuse at the hands even of his own people. "I have fought the good fight, etc." The former the cry of the victim, the latter the cry of the victor," he declared.

Agreement Reached In Strike At Ford Plants

ALL EVIDENCE IS COMPLETED

Abernathy Case To Reach Jury Tonight Or Tomorrow

Goldsboro, April 11.—(AP)—Presentation of testimony was completed today in the trial of Charles L. Abernathy, Jr., New Bern lawyer charged with conspiring to violate the election laws and attempting to interfere with election officials prior to the 1940 Third District Congressional Democratic primary.

The defense rested at 11:05 a. m., and the State sent eight rebuttal witnesses to the stand.

Lawyer arguments will begin at the afternoon session, the jury is expected to get the case late today or early tomorrow.

Most of the defense testimony was corroboration of previous witnesses and character testimony for the defendant and other witnesses.

Roland Herring of New Bern testified that he found between 50 and 100 ballots scattered at a street corner in New Bern on May 16 and had reported the incident to W. B. Rouse, chairman of the Craven County Republican Executive Committee. Rouse said he told no one until after newspaper accounts told of ballots missing and then told Abernathy what Herring had reported.

Mrs. Abernathy told the jury that she had heard her husband say he was glad to discover "concrete evidence" in connection with the purported irregularities and would show it to W. A. Lucas of Wilson, State Elections Board chairman.

Several ballots were introduced as evidence.

Operations To Be Resumed In Part Monday Morning

Detroit, April 11.—(AP)—Governor Murray D. Van Wagoner announced today that the Ford Motor Company strike had been settled.

"The strike has been settled," the governor said.

He issued a statement which said "our prayers for peace have been answered because there was a will for peace."

The statement added: "This is an historic step in establishing industrial peace in our country. A basic American sense of fair play prevailed around the conference table and brought results at a time when every good American citizen must place his country ahead of himself."

"The Ford Motor Company and the UAW-CIO officials have set an example for the nation in their willingness to meet around the conference table to give and take and to make possible this settlement."

I. A. Cozzit, attorney for the Ford company, announced that "the plant will be open as much as it is able Monday."

CIO DEMANDING NEW CONTRACT

April 20 Set As Deadline For New Agreement; Settlement Near In 10-Day Strike At Ford Plants; Soft Coal Negotiations Continue

By The Associated Press The Federal Labor Department announced today receipt of word from the General Motors Corporation that the CIO-United Automobile Workers union had served notice of intention to strike if a new wage agreement was not negotiated before April 20.

A shutdown of General Motors would affect about 130,000 workers. The firm has millions of dollars worth of defense contracts. The Labor Department immediately assigned a conciliator to try to prevent a work stoppage.

Notice of the threatened strike, a Labor Department official said, was received in a telegram signed by B. D. Kunkle of the General Motors Corporation.

The union is reported to be seeking a wage increase. On the basis of a Labor Board election held last year, the union is the exclusive bargaining agent for the company's 130,000 production workers.

The new strike threat came as James F. Dewey, federal labor conciliator working at Detroit on the settlement of the 10-day CIO strike at the vast Ford River Rouge plant, said he expected a complete settlement before nightfall.

Dewey made plans to leave for Pittsburgh by train at 6 p. m., and when asked if that was an indication the strike would be ended by then, said "Yes, I expect it to be. It should have been settled last night."

Earlier Governor Murray D. Van Wagoner of Michigan claimed progress on "the one remaining point" necessary to a settlement. He, Dewey and union officials were to confer during the day.

Negotiations to settle the tieup of soft coal mines continued in New York. About two-thirds of the mine operators were reported ready to accept the new contract with the CIO-United Mine Workers raising wages to $7 a day and abolishing an existing sectional wage differential. Federal Conciliator John R. Steelman sought, however, to gain an agreement which would put all the 400,000 idle miners back to work.

NOT PLANNING FOR TRANSFER OF MORE SHIPS

Chief Executive Answers Question With A Flat No

FRENCH VESSELS PROMPT INQUIRY

Congressional Speculation Aroused Over Possible Commandeering Of French Ships In U. S. Ports

Washington, April 11.—(AP)—President Roosevelt was asked today whether there was any question of transferring more American destroyers to Britain and his reply was a flat no.

His request for power to take over foreign ships aroused congressional speculation today that the government might commandeer 14 French vessels, including the giant luxury liner Normandie, which now are tied up in American harbors.

In a message to Congress yesterday, Mr. Roosevelt asked sweeping authority to make use of foreign ships idle in American ports to forestall a "growing shortage" of shipping facilities. The message, and accompanying legislation, said that "just compensation" would be made for any ships taken over.

There was no immediate expression of opposition to the plan, and administration leaders believed they could hurry the enabling legislation through Congress.

Most vessels involved under the new "seize and pay" program would be the 39 Danish ships recently placed under protective custody of the Coast Guard, along with two German and 28 Italian merchantmen.

One administration leader, asking not to be quoted by name, said that it would be sound procedure to seize the French vessels now in American waters, and predicted that possibly would be one of the first steps taken after the proposed authorization is approved. The Normandie is tied up at New York.

This legislator said that the French vessels are of no value to the Vichy government at present. "If we pay them a just price," he said, "it would be a fair transaction all around. The Germans might not like it, but I have a feeling the French would."

Mrs. Thos. McGee Claimed By Death

Funeral services for Mrs. Thomas McGee, who died at the home of her son, Allan McGee, in Winston-Salem, Thursday afternoon, will be conducted from the Andrews-Stewart Mortuary Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock by the Reverend Marvin Culbreth of Chapel Hill, assisted by the Reverend Thomas McGee Grant. The body will be brought from Winston-Salem on Friday and will remain at the Andrews-Stewart Mortuary.

Active pallbearers will be Dr. W. L. Best, George Hadley, Jake Hadley, Bert Moye, James Moye, and Will Miller.

Mrs. McGee had made her home in Greenville for a number of years, prior to this she made her home in Goldsboro.

She was a member of Jarvis Memorial Methodist church, of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, Daughters of the American Revolution and was very active in the work of both of these organizations. She was also a member of the Patient Circle of The King's Daughters and Sons.

Survivors are one son, Allan McGee of Winston-Salem; two grandchildren, and also several step-children who live near Goldsboro and in Mount Olive.

Mrs. McGee had been in declining health for several years, and had been making her home with her son in Winston-Salem for the past several months.

War Raging On Two Fronts

The black arrows on this map indicate the course of the Axis drives in the Balkans and in the African campaigns. The broken arrows point toward the Suez canal, a probable objective. Axis forces meanwhile moved further into northern Yugoslavia (1) and virtually had cut the nation at its "waist" (2) although a Yugoslavian force (lined arrow) was driving southward in an attempt to join Greek and British allies. The jagged black lines across northern Greece represent the British-Greek defense line. Tobruk (3) was the immediate goal in the Axis' North African drive. The broken arrow (4) indicates a possible Axis push in the Near East aimed at Suez.

Hungary Reclaims Area Lost During World War

Army Marches Into Territory In Yugoslavia

Budapest, April 11.—(AP)—The Hungarian army has marched into Yugoslavia to reclaim territory lost in the World War.

An army report said Magyar troops had crossed the frontier between the Danube and Tisza rivers as well as the triangle in between the Danube and Drava rivers.

The Hungarian nation was informed of this step, taken yesterday, with publication in morning papers today of a proclamation of Regent Admiral Nicholas Horthy.

The proclamation said formation of an independent Croatian state in the north left Yugoslavia "dissolved into several parts."

This act left Hungary the "duty to take again in our own hands the care for Hungarians living in the territory stolen from us," it said.

(Under the treaty of Trianon in 1920 Hungary lost perhaps 500,000 of her Magyar population to Yugoslavia in the Banat region.)

City Presses Bid For Training Unit

An inspection of the Greenville airport, along with others in eastern Carolina, looking toward the establishment of a large flying school in the section will be made in the immediate future by officials of the Safair Inc., of New York city.

The firm has announced plans to establish a school in eastern Carolina for the purpose of training army pilots under contract.

Immediately following the announcement, local city and Chamber of Commerce officials started efforts to have Greenville chosen as the site for the school. Telegrams were forwarded to Sen. Reynolds who made the announcement.

Sen. Reynolds wired acknowledgment of the message today and said that he was turning the telegram over to Safair officials. The senator stated that an inspection trip would be made "within a week."

Willard T. Kyzer, executive secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, today was assembling maps and data supporting this city's bid for the school and the information will be dispatched to Safair officials immediately.

DECLINE NOTED IN FATALITIES

Six Highway Deaths In This Area During March

Six persons were killed in highway accidents during March, compared with nine in the previous month, it was disclosed today in the monthly report issued by Lieut. Lester Jones, commanding officer of the State Highway patrol force in northeastern Carolina.

Fatality in the district investigated 75 accidents during March, compared with 95 in February. In addition to the fatalities, 54 persons received non-fatal injuries last month, while in February 77 persons received non-fatal injuries.

Arrests during the month, however, increased from 503 in February to 574. A coincident was the fact that 60 persons were arrested in each month on charges of driving drunk. Of the persons arrested in March 565 were convicted and nine acquitted. Sentences meted out totaled 40 years and seven months fines amounted to $7,185.23 and court costs totaled $4,531.33.

The officers recovered stolen property valued at $3,240. They also collected $2,413.10 in highway revenue, such as from overloading improper licenses, etc.

In traveling a total of 174,500 miles, the patrolmen performed the following duties: vehicles inspected 6,757; equipment tickets issued, 135; lights corrected, 3,723; warning tickets issued, 49, courtesies extended 971; cars recovered, six; vehicles stored, 10; vehicles weighed, 232, with 138 found overloaded; complaints investigated, 563; first aid rendered in one instance; citations made, 926.

Small Negro School Aids Seal Sale Drive

Flat Swamp colored school children contributed 73 cents of the seal sale in their school. K. T. Futrell, secretary of the Seal Sale for Crippled Children, reported this morning. There were only nine students in the school, he explained.

Saturday morning will find the Junior Woman's Club and the Service League volunteers selling lilies for the Crippled Children's fund. They will canvass the business districts. Such will be the closing day of the 1941 campaign, Mr. Futrell said. The school children complete their efforts today.

Nazi Forces Split Lower Yugoslavia

London Reports British Expeditionary Troops Have Made Contact With German Armies And That Great, Perhaps Decisive Battle Is Developing

By The Associated Press British expeditionary troops were reported today to have "established contact" with Adolf Hitler's blitzkrieg invaders in northern Greece as Nazi panzer columns knifed clear across lower Yugoslavia to threaten Greece from a new direction—the northwest.

The London radio said German forces were advancing into the Aegean kingdom through the Bitol gap in Yugoslavia at the border.

It was apparently in this sector that a great, and perhaps decisive, battle between the Germans and British was developing.

The British radio said German troops were attempting to fight their way through the gap under heavy RAF attack.

The British Expeditionary Force communique issued in Athens said briefly:

"German forces in northern Greece came into contact with British and Imperial troops on April 10."

In Berlin the German high command asserted that the Serb army in southern Yugoslavia was "destroyed" and that Nazi columns plunging northward toward Belgrade from Nis "are in close pursuit of the Serbs."

Unconfirmed reports had previously listed Belgrade as captured, but the high command's report would indicate that the bomb-smashed Yugoslav capital still was holding out.

In Budapest, a semi-official telegram from Istanbul said many members of the Yugoslav royal court had arrived by plane in Turkey and that 17-year-old King Peter, II, was expected to follow.

The boy King Peter seized the throne in a bloodless coup March 27, two days after the pro-Axis regime of Regent Prince Paul had signed Yugoslavia into membership in the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo alliance.

A Swiss newspaper, the Geneva Tribune, said in a dispatch from Berlin that Belgrade had fallen.

A BEF communique said that Nazi panzer force had reached Yanitsa, 35 miles northwest of captured Salonika, but that "resistance to the German advance is stiffening in southern Yugoslavia."

The British communique said the situation in eastern Macedonia—the locale of the so-called Greek "lost army" trapped by the German seizure of Salonika—was "obscure, but characterized by the magnificent resistance of the Greeks."

Previously the Germans had claimed officially that the Greek east wing had surrendered and that 80,000 Greeks had been taken prisoners.

$200 Fire Damage. The boiler room of the New Deal cleaners, located just back of the main building at the corner of Grande avenue and Florida street, was damaged by fire which broke out about noon today. Chief George Gardner estimated the loss at $200.

Fine Art Prints On Display. "Tell me what pictures hang upon his walls and what books are his companions and I will tell you what manner of a man he is," the words of a wise man.

That the school should train for the use and choice of good books is accepted and every school does this, obviously, to a greater or less extent. But to be well educated means a many-sided development and the knowledge of Art is one of the prerequisites of Modern Education. A number of oil paintings by Mrs. Class Hearne are on exhibit at the high school building in Winterville. These paintings are an example of well executed work in art. There is a lovely oil portrait of the artist's daughter. This piece of work won the silver cup in 1939 during an art contest sponsored by the Woman's Club.

Dr. Zeno Spence and son, Zeno, Jr., of Goldsboro has a number of oil paintings on display.

These exhibits are on display today for the last time. The public is invited to come and see these fine pieces of art.

The King's Daughters Meet. The Patient Circle of The King's Daughters held their regular meeting with Mrs. Hortense Moye at her home on Evans street with a fair attendance. The meeting was called to order by the president. The prayer of the order was used for the opening. The devotional was led by Mrs. Richard Williams. One selected the 23rd Psalm, which is said to be the most beautiful poem of any age, in any language. This Psalm was written by David, the youngest son of Jesse of Bethlehem. Generally a poem loses some of its beauty by translation, but this Psalm seems different. Ask a Frenchman, an Englishman, the most beautiful poem in literature and they would answer the 23rd Psalm.

After the regular routine of business the convention to be held in Raleigh April 16 and 17 was discussed and planned. Burgwyn, who passed on to be in the "Presence of The King" on January 23, 1941. This convention will be dedicated to our loyal, sincere friend and co-worker "In His Name."

The Patient Circle will be well represented at this meeting. We are in excellent shape, all obligations paid and a wonderful report for

BATTLE OF BALKANS

Showing how German drives in to the vital triangle threatened to isolate Yugoslavia from her allies. Nazi control of the Belgrade sector would mean protection for vital supply routes.

By MORGAN M. BEATTY
AP Feature Service Writer

Washington—Strip the Battle of the Balkans of military and economic confusion, and it boils down to just this:

The Germans are trying to prove that none of the nations of Europe want the British on the continent, and that all of them detest British meddling and democracy.

The British are trying to prove that Europe wants democracy and British help to pull the Nazi heel to the neck.

Here are the immediate German objectives:

1. Guarantee their Balkan traffic in war supplies and food, mostly oil and grain.
2. The main rail highway is the Berlin to Baghdad railroad passing through the northeast corner of Yugoslavia. The main water route is the Danube.

Hence a huge pincer movement around Belgrade, the main point on both routes. That's a favorite German military device.

In view of these two central themes, the fact that the Yugoslavs went into the struggle at all is favorable for the British, and proves that the Serb leaders, at least, want no part of the Nazis.

The British decision to wade in, therefore, was a decision thrust upon them. But the long run aim of the main fighting powers is one thing. The immediate objectives are something else again. They must each take a step at a time toward the ultimate goal.

2. Wall off the British from the Balkans, prevent the establishment of a two-front war.

The first leg of this objective would be to isolate Yugoslavia, prevent British aid from reaching the Yugoslav army in large quantities. Therefore, heavy German attacks down the Struma river valley, and westward across the Vardar valley, are logical. These are the only two natural routes from the Aegean sea into Europe via the crazy-quiet Balkan mountain chains.

Meanwhile a prudent German

LOCAL and SOCIAL

Easter Pageant At College.
For the presentations at East Carolina Teachers College on Sunday and Monday nights, April 13 and 15, of the Easter pageant-drama that is being sponsored by the Y. W. C. A. and Y. M. C. A., many groups are busy on the campus, students and faculty working together on the production to make it truly a college service and one in which many of the friends in Greenville and neighboring communities will share.

Before the service, President Leon R. Meadows will extend a welcome to the visitors.

The presidents of the two organizations, Rebecca Ross of Aurora and Vernon Keutemeyer of Chicago command would also be trying to work the same strategy on the Greeks. That's a more complicated trick. It would mean pinching the Greek army against the Italians in Albania, and separating the Greek army from the rest of Greece. Then the Germans would try to chase out the British as they did at Dunkirk.

The immediate British objectives:

1. establish a multi-front war.

The longer the war, the better the chances of British victory. A long war means they will have succeeded in their desperate campaign to win allies in Europe—to provide new fighting fronts. Any they can get will be worth the candle. That's why Sir John Dill, chief of the British imperial staff, is tending to British knitting 3,000 miles away from beleaguered London.

If the British back up their present Balkan allies with efficient staff work, air strength and manpower and stymie the German army in the Balkans as they have at the English channel, the maneuver will stiffen the Turks and the Russians create restive populations in all German occupied territories.

2. Cut Italy out of the Axis.

The British have shown by the magnitude of their attacks in Africa against the Italians that they feel Italy is ready to quit, and would, if only the Italian people could break away from Mussolini and his German allies.

Squeezing the Italian army out of Albania would go a long way toward bringing the apathetic Italian population into volatile reaction.

No victory the British could gain could have such an electric effect on world opinion as would a final defeat of Fascism. It would prove that neither Fascism nor Nazism of its own weight, is the virile successor to democracy that its leaders claim it is.

There are two other immediate objectives of the main fighting powers that cancel each other. That's to divert the strength of the enemy from the main job in hand. The main job for the British is to repulse a German attack on England. The main piece of work cut out for the German military forces is to break England.

The Balkan campaign merely occupies forces that otherwise would be used in the primary struggle of the war. It's a long supply line for London—the 3,000-mile stretch from England to the Balkans, via Gibraltar. But it's also a critical situation for Germany, with Turkey and Russia standing on the sidelines.

Heights, Ill., have been working with director Clifton Britton and his associates to get everything in readiness on the campus and with a committee composed of Miss Louise Williams of the mathematics faculty, and Charlotte Shearin, Virginia Whitley and Grace Ross, students, to get letters of invitation to nearby religious groups and see that posters are displayed to inform the general public of the service.

The cast is divided among faculty and students. James B. Cummings of the geography faculty, and Denton Russell of the music department, playing along with the students in one scene. Around 25 other students complete the cast.

The historian, Bessie Fay Hunt of Wilmington, is a student.

Miss Gussie Kuykendall of the music faculty, has charge of the music that accompanies the pageant and directs a chorus of 40 women students who will sing from the balcony.

Miss Kate Lewis, art faculty member, and students Lillian Harris and Anne Poythress form a committee on decorations.

The costumes have been designed by Rachel Farrior of Burgaw, student in the home economics department, and have been executed by her with the assistance of other students—Mary Long Ford, Loraine Horne, Charlotte Shearin, Dorothy Boswell, Grace Ross and Gretchen Webster.

Walter Mallard and Peaty Spear have arranged the simple but effective sets, and Spear has also been responsible for the special lighting effects.

Miss Marguerite Austin, French and Science teacher, will direct the marshals, and Miss Lena Ellis, commerce teacher, the make-up. Ward James, Winterville center, is stage manager.

The pageant will be presented at eight o'clock in the Austin building.

Strength For The Day By EARL L. DOUGLASS

FRIDAY—THE DAY OF SUFFERING

We call it Good Friday, yet it commemorates the foulest murder in history. We call it good not because murder is good, but because redemptive suffering is good. It was the evillest day the race has ever known, but because one Man endured it with the clear light of God shining in His heart, the day has come to have the word "good" applied to it.

The death of Christ on the cross marked a turning point in the story of mankind. The current of human life had been running in one direction for centuries; with the death of Christ, the whole flow of human sentiment and purpose began to flow in another direction. An old order, an ancient spiritual economy, came to an end on that dreadful evening when the mob had gone to Calvary with shouts of joy because they were to witness a crucifixion, came back to the city beating their breasts. They were tragic heralds of the astounding news that an old order had come to an end.

What they did not know then, and what even the disciples themselves did not realize, was that in his attempt to redeem the world God works with the world as He finds it. The material He had to work with was pain and suffering. So through pain, suffering, injustice, and evil, He worked for the transformation of men's souls and the establishing of peace in their hearts.

The cross bears witness to the fact that God can use even men's wickedness for the advancement of His righteous ends. (All Rights Reserved—Babson Newspaper Syndicate)

The public is not only invited but is urged to attend the Safety Council meeting to be held at the Municipal building at eight o'clock tonight. The addresses will cover all phases of safety practices and should prove worthwhile to all those in attendance.

DON'T MAR THE HOLIDAY

Today begins the Easter holidays and over the week-end there will no doubt be a great increase in highway traffic. State Safety Director Ronald Hocutt has issued an appeal to the citizens of North Carolina to exercise extreme caution over the holidays in order that the highway accident toll may be held down to a minimum.

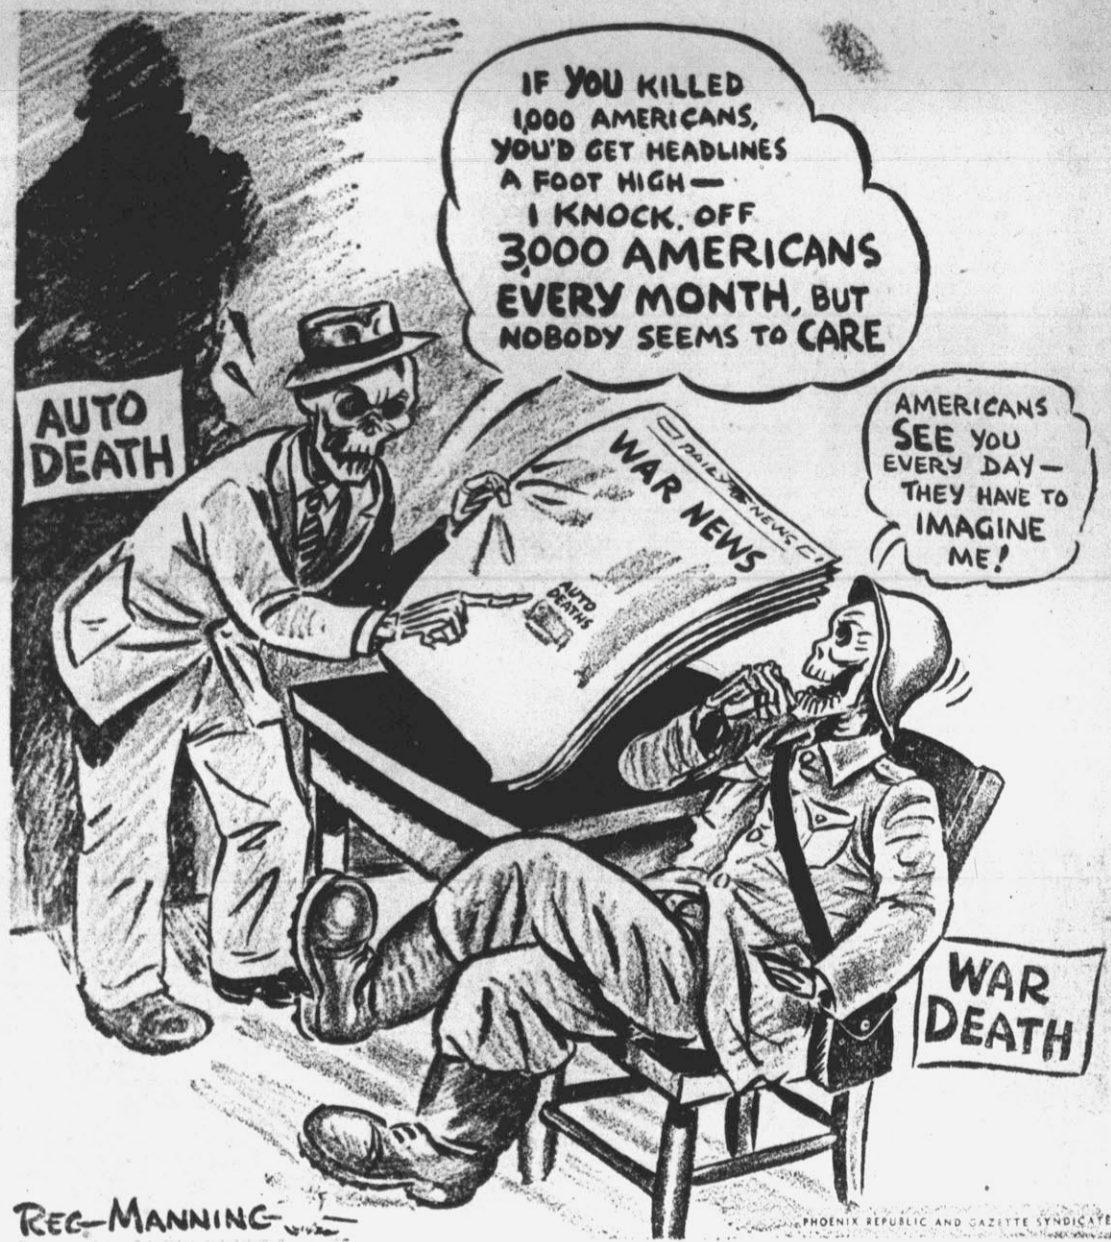

We read reports from the war areas and gasp at the number of casualties, and at the same time we pass almost unnoticed an equal number of casualties in this country from our ever increasing number of highway accidents.

When you start out to enjoy the present holiday week-end be sure to observe the following ever useful highway "don'ts":

If you drink, don't drive, or vice versa, if you drive, don't drink.

Don't speed. When you start out on your trip, leave home a little earlier and drive a little slower, and you are more likely to reach

What Have You Got That I Haven't Got

your destination safely. Don't pass another vehicle on hills or curves or other places where there is not a clear vision of sufficient distance to pass safely.

Approach all intersections and side roads carefully, keeping in mind that you never know what the other fellow is going to do.

Don't forget there are two ways to commit suicide with gas—inhalate it or step on it.

If every motorist will practice these "Don'ts" over this week-end there will be fewer accidents to mar the holidays.

Washington Daybook

Washington—If the United States Coast Guard ever gets its share of public recognition, the phrase "Let the Coast Guard Do It" will become full of meaning as "Tell it to the Marines."

When ships of warring or captive nations in American ports were taken over recently, who was called in to rout out their crews, take over the boats, and guard against sabotage? The Coast Guard.

When a cruise liner goes aground, lists to starboard and threatens to dump frantic passengers into the briny, who rushes to bring them ashore through a treacherous, pounding surf?

Who chops a way through dangerous ice to bring doctors, medical supplies and food to some little winter-bound community of Eskimos where an epidemic has broken out? Who sets a flying boat down on an angry sea to bring some patient-wracked sailor to port in time for the emergency operation that will save his life? Who maintains a lonely and often storm-battered weather reporting patrol from the Azores to Greenland?

It's the Coast Guard every time.

Started In 1790 The Coast Guard started in 1790 when President Washington approved an act of Congress setting up the Revenue Marine. It had ten boats and just one duty—to prevent smuggling. In 1848, the United States life-saving service was set up. In 1915, these two were merged and given the name Coast Guard. As late as 1921, the Coast Guard got its first airplanes—a few obsolete old crates cast off by the Navy. In 1939, the Lighthouse Service was absorbed.

There hardly has been a year in the last hundred that the Coast Guard hasn't added men, ships and duties. Today, it has a personnel of about 20,000, including more than 600 commissioned officers, and is planning to add about 5,000 enlisted men by the end of 1942.

It has 485 cutters. Anything longer than 26 feet, with a commanding officer, is a cutter—the larger vessels are 125 to 327 feet. There are seven of the big ones, commissioned in 1936 and comparable to Navy gunboats. They have a cruising radius of 12,000 miles. In addition to the cutters, the Coast Guard has 41 lighter vessels and 3,300 small boats ranging down to surf boats and dories. It has about 60 planes and pilots and crews to man them.

But look what has happened to its duties. After the Titanic went down, the Coast Guard established an iceberg patrol and just how well it has done that is written into the record of 28 years without a single casualty from the bergs, which once were "floating death" in the north Atlantic sea lanes.

Removes Wrecks The Coast Guard searches out and removes wrecks and derelicts. It enforces all laws and regulations pertaining to operation and anchorage of merchant vessels and motorboats. It watches over vessels in the deep-sea fishing fleets. It enforces the laws concerning whaling (on American ships anywhere in the world), seal, salmon, sponge and other fishing. It patrols regattas during regattas. (Don't snicker—there were 443 regattas in the last reported year.) It maintains all the light stations and beacons for navigation and shoreline aviation. When the neutrality patrol was set up in the fall of 1939, the Coast Guard got that order, too.

It has its own Annapolis at New London, Conn., where officers are graduated after four-year courses. And it has trained for the U. S. merchant marine something like 600 licensed and 4,000 unlicensed seamen in the last three years.

These are just its peacetime exploits. Tomorrow, I will tell you about the Coast Guard in time of war. Perhaps you already can see why there are no punies in this service which, with all those cutters, has to live up to its motto "Semper Paratus"—always ready.

Short Shots

Raleigh, April 11.—Fact that the federal park service officials have made an agreement with the state game division permitting the latter unit to share in control of the deer and other wild life in national forests seems to prove conclusively the contention that there would have been no acrimony and no court action on the subject if John D. Chalk, head of the state game unit, had not wanted to be the Great "I am" of the whole setup.

The state's contentions (which is to say the Chalk ideas) were ruled against in every federal court from district to supreme, and after the litigation was over the federal park service remained complete master of the situation, the deer and the forests. Any concessions they have now made to the state are out-and-out matters of grace and not of necessity—and it is a certainty that at least as many, probably more, would have been made before legal action was taken.

There is every reason to believe that from the state Chalk did not have the full approval or support of the department of conservation; and it is also reliably reported that the repeated appeals were taken against the better judgment and advice of the attorney general's office.

The federal officials could have been dealt with on a give and take basis long ago—and the state could have saved its face, the humiliation of losing every round in court and the revenue which the usual Pisgah forest deer hunt would have produced last year.

In accordance with custom, Easter (next) Monday will be a holiday for all state departments and agencies, except those forced to function during all holiday seasons.

Notes on attention paid by the highway patrol to duty and to traffic control signs: (1) Motoring from the Virginia state line to Raleigh Sunday, your Raleigh reporter spied two highway patrol cars, in all. They were neatly parked—along with some score other vehicles—about a hundred yards off the main highway, adjacent to the scene of a country baseball game.

(2) Walking, with the green light, up Fayetteville street toward the capitol, your reporter was almost run over Thursday by a highway patrol car, with a uniformed patrolman at the wheel, which turned sharply and suddenly at the post-office corner where there is a perfectly legible and large-sized sign which proclaims "No Turn."

Yet, officials often wonder at the general laxity of motorists in obeying traffic rules. Gasoline consumption in North Carolina continues to grow with every day. The 6-cent per gallon tax has brought into the state treasury $7,172,335.90 in the first quarter of this year, which gives the probable consumption of gasoline for the year of 478,115,688 gallons on which tax will be paid—and that taking the first quarter as average, whereas it is ordinarily smaller than the other quarters.

The 1940 consumption has been announced as 453,712,053 gallons, up 31,013,724 gallons over 1939. At the present rate of increase this year's total consumption is likely to show an even higher increase over the 1940 gallonage.

It's spring cleaning time at the Capitol—has been for some time, as far as that goes; but for the first time it is completely obvious to everybody who goes there.

Young ladies from the State Treasurer's office are actually working out in the hallways, while the office force has taken complete possession of State Auditor George Ross Pout's sanctum, thus "exiling"

I'll sure be glad when the day comes that you can read them to yourself. Hmmm. Let's see now, Dickie Dare first, maybe, huh? Remember last night (ie and Dan—I guess his name is Dan—were flying away from that big rock and their autogyro looked like it had been hit by a bullet? Well, it really was hit. See, Dickie is yelling: "We're on fire!" And Dan says they have to bail out. That means... oh, you know what that means. Okay. So they have to bail out. And he tells Jackie... I mean Dickie... that he should remember to pull the rip cord. That means... oh, excuse me! So Dickie lets the pigeon go... don't ask me where the pigeon came from; you're supposed to remember this stuff... and he picks up Wags and he says: "All right, Dan, here I go." And then he jumps out of the burning plane with the dog under his arm. "Wow, this is awful!" Dickie says. "Help! Murder!" Will he get down all right? Lookee, son, you don't suppose that the guy who draws this comic strip is going to let Dickie die so that he'll have to invent a new character, do you? Trouble is, you take this stuff too seriously. I don't blame you for getting excited, though. Comics are a lot different now than they were when I was a kid. Used to be all bam, sock and powie then. But you would have liked Little Nemo, the boy who was always dreaming about something, and Slim Jim with the thin legs and great big feet, and Buster Brown and his dog Tige, and Happy Hooligan with the tin can on his head. Yeah, he wore it for a hat. My daddy used to read them to me, too. All right, all right. I'll read you about Scorchy. In just a minute, I want to see what Diana's doing. Hmmm. She sure is cute. Well, Scorchy Snit then. Let's see... what's this big guy's name?...

Your Word Is Law As U. S. Fashions Face Trial

By AMY PORTER
AP Fashion Editor

How do the new spring fashions look to you? As pretty as those you saw last spring? Do you like the new silk coats? Do you think printed gloves are nice and gay? Are you pleased with the spring hats?

You have no idea how fervently American designers hope you are pleased.

This, their first season of real independence, is a testing time for them. Before they can hope to lead the world in style they have to make themselves welcome at home. They hope you are satisfied with their offerings and that you do not cast yearning eyes toward Paris and the good old days when everything was a la Lelong, Piquet and Chanel.

Doing Their Utmost.

Hardest to win over are those ultra smart women who were accustomed to shopping in Paris. Toward this end American fashionists are doing their utmost to raise American prestige.

The fashion show given at the Brazilian embassy in Washington was a step in that direction. There, spring models by six outstanding designers were displayed to official Washington society. It was the first time the capital made such a to-do about fashion.

Vice-President and Mrs. Wallace were there, and so were Mrs. Cordell Hull, Mrs. Sumner Welles, Senora de Espil and many other smartly dressed Latin American women. The women at the party ordered many of the gowns displayed.

Designer Honored.

An American designer — Louise Barnes Gallagher — was an honored guest — something to be expected in Paris, but not here until this year.

The clothes, restrained rather than showy, beautiful rather than striking, included a bell-skirted evening frock in white lace, a white chiffon gown with fuchsia chignon hood and cape, a belted, full-skirted coat of brown silk faille, a handsomely tailored suit with armholes cut quite deeply.

Paris Still A Threat

Some critics object to the very wearability of the new clothes. Where, they say, are the mad caprices which made Paris such fun? Caprice can be found here, too, in clothes custom made for the few, but it is America's aim to produce Silk topper, quilted and veiled for femininity. Of even more fashion interest is the pin this girl wears at the neckline. It's a miniature oil painting, framed in gold — the creation of artist Walter Quirt. This and other paintings in the series are copies of museum masterpieces. You buy one frame and several paintings, and change them according to whim.

Paris herself continues to be a smoldering threat to American style leadership. There's a slight infiltration of Paris styles, even now. The six Parisian dresses smuggled in and shown recently at Nicolo's in New York did not seem to us worthy of the pre-war French couture. In fact they looked dowdy.

English fabric manufacturers are sending a few French styles to us, either made in London by former Paris houses, or brought by way of Lisbon.

But, as America's confidence in her own style ability grows, she will have less and less to fear from any outside fashion rival.

His companion, they saw as Neil's blond and blue-eyed, and obviously not much over eighteen.

Town coats in dark silk, plaided or striped in white, were among the original designs shown at the Red Cross benefit style show at the Brazilian embassy in Washington. Not the snug waistslines, full skirts. Hundreds of Washington notables turned out for this fashion event, an innovation in embassy activities.

HEART'S HAVEN

Chapter 27 Ham Takes A Walk

Ham watched Neil as he retied the shoe-laces that Lordy had playfully undone. Neil was furious, and Ham did not blame him. He had noticed Neil keeping close to Eve, and he was aware, as Neil was, that she had slipped away while they pursued the dog. He glanced at Gina for understanding, and she shrugged lightly. Her attention was given for the moment to the lawyer and Jim Drouillard. Ham felt that she was being purposely aloof.

Neil straightened, his face still red. But he did not, to Ham's surprise, follow Eve. Instead, he stalked over to the bookcase and took down the old book that described the house. Lordy curled up near his master's feet, his liquid eyes asking if he had made a mistake. Ham's fingers absently tweaked the stiff ears.

"You were all right, fella," he said softly. "At least I think so. Anyway—your guess is as good as mine."

Later, Ham managed to draw Gina away from the lawyer and his companion. Julie and Mrs. Marbury were gossiping with evident relish in one corner, and it was obvious that Mrs. Jackson was the unaccustomed mimiery of the caretaker's actions did not leave any doubt about that.

But Gina, once she was enticed as far as the circular hallway—even with Lordy's tail wagging gaily in anticipation of a run—was not too friendly.

"What in the world do you want?" she demanded. "You've been wigwagging at me for the last ten minutes. Mr. Howe thinks you're just plain crazy."

"Why don't you come for a walk with Lordy and me?" Ham inquired. "It's a lovely night and," he added viciously, "Rodman seems to be interested in Eve."

"I don't care about Brett—and I don't care about you," Gina said decisively. "Go and take your dog for a walk. We'll be here when you get back."

But Ham, stalking out the front door, did not know how inaccurate that forecast was. He only knew that the place where his heart was supposed to be an aching void and that no amount of reasoning would ever convince him that there was anyone for him but Gina.

Lordy Scents Trouble

How long he had stayed away Ham did not know. He avoided the coast line sure that Eve and Brett would have selected one of the sand dunes for their talk. Lordy had pranced along with joyous barks as he followed Ham over to the other side of the island. Here the trees had not been cut, but they were not grouped so thickly and the sandy beach gave way at times to a rockier shore. This was the ocean in earnest. The waves rose high and slapped against the island with a menacing sound that Ham found strangely soothing.

"I wish I could be like that," he thought, seating himself on a smooth rock that commanded a view of the sandy waste. "If I were strong and determined enough, probably Gina would listen to me."

Ham shielded a stone at the water, and the splash it made gave him a feeling of confidence. The fact that the stone he threw had made an impression on the ocean gave him some satisfaction as he rose and whistled for Lordy to return.

But in spite of his forced confidence, Ham did not turn back toward the house immediately. He skirted the shore, morosely convinced that even if he did not fail to show up within an hour no one would miss him. Nor did he hurry.

Just before he rounded the point, Ham was tempted to sit down again. There was a nice flat rock, and perhaps Gina would worry if he did not return within the hour. He was only deflected by the inner conviction that Gina would not even notice the length of time he had been away—and by Lordy's low growl, as if he had seen an enemy. Because he was lonely, Ham began to talk to the dog:

"Come now, Lordy! Things aren't as bad as that. What did you do? Scare a rabbit? Well, you mustn't do any more than I can. If I could just speak up once, perhaps Gina would forget how I look. But I just growl in my throat, as you do, and she ignores me—as I do you."

But as they rounded the point Lordy refused to be soothed by Ham's voice. His growl, instead of becoming lower, grew in intensity until Ham reached forward and placed a restraining hand on his collar. Even so, Lordy continued to growl in his throat.

Presently, in the dim light, Ham could make out the movement that was causing Lordy's attack of nerves. But before he could reassure the dog that this was only a shadow from the tree, he heard—or thought he heard—a whisper that was enough to silence his own breathing, even while he held Lordy Mac close to stifle his barks.

How long he remained there the quivering form of the dog pressed to his side. Ham could not recall. But he did know that the moon gradually came out from its bank of clouds, and there, silhouetted against the sand and sea were two figures that looked familiar.

Eve and Gina? Ham remembered the old-fashioned garnet satin dress, the sprigged muslin, which Gina and Eve had found in the attic, and worn. But he stared at the figures before him, puzzled.

Even in the moonlight these two did not look like Eve and Gina. Lordy squirmed impatiently, seemingly bent on dashing over to the two figures.

"Take it easy, Lordy," Ham whispered. "There's something funny about this. If those two apparitions are the girls, you wouldn't be acting this way. Are they were ghosts, you'd have your tail between your legs. Let's just edge a little closer."

Crawling carefully along, Ham managed to get within a few yards of the two figures. Ham saw the one in the light dress raise a hand. There was the glint of a knife—and then, far down the beach, the sound of Eve's scream! Ham, startled, forgot to hold Lordy Mac. The next instant Lord's small black form catapulted to the sand dune, and his sharp white teeth sank into a leg of one of the figures.

Battle Royal

It was an anything but ghostly yelp of pain that came from the victim, and it was followed by a string of masculine curses. Ham, running as fast as he could, panted: "Hang on, Lordy, good work!" while he made a flying tackle at the other figure, which had picked up its skirts and started to run.

The legs Ham had wound his arms around, gave way but their owner was not yet defeated. He rolled over and, reaching down toward Ham, proceeded to give him a swift jab in the eye. Ham was startled first at finding a man in the old-fashioned dress, and then at the desperate fury of his own fighting.

He felt the blood from his injured lip trickling down his chin and ducked his head as he saw another blow coming. He knew he was no match for his opponent, but so long as he held on to the man's knees and kept squirming around perhaps he could manage until help came.

He could hear Lordy's rare and defiant bark and knew that the other man must have pulled away from him. But he knew too that Lordy's sturdy little legs would follow the intruder, no matter where he went.

It seemed a long time before Neil's reassuringly large form took shape in the darkness, and Neil's voice said grimly:

"Okay, Ham, I've got this guy by the throat. Brett has the other one collared down on the beach. Lordy chased him to us."

Ham got up and tried to brush some of the sand from his clothes. His lip was swelling and the words he tried to say were nothing but mumble. Ham was limping a little, too, as he followed Neil and the prisoner back to the house.

Brett and his captive were in the living room with the other members of the party when they arrived. The man whom Lordy had attacked was wearing the sprigged muslin dress Eve had once worn, but he no longer gave the impression of ghostly femininity as he had in the moonlight. The dress was torn and bedraggled.

The man's large feet in heavy shoes and white socks stuck out grotesquely from beneath the ragged skirt. Lordy Mac was worrying a black wig that had fallen off in the scuffle, and which the dog had retrieved and carried back to suffered; the garnet satin skirt had permanently parted company with the bodice, showing a large expanse of cotton undershirt.

He had managed to retain the blond wig, however, and it now hung rakishly over one ear. No one spoke for a moment as they looked in bewilderment at the two extraordinary guests. Then Gina caught sight of Ham and at once ran to his side.

"Darling! What in the world happened to you? Oh, you're hurt!"

"Just a little punch in the jaw," Ham explained through his swollen lips, trying to smile. In spite of his injury, however, he had never felt better than when Gina led him to the most comfortable chair in the room, and she sat on the arm of his chair, one hand softly stroking his cheek.

"Who the devil are you and what's the idea of the get-up?" Brett finally demanded of the two men. "And don't pull any of this not-talking business, either, or I'll give you a good going-over."

"Maybe we ought to do it anyhow," suggested Neil hopefully looking at the blond wig of the man nearest him.

"You frightened us nearly to death," Julie said severely. "All that screaming and yelling!"

Liquor Responsible For Most Arrests By Patrol

Reflector Bureau
By HENRY AVERILL

Raleigh, April 11 — Liquor, thru its baleful effects, was responsible for one of every three arrests reported to the highway safety division as made by the highway patrol during the first quarter of 1941.

Almost one in every nine persons reported arrested by the patrol were charged with drunken driving.

In all the patrol reported 8,252 arrests, of which 962 were for drunken driving, an offense for which arrests were exceeded only by the 1445 for public drunkenness and the 1238 for speeding. Operating with inadequate or improper equipment was the only other offense even close — with 931.

Related offenses such as transportation of liquor and possession of whiskey, brought total arrests attributable to booze to 2,931.

Thus more than half the arrests (4,850) were accounted for by four offenses.

Detailed analysis of the arrests for drunken driving and for speeding has been made by Carl Barefoot, statistical expert for the safety division, revealing a number of interesting points of importance in determining who are the speeders and the drunken drivers.

With the caution that figures for three months only may not be a sufficiently large "sampling" or cross section to reach dogmatic conclusions, the figures tend to show that the drunken drivers are mostly men between 25 and 44 years old, while the speeders are predominantly young fellows under 25.

A "sampling" of approximately 50,000 licensed drivers in North Carolina showed about one in every three drivers belongs to the 25-44 age group, while the quarter's arrest sheet shows that 562 of the drunken driving arrests were in that group — more than half of the 962 arrests. The proportion becomes even greater when the 105 "not stated", as to age, arrests are deducted from the 962, leaving 562 out of 857 in the 25-44 group.

Only twenty women were nabbed for drunken driving during the 3 months, a percentage negligible in comparison to the 24 per cent of licenses issued to female drivers in the 50,000 sample.

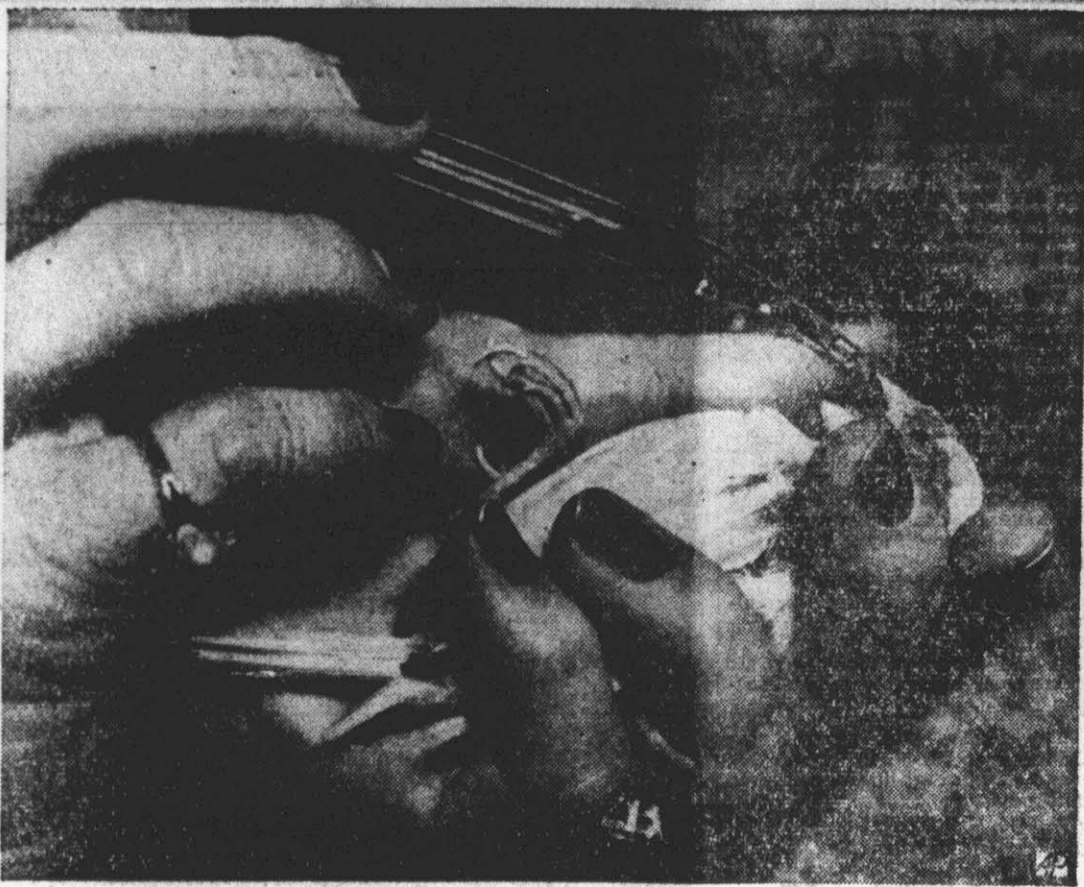

While drunken driving was largely confined to the masculine sex, it does not appear that race has anything much to do with the number of arrests for drunken driving. Of the 962 taken into custody, 756 were whites, 155 negroes, and three were "others" (probably Indians, though not so stated); while the race of 48 was "not stated."

This proportion of whites to Negroes in the arrests (5 to 1) was slightly than in the license sampling, where the ratio was approximately four to one.

There was an even smaller proportion of women among the arrested speeders, with 20 taken into custody — exactly the same number as arrested for drunken driving, but with 1,238 total arrests against 962. Also it appears that Negroes are less prone to speed than are the white drivers, with only 125 of the race arrested against 1,059 white drivers — or only about one to eight; giving the Negroes twice as good a record in the light of their proportion (1 to 4) of the total licenses.

There was nothing startling to be learned from a study of the hours of arrest; though it was perhaps a little surprising to find that more arrests were made for drunken driving between two and four in the afternoon than during any of the night hours when taking too much today is supposed to be most prevalent.

Here are some of the statistical phases:

HERS ARE HEALING HANDS—In these hands of Mrs. Idella G. Manisera of Los Angeles is a canary who's going to take some medicine whether he likes it or not. As a child Mrs. Manisera hoped to become a doctor but fate ruled otherwise so she now ministers to birds, with special emphasis on canaries. Once, she even sewed feathers back on a canary scalped by another bird.

R. Burnett from W. R. Burnett novel "The Sign of the Cross" by Walsh, Principals: Ida Lupino, Humphrey Bogart, Alan Curtis, Arthur Kennedy, Joan Leslie, Henry Hull, Henry Travers, Jerome Cowan.

Times ain't what they used to be as Big Mack remarks regretfully: All the "good men" are in Alcatraz or dead—all that is, except Roy Earle. Roy's a killer, a big-time bandit, and Big Mack has "sprung" him to pull a $500,000 job on a desert resort near Los Angeles. The plot thickens handily, and Roy gets along fine with his assignment except for that sentimental streak in him.

It makes him soft, first, on a crippled waif of a gal (Joan Leslie) soft on a mutt dog that's had luck soft on the one-time time-a-dance girl who's his moll and confederate. He gets his just deserts, high on a crag of the highest Sierra, just because of that sentimental streak. Of course he had starved shortly anyway or been plugged by the surrounding cops—but it makes a nice theatrical finish.

"High Sierra," for that matter, is a nice theatrical picture. It's as gripping as the better gang films of old and Bogart and Lupino both are first-rate.

"Come Live With Me." Screenplay by Patterson McNutt from story by Virginia Van Upp. Directed by Clarence Brown. Principals: James Stewart, Hedy Lamarr, Ian Hunter, Verree Teasdale, Donald Meek, Adeline de Walt Reynolds.

Stewart, hungry author, weds Hedy, an Australian, illegally in the U. S., in fulfillment of a bargain to return for his name, which will permit her to remain in New York to pursue her romance with Publisher Hunter, Hedy keeps him on salary while he writes.

What he writes is the novel about the young writer with the strange marriage who falls in love with his wife. He's stuck for the ending—even after Publisher Hunter has given him advance royalties—but he finds it by taking Hedy upstate to visit his grandma (Reynolds). She helps win Hedy for Jimmy, which leaves Publisher Hunter free to stay with his own wife (Teasdale) where he belongs.

A pleasant fable, with good laughter available and occasional brightness to spare (viz. the Donald Meek "bum" episode). "Come Live With Me" is entertaining comedy.

Preview Of A $2,000,000 Operation:---

IN CUTTING UP THE VARGAS DIAMOND
FIRST PICTURES OF PRELIMINARIES

1. Jonas (left) and Adrian studied the stone a year, practiced cuts on 1,500 glass models. Hugs stones don't sell, so the Vargas, found in Brazil in 1938, will have 23 "children."

(AP Feature Service)
New York—To hear Adrian Grasselly talk, you'd think his $2,000,000 operation on the world's biggest diamond is simple.

"Just a tap," like a zylophonist. Adrian and Jonas Walvisch are among six men in the world their employer Harry Winston, would let break up his Vargas diamond, the third largest diamond ever found. It is 2 1/2 inches long, weighs more than a quarter-pound (726.60 carats). The job will take 16 months:

2. The Vargas (above) looks like greasy glass. Cost Winston $750,000 in Amsterdam. He mailed it to U. S. for 70c. Marks show projected cuts. First will be to saw off tip shown.

3. This is diamond dust saw.

4. On two planes, the diamond must be split; other cuts must be sawed. Groove is cut with sharp diamond.

5. Just a tap, and hardest known substance splits under cleaver. Splitting "proves" stone glassy, or hard, perfect.

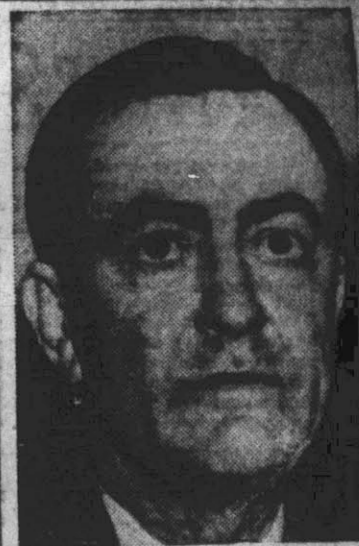

6. How some cut will look.

7. Nearly half the Vargas will vanish as dust (note fingers). But "children" may be worth $2,000,000.

8. The result—royal gems. She wears the $1,000,000 Jonkers No. 1 (126 carats). Vargas No. 1 will be 50 carats.

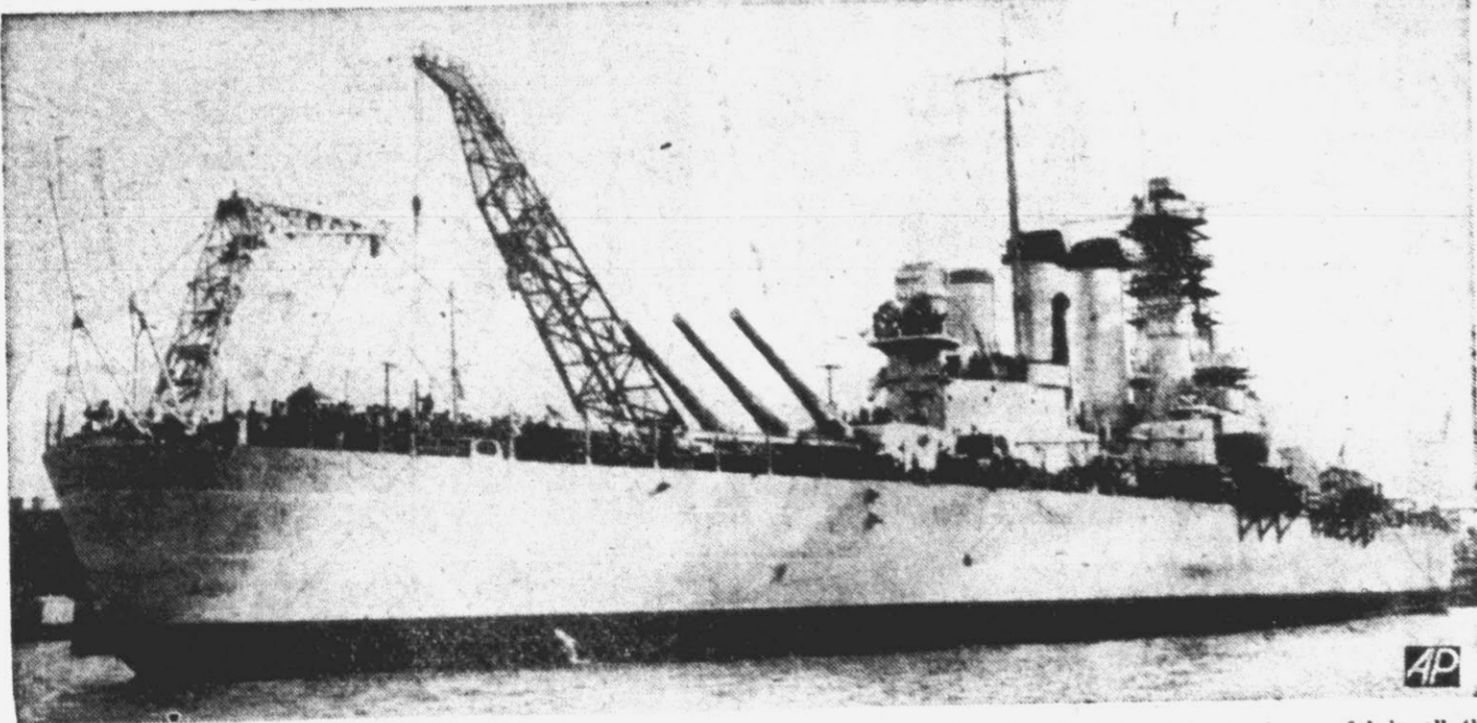

NEWCOMER—Lloyd Spencer (above), 47, farmer and self-styled country banker, is the new senator from Arkansas succeeding John E. Miller who resigned to become a federal judge. Spencer's appointment is for a term of almost two years.

Governors Guest Of Army At Fort Jackson

U. S. S. North Carolina, Nav y's Greatest, Commissioned

The U. S. S. North Carolina, brand new 35,000-ton battleship, the navy's largest battleship and one of the most powerful in all the world, lies in Brooklyn navy yard at commissioning exercises. The $70,000,000 vessel is the first of 17 dreadnaughts ordered in Uncle Sam's naval expansion program. Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox headed 1,500 special guests uninvited to the navy yard for the commissioning. Police, marines and sailors guarded the 708-foot battle wagon under war-time restrictions to prevent sabotage.

Hollywood Sights And Sounds

By Rabbin Cross

Hollywood—"Meet John Doe." Screenplay by Robert Riskin from story by Richard Connell and Robert Presnell. Directed by Frank Capra. Principals: Gary Cooper, Barbara Stanwyck, Edward Arnold, Walter Brennan, Spring Byington, James Gleason, Gene Lockhart, Rod LaRocque, Irving Bacon, Regis Toomey.

You don't have to take anybody's word that this is a good picture. All you have to do is listen to a few of the arguments which end with (a) "I say he shoulda jumped," or (b) "I say he shoulda done just what he did." Any picture that starts such a fuss about the hero's ultimate fate has to have a lot to offer before the disputed climax arrives, and "Meet John Doe" has plenty.

Capra, with his knack for making a sermon more entertaining than a ten-twenty-thirty seller is preaching ortherly love. When a powerful financier takes over a newspaper and chops off heads, the girl columnist (Stanwyck) angrily fakes a letter from one "Joe Doe" declaring that he will jump from the city hall tower on Christmas Eve as a protest against the evils of modern life. The hoax blossoms forces the paper to produce John Doe in the flesh, and Long John Willoby, a hobo, is drafted.

With speeches written by the girl proclaiming "Love Thy Neighbor," the John Doe movement sweeps the country. When Long John discovers that the good-will clubs are being used to promote Boss Arnold's Fascistic designs on the country, he tries to expose the fake, is instead discredited. Then he feels that to restore faith in his followers he must carry out the promise of suicide. The girl's frantic plea—that the greatest of all John Does centuries ago had made the sacrifice unnecessary—wins him back.

It is a fantastic fable, kept so consistently close to the realities of the modern American scene as to be credible. As usual, Capra gets excellent performances from his players, gives them pungent dialogue. Samples: Toomey's scene explaining to John Doe what his message has meant; Gleason's barroom dissertation on what the Star-Spangled Banner does to him; Stanwyck's climactic plea to John Doe; Brennan's discourse on "heebots"—something rare.

"The Road to Zanzibar." Screenplay by Frank Butler and Don Hartman. Directed by Victor Schertzinger. Principals: Bing Crosby, Bob Hope, Dorothy Lamour, Una Merkel, Eric Blore.

There's no problem here—unless it's how the "Road to Singapore" crew is going to top this one for zany, wacky spirit. Made purely for laughs, and very successful at it—with Crosby as the promoter. Hope as the perennial stogie in his money-making schemes, and Lamour as an American gold-digger in the jungle. Of the usual songs Crosby's "You Lucky People, You," is catchiest. Don't miss it.

"The Penalty." Edward Arnold, Lionel Barrymore, Marsha Hunt, Robert Sterling, Gene Reynolds, Veda Ann Borg.

Bandit Arnold's son, reared to the profession, finds regeneration amid the simple joys of country life. Some clever twists and good performances, notably one by a trained goose, make it a good cops-and-robbers thriller with tear-jerking extra.

Fast-moving in the city sequences, it bogs down somewhat when it goes bucolic, but picks up again for the son's final character test.

The Child Labor Amendment thus far has been ratified by 28 states.

Overland Air Route To Panama Enabled By Pact With Mexico

Los Angeles, San Antonio, Hermosillo, Mazatlan, Tampico, Merida, Vera Cruz, Cuajalajara, Mexico City, Tapachula, PANAMA CANAL, CUBA, MIAMI.

Awaiting ratification by the Mexican congress is a reciprocal agreement which would permit U. S. planes to land on Mexican fields, fly a land route to Panama. The pact was approved by the U. S. Senate April 3. Chief benefit to U. S. would be the chance to avoid long water jumps such as the one via the naval base at Guantanamo, Cuba. Mexico has 65 airports, the map showing possible key ports for international routes.

buy all of these things, along with some 3,400 other separate items in handling purchases aggregating something like $18,000,000 annually.

On this morning's list of bids received were listed most of the things already mentioned, plus "vertical tube boiler," "corrugated metal pipe," 1,000 mackinaw type blanket lines work coats, 10,000 pounds of macaroni, 500 pair work gloves, 500 cases big hominy and some others.

Seeing this rather incongruous list upon which bids were to be received started your reporter on this piece with no idea of pointing a moral or even adorning a tale.

Just the same, the division of purchase and contract is about the biggest single buying agency, public or private, in North Carolina. It is the official perennially in the market for a vast variety of things.

It is the official bargainer for the state's 30 institutions, its highway department of some 6,000 miles of maintenance of 58,000 miles of roads. It must buy food and clothing for 10,000 prisoners. It ministers to the needs of 7,000 adult inmates that carry several hundred each; and buys the hundreds of thousand Tar Heel children to the school daily.

So—apple butter or portable boats, it's all in a day's work.
