GERMANS CRACK POINT IN ALLIED DEFENSE LINE

Four Killed In Outburst At Kentucky Soft Coal Field

EIGHT OTHERS IN HOSPITALS

President And Vice-President Of Coal Company Among Victims; Mine At Kentucky - Tennessee Border Has Continued Work Through Stoppage Of Operations Elsewhere In Area

Middlesboro, Ky., April 15.—(AP)—Four men were killed, eight others were in hospitals and an estimated 15 to 20 received medical treatment early today after gunfire in this southeast Kentucky soft coal field.

The dead: C. W. Rhodes, 45, of Middlesboro, president of the Fork Ridge Coal Company and of the American Association, a combination of soft coal mining interests which founded Middlesboro.

E. W. Silvers of Middlesboro, vice-president and treasurer of the coal company.

Bob Robinson of Tazewell, Tenn., a former Tennessee highway patrolman.

Patrolman Guy Harrell of Middlesboro said the shooting occurred just on the Kentucky side of the Kentucky-Tennessee line near this mountain town, and followed a concentration of miners from this county-Bell- and adjoining counties where union miners have sought to stop all operations pending settlement of work contract negotiations between the CIO-United Mine Workers and coal operators of the Appalachian field.

The bloodshed came with a blast of bullets on a road leading to the Fork Ridge Coal Company mine which is about one mile inside the Tennessee line.

Harrell said motorcades of miners assembled here last night and proceeded toward the mine, which has worked throughout the stoppage of operations in adjoining Harlan county subsequent to the expiration of the union-operator Appalachian contract April 1.

Church Busy Raising Funds For Building

The Finance committee of Memorial Baptist church has been busy making plans for a campaign to raise the funds necessary to the erection of a three-story educational building and the enlargement of the present building. It was announced today by Dr. J. D. Simons, pastor.

The members of the committee have organized the church roll into small groups on a geographical basis and secured the necessary canvassers.

Tonight at 7:30 the canvassers will meet in the church office to receive their lists and instructions for the actual canvass, which will get under way tomorrow morning.

Stimson Solemnly Warns United States Faced By 'Dangerous Emergency'

Secretary Of War Adds That Grave Condition May Be 'Very Prolonged,' Indicates That In The Future Nation's Civilian Needs May Be Further Subordinated To Military Program

Washington, April 15.—(AP)—Secretary Stimson solemnly warned a Senate investigating committee today that the United States was facing "a dangerous emergency" which "may be very prolonged."

Testifying as the first witness before a new defense investigating committee, the War Department head indicated that in future preparations to meet this emergency the nation's civilian needs may be further subordinated to the military program to expedite production of war supplies.

He did not say just how long he thought the danger period might last, but he declared that to meet whatever situation may arise the army was planning a program of training which will cover "many successive military units and many successive installments of men and which in the aggregate may last for five years."

"Thus far the department has imposed its military program on top of the normal commercial operations of the country and to date the government has done little to subordinate the civilian needs of the country to its military program," Stimson said. "Possibly we can improve our rates of production if we cut into those needs."

Paying tribute to the preparatory work done by the Army General Staff and the War Department in getting the defense program into operation, Stimson said it had made possible the delivery of weapons and other equipment from eight to 12 months ahead of the World War schedule.

ANOTHER CROP SEEN FOR PITT

Pickle Company Ready To Contract For Cucumbers

Another agricultural product for Pitt county—cucumbers—looks as a possibility, whereby farmers will be able to grow an additional "cash crop" on land diverted under the Soil Conservation program.

One of the leading pickle manufacturing firms in the state, the Mount Olive Pickle Company, with the cooperation of the Greenville Chamber of Commerce and the County Farm Agent's office, has agreed to contract now for 150 acres of cucumbers. Contracts, however, must be consummated this week in order that the cucumbers can be planted in time for the regular harvest season.

Any farmer having one or more acres he desired to plant in cucumbers is advised to get in touch with the Chamber of Commerce officials, the County Farm Agent's office or T. G. Basnight, Jr., representative of the pickle manufacturing company, for further information.

It was explained that under the Soil Conservation program, farmers may plant three acres in commercial truck products, which include cucumbers, on diverted land. Growing of Irish potatoes would not affect the production of cucumbers under the program.

The manufacturing company will make contracts with farmers now, quoting them prices to be paid for the various grades.

Judge Albion Dunn To Present Portrait

A portrait of the late Judge J. Lloyd Horton of Farmville will be presented by former Superior Court Judge Albion Dunn at ceremonies to be held in the court room here Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. It was explained that yesterday that John T. Thorne of Farmville would make the address of presentation.

The portrait will be accepted in behalf of the court and the Pitt County Bar by Judge J. Paul Fritzsche, resident Superior court judge. The picture will be placed on the wall of the court room along with portraits of a number of other prominent Pitt county lawyers.

432,000 GIVEN BOOST IN PAY

Two-Thirds Of Nation's Steel Workers Affected

By The Associated Press
Wage increases of 10 cents an hour were effective today for an increasing majority of the nation's steel workers as smaller mills followed the lead set yesterday by United States Steel Corporation and other large producers.

While the wage increases and other concessions swept away most of the rough spots in steel labor relations, the soft coal tieup remained in effect despite the appearance of Secretary of Labor Perkins before management and union representatives deadlocked on terms of a new contract.

About 432,000, or more than two-thirds of the steel workers in the nation, were informed by last night that their pay envelopes would be $4 fatter each week.

United States Steel, with 240,000 employees, led the way. Bethlehem, with 90,000 followed, as did Republic Steel, 50,000; Youngstown Sheet and Tube, 26,000; Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad company, 17,000; Otis Steel, 6,000; and Acme Steel, 2,800.

The talks were understood to be progress at Ankara, Turkey's capital.

Turkish reaction to the new Japanese-Soviet neutrality pact, meanwhile, was that "it is of direct concern to Germany."

British Imperial Troops Rush To Defense Of Egypt

EXTENSION OF STRIFE FEARED

Successful Counter Offensive By Axis Armies In Africa Lead To Possibility That Egypt, Britain's Non-Belligerent Ally, May Be Drawn Into War

By The Associated Press
Thousands of British Imperial troops, released from the East African front, were reported speeding to the defense of Egypt today in a race with Axis mechanized columns driving toward the Suez canal.

The German-Italian counter-offensive raised the possibility that Egypt, Britain's non-belligerent ally, might soon be drawn into the war.

In a secret session, the Egyptian chamber of deputies ratified an agreement reached between the government and British authorities. The nature of the agreement was not disclosed.

The vanguard of the Axis expeditionary force in north Africa was reported pressing toward Egypt after capturing Saitum, just inside the border from Libya.

The British Middle East command at Cairo announced that 200 Germans were taken prisoners, more than 100 Axis tanks killed and 15 of their tanks destroyed in a repulsed attack yesterday on Tobruk, Libyan port 80 miles from the Egyptian border.

The British acknowledged losing eight tanks.

In the Salum area, the British command said, "we inflicted losses on the enemy by patrol and artillery action."

Funeral Held For Wm. B. Randolph

Funeral services for William B. Randolph, 61, who died suddenly at his home on the Falkland highway Monday afternoon, were conducted from the late residence this afternoon at 4 o'clock, by the Rev. J. D. Simons, pastor of Memorial Baptist church. Interment followed in the Randolph family cemetery near the home.

Mr. Randolph, son of John and Lucy Ebron Randolph, was born in Pitt county in February, 1880, and had spent most of his life in the community in which he died.

Surviving are his wife, the former Miss Hattie Smith, and one sister, Miss Mary Randolph of Greenville.

Active pallbearers were: Gus E. Forbes, Otis Eakes, A. C. Fletcher, Roy Taylor, Charles Harris and C. E. Case.

Negro Cafe is Robbed During Monday Night

The Negro cafe located at 115 Evans street and operated by Wiley Norcutt was broken into last night and about two cartons of cigarettes stolen, police officers reported today.

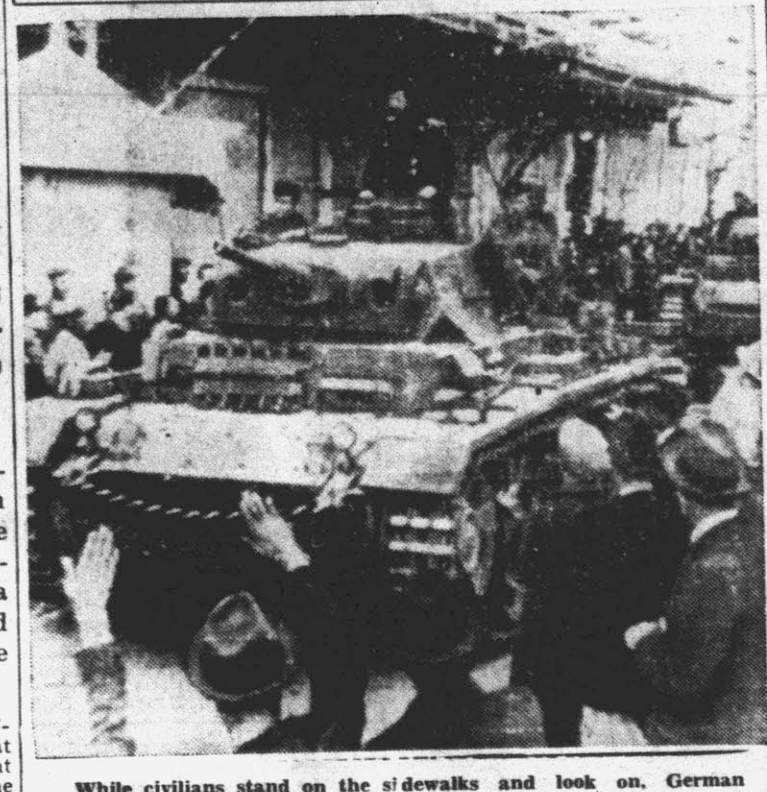

The intruder entered the place by pushing open the bottom of a window swung on hinges from the top. Other than the cigarettes nothing was reported missing. No arrests have been made, although police are continuing an investigation.

Barden Protests Delay Of Justice Department

Says Entire Marine Base Project Being Held Up

Washington, April 15.—(AP)—Rep. Barden (D.-N.C.) protested to the Department of Justice today against delay in clearing titles of land needed for a $15,000,000 marine base in Onslow county, North Carolina.

Barden said this would hold up payments to land owners and handicap them in establishing new homes.

"Everyone seems to be in a hurry except the Department of Justice," Barden said.

The congressman said the delay would waste money because other agencies, such as the Farm Security Administration, would have to care for evacuated families.

"There is no need for this when $10,000 worth of legal talent could clear up the titles in no time," he went on.

The Marine Corps is acquiring approximately 100,000 acres, necessitating removal of about 600 families.

Barden said he had been informed the contract for construction of the base probably would be awarded this week. The Marine Corps expects to begin moving marines into the area about mid-summer and about 14,000 marines eventually will be quartered at the base.

Local Lions Hear District Governor

Last night's meeting of the Lions club was featured by an address by Lion James H. Parker of Clinton, governor of the district which comprises the local club.

The speaker began by complimenting the Greenville Lions on the enthusiasm and fine spirit of cooperation which they have shown during the past year. He extended special recognition to Lions Rufus Johnson and Louis Skinner, the former for his efficient work as secretary of the local club and the latter for the service which he has rendered as chairman of the local zone.

Lion Parker then proceeded to tell in a very interesting way, of the much constructive work which is being accomplished by Lionism in connection with clinics and other forms of community service. He emphasized the fact that a civic club is a definite asset to a community and requested the Greenville Lions to bend every effort towards making their club an even more effective channel of service.

Vital Town Of Phlorina Is Captured

Italian Newspaper Circles In Rome Quote Berlin Reports as Saying That Yugoslavia Has Asked For Separate Peace; No Immediate Confirmation Of Dispatches, However

By The Associated Press
Adolf Hitler's blitzkrieg invaders have cracked the point of the V-shaped Allied defense line in Greece, captured the key town of Phlorina in a drive from Bitolj pass and forced the British and Greeks to retire to a deeper front in the center, it was acknowledged in Athens today.

In Rome, Italian newspaper circles received a Berlin report that Yugoslavia had asked for armistice with the Axis. There was no immediate official confirmation.

Hitler's high command reported that Nazi troops occupied Ptolemais and nearby Kozane in Greece, 40 miles south of the Albanian-Yugoslav border junction.

If true, this means that the allies suffered at least a 40-mile setback before facing a new situation. In Yugoslavia, the German high command said Nazi and Italian troops were speeding the "pursuit and encirclement" of remnants of the Serb army, which was said to be putting up "localized" resistance in the Sarajevo sector.

On the right flank, the British announced better success in stemming the Nazi onslaught.

British troops were said to have hurled back a series of assaults by German columns in the Mount Olympus sector in eastern Greece.

Athens dispatches said the Nazis were advancing into Greece on the left after occupying Phlorina, the northernmost hinge of the old allied defense line.

Countering British claims of having repulsed Nazi thrusts in the Mount Olympus sector, Hitler's high command declared that German forces were pursuing the British in retreat south of Salonika.

British rear guards were pictured attempting to slow the Nazi steam roller "by extensive destruction."

Authorized quarters in Berlin declared the German high command had discovered indisputable proof that the British were preparing a hasty retreat from Greece.

"England's behavior is the most shameful crime ever perpetrated on an ally," the Nazis said.

The London radio, however, declared that "strong British reinforcements are now moving up to front lines in Greece."

The spacious hall and living room of the home were very attractively decorated with spring flowers.

The president, Mrs. W. C. Latham, led the business session, during which time it was voted that the club donate $5.00 to the American Red Cross to be used in aid to Britain. One member, Mrs. H. E. Baker, tendered her resignation, due to the fact that Mr. and Mrs. Baker are moving to Robersonville where Mr. Baker has been transferred as a C. L. agent.

Mrs. Latham introduced the speaker for the occasion, Mrs. M. E. Johnson, wife of the Baptist minister in Bethel. Mrs. Johnson gave a most interesting and entertaining program on minstrelsy, folk songs and ballads. She used several songs as illustrations, among which were "Last Night the Nightingale Awoke Me," "I Wish I Was Single Again," "Roll On, Little Doggie," and "Rockabye Baby." The last number was played by a musical cradle, making a delightful and novel conclusion to the program.

The hostess served a delicious salad plate, which carried out the Easter theme. There were also Easter favors. Members present were: Mesdames H. E. Baker, T. G. Basnight, Sr., J. B. Congleton, Ethel Clark, R. O. Congleton, W. C. Latham, and G. H. Roebuck, Sr.; Miss Kate Roebuck, Mesdames W. F. Stokes, W. G. Stokes and Allen T. Womble.

Invited guests were Mrs. M. M. Johnson of Bethel, Mrs. B. F. Fleming, and Mrs. L. Q. Cherry.

WORKERS Required To Acquire Cards

In the next 12 months thousands of additional workers will be required to carry on the defense projects of the nation. There will be a strong demand for machinists, engineers, carpenters and other skilled labor, as well as common labor.

Every worker entering a new job should apply immediately for a Social Security account number card if he does not already have one.

declared Marshall H. Barney, manager of the Social Security Board's office in Rocky Mount. The age of the worker does not matter. He needs this card even if he is under 20 years old or over 70.

Many young women may replace men in stores, offices and factories. Women in commerce and industry must have a Social Security account number card, just the same as men. The age of the woman does not matter. The fact that she is working in some store, office or factory or other place of business where her employer is required to report her wages to the government, determines her need of a Social Security card.

Social Security account number cards may be secured from any field office of the Social Security Board. The office serving this area is located in the Post Office building in Rocky Mount.

Young Allen Girl Feted As Artist

Although she is only 11 years old, Peggy Allen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. R. Allen of Buffalo, N. Y., and granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. and Mrs. Harvey Allen of Greenville, recently took her place with other and older artists at the exhibit of the Buffalo Society of Artists in Hotel Statler.

Miss Allen, moreover, was treated as an honor guest by the other exhibitors and also by the officers of the society.

Peggy, a student in the sixth grade, was honored by having her work selected for exhibition by a special committee. Her work consists of two water colors, Woodland Shadows and Deer Grazing. The pictures were given enthusiastic praise by patrons, as well as fellow artists.

Someday I'll Find You

BY MARGARET WIDDEMER

Eileen was led to tall smiling Miss Willson.

Chapter One

Three Roads

Eileen Gardner, small, slim, arresting in spite of her convent gown, ally plain orandy graduating gown took her third bow for the "Shadow Song" from "Dinorah," and slid demurely to her place in the long row of graduates on the university platform.

The applause was longer than it had been for anyone else. It would be. She was her year's prize graduate and naturally she knew it. Most popular girl. Runner-up for prettiest girl. Most likely to succeed. And though this was not in the yearbook—girl with more kinds of future spreading before her than any other man or girl in the long serious-faced young row.

She had pushed everything but the moment out of sight, these last few hectic days. But now, graduation over, song done, in the blankness of relaxation, her problems of excellent choices, sat literally before her in the audience and demanded thinking about; unless she wanted to listen to Prexy's booming reverent voice introducing the commencement speaker at length. It must be somebody big. It was his special manner for donors and world-wide. Eileen noted—

Her eyes—so extravagantly-lashed and big in her small pointed face that the last thing people took her for was a girl who'd ever seen the inside of a college—focused on her problems, down there in the audience. Large and live and much in earnest, fresh from applauding her with proprietary admiration, there they sat; in the faculty group; in the seats for relations; in the seats for just audience.

Aunt Louise, her eager thin face under its blond-gray waves lifted toward her still. The Weigands, untidy, artistic, intent—she with exuberant curls and three strings of beads over a too-bright blouse, her small and mousy and wife-adoring, holding hands, of course, as ever. And young Jordan Estill, his thin intelligent eye-glassed face a little tired from too many examination papers, but flushing now as he caught her glance.

Three roads. Eileen always felt somehow more crown-up than Aunt Lou, with her eagerness over this cause and that cause, her passion for culture, her hard-working enthusiasm for her job of second - grammar - grade teaching. Aunt Lou had always been just a bit, in spite of her brought intensities, scared about living. Or so it seemed to a girl who had at the moment an embarrassment of silver platters on which life was being handed her.

Aunt Lou's platter, perhaps, wasn't exactly silver. A sound Sheffield plate, more. It was the choice of positions which a girl as high in her classes as Eileen can always command, a position Aunt Lou, as she said reverently, wouldn't have dreamed of at the start.

It might, said her aunt prayerfully, lead anywhere; a secretaryship to the university's head of publicity; who wasn't called exactly that, but actually was. Any amount of amazing contacts. A stepping-stone to being a career woman here in Denver; one of the city's leading citizens by the time she was thirty-five.

Eileen could go on living with her aunt, and her aunt's friend Miss Helen Doran who taught kindergarten. They could take an apartment with one more room, so Eileen could see her friends all by herself, Aunt Lou coaxed, beaming.

Nice, being a career woman, of course. And today you didn't have to sort of take vows of celibacy, the way Aunt Lou's generation had. You could go dancing, you could have small discreet cocktail parties, you could marry.

Or you could marry without any careering at all.

She glanced at Jordan again, and again his sensitive color mounted. It had been hard to keep him away from the point till graduation was over. And she knew she couldn't deflect things much longer.

That way lay being the pretty young wife of one of the cleverest of the English instructors. Do a little part-time secretarial work to make the home fires a little larger till the first baby came. Settle in with the university set, push your husband, be charming at faculty teas—it sounded like a good enough life, and the girl next her, quiet Lucille Anders, who was exactly fitted for it, wanted it, as brought by Jordan Estill, very much indeed. More than Eileen did.

And the Weigands.

If she hadn't pretty nearly promised Aunt Lou to take the secretaryship she'd be inclined to take a chance on the Weigands.

Her eyes moved to them. They had their heads together. They were whispering. And Eileen thought she knew what about. They didn't often come scouting together for that little radio station of their hundred-odd miles away. But they had, yesterday. They had telephoned her about an audition. And they had heard her, today, on the early part of the program, heard her sing the "Shadow Song" from "Dinorah," and applauded like mad.

They actually had been whispering about her. Lucille Anders, beside her, pinched her hand.

"Look!" she muttered. "Did you see the Weigands? They've been whispering ever since you sang, and nodding like mad. Aren't you the lucky girl?"

"Born lucky," Eileen whispered back. No use going into anything here, with Prexy liable to stop any moment and leave your voice audible and alone. It wasn't as simple, financially, as Lucille thought. It was—Lucille who would never have to worry about money as long as she lived.

Prexy's voice slowed, boomed more softly.

"Miss Edith Willson. Whom you know, I need not say, by reputation," he ended, as a tall blond woman crossed the stage with a near-dramatic verve and dash.

Eileen did not know her, at least could not place her, at all. Middle-aged, more or less, of course—she wouldn't be haunting commencement days as a principal speaker otherwise—but slim, smart, easy-striding in her perfectly cut black with its single string of genuine pearls. Something about her suggested the hunting set from English novels; country-house stuff, diamonds and imports after hours. The name had a vague familiarity, at that. Somebody Aunt Lou believed in.

Miss Willson was speaking, now. She had a trained voice, clear and dynamically charming.

"You think you young people of today—" Eileen had missed something—"That because we won you equal suffrage, because we freed your youth, boys and girls both, a generation ago, everything is won."

Oh yes. That was why Aunt Lou who had worked for suffrage herself in her girlhood, was so rapt. It came back dimly to Eileen, who was not especially interested, that Edith Willson had been the young beauty of the suffrage movement. That she had ridden a white horse down Fifth Avenue a year or two before Eileen was born, at the head of a procession of women who were worrying about whether they could vote or not.

"You think you have equality of the sexes," Miss Willson's ringing voice went on. "You have nothing of the sort. Not so long as one girl among you feels that she must use trickery, pretense, by-ends to win one man among you, instead of saying frankly to him, 'I love you. We can be happier together than apart; will man among you dares to say to the girl he loves, 'I cannot earn for two. Marry me, and carry the financial burden till I am on my feet.' Not until..."

Summons From Prexy

It sounded to Eileen like nonsense. She felt like rising and waving her hand and saying, "Don't be silly!"

Heaven knew you didn't have to use trickery or what have you on Jordan. In Eileen's experience so far, the trouble was to keep them from getting to the point where they asked you; for then you hadn't them as friends any longer. And as for a man asking you to marry him and support him—well, today if anybody had a job you did what you could and didn't make speeches.

By the time her mind had returned from her own problems, the applause for Miss Willson was crashing out. The speech was over. The college orchestra was playing Victor Herbert in a relieved way. Then came the diplomas; and the class was mixing with the audience. Eileen skirted the president and his guests carefully. She was about to play hooky.

There was a quiet, almost furtive small party invariably given commencement night. Those in the secret knew. Those who weren't asked were left wryly to suspect. It was for the year's speaker, and a selected group of university and city celebrities. The pick of the gradu-

EXPLAINS LAW ON FERTILIZER

Inferior Quality Can Be Sold If So Labelled

Reflector Bureau.

Raleigh, April 14.—There's nothing much it can do about it this year, but the state Department of Agriculture people will have a fine chance to say "I told you so" to any farmers who put poor fertilizer on their land and don't get the crops they expected.

Reviewing the new state fertilizer law today D. S. Coltrane, assistant to the commissioner of agriculture pointed out that, effective December 1, North Carolina will have a unique provision of its statute which will permit under-strength fertilizer to be sold, but will require that every bag of such inferior fertilizer shall literally tell on itself, with a warning red label which will fairly shout: "Don't buy me, I'm no good."

Actually the tag will carry a warning that the fertilizer is low in available phosphoric acid and potash, in the following words which the law sets out verbatim:

"This is a low grade fertilizer. It costs too much per unit of nitrogen—available phosphoric acid and potash because it contains only 14 or 15 units (as the case may be) of these plant foods. You are paying too much for bagging, freight, labor, etc., on too much inert material."

It's really a strange and unusual law. How any company could sell any product labelled like that has not been explained, but it was at the insistence of fertilizer companies that it was adopted as a compromise, after it had been proposed absolutely to prohibit the sale of 14 and 15 unit fertilizer. Evidently there is still an assumption that Barnum was right and that some suckers will buy anything.

But if they do, the department of agriculture can surely enjoy a bit of "I told you so."

Hollywood

Sights And Sounds

By Robbin Coon

Hollywood—Set-ups: They have built a nice bit of Coney Island on a sound stage for "The Devil and Miss Jones." It is not exactly a sound stage or maybe it is, for several times as Director Sam Wood orders action the sound of a hammering workman down the studio street intrudes.

Conce is somewhat disjointed, though in the picture they'll doubtless fit the pieces together neatly. Over here is a littered expanse of sand, the boardwalk, a lifeguard station, over there, the bath-houses.

Parachute Troops "Hitting the Silk" En Masse

Soldiers of the 501st parachute battalion at Fort Benning, Ga., "hit the silk" en masse from three big army 'transport planes which carried them over their "objective" in maneuvers. The parachutes of soldiers at the left are just beginning to open. Auxiliary 'chutes are carried for emergency use.

Right in front of the camera, a separate setup on a raised platform, is a bit of breeze-blown beach. Lying side by side on the sand are Jean Arthur and Robert Cummings, whispering. Asleep directly behind them also side by side, are Spring Byington and Charles Coburn. The breeze comes from a small fan off-stage, and the sand—in the close-up—is very white. This is important in texture and whiteness to Atlantic beach sands.

Before one of the takes, the cameraman asks Coburn to move his hand down over his vest. There is no reply, except a gentle wheeze, almost a snore. Then Sam Wood has to wake up Coburn so that he can play the part of a sleeping man...

by making faces and comic noises, unworthy of a dignified star, but adding to the gaiety of this set....

Joan Blondell and Dick Powell, married still in real and real life after clicking in "I Want a Divorce" are making "Model Wife," and today's is a funny scene built around bank night or a similar movie theater customer lure. The young couple, who need cash badly are asleep in their little apartment when a neighbor awakens them with news that they've won $200 at the movies and must be there within three minutes to collect.

The ensuing scramble to get dressed and make the theater is wild—so funny that visitors from other sets and studio departments drop in before the final take.

JUST ARRIVED

Allis-Chalmers All-Crop Harvesters

A solid trainload of these harvesters arrived in Charlotte, February 10, for distribution to dealers of the two Carolinas. The 45 car shipment is only about one-fifth of the number of these harvesters to be sold in the two states this year.

Two cars of the All-Crop Harvesters, both 40s and 60s, have been received by us. A complete line of tractors will be received within a few days.

If you are interested in an All-Crop Harvester we urge you to see our Allis-Chalmers line.

We also have mules on hand for sale at reasonable prices.

TRUE RELIGION AND FALSE. Christianity is superior to all other religions because it is the religion of the heart. It deals with the life of a man's life. Of course it exerts a profound influence upon his acts, which are external, but it relates every act to an inner impulse which has been vitalized and renewed by faith.

We can always detect falsity in religion by noting the extent to which it emphasizes the external and neglects the internal. If it puts its first emphasis on custom, tradition, ritual, it is one with the old superstitions that the progressive gospel of Christ rendered obsolete.

UNITED STATES MAY BE FORCED TO CONVOY BRITISH SUPPLIES. (Scottish Rite News). The most disastrous and at times hopeless phase of the war is the sinking of merchant vessels laden with food, clothing, munitions and other essentials to the success of the Allies, thus multiplying the purposes for which the Lend-Lease Bill was passed.

According to the Admiralty in London, the Germans sank 20 ships, totaling 77,575 tons, during the week of March 23rd. The average weekly sinkings have been, for the past few months, 65,000 tons. But recent revised figures of the British Admiralty show that Britain was hit unusually hard during March, the week ending March 16th showing a total of 146,098 tons going to the bottom. Further, these figures do not show the loss of vessels that are damaged—a tidy amount itself.

The British are suffering many disadvantages with the enemy that did not obtain in the first World War. In the former, toward 1918, the fleets of five nations were engaged against Germany. Today, the British fleet is practically alone in its fight with the Italian Navy and the German nests of small and large submarines stationed within easy striking distances from Norway to the Bay of Biscay. In the first World War, the British fleet was largely concentrated in the Atlantic, whereas today it is mostly concentrated in and near Mediterranean waters, with but comparatively few ships left to guard home waters, the naval base at Singapore, other points in the Pacific and to convoy ships across the Atlantic. In other words, the British fleet is strong out in a painfully thin line.

In addition to the submarine bases along the shores of Western Europe from which Germany attacks British shipping, the fall of Norway, Denmark, Belgium, The Netherlands and France makes it possible for the Reich to extend its bombing range thousands of miles.

The British Navy has been very effective in the Mediterranean, and so has the R.A.F. in its raids on submarines, bases and other vulnerable points vital to German strategy. But with all this, navy and marine experts and hosts of other keen observers feel that so many ships are being sunk in the Atlantic that the success of the Allies will be gravely threatened unless direct action is soon taken by the United States. The most direct effective action for the United States would probably be for the American Navy to convoy merchant ships to the British Isles.

Many are convinced that the palliatives offered, or the roundabout ways suggested to get ships safely to the British shores and the Mediterranean, not only hazards the success of the Allies and defeats our plans for protecting the Western Hemisphere, but are concessions to weakness unworthy of a great power.

Arthur Krock, Washington correspondent for the New York Times, wrote, on April 6th, that many officials believe that the United States must soon face the question of convoys. Opinion is growing that our ships and planes provide the only sure safety for shipping. Mr. Krock bases his article chiefly on a recent compilation by a leading naval historian, Dr. Arthur J. Marder, on the shipping problem. The compilation was released by the American Defense, Harvard, Group. Doctor Marder's study, according to Mr. Krock, "brings him to the conclusion, widely held in Washington, that American naval convoys are essential to solve the problem of shipping" with which the United States and Great Britain are faced.

All this is contrary to the position of the President, who said several months ago that he had no intention of using warships to guard ships bearing supplies to Great Britain. But in the opinion of many the President's statement could be answered with the trite expression, "Circumstances alter cases."

"Convoys mean shooting and shooting means war," the President is reported to have said in one of his few statements on the question. But even if this is true, there are still many qualified observers who believe it is better to face that issue promptly high and 20 feet thick, enclosing an area of 200 acres. Around it on the slopes and hill-top was built the city. Within the fortress was a great tower and below it a spiderweb of catacombs that came at last hundreds of feet below the earth, to eight great tunnels.

Under The Danube. Seven of these tunnels ran into trenches, dead-ends, where any enemy who had penetrated so far might be trapped and slaughtered or buried alive. An eighth ran under the Danube and came out miles away in a smaller fortress in the city of Zemun. It was an engineering feat which should give the bends to all modern sandhogs who think their profession is a product of the machine age.

In those ancient days, the tunnel to Zemun was used not only as a last means of escape, but as a supply line in case of siege. Warfare has changed a heap since those spear, sword and shield days, but the fortress of Singidunum still stands and still serves the armies that fight with tanks, seven-mile-a-minute planes, and guns that hurl a ton of steel 30 miles.

Today, it is the heart of Belgrade, and in its deep caverns — when the war started at least — were vast army stores and under its piles of Roman masonry (built to withstand the onslaught of barbaric hordes from the north and east) are great cannon which were fired so effectively in World War I.

The old Roman fortress of Singidunum isn't on the tourists' itinerary. From that ancient day to this, it has been the pride and joy of Serbian soldiers and they have guarded their secret well. There undoubtedly are thousands of residents even who have never had a glimpse of its inner workings — and some who have only the vaguest notion of its existence at all.

Not For Civilians. Probably these caverns and tunnels make Belgrade the most prepared city in the world today in the matter of air raid shelters, but it is unlikely that one civilian was able to dodge Nazi bombs by ducking into them. The powder magazines and storehouses of an army are not thrown open to John Q. Public — not matter what the emergency.

If Yugoslavia falls, it will mean, among other things, the end of life for the great Roman fortress of Singidunum. After 2,000 years, warfare has caught up with her and passed on by. In an air raid, she may be a huge landing field and her caverns may be underground hangars and storage tanks for fuel... and her eighth tunnel that runs under the Danube just another useless hole in the ground.

Man About Manhattan. New York—Carl Carmer whose last book was "The Hudson" of the widely known river series, is writing a novel and the time of the action will be shortly after the American Revolution. The scene is the Genesee river valley, in up-state New York, and the title will be "Genesee Fever."

Even if you didn't know, you could almost guess that Carl Carmer was the author by the title "Genesee Fever." Few writers give this title to titles as does this one. The under-graduate of Hamilton (where Alexander Woolcott also went to school), "Stars Fell on Alabama" is a case in point as is "Listen For a Lonesome Drum."

When we called to ascertain the progress of work on this novel (it is almost completed), Mrs. Carmer the former Betty Black of New Orleans informed us that Carl was in bed with the flu. "It's really layngitis," she explained, "and we try to keep him from talking, but it's no use."

Writing in bed isn't the problem for Carmer that it would be for most men. He does all of his writing in long hand, leaving the typing to others.

The friends and admirers of the late Hal Kemp, whose untimely death in an automobile accident some weeks ago shocked the country, will have no trouble picking up a wide selection of Kemp's recordings. Both Victor and Columbia have issued memorial albums.

Our New York critics do not see eye-to-eye on the virtues of Virginia, which had its local premiere recently. This is a motion picture in technicolor about a modern girl returning to the ancestral home and one critic declared: "Even Virginians won't like this." The reviewer of a rival paper thought otherwise. "Southerners may go for this, but Northerners will want none of it," he commented.

From this you would think the film would relate to the War. It doesn't at all. It is just a bit of nonsense that doesn't harm anybody but then neither does it make much sense.

What this town needs is a play starring Katharine Cornell, and with "The Duchess" in re-hearsal this need will shortly be met. Al Jolson has gone to Arizona. The surprise "sleeper" hit of New York is the movie "Night Train." Look for it.

THE COMPANY'S LOCAL CAMPAIGN IS SPRING OPENER. Every Spring we look forward to the opportunity afforded by the April tire sales feature which Goodyear organizes to stimulate business for us which is also as well a contribution toward safer driving. F. A. Mixon, local Goodyear dealer, who told The Reflector that his company had just placed a 36-inch season-opener, campaign to extend from April 16 to 26.

Featuring the lines of the brand new G-3 All-Weather, Marathon in standard and reversible sidewall types, and the All American, successfully introduced last year in five sizes, the 10-day campaign marks the first big selling promotion of the company this year, Mr. Mixon declared.

Fact that there will continue to be considerable bad driving weather yet this Spring with heavy rains creating slippery pavements, the matter of buying new traction is, in the opinion of Mr. Mixon, a most important factor, coupled with the point that as soon as highways get hot the traffic will be heavier and then, if there are tire failures on crowded roads, the resulting potential is likely to much greater in toll of injury and property damage.

Because the Goodyear tire line has been improved since in old times on new, there are few car owners who, needing good rubber, will want to pass up the sale opportunity to equip their cars for Summer driving. Tires sold now are protected by lifetime guarantee, and while prices are still stable and ample supply of rubber maintains to keep them thus, now is still the best time to get properly equipped for Summer.

HEART'S HAVEN. Chapter 30. Brett Explains. "Because I've decided against making a fool of myself," Brett said savagely. "Because I'm having a hard enough time being noble about this, without getting myself in deeper. There's no use talking about a thing unless you can do something about it." "I—I don't understand what you mean," Eve said dreamily. She had picked up an odd sea-shell and was turning it over in her hands as if she had never seen such an object before. Brett looked at her downcast face and jammed his hands into his pockets to keep from taking her in his arms.

"All right, then—if you must have it in words of one syllable," he said fiercely. "I love you. Do you understand that? I love you." Eve looked up, the color sweeping across her face and making her eyes more than ever the same shade as the water at her feet.

"Yes, I understand that," she said quietly. "Then everything's fine, I suppose," Brett went on bitterly. "You've another conquest to add to your list—another man who couldn't resist you. Of course, not much of a conquest, really. Not a society guy or one with money. Just a queer fellow who likes odd houses and has to work for a living. It won't be much to laugh about with your friends, will it? But just the same to some girls, making a man fall in love is part of a game. Well—you won't!"

"Brett! Brett! Brett!" she protested. "No—let me finish," he went on swiftly. "I've got a right to say something for myself. No matter how many men have said 'I love you'—nor how many others may say it in the years to come—you won't hear one say it and mean it as I do. You're young and gay and pretty; but if you were old and tired and sick, I'd still want nothing so much as to hold you in my arms."

Together. Eve abandoned the seashell and went over to where he stood, looking turned away from her, looking at the plane. "Why don't you?" she inquired. "Why don't I what?" "Hold me in your arms." Brett looked at her, astonishment and a sternly repressed hope struggling for expression. Eve smiled at him, her eyes tender.

"I love you, too," she went on. "I'm afraid not the same way—because I can't imagine loving anyone who isn't big and strong, as you are, with curly dark hair and stormy eyes. I even love the stubborn way your mouth sets, when you get angry—like you are now." "Well," Brett finally managed the name Eve shook her head. "That's over," she explained. "I found out I was in love with you."

Brett's arms were trembling as he reached out and folded her in them. He held her lightly, as if afraid she would disappear if he clasped her too close. "But—but I haven't anything to offer you much except myself—and a job. You might have a necklace of diamonds, Eve—I can only give you this kind of a necklace." He bent his head and gently circles her throat with a string of light kisses. Eve, laughing and breathless, said gaily, "I'll never wear any other jewels never!" "My darling!"

over that they would be back in six weeks, ready to finish up the house. Again Brett assured them that he would have it almost ready for them when they returned. Gina looked speculatively at Eve-Like Nell, she had noticed how friend's deep contentment, and she suspected the cause. But she knew that Eve would tell her everything a little later, so she stifled her curiosity. The goodbyes were hasty.

Eve could scarcely see the lonely figure that stood on the shore, waiting, as the plane motor began to roar. For a minute she was tempted to run back and stay with Brett.

Gina, curled up next to Ham, sighed happily and put her head against his shoulder. "You know, darling," she said dreamily, "I think we'll keep the name, Heart's Haven. It seems so appropriate." Ham murmured some sort of assent, but it was Eve who said decidedly: "Don't you dare change the name. Gina Goodell, Heart's Haven's is just perfect." She smiled at Julie and the older woman, her eyes suspiciously bright, leaned over and kissed her gently on the cheek.

Greenies Start Practice Sessions For Coming Season

FULL SESSIONS START MONDAY

Eleven Players - Batterymen Mostly - Already Here

Eleven members of the Greenville baseball club—mostly pitchers and catchers—took the field this morning for the second practice session in preparation for the opening of the season May 8. Seven players answered the call yesterday.

Fans are not only invited to go out daily and watch the Greenies batterymen get limbered up and in shape for the opening, but are urged to drive out to the park if they have the time and lend encouragement to the players.

Greenville opens this year in Wilson on Thursday, May 8. The first home game will be Friday when Wilson will come to this city. Plans already are being made to have a gala local opening day to give Skipper Rube Wilson and his protegee off to a good start.

Among the players here are five pitchers, Bill Severin and Bill Teller, members of the hurling staff last year who made a good record for a seventh place club; Fate Keel who comes here from Gastonia upon strong recommendations, all right handers; Lefty Long, who was here in the 1939 season, but not with the Greenies last year, and Melvin Adams, another left-hander, who played with Hickory last year, winning 12 and losing seven.

Lester McGarrity, who worked behind the plate for the Greenies last year, and Bob Hicks of Durham, new catcher signed by the local club, also worked out today.

Others here, in addition to Skipper Wilson, are Arthur (Sonny) Kracke, second baseman on last year's squad; Harold Forbes, local player who was utility man last year, working in the outfield and also catching, and Pete Carroway, outfielder from Greene county.

Spring training is scheduled to get in full swing next Monday morning with a score or more players taking to the field.

Birth of Columbus

Professor Dr. Dudolf Hennig, a German scientist, in a study of the life of Christopher Columbus, fixes the time and place of Columbus' birthplace as September or early October, 1451 A. D., at Genoa. Historians have debated both time and place.

With a mighty heave, President Roosevelt once again threw out the first ball to mark the opening of the baseball season as the Washington Nationals and the New York Yankees met in Washington. Left to right: Rudolph Foster of the White House staff, Harry Hopkins (behind Foster), Col. Harry Hoover, Mary Ann Gray of Orlando, Fla.; Stephen Early, presidential secretary; President Roosevelt, Maj. Gen. E. M. Watson, W. W. Richardson, Washington baseball club official.

TO DECIDE ON PEANUT QUOTA

Farmers To Go To Polls On Saturday April 26th

Raleigh, April 15.—Peanut growers of North Carolina, numbering some 35,000 persons, will have the opportunity on April 25 to vote on three-year marketing quotas. E. Y. Floyd, AAA executive officer of N. C. State College, said today that one of the main issues of the peanut referendum is whether the government will continue to support price-raisers through diversion and loan programs.

Last year, Floyd said, the government spent 10 million dollars in diverting 275,000 tons of surplus peanuts into oil. This is about three times the cost of diversion in any previous year since the programs were started in 1934.

"In order to have a sound basis for a diversion program in the future," the AAA leader said, "it will be necessary for growers to adjust supply more nearly in line with market demand for the edible trade. This can be done with marketing quotas."

Floyd stated that the peanut marketing quota law, recently enacted by Congress, provides that either peanut loans or a diversion program, or both, will be available to farmers in 1941, 1942 and 1943 if quotas are approved in the April 26 referendum. If quotas are rejected by farmers, the law provides that no loan or diversion program can be offered.

About one-third of the record difficulties encountered in filming "Caught in the Draft." Paramount couldn't borrow a government camouflager, so had to build its own. Also, in search of a life-sized tank, the studio had difficulties. "We want a tank," said the procurer to one factory representative called. "Brother," came the dry voice from the other end, "You are not alone!" The studio has built its own.

Barbara Stanwyck in "Pioneer Woman" will go from girlhood to the age of 105 years—but she won't hold the record for screen antiquity even so. In "Lost Horizon" the grand lama was hundreds of years old, and in "She" the wicked heroine had been around, well-preserved for centuries.

Adeline deWalt Reynolds, 80, who made her screen debut in "Come Live With Me," is going to be a Metro fixture—one role planned for her is that of the oft-mentioned, not-yet-seen Grandma in the Hardy family series.

"I want silent fortune cakes," said Irving Reis, director of "Show Business." "They must be silent—not crackling."

Propman George Babe obliged. Cotton candy, molded and baked, opened silently for Elyse Knox and Lee Bonnell in the Chinese restaurant scene.

Gene Autry has arrived on Hollywood boulevard at last—an Autry film plus a Roy Rogers is the opening bill at the Hitching Post, former newsreel and revival theater which will specialize in "western" and outdoorsy films. This puts the "western" practically at the cross-roads of Hollywood, which is appropriate as without it Hollywood wouldn't have been Hollywood.

Barry Norton, acting and helping put on "They Met in Argentina" (of which country he is a native) tells of the New York lady who once asked him to refresh her memory—what WAS the capital city of South America?

He tells, too, of the gentleman who inquired if American typewriter sales in South America couldn't be jumped by having keys enameled in bright colors "to please the natives."

Makes you think the "good neighbor policy" came not a minute too soon.

N. Y. Stock Market
New York, April 15.—(AP)—Stocks advanced in today's market after a stumbling start and initial losses of fractions to a point or so were converted into gains of as much as 1 1/2 points.
The turnaround was accomplished on small volume and, near the fourth hour, extreme improvement was shaded here and there.
Ability of the list to extend yesterday's mild rally, brokers said, was due mainly to the belief of some that many leaders which have been hovering at or near the year's lows for the past week or so were "over-sold" and entitled to at least a moderate revival.

Announce Arrival of All-Crop Harvesters
R. F. McLawhon and Sons of Bethel, agency for the Allis-Chalmers all-crop harvesters, announced today that two carloads of the farm equipment had just arrived here for distribution in the agency's territory which embraces several eastern Carolina counties.
The harvesters are located at Fleming's crossroads, on the Greenville-Bethel highway, where the company has established offices.
Mr. McLawhon also revealed that 45 caFlods of the harvesters had arrived at Charlotte for distribution in the two Carolinas and added that this number would be only about one-fifth of the expected need for the district.

Blessings Are Plentiful In This World Of Unrest

By RAY PEACOCK
(AP Feature Service Writer)
New York—World events have placed Christianity in a position stronger today than at any time in history, in the opinion of Emory Ross, general secretary of the Foreign Missions Conference of North America.
The gain, however, has not been without a cost of life, hardship in holding ground gained, and greater expense to church members in the United States who have been left almost alone to support church work.

Ross, gray-haired veteran of missionary work, including 22 years in Africa, discussed the paradoxical situation of Christianity benefiting directly by the war which it opposes.
He sees, in what he calls "the most striking compressed migration in history," a million Chinese brought in contact with the church as they moved from occupied to free China after beginning of the "incident" with Japan.
Hungry, sick and impoverished, the Chinese were greatly impressed by the church's work in healing, feeding and educating them, he asserts.
In Japan, according to Ross, the outside force of a stronger feeling of nationalism has taken Christianity along as a fellow traveler.
"But we are a long way from our of the wood yet," says Ross. The

HEALTH DEPT. REPORT ISSUED

Activities For Past Month Disclosed In Report
Activities of the health department, as outlined by Dr. N. Thomas Ennett, health officer, at a monthly meeting of the Pitt County Medical Society, follow:
The chief activities of the Health Department for the month of March were: pre-school examinations, diphtheria immunizations, measles quarantine, school dental work, venereal disease control, cafe, meat market and dairy inspections, and maternal and infant welfare work.
"As was predicted in our last report, the measles peak was reached in February when there were 214 cases reported. For March the number dropped to 133.
"Diphtheria cases also dropped, there were 5 in February and 1 in March.
"No typhoid fever has been reported this year.
"The State-County monthly orthopedic clinic held in the County Health Department and conducted by Dr. Hugh Thompson, Raleigh, for March had an attendance of 25 patients. This clinic is regarded by us as one of the outstanding services of the local Health Department.
"Pre-school examinations were carried on during the month of March and the Health Officer examined 225 children. At the time of pre-school examinations, children are also immunized against smallpox.

ing their war-shortened resources. Loss of life among the missionaries has not reached alarming proportions.
All the gains, unusual and anticipated as they are, have no greater importance to Ross than this:
"Of all the international relationships—banking, transportation, science, Christianity and more—only Christianity has not been disrupted by war."
Another war gain recounted by Ross developed in the Dutch East Indies, where 12 of an original 15 and diphtheria.

"One significant event in connection with diphtheria immunization took place in Ayden on March 27 and 28. A committee from the Ayden Woman's Club, headed by Mrs. A. F. Rowe, with the endorsement of the local physicians, worked up two diphtheria clinics, one for white children and one for Negro children. These clinics were conducted by the Pitt County Health Department. There was an attendance at the white clinic of 40 and at the Negro clinic, there were 217. (The bad weather accounted for the small attendance at the white clinic.) The Ayden Woman's Club is to be congratulated on this fine piece of community welfare work. Now that there is a State Law requiring that children be vaccinated between 6 months and 5 years of age, and with the further requirement that all children entering the school for the first time must present a certificate of immunization against diphtheria, diphtheria should soon become a rare disease, if not actually wiped out.
"School dental work in the county under the efficient direction of Dr. A. D. Underwood continued through the month of March during which time there were 2,718 children inspected, 233 children treated, with a total of 1,142 operations and 330 children referred to their private dentists. There were 12 lectures on oral hygiene. In relationship to prevention of disease and to longevity, I know of no phase of public health work quite comparable to our dental program.
"The attendance at the venereal disease clinics for March was 1,426 as compared with 1,461 for February, while the blood tests for March were 255 against 247 for February.
"Our community sanitation or privy program is marking time for the want of a WPA project, which project is being held up on account of the lack of carpenters.
"Cafe, meat market, and dairy inspections have been pushed energetically and the question of malaria drainage, particularly in Greenville and Grifton area, has received active consideration.
"The maternal and infant clinics continue to grow. So much so that they received editorial comment in the State Health Bulletin for the month of March. The number of mothers in attendance in February was 113, while in March there were 171. The number of babies in February was 23 and in March 49. Total attendance of mothers and babies
