ARMY HOUSING SURVEY BEGUN BY OFFICIALS

Twenty - Eight New Cantonment Sites Considered

WOULD PROVIDE FOR MORE MEN

Undersecretary Of War Patterson Says Surveys To Save Money Thru Competitive Bidding

Washington, April 16. (AP)—Robert P. Patterson, the Undersecretary of War, disclosed today that the army had instituted surveys for 28 new cantonment sites which would house an additional 800,000 troops.

Patterson told the Senate Defense Investigating Committee that architect-engineers were being retained with the $15,000,000 recently made available by Congress. He predicted their surveys would eliminate excessive cantonment expenditures by making it possible to ask for competitive bids of Congress approved construction of the camps later.

The undersecretary explained to reporters that these plans contemplated the possibility of calling 300,000 additional men to the colors. He made it plain, however, that this work was being done only as a precautionary measure and said there were no present plans to make such a tremendous addition to the army's personnel, expected to reach 1,400,000 men in June.

"This is the sort of thing," he said, "which, if we could have done two years ago, would have saved a great deal of expense and time in getting the camps ready when men were called out."

If the need arises for additional men, Patterson said, the army will probably have to ask for additional legislation inasmuch as indications under the Selective Service act are now geared to produce that large a number.

Proposed Banning Convoys Faced By Apparent Defeat

British Rush To North Africa

With Germany promising the British a "double Dunkerque" at the port of Athens, Greece, and at Tobruk, Libya (1), the British are rushing imperial armies from conquered East Africa to North Africa to make a stand at Matruh (2). The Axis forces are reported to have captured Salum, just inside Egypt, and are threatening to push farther eastward in a drive to seize the Suez canal. The British stand held grave importance since it would affect the attitudes of Syria, Iraq and Iran.

WOULD GUARD U. S. EMBASSY

Marines May Be Sent For Duty At London Office

London, April 16.—(AP)—The United States was reported today to be considering sending a detachment of marines to guard the American embassy in London, as in the last war.

The embassy, which operates with large staffs of military, naval, commercial and shipping experts who daily exchange secrets with the British, hasn't even a policeman on regular duty. There virtually is no check on visitors except by an unarmed doorman.

Nearly all important British buildings, including most newspaper offices, have special guards which require visitors to show passes.

BILL BY TOBEY TO BE SHELVED

New Hampshire Republican, However, Plans Personal Plea In Support Of Bill Placing Congress On Record As Against Use Of Convoys

Washington, April 16.—(AP)—The administration rallied its forces in the Senate Foreign Relations committee today to shelve a proposal by Senator Tobey (R., N.H.) which would put Congress on record against using the navy to convoy shipments of war supplies to Britain and other belligerent nations.

Preliminary polls of committee members showed an administration majority and Senate Democratic Leader Barkley said he assumed the vote would go against reporting the resolution out for Senate debate, but Tobey, who is not a Foreign Relations member, arranged to make a personal plea for favorable action.

The committee's deliberations on the convoy question at this time assumed added significance because of President Roosevelt's statement at a press conference yesterday that American merchant ships traveling the world's sea lanes outside of prohibited combat zones would be accorded full protection.

Emphatically, Mr. Roosevelt told reporters such protection was not a question of policy, but a matter of law. Some legislators speculated that his statement meant, in effect, that naval escorts would be provided any time a vessel under the American flag faced potential danger in delivering her cargo.

Sex Determination Intrigues Science

Los Angeles.—(AP)—An instrument for measuring the relative alkalinity or acidity in the human body is being put to use on a wide scale in an effort to enable parents to dictate in advance the sex of their children. It was invented by Dr. A. O. Beckman, once a professor at the California Institute of Technology.

A theory on which several research men are working, according to information received here from both English and American sources is that increased alkali in the mother's system favors the birth of a boy while a preponderance of acid determines a girl.

Facing Emergency

Appearing before a new senate defense investigating committee in Washington, Secretary of War Stimson (above) warned the committee that the United States faces a "dangerous emergency" which "may be prolonged."

MANY DEAD IN MEXICO QUAKE

Thousands Homeless, Killed And Injured Uncounted

Mexico City, April 16.—(AP)—Thousands were homeless and the dead and injured still were uncounted today as the government rushed aid to stricken cities and towns of seven states in the wake of devastating shocks in Mexico's southern earthquake belt yesterday.

Communications were crippled and the full magnitude of the property destruction and human toll, especially in the more remote sections, may not be known for days.

Colima, capital of Colima state 275 miles west of Mexico City, appeared to be the hardest hit of the towns able to communicate with the capital. Gov. Pedro Torres Ortiz radioed that half the city's 15,000 residents were homeless, dead, or injured.

Colima volcano, near Colima erupted. Gov. Ortiz said, kindling forest fires that seriously menaced the shattered city.

Mexico City sustained damage estimated unofficially at more than one million dollars when heavy shocks wrecked buildings and started a fire in the industrial area that leveled an entire block.

The tremor, which began with violent shocks lasting five minutes in Colima, tapering off in a series of lesser tremors, apparently centered in the historic earthquake center of Chilpancingo, about 50 miles inland from the Pacific coast resort town of Acapulco.

(Chilpancingo is about 700 miles due south of Laredo, Texas.) Destruction and undetermined numbers of casualties were reported from Guadalajara, capital of Jalisco state and Mexico's second largest city, and a dozen other cities across the country as far east as Vera Cruz state, which borders on the Gulf of Mexico.

NORTH IRELAND SUBJECTED TO NAZI ASSAULTS

Bombs Rained On Ulster In Prolonged Nazi Raid

RIVAL BOMBERS TRADE ASSAULTS

Nazis Attack Many Areas Of England; Royal Air Force Assaults German Naval Base Of Kiel

London, April 16.—(AP)—The German air force carried the war to northern Ireland again last night, raining bombs over a large part of Ulster in a prolonged attack which apparently equalled in intensity simultaneous raids on many areas of England.

At the same time, the RAF swept across the channel to attack Kiel bombing that North German naval base for the 38th time since the start of the war.

The British made no immediate mention of any plane losses, but declared six German raiders had been downed over England.

(The Germans said British night raiders had dropped bombs at several places in northern Germany killing two persons, injuring others and destroying buildings. They declared very strong Nazi bomber formations had participated in the attack on northern Ireland, effectively blinding military objectives.)

A communique issued in Belfast said the German assault on northern Ireland, which lasted several hours, was "vicious and indiscriminate" in some areas and expressed fear casualties would prove heavy. Damage to industrial premises and residential property was acknowledged.

It was the second sustained air attack Britain's north Irish allies have suffered, following by exactly one week a sharp assault in which nine persons were reported killed.

The government said the raids were on a "fairly heavy scale" and reported some damage was done to industrial premises as well as to private homes. Casualties, however were undetermined.

One of the areas hardest hit was the big northwest coast port of Liverpool.

Adopt Recreation Program For City

By O. A. HANKNER

The children of Greenville will soon have an opportunity to take part in a city-wide recreation program—a program designed to give them a chance for play and recreation during out-of-school hours, Saturdays and summer vacation periods.

At present, the recreation program will no doubt place its main point of emphasis upon providing for the leisure-time needs of the children, giving all of them an opportunity to engage in their favorite play activities. The playground and recreation leaders are attempting to provide attractive, orderly and well-designed areas which will present a pleasant setting for play; where boys and girls are given an equal chance to engage in a variety of activities; where many different skills may be developed in arts and crafts, in music, in dramatics, as well as skills in team games and individual sports; where fair play is the rule, so that children will enjoy going to the playground, knowing that they will be treated kindly and where they will get a chance to play fairly according to the rules of the game.

As the program for the children takes shape the adults will also be given an opportunity for engaging in wholesome recreational pursuits. The leaders are planning groups where softball, badminton, tennis may be played, where groups may learn to swim, to dance, to sing, to play a musical instrument, to make things from wood, leather, cloth and metal; to paint, to draw, to mold and to try their hand at dramatics.

A number of individuals have been asked to contribute time, materials and funds for the city recreation program. These citizens have been most generous in their support. The continued cooperation of everyone will do much toward giving Greenville safe and well supervised play and recreation centers.

The California State Automobile Association points out that it takes 30 per cent more gasoline to travel at 60 miles an hour than to travel at 40.

Enemy positions and transport columns on the Escarpment road west of Salum have been bombed with particularly good results, the communique added.

The ships also have shelled El Gazala air drome to the west of Tobruk, it declared.

GAIN SHOWN IN LIQUOR SALES

Defense Projects In Wet Counties Boost Liquor Sales

Raleigh, April 16.—(AP)—Defense projects and an increased defense tax accounted for a $130,000 increase in the sale of legal liquor in North Carolina last month, State ABC Chairman Cutlar Moore said today.

Much of the difference may be attributed to the $2.25 increase in defense tax, which became effective last July, Moore said.

In Cumberland, site of Fort Bragg, the liquor revenue tripled. The ABC income there mounted from $39,381.15 to $110,583.70 and placed the county in first place among the 26 wet counties.

The same thing happened in Onslow, site of Camp Davis, where the total hopped from $4,035.55 to $14,695.

Sales reported included: Beaufort, $20,019.70; Edgecombe, $32,295.50; Green, $3,459.55; Lenoir, $25,768.10; Nash, $21,413.65; Pitt, $32,056.55; Vance, $15,281.50; Wilson, $30,124.95.

College Outlines Plans For Summer

The Summer Session of East Carolina Teachers College, two six-week periods running from June 5 to July 16 and from July 17 to August 23, will place special emphasis this year, say the authorities of the College, on courses in administration and supervision for those wishing to meet the demand for qualifying principals and supervisors, on those in library science to help prepare teacher-librarians, those in physical education for part-time teachers of health and physical education to help meet requirements that go in force in July, 1942, and on graduate work in administration and supervision, secondary education, English, history, and social science.

Superintendent Ray Armstrong of Goldsboro, one of the outstanding superintendents of the state, will have charge of the work in administration and supervision. Miss Martha Guenther, who came to the East Carolina Teachers College library staff this year from North western University, library, will teach three library science courses the first term, and again the second if there is a sufficient number wishing them. Coach O. A. Hankner will teach the courses in physical education.

Miss Jean Melver Lane, supervisor of art in Winston-Salem, will be a member of the public school art faculty the first term.

Practice teaching in the grades will be offered the first term. There will be special demonstration classes in the training school open to a limited number of experienced teachers who wish only to observe the work. Any class on the schedule for the summer will be open to auditors by permission of the instructor upon payment of a small fee.

One of the dormitories will be reserved for married couples both of whom are registered for work.

For recreation, there are tennis courts, swimming pool, baseball field, volleyball court, weekly motion pictures, and entertainments of various kinds.

Struggle May Ultimately Decide Fate Of Aegean Kingdom; British Circles In Athens Admit Savage Thrusts, But Declare New Defense Line Holding; Unified Yugoslav Resistance Collapses

By The Associated Press

Wide-open battle flamed along the entire British front in Greece today, and the Germans acknowledged that Hitler's blitzkrieg invasion was meeting "stubborn" resistance after previously asserting that the Allies were in headlong retreat.

"Our troops are now in contact with the enemy along the whole of our front in Greece," the British Middle East command said tersely.

It was apparent that a climactic struggle which may decide the fate of the Aegean kingdom was fast developing.

DNB, the official German news agency, said hundreds of British prisoners, including engineers—from the English Midlands, Australia and New Zealand—had been captured by Nazi infantry in "hard fighting" in the mountains.

British quarters in Athens said German panzer spearheads were executing savage thrusts, but declared that no where had they overshot the new allied defense line.

The apparent collapse of Yugoslavia, coupled with a 65-mile German break into northern Greece, gave a darker turn to events for the allies, however, in the Balkans.

London conceded that the situation in Yugoslavia was bad.

Hitler's high command reported the capture of Sarajevo, central Yugoslavia, where the assassination of Archduke Franz Ferdinand touched off the 1914-1918 World war, and declared that "thousands of Serbs" were surrendering.

The British likewise acknowledged that the pressure of Nazi panzer divisions—striking on the allied right flank and pouring through the lofty Stalitsa pass to easier terrain to the south—was increasing visibly.

The Greek legation in London asserted, however, that several "weak and doomed" Greek forts, isolated in eastern Macedonia when the Germans captured Salonika, were still holding out under terrific artillery and dive-bombing attacks.

Information reaching London indicated that Yugoslavia no longer had uniform control over her armies but it was believed that they would continue to fight as guerrillas.

The German high command which last week asserted that the Serb army was "destroyed," declared today:

"The remnants of the Serbian army are nearing dissolution. The number of prisoners and the amount of booty is increasing hourly."

Premier Mussolini's high command said Italian troops had captured Yugoslavia's chief naval base at Split in a 240-mile thrust down the Adriatic seacoast, and that the town of Erseke, Albania, 30 miles south of fallen Coriza, had been re-taken from the Greeks. The Fascists were said to be pressing on toward the nearby Greek frontier rapidly approaching a junction with the Germans.

Rep. Dies To Seek Vacancy In Senate

Orange, Texas, April 16.—(AP)—Rep. Martin Dies, (D-Tex.), outspoken chairman of the House committee investigating un-Americanism, today formally announced his candidacy for the Senate to fill the vacancy created by the death of veteran Morris Sheppard.

Ardent foe of Communism and Nazism whose investigations have dug into communities from coast to coast, Dies has long been regarded as a possible senatorial candidate in Texas. His announcement was the second one for the special election which must be held before July 9.

Turn To White House In Coal Mine Dispute

Washington, April 16.—(AP)—Representatives from southern coal producing states sought intervention by President Roosevelt today in an effort to settle disagreements which have kept many soft coal mines idle since April 1.

They turned to the White House after southern coal operators told them that "we have done everything we possibly could do" to settle wage differences and pave the way for a working contract for the next two years.

Cho Club.
Yesterday afternoon at her home on Library street, Mrs. Henry Harrell entertained the Cho Club. Lovingly spring flowers added freshness and beauty to the living and dining rooms. The club members were delighted to have back with them Mrs. Jack Spain of Washington, D. C. and Mrs. Joe Van Hoy of New York City. Mrs. Spain is a member of the club, and Mrs. Van Hoy, the former Miss Helen Spangler, was a member before going to New York to make her home.

Miss Jane Hadley presided over the business meeting. At this time the joint book club luncheon, which will take place April 20, and the "Bundles for Britain" project were discussed. The club voted to make a contribution to the "supervised playgrounds" work. Announcements were made of the Garden Tours, with teas, of today and tomorrow, and of next week's "Art-Festival Week" at the Woman's Club.

Following the business session, Mrs. W. S. Bost gave an interesting treatment of "Opera." She told of the appreciation of opera, and sketched the sources and development of opera, calling attention to the best and most popular ones. In closing, Mrs. Bost gave resumes of two outstanding operas, "Die Meistersinger," by Richard Wagner, and "The Emperor Jones," by Louis Gruenberg. Mrs. Bost's program was greatly enjoyed by the club.

Inter Se Club.
On Tuesday afternoon the Inter Se Club was entertained by Mrs. W. H. Taft at her home on Fifth street.

Mrs. L. M. Buchanan, who had the program for the afternoon, gave a very interesting paper on Edna St. Vincent Millay, that contemporary poet which she chose to discuss. A sketch of Miss Millay's life, including her happy but poverty-stricken girlhood when she was already determined to become a poet, her years at Vassar which she entered at the age of twenty-one, her early struggle as a poet, and her present life when she is free to devote herself to her work, revealed her as a vibrant, attractive, but non-conforming person. A discussion of her works revealed her as one of our greatest American poets, severe critics having ranked her sonnets close upon those of Shakespeare and Milton.

Mrs. M. K. Blount presided over a short business meeting, after which the hostess served a delicious salad course. Guests for the afternoon were: Mrs. K. W. Cobb and Miss Elizabeth Titsworth.

Mr. James McClain, who painted in Concord, North Carolina, the largest mural in the South, will also be on the program. Miss Green will read the religious drama, "The Terrible Week," by Charles Kennedy, at a meeting of the Literary Department, Sunday afternoon, April 27. The members of the A. A. U. W., the Business and Professional Woman's Club, and the book clubs have been given special invitations to attend the meeting.

Mrs. Hicks Corey announced plans for annual Book Club Day on April 29. They plan to have Mrs. Inella Fletcher, author of "Raleigh's Eden" speak at the luncheon. Mrs. Reynolds made a plea for more workers at the Bundles for Britain headquarters. Mrs. J. C. Wooten gave a very interesting synopsis of "Random House," by James Hilton. It is the story of a man who suffers a temporary loss of memory when he is hit by a bomb which explodes at "random." After three years his memory is restored but the three years are lost to him. In the ensuing years he is married and becomes established in business but is haunted by vague memories of the three-year interlude. At the close of the meeting, refreshments were served by the hostesses, assisted by Miss Hazel Elsom and Mrs. Hicks Corey. A pink and green color scheme was carried out in the refreshments and the beautiful table decorations.

Tar Heels To Back Bill For Federal School Aid

Reflector Bureau
By HENRY AVERILL
Raleigh, April 16 — North Carolina's school officials and leaders are preparing to go all the way down the line in support of Senate Bill 1313, a federal measure which would be of tremendous help in enabling the state to comply fully with U.S. court decisions requiring equality of salaries between white and Negro teachers.

Julie Warren, executive secretary of the North Carolina Education Association, probably Superintendent of Public Instruction Clyde A. Erwin and perhaps others will go to Washington April 28 for a committee hearing on the bill.

Introduced by Senator Thomas of Utah, the measure would appropriate $300,000,000 annually as a huge "equalization" fund to be distributed to state school systems on the basis of a four-point determination of need for assistance.

Primary considerations will be problem created by (1) preponderance of children in rural schools, (2) special situations created by increased strain on school finances due to national defense projects, (3) situation created by migratory labor.

In addition, however, provision is made to give consideration to problems created by "racial minorities" and financial difficulties created by federal court decisions holding that states must fully comply with all the constitutional provisions for racial equality of opportunity.

Mr. Warren estimated that North Carolina would get better than average consideration in apportioning the federal funds because of its predominantly rural population, the location of numerous defense projects in the state and the existence of a wage differential between white and Negro teachers. He added that

North Carolina is much better circumstanced with regard to equality of salaries than are most of the southern states.

He estimated that North Carolina would receive not less than $1,000,000 annually if S. B. 1313 were to be enacted in its present form. He predicted easy sailing for it in the Senate, but forecast very tough going in the House, where the education committee is controlled completely by a group hostile to any equalization of school opportunities through federal appropriations.

Mr. Warren cited Tennessee, Maryland and Kentucky as the only states which can possibly be called "southern" in which the equalization of teacher salaries isn't any longer a real problem; but said that North Carolina would need only something like a million and a quarter additional money to eliminate completely the existing differentials against Negro teachers. He pointed out that the state has been moving steadily toward this elimination for several years, the 1941 General Assembly specifically earmarking something like $200,000 for that use in the first year of the next biennium and half a million in the second year.

Of course it would not be possible to use all the federal funds for reduction of the differential, but there is no doubt, Warren declared, that the federal board administering the fund would allot quite a respectable portion of the state's share to that end.

The whole matter of backing this federal bill has just been discussed at length in Atlanta, where representatives of all the southern states met. It was unanimously decided to back the measure to the limit.

What the position of North Carolina's congressional delegation will be is not yet certain, but Mr. Warren believes that senators and representatives will support the plan. Senator Josiah Bailey has frequently voiced opposition to the general principle of voting federal money to aid the states in all sorts of things; but he has also made it clear that if this sort of thing is going to be done, North Carolina should get its share. In this case North Carolina would be one of the principal beneficiaries. That should insure Bailey's support.

Strength For The Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

CHARACTER WILL OUT

Robert Moffat went out from England in 1816 as representative of the London Missionary Society, and for almost sixty years labored among the primitive tribes of South Africa. He converted the ferocious chief Afrikaaner and turned a horde of blood-thirsty savages into a people who appreciated and cultivated the arts and beauties of civilized life.

Once upon his return to England on furlough, he was received by the king who reverently uncovered his head in the presence of this great Christian. And a few days later the members of Parliament rose to their feet to show their profound respect for a man who had done so much for God and country.

EVERY LITTLE BIT HELPS

Announcement yesterday that a pickle company wished to contract for 150 acres of cucumbers in this county this season should prove attractive to some of our Pitt county farmers. This is another opportunity for some of our farmers to make some extra money out of some of their acres that have been taken out of tobacco production.

TIME TO QUIT STALLING

With some progress being reported from day to day in the settlement of various strikes in defense industries, there is hardly a day that passes that some new strike to hinder progress of our defense program does not develop or is not threatened.

Since the first of the year more than a million and a half man-days have been lost in vital industries as a result of strikes, and the end of all this trouble is not yet in sight. When one tries to imagine how much greater would have been our progress in getting ready for the struggle that is ahead of us had there not been this great loss of work, it is not hard to see why the public is becoming aroused over the situation and is demanding that something be done now.

Throughout the country young men are being conscripted for military service, and the fathers and mothers in the homes from which these young men are taken are not going to be satisfied to see our all-out defense program hindered or wrecked by the acts of racketeers or foreign-inspired labor leaders.

Washington Daybook

Washington. — Yugoslavia has been called the land of unpronounceable names. That's not the half of it. You can't spell 'it' either.

Crossword Puzzle

- ACROSS 1. Eccentric rotting piece 2. Pungent 3. Touch lightly 12. Title of Mohammed 13. Means of communication 14. Slender final 15. Oriental commander 16. Flowering shrub 17. Gave food to 18. Convey legally 20. Dwell 22. Fleshy fruit 23. Fagan red 24. Sharp and harsh 26. World's highest mountain at any time during this world mess. It's even possible that you read a story one place and the same story somewhere else and don't recognize it because the towns are spelled so differently.

Take a nice little three-letter word like Nic, the city at the head of the Vardar river valley. I have seen it spelled Nis and even Neez. It could just as well have been Neez or even Neeche, or Neech. The point is that the last is probably closest to correct—provided you subintimate the "i" and soften the "ch."

Telling Easier Than Doing Skopje, another Vardar valley city, also has been importantly in the news. I think I can tell you how to pronounce this, but telling will be a lot easier than the pronouncing. First, it's Skope. From there on it is e-ye, but the "i" isn't that kind of a sound at all. Phonetically, it is subintimated to a liquid sound that is practically not pronounced at all, but run together with the unaccented "ye" sound.

Is your jaw broken? Are you completely fed up with Yugoslavia? Well, even if so, don't stop now. We're just beginning. The reason for all this goes back to the fourth and fifth centuries. The Slavs from the Volga basin in Russia were pushed ahead of Attila the Hun until they settled in their present locations. They brought their language with them. It has changed about the same as early English, Irish and Scotch have changed to modern English—maybe not so much. The thing that a lot of Americans cannot understand is that although Yugoslavia is made up of Slovenes, Croats, Serbs, Montenegrans, Bosnians and whatnot, it is linguistically just a little United States and there isn't as much difference between the dialect of the Slovenes and the Serbs as there is between a broad-a Bostonian and a dropped-r Mississippian.

We Don't Have The Letters All this I got from knocking on the doors of Yugoslavians who live around Washington, but that isn't the explanation of the strange spellings and the fantastic pronunciations. I got that by ringing doorbells, too. The answer is that there are no English letters or even perfect combinations of letters to approximate letters in the Slavonic alphabet.

For instance, there are three c's in Yugoslavia—and I don't mean CCC. There is the "c" which is just plain—but the sound of it in English is similar to the "ts" or "t" in Tsar (formerly the Tsar of the Russians). Then comes the "ch" with a little "v-mark" over it. That's like the second "ch" in church. If you think there is no difference between the first and second "ch" just say it over 28 times. The third "c" has a left-slant accent over it and that is like the "ch" in the Spanish "buena noche" meaning "good night"—and by now you should have reached the aspirin and said same in English.

There are a few rules about Yugoslav (sometimes spelled Jugoslav) but I doubt if they will help. In most cases the accent in any word is on the first syllable. "A" is always "ah" (as in Boston); "e" is always "eh"; "i" is always "ee"; "o" invariably is "oh"; and "u" is "ooh." From there on, you are on your own—But so is every one else who was born this side of Ljubljana, so don't let it worry you. If you want to spell Belgrade, "B-e-o-g-r-a-d," they can't send you to the foot of the class.

Last year Bryant Thompson of Hamlet formally announced that he would be a candidate for Governor of North Carolina; though he never got around to putting up the $10 necessary to qualify him for the primary race. Now, your reporter learns, Mr. Thompson is a candidate for his local board of aldermen. He has been defeated for township constable.

There has been much talk about the tremendously rapid growth of Fort Bragg's population and about the big influx of people into Wilmington and other defense project sites; but in the excitement everybody has overlooked, so far as your reporter is aware, the fastest growing incorporated town in the state. Take a look at your comparative census figures and you'll learn, perhaps to your surprise, that Carolina Beach, resort near Wilmington, showed an increase of 571 per cent between 1930 and 1940. The 1930 lister found only 95 inhabitants. The 1940 snooper discovered 637 residents.

Oscar Pitts will be named head of the North Carolina prison system on or about May 1.

If that doesn't come to pass you can see this column and its conductor—though you'd have a fat chance of getting anything except a judgment.

The Capitol's spring cleaning orgy has gone so far that you can look to find somebody working almost anywhere in the corridors.

Without defending Raleigh or Wake county politics (though they probably are no worse than those of other counties and cities in North Carolina) it seems going a bit far to hold the capital city and the county containing it responsible for the sins of Charlie Abernethy against the state election laws—yet that's what an editorial in one of the papers of the Piedmont seems to infer.

Rube Pleased With Way Pitchers Are Coming Through

GOOD WEATHER IS BIG FACTOR

Skipper Says Workouts Proving To Be "Wonderful"

Manager Rube Wilson of the Greens expressed optimism today following another "wonderful" workout by pitchers and catchers here for a week's training before the full squad arrives Monday.

"The weather has been fine and if it keeps up the pitchers and catchers will be ready for the arrival of the rest of the squad on Monday," declared the local pilot.

All of the pitchers are in fairly good shape, the manager asserted adding that the summer weather being experienced now is a big factor in helping the boys get in tip top shape.

Eugene Breese, right-handed member of last year's pitching staff arrived in time to take part in the workout this morning. With the arrival of Breese all members of the hurling staff of last year have made their appearances. Freddy Caliguri is with the Wilmington, Del. club, now training in Rock Hill, S. C.

Another right-handed pitcher, a young prospect by the name of Hurst from Pennsylvania, also made his appearance for today's workout.

Harry Jenkins is expected to show up tomorrow or Friday and all members of the squad will arrive during the week-end to start regular training on Monday of next week. The season opens three weeks from tomorrow.

to go with the Weigands if you get over there. And—well, damn it don't go." He said it with an effort. A young instructor has to make his way.

She said nothing.

"Eileen, you aren't going to—Eileen, you know what I want—"

She said, slowly, "Jordan, I'd like it's got me all strung up. A radio job—even a little one—it might lead anywhere. I'm dying in coils to do it." She could not help stopping for a moment just to tease him. She felt his heart hurrying against her white organdy shoulder. Then, in mercy, she went on. "It would mean taking the last few hundred dollars of my father's insurance. They can't give anybody enough money to live on, the Weigands; only a chance at being heard—perhaps snapped up for a network sustaining program or even something bigger. It's a swell gamble. But—"

She was going on to say that it was not a gamble she could afford to take. In another moment she would have said that. And in the next Jordan would have said the next thing. And Eileen Gardner's life would have been settled. A year's secretarial work, and the rest of her life married to young Professor Estill. Singing at teas now and then. Continuing off and on to be a secretary by the hour for pin money.

A nice life. A nice man. . . . After all she wasn't the first—it flashed through her mind—to be the top girl of her year, and then settle in to an ordinary, pleasant, married life. The world wasn't quite such a wide-open oyster as it had been once upon a time. Her lips opened to say it.

Somebody cut in—Grant Huhn, the class cutup, his gown illicitly billowing behind him. He was a big, long-armed fellow, wide-mouthed, sallow and gay.

"Hey, monopolizing the Queen of the May!" he shouted. He swung Eileen round once, and then set her on top of the bar. "Man that wants to dance with Queen of May has to grab for her!" he proclaimed.

The band banged. The Negroes across the eddying lamplight smoke, guffawed. She stood daintily among the glasses, her small satin-clad feet together, her wide ivory skirt caught tight, laughing. A half-dozen men made a snatch for her. She sprang to one side of the bar. She jumped. Arms caught her and swung her down and out onto the crowded floor, and whirled her in to a corner.

"Come On—Dance!"

She looked up. It was a complete stranger.

"Just a little chance-taker, aren't you?" inquired a casual, amused, strange voice. Not a voice she knew; the clipped r's of the east, the half-English intonations of smart prep schools.

She looked up to the face above her.

His smile flashed over her warmly. The sort of smile that made a girl smile back before she knew it, knowing perfectly well that he did it all the time to all the girls. Long gray eyes; slim; tall; thick fair hair blown as if he had been driving or flying. Leather jacket.

He had been flying—a helmet swung from his arm, the long lashes were dusty. And a quick, amused laugh, as she looked up startled. "Got two minutes? I have—just," said the man. "Come on, dance."

He pulled her into a half-open door. Jerry's own private room where you had to pay extra. The light was low, the music had incredibly gone sweet for this moment. In fact, the orchestra was fairly sweeping it.

"Someday I'll find you, Moonlight behind you. True to the dream I am dreaming. . . . He swung her into a waltz; they danced like one person, Eileen's wide skirts sweeping about his overalls.

"Swell," he said. "I fly two thousand miles, and lookit, I get a reward. Best little dancer in the world falls off a bar into my arms. . . . Darling where's a joint called Onderdonks?"

"Onderdonks?" Eileen threw back her head and laughed. "Good heavens, handsome stranger, if you fell all that way to the Onderdonk party, you're due for a disappointment. Not so hot." She gave him the address.

"You see," he said seriously. "I always keep my word. If I say a thing I do it. I tell the truth. Aside from that, not too many virtues."

Eileen felt that crazy sinking feeling that your heart does when the man who has just called you darling talks like that. There had been a dozen people in the party that was going with Edith Willesdon to South America; delegates and hangers-on, and just-for-the-riders; and some of them, she'd noted as she sneaked off in the direction of Jerry's, were young and pretty girls.

"Important as I?" she demanded. "Nothing could be as important as you. I could see that. Tell me about you, beside being Queen of the May and jumping off bars."

"Please, I just graduated." She was mock-innocent.

"Black mark for brains. Never mind darling, go on."

"I'm wavering between going secretarial and doing radio. Tell me which to do."

"Do radio. Then I'll hear you. In fact, it will be the only way I can, after one o'clock tonight. What kind of thing?"

She laughed. "Oh, lightning-change impersonator."

"No kidding, I know. Singing. Right?"

"She laughed. She sang, swinging there in his arms, to the beat of the old Noel Coward number: 'Let it all come true, Let me love you, too, Someday I'll find you again.'"

"Gosh," he said, "that's a good voice. And I tell you what you do when you're on the coast-to-coast hookup with that. You just say, when you get through, 'Hey, Martin, this is the graduate that you jumped off the bar. Telephone me care this station, enclosing five box tops.'"

HUNTERS HUNTED
Sacramento, Calif. (AP) — With the foreign, transplanted ringneck pheasant flourishing in California and providing much sport in the brief hunting season, game warden find a problem on their hands in the primitive loop-type of snare. Recently in a small area, 35 of these were found, and in a single month 30 persons were convicted of illegally taking pheasants.

Someday I'll Find You

YESTERDAY: Eileen Gardner has been graduated from the university just a few minutes, and already faces a choice of three careers. She can be a career woman, she can marry Jordan Estill, she probably could get a job singing on the radio. Just as she is about to slip out to a party the president of the university summons her to meet the commencement speaker.

Chapter Two
Bright Stranger
Eileen liked Miss Willesdon as she came close to her. You couldn't help it, her personality was so strong, so immediately charming. A great lady who was also a publicist with something still of the adventurous young girl in her.

If she's ridden a white horse at the head of a suffrage procession long ago at Eileen's age, it had been as much for devilry and excitement as for a cause, you could see that. She had probably been a force then; she certainly was now.

"You wanted to meet some of our young people." Prexy was saying to Miss Willesdon. "This is Eileen Gardner. Not very big, but we think she'll be one of the ones who will go far."

And Miss Willesdon's warm voice as she took Eileen's hands in both of hers, was answering. "Ah, these young things, free to go their way! They're worth all we went through I hope you do go far, my dear."

Eileen liked her. She hoped she would be the right answers. She responded with vague cordiality to Prexy's aspiration of seeing her shortly at the Onderdonks; and slipped through the mill of elders who wanted to shake Miss Willesdon's strong, diamonded hand. It had a wedding ring, she noted.

She pulled Jordan's sleeve as she passed him, jerked her shoulder in the direction of the front steps. They met in his car in five minutes and were off to Jerry's.

Party
Jerry's was in full swing. It was thick with smoke from the colored paper festoons along the ceiling to the small, littered bar. She had been a little delayed, and the few people who weren't collegians were already shrinking into corners with an air of being not wanted.

The girls, in their ladylike sweeping white frocks, and the boys, gray or dark-suited, gowns forgotten—except for one clowning youth who had worn his—were noisily surging about the bar. A few were already out on the floor in a string doing something which began as a Conga and faded into a snake dance.

Eileen was in the midst of it, her shrieks a reversal of all that earnest meditation on the platform, when Jordan grabbed her. He was flushed and his glasses were a little askew. "Hey, look out, she'll propose to you Jordy!" shouted a fellow instructor.

Jordan's devotion to Eileen was so well-known that everybody shouted. He laughed, and said cheerfully. "There was a lot to that idea. It would save us fellows a lot of trouble."

"Who was she, Jordy?" Eileen asked as they swung into the crowded floor of the little place. "The speaker, I mean. I thought what she said was crazy, but she wasn't anyone you could dismiss. She was a person."

"She's a person, all right. They're kneeling around her right now over at the Onderdonks. She was the great beauty of the old suffrage movement, very young, very dynamic. And she married a millionaire philanthropist; I forget who, he's dead or divorced now. Apparently she's on her way, with an official commission of some sort, to South America. Their stepping off here was because of some tie-up or other with the Onderdonks. . . . Eileen honestly ought to be over there."

"What for?" demanded Eileen nonchalantly. She leaned back a little in his arms. "Jerry's is more fun."

"Well—it's expected."

"The Weigands are over there," Eileen said irrelevantly. "They telephoned me this afternoon, at least the she-Weigand did. Be sure to meet her there."

Jordan's arms nipped closer. His voice was alarmed. "Eileen, you aren't planning to go off and sing on that shoestring of a WXNC, are you?"

She shrugged. "Why not?"

"Because—because it's too far away. Because it might lead to nothing at all. Or—"

"It might lead to your going somewhere else and never coming back."

"It was you," said Eileen, "who wanted me to go to the Onderdonks!"

"Leen, you devil! You don't have

LABOR LEADER FLAYS SOLONS

Some Legislators, However, Praised By Fink

By HENRY AVERILL
Raleigh, April 16.—Labor, which got nothing but a great big bunch of razzerries from the 1941 General Assembly has, through C. A. Fink, president of the State Federation of Labor, handed out scallions and orchids on its own account—there being more bouquets of the former than the latter.

As the Number One handicap to Labor, Mr. Fink lists Speaker Odus Mull of the House:

"Labor owes its greatest loss and biggest handicap in the 1941 session to the fact that O. M. Mull was elected Speaker of the House. With almost any other man in that position, I believe Labor would have had a better break. Speaker Mull is a manufacturer, of the old school of thought, with a Chamber of Commerce complex and a Rotary Club philosophy. In his appointment of members of the committee on Manufacturing and Labor he selected a majority of men from the agricultural sections, small towns and corporation lawyers. He refused to add to this committee men suggested by Labor who know something about industry and its problems. Speaker Mull's philosophy is just about as antiquated as Noah's Ark was in the British fleet. He apparently has failed to grasp one single idea of the New Deal, although he claims to be a Democrat of the first water and is, I understand, playing with the thought of becoming a candidate for Governor in 1944. Mr. Mull would run well with Hamilton Fish, Joe Martin and other reactionary Republican leaders, but he isn't even tainted with the New Deal's philosophy. I have the highest regard for Mr. Mull as a man, and it is only his philosophy that I find fault with."

Senator E. C. Gregory of Salisbury gets an orchid as "the outstanding legislator insofar as support of labor is concerned."

Other senators to whom "labor is greatly indebted" were listed by Fink as Senator Tom Gold of High Point, Lee Wilson of Davidson, and Gene Brooks of Durham.

Over on the House side Fink said that "our best friends" were George Uzzell of Salisbury and Julian Allsbrook of Roanoke Rapids.

Turning back to scallions, he said: "McEachern (Laurie), chairman of the House Labor committee, Burgin of Henderson, Taylor of Waynes and Wallace of Lenoir, were, perhaps, the most outstanding labor haters in the lower house. Interests of humanity seem to have no place in the thinking of Taylor, Burgin, Wallace and many others of their kind in the legislature. These men even sought to change the present 55-hour law to as to remove its operation in the case of agricultural workers engaged in processing farm products. The intent of the bill for exemption from the state law of this group was not in the benefit of the farmer, but for the benefit of the canning industry."

"Uzzell and Allsbrook fought this exemption in the House, during which Uzzell charged that labor had received absolutely nothing at the hands of this legislature. But the long-hour advocates won in the House."

Hollywood Sights and Sounds

By Robin Coom

Hollywood.—As if life weren't complicated enough, here's a lovely lady to inspire more fretting about the injustice of it all.

It's Madeleine Carroll. How is anybody ever going to know whether she's an actress or not? There are about three schools of thought on the subject. One, those who say she's the "most beautiful thing in pictures and can't act for your apples; two, those who say she's the "most beautiful thing in pictures and is a competent performer; three, those who say she's the "most beautiful, etc., and don't give a hoot whether she can act or not."

You note from the above no diversity of opinion regarding the Carroll beauty, but a great variance concerning the Carroll dramatic talents. This leads us straight to the serious heart of the problem: does a beauty have a chance to be an actress?

Will Madeleine Carroll ever get an Oscar, even if she earns one? Or will she always be the "decorative," the "beautiful," the "adorning" Miss Carroll—just plodding along in a beautiful rut of beauty?

Belonging personally to School 3 (the don't-give-a-hoot, etc.), I still wondered how Miss Carroll felt about her art, and at lunch the other day I bluntly queried.

"I'm grateful for whatever looks I have," she said, "but what I've always wanted is to be an actress. I've even flattered myself, sometimes, that little by little I've been making progress in that direction."

"Thank heaven, I've more of a sense of humor about it now than when I started on the stage. Then I was sure I'd be nothing short of a second Duse—no matter how long it took or how hard I had to work. I remember one of my first parts—a four-line bit as a maid. I took it so seriously I wrote to managers in London that they must come up to catch me in the play! And then when I had a chance to go into films—I thought I'd never stoop so low, except perhaps under an assumed name and hiding the fact from my friends. They all told me it was the thing to do. More money and all. So I went into films, and a lot of people are kind enough to say I'm pretty, and I'm glad, because it helps in this business—but I still want to be an actress."

Miss Carroll was wearing a military uniform of some sort for "One Night in Lisbon," and she was looking—as usual—beautiful. If you so remarked, she would depreciate a bit, but still not coyly. "I can't be so impressed, myself," she might say, "because I have to see this face first thing in the morning—every morning."

All of which doesn't answer our burning question about Miss Carroll and a possible Oscar—but you knew the answer all along.

She can't have one. Even if she out-Bette Davis nobody would know it because she's a beauty. It's an injustice, it's an outrage—unless we can persuade Miss Carroll to join School 3 and not give a hoot.
