ALLIES WITHDRAWING FROM PASS Indicated Greenland Partly Occupied By Axis Forces

HINT DROPPED BY ROOSEVELT

Chief Executive Also Declares That U. S. Neutrality Patrol To Operate As Far In The Seven Seas As May Be Necessary For The Defense Of Western Hemisphere

Washington, April 25. (AP)—A possibility that Axis forces partly occupied Greenland, big Danish island in the Western Hemisphere now under American protection, was disclosed by President Roosevelt today in what he frankly termed a surprising statement.

At the same press conference Mr. Roosevelt said that the United States neutrality patrol would operate as far into the waters of the seven seas as may be necessary for the defense of the Western hemisphere.

But emphatically the President said that the administration was not thinking of convoys at this time. He described the task of American patrol ships as the reconnaissance of ocean areas to determine whether an aggressor ship might be coming into the Western hemisphere.

Convoys, on the other hand, Mr. Roosevelt said, was escorting merchantships in a group to prevent acts of aggression on them. The United States neutrality patrol, he added, could not be made a convoy by calling it one any more than a cow could be turned into a horse by calling it a horse.

The President also told reporters that Americans who have taken the attitude that the dictatorships will be victorious had adopted a dumb attitude which was not good Americanism.

Declaring that he was "agin" dictatorships and that everybody was Mr. Roosevelt said that America was willing to fight for democratic processes. He, for one, the President added, would not lie down before dictatorships.

Mr. Roosevelt's remarks on Greenland, the huge Arctic island off northeastern Canada which the United States has agreed to defend, were brief and not elaborated. A reporter asked whether the United States would have a safe sea road to Greenland.

After saying that he hoped so, and also hoped there would be no more acts of aggression, Mr. Roosevelt went on to say he was not at all satisfied that part of Greenland was not now occupied by the Axis.

The president added, however, that he would not say positively that this was so. He replied negatively when asked whether the occupants were fifth columnists, replied affirmatively when asked whether the United States was doing anything to counteract Axis moves in Greenland. A moment later he remarked that Greenland statement was surprising.

FESTIVAL OFF TO GOOD START

First Day Of Annual Affair Declared Success

By MRS. EVA BERRY HARRIS

Opening day of the seventh annual Community Art Festival yesterday was marked by delightful programs and by a large attendance. Registration began at 9 a. m., when the exhibits were opened to the public for the first time, and continued throughout the day. A number of out-of-town people were in Greenville for the all-day program and lunch was served at the club building for club members and visitors.

The festival opened with programs and demonstrations which were planned especially for home-makers. Perception of guiding principles in the selections and arrangements of furnishings and decorations in the home was the theme of the day and was most effectively followed and brought out in each of the features of the day's program.

Before the special program of the day began, Mrs. J. H. B. Moore, president of the Woman's Club and general chairman of the art festival presented the mixed chorus of the audience.

NAZIS REPORT HEAVY TOLL ON BRITISH SHIPS

Claim Total Of 872 Since Outbreak Of Conflict

ADMITS LOSS OF SUB COMMANDER

Also Acknowledged By Berlin That Big Naval Base Of Kiel Successfully Bombed By RAF

Washington, April 25. (AP)—A bold administration decision was believed in the offing today to bulwark the effectiveness of the aid-to-Britain program and the policy of unyielding resistance to the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo Axis.

The concerted demand by three cabinet members for decisive action in the present war crisis was generally interpreted here as a pointed forewarning that a development of top magnitude was near.

Secretary of State Hull, Secretary of the Navy Knox and Secretary of Agriculture Wickard, addressing widely different audiences yesterday, all spoke out in unusually strong language.

"The safety of this hemisphere and of this country," asserted Hull, "calls for resistance wherever resistance will be most effective." To wait for actual invasion would be "utterly short-sighted and extremely dangerous."

The declared policy of the nation, he added, meant that aid to Britain "must reach its destination in the shortest of time and in the maximum quantity."

"So-ways must be found to do this," Knox struck an identical note. "We cannot allow our goods to be sunk in the Atlantic," he said. "We shall be beaten if we do. We must see the job through. This is our fight."

Wickard's theme was that if the United States is "to continue as a great nation, it must act like a great nation." He summarized the chronicle of the war as a "story of too little and too late."

"Millions of Americans," he declared, "are getting sick of that story." Just what type of action might be presaged by the three addresses was a matter of conjecture, with considerable attention paid to the fact that both Hull and Knox laid heavy emphasis on the necessity of seeing that lease-lend supplies go to England safely.

Some capitol sources deduced that plans were in readiness to utilize ships of the United States navy to protect shipping lanes. At least in that half of the Atlantic which the administration considers in the Western hemisphere. Some saw hints of a formal reassertion of America's historic insistence on "freedom of the seas"—the issue in the war of 1812 and again in 1917.

Refugees And Nazi Cars Jam A Greek Road

In the midst of German reconnoissance cars, Greek refugees move wearily along a road somewhere in the war zone of Greece. Nazi war machines and crude vehicles, carrying personal belongings of the refugees, vie from a place on the road.

Berlin, April 25.—(AP) The Nazi navy has "brought into port or confiscated in occupied ports" 872 ships totaling 1,900,000 tons since the beginning of the war, the German high command announced today.

Yesterday and the day before, the high command added, 71,500 tons of British shipping have been sunk in British and Greek waters, including 30,000 tons by "one warship operating overseas."

The high command last night said that 89,000 tons of shipping had been sunk in and about Greek waters in the last three days.

This raider was said to have sunk 29,000 tons previously.

It was "acknowledged," however, that two ace submarine commanders, Commander Otto Kretschmer (known to the British as the "Wolf of the Atlantic") and Lieutenant Commander Joachim Schepke, had failed to return. (The British have announced that Schepke is dead and Kretschmer a prisoner.)

It was acknowledged that the British had succeeded in bombing Kiel, Germany's big naval and ship-building base, and other areas in northwestern Germany, but the high command declared that only residential areas were hit and that there was "no military or war economy damage anywhere."

Some civilians were victims, however. One night chaser shot down four Bristol Blenheim bombers in 45 minutes, it was declared.

Mayor B. B. Sugg made a brief talk preceding this morning's tour which included places needed to be included in the clean-up campaign.

Making the tour were chairmen of the different committees of the Junior Woman's club, W. T. Kyzer of the Chamber of Commerce, Jonathan Overton of the Rotary Club, T. E. Wilson of the Merchant Association.

The tour was conducted by Dr. N. Thomas Elnett, health officer and T. W. Bivens and J. T. Welch county and city sanitary inspectors respectively.

Tomorrow the committee will meet with the principals of the various schools in an effort to work out means to interest school children in the campaign.

The suit, filed by Albion Dunn, attorney for the plaintiff, charges that Mr. Allen was killed when his car struck one of two of the company's trucks which were parked on the concrete portion of the Plymouth-Washington highway. The accident is alleged to have occurred between 6 and 7 o'clock last Christmas-eve night.

The complaint sets forth that Mr. Allen was a salesman for the Plymouth Motor Company of Plymouth at the time of his death and was living in Washington. Mrs. Allen now lives in Pitt county.

Officials Instructed Inspect Fire Trucks. The Greenville Board of Aldermen, which for some time has had under consideration the purchase of a new fire truck, again discussed the matter last night, after which it was decided that Mayor B. B. Sugg, Alderman C. H. Clapp, chairman of the committee, and Chief George Gardner of the department visit other cities and inspect fire trucks of various kinds and makes.

Although the city has delayed the purchase of a truck, it was pointed out that a considerable sum will be saved through the investigations being made.

Grimesland Finals Start On Sunday. The commencement program of the Grimesland Schools will begin Sunday evening, April 27, with a baccalaureate sermon to be delivered by Rev. J. G. Phillips, minister of the Bethel Methodist church. Special music will be rendered by the Glee Club, under the direction of Miss Selma Davis.

On Tuesday evening at 8:00 o'clock, final exercises will be held with an address to the seniors by Commissioner Edwin Gill, Commissioner of Paroles. Mr. Gill is an officer in charge of public service of commissioning prisoners and of recommending to the Governor the prisoners on parole. In keeping with his position and with graduation night, Commissioner Gill will have as his subject, "Education as a Prevention of Crime." Following the address, diplomas will be awarded. The certificates will also be issued the members of the seventh grade at the final exercises.

Tom Cannon Select'd For Officer Training. Nine cadets of the senior class of the Fork Union Military Academy have been designated to attend the 1941 Reserve Officers Training camp and will report at Ft. George G. Meade, Maryland, on June 13, 1941. These cadets will be eligible for commissions as second lieutenants in the Reserve Corps upon completion of the camp. These cadets include Tom Jackson Cannon of Greenville.

The academy is busily preparing for the war department inspection for honor schools, which will be held on May 12-13, 1941.

Roosevelt Describes Lindy As Civil War 'Copperhead'

Washington, April 25 (AP) — President Roosevelt placed Col. Charles A. Lindbergh today in the category of Civil War "copperheads."

The president was asked at a press conference why the army had not taken up Lindbergh's commission. The famous aviator, who frequently has criticized the administration's foreign policy, is a reserve colonel.

The president remarked that in the Civil War, both the Confederates and the Northerners took on liberty-loving people from other countries, and both let certain people go.

When reporters did not react to the name, Mr. Roosevelt said that Vallandigham was an appeaser who wanted to make peace in 1863 because he felt the Northerners could not win.

Still replying to the question about Lindbergh, Mr. Roosevelt said there also were an awful lot of appeasers at Valley Forge who urged George Washington to quit because he could not win against the British. He advised reporters to read what Thomas Paine had written on the advisability of quitting.

Mr. Roosevelt was sharply critical of those Americans who, he said, have taken the attitude that the dictatorships will surely be victorious.

This, he said, is not good Americanism. And it is a dumb attitude, he added.

The revocations are effective on April 29.

It was pointed out that these four places were not singled out, but that others would be investigated if complaints are received and if the complaints found justified, will be ordered closed.

The board last night also adopted a city ordinance making it illegal for any place to sell any kind of wine between midnight Saturday and midnight Sunday.

In the future, beer and wine licenses will be renewed only upon the approval of the chief of police. New applicants are required to file a petition in writing with the board and it was indicated that these petitions will be examined more closely and a thorough investigation made before licenses are granted.

T. E. L. Class Meeting.

Mrs. J. L. Fleming was the gracious hostess to the monthly meeting of the T. E. L. Class of Memorial Baptist Church Thursday evening at her home on Greene street. Mrs. Fleming, also president of the class, called the meeting to order.

The theme of the program was "Faith and Works." "Trust and Obey" was softly played on the piano, after which the class sang one stanza of the same hymn. Mrs. J. D. Simons was in charge of the devotional period. To the delight of all present, she very earnestly and convincingly told how a great Sunday school class can be built by faith and works, using the fourth chapter of Nehemiah as the scripture basis. In rebuilding the walls of Jerusalem, said she, "the people had a mind to work and they prayed unto their God and thus brought their work to a victorious completion." Likewise a great class can be built.

Dr. Simons gave a report of the canvassing committee which has recently made a canvass of the church members for funds for the erection of the Educational building. Dr. Simons also told how we might get the new building—namely, wanting it, praying for it, working for it, and giving for it. It was a joy to have our pastor present and to speak to us on the above-named subject.

Mrs. Simpson and Mrs. Hearst were very welcome visitors at this meeting.

The hostess served a most delicious sweet course.—Reported.

The Business and Professional Woman's Club will sponsor the closing program of the Community Art Festival which will be held Monday night at 8 o'clock at the Woman's Club. Mrs. J. D. Simpson, president of the Business and Professional Woman's Club, will preside. A varied program on the arts has been arranged as a culmination of the week's events of the Art Festival. Mr. James L. Fleming, who has spent much time in France, will speak on "Art in the Streets of Paris." Two short movie films will be shown at this time. "Stone Carving" by Anna Hyatt Huntington shows the artist at work on a crude piece of marble, following the process from the first steps of carving to the finished product, which in this case is an interesting beast of the jungles—the jaguar. The work which took months for this well-known woman sculptor to do is reviewed in this film in a brief 15 minutes. The old film to be shown is "Creative Design in Painting," by Professor Charles Martin of Columbia University. Mr. Martin, a landscape painter, shows the layman how to begin a painting through the organization of lines and the use of art principles. He explains and demonstrates the process of a water color painting.

The Monday evening program will close with music by the Sycamore Hill Baptist choir led by Arthur Noycutt, director. Admission is free and the public is invited to attend.

Tarboro butchers have combined to put up the price of beefsteak to 12-1/2 cents a pound. The Southerner says: "If the quality were improved with the price we could all be happy."

The prominent northern men who are interested in educational matters and who have been visiting southern schools, were particularly impressed by the conditions at the State Normal Industrial College for young women at Greensboro, North Carolina. The old North State appropriates $40,000 a year for the support of this school, and the training is as thorough as that in any normal school in the country. Among the visitors were Bishop Doane, the Rev. Lyman Abbott and Dr. Peabody of Harvard.—Philadelphia Record.

GREENVILLE HI NEWS

By SIDNEY JOHNSON

"Let me give you a helping hand out, ut, ut, ut, that's the wrong place, there that's right." You guessed it! It's candidates and managers helping uncertain students make up their mind which way to cast their vote.

The above paragraph is a gross explanation, in fact there was a regulation made by the candidates that no politicking was to be done at the polls.

Winners of the election will be announced tonight on the high school program broadcast over station WGTC.

It has been predicted that a second ballot will be necessary for the presidency and vice presidency.

Who's Who

The school has been invited to enter one student for every hundred in the school in Who's Who in American High Schools.

Bruce Mayo, Fenner Corbett, Jack Edwards, J. N. Williams, Herbert Lee, J. B. Kittrell, and Betsy Hobgood were chosen.

Broughton Appointments Keep Experts Guessing

By HENRY AVERILL
Raleigh, April 25.—The strange pattern of appointments made so far by Governor J. Melville Broughton has practically all the political observers in these parts downright amazed and guessing blindly what the next workings of the gubernatorial mind will be like.

There isn't a iota of doubt that the jobs awarded up to this writing have been dished out principally on a strictly factional political basis; but every now and again there has bobbed up an appointment which seems so out of line with the political philosophy of the case as to contradict the political theory completely.

Thus, side by side with the naming of Judge Hunter to the Utility commission was the appointment of Harry Tucker to the same utility board, managed the Broughton campaign in Mecklenburg county. That accounted for him, Tucker has never been conspicuous by his political activities for or against anybody. His seems to have been a pick made on a basis of hunting the right man for a big job.

Then came the highway commission appointments and sticking out of the general mass of purely political designations was the appointment of Contractor George W. Kane of Roxboro, who didn't seem to have even minor political backing for the place.

Those two appointments (Tucker and Kane), however, are exceptions and they do not obscure the obvious fact that the governor, seemingly working more closely with Osear Pitts than with anyone else, is sticking a thumb into every pie where a political plum may be found.

The plum-probe isn't by any means confined to purely state affairs. It has extended all the way down into the counties, and even to the appointment of welfare boards in these local units. For instance, there's the Mecklenburg case in which pressure direct from the top of the heap lead to the ousting of one of the members of that county's welfare board for his sudden ascent to political power.

Not that he wasn't politically active in previous years. As far back as 1932 he was one of the state employees whose energetic campaigning for Ehringhaus brought such caustic criticism for the Pasquotank man's opponent, Dick Fountain. Even so, Pitts, until the election of Broughton, never rated very high in the political scale. Now there seems no question that he is the "king bee."

The only disputing of this statement may come from members of the Ralph McDonald group, many of whom are now openly boasting they are the real powers behind the throne.

Appointments enough haven't been made yet to pass final and certain judgment on the exact nature of the influences which are proving most effective with the governor. There's a speaking suspicion growing even in the ranks of those who think they are close to him that Mr. Broughton can't be figured as sure to yield to any particular form of blandishments. There are indications that he has taken political advice in big doses on some appointments—about as much evidence that in other cases he has outdone any block of marble in proving adamant against efforts to sway him by political pressure.

Without going beyond the bounds of fairness, it seems safe to say that the Governor is at least as fond of power as any of his predecessors of the past couple of decades; and that he is quick to resent even comparatively mild criticism of his actions.

Likewise it seems safe to predict that nobody who opposed the governor has any chance for a major appointment. Not that Mr. Broughton is especially vindictive or a set practitioner of the spoils system. He appears to be very sincere in his belief that anybody who voted for one of his rivals showed such a lack of good judgment as to make him ineligible for an important post.

Students Of ETC Get High Ranking

East Carolina Teachers College will be represented in the seventh edition of "Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities" by nineteen seniors who have been leaders during their four years on the campus. They include five from Greenville and Pitt County, Barbara Keuzenkamp, Betty Keuzenkamp, George Lautares, Patricia Brooks, and William Ward James; two from Wake County, Maise Castlebury of Apex and Ruth Polard of Garner; Irene Mitcham of Goldsboro, Kathleen Lewis of Wilmington, Annie Laurie Keene of Smithfield, Hazel Starnes of Hickory, Ellen McIntyre of Red Oak.

For years there has been much speculation over reason for the political pairing which made Wake's Herbert Gully the Man Friday of Senator Josiah W. Bailey, and the same sort of wonder has now been aroused by the Broughton-Pitts combine.

The outstanding ability of Mr. Pitts as a prison expert has seldom been questioned, even by his worst enemies; but it is hard to account

Mary Frances Hardy of Maury, Walter Rogers of Wooddale, Myra Godfrey of Jonesboro, Jerome Donaldson of Georgia, Annie Allen Wilkerson of Roxboro, Joyce Campbell of Lucama, and Rachel Templeton of Union Grove.

Six students who were included last year as juniors are still on the campus and will be listed again in a special section of the book. They are William Merner of Durham, Hazel Owens of Fountain, Erlene Sawyer of Powell's Point, Rebecca Shanks of Oxford, Rebecca Ross of Aurora, and Doris Blalock of Black Creek.

The book, which is a compilation of brief biographies of outstanding students on American campuses, lists only juniors and seniors. It brings together information on extra-curricular activities of these students as well as their scholarship record and is sent to personnel directors of large companies.

Seniors Of G. H. S. Will Present Play

"Night Must Fall," a three-act mystery, will be presented by the seniors of Greenville high school in the high school auditorium Wednesday evening, April 30. Herbert Lee, outstanding dramatics student in the high school is directing, as well as acting in the play.

Herbert Lee and Betsy Hobgood play leading roles in the production which centers around the country murder of an old lady. J. B. Kittrell, Anna Lee Register, Ruby Taylor, Sidney Johnson and Frances Swindell for the supporting cast in the play.

Miss Imogene Riddick and Miss Evelyn Buchanan, faculty advisers of this year's class, are aiding in preparing the play for production. Stage Managers Billy Guiley and John Horne have been in charge of making scenery for the play, as well as directing back-stage activities.

The cast, stage managers and directors of "Night Must Fall" have been working since the first week in March to make this one of the best senior productions ever given at the high school. Proceeds from the play will go into a fund to provide a new curtain for the high school stage, according to Bragg Mayo, president of the senior class.

How An Ohio Flood Swept

Dykstra Into Washington

(Second of three articles about the chairman of the defense mediation board.)

By MORGAN M. BEATTY
AP Feature Service Writer
Washington, April 24 — A callow college instructor of 1905 by the name of Clarence Dykstra took a plunge into the ocean of political science, and remained for life-long swim.

So it was that he was prepared by 1937 for the Ohio river flood waters, when they threatened to wreck his efficient city management of Cincinnati, O., and paralyze a city of a half million people.

Working sometimes 40 hours at a stretch, he vindicated business efficiency in government — his life-long sermon — even though people smilingly called him "Dictator Dykstra." And he pulled the city thru one of its worst crises.

The man Dykstra was tempered for leadership by alternate joy and tragedy, personal triumph and personal defeat.

On earning his diploma in the University of Iowa in 1903, he went to Chicago University for postgraduate study, thence to a Pennington, Fla., private school as an instructor. Ohio State called, Columbia, too, and ultimately the University of Kansas in 1909. There he climbed out of the instructor class, demonstrated his capacity to inspire intense loyalty in students.

In his early years, Dykstra definitely had not learned by doing. He taught, and later regretted the teaching, strong, centralized government. But those were healthy, those formative years. His recreation was tennis, basketball. He even coached one team. When he became a full-fledged professor he married a Michigan sweetheart from the heart of the Dutch settlement country in that state — Ada Marian Hartley. He took his bride to Kansas and they settled down to a professor's life in Lawrence. A daughter was born, and Dr. Dykstra became head of the school of political science.

Politicians Ribbed Him
People generally admired the governmental theories of young Dykstra, thought his preaching of business efficiency in government, the answer to boss-ridden city government everywhere. But practical politicians ribbed him gently.

"No experience," they said. "Modern management methods are swell on paper."

Near the war's end, the civic league of his native Cleveland gave him a chance at experience. As secretary, he helped draw up a governmental consolidation plan for the city and Cuyahoga county.

Non-partisan, independent, he abhorred practical politics as such. And for the first time in his life, Clarence Dykstra failed — failed miserably. Neither his intelligence, his charm, nor his diplomacy dented the heavy armor of local politics. The plan was torn up.

Chicago's City Club, another reform organization, beckoned, then the Los Angeles City Club. His parents had preceded him westward and he thought California sunshine would help his ailing wife. Los Angeles heeded his story of governmental efficiency, made him commissioner of water and power, then personnel director of that organization.

In 1926, the first Mrs. Dykstra died. A year later Dykstra's sister introduced him to Mrs. Lillian Kate Rickaby, widow of a Pennington College professor, and like himself, an active non-partisan among the rank and file of voters. They were married and Dykstra adopted her son, gave him his own name.

... Made Cincinnati A Model ... Came the depression. Cities everywhere faced interest charges they couldn't pay. Cincinnati challenged Dykstra; made him manager. Soon after 1930 the Ohio city became a national model for the city management form of government. Critics said it was actually a triumph for Dykstra, not city management.

Anyway, "Dike" Dykstra learned how to get along with the politicians as well as with the reform elements.

In January, 1937, WPA Administrator Harry Hopkins, President Roosevelt's right hand man, traveled through the Ohio river flood country surveyed tragedy, damage and disaster. Nearly everywhere Hopkins ran into understandable confusion.

But at Cincinnati, Harry Hopkins got the surprise of his life. Relief was well ordered. Workers were cheerful, confident, surefooted, and sure-minded.

"Why?" he asked. "Dike Dykstra," they said. In the office of Cincinnati's city manager sat the man Dykstra. He faced a battery of insistent telephones, a stream of conferences day and night.

Saw The Answer Hopkins saw at once what was happening. Dike Dykstra imparted his confident leadership to his department heads and through them to workers in the flood waters. He inspired the public with his example of leadership in a crisis. "A remarkable job," said Hopkins. "This man knows what the public needs in a crisis. It's leadership and confidence. He's giving it to them. A great price of public relationship!"

And so it was that Dykstra's name came forcefully to the attention of President Roosevelt. Next article, Dykstra, the tempered optimist, faces the national crisis.

Someday I'll Find You

BY MARGARET WIDDEMER

YESTERDAY: At last Eileen Gardner has given Jordan Estill his walking papers. Jordan had objected when she took a poorly-paid radio job, and had arranged for her to sing concerts — and to marry him. But now Eileen has convinced Jordan that she must wait a long time, probably fruitlessly, and sent him away. And the reason she could do it was a radiogram from a man named Marlin whom she has seen once, and never will forget.

Chapter Ten
Answer For Marlin
Eileen stood still in his hold with that passivity which is more of a denial than any resistance. His arms dropped and she moved a little away from him.

"Good-bye Jordan. Good luck," she said.
She went into the little cottage. She took care not to be early enough at breakfast to say good-bye to the party. She, unseen, saw them driving off. Lucille Anders had seen to it that she was in the front seat beside Jordan. She went in again. It was one of the cottages which was had to be, of course — furnished with a piano. She sat down and went to work on that night's songs with her little traveling clock facing her.

Later, her nervous fingers brushed through the pile of fan mail. Yes, here it was, copied on cheap yellow paper they all used. She stared at it, trying to make it tell her more.

"S. S. Esthonia. Good for you, Eileen, so you did make the mike! New York next. Someday I'll find you! All the luck! Marlin!"

Idiot. Of course. Molly hadn't bothered to type the ship's name on the copy she had before. This was the original. She sprang up. She would wire the Esthonia. "You forgot to sign your last name, Eileen Gardner," she wrote it down; she sprang up to run and find Molly. She gripped the message tight. She took her handbag — it would cost as much as a new dress, but what of that? She went to hunt up Molly.

It took some time. Finally she discovered her, taking letters for Mrs. Weigand. She waited impatiently, until the last enthusiastic letter was done, quivering in the doorway. Molly, glancing up, nodded, said to Mrs. Weigand, "I'll be going to type these now," and slid her arm through Eileen's.

"What's the trouble, dear, want something?"
"I want this telegram sent to the Esthonia, please. Will you?"
"Crazy? You can't answer fans that cable from cruise ships, nitwit. Cost a million. Answer on the air."

"Yes, I can. I have the money."
"More in this than meets the eye," said Molly. "All right, come on — wait!"

"To get a paper with shipping news in, naturally; otherwise, I'd have to call the nearest port for you to find out, which would be more money yet. What are you, a concealed millionaire?"

"Never mind what I am. That was a — a friend of mine — I mean."
"You mean a pickup, sweet. You need Aunt Molly to keep you on the straight and narrow. I can see. Come along."

They found a paper. Molly whisked to the shipping page with an experienced hand.

"Sorry to blight your girlish hopes, Eileen."
"What do you mean?"
Molly pointed with a sharp bright nail.

"S. S. Esthonia cruise ends. New Zealand. The date was yesterday. Return trip after docking begins." Eileen's eyes dazzled.

He hadn't been fooling. He had gone to New Zealand. By now he was ashore. "I don't care," she said, "end it, and mark it 'Hold'."

"On the chance the mysterious Martin goes back to the ship? Mostly they don't, you know, they pick up another ship to go forward on. However..."

Message To Marlin
She shrugged and took it. "I think it's a sin to do for a fan but you'll learn better as you know more of fans. Some make you the great big romance of their life, but darling, they aren't the kind that take luxury cruises; it's the lonely men with isolated jobs, and the women who don't see people, or kids."

"I know. Anyhow, send it."
"If you promise not to keep this up. You'll be wasting all you own if you answer every boy that ever met you for a minute and got excited enough over you being a radio singer to wire you."
"I promise."

Molly sent it, as soon as the two girls could get to the central hall taken with her while standing on the piazza of the inn. Of course there were between six and seven thousand others who had their picture taken with Miss Davis, and who lit cigarets for her and shared her birthday cake and sat on, in, and around the aisles at the premiere of "The Great Lie" and huzzahed when she pinned the prizes, or was it roses, on the shirt-fronts of the members of the boys' choir. Nevertheless, I ask her to remember.

Meanwhile, I recall gallant pictures of Littleton, and of Sugar Hill, and the birthday greeting that spanned the river, and of oxen in the snow. Walking along its alert, new-scrubbed streets I counted 187 shop and store windows before I grew weary of counting, and each of them contained a "Happy Birthday" sign. All the streets had been remanded in favor of previous Bette Davis pictures, with the result that it was no trick at all to stroll down "The Letter" avenue, cross "The Great Lie Concourse," and turn into "Of Human Bondage Lane."

Bette, it was wonderful, I thank you for a lovely week-end, and I want you to know that I remember everything that happened. The only thing that bothers me is, do you?

Deanna's Cake For Bridegroom

Deanna Durbin, the young movie star, saw to it that her husband, Vaughn Paul, got a bite of wedding cake at the reception that followed their wedding at Hollywood. The bride was so nervous during the ceremony that her "I do" was scarcely audible.

"Dreamy, likes poetry, that sort." Molly's face was flushing as she talked eagerly on.

"And is he the one?"
Molly said "Well... sort of. We can't get married till things are better for him. Right now I'm makin' more than he is, or rather the job I'm pickin' up again when I go back to New York pays more. And he's the kind that doesn't want to live on his wife. He said — he's awfully bright — he said, 'Molly, you know how I am. If I marry a girl who earns I don't earn. I dream, I slide along, maybe I sit down on her. She hates me, maybe.'"

"What did you say?"
"I — Molly's red cheeks were red — I told him I couldn't hate him. No matter what. But I guess he's right. And as I don't intend to stop workin', the florist shop is O. K. with me. He's nearly got enough saved. He can borrow some. By next spring, maybe, even earlier."

She stood back and looked at Ris again. Bossy red-haired Molly would be just the wife for him. Eileen thought. She had probably done most of the courting.

And that took her back to the memory of the night she had met Martin. Miss Willesdon. Her impassioned: "Women have a right to tell men, honestly, if they love them... Men have a right to let women support them if it chances that way."

Molly didn't believe in that. At least, not the second clause. She came back from her daydream. Molly had spoken sharply to her, a second time.

"Haven't you any photographs?"
"Why — why, yes, a lot." Eileen spoke confusedly. "I simply hadn't bothered. I've been so busy. Does it matter?"

Molly turned and faced Eileen full.

"Yes, it does matter. If Jordan Estill isn't your sweetie, put his picture up anyway, and let the bunch think so. Go a little coy or something about it. Or somebody else, depends on what sort of a face you like. I advise it."

Molly's Irish voice was serious. It was emphatic.

Eileen said, "Look here, what is this about? You want me to look popular?"

"Just an old meanie, darling, taking the joy out of life. Eileen, the

N. C. WORKERS GET MORE PAY

Paid Ten Million More In 1939 Than In 1937

Reflector Bureau
By HENRY AVERILL
Raleigh, April 25 — North Carolina industries, 3,225 establishments in all, paid their salaried employees and wage workers ten million dollars more in 1939 than 329 fewer establishments paid in salaries and wages in 1937.

These figures are from preliminary figures of the 1940 federal census, which gathered industrial data on the last year for which they were available (1939).

The same figures show that the value of all products of North Carolina industry in 1939 was $1,421,329,578, as compared with $1,384,737,686 in 1937. The industrial production added to the value of raw material in the sum of $545,962,299 for 1939 against $475,834,443 for 1937.

The 1939 figures showed a total of 3,225 establishments with 15,470 in salary-drawing personnel and 270,810 workers for wages. Annual salaries reached $34,291,387 and annual wages were $199,289,500. Comparative figures for 1937 were 2,896 establishments, 13,139 salaried employees, 256,771 wage earners, $30,049,925 in salaries and $189,265,474 in wages.

In value of products cigarette factories led the field by so far there wasn't any second place, which was technically held by broad woven cotton goods. Figures were $332,439,765 for cigarettes, and $217,454,862 for the cottons.

In what the census termed "added value" (figured on cost of raw materials, etc.) the cottons showed a very slim lead over cigarettes, $117,829,021 to $117,581,135 with the "costs" of the cigarette establishments figured at $414,855,630 against $99,625,841 for the cotton goods.

A Tip On Thinking
Tulsa, Oklahoma. — (AP) — Clyde A. King, Tulsa banker, finds a knowledge of psychology most useful in this business.

He advises looting comfortably in a chair, feet on the desk, and perhaps a cud of tobacco in the mouth.

"The customers, by golly, use to mistrust a banker who sat up alertly, with his hat on or even within reach," he points out. "But when a banker can make himself comfortable, with his feet on the desk you just know he's a banker with an easy conscience."

Man About Manhattan

New York — I do not enjoy hiding behind a woman's skirts, yet it may become necessary to ask Miss Bette Davis to help protect me from the millions of the law.

A couple of week-ends ago there delivered to this desk a dull-looking sort of communication that I shoved aside without bothering to open and then I got on a train and went up to the sturdy little town of Littleton, N. H., for the week-end.

When I eventually returned and got around to opening that communication it turned out to be an "invitation" to jury duty in the Case of the People vs. some poor wretch who had either wrecked or stolen an automobile. I don't know which. "Fail not," it said, "under penalty of the law."

Wherefore and without further ado I call upon Miss Bette Davis, cinema star, to bear witness that at precisely the moment this jury was being impaneled I was innocently and happily surrendering to an atmosphere of maple sugar, dotted with kiwi slopes, festooned streets, and second helpings of birthday cake, high in the hills of New Hampshire. It was Bette's cake, for it was her 33rd birthday, and she was there in a pert red flannel skirt that did not reach her knees and a sheriff's badge that weighed almost as much as she does. Perhaps the authority invested in this badge will be what the doctor orders when the time comes for me to make my explanations and my manners to the authorities.

In any case I call upon Miss Davis to remember that I journeyed to New Hampshire not only to share her birthday cake and to meet her husband, whom she wedded on New Year's Eve, but to attend the world premiere of her newest picture, "The Great Lie," and that I sat on the aisle within arm's reach of her while she pinned posies, or was it roses, on the chests of the proud boys' choir which serenaded her with songs appropriate for the occasion; that I stood next to her at her cocktail party and lighted cigarets for her and had my picture

Strength For The Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

BEAR YOUR SHARE
Among the Laplanders everyone is taught to carry a pack. If you see a group of these people on trek from one place to another, you will see that everybody, even to the smallest child who can walk, is responsible for carrying a pack adapted to his strength or hers.

Two considerations emerge from this situation: the first is that modern American fathers and mothers might learn considerable from the primitive Laplanders. Too many modern children have learned everything under heaven to carry a pack. Everybody can dance, speak French, ride horseback, and swim the Australian crawl, but they know nothing about taking responsibility.

The second truth which emerges from this custom of the Laplanders is that they fully comprehend the fact that pack-bearing is just as much a part of life as eating and sleeping. When the most perfect being the world has ever known brought his life to a consummation, he did so by carrying his cross up a steep hill. Everybody and everything in the created universe bears some burden on heart or mind. Without pack-bearing there can be no life in the fullest sense of the term. To learn to live means to learn how to carry without grumbling.

TIME TO CHOOSE SIDES

While officially we are neutral, as a matter of fact, from the very beginning of the European war our country has been a non-belligerent ally of the democracies, and it seems that the time has about come when we must take up our full share of the war and be willing to carry through with the Allies if in the end there is to be any freedom and liberty in the world. Both Secretary Knox and Secretary Hull in addresses last night, correctly pointed out the fallacy of our producing war supplies for England only to have them lost in the Atlantic at the hands of the Germans. It may be true that the use of our navy might place us actively in the war, but we have already admitted that it is partly our war and that Great Britain and the British navy is our first line of defense. This being true, it is to our advantage to see to it that our first lines of defense are able to hold out against our enemies, and we use the word "enemies" literally, for the Axis powers could hate us no more even if we were actively engaged in the war. As we view the present world situation, it is a fight to decide whether there shall be freedom in the world or slavery under the rules of totalitarians, and in such a fight there can be no half-way ground or room for fence-sitting. When America enters the war, mind you, we say "when," not "if," our first action should be to notify all nations that we are entering a fight to the finish for freedom and democracy, and that the nations must make up their minds on which side they will fight. For such nations of the world as want to be free it is to their interest that the allies win, and they should be willing to put their shoulders to the wheel to help bring about success, and all those who are not willing to lend their aid to the cause of freedom should be considered on the other side and treated as enemies of the cause. No matter how hard the struggle, the forces of liberty and freedom in the end will win, but the more united are these forces at the start the sooner the victory will be achieved.

We agree with Secretary Knox and Secretary Hull that we can no longer sidestep nor avoid our full responsibility in this matter, nor can other countries that want to be free from slavery do so. The time appears to be at hand when the people who want freedom must be willing to have a hand in attaining it instead of depending on somebody else to gain or hold it for them. It's time for the nations of the world to definitely choose sides in this struggle and give of their best to bring about a lasting victory.

Washington Daybook

By Jack Stinnett

Washington - I want you to meet the man who couldn't hear. He is tall, handsome, friendly Henrik de Kauffmann, Danish minister to the United States.

There isn't a thing wrong with Mr. de Kauffmann's articulation powers ordinarily, but he certainly went stone deaf when the "Danish government" ordered him to protest the seizure of those 58 Danish ships in American ports. He could not hear again when Copenhagen denounced and ordered him to void the pact he had signed with the United States authorizing this country to take over the defense of Greenland. He saw the end of it as a member of the legation in Berlin. As minister to Italy when only 32 years old, he watched the rise of Mussolini and the march on Rome. The eight years he spent as minister to China and Japan were filled with the turbulent events leading up to war there.

In China, he met the young woman who was to become his wife, Charlotte MacDougal, daughter of Admiral William MacDougal of the U. S. Navy.

Even in the happy and comparatively quiet eight years that followed when he was minister to Norway, de Kauffmann had his hands full. It was during that period that the World Court at The Hague refused Norway's claims to a part of Greenland and awarded the whole of that land to Denmark. It was de Kauffmann's duty to smooth the troubled waters. He has worked always for close cooperation of the Scandinavian countries and is convinced the day will come when there will be a United States of Scandinavia.

No Superiors Recognized.
In the months that he has been in Washington, his only recreation has been occasional hours of simple pleasure with his family - his wife and two very attractive daughters, Tilda, 13, and Lisa, 10. His real hobbies are travel, mountain climbing, he has scaled peaks in Europe, Scandinavia, Japan, and China and skiing.

De Kauffmann presented his credentials to President Roosevelt only a few days before the Nazis marched into his country. Both de Kauffmann and the state department recognized Denmark as a government "under duress." De Kauffmann's position as a result of this is unique. Nearly all other countries over-run or conquered by Germany have governments in exile which are recognized by the United States. De Kauffmann has no such superiors.

Thus, as far as the United States is concerned, de Kauffmann is Denmark. Which explains why he can sign treaties without consulting Copenhagen and can turn a deaf ear to protests that come from there.

Short Shots

Raleigh, April 25.—North Carolina's State Employment Service is branching out into the field of offering its assistance to high school graduates and in counselling these newcomers in the field of business on the most likely place to find jobs.

The Gastonia office has reported a plan to contact every high school in Lincoln and Gaston counties, and to secure from each senior a short registration form. Seniors will be asked to come to the Gastonia office for complete registration.

Concord has started registration of all seniors in Cabarrus county and is determining vocational desires of the graduates. This office has standing orders from two firms seeking high school boys with initiative and promotional possibilities; one of the firms has requested 10 to 15 referrals per day. The Concord office anticipates no difficulty in placing senior boys.

High school students in and around Liberty are being tested for aptitude in the hosiery industry. This is the first time mass aptitude testing within the schools has been attempted in the occupational research program.

While Employment Service offices were finding eight jobs for Tar Heels in Panama, McDonald B. Fortune, manager of the Rockingham office found one for himself and has left to take up work in the republic through which runs the canal Uncle Sam worries most about.

State Auditor George Ross Pou presented each member of the Raleigh team which will roll in the national duckpin championships at Atlanta, with a rabbit foot; everting to the donee of each that it was from a special Chatham county criver caught running through a graveyard at just the right phase of the moon.

When the team got together, and its members learned Mr. Pou has given five feet from the same rabbit the auditor glibly explained that five-footed rabbits are nothing unusual down that way.

Your reporter spied John Kerr, Jr., chairman of the 1941 House Appropriations committee and a candidate for the 1943 Speakership, and hailed him as the Warren county legislator started toward the county court house.

A moment later Shearon Harris, House principal clerk, came up and joined in a discussion which, of course, had politics for its central theme.

Finally Mr. Kerr started off with the parting thrust: "I came here on legal business, but I never can get anything done. You politicians are always stopping me."

Lynn Nisbet, who so efficiently collaborated with this bureau during the 1939 and 1941 legislatures, will pinch hit in this column for the next couple of days, while your reporter goes down to Atlanta as a member of the Raleigh duckpin team which will roll in the national championships.

Two hundred child specialists from 14 southern states are gathered at the John Marshall hotel for the two-day meeting to hear reports and scientific papers on a wide variety of subjects concerning the health and welfare of children. District Inspector Visits Health Office

It was learned from the local health department today that E. B. Roach, district sanitary inspector, representing the state board of health, was in the county Wednesday and Thursday of this week conferring with the local health officer, Dr. Emmet, relative to the general sanitation program.

Mr. Roach in conjunction with J. T. Welch, city sanitary officer, and T. W. Bivens, county sanitary officer, made inspections of a number of cafes, meat markets, and dairies.

Hollywood Sights and Sounds

Hollywood—Marlene Dietrich is still and always Ye Complete Movie Star, for which, in a sometimes pale world, praise be.

The lady of the gams has added another studio to her list; the Warner domain where, as a rule, stars are called by their first names if not "Butch" and bum cigarettes as casually as they permit themselves to be bummed.

The Dietrich arrival, for the first day of "Manpower," was an eye-popping event. Her long, sleek, shiny black limousine was driven by a chauffeur in a tunic. With her there arrived on the stage a nice garden of cut flowers and greenery and a magnum of champagne—mostly tribute from satellites at Universal, her last stopover. Also there was trundled out the Dietrich full-length mirror, framed in chromium, the matching table, the matching beige-leather chair, each piece bearing a metal plate labeling it a gift from the crews of her last three films. Miss Dietrich, in the kind of clothes a gal just leaving prison would wear, made for the mirror, accompanied by Nellie Marie Stanley, her hair-dresser for the past seven years. Miss Dietrich, at the mirror, touched up her own make-up ("Nobody knows my face as well as I do") and shortly went into her scene.

Afterward George Raft, one shoe off, inquired if she'd ever seen a broken toe. After duly admiring same, Marlene and George, awaiting the next set-up, turned on a portable phonograph and did a nice habited the jeweled garter close-up—these are diamonds. . . I also have some with topazes and some with sapphires. . . Picked them up in Paris."

She was excited because Hal Wallis, the boss, had been telephoning all morning about her doing another Warner picture. She'd love to but there was one at Columbia, another at Universal, maybe another for Sam Goldwyn on her schedule. She was working hard and late, seldom took time for lunch, was too tired to eat at night, had lost five pounds and was thriving on it.

"Thriving" was understatement. The results, figuratively, were sensational. "It's the dress," she said modestly. Friendly-like, by request she exhibited the jeweled garter close-up—these are diamonds. . . I also have some with topazes and some with sapphires. . . Picked them up in Paris."

Five ECTC Students Exhibiting Art Work

Five East Carolina Teachers College girls, students in Miss Vida Wicks' classes in color and design, have had work entered in two exhibitions recently. Examples of surface pattern and design for tex-titles worked out by Patsy Whitehurst of Greenville, Annie Mackenzy of St. Helena, and Margaret Lewis of Turkey were selected by Miss Wicks to be exhibited in the North Carolina School Art Exhibition at Chapel Hill, April 7-11; and abstract designs in chalk by Anna Belle Boyd of Greenville and Frances Radcliffe of Pantego have been sent to New York to be placed on exhibition in the "Young America Paints" show, to be held in the American Museum of Natural History, June 9-13. In the North Carolina exhibition, which had divisions for all levels of work from the elementary grades through college, Miss Annie Mackenzy won honorable mention.

Prisoners With Broken Legs Put To Work

Q. E. Worthington, warden of the Georgia state prison camp at Dallas, known as "little Alcatraz," has reported that three convicts, who broke their legs to avoid work, have been put to work breaking rocks in the prison yard to deter "further leg fracturing or leg breaking in this camp." He made the statement after the Atlanta Constitution got this picture and reported the three convicts with their legs in casts were "observed hard at work breaking rocks." Casts can be seen on the feet and ankles of the men at left and in the center.

Festival Off To Good Start (Continued From Page One) Negro industrial high school. The group sang four numbers, "She Is So Dear," "Send Out Thy Light," "Somebody's Knocking At Your Door" and "My Soul Just Couldn't Be Contented," under the direction of Hugh Jenkins, director of the chorus. These members were very much enjoyed, as was the spiritual "Communion" which was sung as an encore number.

The interior architectural features and the interior furnishings must be consistent with the exterior architectural style of the house, with the scale of the house, the cost of the house, and also suitable for the family residing there.

The solution of problems involved can well make a man of training and skill—and to these I would add the personal touch which is just another way of saying that knowledge should be applied with understanding. Then it is that an interior is really created and is not merely filled with assembled furnishings.

Every beautiful object in it, whether contemporary or antique, is satisfying. As Shelly said, "A thing of beauty is a joy forever." If it has the inherent qualities of loveliness and merit, it is independent of time and unswayed by fashion.

Through neo-styles and fashions may come and go, it will be satisfying to those with an eye and heart attuned to beauty.

Through out the fields of art and home-furnishings, contemporary artists, designers and craftsmen are doing new and highly individual work, using new methods and new mediums. This is not strange for in our time we have witnessed revolution in our politics, in our social order, in our industries, in our religion.

Can you think our art would escape? Surely we should be sympathetic toward creative trends. Change is the breath of life to our modern American world, geared as it is to speed and more speed, comforts and more comforts and conveniences in living. Perhaps no woman in the world has ever lived in a more golden age than the average American woman. The architect, the designer, the craftsman, the manufacturer court her favor.

Mrs. Bloxton was followed on the morning program by Miss Lelia Higgs, interior designer of Greenville, who spoke delightfully on the subject "Spring Harmonies in Interior Design."

Mrs. Higgs, whose talk was illustrated with a beautiful display of spring fabrics, said in part: "Spring has many forms. It is a season rich in meanings and more of us is so poor in spirit that he does not respond to some evidence of beauty that it spreads before him. To the home-maker it is a practical reminder that the time has come to change her home's winter dress to spring apparel."

Whether she is furnishing completely or merely slip-covering the living room sofa, the principles involved in making appropriate selection are the same. Careful planning, skill and knowledge are needed.

It is an interesting and gratifying observation that more and more of our townspeople are giving evidence of a growing appreciation of beautiful surroundings. Each year as the seasons change we hear the remark "Don't you think Greenville

British Withdrawal in Greece Costly To Foes

Cairo, April 25.—(AP)—British Middle East headquarters announced today that Empire troops had made a further withdrawal in Greece, "inflicting severe losses on the enemy."

The British withdrawal in Greece was described by the British command as "orderly."

Heavy losses also were declared inflicted on the Germans and Italians at Tobruk, and it was said British patrols again had been aggressive at Salum, just over the border in Egypt.

"Our forward move," is continuing in Ethiopia in the direction of Dessie, northeast of Addis Ababa, the communique said.

More than 700 prisoners were taken in operations yesterday in that sector in which the Italians were said to have suffered severe casualties.

Another 112 prisoners were reported captured northwest of Addis Ababa, where an Italian column is being closely pursued.
