Government Figures Reveal Parade Of Workers

TOTAL OF 376,000 PLAC'D IN MONTH

North Carolina, With 20,902 Placements, Shows Largest Gain Of Any State During March

Washington, May 2.—(AP)—The parade of new workers into private industry, under impetus of national defense, was shown by government figures today to have attained a pace, which if maintained, would put over 5,000,000 unemployed to work within a year.

Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security administrator, reported that state employment services during March placed 376,000 men and women, 55 per cent more than in the same months last year.

Social Security Board figures made no estimates of the number of persons finding work without aid of the service, but the American Federation of Labor estimated 578,000 more workers were employed on March 31 than on February 28.

If the new job pace holds for 12 months, a Social Security spokesman pointed out, the rolls of registered, able, unemployed virtually would be cleared.

North Carolina, with 20,902 placements in March, had the largest percentage gain over that month a year ago for any state. With 1,924 placements, Rhode Island had a gain of 215 per cent to follow North Carolina.

Among increases for other states, with the number of March placements and the percentage, was: South Carolina, 4,455 and 62.

The two white men, J. H. Stokes and N. C. Kessler, were given 30-day sentences, suspended upon payment of costs. The Negro, John Bryant, Jr., was given a 60-day sentence, suspended, upon payment of $25, on the temporary larceny charge.

No court will be held Monday because of the city primary election.

DR. McDONALD MAY SEEK JOB

Talked As Candidate To Succeed Rep. Folger

High Point, May 2.—(AP)—Dr. Ralph McDonald, defeated in the 1936 Democratic primary for governor, may be a candidate to succeed the late Rep. A. D. Folger, the High Point Enterprise said today.

McDonald, a member of the University of North Carolina Extension department, was in Washington and could not be reached for comment but he was widely talked of as a candidate in the Fifth district, an Enterprise staff writer reported.

Although a member of the University staff at Chapel Hill, McDonald maintains his legal residence in Winston-Salem.

Also regarded as possible candidates when a Democratic primary is called by Governor Broughton were Frank Hancock of Oxford, a former congressman, and John Folger of Mount Airy, brother of the dead man.

Pays Penalty For Murder In Wayne

Raleigh, May 2.—(AP)—After confessing the slaying of his sweetheart and her "other boy friend," Sylvester Woodward, 34-year-old Wayne county Negro, was asphyxiated today at central prison here.

Woodard entered the gas chamber at 9:58 a. m. Deafening hydraulic fumes were administered at 10 a. m. and he was pronounced dead in 11 minutes and 50 seconds.

Woodward was convicted of shooting down his sweetheart, Lily Townsend, on the streets of Goldsboro. He also was charged—but never tried—with fatally shooting George Howard, the other Negro in the triangle.

Woodward was the 241st person executed at the prison since the state took over the task of administering capital punishment in 1910. He was the 69th person to die by asphyxiation.

The Goldsboro Negro, who weighed about 225 pounds, was one of the largest men ever asphyxiated at the prison. He died, however, much quicker than the average time, which is about 14 minutes.

Among witnesses at the execution were Paul Worler, Goldsboro police officer; W. D. Dawson, Wayne deputy sheriff; and Russell Anderson Goldsboro store clerk.

Don't Know

Washington, May 2.—(AP)—Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones said today "I don't know how long England can take the punishment it is taking now."

He made the statement in urging persons at a consumers' goods conference today to impress the seriousness of the world situation upon their neighbors.

Jones said he did not fear invasion of the United States, but said the Axis powers "can give us a lot of trouble."

He added that "Nazi stooges are infiltrating Latin America, not by the thousands but by the hundreds of thousands."

"They (the Axis power) can reduce our living standards," he continued in his speculation on the consequences of a British defeat, "we can not compete with slave labor."

Highway Body Assumes Duty

Oscar Pitts Elevated To Post Of Prison Director

Raleigh, May 2.—(AP)—The new Highway and Public Works Commission took office today and immediately elevated Penal Superintendent Oscar Pitts to the post of prison director.

Acting on the recommendation of Governor Broughton, the commission voted to retain Charles Ross as general counsel of the highway department.

R. E. Powell of Raleigh, who had directed publicity for Broughton's gubernatorial campaign, was appointed director of public relations, to succeed the late William M. Jones of Charlotte.

It was announced that Hugh Wilson, warden of central prison would become director of prison industries, and that Ralph McLean, deputy warden, would become warden.

Pitts succeeds Robert Grady Johnson, who will become chairman of the State Board of Alcoholism, Beverage Control. Pitts' former job of superintendent will not be filled.

V. Vance Baise was retained as chief engineer.

Governor Broughton, forecasting a huge road building program which will follow in the wake of the highway camps, told the new State Highway Commission it would have more money to spend, aside from bond issues, than any other commission in the history of the state.

Col. E. G. Flanagan of Greenville is a member of the new commission.

BATTLE LOOMS IN SENATE ON AXIS VESSELS

Some Oppose Turning Ships Over To Britain

MOVE DESCRIBED AS ACT OF WAR

Sen. George, Author Of Bill, Predicts, However, Some Compromise Will be Worked Out

Washington, May 2.—(AP)—An unexpectedly strong move developed in the Senate today for curbing the proposed authority of the President to turn over seized Axis shipping to Great Britain.

Projected as an integral part of legislation which would permit the president to requisition and pay for about 80 foreign flag vessels lying idle in United States ports, this provision was said to have aroused a storm of protest within the Senate Commerce Committee.

Some committee members asserted that the transfer of one belligerent's ships to another belligerent could only be regarded as "an act of war."

Chairman Emory S. Land of the Maritime Commission disagreed with this view, although Senators Clark (D-Mo.), Johnson (R-Calif.) and others took the stand that such a transfer would be a war-like gesture.

Despite reported administration pressure to keep the provision in the bill, Chairman Bailey (D-NC) said he would not be surprised if a majority voted to restrict to American use the German and Italian ships recently taken into "protective custody" by the Coast Guard. Some other committee members disagreed, however, with Bailey's appraisal of the opposition strength.

Chairman George (D-Ga.) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, who introduced the ship requisition legislation, predicted that some compromise would be worked out under which the Axis vessels could be used in American coastal trade.

As the measure was reported by a House committee, it would authorize the President not only to take over foreign flag vessels in (Continued on page six)

Mayor Sugg Buys Girl Scout Cookies

Mayor Sugg makes the first purchase of Girl Scout cookies from Edith Nesbit, a scout in Troop 2 B. The Girl Scout organization is in the midst of its annual cookie sale which will be climaxed with cookie day in Greenville on May 10. At this time cookies will be sold from booths in the downtown stores.

The question of whether the city and county will accept the proposal of the Saffair Corporation to establish an army cadet training school here will not be definitely decided until Monday, it was revealed today following a conference between Mayor B. B. Sugg, representing the city, and members of the County Board of Commissioners.

Mayor Sugg last night made a report to the Board of Aldermen and the committee representing the commissioners on negotiations carried on with O. P. Hebert, president of the Saffair Corporation, in Washington on Wednesday.

The Board of Aldermen sanctioned the proposed contract with the corporation and members of the committee from the county board at first expressed approval of the proposal, but later asked that the question be deferred for definite action until this morning. Following the conference this morning, it was decided to postpone action until the regular commissioners' meeting on Monday.

Last night's meeting of the board was principally devoted to the cadet training school proposal, with the question being argued both pro and con.

The only other important matter discussed was the proposed bus terminal. Dr. W. I. Wooten was granted a franchise to erect and maintain a bus station on the north-west corner of Greene and Fifth streets, the franchise to continue in effect during the 10 years for which Dr. Wooten has contracted with a bus company officials to maintain a station.

A representative of the Carolina Coach Company advised the board that special arrangements would be made for college students whereby buses would go to the college to take on students leaving on holidays and at the close of terms. The students also would be delivered at the college upon their return on such occasions.

The appointment was made by Mrs. George E. Marshall of Mount Airy, state commander of the division.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick called upon the citizens of Greenville to cooperate in the movement and revealed that an extensive campaign would be waged to enlist the public in the fight to control the disease.

Arabs Urged Participate In Holy War

Nazi Propaganda Barrage Indicates Efforts Aimed At Swinging Support of All Arabs To Projected Struggle Against British; Iraq Important Key To Near East Oil Reserves

New York, May 2.—(AP) Hostilities between the British and the pro-German government of Rashid Ali Al Gailani of Iraq broke out in that oil-rich Middle East kingdom today with Iraq troops opening artillery fire on British forces, a British broadcast heard in New York said today.

The report, heard both by NBO and CBS, said the Iraqis began shelling Habbaniyah airport, 90 miles west of Baghdad, at dawn and that the British were fighting back.

British women and children were said to have been taken to the airport for protection before the action began.

The outbreak occurred on the sixth birthday of Iraq's boy king, Faisal II.

The Berlin radio previously had reported Iraq troop movements and the calling up of reserves, and said demonstrations of loyalty by youth organizations in Iraq have taken place outside the residence of the premier.

The one important center in the country not yet occupied by the Iraq army is the airport, the German radio said, "and the British units which were landed have been surrounded by the Iraq troops."

New York, May 2.—(AP)—All Al Gailani, pro-German premier of Iraq, has issued an appeal to his people to take up arms for a "secret" struggle against Britain, the German radio reported today.

In a propaganda barrage of reports from the Near East, the broadcast indicated an effort is in full swing to enlist the support of all Arabs in a "jihad" or holy war in that part of the Moslem world.

Authoritative British sources admitted a critical situation had developed between British troops and the Iraq government as a result of failure of the Iraqis to withdraw a concentration of troops from about the British airport of Habbaniyah 60 miles west of Baghdad.

Iraq is important to Britain because it occupies a key position over the oil reserves of the Near East and with Syria affords the only possible line of British communication with Turkey. It flanks the British in Egypt.

A jihad is fundamentally a Moslem religious war against infidels or Mohammedan heretics or loosely any bitter struggle or crusade for a principle or belief.

Technically a holy war may be declared only by the Caliphate. It has been abolished by Turkey, however, so that any head of a Moslem sect with an influential following might proclaim a holy war and call on Moslems to support it.

One such leader is the Grand Mufti of Jerusalem, now living in exile in Baghdad, Iraq.

At the same time diplomatic activity was reported in Iran, eastern neighbor of Iraq, by the German radio. This broadcast heard by CBS said the Iran prime minister and cabinet attended a May Day reception yesterday at the German legation in Teheran.

The German radio said the Iraq premier told his people "the hour of struggle seems to be near."

State Objectives Of Clean-Up Week

Definite plans for conducting the Clean-up campaign were mapped and committees were named at a meeting yesterday at the Woman's club building of members of the Junior Woman's club and representatives of the various civic organizations, the City Street department, Mayor B. B. Sugg and Dr. N. Thomas Ennett, county health officer.

One point to be stressed during the campaign—to be actively conducted next week—will be the necessity of citizens using garbage cans with tops. It was pointed out that too many families used old boxes or barrels which can not be covered.

It was also proposed that oil be poured in ditches to kill mosquitoes and other insects. Another point stressed was that there are too many places about the city used for trash dumps.

Citizens will be used to clean up vacant lots, remove all cans and other trash where mosquitoes can breed. It also is being urged that the lots be cleaned in an effort to rid the city of snakes, as well as provide a more beautiful and cleaner city.

Miss Browning Pleases Audience.
Lucielle Browning, titian-haired mezzo-soprano of Eastern North Carolina, who is now one of the younger stars of the Metropolitan Opera Company, pleased her audience at the college last night by the strength and color of her voice and her live personality.

Miss Browning was assisted by Sergius Kagen, pianist. The singer's program was well adapted to her voice, most of the numbers having been chosen to bring out the richness in her low tones.

Though the aria "Adieu Forest" from Tschickowsky's "Jeanne D'Arc" was the most ambitious of the groups, the simpler selections like "Goin' Home" and "The Buckle" seemed to be better enjoyed by the audience. The encores included the always charming "Cuckoo Clock" and the popular favorite "Homing." "Trees" and "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life."

After the audience had scattered, Miss Browning visited with a stage full of students who came to the platform to speak to her, and sitting down at the piano as her own accompanist, sang two or three songs requested by members of the group.

After the program, Miss Browning was entertained at dinner in the home of Mrs. J. L. Kilgo and then left for New York.

'Night Must Fall.'
Although "Night Must Fall" was believed by many critics to be far too difficult for high school students to present, the senior class presented this blood-curdling three-act murder mystery Wednesday night, April 30. Herbert Lee directed the play.

In the play, Dan, played by Herbert Lee, was a homicidal maniac who killed Mrs. Bramson, Betsy Boggood, for her money in spite of the fact that he was her favorite. The role of Dora, the maid, was played by Anna Lee Register, who introduced Dan into the Bramson house where Mrs. Bramson was murdered. Olivia Grayne, which was played by Ruby Taylor, tried to protect Dan from Inspector Beisize, J. B. Kittrell, who wanted him for murder.

Miss Terance, Frances Swindell, a very English sort of person who, with the able assistance of a mustached, pipe-smoking Hubert Laurie, Sidney Johnson, and Nurse Libby, who knew Mrs. Bramson liked to be played up to and wasn't really sick, added comedy to the bloody plot.

The stage, fixed by Billy Gulley, John Horne, Paul Scott and John Collins, was so complete that it took little imagination on the part of the audience to picture the sitting room of Mrs. Bramson's bungalow in Essex, where the play took place.

Compiles Manual On Vitamins.
Mrs. Adelaide Bloxton, director of the practice house and teacher of foods in the home economics department of East Carolina Teachers College, has just compiled a valuable manual bringing together the most important of the recent materials on vitamins.

In the booklet, Mrs. Bloxton gives the earlier experimenters and summarizes their findings, listing for each vitamin also its place in man's life, its chief sources, the average amount needed, and factors in handling foods that tend to destroy it.

She has included too the 1940 material available on the less well known substances like thiamin, riboflavin, nicotine acid, and "grass juice."

This should prove helpful not only to home economics students, but to all who are interested in the subject of vitamins.

Chapter 16
St. Anthony
It was unbelievable, impossible. It was so unbelievable that Eileen took it as the merest casual thing at the time. She heard herself saying pleasantly that she quite understood. That it was nice of them to tell her they liked her. She made, ending, some little joke about the war, and the chief—did he look a little relieved?—joked back.
There was talk of another audition—another department—and she was walking down the endless corridor, chin up, the new fall coat she had brought swinging about her knees; her trimly shod feet setting themselves daintily, swiftly; her hands like ice.
She went on walking, walking through the endless corridors with their thick beige velvet carpeting, starting at black-lettered doors, passing hurrying men and women and gaily painted girls and slouching messenger boys; past bursts of music as doors slid open, moments of chatter as she passed offices.
People went along past her, it seemed, forever. Finally she realized that she was wandering around and around, instead of taking an elevator downstairs. "How silly!" she said. She spoke gaily to the elevator man. She'd come to know him, these three weeks.
Molly first raged, then consoled. "The dirty dogs! The tricky brutes!" she said. "And sure there's lots more, finer radio spots, splendid jobs, that you'll be gettin', damn them all!"
Eileen scarcely heard her at first. When finally the Irish invective pierced through her pre-occupation with the shock and disappointment, she shook her head.
"Oh, no, it was fair enough. It was in the contract. And after all, I mightn't have had that much if Mrs. Carrier hadn't worked it," she said conscientiously.
"Then get onto her again," Molly said. "Tell her to make the skunks put you back on your hour."
Eileen didn't want to do that.
But she did come to it, a day or so afterwards. You can't afford to miss out on any chances. Mrs. Carrier was sympathetic but not quite as concerned as she had been before. Her life was very full, and she had gone out of her way on an impulse the first time. Still, she had her husband write to another of the networks, and another audition came of it.

And nothing came of the audition.
Eileen plucked up courage. "After all," she said to Molly, "I had a streak of luck. I don't see why I shouldn't have some more. I haven't been at it long."
Goodhearted Molly swept her off that night, to a movie, with Rls and Nick—Myrtle was in the hospital with the new baby. They all had a cheerful time. It was a good movie. Afterwards they had supper at a Greek restaurant run by a friend of Nick's, who came over and sat by them and treated them to sweet flowery-tasting wine; and it was all rollicking and hot and food-smelling, and Eileen tried to like it and felt as if she was in queer drama.
It was Rls, himself sensitive and silent, who saw that Eileen was near collapse. He whispered to Molly. He said to his brother, who was shouting genially with his friend, "Hey you got me into this flower-selling business, I got to keep better hours."
Eileen turned to him thankfully and whispered, "That was awfully kind of you. I am sort of tired."
"You are so little, and so brave," he said impulsively. "But it is true too," he added, "about my getting to bed. Next week we open the shops together, and flower-shop hours are worse than anything but a drugstore's." His great dark eyes like a kind animal's, smiled pleasantly at her. And then Molly was briskly herding them all home, and Eileen was too tired to do anything but sleep till next day.
The Hunt
The next two months were the same story, over and over. Eileen haunted the agencies for secretarial work; she kept on trying to get work again on the radio.
Aunt Louise, apparently still sure that Eileen was in radio for life, wrote affectionately if a little mournfully. She had had a pay cut herself. She hadn't seen Jordan for some little time. But the last time she saw him, he had asked after Eileen.
And she had told him how wonderfully Eileen was getting on, how it was she had met the Carriers and got on a big network. Everybody said it was only what they expected of Eileen.
It came, that letter, one day toward the end of December when Eileen was just about at the end of her hopes, and nearly of her money. She and Molly had moved a month ago, to a single room which they occupied together. It was crowded and uncomfortable, but from every point of view it was a good idea; it cost half the money and when Molly married Rls she would for the time being move into the Papoulos flat with him. Just, of course, till the flower shop was on its legs.

Molly dropped on her bed, limp and eye-circled.
"Gosh, the price of success," she said grinning.
Eileen, sitting in the rickety chair at the window, lifted an eyebrow. "I wish I had some success to get the price of," she said trying to laugh. "What do you mean, Molly?"
"Well, it's simply that this cashier-clerk-telephone-girl job in those two shops is practically finishing me. But you have to have somebody nice and classy in a flower shop. Nice people come in. And Rls cannot afford to pay enough to get the kind he wants. Relief's easier, of course, than standing on your feet fourteen hours a day including Sundays—" She sat up, looked at Eileen, and said "Hey, you've been crying. Anything new?"
Eileen said, steadying her lips. "No, that's the trouble. Only a letter from my aunt in Denver. She thinks I'm on the top of the wave here. And she's had a pay cut—and I was on the edge of writing to ask her for money to go back home. And I can't bear to give up. I'm just so down I haven't even any judgment."
"If you go back, I suppose it means marrying the Estill man doesn't it? Frankly, I never could see why you shouldn't. Think it over, Eileen."
"Sink back—without any money without any job—when I left with all flags flying—when everybody I knew thought, and so did I, the idiot, that all I had to do was to walk into New York and be given the keys to the city? If I even had carfare home it would be different."
Last Hope
"Gosh, I forgot to tell you," Molly sat up, penitent, wriggling off her shoes and curling her toes in relief. "Oh, doctor, my feet! . . . Nick said today that his pal at the second-hand car place had a bite for the old bus. He was almost certain."
"Well," Eileen said wearily, "that would be a help. . . . Oh Molly, I simply don't know what to do!"
"Too bad you're a Protestant," Molly said. She dropped back again and stared at the ceiling.
"What's that got to do with it?"
"Well, I don't suppose you'd think it would be any help to burn a candle to St. Anthony for help, but that's what I always do when I'm in a mess. Hey, I'll tell you; if you like I'll do it for you. For your intention. He's a broad-minded guy, St. Anthony; I know lots of non-Catholics he's done things for."

"I'll take you up, Molly," Eileen said. "Maybe it might help." "Well I guess now's the time," Molly said. "At that, I'll stake us both to buy fares. I couldn't walk another step if my life and love depended on it."
She sat up—good-hearted, weary Molly—and pulled her pumps on with a groan. She got into her cheap fur coat; Eileen put a sweater on under the smart fall-weight coat she had not been able to replace with a heavier one. They set out.
"I have to stop at the shop and tell Rls," Molly said. "I said I'd only be gone for the half hour it took to eat."
They went into the shop together. Rls, with his usual gentleness, said, "Go on. Sure, go on. And burn a candle for the shop too. He added cheerfully.
Eileen, standing there, suddenly made her mind up. She'd put her pride in her pocket. She'd give up this crazy dream of Martin, this futile hope of being anywhere, doing anything, important enough to touch him or find him again. What chance or hope was there after all? She shook herself out of the romantic dream. "It's been an obsession. I'll go back and start over. It's not even a whole lot yet," she said resolutely to herself.
She went over and picked up one of the telegraph blanks Rls kept handy for clients who wanted to telegraph flowers.
"I am coming home. You were right. Let's start fresh. Yours, Eileen."
"Will you send this?" she said hurriedly to Aristides.
He started down at it.
"You—you want me to send this? You are going away?" he said.
"Going away. 'Ay tank ay go home,'" Eileen quoted as lightly as she could.
He said, "Very well, I send it."
He laid it down on the counter with the shears to weigh it, and hurried to attend a customer.
"Molly," Eileen said, "Here. Don't let's waste time and money on that candle. I've made up my mind."
"It's bad luck to start to make an offerin' to a saint and then hold out on him," Molly said.
They climbed on the cross-town bus together, and sat quiet while it bobbed along the four long blocks to Fifth Avenue.

Lefty Adams Shows Up Good In Win Over New Entry

Rub. Wilson's Greenies yesterday afternoon defeated Rocky Mount 1-8 at Guy Smith park, went to that city today to return the game and planned to engage Kinston here tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

In defeating the new entry in the league yesterday, the locals garnered 14 hits, one more than the Greenville hurlers yielded, and made two bobbles, while Rocky Mount erred four times.

Lefty Adams, a newcomer, started on the mound for the Greenies and made a fine showing. He sent five to the bench via the strikeout route, but walked as many. He yielded nine bingles before bowing to Bill Teller at the end of the seventh. In his two frames Teller yielded four hits and walked three.

Several Greenies looked good at the plate yesterday. Mike Dides got three for four. Skipper sat a double and a single, as did Harry Jenkins, and Harold Forbes clouted out two singles.

Following tomorrow's game here and the Sunday game at Kinston the Greenies have only one more exhibition game scheduled, one with the House of David team here next Tuesday.

WADE SPEAKER AT FETE HERE
Addresses Annual High School Athletic Banquet

"I heard Wallace Wade talk last night and it was a wonderful speech," is probably what you would hear from one of the enthused sportsters who attended the Athletic banquet at the Woman's club building last night. Climaxing the program, Wade, director of athletics at Duke university, centered his topic around citizenship and the part it plays in sports.

"It happens to be," vigorously stated Coach Wade, "that the only countries that have widespread athletic programs in the world today are the democracies, the United States and England."

Approximately 125 persons cheered his speech after finishing a delightful meal served by the Woman's club. Before Wade spoke Mayor Suggs, in behalf of the city congratulated the athletics of Greenville high school.

"Award night" found many boys and girls receiving awards which were distributed by Coaches Wiley Farley, Herman Fulkerson, and Mary Shaw Robeson.

Awards for football were given by Coach Farley to J. B. Kittrell, John Spearman, Hubert Mussewhite, Bill Britt, Dewey Page, Snag Clark

N.Y. Stock Market

New York, May 2.—(AP)—The Stock market flirted with a bashful rally today and managed to achieve a moderate amount of success. Buyers stepped in and lifted prices fractions to more than a point. A little selling then began to appear and trends wavered. Modest plus signs, however, were fairly well

They Chatted . . . Then Came Action

Admiral Emory S. Land (left), chairman of the Maritime Commission, and Senator Josiah W. Bailey (right), Democrat of North Carolina and chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee, held an informal discussion shortly before the committee went into executive session in Washington—and then came the announcement that the Maritime Commission has made plans to place 50 American tankers in the service of the British within the next few days.

Soldier Is Killed In Auto Collision

Lillington, N. C., May 1.—(AP)—Noah Franklin Bell, 23, of Raleigh and Elkin, was killed almost instantly early today when his car collided with another machine at the intersection of the Raleigh and Dunn highways near here. Coroner J. M. McLean said Bell, a sergeant in the medical corps stationed at Fort Bragg, was returning to the fort from Raleigh. The coroner said Bell failed to halt at a stop sign, and that a verdict of death through his own negligence had been turned by a coroner's jury. Bell was a bus driver before joining the army, McLean said. Occupants of the other car, who also were from Fort Bragg, were uninjured.

Under present plans, all such vessels would be put into the 2,000,000-ton shipping pool the President has instructed the Maritime Commission to assemble for transfer to foreign registry. This cargo fleet would carry war supplies to Britain distributed at the close. Transfers were around 400,000 shares.

Construction Worker Is 'Burned To Death'

Fayetteville, May 2.—(AP)—Herbert L. Ferr, 42, of Oakboro, was burned to death late last night when a fire destroyed his trailer at a camp near here. Ferr, a construction worker at Fort Bragg, is survived by his widow and six children. Coroner W. C. Davis announced he would conduct an investigation.

Neighborhood Problem. Elk City, Okla., (AP)—When one of two goats owned by an Elk City woman died, the other threatened to beat himself to death. The woman purchased another goat to keep the lonesome one company and stop his bleating. It worked in reverse. Goat No. 1 didn't like Goat No. 3, and vice versa. So they both bleated, doubling the trouble. The neighborhood wants to know how to keep a goat quiet.

How To Reply To Speed Cops. San Francisco, (AP)—So you think you know how fast that other car was going—well, you're apt to be wrong. The California Automobile Association has records of 21,000 tests made recently, indicating only 18 out of 100 drivers are able to estimate the speed of a passing auto within 5 per cent. More than half of those tested were 20 per cent in error.

Greenland is the only country in the world producing the important mineral cryolite in large scale commercial quantities. Eskimo natives of Greenland long thought the important mineral, cryolite, was ice because it was white and melted in a candle flame.

To My Friends In Greenville:

There is only one more working day before the City Election. Everyone knows that I am not financially able to employ an army of political workers, and therefore I am depending upon you to assist me in my campaign for the office of City Judge. If you have a few minutes or a few hours to spare, I will appreciate your calling on your friends in the interest of my candidacy. Whether you see one person or a hundred, I shall be grateful for your efforts.
