ILLINOIS MINES DISPUTE ENDED

21,000 Miners In Alabama Only Large Group Still Out Because Of Wage Controversy

The principals were called back into session today in an effort to work out an agreement on a new contract. The union, which has agreed to defer any strike until the mediation board has had a chance to settle the dispute, wants a wage increase of 10 cents an hour. The company has offered two cents.

Secretary Perkins asked officials of an AFL union of bus drivers and of the Pennsylvania Greyhound lines to discuss with Labor Department representatives today a strike called because of wage demands. The union asked for a closed shop and payment of five cents a mile for drivers who now receive four and 4 1/2 cents a mile.

Illinois soft coal miners, some 25,000 of them, agreed to go back to work today under a temporary agreement which will give them $1 a day more than they received under a contract which expired last month.

This left 21,000 miners in Alabama as the only major group of soft coal workers still out. At issue between them and the mine operators was a $1 a day increase in the Alabama basic wage of $4.50

Asserts Missions Part Of Religion

Anyone who does not believe in missions today is not a Christian, declared Reverend Thomas M. Grant, pastor yesterday morning in his sermon at Jarvis Memorial Methodist church. "People want to be Christians but want to hold prejudices. They say they do love all peoples of the world," Mr. Grant pictured religion as something people seemed to think they could get along without as long as they were physically all right and financially sound but when threatened with an insoluble situation are prone to hastily decide religion is worth while and that just because they have decided everything else has failed and religion might just as well be given a trial.

Next the pastor revealed the challenge of Christ that there is a job to be done in a world so confused today.

"Religion is a vital something moving out toward life," he said and at this point made the statement on missions and the Christian "Christ is a world citizen."

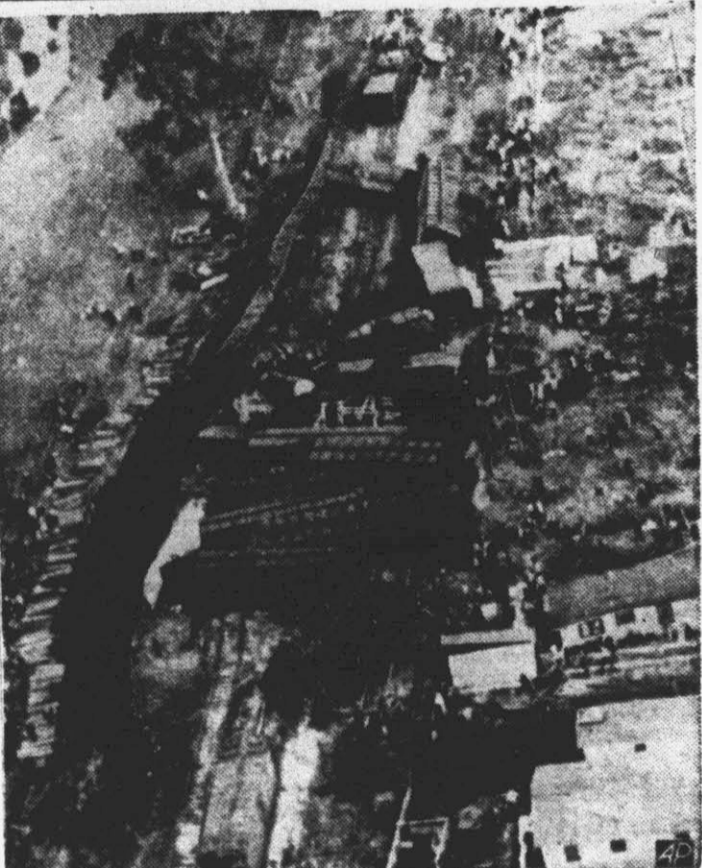

Contrasting the philosophy of Hitler that is motivated by the desire to get things with Christ's insistence on being something trans-

J. Con Lanier today disclosed that he had been advised that Rep. Doughton, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, now considering a new tax bill, has set aside Thursday to hear farmers and others opposed to a proposed increase in taxes on manufactured tobacco products.

In making the announcement, Mr. Lanier urged every farmer who could possibly do so to go to Washington Thursday and oppose the bill. He added that a large delegation from tobacco-producing belts would have a big influence on committee members and said that if the farmers do not appear in large numbers it will be taken as an indication that the individual producer is not interested.

Locomotive Explodes; Train Wrecked

Four trainmen died when a Southern Pacific freight locomotive exploded near Salinas, Calif. Twenty box and oil cars piled up behind the locomotive (top) and a house (lower right) was demolished by flying metal. Only the chassis of the engine remained after the blast.

Roosevelt Tax Message Debated By Committee

Rep. Crowther Describes Letter As Useless

Washington, May 5.—(AP)—Rep. Crowther (R-N.Y.) termed "perfectly useless" today a letter by President Roosevelt asking Congress for a $3,500,000,000 tax bill which would not make the rich richer and the poor poorer.

Criticizing the letter at the reopening of tax hearings by the House Ways and Means Committee, Crowther declared it gave the committee "very little guidance."

"It doesn't say a word about reduction of expenditures in connection with writing the tax bill," he added.

Rep. Cooper (D-Tenn.) replied that the letter was "splendid and appropriate."

The letter was sent to Chairman Doughton (D-N.C.) Friday. In it, Mr. Roosevelt said in part: "The income tax can not fix tax liability of individuals and corporations with equity as long as the tax basis is defined to exclude substantial and significant elements of income."

Rep. Jenkins (R-Ohio) commented that "it's the general consensus that Mr. Roosevelt might as well have sent" the letter.

Chairman Doughton expressed the view that if Mr. Roosevelt had "laid down any hard and fast rule we would have resented it."

High School Here Plans College Day

The Beta club of Greenville High School will sponsor its second annual "College Day" Friday, May 9, at the high school. Eleven well-known colleges and universities in North Carolina and Virginia will send representatives to Greenville High School in order to help the juniors and seniors decide which college they wish to attend.

The meeting will open Friday afternoon with a general meeting in the auditorium, after which there will be group meetings with the various representatives from the colleges. Father Morris will be the guest speaker at the general meeting.

"I sincerely hope that this coming Beta club college day will be as impressive as the preceding one has been," commented Fenner Corbett, president of the Greenville High School honorary society.

The colleges and universities to be represented are as follows:

Meredith College, Smithfield-Massey Business College, Norfolk Business College, Duke University, University of North Carolina, Woman's College at Greensboro, State College, Salem College, Wake Forest College, King's Business College and East Carolina Teachers College.

Besides the official representatives of the colleges are plan-

County Commissioners Accept Proposal Offered By Safair Corporation To Establish Cadet Training School Here; Similar Action Had Previously Been Taken By Board Of Aldermen

An army flying school was practically assured for the City-County airport this morning when the Board of County Commissioners unanimously accepted the proposal of the Safair Corporation to establish the cadet training school.

Opening of the school is contingent only on the condition army engineers approve the local field and that the corporation negotiates a contract with the War Department. Since army officials have previously observed and complimented the local field, there was little doubt here that the field would be readily approved. It also appeared doubtful that Safair would have any trouble in securing a government contract to operate the school.

Establishment of the field would bring a maximum of 200 students here for training. Barracks would be erected on the field and, in addition, hangars, an administration and other buildings would be erected. The building costs would be borne by Safair Corporation and the city and county would have the opportunity of taking them over upon completion of the program. If the school operates for five years the buildings automatically would be turned over to the city at no cost.

Immediately following the action of the commissioners, a telegram was sent to Mr. Herbert advising him of the move.

Later in the day Mayor Sugg was advised by the Safair president in a telephone conversation that he and his attorney would be here within a few days to draw up and sign the formal contract.

Acceptance of the proposal by the county board climaxed a concerted move on the part of officials to have the school located here. Other Eastern Carolina cities are known to have been waging a campaign to secure the program.

In addition to bringing the students here, it was explained that possibly 100 employees, including instructors, would move to this city during the time the program is in operation.

Local Fire Tower Approved by WPA

Local WPA Administrator Moore disclosed today he had received presidential approval of the fire tower project to be erected here and that work on the structure probably would get under way in the near future.

A telegram received by Mayor B. Sugg later in the day from Congressman Herbert Bonner confirmed the report of presidential approval for the project.

M. O. Minges, head of a local bottling company, has donated $5,000 to go toward erection of the structure, which will be erected on a block of property to the West of Greenville schools which was recently purchased by the city.

Also to be located on the property is the curb market, which will be erected as an NYA project.

Several Are Hurt In Sunday Wreck

One person was critically injured and several others received lesser injuries about 6 o'clock last night when two cars collided at Dupree's crossroads on the Falkland-Fountain highway.

Thomas Lee Hamill, 15, received a fractured skull and internal injuries and his condition is considered grave. He was riding in a car being driven by Walter Lee Tugwell who was cut about the face and head. Four other persons riding in the Tugwell car also were injured. They were Sallie Ruth Jones, George Watson Hamill, Juanita Hamill and Alford Jones. All of those in the Tugwell car lived in the vicinity of the accident.

The other car involved in the collision was driven by Sergeant Norfleet, whose home is in Greenville, but who is now stationed at Fort Bragg. No one in the Norfleet car was injured.

According to Corporal C. R. Williams, who investigated the wreck the cars collided when Tugwell started to enter the main highway from a side road. Norfleet was traveling on the main road. No arrests have been made pending a further investigation.

VITAL BRITISH OIL PIPELINE REPORTED CUT

Iraq Reported To Have Severed Mosul Fields Supply

BRITISH FORCES HOLD AIR BASE

Iran Expected To Be Point of Next Thrust If Axis Influence Successful In Iraq

London, May 5.—(AP)—Iraq is reported to have cut the vital pipeline flow of oil to the Mediterranean from the high Mosul fields, and authoritative British predicted today that if Axis influence triumphed against the British in the Middle East kingdom they would thrust next at neighboring Iran, fourth greatest oil producer in the world.

Reports from Cairo indicated British troops still were holding out last night at their besieged air base at Lake Habbaniyah, 60 miles west of Baghdad, and that RAF bombers had taken the offensive—striking to cripple Iraq's small air force.

What the British called the pro-German government which Premier Raschid Ali Al Gailani set up in a coup April 4 was attacked verbally meanwhile, by the Emir Abdul Ilah deposed regent. He declared in Palestine that he would return to the "lawfully constituted government."

The Emir urged Iraq troops to return peacefully to their posts. The stoppage of Iraq oil, pumped through a pipeline to Haifa, British mandated Palestine, was said by Reuters, British news agency, to have been accomplished by the Iraq government.

Britain's eastern Mediterranean fleet has received its principal supply from that line since the fall of France last June when a second line from the Mosul fields to Tripoli, in French-mandated Lebanon, was closed.

The British have said, however, they have built up "numerous and adequate" fuel reserves in the eastern Mediterranean to continue fleet operations.

British who predicted Axis influences might try next to tie up the oil fields of Iran, to the east, estimated Iran's army had 750,000 men, but said it was poorly equipped. The country has a German colony of approximately 25,000 persons, and recently 2,000 German engineers and technicians have been reported sent there to build highways. The government nominally is neutral.

Offer To Mediate Iraq - British War

London, May 5.—(AP)—Turkey has offered, or will offer, to mediate the undeclared war between Iraq and Britain, reliable reports said tonight.

Intorred London sources said Britain would accept mediation, contingent upon Iraq's withdrawal of forces menacing the British-held Habbaniyah airdrome.

British Forces Score Middle East Successes

Victories Reported In Iraq And Also In Libya

Cairo, May 5.—(AP)—Most of Iraq's air force "already has been destroyed," the British Middle East command said today, and Iraq artillery which had pounded the besieged British airport at Habbaniyah was "rendered comparatively inactive yesterday by our aircraft."

The British garrison at Habbaniyah is intact and has suffered very few casualties, the communique said, and British troops remained "without interference" in occupation of the Basra area, at the head of the Persian gulf.

The Royal Iraq air force consisted of two army-air cooperation squadrons, besides planes attached to a training school.

"The greater part of the Iraq air force already has been destroyed by our air action, either while attempting to attack British camps or as a result of attack by our air forces on Iraq air bases," the communique said, adding:

"After attacking an unarmed British construction party, which was in the vicinity, Iraq forces on May 2 occupied Rutba."

Cairo, May 5.—(AP)—Imperial forces counter-attacking the Germans and Italians at Tobruk were reported by the British Middle East command today to have broken up Axis preparations for renewal of assaults on the encircled Libyan port.

Heavy casualties were inflicted on the Axis forces, which still hold a small sector in Tobruk's outer defenses, the war bulletin said.

In East Africa, the high command announced a "further" advance against Amba Alaji, some 280 miles northeast of Addis Ababa.

Fresh fighting has broken out in the Salum sector of the North African front, along the Egyptian-Libyan border, with losses inflicted on Axis troops and vehicles, it was announced.

Blame Placed For Damaging Vessels

Baltimore, May 5.—(AP)—A Federal Bureau of Investigation agent testified today that Admiral Alberto Lais, former Italian naval attache to Washington, gave the orders to wreck the machinery of two Italian freighters taken over by the Coast Guard here March 30.

Testifying at a hearing for 58 Italian seamen charged with sabotaging the vessels, Special Agent Leslie J. Kunz said:

"Captain Luigi Schiaffino of the Petro Campanella had admitted receiving a code message from Admiral Lais March 19 that gave the signal to damage the ships. This 'code' was a message asking the number of men in the ship's crew," he explained.

Mills Boy Injured By Hit-Run Driver

Odell Mills, son of Aaron A. Mills of Stokes, Route Three, was struck and injured by a hit-and-run driver near his home about 8 o'clock last night.

The boy was picked up and taken to Hodges service station by an unidentified motorist. Mr. Mills and highway patrolmen are anxious to learn the identity of the man who took the boy to the hospital in hopes that he can help in identifying and locating the driver of the hit-and-run car.

The boy was not seriously injured only having suffered bruises and lacerations.

Move Taken By Force As Precaution

Officials, However, Deny Ships Actually Seized, But Merely Boarded To Determine If Officers And Crew Still Loyal To King Peter; Vessels Remain Under Close Watch

New York, May 5.—(AP) U. S. Coast Guardsmen today boarded Yugoslav ships in New York harbor as a "precautionary measure," Coast Guard officers said, after having received "certain rumors."

Two ships were boarded, the Sreca and Neta, in Brooklyn, and a third, the Presednik Koppjic, was said to have been boarded off Stapleton, Staten Island.

The Coast Guard several times denied that the ships were "seized," but indicated that they either were placed in protective custody or were being watched closely.

Boarding parties moved on the ships during the early morning hours, executing a surprise maneuver. At the 1,820-ton freighter Neta's Brooklyn dock, the guardsmen also took possession of the pier.

The 3,167-ton freighter Sreca recently arrived from St. Thomas was boarded a few minutes later at a nearby dock.

The Presednik, Koppjic, it was reported, had attempted to sail from its Staten Island pier before boarding parties reached it off Stapleton.

The action was similar to that taken when the government took charge of German, Italian and Danish vessels here. In Washington, the Coast Guard also denied it had "seized" the Yugoslav vessels, but added that the guardsmen were closely watching them.

New York Coast Guard headquarters did not amplify its statement. In Washington it was understood that the purpose of the inspections was to determine whether the officers and crews of the Yugoslav ships were loyal to King Peter or to the new government set up by Germany after invading the little kingdom.

The inspections were believed, it was said, to have demonstrated that the men were loyal to King Peter, and hence to Great Britain, and that no further action would be taken to seize the ships or detain the men. A close watch will be maintained over them, however, as in the case of all other foreign ships there are 17 Yugoslavian ships in the United States at present.

Forty Years Ago Today

THE DAILY REFLECTOR Monday, May 5, 1901

It strikes us that the farmers of this section can raise corn cheaper than it costs to buy it from the west and pay freight on it. If last year's crop was not enough to last to planting time this year, as is evidenced by the fact that corn is already being shipped in, then it does look like it would be wise to avoid a recurrence of this by planting a larger corn acreage this year and not so much cotton. We never could see the wisdom of a Pitt county farmer buying corn and hay when they are about the easiest crops to raise.

Junior Department to Meet. The Junior department of the Christian Church will meet at the church Tuesday afternoon at four o'clock to rehearse for the Mother's Day service.

Spring Retreat. A spring Y. W. C. A. "Retreat," held to bring together the new and the old chairmen of important committees and to plan the major activities of the association for next year, took 22 students, leaders of the Y. W. C. A. of East Carolina Teachers College and two of their faculty advisers the past week-end to Camp Leach, Episcopal camp on the Pamlico river.

Through the careful planning of Rebecca Ross, outgoing president, Virginia Whitley, incoming president, Bessie Fay Hunt, this year's World Fellowship chairman and next year's treasurer and Irene Mitcham, retiring chairman of Religious Education, a definite program of work, worship, and recreation had been prepared in advance which gave direction to all activities.

General sessions, directed by the two presidents, that brought the whole number together for planning and discussing preceded meetings of smaller groups in which the problems of standing committees were discussed, projects of the past year analyzed and suggestions for the new year worked out.

Worship services that made up a very definite part of each day's schedule were conducted by various members of the group. Irene Mitcham having conducted the good-night service Friday; Bessie Fay Hunt, morning watch on Saturday; Edna Mitchell, music chairman, Monday devotions; Miss Louise Noonday and Miss Lois Grigsby, faculty advisers, vesper service around the campfire; Carol Lee Humphreys, incoming morning watch chairman, morning watch on Sunday; and Frances Sutherland, incoming Religious Education chairman, morning devotions.

Recreation periods gave opportunity to rest in the sunshine, play softball, go swimming, play horseshoes, and go hiking.

Arrangements for transportation were made by Erlene Sawyer, member of the old cabinet, who was unable to be present. Virginia Whitley and Ruth Britt, social chairman, planned the menus and had charge of the meals; and Bessie Fay Hunt had charge of arranging for the use of the camp.

Those attending were: Rebecca Ross and Grace Ross of Aurora; Sara Gorham of New Bern; Charlotte Shearin of Rocky Mount; Virginia Whitley of Nashville; Doris Blalock of Black Creek; Irene Mitcham of Goldsboro; Rachel Parrish and Frances Farror of Burgaw; Frances Sutherland, Bessie Fay Hunt and Harriet Marshburn of Wilmington; Edna Mitchell of Hobbsville; Ora Crisp of Wilson; Carol L. Humphreys of Woddsdale; Ruth Britt of Wendell; Mildred Beverly of Ashokle; Dorothy Langry of Jonesboro; Mary Long Ford of Franklin; Helen Flynn of Washington; Dorothy Shearin of Littleton; Hilda Lee of Dunn; and Miss Lois Grigsby and Miss Louise Williams of Greenville.

Library News

The Trend of American Opinion in Current Magazines. Raymond Moley says in this week's (May 5) Newsweek that "more puzzling than all the military, naval and industrial mysteries is the state of American opinion. For the past three weeks it has had everyone baffled—isolationists, interventionists, and that great group that lies between."

In days such as these it is most difficult to keep up with conditions of today for the newspapers are too exciting with their first and unweighed news and books can't be written, published and read fast enough to offer much help. Therefore it falls to the lot of the weekly and monthly magazines to furnish the same perspective of the time. The current magazines on the magazine table at the Sheppard Memorial Library offer a splendid perspective of the trend of American opinion today. For instance

"The Malady of Wishful Thinking," by William Henry Chamberlain. In May Harper's—a clear, balanced and studious mind studies the modern way of thinking and reports. Do we have wishful thinking in America? Chamberlain thinks we do, and offers excellent proof in this article.

"The Need for a Long View," an editorial in May Christian Century—Another committee has entered the propaganda war now being waged in this country. Its membership is distinguished. It is animated by the highest motives. This committee has just published a statement setting forth the reasons which impel it to support immediate American belligerence. This editorial says that the committee ignores future consequence, keeps its attention focused on immediate ends, at a time when the nation needs to be guided by long views.

"Wanted: A Faith to Fight For," by Steward Alsop in May Atlantic. The author sums up his articles with this statement, "America is face to face with the greatest war of her natural history. Without a great faith, we shall lose that war. With a faith, we shall win it."

"Must a War Economy Be Permanent?" by Peter F. Drucker. May Harper's—A Belgian newspaperman said last year there is one thing that Western Europe is more afraid of than the war and that is the peace that will come after it. This observation is an apt illustration of Mr. Drucker's article. The author, once financial editor of a prominent German newspaper, has been a resident of the United States for several years.

Other articles and stories in the current magazines worthy of notice are:

"So You Don't Want to Work," by Ruth Hawthorne Fay. May Mademoiselle—An article written especially for the high school and college girl graduate, setting forth the idea that "the only security there is, is in yourself... in your courage.

in your understanding of reality and what is important and what can be dismissed as trivial and not bothering with."

"How Not to Be Lonely," by Marjorie Wilson. In Your Life for May. The author of the well known book "Charm," gives excellent advice to young people.

"My Castle and Me," by Molly Costain. May Mademoiselle. A practical article on how a girl can have a health and home on $25 per week. Written for the career girl who wants more than a career in life.

"Love Child," by Marietta M. Wolff. In May Harper's Bazaar. A charming story taken from "Whistle Stop," a book being published this month. The author was awarded the Avery Hopwood Fiction award for 1940.

GREENVILLE HI NEWS

By SIDNEY JOHNSON

Turner Elected. Bill Turner, managing editor of the school paper, was elected president of the sixth annual North Carolina Press Institute which is held at Chapel Hill every year.

As all of you know, Greenville High is full of experienced high-pressure politicians and when four of these, Jack Edwards, Bill Turner, Bernice Jenkins and J. Hicks Corey, turned on the heat at the convention—well, it was a fairly simple job to get Bill elected.

J. Hicks Corey, advertising manager of the paper, participated in a panel forum, the topic of which was "Business Management of High School Papers."

A very enjoyable time was reported by all four boys.

Source Themes. The black cloud that has been hanging over the high school for the past two weeks, slowly lifted today and once more students were able to glimpse the light. I'm talking about the source themes that the seniors had to have completed by today.

Seniors once more climbed to the top of the ladder and assumed their necessary dignity, however, the only two words needed to bring a momentary look of horror in any senior's face is source themes.

Hollywood. Stories like Eddie Bracken's are the kind that keep stage-struck youngsters beating their heads against the hard doors of theatrical fame. If Eddie Bracken can do it, they say, why can't I?

Eddie is the young fellow with the classic Roman nose on the classic Irish pan. You'll be hearing and seeing more of him after "Reaching for the Sun." He started in it as a supporting player but now they have told him he will get star-billing along with Joel McCrea and Ellen Drew. It's his fourth movie, so he hasn't been wasting time.

The girl-crazy comedian of "Too Many Girls" isn't the old Eddie Bracken of Hollywood and Broadway. Neither is he the erstwhile Dizzy of the Aldrich family Eddie along with Jackie Cooper, outgrew the Aldrich flickers. After the fact he could admit—which he does cheerfully—to his 27 years. An old time he also will admit, cheerfully but seriously, to an abiding ambition to be a director and producer but after he has backed awhile in the novelty of what looks very much like acting success.

It was a long time coming. "Once I got started on the stage," he says, "I made an enviable record. I played in 32 consecutive flops. None of the 32 lasted more than two weeks."

From the time Eddie was four he was crazy about movies and movie stars. Near the Astoria, Long Island, home was the eastern Paramount studio. Eddie couldn't get in but at parochial school he played boy soprano in the home talent

Master Electrician

Fenly Spear, master electrician for "Wuthering Heights" to be presented by the Chi Phi Players in Austin auditorium at East Carolina Teachers College, Friday and Saturday nights, May 16 and 17, has been an important factor in the success of production at the college this year.

Fenly, who lighted the first amateur production of "Our Town" at the University of North Carolina, will leave early in June for Mantec where he will be assistant electrician for "The Lost Colony" for the second year.

Among the plays he has lighted at the college are "The Skull," "Ramon," and "Victory Over Death," Easter pageant.

Fenly's activities have not been confined to lighting; he played the role of the Frontiersman in "Ramon."

play, and Hal Roach was in the audience. Roach took him west for Our Gang, and made a movie actor of him. Only Hollywood didn't know it as the boy grew older—and out Back east again, his connection with the theater was limited to attendance at the Professional Children's school until, at 13, he got a job as understudy to the late Junior Durkin. That made him an actor again but Hollywood still didn't know it. Despite Junior Durkin's aid, he couldn't get inside a studio. He was glad enough to receive bus fare home to take an offered stage job.

"After I got there, and was in the play, I had an offer from here for Mary Pickford's 'Secrets.' I stayed with the play. From then on I did quite a few more flops until George Abbott saw me in one."

Abbott saw him as a 52-year-old man suitable for the role of the commandant in "Brother Rat." When cherub-faced Bracken reported, Abbott didn't believe it. Eddie played the cadet Bottom, instead—enjoyed two years in the play, a year and a half in "What a Life!" and part of the run of "Too Many Girls."

You couldn't imagine Dizzy doing it, but Eddie Bracken takes his jobs seriously. When he gets a script he writes out a "life story" of the character he's to play. This pal of McCrea's in "Reaching" had a tough background, according to Eddie's account. Out of it sprang all his reactions to the story's situations. "When I know what I've been in a story," he says, "it's not hard to keep on being that person when the story gets under way."

GAIN IS SHOWN IN BANK LOANS

Total Of $132,209,049 Loaned During Last Quarter

Reflector Bureau By HENRY AVERILL

Raleigh, May 3.—North Carolina state banks listed, as of April 4, loans amounting to $142,209,049.26, a total almost twice as great as on June 30, 1933 when loans hit their depression nadir of $76,013,926.989.

This increase, amounting to .87 per cent, was announced in the quarterly abstract of the condition of all state commercial banks. It led Commissioner of Banks Gurney P. Hood to exult that "the New Deal is still working."

"The increase of $24,100,097.55 in loans over the corresponding report last year indicates that our banks are not only willing, but are actually loaning money to carry on the increase in business now being transacted," he said.

The state's industrial banks, in a report made for the same date, listed loans of $16,176,688.62, up more than a million dollars over the $15,172,047.16 shown in their report for March 26, 1940.

Adding the commercial and industrial loans, North Carolina banks had advanced their customers more than $158,000,000.

The increase in loans was accompanied by other increases which brought commercial bank resources to $478,258,225.89, an increase of $67,145,827.81 in a year. At the bottom (June 30, 1933) total resources of this type state bank were down to $175,655,727.35. The increase figures 172 percent.

The total resources of the national banks operating in North Carolina, added to the resources of state commercial and industrial banks make a grand total of $642,645,360.89, as compared with $558,326,796.49 a year ago, an increase of $84,318,564.40.

★AMERICANA★ TAKE A CARD ... ANY CARD!

By RAY PEACOCK
AP Feature Service Writer

THE one in our crowd is named Doc. He's the guy who tells you that the card you're thinking about is the seven of diamonds, or finds a two-bit piece you didn't know was in your pocket.

Doc isn't a magician by trade, but he works nearly as hard at it as do the professional members of the Society of American Magicians, of which he is a member in good standing, sworn by the ghost of Merlin not to tell how it's done.

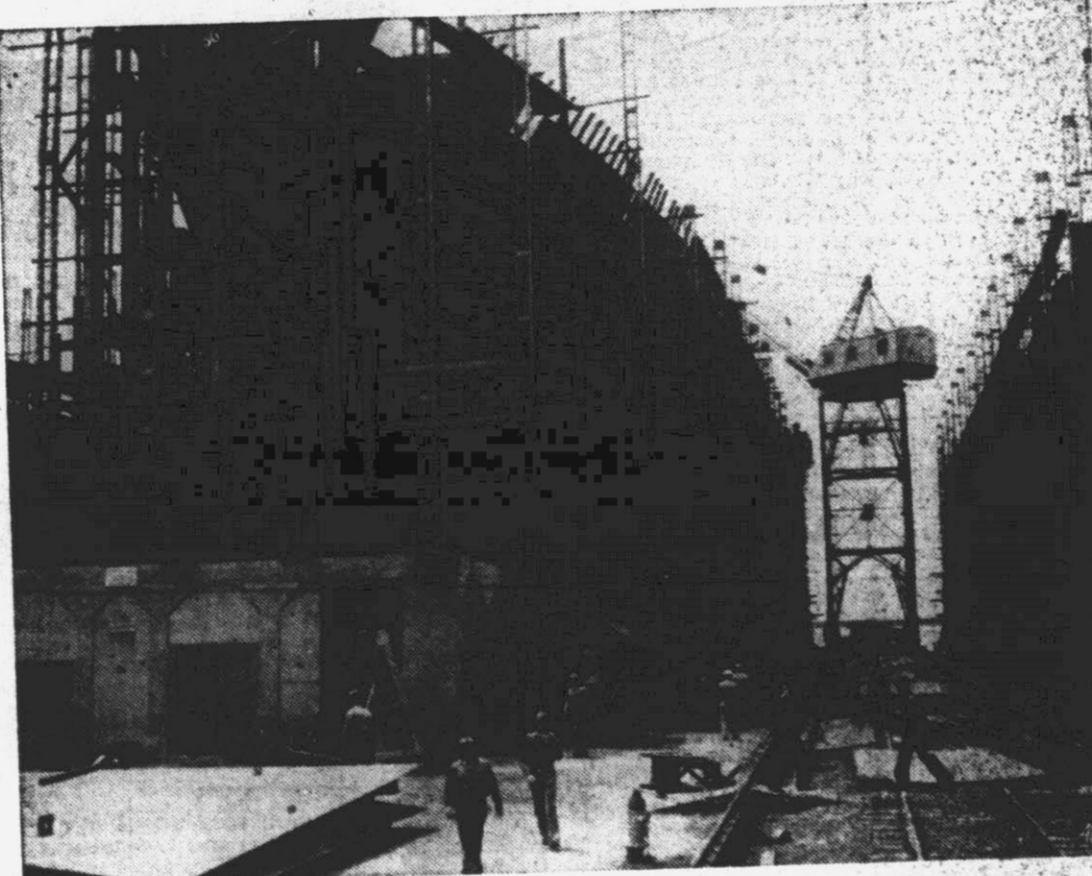

For such an obviously deceitful fellow, Doc is quite popular. Never a dull moment when he is around. He'll put a thimble on a finger, make a few passes, and presto, he has thimbles on every finger and you don't know where they came from.

He can do all sorts of other tricks, too, like making sponges multiply while they are clenched in your hand, and making a little vase cling to the end of a rope, and, of course, that oldie of changing a couple of silk handkerchiefs into a flag. He even does a mind-reading act with a phonograph record, and it's a honey-babe.

As a matter of fact, Doc has built up a little routine that he likes to do for his friends. You might think his wife would get pretty sick of it, but magicians' wives seem to be dyed with the same sort of ink as their husbands. When Doc seals up an envelope and then passes a card around to be initialed, she even manages to seem surprised when Doc discovers that the initialed card was in the envelope all the time.

Ask Doc what he finds in his hobby, which requires hours of practice for a little trick lasting seconds, and he says he gets a kick out of fooling people, that it's one good way to keep from being a wall-flower. Those reasons are pretty good, of course, but if anybody can learn to find two-bit pieces the way Doc does, then I'm going to be a magician too. It would be a good trick to pull off the day the rent is due—and why stop at quarters?

Is Gargantua A Sissy?

GARGANTUA—Better move over, Ferdinand

By JOE MORTON
AP Feature Service Writer

New York—There's a certain big ape around town who has been making a lot of noise lately beating his breast and proclaiming himself terrific.

Many of the good citizens are convinced. But there are a handful who haven't forgotten that Ferdinand the Bull was something of a physical specimen, too. They also point out that the big ape is working for Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey Circus, an organization doing very well with an old pearl of wisdom: "There's a sucker born every minute."

One of the scoffers is Mr. Harry Lederhandler, photographer, who received the circus' solemn word that the great beast, Gargantua by name, is "an ancient evil, with a devil's mind in a beast's body."

Further, said the ape's head keeper, Gargantua especially dislikes photographers and is "beset by wild fury every time a flash bulb goes off."

Mr. Lederhandler decided to look into the matter personally. He learned there are bigger apes even in captivity. Moreover, Gargantua's diet isn't meat and warm blood at all—just eggs, liver extract and milk for breakfast and dinner, nothing but vegetables for lunch. He cannot even breathe ordinary air—it first has to be made pure by thermostats and stainers. In fact, the photographer was informed that if he wanted to get close enough for a picture, he would have to wear a mask.

Mr. Lederhandler, who wanted to make a picture all right, first went out and bought a nice bouquet of roses and presented it to the reticent flashbulb-hating beast.

When the first bulb went off Gargantua just smelled the flowers. As the second flashed, he pulled out the petals, one by one.

Number three, and he pranced about waving the stems. And with the fourth, he ate the pretty flowers—every single one. What do you make of that, Watson?

Strength For The Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

HOW ARE YOU ON HILLS?

A great highway has recently been put across a stretch of country in one of the eastern states, and because it is distinctly an all-year-round highway, it has almost rendered obsolete the old highway which wound laboriously around the sides of the high hills and over the mountains. But there are many people who do not like the new highway because they maintain it is lacking in interest. It is practically free of hills, and while it gets one where he wants to go in a hurry and under the most pleasant conditions, it is not nearly so picturesque and interesting as is the old highway over the mountains.

We all in this day and generation want to make life as easy as possible. There is much to be said for any process or method which will relieve life of drudgery and release energy for higher achievements. But we make a mistake when we think we have made the journey of life more significant when we have done nothing but eliminate the grades. Life can become very stale and uninteresting if one can take the whole of it on high. Suicides are generally recruited from among people who prefer to jump out the tenth story window rather than to face the requirement of having to shift gears. Those who take life as it comes are the ones who arrive at the end of the journey declaring they have had a swell time and have enjoyed every minute of it. These people do not seek the suicide route.

Hills have their place in life as well as plains. We are in for a hard time if we believe that we can make life fully significant and happy by avoiding hard climbs.

The County Commissioners acted wisely today in accepting the proposal made the city and county for the lease of the local airport for an army flying school. We believe this action practically assures us of getting the school located here and it should mean much to our county and city in a business way.

AN IMPORTANT MEETING

It is to the interest of every tobacco farmer of this section, who can possibly do so, to attend the hearing before the House Ways and Means Committee in Washington next Thursday morning at 10 o'clock. Chairman Doughton has announced that the day has been set aside to hear the farmers' opinions as to the newly proposed increase in tobacco taxes.

The newly proposed tobacco taxes will add about another quarter per pound of tobacco in manufactured tobacco products, bringing the total tax close to the $1.50 per pound figure. Such an increase no doubt would have a tendency to cut down tobacco consumption which in turn would reflect in lower prices to the growers.

The hearing on next Thursday is most important to all tobacco growers, but especially to the growers of North Carolina who have already suffered great losses of markets because of the war conditions. Further curtailments in the use of tobacco would mean great financial losses to the farmers and it is for this reason that they should attend the Washington hearing and do everything possible to keep the taxes on tobacco from being increased at this time.

Washington Daybook

By Jack Stinnett
Washington — Answering the mail orders:

L. P. Miami, Fla. — The representatives of the territories in Washington are Anthony J. Dimond, Alaska; Samuel W. King, Hawaii; Joaquin M. Elizalde, the Philippines; and Bolivar Pagan, Puerto Rico. King and Dimond are delegates; Elizalde and Pagan, resident commissioners. The best way to describe all four is that they are non-voting members of the House of Representatives. They are elected just as congressmen are elected and, in general, they perform all the functions of congressmen in representing their territories.

Maj. A. B. P. (Retired), Camp Haan, Calif. — I stand corrected and am happy to be able to quote a real authority on the soldier's use of the term "GI." (The Major explains: "GI means officially 'government issue.' Oftentimes, soldiers buy civilian shirts, shoes, ties, etc., and at a Saturday morning or other inspection the captain will often ask if such and such an article of apparel worn by a soldier is GI. The expression is used in many ways and where a dance is sponsored by a soldier's club or camp hostess and is for soldiers and their ladies only, it is referred to as a GI dance. A show troupe may put on a show in a camp or post for soldiers only and that is a GI show.")

K. V. Louisville, Ky. — There is no chairman of the Senate military affairs committee at present. Sen. Robert Reynolds (D.-NC.) has seniority right to the important post and wants it, but the steering committee that handles committee assignments has taken no action, presumably because Senator Reynolds has fought the administration on its foreign policy and resided long in the isolationist camp. If the committee should go against Senator Reynolds, it would be the first time in nearly 2 years that seniority hasn't predominated in committee elevations. Seniority is the one custom which the Senate guards most jealously and any senator, no matter what his opinions on the present matter, will tell you that any effort to circumvent seniority will cause a whopping big scrape.

Mrs. M. A. Williamsport, Md. — Thanks for your "little story" and here it is: Mrs. Katherine Edgar Byron is running for the Maryland Sixth congressional district post left vacant recently by the death of her husband, Rep. William D. Byron. As was her husband, she's a Democrat and a New Dealer, but if she is elected, she will be sitting in the same seat her grandfather, a steadfast Republican, held for eight years. Rep. Louis E. McComas, her G.O.P. grandpa, served Maryland's Sixth for four terms as congressman and then went on to the Senate for six years.

Mrs. W. M. N. Flint, Mich. — The chances of a trainee with ability and ambition becoming an officer are excellent. For example, at ten camps in July, officer training schools will be started, with an initial quota of 2,300 men, and those who survive will be commissioned second lieutenants about three months later. Every one of these will be selected from the ranks of regulars, national guardsmen, and trainees by their unit commanders. The only requisite other than ability is that they must have had six months in training and be able to serve at least three after their commission.

T. D. Fairfield, Ill. — Roughly, defense hiring in Washington is going at the rate of 1,000 a week. Most officials here think that it will be mid-summer before there will be any slackening off, but that will depend entirely on world developments. Washington is supposed to have increased its population 10 per cent in the last year and now to be the tenth city in the country, with well over 725,000.

L. R. Fort Wayne, Ind. — The reason the House of Representatives doesn't argue as long over bills as the Senate is that debate in the house is, by rule, limited to one hour. In the Senate, debate is limited only by the agreement of majority and minority leaders and the disposition is to give both sides all the time they want.

CAMPS IN N. C. TO AID FARMER

Will Provide Ready Market for Various Foodstuffs

Reflector Bureau.
By HENRY AVERILL
Raleigh, May 3.—The 1941 marketing authority set up by the state Department of Agriculture in a favorable position to make Fort Bragg and other military camps in the state tremendously valuable to the state farmers, in the opinion of Randal B. Etheridge, chief of the department's division of markets.

The army setups, he thinks should be looked upon as additional markets, but markets which will affect the price of perishable food products to a much greater degree than would opening of new trade territory of the same population.

"New areas would not show the same spirit of cooperation as has been shown by General Devers, the Post Exchange and the quarters-master officers at Fort Bragg who have said that whenever practically they would like to purchase locally grown food products," Etheridge said.

He warned against producing a crop solely for the purpose of selling to the camps, however, because "federal buying agencies make their purchases on the basis of the lowest bid and on the basis of grades or specifications."

He avoided any estimation, even approximate, of the value in dollars and cents of Fort Bragg and the other camps to the farmers of North Carolina, but "it will be many fold the value of the products purchased," he said.

"We know that the price which farmers are paid for these commodities depends upon the supply and demand which is still operative for the perishable foodstuffs. The per unit price which the producers receive at the farm or shipping point is based on the price for which products sell in New York and other large eastern and northern terminal markets, less transportation marketing and other costs incurred

$351 Reported In County Seal Sale

Incomplete returns from the Easter Seal Sale campaign for funds to aid crippled children show that $351 already has been turned over to J. Vance Perkins, county treasurer for the drive.

The $351 already reported compares with a total of $112 raised last year. Half of the money is sent to state headquarters, but the state returns approximately that much in matching county funds expended to aid crippled children, according to K. T. Futrell, Pitt welfare officer and secretary of the seal campaign.

Of the total raised in Pitt, Greenville schools provided $79.63. Three local women's organizations, the Junior Woman's club, the Service League and the Round Table club raised a total of $90.09.

Among the individuals contributing $5, for which they received a framed "share of happiness," were Miss Faye Barnes, E. G. Flanagan, W. W. Lee, J. H. Blount, W. H. Woolard, M. O. Minges, S. T. White, J. T. Little and Iven Bissette. Other organizations also contributed $5 or more.

The remainder of the total was contributed by the white and colored schools of Pitt county.

The North Carolina Farmers Cooperative Exchange has struck on an unusual prize idea to boost attendance at its annual meeting here on May 13.

The FCX has announced it will present a 30-gallon drum of motor oil to the individual who brings the largest number of people over 61 years of age to the meeting.

The co-operators expect to be at least 5,000 strong to hear the principal speaker, Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard.

Legion Contest.
Unattended by the fanfare of publicity trumpets that ballyhoo statewide races for political offices, there is now in progress an American Legion contest which ranks with any gubernatorial scramble in the ardor of the contenders and partisans.

It's the race for department commander—a post which will be filled at the state convention to be held in Durham late in June—and the principals are Roy L. McMillan of Raleigh and Victor Johnson of Pittsboro.

Here in Raleigh the talk is, naturally, all to the effect that McMillan will win; but a day or so ago Johnson was quoted in the press as believing the race is "in the bag."

Man About Manhattan

By George Tucker

New York.—Here in simple chronological form is the history of one of the most impressively dramatic performances I have ever heard.

It began in the summer of 1940 when Alice Duer Miller wrote a poem called "The White Cliffs of Dover." Shortly after it was published in book form—it is now second on the non-fiction best seller list—Frank Black read it and became so enamored of its strange beauty that he composed a musical background for it.

Then, last October, against Black's musical background, Lynn Fontanne read it over the air. It was such a stunning, climactic performance that at a later date it had to be repeated.

Ronald Colman heard it and immediately purchased the movie rights to it. Who ever heard of anybody buying the movie rights to a poem?

In January this year Miss Fontanne again read "The White Cliffs of Dover" in Cleveland, with Black directing the Cleveland Symphony orchestra. Her delivery was so beautiful and heart-breaking that those who heard her sat stunned in silence.

Then Miss Fontanne was asked if she would record the poem for Victor. Never before had she made a recording, but she acquiesced. For the full recording three 12-inch records were required. It is out now in a special album, and to me it is the most inexpressibly beautiful thing I have ever heard.

Finis Farr, formerly a gag writer for George Jessel, which perhaps explains a lot of things, is also a playwright and the author of the feature "Mr. District Attorney."

Recently his press agent requested a few smatterings of biographical material, and Farr obliged. Like this:

"Farr is entirely self-educated and was graduated from Princeton in 1926. He spells with difficulty and when reading mouths the words quietly to himself. During the first World War Farr did absolutely nothing, as he was only 12 years old. He plans to do nothing during World War No. II, unless ordered by Local Board 15. Signed, Finis Farr."

At this writing "Gone With the Wind," as a film, has grossed more than $22,000,000 at the box-office and its producers expect it to hit the all-time high of $35,000,000 before it is finally laid away.

When I think of these amazing sums of money I can't help but remember the $30,000 that was paid Margaret Mitchell for the screen rights. Only the other day Edna Ferber received $175,000 for the screen rights to her serial "Saratoga Trunk." The Mitchell price seems only an infinitesimal drop in the bucket, surely the best "buy" of all screen history. Though, of course, when the deal was transacted, nobody knew that "Gone" would be the sensation it has been.

Greenies Divide Week-End Series With Kinston Eagles

WIN SATURDAY LOSE SUNDAY

To Play House Of David Team Here On Tuesday

Rube Wilson's Greenies dropped yesterday's exhibition game in Kinston to the Eagles by a score of 9-3 after having taken the Saturday game here by the score of 15-7.

The Greenies have only one more exhibition definitely scheduled, a contest with the House of David team here Tuesday afternoon.

Regular season play will get under way Thursday of this week, with the Greenies going to Wilson and the two teams playing here on Friday.

The locals got off to a good start in their Saturday's slugfest and before they were retired in the first frame they had pushed five runs across the plate. They were never headed and had little difficulty in taming the Eagles.

It was a different story yesterday, however, although the Greenies got off to another good start and scored three in the first inning. The Eagles, however, came back to get two in their half of the initial inning, knotted the count in the fifth, made three in the sixth, one in the seventh and two in the eighth. Meanwhile, the Greenies were held scoreless after the first inning.

The reason for two general delivery windows at Central City goes back to the lusty days of that city's youth when miners too often became boisterous and made the post office lobby a common gathering place. The ladies window was established to afford a separate service for women.

Play Here Tomorrow At 3 P.M.

Six members of the House of David baseball team, which will engage the Greenies at Guy Smith stadium tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock, are shown above. The bewhiskered team is known throughout the country and has played here on previous occasions. In addition to being unique in that all players wear long beards, the members of the club are good players and will offer Rube Wilson's charges plenty of competition.

Someday I'll Find You

BY MARGARET WIDDEMER

YESTERDAY: It seems almost the last straw to Eileen Gardner that Ris, the fiance of her friend Molly, should suddenly decide he is in love with Eileen. Eileen had come on from Denver to make a career in radio, and that has not gone well. She also hoped to meet again the man she knows only as Martin, and she has not met him. And the money is running low.

Chapter 18 Martin Again

Ris answered eagerly, as if he took hope from what she said. "But now you know that things are different, will you think? And I will make it straight with Molly."

"No," Eileen said. "I can't." She stopped short.

"Ris, don't you see what you're doing to me? I'll have to stop working here. And I haven't any other job, or even money to get back to my home state. Please don't think of it. I don't love you honestly. I don't. And you can't break with Molly, as far as it's gone. Oh, why did you have to feel like this?"

"Is it the man you did not send the telegram to?" he demanded eagerly. "Do you love him still?"

"She answered straightforwardly. "I never did love him. I was just despairing about what to do and where to turn. He'd said he'd always wait for me. But he got over it." She tried to laugh. "You're all like that. Why, Ris, in a month you'll have forgotten all about this. Please don't say anything to Molly."

Ris only said, with the terrible persistence of the gentle, "I will not do anything you do not want. It was sudden, you have not seen. I will not say anything to Molly unless you let me. And you will please go on working here. That would be the worst that I had stopped you earning money."

She was about to say proudly that she would go, anyway. But she checked herself. You cannot be proud when you have no money at all, except fifty dollars in a savings bank; saved to be a frail bride between you and ill luck next time. She had to go on.

"It is no use your staying now," he said gently. "Nobody will come in, such a wet night. I will not trouble you. I will only try to show you—"

He kissed her hand, with the dangling gold charms clicking on its bracelet. Then he went practically enough and got her coat and hat and helped her equip herself for the street and he set walk home. Molly's home before her, did not lift her head from the pillow to greet her, as she used to, gaily. She made ready for bed—her nightdress was ripping, she noticed, as she got into it—feeling like a criminal to Molly. Of course, Molly had seen. And sooner or later, something would precipitate an open break with Molly, with her hot Irish temper. And Eileen would have to leave the shabby room and the little job that helped her carry it, and live on her last fifty dollars, hunting work till it was gone; and then—relief.

Artistides said nothing more when she came in next morning. He only smiled at her, a wide, adoring smile. Nick, glimpsed through the next shop, did not. He glowered unmistakably. Nick knew, one way or another.

It began to snow, which was a relief. The wet, dull days had been depressing everybody; the smart customers were all talking about Bermuda and Florida and how dreadful it was that you couldn't cruise freely now this horrid European war was on.

It was a good day for sales oddly. The sharp fresh snowy air seemed to make people want to come in and buy flowers. Molly, sullen and ugly to the last, went out duty at Nick's at ten, but Eileen and Ris had to stay on. Customers overlapped as if they did it on purpose. Finally the shop was empty; the dumpy over-sweet, over-warm narrow place out of which Eileen wanted to run, screaming. She dove under her desk for her handbag.

As she did so, Ris tiptoed over with that wide, adoring smile, and laid a four-flower corsage on the desk before her.

He said, "You have been sad all day, Eileen. I saw. Now you will look happy, with these to wear? See them yourself—so tiny, so slender, so creamy the skin, so sweet!" She made herself smile. She must take it as a matter of course.

She said quietly, "Thank you, Ris. But I've nowhere to keep them at home. Mayn't I put them in the ice box till morning?"

He looked a little downcast—he was such a boy, after all. Eileen remembered, only twenty-two—but he said, "Of course. But perhaps tomorrow we go to the movies and you wear them."

Her hands shook as she bent over to pull her shabby sandals on; they were the kind you buy at the ten-cent store and snap across your instep. They did not keep deep snow out.

As Eileen straightened up a wave of hatred for Martin—for the man who had made her go stark crazy enough to throw over everything and up to the last, went out duty at Nick's at ten, but Eileen and Ris had to stay on. Customers overlapped as if they did it on purpose. Finally the shop was empty; the dumpy over-sweet, over-warm narrow place out of which Eileen wanted to run, screaming. She dove under her desk for her handbag.

As she did so, Ris tiptoed over with that wide, adoring smile, and laid a four-flower corsage on the desk before her.

He said, "You have been sad all day, Eileen. I saw. Now you will look happy, with these to wear? See them yourself—so tiny, so slender, so creamy the skin, so sweet!" She made herself smile. She must take it as a matter of course.

She said quietly, "Thank you, Ris. But I've nowhere to keep them at home. Mayn't I put them in the ice box till morning?"

afraid of herself. She could have struck him. She could have grangled him. She knew now how girls felt who went and shot men, or mailed them poison in candy. It wasn't ridiculous or unbalanced. Things like this had happened, and what else could she do?

The door tinkled. It was flung wide. There was a rush of crisp air and loud, laughing young voices. A man and girl came in, arm in arm their heads thrown back as they laughed and wrangled and pushed each other. He was in topper and tails, his tall hat pushed a little back on thick fair hair. She was mink-cloaked and tall and white.

He turned his head toward Eileen. It was Martin. Martin, laughing, Martin, an arm half round another girl, Martin, who did not remember her at all.

Confusion
They brought in a gust of winter air and cigarette smoke and night gaiety. The tiny shop and its occupants might have been a back drop for all they knew or cared. They glanced at them carelessly, and went on with their crazy argument.

"You don't mean it," the girl said. "You were just brought up to hear it round the house when your mamma was practicing a suffrage speech. Don't be silly, nothing in trousers ever meant it."

Eileen, small, shabby, desperate stared helplessly. The girl's face came back to her. She was one of those girls who had come downstairs with Martin, an arm thrust through his. Eileen started to laugh hysterically and checked herself. Was the girl never anywhere near him without having hold of him?

He was saying, "Nonsense, Caroline I meant it." The girl shrieked. "Dangerous to go in leaved year."

She swayed and shrieked with laughter again, swinging on his arm. "I mean it word of honor!" he insisted, laughing too. "Any year. All years. Word of honor. Girl has a right to do anything a man can. Gosh, she darn well does and he takes it. Take him on a party—propose to him—what's the odds? Why not? Other things' silly. Not fair."

They continued to laugh. "You go!" Caroline stuttered. "You get me orchids when I tell you—that's Victorian stuff, getting a girl orchids when she asks. Rest' ewe wash. You wouldn't—stick to that. If a girl asked you—marry her—you'd be sick. That's how much equality we poor females got to creep up on you by wiles. You demand wiles—Wiles, Martin!" She shook back her blond curve of hair and whooped.

Martin detached himself from her, guided her hand to a support against the counter, and came over himself and bought a spray of orchids from Ris. He said over his shoulder, "You ought to know by now that when I say word of honor, I'm not kidding. Happens to be my pet little virtue—only one, probably. You know perfectly well—"

"How your mamma raised you? Prominent feminist. Never missed a parade—white horse. Votes for women now spreading through South America."

So that was why he had flown out to say goodbye. Of course. He was Edith Willesdon's son. He was the son of the handsome feminist who had been the commencement day speaker.

He was grinning at Caroline. Sure she is, and the sweet mother anybody wants. Lay off her."

"All right, all right. I told you I meant it. I was brought up like that. A girl's as good as a man, she has a right to as much respect as a man, whether she proposes or turns steeplejack. Hey, we have no use for a bushel of gladness, you nitwit!"

She dropped them on the floor and said in a satisfied way. "Back to the Nine O'clock, then."

All in a minute they were gone. The door tinkled behind them. Eileen stood paralyzed, for a moment. Then she came alive, violently alive all over.

It was Martin. He was here in New York City. He had been here within a yard of her. And she'd never see him again. He hadn't even looked her way.

A sick desperation swept her—and was gone leaving only desperate action. She was frantically sweeping up the scattered sheaf of gladness. She knew perfectly well that they did not want it. She also knew exactly what she was going to do with it.

She ran out across the slippery pavement. She caught Martin's free arm. She said breathlessly, "Here you forget these." And before he could answer she deliberately fell; deliberately screamed "Oh, my ankle!"

It was one of the oldest tricks in the world. And it worked as well as ever. He had her up in a minute. Her heart pounded wildly at the feel of his arm round her.

Fifty-Two Checks For Short Beer
Brussels—(AP)—A loaf of bread will buy beer and beer in Brussels.

The loaf costs four ration coupons, a glass of beer one-thirtieth of one coupon under government decree. Beer lovers are not particularly fond of the plan since it forces them to drink at least 13 beers at one establishment.

At one point near the Transylvanian Alps the Danube river forms the boundary between Rumania, Bulgaria and Yugoslavia.

The weak spot in the Tob's date is in reserve material and the untired quality of the outfield. Ray Murphy, the slugger catcher, is back, however he has no undergirding as yet and prospects of getting a capable one is very dim.

As things stack up at the moment Wilson will offer a capable hurling corps, a dependable infield, a doubtful outfield and an offense that has yet to be tried.

The mound staff of Herring, Talley, Green, Webb, Bisette and one or both of the rookies—Hawley and Williford—should prove to be the most potent in the circuit. Pitching, however, isn't enough. And should anything happen to Ray Murphy, the receiver, it would only be to bad.

In the infield there is Dwight Morris at first; Dickens at second; Peter tuart at short and Chatterbox Beter at third, with Ray Forzait and Ray Harriean as probable reinforcements. The outer defense includes Carnahan with the other two positions in question between Lenz, Jones, Fuller, Hovle, Hicks and Farley, who is also after a mound job.

Brewed down the Tob's are in need of a rookie catcher, two chunkers of the same category and a pair of first year outfielders, plus an exceptionally good utility man also of the freshman variety to attain the spot fans expect them to reach during the coming season.

KNOW THE LAND WHEREOF THEY ARE
New York (AP)—Two members of the east of "Watch on the Rhin" anti-Nazi hit play on Broadway, know something of the countries now influenced by Nazism.

Paul Lukas, who plays the role of an undercover anti-Nazi worker, was born in Budapest, Hungary, served in the Hunzarian army in the last year. Mady Christians, who plays his wife, is a native of Vienna.

Another Viennese, 13-year-old Smyle Brind, is understudy for Anne Blyth, cast as one of the couple's children. She's the daughter of Shamus Brind, actor and writer, and has been in the United States only three years.

Of the 1,451 bills that were introduced in the house of the Colorado legislature only 170 of them were approved and sent to the senate.

NEW FACES IN WILSON LINEUP

No Shortage Of Rookies on Tobaccoist Roster

Wilson, May 5—A number of new faces will be offered by the Wilson Tobs, leaders of the 1940 season's play when the certain raises on the 1941 chase on Thursday and for the most part the new comers will be raw recruits taking their first fling at professional baseball.

The inner defense will be practically the same as last year's—in fact in name it will be identical—however Uncle Sam may alter things before the season gets very old. Try last year's infield, has a low draft number and may be packing a gun on his shoulder instead of a bat before many days.

With the exception of the dependable Earl Carnahan, last year's league leading batter, Wilson will offer a new outfield of rookies. The other two spots are still in dispute with Dave Fuller and Fred Hovle, Wake Forest stars, and Paul Lantz, a Guilford college ace of a year ago, making the strongest bids. Another college youngster is expected to join the outfield candidates shortly after the season opens and this dark horse may upset somebody's applecart.

Bill Herring, the miracle man of Kinston's 1939 rise to Coastal Plain League prominence, isn't making any rash predictions, but he is warning himself with a couple of rookie hurlers who are expected to stick and make the grade in a big way. With Lefty Joe Talley, Monk Webb, Pea Green and Tom Bisette, the local mentor isn't worrying a whole lot about his hurling staff. However, Bill isn't taking any chances and he's putting in a lot of work with "Red" Hawley, Luca, a youngster, and Jack Williford, the Elm City fast ball artist who had a brief trial with Tarboro last spring, in the hopes of bringing both around.

The weak spot in the Tob's date is in reserve material and the untired quality of the outfield. Ray Murphy, the slugger catcher, is back, however he has no undergirding as yet and prospects of getting a capable one is very dim.

ITALIAN CREW GOES ON TRIAL

Judge I. M. Meekins asked when the statute under which the indictment was voted was enacted.

Fishing Season To Open On Saturday May 10th

Reflector Bureau
By HENRY AVERILL
Raleigh, May 5.—May opened last week with the seventh annual Gallopadee in progress at Rocky Mount and the National Polk festival under way in Asheville; and for the rest of the month there will be a varied program for Tar Heels and visitors to the state.
Of outstanding interest to those who like to drop a hook and line or cast a fly is the fact that the warm water fishing season opens on the tenth in the eastern and Piedmont sections. Already the trout season of the west has been inaugurated.
But after the tenth bass, bream, crappie, perch, sunfish and the like will be fair game for the Isaak Walton of North Carolina.

Interest Created In Poultry Market

A great deal of interest is being shown in the new poultry dressing and buying station and egg buying station located in the northwest corner of Keel's warehouse.
Farmers, merchants and business men in general have expressed approval of the new plant.
More than 100 broilers were dressed in the plant last Wednesday and 80 or more chickens were dressed Thursday.
The plant had its first out-of-town customer Thursday. One of the ladies from Ayden who has an established business, stopped in to look the plant over and stated "I am glad I can come in and place an order for dressed poultry. Something like this should have been started long ago."
This plant, under the management of Wesley Harvey, is not only able to perform a much needed service to merchants but will aid the farmers to develop the poultry industry in the county.
It is possible for the farmers to have a year-round market through his own plant.
Merchants express themselves as thoroughly satisfied with the preparation of the poultry.
In so far as practical merchants are urged to place their orders at least a day in advance. Tuesdays and Thursdays will be the main killing days.
Eggs are purchased and graded so as to remove all inedible eggs and eggs of low quality.
The housewife will be found appreciative of this service since the loss from inedible and low quality may run as high as 20 per cent or more. If ungraded eggs are purchased by the housewife, after she has discarded as high as 10 to 20 per cent of them, she begins to realize that the inedible eggs have cost far more than good graded eggs would have cost in the first place.

In 1917, he was told.
"We were at war then, weren't we?" he asked.
"We're virtually at war now," Rouse replied.
Loomis said in his argument that he understood that the owners of the Italian ship had instructed the crew through "an Italian embassy attache" to "dismantle" the engines, but he did not mention any names.
Meekins overruled the motion.
Taking of testimony was scheduled to begin after the luncheon recess.

ASSERTS MISSIONS PART OF RELIGION

lating everyday doings into significance Mr. Grant said:
"Unless you can move kindly toward all people, you are not a Christian."
Next he developed the idea that some people found it depressing to be told unfortunate things. Then he said:
"To carry on the work of God we must know something of human needs. What do our children know of what our church is trying to do? Put Christian literature in your homes."

County School Lunch Rooms
In the Negro schools of Pitt county there has been added new emphasis on the lunches for every child at school. Through the federal government surplus commodities, mainly the basic foods, have been given to a large number of the schools. In order for every child to get a well-balanced lunch we have had to depend on the assistance of the parents and friends of the various communities. We are grateful for the cooperation that has been given us. In the Rock Spring community, Mr. Gus Forbes gave the use of a vacant house for the lunch room. In a number of the schools parents gave material and labor for the renovation of rooms for the lunch rooms and were able to secure the services of WPA workers.

We wish to thank the lunch room supervisor, Mrs. Mattie Hooker, for the assistance that she gave in the setting up of lunch rooms where it seemed almost impossible. Her advice and encouragement has been the cause of many lunch rooms in the county this year.

WPA lunch rooms have two-fold purposes. 1. To provide nourishing foods for underprivileged and undernourished children. 2. To provide work for needy certified women who are able to work.

For the school year, the following schools have had approved lunch rooms with certified workers: Fountain, Bruce, Simpson, Ayden, Farmville, Rock Spring, Pitt County Training School; Cherry Lane, Pleasant Plain, Grifton, St. Peter's, Helen, Cox, Bynum, Lang, Moye, Calico, Clemons, Pacolus, Ellis, Salie Branch, Shelmerdine, Piney Grove, Holly Hill.

Sixty-five women work in these lunch rooms. Every school should be better prepared another year to serve food daily. It is to be hoped that every parent in every community will do his and her part to see that there is sufficient food preserved during the summer to carry over for a balanced diet.

For information concerning canning and gardens call Mrs. Mattie Hooker, WPA lunch room supervisor. Telephone 2751. You can write her at Box 427, Greenville. She will give you the proper information concerning your summer garden and canning.

Pitt County School Exhibits
April 25 was a full day for the Pitt county Negro schools. Teachers and students from all schools assembled in the Greenville colored high school auditorium at 8:30 a. m., at which time speaking from the first through the seventh grade was held. It was inspirational and encouraging to see the wonderful talent demonstrated by these children. At 12:30 p. m., we were dismissed for lunch period of one hour. Promptly at 1:30 we reassembled for the afternoon session. The session had many musical numbers from schools represented and an excellent and informing address by Dr. R. J. Slay of East Carolina Teachers College.

Dr. Slay chose as his subject a very timely one at this critical period, "What Shall We Eat?" Many points of great value were given, some of which were: 1. Food is necessary to obtain energy; 2. Man can't live by bread alone, he must have a balanced diet; 3. Our problem today is not sufficient food but the proper food. There are certain foods we must have to have the nutrition to build and maintain sound bodies and sound minds; 4. There are two groups of foods we should include in a balanced diet: Fuel foods—carbohydrates, sugars and starches, fats, fruits, breads and cereals; Minerals—calcium, phosphorus, iodine, iron, vitamins.

Dr. Slay pointed out that all these foods are within the reach of everyone. "One can own a cow and obtain milk which will supply every food mentioned and needed to give healthy bodies. One can have a garden and raise vegetables to help supply these needed foods for a balanced diet and one can also have chickens.

In eating vegetables, Dr. Slay stated that the "pot liquors" should never be thrown out to the animals, but rather one should eat this as it contains a good number of the minerals needed in the body and that the chaff from the yellow corn should not be discarded, but eaten for that containing needed food value.

He ended by telling us that we as people of Eastern Carolina are blessed, for here we can raise every one of these food substances we need to develop strong, healthy bodies and minds.

Miss I. M. Donnell, supervisor, responded to Dr. Slay. She expressed the consensus of opinion that we had been recipients of a most enlightening address. She urged the teachers to take advantage of the many points given by helping the patrons of the various communities solve their unbalanced diet problem. She also urged the teachers to can the excess foods given them to help along for the ensuing year.

All through the day exhibits from all the schools in the county were on display in the various classrooms. Judges rendered their decisions in the afternoon session. The judges for this occasion came from East Carolina Teachers College. Miss

Levis served as chairman of this group, with Miss Catherine Holtzclaw, director. The decision on the exhibits were as follows:
