The Greenville School Board and also the Board of Aldermen last night approved a program whereby the general set-up of the local school system would be changed.

The long-range program, part of which will go into effect with the start of the term beginning in September of this year eliminates the 6-3-3 plan of three years elementary, three years of junior high and three years of senior high school and substitutes eight grades of elementary work and four of high school.

DEAL IS MADE ON FIRE TRUCK

Contract Authorized For Most Modern Equipment

The Board of Aldermen, in a special session last night, authorized the purchase of a fire truck from the Peter Pirsh and Sons Company of Kenosha, Wis., for a price of $10,459.50, less five per cent discount for cash.

The truck will be equipped with a 60-foot automatic aerial ladder. It will be one of the largest and most modern in this section. It will weigh 14,800 pounds, be 34 feet and two inches in length, 90 inches wide, 92 inches high and will require a turning radius of 38 feet.

The fire truck purchase was one of several important matters to come before the board. The financial situation in regard to preparing the budget was considered and it was brought out that members of the board favored the employment of two more full-time firemen. This step, it was disclosed, would provide for a five cents decrease in insurance on business property.

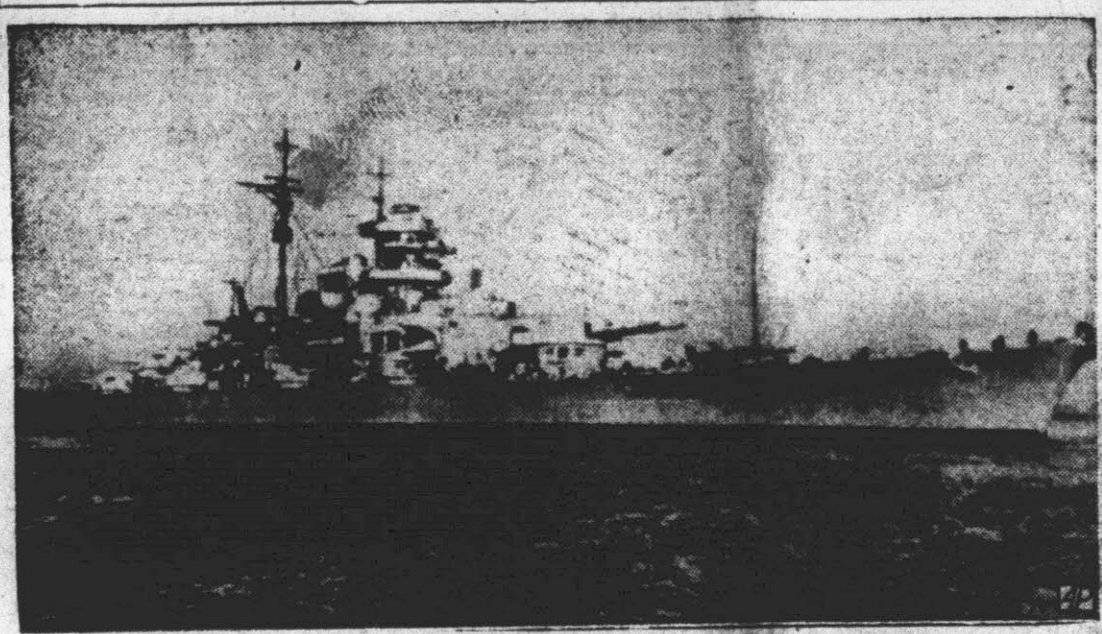

Chief George Clark appeared before the board and requested two additional policemen beginning with the new fiscal year. This proposal also appeared to have the approval of the board if funds can be secured. The board voted to close the city offices each Wednesday afternoon during the summer months.

Would-Be Slayer Is Executed In Italy

Rome, May 27.—(AP)—Vasili Laci Mihailoff, accused of firing several shots at an automobile in which King Vittorio Emanuele was riding with the Albanian premier on a visit to that country May 17, was executed at dawn today in Tirana prison.

The Italians said Mihailoff, who was described as a Greek afflicted with a "poetic madness," fired the shots in an attempt on the life of the Albanian premier, Shewket Verlaci. All the shots went wild. Mihailoff was convicted by a military tribunal and sentenced to death before a firing squad.

A Timely Picture — But Another Story

The above picture of the 35,000-ton Bismarck, which sank the British battleship Hood, largest in the world, last Saturday, was released by jubilant Nazi officials and radioed from Berlin yesterday. Explanatory lines accompanying the picture in newspapers throughout the world, however, will not read as Reich leaders had anticipated, for the Bismarck was sent to the bottom of the Atlantic about 400 miles from the French coast today after having been trapped following a three-day hunt by units of the British fleet.

Hillman Accused Of Part In 'Stimulating' Strike

Charge Brought By Witness At Committee Hearing

Berlin, May 27.—(AP)—Secretary of State Cordell Hull's comment that German Grand Admiral Erich Raeder's statement Sunday implied a threat to South American countries as well as the United States "can not be understood here," an authorized commentator said today.

"We certainly are not aware that any South American country conducts or plans so-called neutrality patrols or considers conveying war materials," the spokesman said.

"No South American country was meant and it was not necessary for the admiral to direct any such remark to Latin-American nations."

FRANCE AGAIN ASSURES U.S.

Says Fleet Will Not Be Ceded To Any Power

Washington, May 27 (AP) — The French government gave renewed assurances in writing today to the United States that the French fleet and colonies would not be surrendered to Germany or any other power.

A note containing specific guarantees was delivered by the French ambassador Gaston Henry-Haye, to Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State.

The note, the ambassador told reporters, was drafted by him on instructions from the Vichy government. It was intended to remove misgivings here on the scope of French-German collaboration.

The French acted apparently in conformity with a request last week by Secretary of State Hull that the Vichy government should define its position clearly in writing if it wished to convince the world that pro-Hitler elements were not in supreme control at Vichy.

Henry-Haye declined to disclose full details of the note, but he told reporters: "We hope that it will be a disappointment to those people who are trying to disturb Franco-American relations."

Kites have been flown as high as four miles.

Senator Connally (D-Tex.) asked who sent this representative and Brown replied that he had been sent there at the direction of Hillman. He said the representative gave aid to a "dual union," identified as a CIO group, at a time when the AFL was sponsoring a drive to expel Communists from the plant.

Hillman is a former national vice-president of the CIO.

Meanwhile, Senator Truman (D-Mo.) proposed that the American Federation of Labor expel the International Machinists Association from its ranks for approving a strike of machinists which has tied up work in San Francisco shipyards in violation of an AFL agreement.

President William Green of the AFL, testifying in the Senate Defense Investigating Committee's inquiry into the walkout at 11 shipyards, stopping $500,000 of ship construction, said Truman's proposal would constitute "extreme steps."

FIRESIDE CHAT IS SET TONIGHT

President To Remove All Doubt As To National Policy In Address Scheduled For 9:30 P.M., EST

Washington, May 27. — (AP)—In the midst of preparing a momentous pronouncement on governmental policy, President Roosevelt asked Congress today for $3,319,000,000 in appropriations for more airplanes.

Stephen Early, presidential secretary, told reporters that the chief executive would extend his fireside chat, beginning at 9:30, EST, tonight an extra 15 minutes and asserted:

"I think you can say that by Wednesday morning there can be no longer any doubt as to what the national policy of this government is. I think it is just as plain as the nose on your face."

Early announced that the request for huge new funds for planes was being sent to Capitol Hill in a letter to Speaker Rayburn.

Of the total, $2,790,000,000 would be for the army and $529,000,000 for the navy.

Early declined to estimate the number of planes to be ordered with the money or to say whether bombers would be emphasized.

Nor would he go into any details on the possible content of the presidential address tonight. He said, however, that it had been cut and worked over and eliminations and additions made until it had reached the point where it could not very well be fitted into the original 30 minutes for which it was scheduled.

FIELD VISITED BY INSPECTOR

Says Airport Adaptable For Training School

Major L. S. Stranathan, inspector for the U. S. Army Air Corps, today visited the city-county airport here and while his formal report will not be made known probably for several days, he declared that the field was "adaptable" for the establishment of a cadet training school such as is proposed to be established here.

Major Stranathan was accompanied by Lieut. W. G. Prince and the two were taken on a tour of the field by local officials.

The city and county have entered into a contract with the Safair Corporation for the establishment of a training school here if the field is approved for such use and the corporation secures a government contract for training pilots.

While Major Stranathan declined to make any definite statement regarding approval of the field, officials who talked with him found much encouragement in the statement that the field was adaptable for use as a training base.

Should the field be approved, it is felt certain that Safair Corporation will be able to secure a government contract since this type of defense is being stepped up by great proportions.

Establishment of the school would bring up to 200 students here and barracks would be erected on the airport grounds. An administration building and other structures would be erected by the corporation. If the program lasts five years the buildings would be decided to the city at no cost.

In addition to the students, it is estimated that the program would bring 70 or 100 families here, including instructors, mechanics and others affiliated with the project.

By The Associated Press Germany's new 35,000-ton battleship Bismarck, trapped by overwhelming guns of the British fleet and the torpedoes of darting planes, was sent to the bottom of the North Atlantic after a three-day hunt, at 11 a. m. (4 a. m., EST), today, even as her guns still blazed and her radio sent a last message home, "Long live the Fuehrer!"

With her swastika flag flying to the end, the big German sea raider fell victim to what the British described as "the whole apparatus of our ocean control" in a pitched battle some 400 miles west of Brest, France.

Thus did Britain's Royal Navy repay the greatest blow to its pride since the war began—the sinking on Saturday of the 42,100-ton battleship Hood, the world's largest fighting craft, with the loss of approximately 1,300 officers and men, in a fight with the Bismarck off Greenland.

Overtaking the German man-of-war as she reeled in uncontrollable circles, her rudder and propellers smashed by an aerial torpedo, the British fleet delivered the coup de grace and closed one of the greatest naval chapters in history.

Ironically, the planes which struck the mortal blow were from the aircraft carrier Ark Royal, often reported by the Germans to have been sunk.

Accounts varied whether the giant battleship was sunk by gunfire or air-launched torpedo. Possibly both struck simultaneously, with planes diving again and again to hurl their torpedoes into the Bismarck's vitals while the Prince of Wales and other British warships poured a tempest of fire into the German raider, fountaining helplessly in the sun-lit waters.

(At 4 a. m., Berlin radio reported that the Bismarck's last message read: "Ship out of control. Will fight to the last shell. Long live the fuehrer!")

The fleeing Nazi raider was reported heading for refuge from pursuing British warships in a French port, either Brest or St. Nazaire, when torpedo-carrying planes from the British aircraft carrier Ark Royal sent her to the bottom.

Carey-Harding.
Wilson, May 27.—The First Methodist Church was the scene of a lovely wedding, marked by dignity and simplicity, on Saturday evening at eight-thirty when Miss Mary Dorcas Harding became the bride of Mr. Anthony James Carey in a formal ceremony, with the bride's pastor, the Reverend H. B. Porter, officiating, using the impressive ring ritual.

Stately palms and ferns made a pretty background for the tall baskets of white peonies and gladioli which were interspersed by seven-branched candelabra with burning white tapers. The chancel rail was outlined with an attractive arrangement of white sweetpeas and gypsophylla.

Prior to the ceremony, Mrs. W. S. Harris and Mrs. Herbert Waldrop of Greenville, soloist, rendered a program of pre-nuptial music. The solo numbers included "At Dawning" and "Because." During the ceremony "I Love You Truly" was softly played. The traditional wedding marches were used for the professional and recessional.

Ushers were: Messrs. Norman Dickerson and Simon Sitterson of Kinston; Wiley Parker of Goldsboro and W. J. Taylor, Jr., of Wilson. The bridegroom was attended by his brother, Mr. Jack Carey, of Kinston, as best man.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, Mr. Preston Arthur Tyson, was lovely in her wedding gown of egg-shell duchesse satin, form-fitting with a sheered girle and full skirt extending into a circular train. The square neckline was accentuated by a collar of seed pearls and the long sleeves tapered to a calla point over the hands, while from the neckline to the waist in the back was a row of tiny white satin buttons. Her veil of antique bridal illusion fell from a Baby Stuart cap, made from the lace of her mother's wedding dress, and extended into a long flowing train. The cap was caught in the back by a platinum pin, one worn by her great-grandmother on her wedding day. Her flowers were an exquisite bouquet of roses, orchids and lilies of the valley.

The bride was attended by Miss Julia Gaylord of Greenville, as maid of honor; Mrs. John Burton, sister of the groom, of Kinston, dame of honor, and bridesmaids Misses Carter McKinnon of Hartsville, S. C., and Margaret Abbott of Wilson. They wore identical dresses of egg-shell silk marquisette with fitted bodice. Panels of matching silk lace were used in the full skirts which fell into short trains. Their dresses had Sweetheart necklines and Bishop sleeves and they wore caps made of the same material as the bride's veil. They carried handsome bouquets of pink carnations, snapdragons and cornflowers.

Mrs. Tyson, mother of the bride, wore a dress of white. The close-fitting waist of lace had a very full skirt of chiffon. Her flowers were a shoulder corsage of lavender orchids. Mrs. Carey, mother of the groom, wore a becoming dress of blue lace and a shoulder corsage of pink orchids.

Immediately following the wedding, Mr. and Mrs. Tyson, parents of the bride, entertained at an informal reception at their home on West Nash street.

As the guests arrived they were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. John Harris and introduced to the receiving line by Miss Mary Gilliam Hill. The receiving line was composed of Mr. and Mrs. Tyson, the bride and groom; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Wright Carey of Kinston, parents of the groom; Miss Julia Gaylord, Mrs. John Burton, Miss Carter McKinnon and Miss Margaret Abbott. Receiving at the doorway between the living rooms were: Mrs. H. W. Winstead of Rocky Mount, aunt of the bride, and Mrs. Lillian Perry, grandmother of the groom. Presiding over the punch bowls were: Mrs. Norris Barnes, Jr., of Elm City; Mrs. W. C. Hunter, Miss Harriet Fleming and Miss Sarah Grandy Taylor.

Directing the guests upstairs to the living room was Mrs. A. B. Carroll, Jr., and receiving in the gift room were: Mrs. W. T. Lamm, Jr., and Mrs. W. D. Hackney, 3rd. Mrs. Johnston King, Jr., greeted the guests at the dining room door and serving attractive bridal ices and individual cakes were Mrs. Hal Wilson, Mrs. W. M. Jones, Jr., Miss Lillian West, Miss Jane Hall, Miss Marion Tyson and Miss Emmy Lou Scales.

Mrs. Howard White presided over the bride's book in the sun-parlor and goodbyes were said by Mrs. Dick Barnes.

The entire home was beautiful with an array of summer's choicest flowers, the bridal motif of green and white being effectively carried out in the dining room. An arrangement of handsome lilies and ferns in the living room formed a pretty background for the receiving line. The dining room table, overlaid with an exquisite hand made flax

Forty Years Ago Today

THE DAILY REFLECTOR
Tuesday, May 27, 1901

We hear there is talk of again giving the opera "Merry Milk Maids" that was very successfully presented here in the old opera house a number of years ago. Those who remember it will be delighted to witness it again.

It has been suggested that Greenville get back to the old custom and have a real stirring Fourth of July celebration this year. Why not? We have the finest band in the state, we have a good military company and we have large fraternal organizations, and all might unite together and form a parade that would do the town credit. Let's have it and invite everybody in reach to come see us that day. The time to start is right now.

THE SACRED DAGGER

By Edna Miller Nash

YESTERDAY: Anne Willard and her two companions have been captured on their way to her father's camp in the Mongolian desert. Their captor is taking Blaze Sherwood and Pete Mackey to the Emir, but a native woman has disguised Anne as an old hag, and is slipping her into the Emir's palace, where one of the ruler's wives will try to help her escape. By accident both parties are spending the night in the same inn, and Blaze has penetrated Anne's disguise.

Chapter Eight Magie Cure

Mackey grinned. "Then maybe the first guy with nerve enough to take the dagger wins Miss Willard."
"May be," agreed Sherwood.
Anne laughed mischievously. "You notice that Dr. Sherwood refused to take it."
Mackey's eyes began to twinkle. "If you could see yourself, my girl you'd understand why."
Anne laughed again and rubbed more soot on her face.
Sherwood looked at her. "By the way, Daddap is here."
"Your friend the seer?"
"Yes, mother," he teased. "He is posing as your son."
"That one! How extraordinary!"
"He said that if I ever got into trouble and needed him he'd come where I was," Sherwood grinned. "I must be in trouble. He seems to be able to go anywhere he wants to go."

He was educated in India and England. He's been to America. A year or so ago I became lost and wound up in his monastery on the Shanli Lun side of the Bekkan Bula mountains. He met me with the greeting, 'Welcome, Rimpoche. I've been expecting you for a week.' It was in his monastery that I learned about Shy-a Nago. He hears voices and sees visions. I never believe him until the event occurs. But it is astonishing how often he is right."
They had forgotten Mackey who sat listening, holding his aching jaw.

"Does that lama know?" asked Anne. "that I carry the Nagara dagger."
"He told me two months ago that you would come and receive it."
"I didn't know it myself two months ago," she cried.
"There you are," he shrugged.
"Does he predict that you and the Prince of Shanli Lun will take Shy-a Nago away from my father?"
"Not exactly," Sherwood said, leaning back on his elbow on the platform so that she could not see his face. "but he says that the time has come for the treasure to be revealed."
"Is this the prophecy my father spoke of in his notes?"
"Dr. Oliver and the members of your father's expedition should know," he answered evasively. "Do not under any circumstances let the dagger out of your possession."
Mackey groaned. "I wish she'd use it to cut my throat." Sherwood looked at him sympathetically.

"Maybe Daddap can relieve you. Some of these native magicians have remarkable healing powers."
Daddap agreed readily to do something for Mackey's toothache. The latter, looking a bit foolish that he should lend himself to such hocus obeyed the command to seat himself on a sheepskin, cross legged, his back against the wall. Though the other men were Mohammedan if anything, they crouched down to watch the ceremony.

The lama passed his hands lightly over Mackey's face and chest, fingered his spinal column and shook his finger tips as if to toss off poison. He stared into the white man's eyes intently for a moment, then raised his voice in a familiar chant.
"Better now?" he asked.
Mackey blinked. "I don't know." The lama's manner changed to a certain impishness. He made more passes before Mackey's face, and finally, by a clever slight of hand drew an eagle's claw from Mackey's ear, which object, he declared, had caused the pain.

"Hell," cried Mackey, grabbing the claw and jumping to his feet with an indignant look at Sherwood "trying to make a monkey out of me, eh?"
Sherwood grinned. "How's the toothache?"
A blank look came over Mackey's face. He put his hand to his jaw and pinched and probed a bit before he answered reluctantly. "The darn thing seems to have quit hurting."
"Here's hoping you'll have a good night's sleep," said Sherwood.

To The Emir

The headman rose and the other men followed him out. Presently the lama returned bringing Anne's big traveling case. She didn't know how he had contrived to get it and she didn't ask. But it was good to realize there were clean and decent clothes in her possession even though she dare not wear them.
"Thank you, Daddap," she said as he turned to leave.
He bowed to her. "I give you advice. Trust Sherwood, Rimpoche. The master is foolish sometimes—but trust him—you're foolish too."
Anne stared after his retreating back. Then she gave herself a little shake. "He's right, Anne Willard—you're foolish in more ways than one."
The next afternoon they came to the edge of the oasis that made up Arishar, the capital city of Yangsar. Canals lined with willow and mulberry followed the road. Paddy fields that would later be flooded for rice planting, stretched away on either side. Here the country was gay with spring, acacia in full leaf and apricots and peaches, round green buttons on the trees.
Under the shadow of the city wall Anne bade her white friends goodbye. They were well ahead of the main caravan. Khalima struggled with Anne's donkey to keep him from following them off the road.
"Farewell," said Anne lightly. "Have a good time in jail."
"Watch your step in the harem," Mackey warned her.
Sherwood walked over and stood beside her. They gazed at each other for a moment in silence. Then she said: "You're looking at me as father does, when he's going to tell me something for my own good."
"I feel as responsible as a father," he said in a troubled voice. "This is no place for a kid like you. Have you plenty of money?"
"Sufficient," she assured him. "And I'm no kid. I can take care of myself."
"That's all you know about it!" he said. His voice gruff with restrained emotion. "When I think of some of the things that can and do happen in this country... Well, it's on the knees of the gods I guess! I don't know whether my own credentials as a member of the government of Shanli Lun will rate me a toss into prison or a bid to the palace. You can never tell the mood of these petty tyrants. If things go right with you make for Chuka, which is just across the border."

"Thanks. Anything I can do for you when I arrive there?"
"If you hear I'm judged you might notify the Prince of Shanli Lun." Then his mod lightened. "This fool lama vows we'll come out of it all right so it might be just as well to believe him. Optimism is no more stupid than pessimism."
"If as stupid," said Anne, her smile revealing the pretty girl back of the old witch make-up.
His eyes caught the vision.
"I suppose I shouldn't kiss you."
"My face too dirty?" she asked mischievously, feeling safe behind her soot.

"I'd risk that," he grinned, "but Mackey might think he was entitled to the same privilege."
Her eyes widened. "And why not—Tuck?"
"I'll call him over," he said swiftly. She caught his arm. "Silly. You know I was fooling."
"It's dangerous to fool with me." His expression sobered.

The Princess
She laughed, a bit stirred by his distress. She wished she knew what was in his mind.
As Mackey says, do watch your step," he pleaded softly. "I'm afraid things won't go as smoothly as you think (and if you should need help for God's sake get word to me.) He stepped back and let loose the donkey's bridle. "Goodbye, precious one."
"Goodbye," she answered her eyes suddenly filling with tears. Now she recalled the meaning of the word Rimpoche. It was good to be called precious once more.
They rode along the narrow street of the bazaars; they passed through an arch by a bell tower and came into the square before the mosque where beggars and holy men lay in the welcome sunshine. Anne did not know when Daddap left them, but as they came at last to the wall of the Emir's palace on rising ground above the river she saw that he had disappeared.

Khalima knocked at an obscure gate in the wall and was admitted to a kitchen courtyard, donkey and all. She and her mother greeted each other warmly and the other servants gathered round to welcome her. They took Anne to the Princess at once, just as she was opening a door into a tiled courtyard with a marble tank sunk in the center, a pine tree at one end and rose vines climbing on it.
In a raised boudoir off the courtyard the Princess, with other ladies of the palace, sat smoking on a water pipe passed round the circle. She was a dark-skinned, middle-aged woman with heavy lidded eyes, a little moustache, and hair that hung in hennaed wisps about her face.
Her boredom lifted as Khalima unfolded Anne's story for her ear alone. She rose from the rug and motioned them to follow her into a private room.
Drawing Anne to the light she rubbed a hennaed finger on her face to expose the fair skin beneath, examined the long, slender hands and almond-shaped nails, pushed back the shawl to expose the chestnut hair.
"Yallah! You are beautiful," she said. "I will help you. My husband the Emir, shall not know." She clapped her hands and servants appeared followed by the seven ladies of the harem, daughters and wives of the Emir. Anne never did get them all straightened out.

ECTC Visited By Czech Journalist

Mrs. Alice Hoffman Whitehead, a Czech journalist and former Czech correspondent of the London Daily Express and leading continental papers, has been a guest the past few days of Miss Stella Grogan, head of the infirmary of East Carolina Teachers College. Miss Grogan first met this distinguished woman when she was with the American Red Cross Commission to the devastated areas during the days of reconstruction after the first World War, and Mrs. Whitehead was serving the commission as interpreter. Later she turned to journalism and work as a translator.

Last night Mrs. R. J. Slay and Mrs. A. D. Frank invited members of the English and History departments of the college and a few other interested friends to meet Mrs. Whitehead at the Slay home on Student street and hear her talk informally in answer to many questions of her experiences.

Since 1937 Mrs. Whitehead has been living in New York, though she made one trip back to Czechoslovakia a year or so later and got out of Prague only with great difficulty on the day the German troops entered the city.
She is the widow of the famous young artist, Paul Whitehead.
Mrs. Whitehead left today for New Orleans.

Strength For The Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

NOTHING WORSE THAN PRIDE
Pride is the greatest of all vices. Do you believe this? The medieval Church made this estimate of pride, and while there have been those in every age who doubted this, still a little thought will show that the churchmen who believed and taught this were right. It may seem at first glance that dishonesty, impurity, and violence are much greater sins than pride. But the gross sins generally grow out of the subtle sins, and of these subtle sins none is so devastating as that which leads a man to think so well of himself that he thinks contemptuously of other men and of God.
The dictionary defines pride as inordinate self-esteem, or an unreasonable conceit of superiority. It leads people into more mistakes, more cruel and callous behavior toward others, more ridiculous mismanagement of their own affairs, than does any other vice by which our judgment or our good intentions can be distorted. It has been said that pride is to the character like the attic to the house — the highest part and generally the most empty. Ruskin declared that pride is at the bottom of all great mistakes, and daily experience certainly teaches us all that it lies at the root of most crime and wrong-doing.
The worst thing about pride is that even those who are dying of it often do not know they have it. They regard the fever-flush a sign of health.

BRITAIN FIGHTS BACK

The reported sinking of the German battleship Bismarck today is another evidence that despite setbacks the British are still a determined people. The loss of the British battle cruiser Hood at the hands of the German fleet Saturday naturally was a shock to the British people, but instead of running to cover, British warships set out on the heels of the German fleet to avenge its loss, with the result that seventy-two hours after the sinking of the Hood the Bismarck likewise went to a watery grave. News of the sinking of the Bismarck brought rejoicing not only in Britain but in this country as well. Not rejoicing at the fact that apparently 1,500 German sailors went to their deaths in the sinking, but because of the fact that the loss of the Bismarck is a far greater blow to Germany than was the loss of the Hood to England.

AMERICA IS READY

The world eagerly awaits the address of President Roosevelt which is to be delivered at 9:30 tonight. Upon this address might depend the future policies and actions of this country with regard to the war that is now threatening freedom throughout the world.
No doubt the matter of convoys will be one of the chief topics of discussion and in view of Germany's threat to draw us into the war if we decide to convoy supplies to England, there seems to be little choice for this country but to cast its lot fully alongside that of Britain. Everyone is aware British defeat means that eventually we must stand alone against the forces of totalitarianism and we believe the great majority of our people feel at this time that they would rather take their chances on conveying supplies to England and thereby help England to win the war than to have to do the job of stopping the dictators alone at a later date.

Tonight's address no doubt will prove history making, for upon it may rest the answer to the present world conflict. We are sure that what the President will have to say will define clearly the course that we should follow and we believe that as a whole our people are ready and willing to answer any call, no matter how great the sacrifice might be, to assure our freedom from a future yoke of the dictators.

Washington Daybook

Washington — Jim Preston, who works for Archives and probably carries more facts, historical and contemporary, about Washington than any other man in these parts, and I were chewing the rag.
Somehow we got to discussing the subject of women being drafted for national defense.
"Whether women should be drafted or shouldn't," said Jim, "is somebody else's argument — not mine — but American women have been fighting their men's battles with them ever since there was a country."
"Why, right here in the files and records in this building are scores of stories — not just about women who went a-nursing the sick and wounded — but about women who shouldered a gun and did their share of the shooting, too. They did it in the Civil War and in the Indian wars and in the Revolution — in fact in just about every scrap on American soil."
"Of course every school kid knows about Molly Pitcher, but I'll bet there are few if any who ever heard of the strange case of Deborah Sampson."
"Started in Massachusetts. Her story started up in Massachusetts when a fellow named Robert Shurtleff joined one of the Massachusetts regiments in April of 1781. This fellow Shurtleff, it seems, was a good soldier and if the colonists in those days had had time to knock out a lot of medals, he probably would have gotten one. In a way, he did get one — but that's getting ahead of the yarn."
"It was at the battle of Tarrytown that Shurtleff, in there pitching lead as fast as his old muzzle-loader could be stoked and fired, got on the receiving end of a bullet. His pals carried him out of the battle and back to one of those emergency hospitals, probably in some little farm-house, and then — the army surgeon discovered he wasn't Robert Shurtleff at all, but Deborah Sampson.

"Deborah must have done a little fast talking, because the army surgeon kept her secret. She got well, rejoined the army, with General Washington when Lord Cornwallis surrendered, and was honorably discharged in November, 1783.
"Now, to get along to the way Deborah was honored. That year or the next, Deborah married a fellow named Benjamin Gannett. And Deborah put in her application for a pension and got it — $48 a year at first and later on, $76.80. She and Benjamin lived together happily for 43 years and then Deborah died.
Took An Act Of Congress.
"And here's how we got the story. Gannett, the widower of a soldier who had been pensioned for years, petitioned Congress — with all the evidence — claiming that he was entitled to the same consideration as the widow of a pensioned soldier and that the pension should be continued.
"It took an act of Congress to do it, but darned if Congress didn't act. Come on out to the files. I've got the minutes of Congress right here and all the documents in the case."
And darned if Jim hadn't. There it was in flowing script, setting forth that since the annals of this country "furnish no other similar example of female heroism, fidelity and courage" as displayed by Deborah Sampson, her widower, Benjamin Gannett should receive a pension of $80 a year for the rest of his days.
Congress has never granted another "medal" like that.

Short Shots

Reflector Bureau.
By HENRY AVERILL
Raleigh, May 27.—The Charlotte Observer editorially challenged the Hickory Record, in effect, to name persons on the state pay roll who devote as much time to politics as Dr. Ralph McDonald who draws a reasonably modest stipend as associate extension director at the University of North Carolina.
Which ought not to be hard for the Hickory paper to do. Off hand without intending to make the list exclusive, there comes to mind a former fellow-Hickory man—Oscar Pitts, whose salary as director of the prison division is well above that of the U. N. C. professor. Then there's Robert Grady Johnson, now getting $500 a month in a special-made highway job in the interim between service in the post now occupied by Pitts and his assumption of the arduous duties of ABC board chairman.
There are others—and their number isn't negligible—who could be cited; but the two named are probably the most shining examples.

Topic
Last week end your reporter spied former State Senator Will Graham and former State Senator Wayland Sprull sitting side by side in the Sir Walter lobby. He did not approach close enough to learn the details of their conversation; but there's a good chance that the ears of Commissioner of Agriculture Kerr Scott's ears ought to have been burning.
Maybe the pair were comparing notes and mutually agreeing that the farmer from Alamance is a right tough man to beat.

Mayor Fiorella La Guardia of New York will be able to add the recent national defense duties imposed upon him to the tremendous job of running the biggest city in the country; but it's nothing to worry about from this point of view.
On his recent visit to North Carolina he was quoted by a Tar Heel official as having said in laughing at a report he'd made federal Secretary for Labor:
"What would I do in the other 22 hours every day?"

Such Ignorance!
Governor J. Melville Broughton tells this one about a trip into Yadkin county:

It seems the governor was hunting for a school he was slated to "bust" and didn't know exactly where to find it. He stopped to ask a roadsider its whereabouts. The chap said:
"Sure, I know where it is, I'm going that way, if you'll take me along I'll show you the way—it's up about Brooks' cross-roads."
That was perfectly agreeable to the governor, so the citizen was picked up. After a moment he said very seriously:
"It's funny; but a lot of people don't know where Brooks' cross-roads is."

Simple Explanation
Your reporter fell to wondering why the recent legislature upped the appropriations for old age assistance, but turned a completely deaf ear to all requests for more money for the aid to dependent children.
"That's an easy one," cracked a cynical companion, "the children can't vote."

Help Prevent Forest Fires
Sportsmen! Do your part in preserving hunting and fishing by cooperating in the prevention of forest fires. Blackened ruins follow the burning of brush and forest lands and may make the areas covered useless for years following needlessly started fires. Be careful with matches and fire in any form in the outdoors.

McGarity And Crowe Get Homers As Locals Win 11-5

LOCALS OUTHIT BY GOLDSBORO

Five Errors Made By Each Team In Contest Here

The Greens last night combined six hits — two of them homers by McGarity and Crowe — with five Goldsboro errors and eight walks to take an 11-5 victory in the opener of a two-game series with the Goldbugs.

Goldsboro meanwhile was getting 12 hits and Greenville was making five errors, but the Greens got the "breaks" and cut a full game off Wilson's lead as the Tobs were losing to Rocky Mount. The Greens play the Tobs here Friday afternoon and there Friday night in a Memorial Day program.

Goldsboro got two in the first and added one more in the third before the Greens were able to score. The Goldbugs then got another in the fourth to hold a 4-1 lead at the end of the first half of the frame. In the last half Wilson drew a walk and Bulluck took first after being hit by a pitched ball. With this setup McGarity came through with his 340-foot homer to account for three runs.

The locals made two in the fifth when Benny Crowe blasted one over the scoreboard after Caraway had walked.

Goldsboro retaliated with one in the first of the sixth, but the Greens came back with five to end the scoring for the night.

McGarity and Scagg each got two to lead the Greens at bat.

Steers Breaks Jump Record Again

Tow-headed Les Steers from Oregon University—for the second time within a month—broke the world's high jump record by belly-rolling over the bar at 6 feet 10 1/2 inches at the Los Angeles coliseum relays. He eclipsed his mark of 6 feet 25-32 inch made at Seattle a month ago.

in his own sophisticated style. The sets representing his Florida mansion, designed by the Russian artist Nicolai Remisoff, are deliberately gay and modern in keeping with the story tone—and seeing is only half believing.

The stairway, for instance. A beautiful spiral, unsupported from "ceiling" to floor, and each step carpeted in Chinese goatskin. For a pictorial smash you can't beat a fur-lined stairway. As it works out on the set it isn't very practical—it has to be trimmed by a barber every afternoon for spots worn rough, and along about 4 p. m., under the hot lights, it begins to smell (as Miss Lee should know from long hours of stairway acting) "like an Australian sheep farm."

Miss Lee is no giddy Caroline. On the contrary she is noted as a devoted wife and mother. (Daughter Benetia Invicta is 3.) Caroline's bedroom is a masterwork of daintiness and fragility perfect for a Caroline. Light and airy, of course, with sheer, transparent draperies and a bed—what a bed, or rather what a bedspread! White satin, I believe it is, with yards and yards of white lace all over and around it in nice dust-catching rosettes, reminiscent of nothing so much as a Ziegfeld girl costume.

Miss Lee thinks it's "lovely"—which it is, no doubt. "My own bedroom is in white," says Miss Lee.

I guess that clinches the point. Anna Lee is the type. It must have been psychic casting on Milestone's part—cabling to London for the one actress for the part, and getting in Miss Lee a young woman who not only fits into the Remisoff boudoir but who once—until experience cured her—went in for goatskin stairways herself.

"THINGS MEN WEAR"

Hollywood Signs And Sounds

By Rabbit Coon

Hollywood—Anna Lee is the type, all right.

Anna Lee is the heroine of a new classic Hollywood tale. I didn't believe it—it was too pat—but Miss Lee says it's true, and when Miss Lee says a thing is true you're an old fuddy-duddy if you don't believe it, so I do now.

Lewis Milestone had seen Anna Lee in some of her English-made pictures and he had to have Anna Lee for "My Life With Caroline."

So he cabled RKO's London office and they cabled back for him to see Robert Stevenson, a fellow-director at RKO in Hollywood. Milestone walked into Stevenson's office and Stevenson presented him to his wife, who chanced to be sitting there, and then Milestone asked where he could locate Anna Lee.

Anna Lee, of course, is Mrs. Stevenson, and doubtless you've heard the story already but it bears repeating. But maybe you haven't heard how thoroughly the type Miss Lee is—slim, blonde, blue-eyed and charming in an easy, effortless way. To understand you have to know a little about the script and about the sets. "My Life With Caroline" is a gay, modern comedy about a wealthy publisher (Donald Colman) who solves the problem of his wife's infatuation for another man

NEW PROGRAM ADOPTED FOR CITY SCHOOLS

(Continued from page one) high school site a large and adequate gymnasium, provide vocational arts space, a band room and a dramatics room. The present combination gymnasium and auditorium would be converted into a first class auditorium by slanting the floor and installing fixed seats.

The program will call for additional class room space at several of the elementary schools. West Greenville school has sufficient space for classroom work, but an assembly hall is proposed for this unit. Two additional class rooms are proposed for Third Street School and provisions will be made for three additional groups of children at the Training School.

The plan for taking the seventh and eighth grades out of the high school will proceed immediately and the additional class rooms will be erected during the summer so that the new program can be put into effect with the start of the new term. The remaining part of the College To Offer Annual Meet Set For Farm Groups

More than 15 courses which will carry graduate credit will be offered in the field of elementary education in the summer session of East Carolina Teachers College, according to announcement by Dr. Carl Adams, head of the department of education. A number of these courses will be of interest to majors in other fields also.

There will be methods courses in many subjects, including a number in administration primarily for principals, but open to others as well. One such will be a course in education statistics; one, theories in education; and one, curriculum building. A course in audio-visual aids in class room work will be offered graduate students.

Directed observation for the grammar grades is a shop course in which each person will work out his own teaching problems under the guidance of experienced teachers in the College Training School.

This is only one of the fields in which graduate instruction will be offered. Among these are English history, social science, mathematics, science, home economics, administration and supervision, and secondary education.

The first term of the summer session opens on Thursday, June 5.

Union Meet Is Set For Wharton Church

The Grimesland charge union meeting of young people will be held in the Wharton Methodist church on Wednesday evening, May 28, at 7:30.

Following a devotional program by the young people of the Wharton Methodist church there will be a business session.

Following the worship service and the business meeting there will be a social hour with recreation and refreshments.

The young people from the Salem church in Simpson and the young people from the Grimesland church and the young people from the Wharton church will take part in the meeting.

The meeting is at 7:30 Wednesday, May 28. Rev. W. A. Crow is pastor.

Plans are in progress to acquire adequate playground space for the high school.

The program also includes changes in the Negro schools. It is proposed to purchase land around the Fifth Street unit and to erect four new classrooms and a home economics building. The Negro high school would be moved to the Fifth Street unit upon completion of the additional buildings.

The program was decided on by the school board members after conferring with the architect. It was estimated that to erect a new high school building at this time and to make necessary improvements at the elementary schools in order to make the plant 100 per cent efficient for all children—both white and colored—would require an expenditure of approximately $350,000. Members of the board expressed themselves as feeling such an undertaking would be unwise and, furthermore, was not really needed. The program now being worked out calls for an expenditure of approximately $150,000.

The entire program subject to the working out of minor details was approved last night by both boards.

Services Attracting Large Crowd Nightly

Large crowds are attending the services being conducted each evening at the Greenville Free Will Baptist church by Rev. C. B. Thompson of Ayden. Special music by the local choir and guest singers feature each service.

Rev. Mr. Thompson spoke last evening on "Being Ambassadors For Christ," emphasizing the dependence Christ puts in his followers to carry on His work and represent Him in seeking the lost. This was the fifth in a series of messages especially designed to reach the membership and stimulate zeal and cooperation in the evangelistic part of the meeting.

He described the Ruritan club as an organization with the purpose of promoting harmony between the farmer and business man. The organization also engages in diversified farm programs.

The speaker listed library work, canning, and general civic improvements as projects undertaken by the Winterville club.

The word "curfew" is taken from two French words "couvre feu," meaning "cover the fire."
