British War Aim Is To Prevent Further Nazi Misdeeds

ANTHONY EDEN STATES TERMS

Foreign Secretary Declares Germany Is Worst Master Europe Has Yet Known, Having Violated Peace 5 Times In Last Century; Says Lasting Continental Peace Is Only Aim Of Great Britain

London, May 29.—(AP) Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, in his first comprehensive statement on Britain's war aims, declared today that "our political and military terms of peace will be designed to prevent a repetition of Germany's misdeeds."

Eden said that "under the system of free economic cooperation, Germany must play a part. But here I draw a firm distinction.

"We must never forget that Germany is the worst master Europe has yet known. Five times in the last century she has violated the eace. She must never be in a position to play that role again."

Eden addressing a London audience, termed President Roosevelt's fireside chat Tuesday night "a momentous world event," because, "by his words, the President has given resolute expression to the fixed determination of the most powerful nation on earth."

He asserted that "a lasting settlement and internal peace of the continent as a whole is our only aim."

Congress Expected to Be Asked To Authorize Duty Beyond Single Year For 291,000 Men Inducted Into Army Last Fall; Demobilization Declared By Officials To Be Illogical At This Time

Washington, May 29. — (AP) — Indefinite military duty for the National Guard was considered a virtual certainty by army officials today because of the unlimited national emergency proclaimed by President Roosevelt.

An early request to Congress for authority to retain the 291,000 guardsmen in service beyond the current single year of training was accordingly anticipated, although no final decision has been disclosed on the question.

In the light of the threat to American security pictured by the chief executive, an informed official suggested it would be "hardly logical" to demobilize 18 full divisions of trained troops, representing more than half the number of such major units under arms in all the expanding land courses.

Pending a definite decision, the War Department has gone ahead nevertheless perfecting detailed plans to fill the guardsmen's places with Selective Service trainees, organized into entirely new divisions.

Both Secretary Stimson and General George C. Marshall, army chief of staff, have forecast that the decision would be made probably next month and would be based on the general defense outlook at that time.

The first of the National Guard divisions were mobilized last September 16 and without extending the period of service these would be demobilized less than four months hence.

PITT FARMERS TURN TO GRAIN

Deversified Farming Becoming Popular In County

Pitt county farmers are turning more and more to the production of small grain, with the acreage to such crops this year being the largest in the history of the county and interest being evidenced indicated even larger acreages next year.

County Agent R. R. Bennett declared that agricultural leaders are urging the planting of more of the small grain crops in furtherance of the diversified farming program.

Farmers planting the small grain can harvest two crops a year, it was explained, by planting the grain in the fall, harvesting it in the spring and following it up with lespedeza or other crops.

The success of the small grain tour conducted several days ago was pointed to by Mr. Bennett of evidence of increased interest on the part of Pitt county farmers in the production of small grain crops Thirty-five farmers made the tour The group first visited the farm of J. B. Rouse near Grimesland and inspected assorted winter peas where the results of the use of lime was demonstrated. Also inspected were certified barley, oats, wheat and rye. The farmer has approximately 60 acres in small grain crops this year and declared he would not trade this for his 25-acre tobacco allotment.

The farm next visited was that of Brantley Speight near Winterville where a demonstration in results in the use of nitrate of soda on wheat was made. The farmer used 300 pounds to the acre to part of the crop, 200 pounds to another part 100 pounds on part and none at

Attacks Made In The Northwest, East, Southeast

London, May 29.—(AP)—Germany's air force, favored by improved flying conditions pounded the British Isles overnight with greater force than it has shown in the last 12 days.

Bombers attacked along the northwest, east and southeast coasts of England and ranged as far as Northern Ireland.

Extensive damage and a number of casualties were reported at a southeast coast town. Three bodies were recovered. The mayor and his wife were among the missing.

The Liverpool area, recently a principal target for the Luftwaffe when it apparently was on a one-point-a-night schedule, was bombed but few casualties were reported.

It was the first time since May 27, when an estimated 100 raiders scored heavily against the industrial midlands, that the Germans flew en force against the isles.

At least two German planes were shot down, one bomber over England and a fighter over the French coast, the British reported.

A small force of British bombers an authoritative British source said attacked objectives in northwest Germany during the night despite "very bad weather" over the continent.

BOARD APPEAL TO END STRIKE CITES ADDRESS

Strikers Reminded of Proclamation By President

MEDIATION PLAN FLATLY REFUSED

Defense Mediation Board Official Says He Assumes Chief Executive Meant What He Said

(By The Associated Press)

The Defense Mediation Board cited President Roosevelt's proclamation of an unlimited national emergency today for the first time in an appeal to striking CIO lumber workers in the Pacific Northwest to return to work "as patriotic citizens."

The board appealed to the lumber workers after being advised that their representatives had "rejected unanimously" a board proposal for temporary settlement of their dispute pending a report by a fact-finding commission. It said employers accepted the proposal. About 12,000 workers went on strike demanding a number of things including a flat wage increase of seven and a half cents an hour. Officials said the base rate now for common labor in the 52 affected camps was 67 and a half cents.

W. H. Davis, vice-chairman of the board, told a press conference: "You will recall President Roosevelt said in his speech that recommendations of the Mediation Board should be accepted. I assume he meant what he said."

Earlier the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor declared that AFL machinists on strike at San Francisco bay shipyards "should call it off immediately and return to work."

This formal announcement by the council backed up a sweeping pronouncement it issued yesterday calling on all its affiliates to take disciplinary action against local unions which strike without exhausting resources for mediation. The Executive Council said it would take similar action itself against federal labor unions directly under its control.

The council declared that uninterrupted production by the west coast shipyards was vital to the nation's defense, and further that "the good name, the honor and the 'no-strike' policy of the American Federation of Labor demand that the coastwise master agreement between the shipbuilders and the metal trades union, barring strikes and lockouts, be religiously observed and respected."

Differences should be adjusted through conferences, mediation and arbitration, the council declared.

British Forces, Already in Dire Straits, Trapped In Vise As Fascists Enter Conflict And Germans Capture Strategic Suda Bay And Establish Bridgehead For Landing Sea-Borne Troops

By The Associated Press

Italian troops were reported today to have entered the 10-day-old battle of Crete, landing on the eastern end of the island, while German forces captured the prize harbor of Suda Bay on the west. Thus the British, already in dire straits, were caught in a vise.

Seizure of Suda Bay gave the Germans a bridgehead for landing sea-borne troops, and military experts said it may prove to be the turning point of the struggle—the beginning of another British debacle.

Cairo, May 29.—(AP)—German air-borne troops in Crete, heavily reinforced, have pushed the defenders back from Canea capital as well as Suda Bay and occupying the island's wrecked most of the shore around it, it was conceded in British military quarters here today.

The British empire forces, mostly New Zealanders, had been pushed to points east of Suda Bay.

Desperate hand-to-hand fighting is continuing with heavy casualties on both sides, it was said.

Hitler's high command reported that Nazi mountain troops, striking on beyond Suda Bay, reached Almyro Bay to the east in pursuit of the "defeated" British.

The German communique said Nazi forces had taken a large number of prisoners.

Fascist press dispatches reported also that hundreds of little Greek sailboats, loaded with German troops, had been safely escorted to Crete under the guns of Italian warships.

The British admitted that capture of Suda Bay, the best harbor on the 160-mile-long island, probably would be the deciding factor in the struggle.

It was just a year ago today, incidentally, that the allies, in retreat from the bloody Battle of Flanders, opened the flood sluices around Dunkerque to guard the last escape port to England.

Under orders to fight to the death, hopelessly outnumbered British troops were reported yielding ground slowly, in bitter fighting, before the onslaught of Nazi forces east of Suda Bay.

While big German transport planes, operating from the Greek mainland 100 miles away, ferried a steady stream of reinforcements there was no indication that the British had made any attempts to land more troops.

The Germans said flatly that the British were trying to flee the island, declaring that Stuka dive-bombers sank five transports and damaged two others in Suda Bay yesterday, inflicting heavy losses on allied troops attempting to board the ships.

Lack of air defense again appeared to have been the "achilles heel" of the allies. Greek Prime Minister Emmanuel Tsouderous said German bombers had smashed the principal Crete cities of Canea, the capital, Candia and Retimo with such fury that "not one stone was left standing."

U. S. SHORT OF POWER AND OIL

Secretary Ickes Proposes Daylight Saving Time

Washington, May 29.—(AP)—Interior Secretary Ickes today advocated daylight saving time on a nation-wide scale, and suggested that America may have to resort to restricted use of electricity and institute "gasless Sundays" to meet shortages of power and oil.

Meanwhile, on Capitol Hill the House Interstate Commerce Committee approved a bill urgently requested by President Roosevelt to give the government authority to build oil pipe lines.

Under the bill the President could direct a government agency to build such lines, or aid private corporations in their construction, and both public and private builders would have the right of eminent domain if the President declared the pipelines were required "for national defense purposes."

Daylight saving, Ickes said, could be instituted by an act of Congress, to save substantial amounts of power.

The statement came as an official of the Federal Power Commission foresaw a power emergency, "perhaps the most serious in history," and revealed studies were being made on means of diverting power from civilian to industrial uses, to prevent interruption of defense production.

In mentioning the possibility of priorities in the use of power, the secretary said restricted consumption might easily include night baseball, and he commented: "It's more important to make aluminum than to have night baseball."

The power shortage, he said might "be met by moral persuasion," through civilians voluntarily restricting consumption.

Turning to oil, Ickes told his press conference the problem was strictly one of transportation and he

High School Sponsoring Another Forum Meeting

Parents of Greenville High School students are invited to attend the discussion meeting to be held tonight in the high school library. Ways of bettering the school program will be discussed and the visitors will be asked to make suggestions and criticisms. J. H. Rose, superintendent of the city schools, will explain the proposed plans for expanding the present school facilities.

This is the second "Public Relations" meeting held at the high school this year for the purpose of giving parents the opportunity to help the progress of secondary education in Greenville. As was done with last year's meetings, students are invited to come with their parents or to bring them out for the discussions.

A similar get-together was held last spring and resulted in several changes in the school policy which have been considered by the faculty to be improvements. The present system of home-room activities was one of the suggestions of that meeting. The Public Relations committee hopes that similar valuable suggestions will be forthcoming at tonight's gathering.

The central table, spread with a cloth of lace, was lovely with a large crystal bowl of double larkspur in pastel shades which formed the centerpiece, a miniature bride and groom standing beneath a heart-shaped trellis showered with forget-me-nots was placed just in front of the colorful arrangement and double candelabra holding tall white candles completed the nuptial scene. Multi-colored sweetpeas and plumosa fern in a crystal bowl centered the service table and were further used about the room. Tally cards passed prior to progressions were decorated with wedding rings, slippers and wedding bells. Chilled beverages were served by the hostess throughout the evening. H. Dail, Mrs. C. L. Russ, Mrs. J. B. Dunn and Mrs. Jean Kimball of Roanoke Rapids.

Mrs. Milo Smith invited the guests into the dining room, where Mrs. J. L. Fleming and Mrs. W. E. Hooker served ice cream decorated cakes, mints and nuts from the dining table which was covered with an all-lace cloth and centered with a crystal bowl filled with varigated spring flowers. Yellow and white burning tapers cast a soft glow over the rooms. Misses Betsy Hobgood Elizabeth Bridgers, Joyce Corbett and Peggy Rose Smith assisted in serving.

Mrs. Rivers Goodall directed the guests to the register, which was presided over by Miss Geraldine Jones.

Mrs. Royce Hunsucker received in the sun room, where delicious punch was served by Mrs. T. H. Andrews, Mrs. Floyd Peaden and Mrs. Godfrey Oakley, from a lovely frozen punch bowl inlaid with roses.

Goodbyes were said to Mrs. Spruill Spain.

THE DAILY REFLECTOR
Thursday, May 29, 1901

The ward conventions to nominate candidates for aldermen to serve the town for the next fiscal year will be held Friday night. The Reflector feels like saying that the present administration has been the best and most progressive Greenville has had. Besides giving the town faithful, conservative and honest management of all affairs, this administration inaugurated the movement and performed the preliminary for issuing the bonds by which Greenville is to be provided with such public improvements as have been long needed, and this movement will stand as a monument to their credit. It is not a time now for Greenville to take any backward steps, and the work started should be carried on. Much depends on the next Board of Alldermen.

Girl Scout Activities In Greenville

The Mariners entertained Sea Scouts from Plymouth at a weiner roast Wednesday evening at Mayor Sugg's farm. Eight Sea Scouts from Plymouth and Mr. A. L. Hodges, Boy Scout executive, were guests. Scouts played softball, cooked supper over a campfire and then went to the home of Sarah Moore to dance. Miss Elizabeth Kasey and Miss Jean Hodges are leaders of the Greenville Mariner troop.

Troop 1 met at the Rotary Club Monday evening. Frances Kittrell was in charge of the program and everyone did archery.

Troop 2-b will have a picnic supper Thursday night at Mayor Sugg's farm. All Scouts in this troop will meet at the Girl Scout office at 4 p. m. Transportation provided by parents will take the Scouts to the farm. Miss Betsy Ross Parkinson, a member of the troop, is in charge of arrangements for this activity. Miss Lallah B. Watts is leader of the troop.

Troop 3 will spend the week-end at the cottage of Dr. and Mrs. S. M. Crisp at Coleraine. Scouts will leave for their trip Saturday morning at 9 o'clock and return Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Parents of Scouts will provide transportation.

This week-end party is the final activity of the troop until Fall. All Scouts who have been active in the the troop during the year are invited to attend. New Scouts must have their registration fee paid and all Scouts must pay up back dues before they will be eligible to go on the trip so the troop's Court of Honor decided.

All Scouts of Troop 3 who plan to go on the week-end trip must come to the Girl Scout office Friday after noon at 4:30 to make final arrangements. A food committee of which Mary Rose Crisp is chairman, has planned the meals and will be in charge of buying the food.

Mrs. Helene Kirkpatrick, troop leader, has helped planned the trip and will go along. Miss Florence Lanning, local director, will also chaperone the party.

Day Camp bulletins will be distributed Friday at schools to all Scouts and other girls who wish to attend Day Camp. Dates for Day Camp are June 9 to 13. This is the first Day Camp the Greenville Girl Scout Council has ever sponsored. It is to be held on the grounds of Mayor Sugg's farm on the Falkland highway.

There are still a few boxes of Girl Scout cookies at the office which have not yet been sold. If anyone would like to buy more cookies they may be obtained from the Girl Scout office or order may be given to a Scout who will deliver them immediately.

Scouts from the West Greenville school and from Troop 4 will give their services in the Poppy Day sale Saturday, May 30.

THE SACRED DAGGER

By Rita Mabie Alsobrook

YESTERDAY: Anne Willard is in a spot. She is in the Emir's harem, because the Princess of the Emirate promised to help her escape to the camp of her parents, in the desert. But there has been trouble in the court, the Emir is about to search his harem for his enemies, and Anne must be disguised. Since her eyes are like those of the Persian women, she will be disguised as a Persian.

Chapter Ten

Strange Bargain

Anne gave Blaze a swift hand clasp and slipped through the door to the harem enclosure.

She joined the Princess eating her breakfast at a little table. The woman received Sherwood's message thoughtfully and asked again. "Is he in love with you?"

Anne flushed. "No," she said "Mr. Sherwood might jolly a girl along but I doubt if he'd fall in love where it wouldn't do any good He knows how to take care of himself."

The Princess looked distastefully at Anne's breeches and boots and shirt. "The servants will bring you clothing belonging to the Persian daughter and help you prepare for the visit of the Emir."

"But what if he should detect the trick," asked Anne terrified at the thought.

The woman lifted her somber black eyes. "You'd better pray that he doesn't."

Servants painted Anne's fingernails with an unguent made of marigolds and henna, tinted her toes and the lobes of her ears with the same fierce orange, darkened her eyelids and dressed her in a flowing pale blue garment with a voluminous white crepe veil that gave her the appearance, when she walked, of a perambulating tent.

The Princess lined up the women like cattle for inspection. To Anne the ordeal seemed almost unbearable. She was torn by mixed emotions of fear and rage. Fear that some sly sense in the Emir might detect the disguise; rage that she, an American girl, must submit to such an experiment. The other women seemed almost as nervous as Anne.

Suddenly their chattering ceased The Eir stood at the entrance to the court. He came across the tiled floor and walked down the line, teetering on spindly legs as he stopped here and there, slapped one girl's face for no reason that Anne could fathom and then paused before his Persian daughter.

For a moment Anne thought she saw sly triumph and knowledge in his rheumy eyes. He made a remark to her in a rasping voice. She could only bow ,unable to understand or to answer him. Then he passed on.

The Princess informed her afterwards he had merely said "Good eyes," so her bow had been quite all right.

"He tells me he has decided to honor the man who saved his life with the hand of one of his daughters. He feels it will promote friendliness between himself and the government of Shani Lun.

Anne began to laugh; she was still a bit wrought up. 'Does he think Mr. Sherwood would accept such a gift?"

"One does not refuse gifts from the Emir if he values his life."

"Oh," gasped Anne. Presently she said. "It might be a good idea to send that information to Mr. Sherwood. Where would he be expected to take the girl if he married her?"

"To Shani Lun, by the way of Chuka."

Anne's eyes began to shine. "Which daughter is to be given to him?" she asked in a muted voice.

"He has left the choice to me."

Anne caught her hand. "Oh, Princess, don't you see—this is my chance to escape. Let me be the daughter who marries him. I'm sure Dr. Sherwood is willing to do this thing for me."

The Princess picked up a long loosely wrapped cigarette to which a servant held a coal. She looked at Anne through narrowed lids.

"What would he get out of it?"

"Why—why—" Anne stammered and stopped. "His pay would be the satisfaction of having done a noble deed—a deed of chivalry."

"What does chivalry mean?"

"It means disinterested service to the weak or oppressed."

Note To Blaze

The Princess shook her head. "The love of Allah might cause a man to deal nobly with another man, for men have souls—but women, like animals, must earn their right to live. If this man is willing to take you in preference to another girl it is because you are desirable to him."

Anne thought, "in comparison with these pathetic native girls, I probably am." Aloud she said, "just help me get a message to him."

She wrote her note excitedly, an incoherent mess, she felt, and added that if a native wedding ceremony made legal complications native law also made divorce for him extremely easy; he need merely to make a declaration before witnesses. The Princess had told her so.

Several hours later an answer came from Sherwood:

A very nice proposal—my—first—but don't you over-anticipate—mentioning divorce? You may find me indispensable. However, I'm yours on any terms, and whatever you say goes. The Emir is a dirty dog. I'll be glad when we can get away from here. Rush the ceremony.—Blaze.

"We must be careful and do things properly lest we rouse the Emir's suspicions," the Princess warned her. "There will be no usual feast or holiday because of the attempted assassination last night You are to marry at dawn in the morning and slip away quietly. There is a feeling here against white men even when they save the life of the ruler."

That night brought a terrific storm—lightning, wind, rain, a minor earthquake shock. In the morning clear skies returned.

The wedding ceremony was held before the Emir's platform throne on which he sat in all his magnificence. The magistrate, the mullah, the bridegroom and Mackey as witness standing below. The scribe was seated at a small table.

Anne, in her voluminous white veils, stood at one side in front of the other women who were looking out curiously from the black tents of their more commonplace clothing.

She saw Mackey gaze at her attentively. He turned to Sherwood and spoke aloud in the security of a language unknown to the audience while waiting for the scribe to arrange his papers.

"What if they've switched brides on you, Blaze?"

"Shut up," growled Sherwood but he gave her a swift glance of apprehension, for he knew that anything could happen in this country

Mackey grinned and spoke again —to Anne this time though he kept his gaze on the floor.

"Miss Anne, you see his distress. Do you wish to reassure the bridegroom?" He lifted his head and winked at her. Anne caught the gesture and kept still. Several of the girls behind her took the wink to themselves and tittered.

"Watch out or you'll have a bride on your hands," Sherwood warned him.

"Sweet serpents," muttered Mackey. "She doesn't answer. They've probably given you a chunky maiden with her front teeth missing."

Married

Sherwood's lips tightened but otherwise he showed no reaction. Mackey continued in the same plaintive tones. "Those women remind me of a flock of black cats on a fence at midnight. Nothing alive but their shining eyes."

The scribe was ready. The magistrate asked questions, Anne learned afterwards. What was her dowry? The scribe wrote the list the Emir called. Rugs, perfumes, jewels, bales of silk, a castle in the desert.

Then Sherwood was asked what property he bestowed on the bride He looked nonplussed for a moment Then the magistrate kindly explained that he must enumerate the gifts to prevent an infringement of the dower rights of other wives. This brought an unexpected hoot of hilarity from Mackey who managed to turn it into a coughing fit.

"I can't think of anything," stammered Sherwood. "I've a few American government bonds and some oil stock that's pretty good."

"That doesn't mean anything to these people," interrupted Mackey in English. "Bestow upon her your diamond studded pocket knife, your silver key ring and your golden pickaxe. Who ever heard of an archaeologist without a pickaxe?"

Sherwood mumbled something that the scribe wrote down. The mullah chanted a blessing. And while the witnesses were signing papers the Princess led Anne to an adjoining room.

"Wait here," she said. "He has the right to see you before he takes you away."

She left as a curtain was drawn aside and Sherwood stepped into the room. He stared at Anne a moment and then came forward.

"Mackey had me going there for a while. Then I was told to come in here and look you over and see if you came up to specifications." He threw back her veil. "Not such a homely face—when the paint comes off."

"Where?" he demanded indignantly.

"About."

"Now, have you any good points? Have you dimpled knees?"

"I'm not that fat," she repudiated indignantly.

"All right with me," he hastily assured her. "Say 'ah'." She complied. He nodded. "Tongue pink as a pepper. You'll do."

He put his other arm around her and stood looking at her for a moment in silence.

"Why don't you want me to kiss you?" he asked gently.

She began to tremble. "I don't know. Maybe it's this horrible place we're ' ."

"I must change first to a black traveling veil." He left her.

Atlantic Beach Opens Sunday.

Atlantic Beach, May 29.—This coastal resort will be opened Sunday for the season, with bath houses open daily for the remainder of the summer according to announcement of Mayor Newman Willis, who will manage the resort this year.

Plans for the opening are being made here this week by Mayor Willis and Edward G. Petry, of the Manufacturers Trust Company of New York, who was manager here for the bank owners during the 1937-39 seasons.

Because of its east-west extension this beach is considered one of the two safest ocean resorts anywhere along the Atlantic seaboard. Protected thus in a nook of the ocean, it gets the prevailing ocean breezes to keep it cool during the summer months.

The casino will be formally opened Saturday night, June 14, with Chan Chandler and his orchestra furnishing music. Many other excellent programs are being arranged for the season.

Repairs, renovations and repainting have been under way for some time, to get the property in good shape for what is expected to be its most successful season in history, due to the many national defense projects in the section and improving employment conditions which are making money more plentiful than for years through this area of Eastern North Carolina.

Strength For The Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

GOOD COMES AT LAST

One of the great truths of the spiritual universe is that all things work together for good to them that love God. Nothing is harder to believe. Nothing is more difficult to see than this, especially in the hour when we stand overwhelmed with our troubles.

And yet as we look back over life we are conscious, are we not, that some of our rarest hours of discrimination followed periods of disappointment and sorrow. Very often it seems that the air is clearer after we have passed through a storm of trouble, or that we can see farther in that day which follows a night of despair. Someone has said that we can see farther through a tear than through a telescope. We have all observed that visibility is better on cloudy days than on very bright, sunny days.

Trouble is put into the world for a purpose, and God's promise is that if we love and trust Him, He will use even the worst things in life to good ends. He gathers up our broken hopes and with His hands of love molds them into forms which later make us thankful for His providence. The passing years teach us all the truth of that assurance, "All things work together for good to them that love God."

(All Rights Reserved—Babson Newspaper Syndicate).

SATURDAY IS POPPY DAY

Saturday is Poppy Day in this city and everyone is urged to buy and wear a poppy. These little red flowers are sold by members of the American Legion Auxiliary each year to be worn in memory of those brave Americans who gave their all in the first World War, and the proceeds from the sales are devoted to bringing comfort to those disabled veterans who are confined in the various hospitals throughout the land. If you buy and wear one of these little flowers Saturday you will be both honoring the dead and bringing joy and comfort to the living.

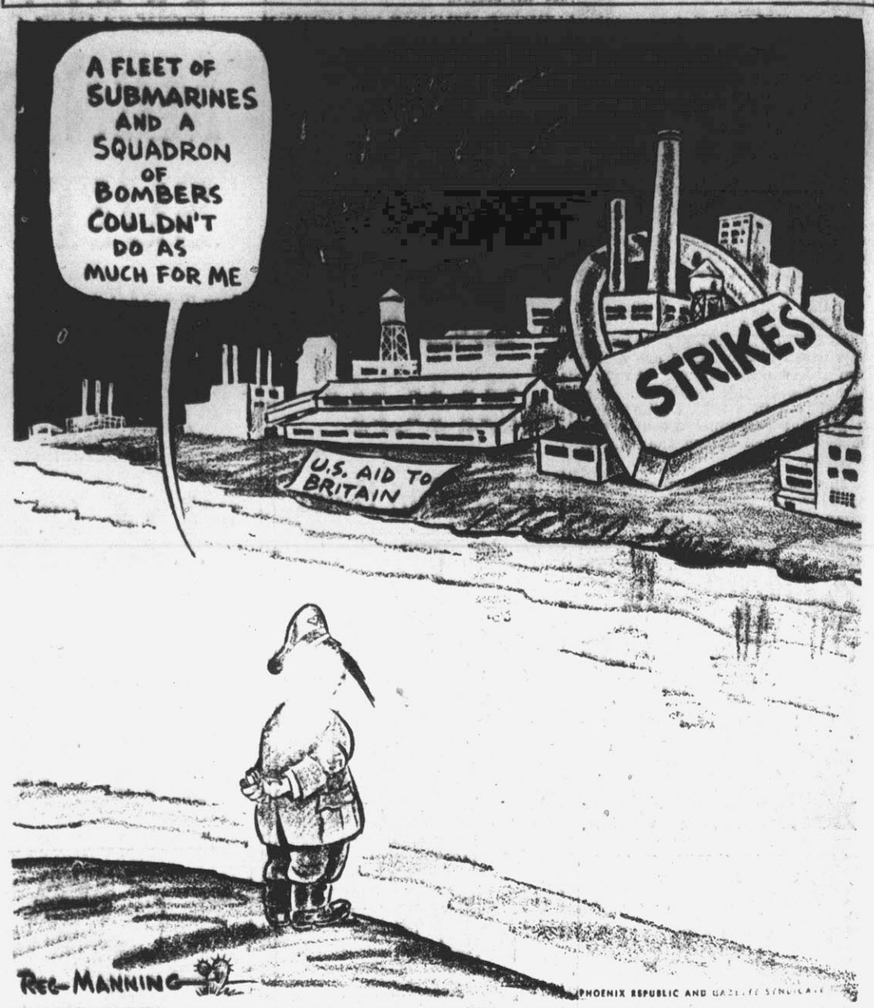
A GOOD BEGINNING

A ride over Pitt County at this time will reveal more fields of small grain than produced in this county in many a year. This is certainly a good sign for it shows that our farmers are gradually getting away from the one-crop system of farming that has brought financial difficulties to our section. The more diversified are the efforts of our farmers the better are their chances to make a good living from their farms.

GETTING DOWN TO BUSINESS

In explaining his unlimited emergency proclamation, Mr. Roosevelt yesterday declared that this country would no longer permit its defense program to be delayed by unwarranted strikes and that the government would take all necessary steps to see to it that the defense industries continued to operate uninterrupted. This added emphasis in the way of explanation of this feature of his address Tuesday night will bring hearty approval from the country as a whole. Regardless of the underlying causes of the strikes, any delays at this time in our vital industries is of untold value to the Axis powers who have no wish to see America become strong enough to uphold the cause of freedom and democracy in the world.

Bloodless Victory



Washington Daybook

By Jack Stinnett

(Second of two articles on law enforcement and defense).

Washington—First assignment of the Federal Bureau of Investigation under the national defense program was the investigation of every complaint of fifth-column activity and the business of searching out possible sabotage needle in 12,000 national defense plant haystacks.

No normal-time police organization could have been handed such an order with any expectation of its being filled. But FBI Director John Edgar Hoover expects to fill it because of the "FBI Law Enforcement Officers Mobilization Plan For National Defense."

In the quarterly conferences that 54 FBI agents-in-charge hold with thousands of police officials everything that the FBI knows about national defense protection is handed on to police of the cities and the grass roots.

News From London

This isn't second-hand knowledge either. Recently two FBI agents returned from several months of intensive study of police methods in London. One invaluable thing they brought back was a movie entitled "War and Orde-" which shows police at work.

Everything that British police know about sabotage, espionage and fifth-column activity has been made available. Out of that has come the program of sectional conferences in which nearly 4,300 police agencies are schooled in defense police work. There is no better way to describe it than to give a sample FBI quarterly conference program.

There are: "Instructions on counter espionage;" "Handling sabotage violations;" "How to handle bombs and explosives;" "Citizens' cooperation in national defense police work;" "British methods as demonstrated by lantern slides and the movie 'War and Order'."

Methods of sabotage agents are explained in detail. Vulnerable points, hazards, personnel, physical properties, confidential documents (war secrets) fire prevention, guard force, and identification system of defense industrial plant are given a thorough combing.

To pick out one example, an FBI technical laboratory expert displays an innocent appearing pencil. It has lead that will write, an eraser that will erase. While he is writing with it to demonstrate its apparent harmlessness, the expert explains that inside the pencil is a capsule of incendiary powder flanked by a tinier capsule of acid. When this acid eats through to the powder—combustion, and perhaps a defense plant fire. The FBI man explains how this little gadget can be carried aboard cargo vessels, dropped into coal bunkers or planted most anywhere on shipboard.

This is only one of the countless theoretical cases the FBI conferences go into.

That Alien Round-up

What happened recently in the national round-up of aliens is an example. FBI agents, numerically, couldn't have begun to handle even these few hundred. They hardly appeared among the arresting officers at all.

But for the all-out mobilizat plan, it was no trick whatever. Police departments moved as a unit from New York to San Francisco. A few years ago, such a cooperative police plan would have been unheard of.

In the World war, it was just a dream. And this was no more than a test case. The Department of Justice and its "Law Enforcement Plan" may misfire here and there, but it has come a long way since the days of our last national emergency. For the first time, it has put policing for national defense on a coast-to-coast basis.

Solution Of Yesterday's Puzzle

Short Shots

Raleigh, May 29.—(AP)—To the naked eye there seems already to be a filling station on every corner in every town and at every crossroads in the rural areas—with some left over for intermediate points; but in April there were a dozen permits issued for construction of more stations, to cost $52,350.

April's total building work in the state, according to figures of the Department of Labor, was below the construction of April, 1940 in every item except the cost of proposed non-residential construction, which went up 36.7 per cent to $408,614 against $298,776 in April, 1940.

Residential building permits in the 21 cities of more than 10,000 population will provide for 361 families. In Wilmington, from which have come reports of a pressing housing problem, there were issued only four residential permits to provide for only four families. In Fayetteville, near the Fort Bragg reservation and also with a tough housing situation on its hands, the permits will provide for 37 families.

There were reported in the State Department of Labor during April 565 violations of labor laws, rules and regulations.

Classified, they were as follows: hour law 28, time records 28, child labor 104, sanitation 113, seats 2, drinking water facilities 30, safety code violations 145 and miscellaneous 80.

The department reported 452 establishments inspected, ten compliance visits and 81 conferences. The number of employees in the inspected establishments was 17,138.

After legislatures prior to the 1941 General Assembly, the law was, of course, always in one piece in the public laws of the last session; but when the 1939 act was made a "continuing" one it meant that amendments alone appeared in the "Public Laws of 1941," which made it hard for all concerned. Revenue department field men didn't have the whole law under which they work except by carrying it around in parcels and looking up the 1941 amendments every time anything came up.

But Secretary of State Thad Eure has just issued "State of North Carolina Revenue Act, enacted by the General Assembly of North Carolina session 1939, as amended in 1939 and 1941."

Compilation and publication of this pamphlet was done at the direction of the 1941 legislature. The work has been inspected and approved by the Attorney General.

Your reporter was much surprised to open the Highway Commission chairman's door and find in the sanctum not Chairman Ben Prince but Roberty Grady Johnson, special $800-a-month "coordinator" of defense projects (until Cutlar Moore quits August 1 as ABC head).

Maybe it should not have been so surprising. There isn't any political campaign going on right now in which the state administration is interested.

Long Distance Weddings For Nazis

Berlin.—(AP)—Ingeborg Hube, 16, is the bride—by proxy—of a German soldier in Africa.

Harry Jenkins Gets Two Homers As Greenies Win 9-5

ONE GOES FOR OVER 400 FEET

Locals Get Five Runs In Eighth To Sew Up Game

Harry Jenkins kept the Greenies in the running in last night's game with Kinston at Guy Smith park by blasting out two home runs, one in the first and the other in the seventh inning, and the Greenies put on a spurt in the eighth to overcome a one-run lead and finished the game with a 9-5 victory.

Kinston's Manager McHenry sent one over the fence in the first inning with one man on base to jump into an early lead. Harry's first-inning homer cut the lead to one run and the Greenies knotted the count in the second and went ahead 3-2 in the third. The count remained the same until the seventh when a walk and a double provided one run for the Eagles and the count again was tied. This was short-lived, however, for the locals' half of the seventh Harry, with two strikes on him, sent one soaring far over the fence near the 386-foot mark in right-center field. Jenkins' first homer was over the right field fence. The third baseman turned shortstop is not new at getting homers, but most of his four-base clouts are hit in left field — usually over the score board.

Kinston again went ahead in the first half of the eighth on Bill Upchurch's two-run homer.

Coming to bat needing one run to tie the score, the Greenies really went to town. Caraway and Scagg singled and then Crowe, who had hit homers on each of the two previous night, lifted one into deep left field and the ball seemed destined to clear the score board. It hit the top, however, holding him at second. But Caraway and Scagg had raced home and the Greenies held the lead.

Manager Wilson was next up and the Kinston pitcher started out to walk him. Rube, bating left-handed, reached across the plate and sent one soaring into center field for a double and scoring Crowe. Jenkins drew a walk and before the Eagles could retire the side the locals had marked up two more to make five for the frame. Kee had no trouble in retiring the Eagles in the ninth.

The Greenies go to Kinston tonight to complete the two-game series. Wilson and Greenville play here Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the first game of a Memorial Day program and the two teams play in Wilson that night. Although Greenville is back on a winning streak, Wilson also is turning in consistent victories and the locals continue a game and a half behind the pace-setting Tobs.

Greenville golfers yesterday scored a double victory at the local course, defeating Goldsboro 39-16 and Rocky Mount 26-12. Twenty-two Greenville golfers, 21 from Goldsboro and 14 from Rocky Mount participated in the tournament.

The double victory placed Greenville in a tie with Tarboro for second place honors with seven victories to five defeats each. Wilson still rests atop the loop with eight victories and four losses.

Wilson maintained its lead by defeating Tarboro 20-17, while in the only other match of the day Henderson turned over the cellar position to Farmville by scoring a 39-29 victory. Kinston did not show up for its match with Henderson. No announcement was made by any official regarding whether the match was forfeited and the game was merely omitted, and not counted as a forfeit, in the above standings.

John McCormack of Goldsboro with a 70, two under par, was low medalist for the day here, followed by Simon Moye's 74 and Rocky Mount's Gravely with a 75.

all on some. Where 300 pounds was used the yield will be about double the yield of the crop where none was used. Also seen on the farm were red clover sown last fall, three special varieties of oats planted in cooperation with the Extension Service in carrying out experiments, new Iredell barley, varala wheat crimson clover mixed with barley and oats.

The final farm on the itinerary was that owned by Dr. Paul Jones and managed by Bennie Wooten near Farmville. Three plots of different varieties of barley, Tennessee hooded, the Iredell barley and a new 68 strain of bearded barley were inspected. The farmer will house the three crops separately to get the comparative yield of each. A fine crop of red heart wheat, oats and some rye grass were viewed by the touring party.

City Firemen Answer Two Calls Yesterday

Firemen received two calls yesterday, one in the early morning at the home of Mrs. B. T. Clark on Fourth street extension where the freezing unit caught from a short circuit and the other at Blount's grist mill.

No damage resulted from the fire in the other blaze. Chief Gardner said that old nitrate of soda had been emptied from sacks on the ground and that the hot sun probably caused a chemical reaction which resulted in the nitrate igniting.

He advocated priorities on materials used in making pipelines and oil tankers, to hasten their construction.
