POWER VESTED IN ROOSEVELT TO RUSH ARMS

Mandatory Priorities On Industry Provided For

FORMER POWERS ARE BROADENED

President Now May Impose Mandatory Priorities On Any Orders Coming Under Lend-Lease Bill

Hyde Park, June 2.—(AP)—President Roosevelt obtained today power to speed the production of arms for Great Britain and the United States by imposing on American industry mandatory priorities of war-time scope.

Mr. Roosevelt has signed a bill the temporary White House announced, under which mandatory priorities may be assigned to an order or contract of any foreign government brought within the terms of the lend-lease act, and, in some cases, to orders of any government department of private industry.

Heretofore, only contracts placed by the army and navy could give priority to the Office of Production Management—the agency to which Mr. Roosevelt has delegated his authority over priorities.

Again to bolster the armament program, the chief executive has signed a bill to keep iron and steel in steel plants. It would permit Canadian vessels to carry ore between American ports on the Great Lakes during the 1941 transportation season.

A third bill signed by the President appropriates $843,294,199 for the Post Office Department in the year beginning July 1.

New Bus Service Provided For City

Additional bus service between Washington and Raleigh, via Greenville and Wilson was inaugurated as of June 1 by the Carolina Coach Company whereby persons may leave Greenville at 7:35 in the morning, reach Raleigh at 10, leave the capital city at 6:30 p. m. and arrive home at 9 p. m.

The new service makes four round trip schedules daily between Washington and Raleigh.

The addition of the new schedule brings to four the number of round trips daily between Washington and Raleigh through Greenville.

In announcing the new service, R. O. Self, chief clerk of the State Utilities Commission, declared that he "hoped that the people will use these schedules, and if they do not we will be unable to require the bus company to continue operating through a trial period of at least 30 days."

Mrs. Bissette Owns Clock 100 Years Old

A pendulum clock more than 100 years old and still keeping good time was brought to the city today for minor repairs by Mayor Ivan Bissette of Griffon. The clock is owned by Mrs. Bissette, having been handed down to her by members of her family. The clock has been in the family 110 years.

Shop Entered, Robb'd During Sunday Night

The alteration shop on Evans street operated by Mrs. Annie Pittman was broken into through a back window last night and a quantity of clothes left there by a local cleaning establishment for alterations taken. A check on the quantity of clothing taken has not been completed, police officials declared.

Officers said that an effort was made to break into Elks clothing store by breaking a back window, but the attempt was frustrated by barred windows.

The belief was expressed that the persons who broke in the alteration shop were non-professional and more than likely a group of boys—perhaps the same ones who recently broke into several offices in the Blount building.

Legislation Requested To Authorize President To Requisition Property

Proposal Submitted To Congress With Approval Of Chief Executive, Navy Department and Office Of Production Management, Would Give President Powers Exercised by Wilson During War

Washington, June 2.—(AP)—A request for legislation authorizing the President during the national emergency to requisition property of any kind "necessary to the national defense" was submitted to Congress today by the War Department.

Officials said the authority sought was "all-inclusive" and was similar to the powers exercised by President Wilson in the World War.

Announcing the step, the War Department said the proposed bill was approved by the President, the Navy and the OPM.

The proposed bill stated that the authority asked "shall be construed and considered as an additional grant of authority."

The 1920 national defense act already empowers the President to enforce compliance with defense orders, and additional "draft industry" powers were included in the Selective Service act last fall.

Containing provisions for fair compensation for any requisitioned property, the bill provides that during any period of national emergency proclaimed by the President, the chief executive is authorized "when he deems it in the interest of national defense" to take this action:

1. Take over either temporarily or permanently, property of any kind or character, whether real or personal, tangible or intangible, which was adaptable for use in any way for the national defense "or in the construction, manufacture, production, transportation, repair, testing or storage" of military or naval supplies.

2. To sell or otherwise dispose of any property, right or interest taken over.

Finals Completed For Negro School

A large and interested audience, composed both of white and colored persons, attended commencement exercises at the local unit of the school system, the C. M. Eppe Industrial High School, held in the new gymnasium Friday night.

The principal address was made by Dr. Alonzo H. Hemingway, who directed his remarks to the graduating class.

The speaker developed his talk around the pupil in a towask who later established a great institution, Booker T. Washington. With such money to pay his expenses, he successfully stood a test which resulted in a scholarship being awarded him. This test involved the sweeping of a room and the task was completed so satisfactorily that a white handkerchief showed no dirt or dust after having been passed over the surface of the swept rooms.

The Greenville colored high school has attained a high rank after 38 years in existence. Many of its graduates have "made good" after completing their studies there some going to further studies.

Three white men were honored on the program. They were Superintendent of Schools J. H. Rose, E. G. Flanagan, chairman of the Greenville school board, and Mayor E. B. Surr. The 1941 commencement is expected to go down as the most outstanding in the history of the school. It was announced at the closing exercises that the name of the school in the future would be the C. M. Eppe Industrial High School.

Discount Sabotage Theory In Jersey Conflagration

Norfolk, Va., June 2.—(AP)—Authorities sought today to learn the origin of three fires, described by Fire Chief E. J. Cannon as incendiary in nature, which caused damage estimated at more than $90,000 before being controlled in a two-hour fight last night.

M. P. Blassingham Lumber Company, which is filling orders in connection with defense projects, lost several buildings and a large quantity of lumber and machinery. Vice-president A. B. Lacey estimated the loss at approximately $75,000.

The other blaze, occurring shortly afterwards, destroyed 1,000 gallons of oil, a truck and other equipment at the Hurst Oil Company, wholesalers. Damage was estimated at about $15,000.

After the address President Meadows presented the diplomas and the Bibles which the college always gives to the graduating class, among whom were his own son, Leon R. Meadows, Jr., and his daughter, Elizabeth, urging the class to take with them as a guide to life—Loyalty, Cooperation, and Service.

If you are loyal to yourself you can not then be false to any man he said. Be loyal to your ideas, to the state that has nurtured you, and especially in these troublous times, to your country. To win in life's game you will have to cooperate to work with other people live with other people, understand other people. Finally, he said, find where you can serve and then do your best for humanity.

President Meadows also made the significant announcement that the Board of Trustees recently voted to permit graduation from East Carolina Teachers College on the liberal arts basis for those who do not wish to qualify themselves to teach "perhaps the most forward-looking step," he had said to the alumni on Saturday.

For the exercises of the morning the procession of faculty and graduates, led by Miss Ruth Britt of Wendell, chief student marshal, President, L. R. Meadows, and the speakers, filed into the Robert H. Wright Auditorium while the Coronation March from Meyerbeer's "The Prophet" was played by the college orchestra.

Dr. J. D. Simons, pastor of the Memorial Baptist church of Greenville, led in the prayer of the morning. Under the direction of A. L. Dittmer, head of the music department, the college choir of mixed voices sang Bortniansky's "Cherubim" and "Gloria" from the 12th Mass of Mozart.

"It is not easy to talk to a graduating class in what seems the most ominous period of the world," he reported, however.

Local firemen received one call during the past week-end, this being at the home of Rosa Forbes of First street when a short developed in an electric iron. No damage was reported, however.

Vichy, June 2.—(AP)—General Maxime Weygand arrived here unexpectedly today by special train from his command in North Africa to confer with Chief of State Marshal Petain.

The French military commander in North Africa rushed from the Vichy airport to Petain's headquarters to the Parc hotel.

U.S. REGARDED AS ONE TOPIC Believed To Have Come Up at Hitler-Mussolini Talk

Rome, June 2.—(AP)—Informed Fascists said that plans for meeting any move by the United States presumably formed at least part of the conversations between Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini at Brenner Pass today.

Observers said the Axis leaders probably were concerned with the prospect for further action by the United States in line with President Roosevelt's program to defend the Western Hemisphere with the navy, involving French West Africa, the Azores and other Atlantic islands.

A terse announcement made no mention of specific topics, but said merely that Hitler and Mussolini were fully agreed on the "political situation."

Informed sources predicted that Italian forces would use Crete as a springboard for new attacks by air on British positions in a triangle formed by the island of Cyprus, the Egyptian port of Alexandria and the Palestine port of Haifa.

But they said greater questions must have brought the two war leaders together and cited, besides United States policy, such major Middle East objectives as the oil fields of Iraq, with their pipeline through Palestine and French-mandated Syria and the Suez canal.

Christian Science Service. "Is the Universe, Including Man, Evolved by Atomic Force?" was the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Christian Science churches and societies on Sunday, June 22, 1941.

The golden text was from Psalms 95:3-4. "The Lord is a great God, and a great King above all gods. In his hand are the deep places of the earth; the strength of the hills is his also."

Among the citations which comprised the lesson-sermon were the following from the Bible: "And Jehoshaphat stood in the congregation of Judah and Jerusalem, in the house of the Lord, before the new court, and said, O Lord God of our fathers, art thou not God in heaven? and rulest not thou over all the kingdoms of the heathen? and in thine hand is there not power and might, so that none is able to withstand thee?" (II Chron. 20: 5, 6).

The lesson-sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "For right reasoning there should be but one fact before the thought, namely, spiritual existence. In reality there is no other existence, since Life cannot be united to its unlikeliness, mortality. Being is holiness, harmony, immortality. It is already proved that a knowledge of this, even in small degree, will uplift the physical and moral standard of mortals, will increase longevity, will purify and elevate character. Thus progress will finally destroy all error, and bring immortality to light."

During the game, Coca-Colas and nuts were served, and at the close of the playing, the hostess, assisted by her mother, Mrs. H. H. Settle, and Mrs. Spruill Spain, served a delicious salad plate.

The high score prize, a bottle of toilet water, was won by Mrs. Mason Yates. The low score prize, costume jewelry, went to Miss May Woolard.

During the game, Coca-Colas and nuts were served, and at the close of the playing, the hostess, assisted by her mother, Mrs. H. H. Settle, and Mrs. Spruill Spain, served a delicious salad plate.

were going, why should we not seek out books about the undiscovered-by-us regions at home? Our regional literature, historical and descriptive, grows steadily richer, and there are few parts of the country into which we need go empty-handed in the matter of books which will increase our enjoyment of the region we are to visit.

"The Sheppard Memorial Library has a splendid group of books to meet this demand, and the traveler who needs suggestions will find no difficulty in obtaining them at the desk. A few of the books are:

"North Carolina"—a guide to the Old North State, compiled and written by the Federal Writers' Project of the Federal Works Agency. Contains 50 short tours of the state, also a general background of the state that is interesting to native Carolinians as well as to tourists.

"The Shenandoah and Its Byways" by William Oliver Stevens—This book carries the reader through the historic and picturesque Great Valley of Virginia, with visits to Winchester, Staunton, Lexington, Charlottesville. White Sulphur Springs and Natural Bridge, and with occasional by-excursions to interesting spots over the mountains.

"What To See and Do in Washington"—by George W. Seaton—Beginning with an introductory chapter that tells you when to go to Washington, the best ways to get there, and what kind of weather to expect, the book describes all the available forms of transportation to the far sightseeing. The author then conducts you through the Capitol and the other places of interest on Capitol Hill, around the White House, along the Mall, and to Mount Vernon, Arlington National Cemetery, churches and universities, old houses, parks, and other places that should not be missed.

"Carolina Gardens," by E. T. H. Shaffer—The history, romance, and tradition of the gardens of two states over a period of two hundred years. The reader will find here the general background of colonial culture which began the garden tradition, and descriptions of representative gardens which show how the cultivation of beauty through gardens has been kept alive and thriving into our day. There is an interesting range and variety of material: plantation backgrounds; indigo, rice and cotton culture; the effect of these and other factors on the growth of the old gardens.

"A Southerner Discovers New England," by Jonathan Daniels—A report on a region of our country by a southerner with a special insight. There is a unity in the report that carries complete conviction, because it is what the author saw and not when he went to look for. Daniels spent four thrilling months in New England traveling, looking and listening. This book is the summing up of that experience.

"Mexico Around Me" by Max Miller—This is not a guide book, nor is it a history, nor a political study. Rather it is a fascinating story of a Latin American country by a reporter who tells how it went with him to Mexico. The author says he took the country haphazardly, "hit and hit again, or miss and miss again."

"Picturesque America" by John Travis Kane—A well illustrated book dealing particularly with the Golden West. The author has endeavored to carry the reader on park to park trips, giving information, joy and inspiration to both young and old, in a word, to all adventure-loving, youthful Americans.

"Alaska," by Merle Colby—A guide to Alaska, the last American frontier. Primarily this is a guide book for a short summer trip to Alaska. It is also designed to answer questions of immediate concern to the traveler, as well as to supply condensed general information.

HOW BISMARCH WAS TRAPPED BY BRITISH FLEET

This is an artist's conception of "Finis" in the saga of Germany's great battleship, Bismarck, sunk in the Atlantic by one of the largest naval forces ever assembled for a single fight. The drawing is based on the British Admiralty's incomplete story of a long running sea fight that ended when more than a dozen warships closed in on the Bismarck, 400 miles off Brest, France.

The British cruiser Dorsetshire, in the foreground, is shown delivering the final torpedo blow to the Bismarck, crippled by blows of its steering and propelling mechanism. Ringing the proud German vessel, already listing in the water with its forecastle ashore, are British destroyers and, in the distance, other ships; above is one of the planes responsible for spotting the ship and striking the first blows.

by Edna Miller Brown

YESTERDAY: Anne Willard, and the two men who are trying to get through the Emir's country with her, have apparently escaped that rapacious ruler—by the stratagem of marriage. But it looks as if the Emir may have doublecrossed his American prisoners after all, for Anne, Blaze Sherwood and Pete Mackey now are being driven rapidly into desolate country.

Chapter 13
Castle in The Desert
Blaze walked behind for perhaps half a mile, then re-entered the carriage.

"The camel's real enough," said Sherwood. "I see his tracks mingled with our own animals' as well as older tracks as if camels heavy with young or loaded down with packs had passed here yesterday going the same direction. But we meet no one and there are no returning tracks. It is possible that there are wildcamels about, which would explain the sign."

"What's that about the old Thieves' Road around the end of the river?" Anne asked.

"Our captain mentioned it but there's no indication this stretch were on has ever been a highway. We seem to be headed for the center of the Depression."

"So what?"

"I don't know," he admitted. "Mackey's and my revolvers were taken away from us and they haven't been returned, although the balance of our luggage is strapped to the back of the carriage."

"Do you suspect treachery?" Anne asked. "If the lama could predict that you would find me why couldn't he predict the end of this journey?"

Sherwood took her hand in both of his and held it on his knee. "Doddap," he reminded her, "is not a thinker, and he likes to be mysterious at times."

She nodded. "Tears and talk of paradise."

He removed a scarab ring from his finger and tried fitting it on her hand.

She became conscious of how black and thick were the lashes that shaded his grey eyes. The blaze in his hair stood out like the banner of a special individuality.

An unbidden thought entered her mind that there was a man who should father extremely handsome daughters. She felt a bit ashamed.

They passed out of the dunes and entered a region of low brown clay ridges. He smiled and patted her hand and returned it to her, having discovered the ring was much too large. His indirect love-making had a way of creeping up on her in surprise attack. She caught herself looking back to Mackey for moral support. He waved and she responded.

Sherwood smiled again as if aware of her reaction and began telling her some of his experience in the far corners of the world.

The sun sank towards the Bekkan Buda mountains that had begun to loom on the far horizon before she roused from the spell of his words. It had been like a journey back into childhood, to the dear, familiar times when her parents came home from some extended expedition and related their experiences. They always promised, "When you grow up and finish college you may come with us." She told Sherwood about it.

"I can see that child," he said gently scrutinizing her face, "big eyes—wistful, luminous with longing, little chin aquiver because she was going to be left alone again."

"Silly of me," she admitted. "I lived only for the time when I should grow up."

"That explains Dr. O!" he stopped suddenly as if realizing he was about to speak private thoughts aloud. "Where are they taking us?"

"That's what I'd like to know. When do we reach Chuka?" she demanded and poked the footman impatiently.

The man whirled, eyes glowing teeth bared, fists clenched in self-defense. Then he grinned apologetically when he saw it was Anne who had attacked him. "Chuka," she repeated. "Chuka, Chuka."

He offered her the water skin. "He thinks you're choking," jeered Sherwood, and they were back on the old familiar footing again.

Night Stop
One of the soldiers came up with three fresh camels they had been leading. These were harnessed to the carriage and continued the journey at a swift pace hour after hour until these animals in turn were drooping wearily. If Sherwood was disturbed he did not show it, but laughed and talked with Anne in his usual bantering way.

Once, she noticed a twinkle in his eyes and became aware that his fingers rested on her pulse. She drew her hand away with a swift movement.

"Have you ever tried to find the pulse of a native inhabitant of this country?" he asked smilingly.

"Why should I?"

"He went on. "The skin is so thick that the pulse is almost undiscernable. I've heard of a local tyrant who had leather gloves made of the skin of a particular enemy."

"Nice people," remarked Anne. As the sun sank their tired camels drew them to the top of a final clay ridge and stopped as if they also, wished to take in the view before going the last weary half mile. Below them lay an oblong basin shaped like the bowl of a white dish with a brown clay rim that had been molded and baked by a giant hand and then broken at one end from the upthrust of a granite cliff beside which a creeping sand dune was beginning to invade the basin. The remarkable thing, however, was a little blue lake lying in the bottom of the bowl.

"Water," cried Anne. "In a bed of salt," supplemented Sherwood grimly. Beside the upthrust cliff stood a large pavilion tent flying the colors of Yangsar. At one side burned a fire before which servants worked. Several camels were tethered near by. "Cattle in the desert," muttered

Sherwood. "How beautiful," Anne exclaimed "and how strange—as if it were the landscape of another planet!" Sherwood regarded it with a more somber gaze.

The afterglow was dimming rapidly as they descended into the basin. Lanterns had been hung in the tent when they arrived. Anne and Sherwood walked down to the water's edge immediately, crunching salt under their feet.

MOE. ESMORE MORE MORE MORE. "It's almost thick," she said, feeling the fluid. Then the twilight faded and the moon became visible high in the sky. He spied water springing from the rock wall of the cliff and falling in a veil of mist.

"Look," he pointed. They went over to the little stream that flowed the few feet into the lake. Sherwood tasted it.

"Cool and fresh," he said. Anne drank eagerly from his cupped hands.

"Heavenly after that stuff in the goat skin bag," she murmured. When they returned to the tent the riders had arrived. Mackey lay on the piled rugs in the tent trying to find a yet softer place.

"Of all the new twists that camel invented!" he moaned. "She could give shuffling pointers to a darky hoodlum."

Sherwood scrutinized the bales and boxes lining the walls of the tent. "The bride's dowry," he said.

The Swim
"Then this," murmured Mackey significantly, "must be the castle in the desert."

Sherwood looked at him. "Have you any idea what the old devil's up to?"

"Mackey shook his head. "The game's beyond me. At least we eat," as a servant brought in a low table.

"Let's take a swim first," suggested Anne restlessly.

He gave her a reproachful glance. "Girl, you're asking me to go through all the motions of standing up and walking to the water?"

"A plunge will do you good," Sherwood advised. "It appears that we're here to stay for a while."

The two men looked at each other. "Eat, drink and be merry, eh?"

"For all I know," agreed Sherwood.

Do they really think that tomorrow we die? Anne wondered, her pulses suddenly beginning to race. There was something electric in the air. Mackey got to his feet.

"Where's my warbag? You got a pair of swimming trunks for yourself?"

"I have," said Sherwood, "unless one of the Emir's servants like the look of them."

"What color?"

"Black."

"You've got them. Now if they've been fuchsia—or green and magenta striped—"

Anne opened her suitcases that had been placed inside the tent. "Where can one find privacy?" she asked.

Mackey looked around. "There sure isn't much cover in this crater. You might try the shadow of a camel."

Sherwood had been letting down the tent front. "Come on Pete. Anne can change in here while we take the whole outdoors."

Then he thought of something and returned. "Let me open your bag." When it lay open he asked "What color?"

"Black. I can—"

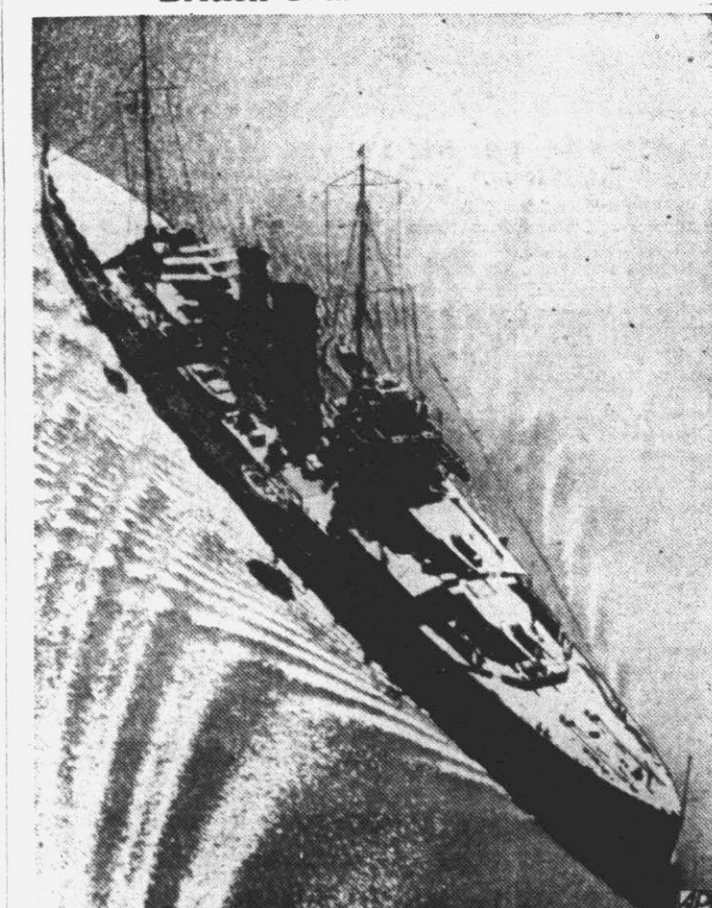

"Let me." He lifted the folded clothing carefully.

Mackey came and watched. "What's this?" asked Anne suddenly, "a customs inspection?"

Mackey grinned. "Our good friend, the Emir, has been known to smuggle deadly little desert vipers into the possession of people he does not like."

Anne shivered and stepped back. "There are none here," Sherwood declared, handing her the bathing suit and closing the bag.

Strength For The Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

HERE COMES THE BRIDE

Thousands and tens of thousands of attractive young ladies will walk down the aisle this month on the arms of their fathers. In joy and in sorrow, in sickness and in health, for richer or for poorer, to love and to cherish till death us do part—these expressions set off the month of June as one of the most significant of the year.

No one would be so bold as to attempt to lay down a formula for a happy marriage. But this can be said with confidence—the qualities and virtues which give significance to life outside the home are the ones which give significance to life inside the home. Honesty and truth-telling are probably the two virtues upon which the life of society at large is based, and likewise these two virtues lie at the basis of a happy home. Kindness and consideration for others get us a long way in our relationships with our fellows, and in like manner they brighten a home and make it a haven of quietness and contentment. The world admires courage, and there is no place where it is any more needed than in the home when men and women face the necessity of making great decisions.

Last of all, faith in a higher power than ourselves steadies our footsteps as we stumble along life's pathway, and a home devoted to God and church is just such a home as our Lord was speaking of when He said, "Whoever heareth these words of mine and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man which built his house upon a rock."

SPAIN IS THE DANGER POINT

(Scottish Rite News)

If Hitler ever attempts to strike at the United States through South America, Spain will probably be the jumping-off place. Ruled by a man who is the creature of Hitler and Mussolini and who could not have overthrown the regularly elected Loyalist Government without Nazi and Fascist support, the Spanish people will have nothing to say in the matter.

In the meantime, there is a tendency in both the United States and England to try to play the same old appeasement game with Franco that they did with Mussolini before Italy treacherously entered the war when France was a defeated country. Even last October career men in the State Department tried to force through a $100,000,000 loan to the Franco Government to be used to supply Spain with wheat. Though public protest squeaked this move, it was finally carried through by loaning the money to Argentina, which in turn shipped wheat into Spain. So far about 1,000,000 tons of Argentine grain has found its way to Franco's granaries.

Reports from South America indicate that the most serious threat throughout Latin America comes not from the German or Italian brand of Fascism, but from the Falange of Franco. The common Spanish background makes this form of Fascism more acceptable. Youth movements that cloak the activities of this organization are said to have sprung up in many Latin-American Republics. The inculcation of youth in the doctrines of totalitarianism has always been the first step in establishing dictatorships.

The importance of Spain in the Nazi scheme of conquest cannot be overemphasized. It is only from Spain that Hitler can hope to storm Gibraltar and gain control of the Strait leading into the Mediterranean. Spanish ports are ideal submarine bases from which to attack Atlantic shipping, and Spanish airports would make Hitler's bombers could roam in their relentless hunt for shipping.

The recent hymn of hate against Great Britain released in Arriba, Madrid mouth-piece of the Falange party, should convince even the most skeptical that Franco is the stooge of Hitler. It is becoming more and more obvious that Spain will enter the war on the side of the dictators whenever the Nazi Fuehrer decides the time is ripe.

Possibly the biggest single deterrent to Spain's entry into the war is the fact that harvest time is near and that wet weather has cut down the agricultural production. The 100,000 tons of grain per month coming from Argentina saves Hitler the necessity of feeding another ally. In other words, Hitler stands back and allows the democratic peoples to feed his unofficial Axis partner until the time is set for a lightning move against Gibraltar. It is a handy method he uses to gain food and war material from his enemies, and only lately he also tried it in the case of the Vichy government.

Surely, the free peoples of the world have learned their lesson. It has been proved, time and time again, that Hitler-controlled nations cannot be enticed away from their Nazi master. They only snatch what is offered and then turn on their benefactors and seek to destroy them. The reason is obvious. They know that if Britain wins, their freedom will be restored regardless of which side they favored, while if Hitler wins, their only hope of gaining even a small place in his "new order" is to have cooperated from the start.

Washington Daybook

By Jack Stinnett

Washington — Because of the crush of sensational day-to-day news, practically nothing is heard about it, but government officials are giving more and more attention to post-war economic blueprints.

As yet there is no overall plan. But it crops up frequently in such statements as "big government is here to stay" — "don't get the idea that defense jobs are temporary jobs" — and the remark of Philip Reed, priorities consultant, before the National Association of Manufacturers: "I suspect the war will advance several decades the Twentieth Century trend away from laissez-faire and toward economic integration and industry-wide planning under government supervision."

And almost every government department that is working on defense efforts is trying to match its defense plans with a plan for an after-the-war "return to normalcy."

As OPM Sees It.
The Agriculture's scheme for increased production of wartime necessities, the emphasis on building up milk and egg production, for example, is not on increasing the number of cows and chickens, but on feeding for greater production.

The department's guarantee of "floors" on prices of certain wanted products extends only one to two years — the period it is estimated now that these products will be needed by a world at war or by a world that returns suddenly to peace with no prospect of immediate production in other lands besides the U.S.

In the Office of Production Management, officials will tell you that reduction in the manufacture of automobiles, ice boxes and other products using steel and aluminum not only has its defense aspect but its post-war aspect as well. Defense metals are conserved now for defense uses — and a future demand for cars, ice boxes and such is being built up that will go far, it is hoped, toward taking up the post-war slack.

This kind of double-barreled reasoning is being applied to almost every economic defense move. Another example of it is the nationwide civilian pilot training program. The thought is only partially to provide a back-log of pilots with elementary training who can move on into the army or navy. Just as important is the creation of thousands of potential buyers for vastly-expanded airplane factories.

Washington Gossip.
There have been no detailed plans because the future is too uncertain. But already there is talk of vast public works projects — perhaps a great system of super-highways, bigger reclamation projects even than Boulder, Bonneville and the Grand Coulee, and a nation-wide overhauling of housing. So far, this is only Washington conversation, but the fact that it is conversation is significant.

The one phase of the picture that is not clear is employment. Something apparently is happening in the labor market that the defense planners didn't figure on. In spite of the fact that production activity is greater than in 1929 — that 1,500,000 men or more are under arms — labor experts and the two big unions estimate unemployment still is from six to nine millions. The explanation given is that women and young men, attracted by defense wages, have left their kitchens or schools to take employment.

FLIGHT ENDS AT SINGAPORE—When the 42-ton California Clipper arrived (above) at Singapore harbor the plane was inaugurating a fortnightly schedule between U.S. and British Malaya. The flight, on which the Clipper carried no regular passengers but did bear mail and 13,000 first-flight covers for American stamp collectors, marked the pushing of trans-Pacific air service to its farthest westerly point. Capt. W. J. Barrows of California commanded the Clipper, which was then prepared for a return flight to U.S.

'LIDS' FOR LOCOMOTIVES—Helmet-like steam dome casings for locomotives lie in Southern Pacific shops at San Francisco waiting for a spot on some mighty engine. Defense orders are boosting freight shipments over nation's railroads.

These were not heretofore considered in the labor market. If this is true, and these young men and women stay in the labor market after the war is over, it may present a very difficult problem.

FEW ARE NOW ON DEATH ROW

Decrease in Population Is Pleasing To Gill

Reflector Bureau
By HENRY AVERILL

Raleigh, June 2 — Decrease of Death Row's population to about half its normal figure is particularly pleasing to Commissioner of Prisons Edwin Gill, whose duty it is to make the investigations which mean life or death to condemned men. There are now only ten men under death sentence.

The commissioner told your reporter that this reduction is due in no small part to the promptness with which Governor J. Melville Broughton handles clemency appeals. So far in the present administration there has been no putting off and putting off of execution "for further investigation" or similar reasons. Such reprieves as have been granted have been because the doomed men may be needed as witnesses in other capital cases.

OI addition to the small number of inmates, another unusual feature in connection with the Death Row population is that every one of them is under sentence of death for murder. While this offense invariably accounts for by far the greater proportion, it is usual to have some men sentenced to die for rape, arson or first degree burglary.

"It is gratifying to note that the number of men on Death Row under final sentence of death is one of the lowest in recent years," Mr. Gill told your reporter. "There are only eleven occupants in all and only five of these are under final sentence of death. Five have appeals pending in the Supreme court and one has been granted a new trial in Robeson superior court."

"The situation may, of course, shift from week to week as new and oats with the combine; essentials in grain storage. P.M.: Methods of grain sampling; methods of determining dockage, moisture, foreign materials, weight per bushel, damage and garlic and smut. The schools will be under direction of W. L. Adams, field crop marketing specialist of the state department of agriculture, and W. H. Darst, department marketing specialist.

ter Floyd, Negro, Robeson; (3) Buster Floyd, Negro from Bertie; (4) Frank Starnes, Negro from Mecklenburg; and (5) Roland Westcott, white man from New Hanover. An Indian, Berlin Blue from Robertson, is also on Death Row but he has been granted a new trial by the Supreme court, and consequently is not to be considered as a true "Death Row" inhabitant.

Jenkins Gets Another Homer As Greenies Beat Bears

TELLER HURLS 5 TO 3 VICTORY

All Coastal Plain Games Rained Out On Saturday

Harry Jenkins came through with another homer in New Bern yesterday and Bill Teller proved effective on the mound as the Greenies came home with a 5-3 victory after the Saturday night game was rained out.

Jenkins got two more long ones which looked destined for homers, but the wind was against him and held the balls within the park.

Despite the fact that the Greenies are playing league-leading ball, they continue to trail Wilson by two and one-half games. The Tobs have lost only six games this season and Greenville has won three of these, the two leaders having divided each of the three two-game series they have played.

Yesterday's battle was a pitchers' duel between Teller and Morgan with the two battling on about even terms. The Bears got nine hits to eight for the Greenies, but the locals made two double plays to help the cause.

Carl Pierce, Duke graduate who has played consistently and effectively for the Blue Devils, entered the Greenville lineup yesterday at shortstop as Jenkins returned to his former position of third base. Pierce led the locals at bat, getting a two-bagger and a single in five trips. He made three putouts, but was given an error on a questionable play. The game was played on a muddy diamond, rain having halted only a short time before the game started.

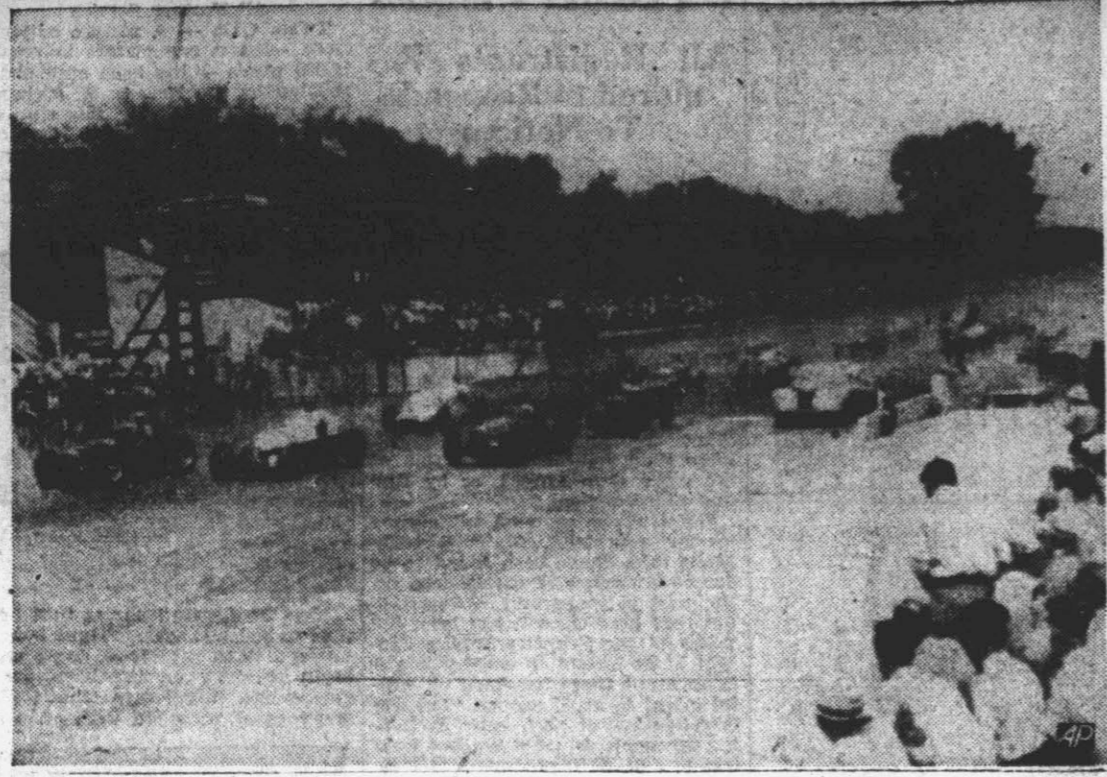

New Bern made one in the first inning, Greenville one in the fourth and New Bern came back with one in the sixth to hold a 2-1 lead at the start of the seventh. Jenkins started things off with his homer. Caraway singled and went to third on McGarity's double. Teller drew a walk to fill the bases. Finrock singled to score Caraway and McGarity and Pierce's single drove in Teller to account for the fourth run of the inning. New Bern got one in the eighth on Averette's homer, but was unable to get the needed runs to get back in the running. Doc Smith went in to hit for the New Bern pitcher in the ninth and was walked on four straight balls. The next man up hit a hard one to Finrock and was retired at first, the substitute runner for Smith having reached second. The next two men flied out to end the game.

Colored Night

The Greenville baseball club will observe Colored Night tonight and all members of that race will be admitted to the park for 10 cents.

The special night was scheduled for Saturday, but rain caused postponement of the game and the event was scheduled for tonight when the Greenies play Williamson.

They're Off In Indianapolis Speedway Race

This was the scene at the start of the annual 500-mile automobile race on the Indianapolis Speedway Memorial Day. Left to right in the front line are cars driven by Wilbur Shaw, Rex Mays and Mauri Rose. The race got off to a late start because of a fire that destroyed 30 garages and a racing car at the speedway.

OUTSIDER MAY GET N. C. POST

Governor May Go Out Of State For Department Head

Reflector Bureau.
By HENRY AVERILL
Raleigh, May 31.—There is a possibility (mind you, the word is "possibility" and not "probability" or even "likelihood") that the first Commissioner of Motor Vehicles to be named under the act of 1941 creating a Motor Vehicles Department will not be a Tar Heel but a man imported from without the state.

There isn't any indication that Governor J. Melville Broughton has made up his mind on anyone for the post; but there are persistent reports that he would not hesitate to name an outlander if he believes such an appointment would provide the state with the "best man I can find for the place."

There are also reports that, through the medium of "Pete" Harris, one-time head of the N. C. Motor Vehicle Division and now executive director of a national association of motor vehicle officials, the governor has made contact with one or more out of state men sounding them out on their willingness to take the place and to learn their qualifications for the job.

As already said there is no indication whatever that one of these non-Tar Heels will be selected; but the procedure is entirely consistent with the governor's expressed intentions to find the very best man available and name him without regard to place of residence, political connections or any quality other than proven ability.

The governor is said to have about decided on the "blue print" by which the new department will be set up. The law creating the department, also provided for a complete plan of organization, granting wide discretion to the commissioner, subject to gubernatorial approval, and laying down only one fixed condition—that there be divisions for registration and for safety promotion and highway patrol. No inkling of the plan the govern-nor favors has leaked out, and anything said about details is pure speculation.

It is assumed in many quarters, however, that the governor will favor some plan which will make impossible such a situation as now exists. For instance, it is believed sure that the safety division and the patrol will be so set up that it will be impossible for the safety director and the patrol commander to be as widely at odds as are Ronald Houtcutt, the safety head, and Major John Armstrong, commanding the patrol.

It is quite possible that the two units will be under one head and there is a further possibility that the work now done by the safety division will, under the new setup, be handled in much larger degree, by patrol members. Perhaps patrol members will be appointed on the basis of special qualifications for safety work and will be assigned to definite duties in line with these qualifications.

As for the motor vehicle division proper, there is no indication that there will be any radical changes in method of administration.

The fact that R. R. McLaughlin, the motor vehicle division director is working on some changes in method for registering next year's license is taken in some quarters to be a sign he will be retained—another sign being that his brother voted for Hoyer in the national committee contest. Hoyer undoubtedly expects to stay in the setup, and it is hoped he'll perhaps be a "deputy commissioner" Armstrong, by all the rules of politics, is "out," but the governor is something of a precedent breaker and there's no way to tell what's in the making.

ECTC Program Is Completed

gan the speaker of the morning. Then after making his contrast between the settled world of the day of his own graduation and the unsettled one of today, he said "Your question no doubt, is 'Where do we go from here?'"

In bringing out the importance of a definite purpose for the teacher and a need for character and love of the work, he said, "There is only one thing dead sure about the educational scheme and that is the power of the impact of one personality on another."

The teacher can stand before a class day after day without transmitting more than subject matter. She passes on a part of herself—an imperishable, the thing which for want of a better name we call character."

Behind any method of teaching is the personality of the teacher himself—the informal manner, the breadth of sympathies, the passionate interest in both subject matter and student.

"We need all the intellectual grasp can get, yes," he declared, "but life is a complex of activities of body, mind, and spirit and the teacher must help to fuse them into a unity."

The College will be closed for two days between terms, but will open again on Thursday with registration for the summer session.

Sunday's Program

"I have no higher ambition for you young men and women of the graduating class of this institution than that you be found at the end of the day among the ten thousand times ten thousand of the meek of the earth who have lived humbly and gladly as the servants of the Most High," said Reverend Sankey Lee Blanton, pastor of the First Baptist church of Wilmington, in the commencement sermon Sunday morning at East Carolina Teachers College, where the families and friends of the 181 graduates had gathered for the closing exercises of the College. He was introduced by President Leon R. Meadows, who spoke of his former pastorates in university centers of this country and said that he was eminently fitted by his experience to speak to a college graduating class.

The college band, directed by A. L. Dittmer, contributed to the day by a concert on the front campus at 4:30.

Drunkenness Charges Aired In City Court

Six of the nine defendants tried in Municipal recorder's court this morning were convicted of drunkenness and each was given a 30-day sentence, suspended upon payment of costs.

Those tried on the drunkenness charges were Cecil Allen, Ed Congleton and H. O. Norton, white, and Calvin Brown, Roosevelt Hopkins and Thomas Mann, colored.

Other cases disposed of were: Abron Sumrell, colored, assault with a deadly weapon, 30 days, suspended upon payment of costs and good behavior for one year; Charlie Adams, white, temporary larceny of an automobile, four months, suspended upon good behavior for two years; Israel Oliver, colored, assault on a female, acquitted.

Negro Being Held On Meat-Stealing Count

Chester Moring, Pitt county Negro, is being held in jail on a charge of having entered the home and smokehouse of Roy Whitehurst, tenant on the farm of D. T. House, Jr., in Bethel township Sunday and to have taken a quantity of meat, lard, eggs and other produce.

Members of the sheriff's department quoted the Negro as admitting he stole the meat and other goods. The theft was discovered when Whitehurst returned to his home on Sunday afternoon.

Flames Leap High Over Jersey City

Flames, which at times leaped more than 400 feet in the air, roared through this eight-story grain-filled elevator as a spectacular fire swept the Jersey City (N. J.) waterfront.

when we look at the fate of the peace-loving nations of Europe, here we may be sure of the truth of Jesus' statement. In the long view of history we have proof of this, he declared, citing cases of tyrants and conquerors from the earliest history to the present.

The speaker defined the meek as those who are gentle in word and deed, who know the heights and depths of love, and who live their loyalty to their friends, the institutions by which they live, and the heritage of their country. These will inherit the earth; however, inheriting the earth may be very different from possessing it. One does not have to possess a thing to enjoy it.

In closing, the speaker emphasized the fact that we cannot defend spiritual concepts by guns alone, and declared that it is the binding obligation of those who do not fight for democracy on the battlefield to devote their lives to enriching the democracies for which others are dying. "It seems the least we can do," he declared.

GROUPS NAMED BY ASSOCIAT'N

Twenty-four advisory committees of the Greenville Production Credit Association, local short-term credit cooperative for farmers, attended morning and afternoon sessions with the Board of Directors at the Woman's Club here for the purpose of further informing themselves with reference to the policies and procedures followed by the association.

Jno. R. Carroll, president, presided throughout the day and in welcoming the committeemen to the meeting he pointed out that the association is a service institution interested in the welfare of agriculture.

Mack G. Smith, a director of the association, addressed the group on why the production credit system was brought into existence. "Farming is one of the biggest and most important businesses in this great country of ours," Mr. Smith said, "and time and experience have proven to us that because of its peculiar characteristics agriculture needs a specialized credit system all of its own." He pointed out that the production credit system meets that need.

Mr. Smith was followed on the program by Mr. G. R. Miller, secretary of the Production Credit Corporation of Columbia, the organization charged with the responsibility of supervising activities of production credit associations in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, and Florida. He explained that the local association, although a local corporation, is serving a vast nation-wide system representing approximately 300,000 farmers who are members of 525 associations.

WARNING MADE BY DRAFT HEAD

All Registrants Required to Respond To Notices

Raleigh, June 2.—Warning to all Selective Service registrants that they must respond to notices issued to them by local boards or become liable to severe penalties was given today by General J. Van B. Metts, State director of Selective Service.

The state director pointed out that Section 11 of the Selective Training and Service Act of 1940 provides that any registrant who fails to conform to the law or regulations shall be liable to punishment by imprisonment for not more than five years or a fine of not more than $10,000, or by fine and imprisonment.

"Most of the cases of delinquency so far reported," State Director Metts said, "have been found to be due to ignorance or carelessness on the part of registrants. He pointed out that heretofore it has been the policy of the Selective Service System to be lenient in cases where it is apparent there has been no willful intent to avoid service. "But the investigation of such cases is taking up much valuable time of local boards and of Department of Justice agents, when these agencies should be devoting their time to the more urgent work of national defense," General Metts said, and then added: "Registrants had better not count on an indefinite continuance of this policy of leniency."

In an effort to correct this situation and to avoid the possibility of prosecution for delinquency, registrants were reminded by General Metts that they must complete and return their questionnaires within the time stated in the first page, they must report to examining physicians at the time and place stated in the notice and they must report for delivery to the induction station when notified to do so. General Metts warned that failure to respond to any of these legal notices will subject the registrant to possible prosecution in the Federal Court.

To Continue Revival At Free Will Baptist

Because of the interest manifested by the large audience present Sunday evening it was decided to continue the revival services at the Greenville Free Will Baptist church through Wednesday evening of this week. Rev. C. B. Thompson of Ayden will speak each evening at 8 o'clock, and there will be a program of special music in connection with each service under the direction of W. F. Owen, chorister of the church assisted by the Nobles Male quartet, and other singers of the city.

Several young people joined the local Free Will Baptist church Sunday evening as a result of the evening services and special group meetings held during the week. These will be baptized at 3 p. m. next Sunday by the pastor, Rev. L. E. Ballard.

The public is cordially invited to all services. Attendance records taken Sunday showed members of the Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian, Christian, Episcopal and Pentecostal Holiness denominations attended the services, and the pastor expressed public appreciation for this spirit of cooperation.

How To Attend Church And See A Picture Show

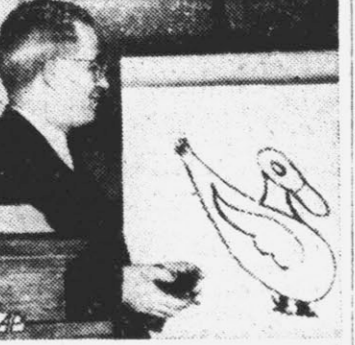

AP Feature Service
Tulsa, Okla.—A picture editor's creed that one picture is worth 10,000 words — has been applied to religion by the Rev. C. H. Rickard with good results. He fills church pews with his chalk talks. One of his favorites starts with this text: "As iron sharpeneth iron, so a man sharpeneth the countenance of his neighbor," and goes as follows:

First he draws 2 circles that appear to be goose eggs. "Three boys," he says, "find a piece of chalk and begin to draw on the barn door. One draws this potato (that's the goose eggs) complete with an eye.

"The second boy says he can draw too, and he adds a squash to the potato.

"The third boy adds a few lines that combine the chalk figures into a duck. All this says the Rev. Rickard, has a moral: If you start something good others will help to make it better. If you start something bad, others will help to make it worse. By this time his drawings have the undivided attention of the audience and he launches into the main sermon.

Pitt Negroes Taken On Whiskey Charges

Two Negroes were arrested by Pitt county ABC officers on Saturday. One, John Henry Smith of near Winterville, is charged with having illegal whiskey in his possession for the purpose of sale after officers allegedly found one-half gallon of the contraband at his home. He is free under $200 bond.

The other Negro, Jess Battle of Greenville, is charged with transporting illegal liquor for the purpose of sale. Officers reported that he threw a gallon jug of whiskey from his car while being chased. He is being held in jail pending disposition of the charge against him.
