

FOES PUSH FOR SYRIAN POSITIONS

SAYS GERMANY IS PROMOTING TALK OF PEACE

FDR Asserts No Such Proposal Brought By Winant

CITES SPECIFIC NAZI PROPAGANDA

Volunteers Information He Has In Possession Two Orders Directed To Axis Agents In U. S.

Washington, June 6. (AP)—President Roosevelt declared today that Ambassador John G. Winant had brought from England not even "a tenth cousin of a peace offer," and added that German propaganda was responsible for peace talk.

The chief executive was asked at a press conference whether he cared to say that Winant had brought no peace terms and he authorized this direct quotation: "Not even a tenth cousin of a peace offer or anything like that or any discussion of peace."

"Absolutely nothing like it, provided you use this not as a denial by the President, but as an accusation by the President."

Asked whom he was accusing, Mr. Roosevelt said persons being duped by Germany.

He volunteered the information that he had on his desk two orders which he said had been issued by the official German propaganda agency in Berlin to what he called Nazis and Fascists in this country.

The first order, Mr. Roosevelt said, told them to stress the idea that Germany had no thought of moving against any country of the entire Western Hemisphere.

The second, he said, ordered Nazi and Fascist sympathizers, as soon as Winant arrived back in the United States to spread the story that he was bringing a score-head story that Britain was about all in and talking peace.

Mr. Roosevelt asserted furthermore that it was an amazing coincidence that stories of the types recommended by Germany had appeared in a certain type of newspaper in the United States.

Told by a reporter that there was an impression being spread that Britain had said she would not last more than a few months without increased American help, the chief executive declared that this never had been said unless it was by Berlin. It did not come, he added, from a responsible source.

Officer Discovers Five Points Fire

A serious fire was averted at Five Points shortly after 2 o'clock this morning when City Policeman S. B. Dorsey discovered a blaze in the Durham Life Insurance Company office in the Munford building and immediately turned in the alarm.

Firemen arrived in time to check the blaze before it had reached the roof, although it had extended to the petition. Loss was estimated at between $300 and $400 by Chief George Gardner.

The blaze is believed to have started in some paper on the floor by a desk and Chief Gardner said the only cause he could ascribe was a smoldering cigarette left in the papers.

Water soaked through the floor and caused damage to Williams' store handling women's goods, but firemen removed part of the stock and covered some other to help minimize the damage.

E. C. Ross To Attend Class Of '91 Reunion

E. C. Ross of Washington, D. C., former North Carolinian and for years superintendent of the Pamlico county schools, who is visiting here, will attend the 50th annual reunion in Chapel Hill tomorrow of the class of 1891.

Mr. Ross, who is visiting his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. H. Roberts, estimated that there are approximately 25 members of the class of '91 now living.

Fire This Afternoon. Firemen were called to College View cleaners this afternoon when a tub of cleaning solvent caught fire apparently from chemical reaction. The tub was located back of the building and no loss by fire was suffered.

About 600,000 persons in the United States are victims of epileptic seizures.

Britain Backers Call For Defense Against Britain

Mother Reports Son For Slaying

Mrs. Mary Ziemba (left) of Chicago furnished police with the clue that led to the arrest of her son, Peter, (right), 21, in connection with the slaying of a night watchman during a robbery. Peter, she said, threatened to "take care" of his father "like I took care of the watchman." Police Lieut. James O'Brien said Peter and an accomplice confessed. This picture of the weeping mother and her son was made at a police station after his arrest.

Steps Being Considered To End Defense Strikes

President Says Action To Await Board's Efforts

(By The Associated Press) President Roosevelt said today he had new steps under consideration to reduce labor stoppages in defense industries, but was not prepared to do anything while the Defense Mediation Board worked on settling west coast aircraft and lumber disputes.

In reply to a question by a reporter at his press conference, the President said there was no statement "today" on whether he planned to do something about the strike at North American Aviation Corporation's big warplane plant or the strike of International Woodworkers Union members in Washington.

Asked whether he intended to emphasize "today," he replied that reporters heard what he said.

Then, on another question whether he was considering anything to make labor aware of "new responsibilities," he said he believed that could be answered in the affirmative.

He called attention to a formal letter from Daniel J. Tobin, head of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Warehousemen and Helpers, which "wholeheartedly and sincerely" pledged the union's support to the President and the nation.

He said it was typical of 400 or 500 received from unions since he had called for them to cooperate in defense production without stoppages.

When told there were two strikes by groups of Tobin's union, he said he was told by Tobin that steps had been taken to end them.

From Pittsburgh came an announcement by Federal Conciliator Moffitt that a settlement was near in the six-day strike of 2,200 truck drivers.

There were 52,800 defense workers reported on strike in defense industries yesterday by the War Department, the largest number for any day this year.

Activities of the Service League for the past several months were reviewed at a meeting of the organization held at the Country Club this week. It was the last meeting until October; the league having disbanded for the summer months.

Mrs. Walter Harrington presided. The monthly report was given and then the yearly reports were made.

Mrs. Lyman Ormond, Layette chairman, reported that 3 complete Layettes were furnished the Health Department during May.

Mrs. Ralph Garrett, chairman of the Charles O'Hogan Laughing-house Bed Fund in her monthly report said that the bed had one patient for 10 days during May.

Mrs. Ed Wilkerson, Placement Chairman read a letter from Mrs.

Annie Faircloth, State Blind Commission Worker, in which she stated that she was going to be transferred to another field. She praised Greenville and said that it was second to none in the state in assistance given to the workers among the blind.

The yearly reports were most gratifying. Mrs. Carroll Waldrop made the treasurer's report which was a most satisfactory one. Miss Henne Long, Secretary of the League, reported that during the past year, 5,000 hours had been given voluntarily to charity work by members of the league.

Mrs. Wyatt Brown, Project chairman stated the projects in which the league was interested: Thrift shop; Christmas baskets; Maternal

STATEMENT BY HULL STUDIED

Vichy Contends That Collaboration With Germany Not For Purpose Of Aggression Or Oppression, As Hull Had Intimated

Vichy, June 6. (AP)—The friend of Marshal Pétain called on its loyal forces for a stern defense of Syria against any British move, while pondering today Secretary Hull's declaration that cooperation with Germany would be considered "utterly inimical to the just rights of other countries."

Official reaction to the American Secretary of State's statement yesterday did not immediately materialize, but Vichy chiefs for Africa, including General Maxime Weygand, participated in a cabinet meeting where it was supposed Hull's utterances were discussed.

Unofficially, the French insisted that collaboration with Germany was not as Hull expressed fear it was, "for the purpose of aggression and oppression." Unofficial sources said the collaboration was purely economic and political to restore France to a normal place in a re-organized Europe after the war.

General Henri Dentz, commander in chief of the French forces in the Levant—Syria—calling on his men for an unbending defense, denied anew in a broadcast last night that France was surrendering rule of Syria and that German forces were landing at Latakia, relieving French troops.

"The command is clear: defend our possessions and defend them with our own forces," he said.

Local Delegation Off To Convention

Five members of the Greenville Business and Professional Women's club, including the president, Mrs. J. D. Simpson, left today to attend the annual convention of the State Federation to be held at Wrightsville.

Five other members of the local club plan to leave tomorrow.

Those who left today were Mrs. Simpson, who is one of the hostesses, Miss Helen Gaskins and Miss Lib Casey, who are on the reception committee. Miss Gaskins also being on the nominating committee. Miss Margaret Register and Mrs. J. O. Morton.

Those who plan to go tomorrow are Mrs. Chester Walsh, Mrs. Cora S. Powell, Miss Martha Guenther, Miss Patsy Davenport and Miss Imogene Ricks.

The Greenville club will have charge of the annual banquet tomorrow night.

Classes Resumed At Local College

ROME REPORTS NIGHT ATTACK ON GIBRALTAR

Simultaneous Raid on Malta Also Claimed By Italy

NO MENTION OF RESULT OF RAIDS

British Planes, Meanwhile, Reported To Have Raided Lybia And Other Fascist Centers

Rome, June 6. (AP)—Italian planes attacked the British stronghold of Gibraltar, which guards the western gate to the Mediterranean, last night and struck simultaneously at British airports on Malta, in the central Mediterranean, the high command reported today.

The bombardment of Gibraltar was the first to be officially announced by the Axis command. The daily war bulletin, however, made no mention of results in either attack.

British planes, in turn, bombed Bengasi and Derna, Libya, and bombed the Italian island of Rhodes in the eastern Mediterranean, on Wednesday night, the high command said. One British plane was said to have been shot down in Africa.

In Africa land fighting, Italian forces were said to have repulsed a British attack in the Salum zone. While a group of British soldiers, commanded by an officer who fled the island of Crete in a motorboat, were said to have been captured in the Bardia zone.

Cairo, June 6. (AP)—British bombers attacked Italian aircraft on the airfield at Aleppo, in northern Syria, yesterday, destroying one craft by direct hits, the RAF Middle East command announced today.

Besides hitting planes on the landing field, today's war bulletin said, hits were registered on hangars and runways.

Columns of smoke arose from the asphalt runway, it added.

Cotton Stamp Idea Is Explained Here

A group of representative merchants from all sections of the county attended a meeting held here last night for the purpose of explaining cotton stamp program which will go into effect July 1.

Edwood R. Willis, a representative of the Surplus Marketing Administration, conducted the meeting and explained the program. He revealed that if Pitt farmers take full advantage of the program a total of $83,636 will be available in the county.

The purpose of the program, it was explained, is three-fold: 1—To reduce the production of cotton this year and thereby help cut down the surplus; 2—Increase the consumption of cotton products; 3—Encourage farmers to produce and store food and feed supplies.

Under the plan a farmer who agrees to reduce his cotton production on the ratio of one acre to 10 will be paid in stamps at the rate of 10 cents per pound of the anticipated yield. These stamps are good in trade for any 100 per cent cotton goods.

Mr. Willis used slides in explaining the program and advised that merchants soon would receive full instructions and cards to sign if they desire to participate in the program.

The stamps will be available on July 1.

Funeral Tomorrow For Mrs. Williams

Mrs. Nina Williams, 59, died at her home near Greenville this afternoon at 1:30 o'clock following three months of illness. Funeral services will be conducted at the home tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock by Dr. R. S. Boyd, Presbyterian minister of Greenville. Burial will follow in the Hardee cemetery near Red Banks.

Mrs. Williams, the widow of Jesse Williams, was born, reared and spent her entire life in Pitt county. She is survived by four daughters, Miss Mamie Williams, Miss Ruth Evans, Mrs. L. A. Mills of the home and Mrs. Lonnie McGowan of the same community; three sons, Loren Williams of Silver Peak, Nev., Zeno Williams of the community and Guy Williams of Langley Field, Va., eight grandchildren, two brothers and one sister.

Annual Boy Scout Camp To Be Opened On June 8

Camp Charles, summer camping spot of East Carolina Council, is fast reaching the state of preparedness necessary to receive the khaki-clad horde of Scouts that will descend upon it Sunday, June 8. Part of the staff will appear in camp Friday of this week in order to make their plans and to receive training to be able to better lead the many Scouts in the many activities.

Needham Bryan, Camp Director and Alfred Hodges, Waterfront Director, are in training this week in Augusta, Ga. Mr. Bryan is taking a special course in Camp Directorship, and Mr. Hodges is learning new methods for teaching waterfront activities. Both of these leaders have served for many years in camps, and with their experience it is believed that Camp Charles will make new records of achievement. Director of athletics, activities and games, will be Douglas Kelley field scout executive, and former high school coach, Mr. Kelley has served on various camp staffs for many years and will be a newcomer to Camp Charles this year. Volleyball, softball, and other sports will be available, and besides these, many other games, such as capture the flag, will be played. Camp fires will be a high spot each evening.

Four row boats have been obtained, making up a sizeable fleet, much larger than in previous years, and boating will come into its own as never before. A nine foot laminated surf board will also be used to teach life saving. A new springboard is being prepared for those liking to

Tokyo Makes Demands; Are Rejected By Dutch

Japs Had Sought The Rights To Obtain War Materials

Batavia, Netherland East Indies, June 6.—The Dutch delivered a generally unfavorable reply today to Japanese demands for a large share of the Indies exports of such war materials as rubber, oil and tin, but the chief of the Japanese delegation indicated he was not prepared to break off negotiations primarily, as he intimated beforehand he would do.

After receiving the 10-page Dutch memorandum in a 90-minute conference, Kenkichi Yoshizawa, chief of the Japanese delegation, said it was "disappointing" and he did not think Tokyo would find it satisfactory.

Although he had said previously that the negotiations were teetering on a "precipice" with indications of danger to friendly relations unless the Dutch substantially bowed to Japan's wishes, he said today he would have to study the Dutch reply more closely.

Yoshizawa explained this apparent change of attitude.

Calls Meeting On Aircraft Program

Arthur B. Corey, district chief of the voluntary anti-aircraft warning program, has called a meeting of county representatives in the area to be held in his office on Tuesday night of next week.

Chiefs, will be here from Pitt, Lenoir, Wilson, Nash, Edgecombe and Halifax counties.

The purpose of the meeting is to appoint chief and assistant observers for each observation post in the district. Printed material and instructions will be turned over to the county chiefs, who in turn will distribute the data among the observers.

The program is being carried out by the American Legion. J. H. Rose is chief of Eastern Carolina.

Suez Drive By Germans Is Expected

Indicated British May Move Into French Mandate To Gain Jump on Nazis; Germans Reported in Syria Despite Continued Denials from Berlin; London Faces Acute Political Situation

London, June 6. (AP)—Belief that the Germans have reinforced their North African army in preparation for a drive on Suez caused new concern today as Germany and Britain jockeyed for position in an impending battle for control of Syria.

There were indications that British troops might move into the strategically-situated French mandate at any moment in an effort to gain the jump on the Nazis. Reliable sources declared the long-awaited showdown in the Middle East could not be long averted.

Reports of new German troop infiltrations into Syria brought warnings from the press that Britain's position was grave. There were increasing demands for decisive action to meet the situation.

(Authorized sources in Berlin said "there are no German troops in Syria.")

The German radio, quoting dispatches from Beirut, said British soldiers were preparing to land on the north Syrian coast and to attack from Palestine and Transjordan. The same source said a large portion of the British forces rescued from Crete had been landed at Cyprus, just off the Syrian coast.

(NBC's correspondent in Ankara, Turkey, said in a broadcast last night that German troops were reported to have moved into Damascus, Syria, only 60 miles north of the frontier of British-occupied Transjordan.)

Coupled with these developments was an admittedly acute political situation caused by growing criticism of the government's military strategy and its efforts to step up production of munitions.

One political correspondent asserted that "the serious defeat in Crete has bitten deeply into the prestige of the British government," and added:

"The confidence of responsible members of all parties has been seriously shaken and the demand for an imperial war council has been growing steadily."

The situation caused by reported German troop movements in Syria was regarded as particularly serious because of the probability that counter measures by Britain might embroil her in war with France.

Moscow Emissary Returns to London

London, June 6. (AP)—Sir Stafford Cripps, British ambassador to Moscow, "will return shortly" for consultation and will go back to his post after a few days in London, it was announced authoritatively today.

Sir Stafford and his wife already have left the Soviet capital, flying to Stockholm today on the first leg of their trip home.

"At the foreign secretary's request, Sir Stafford Cripps will shortly return to the United Kingdom for consultation," said the announcement.

"After a few days in London he will return to his post in Moscow. It is the normal procedure for his majesty's representatives abroad to come home for consultations whenever this seems desirable in order that they may be kept in touch with all aspects of the situation."

MacKenzie-Horne.
The wedding of Miss Mary Lorraine Horne and Mr. Raymond McKenzie was solemnized at ten o'clock this morning in Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church. The ceremony was performed by the pastor, Reverend Thomas McM. Grant, in a setting of palms, ferns and tall standards of white lilies.

A program of pre-nuptial music was presented by Mrs. Ray Tyson, organist, and a vested trio composed of Miss Louise Kilgo, Miss Mary Woolard and Mrs. Clay Stroud, Jr. Miss Kilgo sang "Calm As The Night," by Brahms, and "At Dawning," by Cadman. A trio composed of Miss Kilgo, Miss Woolard and Mrs. Stroud sang "Liebestraum," by Liszt, and after the ceremony sang "Benediction," by Larkin. Mrs. Tyson used the wedding marches from "A Midsummer Night's Dream," by Mendelssohn, and from "Lohengrin," by Wagner, for the processional and recessional.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, Mr. W. Hill Horne, wore a smart navy and sky blue traveling suit with matching accessories. Her shoulder corsage was of Briarcliff roses and baby's-breath.

Mrs. Bob Moffett, sister of the bride, who was dame of honor, wore a becoming summer sheer of Alice blue and white with matching picture hat. She carried an arm bouquet of delphinium and larkspur.

R. P. MacKenzie of Washington, N. C., was his brother's best man, and the ushers were Rudolph MacKenzie of Ocala, Fla., brother of the groom, Hill Horne, Jr., brother of the bride, Bob Moffett and Staunton Harvey of Greenville.

Mrs. Horne, mother of the bride, was attired in beige triple sheer with British tan accessories, with which she wore a corsage of Talisman roses.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Hill Horne of this city. Since the announcement of her engagement several weeks ago, she has been extended many lovely courtesies. She was graduated from Greenville high school and attended East Carolina Teacher's College. For the past few years she has been employed by Bloom's dress shop.

Mr. MacKenzie is a native of Fayetteville, N. C., the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Francis Ivey MacKenzie. He is the local McCormick-Deering representative for the MacKenzie Equipment Company of Washington, N. C.

Immediately following the ceremony the couple left for an extended trip to Florida and other southern points. Upon their return they will make their home at their newly erected home on Rotary avenue.

On last evening, prior to rehearsal, Mr. and Mrs. W. Hill Horne entertained the MacKenzie-Horne wedding party and out-of-town guests at supper, at their home on Pitt street.

Supper was served buffet style from a table covered with a lace cloth and centered with a beautiful bowl of larkspur in pastel shades, flanked with burning white candles.

Mrs. Anne Murrill Price of New Bern and Mrs. Ray Tyson served from either end of the table. They were assisted by Mrs. Bob Moffett, Miss Catherine Tyson and Mrs. Mason Yates.

The out-of-town guests here for the wedding were: Mr. and Mrs. R. P. MacKenzie and two children of Washington, N. C.; Mrs. Mason Yates of Columbia, S. C.; Mr. and Mrs. Clay Stroud, Jr., of Ayden; Miss Elizabeth MacKenzie of New York; Miss Gladys MacKenzie of Greensboro; Mr. Richard Modlin of Belhaven; Little Miss Martha MacKenzie of Halifax; Mrs. Anne Murrill Price of New Bern, and Rudolph MacKenzie of Ocala, Fla.

Garlic Olives.
Garlic olives are quite a treat for cocktail serving. Drain off the liquid from ripe olives, add a clove of garlic and heat slowly to the boiling point. Cool and pour over the olives. Chill several hours. Discard the garlic.

Minted Gravy.
Minted gravy will give an extra lift to your lamb dishes. Make brown gravy as usual and then for each 1/2 cup of gravy stir in a teaspoon finely chopped fresh mint, 1-4 teaspoon oil of peppermint or a tablespoon of mint jelly.

Hash With Buns.
Hash goes upstage when it is used as a bun filler. Scoop out rolls (left-overs or fresh), butter insides and pile full of savory cooked hash. Brush top with melted butter or gravy and bake 15 minutes in moderate oven.

Darn Clever, These Stylists They've Discovered China!

Out of a number of assorted foreign influences in fashion, the Chinese influence suddenly takes the lead.

What was a mere whisper of things Oriental—the mandarin coats of early spring, the occasional sleek straight bangs, the touches of jade jewelry—has swelled to a shout.

Sentimental interest in China is a big part of the reason. A fashion show put on for United China Relief drew a smart audience, whose members not only admired the Chinese-influenced costumes shown, but immediately placed orders for them. Cause-minded women are welcoming the lovely new legendary Chinese print on which the cause gets a percentage of all sales.

Hollywood

Sights and Sounds

By Robbie Conn

Hollywood—Economy in movie-making is a very simple thing. When the producers quit talking about cutting expenses and get around to asking me, this innocent observer of many movies will volunteer his unpatented approach to the problem, to wit:

You start with the script. (And finish there too, wherein—to eliminate the suspense—is the whole secret.)

First, you cut out the part about how Boy Meets Girl. You tell your writers to quit bothering about how, why, where and when B. met G. This saves endless wear and tear on your littry wageslaves' brains.

"Screenwriters," you say, "I don't care a last year's hoot how B. met G. You bring 'em together in a bomb shelter or a Paris ballroom, or a shanty in old Shantytown, or a cottage small by a waterfall, (or wherever) and we gotta build a set. Sets cost money. Also we gotta shoot it. And we got a lotta overhead. For what? So Boy can meet Girl before their very eyes. So we'll skip it. We'll start it where B. has met G. years before. We save a whole reel that way."

Flowers and jewelry—and jeweled buttons—are important to the Chinese trend. The jewelry, costly or costume, usually is copied exactly, rather than adapted, from old Chinese pieces.

Their fresh appeal in such distinctively Chinese color combinations as Ming yellow with praying-mantis green, coral with white, bamboo beige with gold-fish orange, peacock blue with lavender.

THE SACRED DAGGER

YESTERDAY: It looks as if there were nothing before Anne Willard and Blaze Sherwood but a slow death from starvation. They had married, in an attempt to escape the wicked Emir, and he has tricked them. Even Pete Mackey, who shared their "prison" in the middle of the wide desert, has disappeared, and Anne has found a grave with Pete's coat lying upon it. She is telling Blaze.

Chapter 17
The Rabbit

Anne moved over where she could look down at him as he lay on his back with his fingers laced under his head.

"I found Pete Mackey's grave." He sat up swiftly, facing her. "Sorry, I wanted to save you from that."

"There was an eagle with him." Blaze shuddered. "Scavenger." He gave her a long, deep look. "You're in a mood tonight."

"I'm beginning to realize that life is short."

She had spread her hands on the sand behind her, arms stiff, and was looking up into the sky. He kissed her throat and then lifted her head. She did not need to be told this time to put her arms around his neck.

It was three days later that the eagle began his vigil at their camp. Blaze was on his usual daily pilgrimage to the top of the rock to scan the horizon. Anne had not gone with him but lay in the shade below the cliff for warm weather was creeping rapidly across the desert. Under her tongue she held a pebble that was meant to allow the pangs of hunger to a certain extent.

Suddenly the big bird swooped low, almost upon her. She jumped up with a scream and struck out at him. He flapped a few yards away and stood looking at her, turning his head from one side to the other. Blaze came running; Anne clung to him, half laughing, half crying.

"I've heard of their carrying off babies," she gulped, "but I'm no baby."

"At times, Anne, at times," he teased, patting her hands on his arm. "But he had no intention of carrying you off. Desert eagles have discovered that sick men lie down to die beside the caravan trails. These fellows do not wait for the man to die, they just wait until he's too weak to rise and fight them off."

He threw his hat at the bird which sidled away a trifle and began to preen his wings as he had done the first time Anne saw him. Blaze rushed him and he rose to the top of the bluff.

Then Anne discovered she had swallowed her pebble. Sherwood took her in his arms, laughing delightedly.

"You're the joy of my life. Precious." He held her away once more to gaze at her. Their fast had begun to tell. Faint shadows under her cheek bones and in her eyes gave her a look of mystery, but her body still felt round and enticing.

"Anne, you grow more beautiful every day. If I were any kind of a hero I suppose I'd kill that bird for you."

He arranged an armful of weeds on the little fire they kept going on the lake margin. The smoke spiraled up like an Arabian jinn released from a bottle. On the farther side of the dune they had found a bed of old dried reeds as if at one time water hot so salt had covered a wider lake bed.

"See anything today?" she asked idly.

"Not even a cloud."

He picked up the blanket she had been lying on and moved it to a new place in the shade, took a sliver of stone and drew a checkerboard on a level spot on the clay. They began a game with pebbles for one and buttons she had cut from a dress for the other.

The next morning at daylight Anne awoke and went to the tent door in time to see an astounding sight. Blaze and the eagle seemed to be having a fight on top of the bluff. Then the bird took flight and Blaze waved something at her that looked like a gray rag. He held it out and she recognized the body of a rabbit. They cooked it on a spit.

"Do eagles usually carry their kill from the place where they capture it?" asked Anne.

He grinned. "All I know is that this one did."

"Maybe he deliberately brought it to us."

"Not considering the tussle I had in getting it away from him."

As they ate they assured each other it was the most delicious food they had ever tasted in their lives. They put half of it away for the next day and talked about how heavenly it would be to wake up in the morning.

"Blaze, you're a wonderful provider," Anne told him.

He chuckled. "Wait until we are dining on roast eagle. I believe I could wring his neck with my hands."

Blaze moulded a clay pot in which they boiled the rabbit bones and made them a soup that spread over two more days. Then he said, "I've been thinking I should strike out for the border of Sinking. It can't be far away and I may find Chinese ferry posts."

Anne's heart sank. "You remember what happened the last time you went exploring?"

"This looks like different country to the east. I doubt if there are marshes and quick sands."

"If you go, I go. He smiled and took her hand and led her to the top of the hill for their daily observation.

Once they thought, as they had the day before, that they saw an airplane, but it resolved itself into their eagle. Presently Blaze did see something that seemed to be moving. He managed to show it to Anne.

"This atmospheric condition also produces dust devils, he said. "If it's a camel," he said, "it's coming directly towards us or going directly from us. If it's a man traveling parallel, we can tell by choosing observation points." They watched breathlessly.

"I believe it's a man walking," he decided presently. "He's coming closer, but I don't believe he'll strike us." Anne felt weak with excitement. Another human being when they had never expected to see one again!

"But how strangely he moves," she remarked anxiously. "He seems to bounce back into the air like a rubber ball every time he touches the ground."

"This might be the lama, then." "If it were, you'd think he'd be coming here."

"He's going to pass by without seeing us," Anne wailed.

"I'll try to intercept him, Anne. But remember it may be only a dust devil."

The Planes

She stood there and watched him descend the rock, an unaccountable depression dragging at her heart as if some intelligence deep within were aware of catastrophe her consciousness mind had not yet grasped.

"I ought to be on my knees giving thanks," she thought, unbidden tears streaming down her cheeks. "What is the matter with me?"

Then she remembered. She couldn't take Blaze to her parents. He was an enemy to their plans—and hers. Blaze was somebody she had planned to die with—not live with.

She saw him stop for a moment in front of their tent, examine some papers from an inside pocket and then hasten on in a Marathon runner's trot that carried him swiftly from one clay ridge to the next.

On the crests he would stop to wave and shout, but the traveler kept on steadily. Anne watched with deepening anxiety, strange fears in her mind. He seemed to be leading farther and farther away, and finally, where the ridges rose higher in the approach to the foot hills to the mountains, the odd figure disappeared as if uncertain what to do next.

Perhaps, before Anne, he heard the roar of the engines. The moment she recognized that zooming sound she ran forward to the edge of the cliff straining to see the shining specks in the sky which swiftly changed to scintillating planes of the blue and gold of Shani Lun, that sank low surveying the terrain in revolving circles.

"They must be looking for us," thought Anne joyously, all her forebodings vanished. The lama must have got word to the Prince of Shani Lun.

She was waving wildly; Blaze the she saw. The pilots spied him first, one plane setting down close by him on the plateau, the other following. The first pilot jumped from his ship and ran to meet Blaze. They threw their arms around each other.

"They knew each other," Anne heard herself exclaiming aloud. "They'll be coming for me soon!"

The other pilot appeared and embraced Blaze.

She could surmise the three men's excited talk and she could see their gestures. One of them gave Sherwood a letter. After a bit more palaver two of the men went to the second plane and climbed in.

Anne rushed down from the cliff astonished at the weakness by knees exhibited. Once she fell. And when she came to the tent she dropped down on the rug outside exhausted. The planes were in the air now. One struck off north immediately, the other circled above her and came down lightly on the level stretch of salt at the lower end of the lake. It was taxiing to a stop when one wheel went through the treacherous salt crust the plane tilted to one side and something crashed.

The pilot popped out this was the lone pilot, she saw. He gazed ruefully at the injured wing.

The pilot jumped down and yelled "Hi." He was running towards her. She stood there staring at him, unable to take a single step forward to meet him, for she recognized that figure and that voice.

Pete Mackey stood before her. He gazed at her a bit abashed.

"I hear you thought I was dead."

BIG QUESTION IS UNDECIDED

Court Delays Ruling On Right To Sue Union

Reflector Bureau.
By HENRY AVERILL

Raleigh, June 5.—Among the dozen cases the Supreme court left undecided when it ended its Spring term is one involving the question: "Can a labor union, as a voluntary unincorporated association, be sued in North Carolina?"

The question is presented squarely in the case of C. T. Hallman vs. The Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers' International Union, and certain individuals. Plaintiff bases his case on an alleged willful, wanton and malicious blacklisting of himself as a lathing contractor. He claims $9,000 actual and $35,000 punitive damages as the result of having been forced off two big housing jobs in Charlotte and in Raleigh.

The case came up to the supreme court wholly on the validity of service and the question whether or not a union can be sued in this state under any circumstances. In superior court it was held that the suit can be, and has been, legally instituted. The union has so far prevented any consideration of the

Constant Warfare Is Kept Up Against N.C. Politician

Reflector Bureau.
By HENRY AVERILL

Raleigh, June 5.—Somebody, or more likely a great many somebodies, in North Carolina fears the political influence of Dr. Ralph W. McDonald enough to keep up a constant guerrilla warfare against him.

Latest bit of corroborative evidence is receipt by several state officials through the mails of a printed sheet covered with newspaper and editorial comment on the alleged McDonald politicking on state time.

Of course all the items are unfavorable to the University of North Carolina's associate director of the extension division.

There are on the sheet four articles, to wit: (1) Heading from a Greensboro News article written by its veteran Raleigh correspondent Tom Best, this head proclaiming that Dr. McDonald turned out to be the worst loser in the Hoey-Reynolds national committee scrap; (2) and (3) and (4) extracts from editorials from the Greensboro Record, Charlotte News and Asheville Citizen, respectively, all of which took a highly critical attitude toward the political activities in which Dr. McDonald would be the very last to deny he has been engaging.

This sheet was mailed from Greensboro in a plain envelope and addressed in ink without any clue to its sender.

When all is said and done there's absolutely no argument between McDonald and his critics as far as the political activities go. They are admitted. Where they differ is one whose time they are engaged in. The papers and many individuals seem to feel the Doctor is letting his professional duties slide; but as long as he suits Dr. Frank P. Graham there's small chance of anything being done about it.

Strength For The Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

BE OF GOOD CHEER

So much of life spoiled by the fact that we dwell incessantly on its more unpleasant aspects. If one allows himself to do so, the present condition of international affairs, the manifest injustice there is in the world, the cruelty of some employers, the highhandedness of striking employes, the instability of people we trust, the knavery we encounter amid people we believed honest, the meanness of our neighbors, and the contrariness of our friends, may well drive us into a state of perpetual gloom.

But why let these things worry the life out of us? Raise your eyes and look out over the landscape. The sunny green fields, the flowers, the trees, are round about us in spite of the fact that the world is a quite wicked place. There are plenty of good people in the world if we will take the trouble to look them up. There is vastly more honesty and virtue among the majority of our population than there is dishonesty and vice. Sir Joshua Reynolds, the great English painter, used to say, "I look only at the best pictures; the bad ones spoil my eyes." They spoil everyone else's eyes. The Bible says, "If there be any virtue and if there be any praise, think on these things." The good old Sir Joshua said, "Don't get sore eyes from looking too continuously at unpleasant things."

LET GEORGE DO IT

Reg Manning's cartoon appearing on this page today brings out pretty forcibly just what is going on in this country today while we struggle with our problem of preparing ourselves to meet an eventuality that we know cannot be far away. Outwardly all of us proclaim our desires for our country to let nothing interfere with an all-out effort for our defense program, but at the same time as per "Reg" we want the other fellow to bear the burdens and make the sacrifices while we continue on our usual way of living.

The government is calling upon individuals to shell out their savings to buy defense bonds and is preparing legislation for increased taxes to help pay our unprecedented expenditures and at the same time continues to spend enormous sums for other purposes that many citizens consider useless frills. Labor despite its high wage scales and high standards of living is striking for still more money and is thereby slowing down the defense program. Industry while denying its ability to meet increased wage scales and higher taxes, wants higher prices for its products. The farmer wants higher bounties from the government, more money from his crops, and at the same time lower prices on his purchases, and less taxes.

Everyone is yelling for more and more speed and greater and greater expenditures to get ready for the war that they believe is sure to come, but at the same time they want the other fellow to do the job of paying the bill and doing the sacrificing. We believe you will agree with Manning's cartoon that the only one who has done any sacrificing to date is the guy who has been forced into military training whether or not he liked it. It's about time we Americans began to realize that all of us have a part to play in this important business of safeguarding the future of our nation.

Short Shots

By HENRY AVERILL
Raleigh, June 6.—New instances are coming to light every day to corroborate your reporter's recent comment that Governor J. Melville Broughton's popularity is suffering because of inefficient, slipshod secretarial methods.

Within the week there have come within this column's purview the cases of three prominent citizens who are more than merely irritated because they have written the governor one or more times and have received no replies whatever to their communications.
Granted that at least two of these three are seeking jobs and it is quite possible that the governor has nothing favorable to write them, it still remains that simple acknowledgment of receipt of their letters would have made for at least three less Broughton knockers in comparatively high places—one of the trio being a legislator and the other two well up in newspaper circles.

Wouldbe Buyer
Jim Vogler, Mecklenburg representative for the last three legislatures, used to be a retail seller; now he seeks to become a wholesale buyer.
Jim, who beat the bushes for Broughton in practically all the hundred Tar Heel counties in the last primary, is after Benton Stacy's job as director of the division of purchase and contract. Stacy was accounted as surely "out" until the recent national committee fight when he rallied round for Clyde Hoey (the Broughton candidate) in most approved fashion.

The State Employment Service reports that industrial plants throughout the state are complaining because they are not permitted to add a large enough number of "learners" to guarantee any material relief from present or prospective shortages of skilled workers.
The situation is regarded as serious in view of the step-up in production schedules for cotton textiles, machine shops and foundries. The regular training of workers by employers and by special classes has not furnished sufficient labor for the expansion which is being undertaken.

About Industries

Recently this correspondent noted that the state division of industry and commerce had made no announcement of attracting large numbers of plants to North Carolina—probably because the number in that class is negligible for this year.
Very soon thereafter the News and Observer printed in its "Under the Dome" column a list of big industrial developments in the state during this year, linking them with mention of the division of commerce and industry.

Examination of the list, however discloses that the division was not by any stretch of imagination, responsible for a single one of the big industries mentioned. The U. S. government put the shipyards at Wilmington, the Carolina Power and Light company didn't need any inducements from Jim Anderson to add to its plants, the Eusta cigarette paper plant was already a going concern.
So all the division could have had to do with this list is to compile it.

Appealing from an order requiring it to permit an employee to examine his books in order to secure information about wages and hours the Safe Bus, Incorporated, says, through it counsel in a brief to the

★ AMERICANA ★ FAMILY ALBUM

By RAY PEACOCK
AP Feature Service Writer

WOULD you like to look at our family album, Joe, while you're waiting for Grace? She won't like it, of course, because she says those of her are awful, but you know Grace. Seems like she just doesn't take a good picture. Something about her nose, I guess. Yeah, that's Grace there. Never recognize her, would you? That was taken seven or eight years ago at a picnic. The boy? Oh, I dunno. He was just along, I guess. Anyway, she's forgotten all about him.
This is one I took up on Mount Wilson. It's a little light struck, but it's pretty good, don't you think? The deer was looking right at the camera and I just snapped it, like that. And this is one of my grandmother on my father's side. I don't know how it happened, but only Uncle Bill's arm is showing. It's the only picture we've got of him, too.
Don't you think this is cute? It's Grace when she was four. She still had her bib on when she came out on the back porch while I was taking a picture of Ma. . . Here's one of us when we were all together two summers ago. That's me on the left. Hasn't Ted got a silly grin on his face? And look how solemn Janie looks. But don't you think it's good of all of us, though? And talk about your proud papa! Here's Steve and the baby. Her married to my sister Janie, you know. He met her through Grace.
And this is me and my first flivver. I had twenty dollars I didn't owe anybody and it was burning a hole in my pocket. Ha! Ha! . . . Here's some we took at the beach, one Fourth of July. That's Grace there. Weren't the suits terrible in those days?
That's the baby again. He had a brand new kiddie-bike and he just wouldn't get off it. Janie looks so awful because she didn't expect to be on the picture and wasn't prepared. She was very mad with Steve about it.
"Him? Oh, it's just a boy Grace chased around with one summer. His arm? Well, maybe it is around her, but you know how those things are. Joe. . . Sounds like Grace is ready. I'd better duck. This album away or she'll kill me. I'll show you the rest some other time. You'll get a big kick out of them. I just know you will.

Supreme Court

"Another objection; and a fundamental one, is that the plaintiff does not seek any particular cause to supplement a skeletonized cause of action, but prays generally that an officer of the defendant and the defendant's book be examined to give such information as may be necessary to the petitioner for the purpose of filing complaint." This is of a piece with the request which a minor officer of the Inquisition might address to his superiors to examine a suspected heretic to see if perchance he entertains any opinions for which he might be punished.
Heterogeneous.
Account of a Memorial Day service in Salisbury at which great stress was laid on "Americanism" illustrated the fact that while this state has almost no aliens for Bob Reynolds to deport its population is drawn from widely varied racial strains.
Honoring the country's flag by participation in the program were, according to the Salisbury paper, citizens of Greek, Irish, Scott, German and Dutch ancestry; as well as others who might be from still more varied sources.
Another Reason.
Recent supreme court decision that courts have no power to revoke driving licenses but only to recommend such procedure to the Highway Safety Division of the state is being cited by safety officials as another reason why courts should be prompt in forwarding record of convictions to Raleigh as required by law.
To Remove Stains.

Man About Manhattan

By George Tucker
New York.—Margo didn't receive much billing the first time she danced at the Waldorf, but she is receiving plenty now.
Margo is the dancer whose real name is Marguerita Teresa Guadalupe Castilla Bolado, and who delighted Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur with her dancing so much that they took her out to Long Island and put her in a picture, "Crime Without Passion"—and that was how the world first heard about her.
Just at that moment she was handed the leading feminine role with Burgess Meredith in a play that was to win the Pulitzer prize—"Winterset." It was risky to place so important a role in the hands of an unknown, but she came through with it and even was awarded the nod for the best performance of that year by a young actress. . . . After this success it was a foregone conclusion that she also would be cast with Meredith in the film by the same name.
But Margo, at heart, was a dancer and she fell in love. She married Francis Lederer, whom the late Heywood Brown called the nearest thing to a real matinee idol Broadway had had in a generation.
Then she went to Mexico to study folklore and dancing, and last summer, at the invitation of Mexico, she presented the Spanish ballet at the National Theater.
By this time Margo was out of love, and she paused in Reno long enough to obtain a divorce and then returned to her dancing. Today, at 22, she is back at the Waldorf, but this time as a star. The attention she is receiving is practically overwhelming.

Teller Holds Leafs To Four Hits As Locals Win 11-2

LADIES' NIGHT HERE TONIGHT

Greenies Win As Wilson Loses To Gain Full Game

Bill Teller allowed Rocky Mount only four hits last night—two of them in one inning—as the Greenies racked up a 11-2 victory. Wilson was losing to Goldsboro, thereby permitting the locals to gain a full game on the pace-setting Tobs. The Greenies are only two games behind the leaders.

Ladies Night will be observed at Guy Smith park tonight as the Greenies open a two-game series with Goldsboro.

Four errors by Rocky Mount in the first inning helped the Greenies to get off to a good start with a 2-0 lead. The locals added four more in the fifth inning. In the last half of this frame the Leafs took advantage of a double, a triple and an outfield fly to score their only two runs of the game.

This was the only inning in which Teller found himself in hot water as he held the Leafs in check throughout the remainder of the contest.

BARB AIMED AT FRANK GRAH'M

Anti-Graham Group Blamed For Anonymous Circular

Reflector Bureau.
By HENRY AVERILL.
Raleigh, June 6.—Distribution of an anonymously-circulated sheet containing newspaper criticism of Dr. Ralph W. McDonald is reliably reported to be the handiwork of a small group of Greensboro men who are inveterately hostile to Dr. Frank P. Graham, president of the University of North Carolina.

The circular contained editorials from the Greensboro Record, the Charlotte Observer and the Asheville Citizen, and the head from a story written by Tom Bost, Greensboro News' Raleigh correspondent. All attacked the political activities of Dr. McDonald in connection with the Hoey-Reynolds national committee scrap.

The circular was distributed, it is learned, to all members of the board of trustees of the University, to state officials and members of several state boards, and to all newspapers of North Carolina.

Reaction to the effort to discredit Dr. McDonald appears to have been decidedly unfavorable. The Goldsboro News-Argus attacked those who "occupied themselves to collect the editorials" and who kept secret their identities. "That's cowardly," commented the paper which is by no means attached to the McDonald or liberal wing of the Democratic party.

There are strong indications, your reporter is informed by reliable news sources from Guilford, that McDonald wasn't the real target, the at-

Volunteers Sought At Wilson Office

Wilson, June 6.—The United States army is seeking some 250 young men from Eastern Carolina through the army recruiting station at Wilson for the army air corps.

The young men must be of average intelligence, must have had a high school education and must pass an elementary intelligence test at the recruiting station before they will be accepted in the air corps.

Sergeant Floyd also said today that he had vacancies in other groups of the army and that there were still applications open for a few Negroes.

There are vacancies at Maxwell Field, Ala., alone for 120 men, Sergeant Floyd said.

Other places where there are vacancies in the air corps include the 1st Bombardment group at Tucson, Arizona; Reserve Detachment school troops at Bakersfield, Cal.; Mechanical and Reserve Airplane Detachment at Stockton Field, Cal.; Medical Detachment Station hospital, McChord Field, Washington; Jackson Air Base, Jackson, Mississippi.

The Recruiting office here also said that there were around 40 vacancies for Negroes in the army and that they must have at least a sixth grade education and must be between 18.35 inclusive, single and of good moral character.

TOKYO MAKES DEMANDS—ARE REJECTED BY THE DUTCH

He said it was not impossible that Tokyo would recall him promptly, but meanwhile he intended to seek further clarifying comments from the chief Dutch negotiator, H. J. van Mook.

Although the Dutch reply was not made public, reliable sources said it carefully steered a middle course, offering to maintain normal trade relations without furnishing Japan much of any important commodities.

Batavia, Netherlands East Indies June 6.—(AP)—The long-awaited Dutch reply believed to be polite, but unfavorable, was delivered today to a Japanese trade delegation which has demanded the right to obtain from the Indies large stocks of such war essentials as rubber, oil and tin.

The chief Japanese delegate, former Foreign Minister Kennichi Yoshizawa, said yesterday that reply would not be acceptable unless it met the Japanese requirements. He said the negotiations teetering on a "precipice," with implications of danger to friendly relations between Japan and the Indies.

The Netherlands news agency, Aneta, which announced delivery of the Dutch reply by Negotiator H. J. Van Mook, gave no word of its contents.

City Board In Routine Meeting

Marlin Swartz, superintendent of the Greenville Utilities Commission appeared before the aldermen in reference to the establishment of a retirement system for employees of the city and also of the commission. The plan would work similar to the Social Security act, with the employee and the employer contributing a certain per cent of the monthly payroll. The plan would be voluntary on present employees, but mandatory on new employees.

Mrs. David W. Mosier, president of the Junior Woman's club, asked the cooperation of the city in following up the recent clean-up campaign and the matter was referred to the Sanitary and Health committee. Mrs. Mosier expressed her appreciation for the cooperation of officials in the recent campaign and the mayor and board thanked Mrs. Mosier and her club for the work carried on during the drive.

Mr. Coble, state highway engineer, and E. J. Schaefer of the Atlantic Coast Line railway appeared in reference to the erection of blinkers at crossings at Tenth street and also on Dickinson avenue and the question was referred to the Street committee and the city engineer.

A request that the recently enacted ordinance prohibiting the sale of wine on Sundays was made by Clarence Harper and the matter was taken under consideration.

T. L. Moore, local WPA supervisor, advised the board that he was leaving on Tuesday for military service and presented his successor William L. Riddick.

The board voted to appropriate $275 to the colored volunteer firemen to defray the expenses of the state convention of colored firemen to be held here in August.

With other matters pending, the board adjourned to meet again on June 12.

GUN IS AIMED AT COLLECTOR

Gulley Burns Paper In Letter To Chas. Robertson

Reflector Bureau. By HENRY AVERILL

Raleigh, June 6.—The resignation of Herbert Gulley, Wake county henchman of Senator Josiah W. Bailey, was accomplished in a letter to Collector of Internal Revenue Charles Robertson which fairly burned the paper on which it was typed—but even more important than the bitterness and anger of an aroused soul is the implication that the letter is merely the opening gun of a campaign designed to oust the present collector.

Such an ouster, the letter tends to indicate, would be the only salvo for the Gulley feeling. Nobody of the Gulley temperament and aggressiveness could have meant anything else than that he is determined to fight the matter through to its logical conclusion.

This would mean an investigation of the Greensboro office over which Robertson presides and, if half the things Gulley said in his letter are true, would reveal one of the messiest personnel situations on record.

In fact, it seems that this question of office personnel is the rock upon which Gulley and Robertson split. Chief storm center appears to be Mrs. Marietta C. Mann, whom Gulley termed in his letter a Robertson "pet."

In his letter of resignation Gulley said, among many other things: "When you hear rumblings in the office from the ladies protesting discriminations against them by Mrs. Mann you promptly start on the warpath with the threat that you will clean house when the time comes to make certification to the Civil Service; that the matter of retention in the service will be entirely up to you."

Nothing is said in the letter about there being any connection with these alleged "discriminations," but there has been much speculation over the resignations of Miss Flora Creech in February after more than 20 years service with the division and of Mrs. T. Palmer Jerman, assistant collector since 1933, in March.

Gulley also related a bitter scene in which he "rebuked" Robertson for threatening Deputy Paul Banks who he is said to have made a written statement unfavorable to another revenue employee, a Mr. McBrayer. Robertson, the Gulley letter charges, told Banks "I know your desperate financial condition and, unless you have a letter in my office by Saturday morning repudiating your previous letter against this good man, I am going to make it hard for you, your wife and children."

Above all there seems to rankle in the Gulley mind a scene he related thus: "Then, in about an hour, you came by my desk and, after pretending to be my good friend, said 'Herbert, I feel that I should tell you as your friend that your illness has affected your mind.'"

But the nature of the Gulley letter is important only in its evidence that this is one of the bitterest political feuds to break into the open in North Carolina in these many, many years.

Both Robertson and Gulley are Bailey followers and the very fact that the senior senator, who will be up for renomination in less than one year, has been unable to keep it from flaring proves its seriousness. That Bailey had full knowledge of the smoldering grudge is intimated in the Gulley letter.

In paragraph one Gulley related that "On April 21, 1941, I tendered you my resignation in the presence of a distinguished North Carolinian" and in the closing paragraph he reiterates "since April 21, when I criticized you, in the presence of a distinguished citizen."

He doesn't say so, but it takes no great strength of imagination to infer that the "distinguished North Carolinian" and the "distinguished citizen" and Senator Josiah W. Bailey are one and the same person—though that cannot be stated as a positive fact. It seems a fair inference.

All in all the Gulley-Robertson break seems to insure some sort of investigation of the Greensboro internal revenue office; but it would not be safe to assume that it will go very far. The bitterest of personal and political rows sometimes are smoothed over when it becomes obvious that to parade the dirty linen in public is not for the best interests of the big politicians involved.

Certainly a wide no-hold-barred battle between two well known Bailey partisans at this particular time could do nothing to the Bailey chances for renomination except hurt them.

8,000 Are Convicted In First Five Months

Raleigh, June 5.—Over 8,000 motorists have been convicted of moving traffic violations on North Carolina roads and streets this year, the Highway Safety Division reported today.

The 8,234 convictions included 2,768 for speeding, 1,720 for operating vehicles with faulty equipment, 1,330 for failure to have driving license, 438 for running through a red light, 124 for failing to stop when entering a highway, 117 for driving on the wrong side of the road, 102 for passing on a curve, 73 for leaving a car on the highway unattended, 69 for passing a school bus while loading or unloading, 94 for passing on a hill, and 55 for failing to dim lights.

A total of 26,524 drivers have been convicted of moving violations in the state since the driver record file was set up on January 1, 1940. Of these, 24,443 were North Carolinians and 2,091 were out-of-state drivers.
