Damascus Defenders Continue To Hold Allied Forces

FRENCH SET UP STRONG POSTS

British Fleet Reported To Have Been Forced To Stand Back At Sea As A Result of Attacks by French Planes And Shelling From Shore Batteries; Defense Withdrawal Described As Normal

Vichy, June 21.—(AP)—The defenses of Damascus are holding out against British attacks despite heavy shelling of the Syrian capital, French sources said today.

The French said they had established a strong position midway between the capital and Kissoué, 15 miles to the south, and that invading troops had been driven entirely out of the Meze airdrome area, three and a half miles southwest of the capital.

It was reported, too, that the French had withdrawn from a position at Kunetra, where a battalion penetrated more than half way from Damascus to the sea of Galilee several days ago.

This move was described here as a normal withdrawal after completion of a mission capturing prisoners. In all, more than 1,000 prisoners have been captured since the fighting in the Levant states broke out two weeks ago, the French declared.

Along the Lebanese coast the British fleet was said to have been forced to stand farther out to sea as a result of attacks by French planes and shelling from shore batteries.

In the Merdjayoun sector of south-central Lebanon British units which surrounded the town were reported pushed back and contact reestablished with the French garrison there.

Secret Clause In Pact Pledges Neutrality Of Turks In Nazi-Red War

Clause Probably Would Keep Russian Supply And War Ships From Dardanelles If Soviet Union Engaged In Conflict With Axis; Heavy Nazi Pressure Believed To Have Forged Provision

London, June 21.—(AP)—A reliable foreign source said today the German-Turkish treaty contained a secret clause binding Turkey to benevolent neutrality in the event of war between Germany and Soviet Russia.

The clause, which probably would bar the Dardanelles to Russian war or supply ships if the Soviet Union fought Germany, was said by this source to have been forced on Turkey by "terrific German pressure like the rest of the declaration of German-Turkish friendship."

This source said he was told by well placed informants that Germany insisted on the Turkish pact as a prelude to what he called "big moves" in eastern Europe involving Russia.

These moves were said to be regarded by the Germans as necessary to insure their eastern frontiers against trouble and leave them free to launch a "death blow" against England.

Highly placed sources in London have said they expect a German effort to land such a blow within the next three months.

If the Dardanelles, the narrow strait between the Mediterranean and Black seas, were sealed against the Russians they would lose their possible ally of the Soviet in any Russian-German war.

This would isolate Britain from Russia, in fact, except by difficult land connections through the Middle East and by sea through the Arctic.

FDR ADDRESS SENT TO NAZIS

Copy Of Message On Robin Moor Is Transmitted

Washington, June 21.—(AP)—Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State, announced today that he had transmitted to the German government a copy of President Roosevelt's message to Congress branding the sinking of the S. S. Robin Moor "the act of an international outlaw."

The message was sent to Hans Thomsen, German charge d'affaires along with a note which said:

"I am directed by the President of the United States to transmit to you herewith, for the information of your government, a copy of a message addressed today by the President to the Congress of the United States.

"Accept, Sir, the renewed assurances of my high consideration."

A strong note demanding that Germany make full reparations for the sinking was expected to follow, Welles told reporters that this demand would be made as soon as the proper compensation had been decided upon.

But the air force preferred other tactics. A riChief Marshal Lomrose decided to play hit and run war, preferred to lose Crete and hold the biggest part of his Near East air force for another battle later on.

He may have been right, but the fact remains, the air force pulled out, and Crete was lost.

In the opinion of the best observers here, Syria is another story. If the British should lose Syria after their swift beginning, the Prime Minister might himself survive the attacks of his enemies, but the whole fabric of his government would be shaken to the core.

Washington observers also classify the present phase of the battle of the Mediterranean as critical for Britain for other reasons.

One of these is this: Air power is the balance of power in the Mediterranean. The British can still beat the Axis on the water. They may be able to put out just ships.

After the Greek failure, the Prime Minister took to the radio, and made promises for the future, as any government leader must in such circumstances. He also announced a shakeup of his cabinet, putting Beaverbrook in charge of all wartime industrial production.

His promise was that the British empire would fight to the death for Crete. Those were his exact words. The army and the navy did fight to the death. The army lost more than 18,000 men, dead, wounded and prisoners. The navy lost 10 ships.

MAY ABANDON PLANS TO LIFT U.S. SUBMARINE

Possible That Sub May Be Left On Ocean Floor

NO HOPES HELD FOR 33 ABOARD

Secretary Knox, At Scene Of Tragedy, Declares That Salvage Operations Appear Impossible

Portsmouth, N. H., June 21.—(AP)—A possibility that the sunken submarine O-9 and her crew of 33 dead might be left on the ocean floor, entombed under a compression of 440 feet of water that has crumpled the craft's steel shell, was sounded today by the navy's high command.

Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox, unshaven and obviously deeply concerned, said, newsmen that "at that depth it is impossible for divers to conduct salvage operations so far as we know now."

In Washington, simultaneously navy men said they thought an attempt would be made to salvage the 23-year-old O-9, recently recommissioned, to remove the dead, determine the cause of the tragedy and gain experience in underwater work under tremendous pressure.

Apparently the decision rested upon further explorations, as divers stood ready to descend on grappling lines which finally were attached to the submarine during the early morning hours. Weather conditions were favorable.

At the scene, large quantities of oil, pieces of cork from the O-9's inner hull and other bits of wreck marked the submarine's grave.

That all aboard were dead, officials no longer expressed doubt. Knox said he had had "hopes" until this morning.

The navy secretary declined to say flatly that there would be no effort to lift the submarine, asserting that "would be a question for a salvage expert to answer."

Missing Submarine And Her Sister Ship

The United States submarine O-9 (left), seen in Boston navy yard beside her sister ship, the O-10, failed to come to the surface after a test dive near the Isle of Shoals, off Portsmouth, N. H., and navy officials expressed fear for the lives of two officers and 32 crewmen aboard. She went down in 370 feet of water.

Urgent Plea Sent Out; Campaign Far From Goal

USO Drive To Be Pressed Tuesday And Wed.

Dr. R. J. Slay, Greenville chairman of the United Service Organization's campaign to raise $1,250 in Pitt county, after conferring with Treasurer J. H. Waldrop and Campaign Director W. T. Kyzer, declared today that the drive was progressing very well, but was far short of the goal.

Dr. Slay explained that team workers had been unable to see all prospective contributors and urged them to make a return trip in order to cover the territory assigned to them in a complete manner, thereby giving every person an opportunity to contribute to the cause.

Dr. Slay also urged any individual who is willing to aid in the campaign who has not been approached by a canvasser to make their contribution direct to him, Treasurer Waldrop at the Guaranty Bank and Trust Company or leave at either of the two local newspaper offices.

The local committee plans to wind up the campaign on Wednesday of next week, but in order to do this, it was explained, much will have to be accomplished on Monday and Tuesday.

Bethel is the only place to report having reached the goal. The $100 assigned to that place has been contributed and still more funds are to be reported.

Winterville also reported "satisfactory progress" while other places in the county declare that they hope to attain their respective quotas.

The campaign is nation-wide in scope with a goal of $10,765,000 to provide social and recreational facilities for men in all branches of the armed service.

While the controlled press thus ignored the most important news occupying the minds of the people one Berlin paper asserted that American consular officials in Germany after the outbreak of European hostilities, "adopted an attitude which virtually made them English agents."

A German spokesman said last night that President Roosevelt's message to congress on the Robin Moor case had been carefully noted but declined to comment on it.

World Wars And Geography

Babson Urges Calmness

Babson Park, Mass., June 21.—Not many hundred years ago England was divided into little principalities. Each had its own army, castle, and cathedral. All went well while the battering ram was the heaviest implement of warfare. Until the warfare use of powder was invented, every little principality made its own war materials. Only a few were able to make cannons, guns, shot, and powder. Hence, these principalities were forced to combine into what is now England. It was not because one principality was braver than another; but it was a question of geography and other uncontrollable factors. Uncontrollable factors likewise explain why today in New York the British pound sterling notes sell around $2 and British government bonds sell in the 30's.

Peace reigned again for two hundred years more until the use of steam was applied to war vessels. Sailing battle frigates had required no bases and used no coal or oil

Small nations of sea-faring people properly located, even had certain advantages. When, however, the era of steam came, the situation again changed. Holland and Spain became secondary powers, while England with its vast supplies of coal and iron forged ahead. This again changed the map of the world. It was not a question of courage; but of geography and other uncontrollable factors.

The same general principal applies to the Western Hemisphere. The United States and Canada are to work together. Some day the United States and Canada may be obliged to take over Mexico, the West Indies, and the Latin American countries bordering the Caribbean. Whether, or not, the United States and Canada will be in a position to dictate to the Argentine Republic, Brazil, and Chile is another matter. However, this is something that will be determined solely by geography and natural resources. (Continued On Page Six)

All Officers Must Leave By July 15

Authoritative Fascist Editor Meanwhile Describes Roosevelt's Statement On Sinking Of Robin Moor As Creating A Perfect Break Between The United States And The Axis Powers

Washington, June 21.—(AP)—The United States today ordered all Italian consulates in the United States closed and all Italian consular officers removed from American territory before July 15.

Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles at the same time announced that the United States embassies in Berlin and Rome have been instructed to make arrangements for the return to this country of all American consular officials in those two countries, but at the same time to reject "entirely" allegations made against American officials by the Nazi and Italian governments.

In addition to Italian consular officials, Undersecretary Welles announced that the Italian government had been requested to remove all agencies and organizations of the Fascist government, with the exception of the Italian embassy here.

All German consulates in this country were closed last Monday, and Berlin and Rome immediately retaliated by ordered United States consuls out of Germany, Italy and occupied territories.

Rome, June 21.—(AP)—Virginia Gayda, authoritative Fascist spokesman, declared today that Washington had "created a perfect break" between the United States and the Axis powers, which meant "Continental Europe."

"An economic war and a partial diplomatic war between the two continents has already opened," Gayda wrote.

Gayda declared that "strong and aggressive language" used by President Roosevelt in a message to Congress on the sinking of the S. S. Robin Moor would not be possible in formal diplomatic usage except in an ultimatum.

The editor asserted that the President was violating international law. (Continued On Page Six)

If the river was not so muddy fishing would be good now. Save your nickels for the measuring party Tuesday night. The Irish potato crop seems to have been prolific as large quantities are shipped daily. Mrs. Simon Moyer of Winterville left yesterday morning for Washington to visit her parents. R. O. Jeffress is having a large prizer built out on tobacco row. That makes two large new plants added to the tobacco market this season.

IN MEMORIAM (In memory of my infant brother who died Jan. 13, 1937). Dear darling infant brother, you have gone so far away. We hope to meet you some day over the golden shore. Sweetest memories will ever linger. Time will change us not. For you are waiting for us dear baby up in heaven so bright. We love you so dear little one. But Jesus loved you best. For He called you up on high. Where all is peace and rest. When our work on earth is ended. And time here is no more. My darling baby boy.

Our hope and dreams may never die in the sweet by and by. Some sweet day will meet you. Over on the eternal shore. Where there will be no weeping. And partings are no more. (By His Sister, Peggy Roberts)

HOSTESSES ARE POPULAR DOWN AT FORT BRAGG (Fayetteville Observer) One of the fine things about the hostesses in the city and at the post, not only the boys think they are nice, but the girls come in to have their words of praise for them also. Just this week we had the pleasure of hearing about one particular young woman, Eleanor Barr, who is junior hostess at Ninth Division Service Club. We take this young lady as an example because she's the one we've heard lots about...there are others just like her.

Everybody likes Eleanor, we've been told by those in the know, and we can add our ye to that. She came to Fayetteville several months ago to attend a dance at the Country Club and "simply fell into position as junior hostess at the Ninth Division." Her home is in Greenville, and she was formerly associated with Mrs. J. M. Howard in recreation work at Camp Leach near Washington, N. C. Mrs. Emma J. Foster, Mrs. Dorothy McFarland and Miss Barr really look after the girls who attend the Friday night dances and see that a grand old time is had by all...and those dances are something you can't pass up if you've ever been to one. The floor shows are put on by talent from the Casa Manana night club and from the New York play. "DuBarry Was a Lady," and many other interesting personalities...the music is always of the best...and the welcome given by the hostesses attests some of that good old Southern hospitality we hear so much about these days.

Last Tuesday night Miss Barr was hostess to a few of the girls, who have been attending the dances at a perfectly charming dinner party...the veranda at the Ninth Division Service Club was the scene of the affair...entertainment was furnished by some of the best talent in the division...Rosario Ippolito, singer and dancer formerly with the Casa Manana night club in New York, was there. Wally Berg from "DuBarry Was a Lady," was also on the list of entertainers and others such as Walter Black, graduate of Yale who halls from the "Cavalcade of America," Buddy Reed, from the Little Church Around the Corner, who sings as his specialty "Only Forever," George Allen, comedian of Broadway, was master of ceremonies. Ray Downey, who one time played in Jack Dempsey's cafe at 57th street and 7th avenue, New York, was another of the celebrities on hand for the delightful evening of entertainment. We just thought you'd be interested in knowing some of the things these young people are doing.

BUNDLES FOR BRITAIN

Surely you'd like to see a German Messerschmidt plane, the same kind of plane that rains down death and destruction on helpless civilians in Britain. Well, a Messerschmidt plane has just arrived in the United States, boxed and crated and ready to start a tour of the entire country under the sponsorship of Bundles for Britain. Riddled by machine gun bullets and anti-aircraft shells, the yellow-nosed fighter plane has accounted for five British planes, as stripes on its tail assembly bear witness. All revenues from exhibitions of this plane will be devoted to Bundles for Britain's fund for the relief of bombed-out civilians of the British Isles.

Wiley Crawford was in Greenville Thursday on business. Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Warren and Mr. and Mrs. Norman Bailey of Newport News, Va. spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bailey. G. H. Crawford is improving after several days illness.

CHICOD NEWS

(By Mrs. Milton Tucker) The Rev. W. A. Crow conducted his regular services at Salem last Sunday evening at 8 o'clock. Mr. Sammie Tucker and Max Tucker left last Thursday for Kings- tree, S. C. to visit Mr. and Mrs. Bob Swain. They returned home Sunday evening, bringing back Mrs. Sammie Tucker and Jane Tucker, who spent ten days in Kings- tree.

Mrs. Fannie Bright, an aged lady of our community, passed away on Wednesday night at 11 o'clock to her eternal home. The burial service was conducted in Salem Church yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock by Rev. W. A. Crow, her pastor. In behalf of Salem Church we express our sincere sympathy to the bereaved family.

Those who attended camp at White Lake recently from our community were Mary Edith Porter, Tull Edwards, Earl Edwards, Fred Edwards, Jay Edwards, J. Brooks Tucker, Jr., and Mary Rouse.

Entertain Jointly Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, Mrs. Ella Porter and Mrs. R. H. Heath entertained a host of friends at the home of Mrs. Porter, giving a miscellaneous shower in honor of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Porter, Jr., who have just completed a new home in Simpson.

Guests were welcomed at the door by Mrs. Porter and Mrs. Heath, where they were asked to register, and were ushered into the sitting room by Lucille and Tull Edwards. Games were played, bingo being directed by Lucille Edwards, Ruth Buck and Sarah Edwards, Mrs. W. H. Porter, Jr., receiving the prize, a miniature golden slipper.

A household contest directed by Mrs. R. H. Heath, was next presented and enjoyed with a lot of enthusiasm. Miss Tull Edwards received the prize. Mr. Porter and Mrs. Heath, assisted by Ruth Buck, Sarah Edwards, Lucille and Tull Edwards, served drinks and delicious sandwiches.

Mrs. Porter then gave Mr. and Mrs. Heath the end of a brilliant, multi-colored cord representing the "Rainbow" and asked them to follow it to the end where they would find their treasure. With some difficulty and much merriment they located the dining room table by candlelight, loaded with useful and lovely household articles.

In Mr. and Mrs. Porter's gracious manner they opened the gifts, thanking each person. The guests departed at 11 o'clock in a "shower of rain."

Seeing Through My Windshield By Verona Lee Joyner, H. D. A. Stretching your cotton goods budget: (Consumers' Guide, February 15, 1941).

Suppose someone came along and said: "Here are $25. You can have all of them, provided you spend every cent on cotton goods for yourself, your family, or your household. Spend them any way you like, but only cotton goods that are made with American cotton and made in American mills." What would you buy? That's a question that hundreds of thousands of Southern cotton growing families are going into huddles over this year.

These are the farm families who are taking advantage of the government's offer to give them $25 worth of cotton stamps if they cooperate in a special cotton program. Any sensible family checks over its present cotton goods possessions before it decides on what to add to them. That's probably what you'd do, too. But if your cotton needs are like the needs of city relief families now receiving cotton stamps under the Surplus Marketing Administration's program, this would

Government - In - Absentia: How Exiled Rulers Carry On At London

7 Homeless Regimes Wait And Work For Reunion

By WILLIAM W. WHITE
AP feature Service

London.—"Through long years of practice, we established certain routines of conspiracy that are standing us in good stead now."

An official of the Polish government in exile was recalling how he and his countrymen were profiting by the lessons they learned 25 years ago, when they were planning how to reclaim their land from Germany and Russia, who now have occupied it again.

Today's exiled government is in almost the same hands as that of World War times. It is one of seven homeless regimes beset by problems of finance, communication and language, which attempt remote control of their nations from London. The others are the governments of Norway, Belgium, Czechoslovakia, Greece, Yugoslavia and the Netherlands.

Struggling beside them are five "free" movements—French, Rumanian, Austrian, Danish and Italian. All are keeping in touch with their peoples through underground channels in the hope that when the "great day" comes they can return. Most striking examples of carrying on through difficulties are furnished by the Poles, Dutch and Norwegians.

The Polish National Unity government, under President Raczka, represents Poland's four largest parties. Its nine-man cabinet meets every two weeks, and its "little parliament"—20 members of the National Council—sits almost every day. The army high command meets separately.

No Minor Offices
"We have only major offices," a spokesman said. "None of the second-grade departments is here, and so we eliminate much red tape." The nutshell governing body has a secretariat of only about 200 and a foreign staff of ten.

Three times a day the BBC broadcasts to Poland and there are 12 secret newspapers with a circulation of about two million to counteract German propaganda. Leaflets and "many devious other methods," the spokesman said, help keep the people informed on what their government is doing here.

Poland has given England the strongest arm, and airforce of any exile country. The army is entrusted with a vital part of England's defenses and part of it is in the saddle East. Stories of the heroic Polish airforce are legion.

"Our navy," the spokesman said "is actually stronger than when the war began." A new submarine was launched for it only recently at a northern English shipyard.

The Netherlands government housed in the same West End building as the Polish, is streamlined to the point of informality. The 11-man cabinet meets once a week under Prime Minister Gerbrandy, and 60-year-old Queen Wilhelmina, who a spokesman said "exerts a more pronounced influence than ever before," receives her ministers oftener than she did at home. She frequently speaks to Holland by radio.

The queen has 68 million subjects in the colonies and eight million under German domination. The Netherlands government therefore has the biggest secretarial staff of all—about 700.

Big Shipping Business
One of the Hollanders' biggest jobs is directing about three million tons of shipping. In addition to merchant ships, the Dutch succeeded in bringing most of their navy across the channel and even towed some unfinished vessels. One, the cruiser Heemskerk, has been completed here. Dutch seamen are manning one of the 50 destroyers from the United States.

The government broadcasts twice a day to the homeland by BBC and leaders say they are "well informed" on conditions there. At present they are planning strategy to "further undermine the German soldiers' morale."

Norway is one of the richest exiles. Its government meets all its own expenses and even pays interest on foreign loans out of the income from four million tons of merchant shipping and reserves of gold it was able to bring out of the country.

King Haakon comes to London periodically to preside over cabinet meetings.

"A considerable staff is needed," an official said, "although the running of the government has been simplified by concentrating on the one major problem and eliminating the manifold petty internal problems which otherwise plague governments."

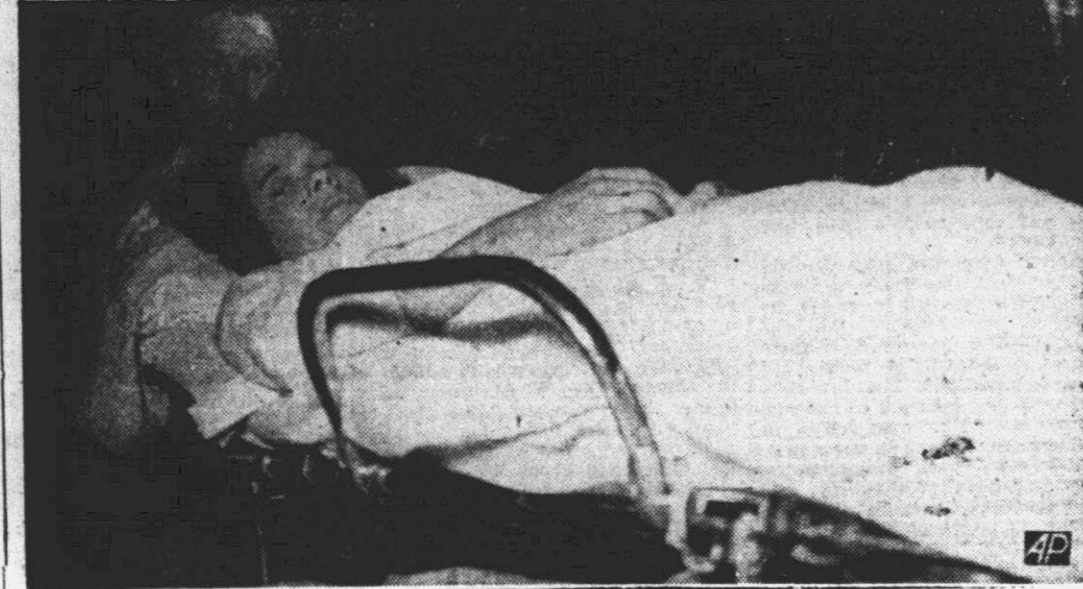

The Norwegians keep in "close and continuous" contact with their people by radio but employ other means as well. Such expeditions as the recent Lofoten raid are one method.

The Czech government, headed by President Benes, has the biggest cabinet—13 men, who do not represent political parties as such but "essential political social tendencies." Five seats are occupied by Slovaks. The provisional parliament of 33 members, appointed by Benes, is an advisory body.

Belgians Lack A King
The success of the Belgian Greek and Yugoslav exile governments is difficult to evaluate. The Belgians are handicapped because their king is a prisoner and the others because parts of their cabinets and staffs still are in flight.

The Belgians also have found their work complicated because some ministers did not come to London. This difficulty was hinted at in a recent statement which declared: "We are the only legal government and nobody can set up another either in occupied Belgium or elsewhere."

On the eve of Billy Conn's heavyweight championship fight, which he lost to Joe Louis in New York, the town register at Brookville, Pa., disclosed Billy and his blonde sweetheart, Mary Louise Smith, had applied for a marriage license. This picture of them was made in Pittsburgh some time ago. Mary Louise's father, Jimmy Smith, voiced opposition to the romance and said "there won't be any marriage because she's only 18."

Plain Water Skiing Wasn't Enough—Daredevils Find Way To Jump On 'Em

By SAM JACKSON
AP Feature Service, Writer

Stockton, Calif.—Water skiing, that new combination of thrills and spills, has added to its book another event from the original snow sport.

Last season water skiers thought they were doing fine to stay upright while a motorboat towed them swiftly across the water. Now they have rigged up an ingenious inclined float which shoots them off into space about six feet above the surface.

At this city's 1941 regatta the water ski jump attracted some twenty contestants and 15,000 spectators. Officers of the American Water Ski association observed it, with a view to drawing up official rules.

It was indicated championships would be awarded not on distance but on form in the approach, jump and recovery. Towed at 30 miles an hour, the Stockton jumpers made from 25 to 30 feet. Holy Thorns was winner, with Ni Orsi second.

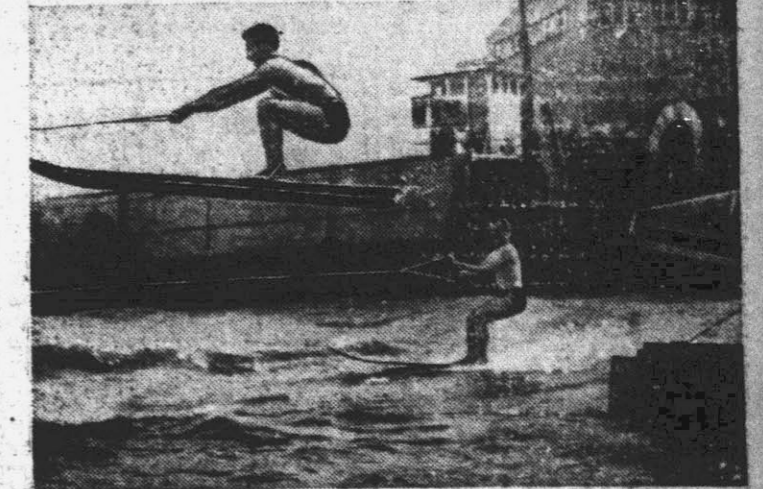

The float, used had an incline 24 feet long, with a slick, moist surface. As in snow skiing, the chief difficulty was in staying upright when alighting.

Orsi, who is vice president of the California Water Ski association, predicts that in the next three years there will be 5,000 water skiers in the state and 50,000 in the nation.

"The main problem right now is the matter of motorboats for towing," he said. "We hope to overcome that through experiments in multiple towing, in which one boat can haul from two to eight skiers." Orsi's sister Elsie, whose muscles have been toughened by a career as a dancer, has demonstrated that girls can master this rather difficult sport. She is said to be the only woman in the country who can negotiate the jump.

Elsie Orsi, of Stockton, Calif., shows you what fun there is in water skiing. She's just stunting with the rope held by her teeth. In competition skiers hold to the stick.

Here Holy Thorn, riding the skis, has taken off from the 24-foot incline at the right.

Strength For The Day By EARL L. DOUGLASS

NOTHING COUNTS BUT SINCERITY

The Bible records the fact that many of its characters used the words, "I have sinned." It depended, however, on the mood and purpose of the person who used the words whether the confession was spiritually beneficial or not.

Pharaoh said in terror, "I have sinned," and hardened his heart the moment judgment was removed. Achan said, "I have sinned," when his dishonesty was discovered and when punishment was staring him in the face. Balaam said, "I have sinned," but continued in his efforts to get Balaak's gold. King Saul said, "I have sinned," but lapsed back again into his evil life. Judas said, "I have sinned," but the only thing he did about it was to go out and commit suicide. On the other hand, Job said, "I have sinned," and humbled himself under the hand of the Almighty. David said, "I have sinned," and turned from the darkest of crimes to the fellowship with God which his repentance made possible. The prodigal son said, "I have sinned," and left the far country to seek his father's home. Confession of sin is of no value unless it is followed with true penitence. God is honest in His dealings with us, and He expects us to be honest in our dealings with Him.

This is another week-end with its increased highway traffic. It has been said time and time again but it will not be amiss to repeat again that wise advice—"Lose a Minute—Save a Life."

It is now estimated that before the war is over our national debt will reach or exceed the hundred billion dollars mark. If such a debt is necessary for our defense and the assurance of our future freedom there will be no squawking on the part of Americans, for our type of freedom is cheap at any price, but at the same time there are a lot of our people who are wondering if it isn't about time for our government to cut down on unnecessary spending while the country is being asked to "Give 'Til It Hurts" for national defense.

Words of high praise have come from the different cities along the route where the North Carolina Symphonic Chorus has given concerts on its tour to the west coast. The chorus is indeed a credit to this immediate section of the state from which it hails and is proving a great advertisement for North Carolina as a whole. Not only the newspapers, but the governors of states as well, have praised the work of the chorus and its directors, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis S. Bullock, of this city.

Washington Daybook By Jack Stinson

Washington—Trying to put your finger on exactly what is going to happen to you as a result of priorities, national defense shortages and even temporary bottle-necks is like trying to pick feathers from the wing of a busy humming-bird. Not long ago at a press conference, Interior secretary and oil czar Harold I. Ickes was asked if he believed we would really have gasoline-less Sundays. His answer was that in the East we might have to forego pleasure driving altogether. A few days later, Russell E. Singer, general manager of the American Automobile Association, said the American Petroleum Institute estimated that because of transportation problems peculiar to the eastern seaboard, we would have to get along on about 15 per cent less gasoline this year. BUT, said Mr. Singer, if eastern motorists would just cut down their driving speed, quit making "jackrabbit getaways" in city traffic, have their cars adjusted for maximum consumption and use a few other simple rules of conservation, they could cut gasoline consumption 20 per cent and forget all about gasoline-less Sundays, postponed vacations, and all other kind of restrictions.

These two views on a situation are, so far as the individual is concerned, at variance with each other, yet either of them could come true. Campaigns May Save It I have talked with experts in the Office of Production Management, the Commerce, Interior and Agriculture departments, and the sum of it seems to be that somewhere between these lies what's around the corner for you and Neighbor Doakes and me. The gasoline situation is localized to one section of the country, but it illustrates the point well. If enough people wage a conservation campaign by doing the things Mr. Singer suggests and perhaps walking a couple of blocks to the corner drug store and back instead of hopping in the old buggy, there may be few or no restrictions whatever. Even now, in Washington, a campaign is being readied to bring this about. If the campaign is a fizzle, then the restrictions will have to be made by law or executive order. One great shortage that is already with us is in aluminum. There is NO aluminum available for articles for civilian consumption, we are told. But does that mean there will be no refrigerators, pots and pans, vacuum cleaners, bits and spurs, vacuum bottles, milk pans, marimbas and a thousand and one other aluminum things? No, it means simply that all these things will be made of something else—plastics, glass, enamelware, porcelain—but mostly plastics.

Garno Dunn, OPM expert, has estimated the 1941 steel shortage at 1,400,000 tons and a deficit of 6,400,000 tons is forecast for next year. But 75 per cent of the nation's steel consumption now is civilian consumption. That means that national defense will have to dip into that 75 per cent to make up the shortage. We'll have to drive the old car a few months longer and again take other metals and plastics instead of steel.

Substitutes, Not Ersatz! The Research Institute of America recently made a survey of substitution possibilities in all materials where shortages might develop. Rep. Homer D. Angell of Oregon filed this report with the House. It included everything from fiber for leather in football helmets, and white metal for nickel in clarinets, to glass and plastic for brass door-knobs. The report also included a survey of what Nazi Germany has done along this line (this does not include "ersatz" or simulated materials—merely substitutes). A few of them are interesting: glass wool for asbestos; glass and porcelain for copper in beer brewing equipment; pressed glass for washboards and fish net weights; poplar wood for bottle corks; and whale whiskers and hair for pig bristles. The way the experts sum it up shortages in this country will mean substitution and conservation, with good chances that inconveniences resulting from the latter will not be more than temporary, if the consuming public cooperates.

Tears! Chapter 30 Mackey's hand came down hard on Anne's shoulder. They flattened below a cliff edge. The rest dotted behind stones and the Nagaras sent a few wild shots up the gien. "Sweet serpents!" exclaimed Mackey. "Have the Nagaras enemies in their own territory?" "Might it be somebody trying to rescue us?" Anne asked. "It could be scouting party from Shant Lun looking for Blaze," he admitted. The half dozen Nagaras left unharmed had organized their rifle fire and checked the advance from the gien where the sniping had begun Mackey risked a glance over the ledge and ducked as a bullet whizzed above his head. "They're men wearing the Turki headdress of Yangsar," he cried excitedly. "They must be the Russian renegades." "What are they after now?" Anne asked, thoroughly terrified. "God knows!" He looked around frantically. "I wish I could get you out of here or even hide you. We're safer with the natives than with these birds." Judging from the rifle fire the attackers had superiority of numbers and they seemed to be advancing. "Damn—why haven't I a gun," groaned Mackey. But before the words had left his lips his right hand went up, and out in the sign of surrender. Two men, rifles in hand were converging on them from the rear, creeping along close to the ground. Suddenly, shouting and blows could be heard in other directions. It had become a hand to hand conflict. The enemy rose and came forward boldly. "They're the Russians, all right," whispered Anne, noticing that one of the men had a blond beard. "And they're armed to the teeth," said Mackey, rising and helping her to her feet. They were motioned to keep up both hands and were searched expertly. The blond man beat Mackey sharply with his bludgeoned eyes. When he found the dagger belt he spoke to her in Russian. She could not understand, but Mackey did. "He calls you the Eye of Shy-a-Nago. He's the leader of the gang, he says. He recognizes the dagger. It's your he's after."

Short Shots

Reflector Bureau. By HENRY AVERILL Raleigh, June 21.—Farmers in Hoke county are going to get the very first guaranteed ginning ever offered in the country (so far as department of agriculture officials can learn), under a program for which Fred P. Johnson, gin inspector of the state department of agriculture is principally responsible. Cotton ginning is a custom industry and the producer is just as responsible for the condition of the cotton he puts on the market as the ginner, in fact he is more so because the ginner merely contracts to do a job according to the producer's specifications. The fact that the Hoke ginners are prepared to guarantee their ginning indicates that they have good gin equipment and confidence in the loyalty of their employees, and most essential of all, they can depend upon the intelligent cooperation of their customers. While talking and thinking of the sacrifices Americans must make in the interests of the national defense program, consider this authenticated case of youthful loyalty and eagerness to aid. Robert W. Scott, 12-year old son of Commissioner of Agriculture W. Kerr Scott, recently sold his bicycle pride of his youthful heart, for $12.50, added to this sum $6.25 he had earned by hard work on his father's farm near Haw River, and purchased a $25 U. S. baby defense bond. Yes, the figures are right—it only takes $18.75 to buy one of these bonds with a face value of $25 to be attained in ten years. They are on sale at all postoffices and most banks.

Follows Good Example John W. Caffey, director of the North Carolina Association for Wine Control, obviously knows a good example when he sees one. He has torn a page right out of the book of the Brewers and North Carolina Beer Distributors book in his campaign to clean up a very smelly situation of the "fortified wine" law brought about.

The beer committee's "Clean Up Or Close Up" campaign, now two years old, has drawn praise from even the most inveterate enemies of all alcoholic beverages; and so Mr. Caffey doubtless feels that their tactics must be good ones. So he's writing all sheriffs over the state pointing out changes in the 1941 wine laws, and pledging cooperation in their enforcement. He cites a request to the governing body of Faison to decline to issue a license to an applicant "who apparently intended to offer wine for sale under conditions not in keeping with public morals." anybody, but they were the two happiest men in North Carolina when the army decided it couldn't use the Palm Grounds, thus assuring a State Fair this fall. June from the highway safety viewpoint is no worse and no better than previous months this year, according to Director Ronald Hucutt, which means the month is bad. Senators Wallace from Iredell was a recent Capitol visitor. Ditto State Senator Willie Lammick. Groceries used in national advertisements, as well as in the ordinary man's mind, lanna renewed the beating on his little drum with a despairing vigor. Eventually they emerged on a broad bleak tableland. Before them stood a stone-faced enclosure with cross fences of stone running about and there, dividing the compound. In one section stood a score or so of horses, their saddles on the fence beside them. In one of the yards stood two felt tents. Smoke rose from the smoke holes but there was no sign of dogs, people or flocks. The brown plain stretched wide and empty to distant snow clad peaks. The Nagara chieftain led them into the largest tent and Anne understood at once that it had been erected by herdsmen and left for travelers, but not for these travelers. The leader posted a guard outside and then ordered the men to sit down and get out their food bowls that they carried in the native style. The place was warm and becoming stifling. Anne removed her leather coat and offered to laddle the food so that she would not have to sit down with the men. The little lama was the last one served. "What are they trying to do, Daddap?" she asked, making a slow and difficult task of filling his bowl. "They will tell you," he answered sullenly. "Aren't there any natives here to rescue us?" "A camp on the river bank deep in the canyon. They do not intend to return until morning when they come with more food, if any. "If only we could let them know that things are worse here!" A squat black bearded white man thrust his food bowl between them, jabbering angrily. Daddap sat down beside the door. The leader is more of a white man than the others," she thought hopefully, "despite those bleak bloodshot eyes. Sudden Death Anne choked down a quantity of the food for her strength's sake, as she crouched beside the fire cage. Presently the weary men stretched out, smoking the tobacco they had taken from their captors. Then the leader came to her and she rose hastily. He beckoned for Daddap to join them and explained his intention to reach the high ridge of the Nagaras and by craft, or force if necessary, to break his way through to Shy-a-Nago. As bearer of the sacred dagger he believed Anne would be of use to him. He demanded a look at the weapon. The man spoke with sharp intelligence and Daddap translated, tensely. "He says give it or he will take it." Anne saw the cold venom in the white man's eyes. These three stood alone in the center of the tent back of the fire cage. The Nagara chieftain had risen to his knees and was watching them, the blood drained from his brown face. Anne, her dagger, wondering desperately if there was any use she could make of it to gain her freedom. If she struck him with the weapon she would be helpless, at the mercy of the others. To use it on herself might be the last resort. She thought of the native taboo without much hope he would be impressed. "Tell him," she directed Daddap, "that unless he has the right, the touch of this weapon means death." In answer the man gave a short mirthless laugh and took a threatening step towards her. Anne snatched the knife from his sheath and held it to his palm point towards him, the sharp blade gleaming, the green eye glowing unaturally in the dusk like the eye of a live animal. "Come and get it if you don't believe me." The man hesitated, staring a moment as if some instinct warned him of danger he could not see or believe in. A fibe from one of the men set him off, and he seized the dagger from her hand. His eyes had lifted, looking across her shoulder. Suddenly they widened. His hand flashed up and threw the knife. Anne dropped instinctively. A bullet opened the man's forehead, and he crumpled to the floor. Sherwood stood in the doorway the dagger hanging in the tent fell beside him. At his shoulder was Mackey, a pistol in his hand. To Be Continued

Long Hurls Eighth Win As Greenies Divide Twin Bill

1ST GAME LOST TO LEAFS 11-7

Rocky Mount Blanked, However, In Second Game

After Rocky Mount had defeated Greenville 11-7 in the first game of a double-header at Guy Smith park last night, Lefty Joe Long racked up his eighth win of the season by holding Rocky Mount to two scattered hits to win the seven-inning affair by the score of 6-0.

The first game was on the order of the contest with Kinston here Thursday night—except that the Greenies were unable to overcome the lead piled up by the foes. It was a free hitting affair, with Rocky Mount getting 20 safeties and the Greenies getting 11.

Scagg and Crowe each got three for five to lead the locals at bat, Scagg getting a double and a homer and Crowe a homer.

Both Kee and Wilson, each of whom was after their eighth win had to be relieved. Credit for the game went to Wilson, but only after Weeks had gone to his rescue in the seventh. Not a single Greenville player reached first base in the three innings Weeks hurled.

The Greenies pulled into a five-all tie in the sixth, but Rocky Mount came back to score five in its half of the seventh, but it was at this point that Weeks took over and curbed the rally.

It was altogether a different story in the second game. Greenville got off to a good start when the first run came home on a balk and the second scorer stole home. Harry Jenkins later sewed up the old game with a homer in the third with two aboard and after one was scored in the second.

Rocky Mount never threatened in the last game, Long striking out eight and never allowing an enemy runner to reach second base.

neat hop-off points for air attack against Cyprus—the Dodecanese Islands, the southern bulge of Turkey, and the coast of French Syria. The Turks, so far, are neutral. The British are even now closing off the Syrian coast to the Germans as fast as they can. That leaves the Nazis one hop-off point for the attack on Cyprus, presumably the next important German objective in the Near East.

Not only does this state of affairs leave the British with two trumps to the Germans' one, but it also spots the Germans on the Dodecanese Islands, a concentrated target for a British air offensive.

For these reasons, competent observers here say the British should hold Cyprus. And as long as they hold Cyprus, they can hold Suez. For the stronghold of Cyprus lies athwart the Drang Nach Osten.

If the British hold Cyprus, the Churchill government is safe, unless the Germans suddenly shift their tactics and deliver a blow at England proper. And that doesn't seem to be in the cards for a month or more, at least.

WHAT IT MEANS

as strong an army into the Mediterranean battle now as the Germans, since Hitler, too, is a long way from home base.

But there's a huge question mark in the air. The most important reason for this lies in the fact that air power is specially suited to this phase of the battle of the Mediterranean. Cyprus is the target for the Germans. It is close to nearby land. It is small. That affords air power good hop-off points, and a concentrated target. Under such circumstances, air power so far in this war has demonstrated its superiority to any other military weapon. It can strike the blow that paralyzes.

This fact largely explains British tactics in Syria. There are three

Delegate Reports On Kiwanis Meet

An official report on the annual convention of Kiwanis International, held in Atlanta earlier this week, was made at the local meeting last night by one of the delegates, Eli Bloom.

Other delegates to the convention were C. L. Russ, O. P. Matthews, Fred M. Stokes and W. J. Bundy. Kiwanian Bloom mixed much with his account of the meeting and his talk was entertaining as well as informative.

The most significant report brought back from the sessions was the fact that past Lieutenant Governor Bundy is being seriously considered for the post of district governor next year and the local attorney is believed to have the inside track on the post.

A plea to the Kiwanians to support the defense bond sale was made by B. B. Sugg.

Dr. S. M. Crisp reported that an option on a site had been secured on the Pamlico river for the establishment of a camp for local Girl Scouts and urged the club to sponsor the project.

In the business part of the meeting, Mr. Bundy was elected to the Board of Directors to succeed J. M. Johnston.

An early meeting of the club will be held at Grimesland at the invitation of the women of the Christian church, who will provide the supper.

TO BE VISITED BY AMBULANCE

Flying Hospital Coming To N. C. To Back Drive

Reflector Bureau. Raleigh, June 21.—North Carolina will be paid a visit next week by a flying hospital in the interest of the Old North State Fund campaign to raise approximately $75,000 to purchase another such winged ambulance for presentation to Great Britain.

Back a couple of months such a visit was planned, but fell through for reason best known only to insiders; but this time the calibre of the drive's sponsorship assures that things will go as planned.

With Governor J. Melville Broughton as honorary chairman, and Fred Bowman of Orange county in active command, the campaign is now being pushed with exceptional vigor. State Auditor George Ross Pou, serving as treasurer, says that response has been splendid, with contributions coming in at a good rate.

Itinerary for the visiting plane next week includes arrival in Raleigh on June 26. On June 27, stops will be made at Rocky Mount, Elizabeth City, Morehead City and Wilmington, where the night will be spent. On June 28, flight will be to Fort Bragg, Greensboro, Hickory and Asheville; and on June 29 the plane will return to Raleigh with a stop en route at Charlotte.

The ambulance plane which will come to the state is one purchased for and donated to the British by employees of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad. More than 90 per cent of the rail system's 50,000 officials and workers contributed, according to Mr. Pou, who sees no reason why more than 3,000,000 Tar Heels should not do as well as 50,000 railroad people in the matter of raising funds for such a purpose.

Test Is Set For Scale Mechanics

Reflector Bureau. Raleigh, June 21.—All persons desiring to be registered as scale mechanics in order to do repair work on scales throughout the state must report for examination in the Agriculture building in Raleigh at 10 a. m. June 25, according to announcement of C. D. Baucum, chief of the weights and measures division of the State Department of Agriculture, under supervision of which the exams will be conducted.

"In addition to being given oral and written examinations to determine their qualifications and eligibility, scale mechanics will be asked to show that they have the proper and sufficient equipment and tools to make repairs to faulty scales that may be submitted by merchants or others," Mr. Baucum said.

The examination is to be held under mandate of the 1941 General Assembly which passed a "Scale Mechanic Law" which goes into effect on July 1.
