GERMANS DRIVE HALF WAY TO MOSCOW

SEVEN PER CENT TAX ON AUTOS IS AGREED ON

Figure Set By House Ways And Means Committee

SPIRITED FIGHT ON 15 PER CENT

Members Of Committee Also Said To Have Agreed On Several Other Levies For Emergency Period

Washington, June 30. (AP) — Members said the House Ways and Means Committee agreed tentatively today to recommend a seven per cent tax on the sales price of new automobiles, which would produce about $79,900,000 of new revenue, instead of the 15 per cent levy proposed by the Treasury.

Committee members said a spirited fight preceded agreement on the lower figure and that a compromise 10 per cent tax also was defeated. In addition to the automobile tax, some members reported the group had agreed on a 10 per cent tax on jewelry and others said they were near agreement on a number of other items, including levies on passenger transportation, telephone bills, refrigerators and possibly a dozen other commodities.

The group apparently was still considerably short of raising the $917,000,000 which would be required from new and higher excise taxes if the $3,500,000,000 goal is to be attained. The committee previously had agreed tentatively on increases in individual income, corporation, estate and gift taxes.

(By The Associated Press) Germany claimed late today that Nazi panzer columns had driven approximately half way to Moscow, following the old Napoleonic road of conquest, and that deterioration of Russia's Red army defenses had gone so far that there was no longer a proper front.

The drive toward the Soviet capital would represent an advance of about 225 miles. On the northern sector—presumably in the Minsk area—the Germans asserted they were pushing the Russians in retreat.

The Nazi spokesman indicated that Adolf Hitler's invasion forces already were in sight of Smolensk, 200 miles east of Minsk on the highway to Moscow. Smolensk is about the half way mark to the Soviet capital.

The spokesman said a big pocket was being formed around Russian troops in the Smolensk region, while a special German war bulletin declared that "on the north wing we are in constant pursuit."

It was in the Lwow sector, less than two years ago, that the routed Polish army was forced to capitulate to German forces who later yielded it to Russia when Poland was partitioned.

While the Germans claimed a rapid-fire series of successes, it was apparent that with the exception of the Minsk area, Russia's Red armies still were fighting west of the 1939 Soviet frontiers.

In addition, a Moscow communique declared that German attempts to knife across the Karelian isthmus from Finland, now fighting at the side of Germany, and to land troops by sea at Vihuri were repulsed.

Vihuri is on the Gulf of Finland, only 74 miles by railroad from Leningrad, Russia's second largest city. The Soviet war bulletin also asserted that the Red army still was holding against violent attacks ranging from Murmansk, on the Barents sea, to the vicinity of Minsk and on the south through the Luck-Lwow gateway to the great wheat fields of the Ukraine.

In this region, between Luck and Lwow, a flaming battle of 4,000 German and Soviet tanks raged into its fifth day with the Nazi juggernaut seeking to break through to the Ukraine capital of Kiev, 250 miles eastward.

Moscow, June 30. (AP)—All able-bodied citizens of Leningrad and surrounding towns were conscripted tonight for work on the city's defenses.

Mrs. Corey Elected Mrs. Arthur B. Corey was elected District Committeewoman for the Fifth District at the American Legion Auxiliary convention held in Durham.

AYDEN NEWS
McClees-Sumrell Mr. and Mrs. Joseph John McClees announce the marriage of their daughter Grace to Mr. Roderick Dall Sumrell on Sunday, June twenty-second. Nineteen hundred and forty-one Ayden Methodist Church Ayden, North Carolina

On the morning of Sunday, June 22, the Ayden Methodist Church was a scene of quiet beauty, when Miss Grace McClees became the bride of Roderick Dall Sumrell.

Artistically arranged in the church were lovely floor baskets of white gladioli and shasta daisies, interspersed with drooping sword ferns. This attractive background of white and green, formed a beautiful setting for the impressive ceremony, which was performed by the bride's pastor, the Rev. L. A. Tilley.

Prior to the ceremony, Mrs. O. C. Stroud, Sr., at the organ, wearing a blue dress of lace with a small white hat and corsage of Briarcliff roses, rendered a program of pre-nuptial music including "Traumerie" by Schumann, and Franz Schubert's "Serenade."

To the strains of "The Bridal Chorus" from Lohengrin, the bride and groom entered together, unattended.

The bride wore a heaven blue ensemble with sleeve trim of plaits, large white hat and other white accessories. Her corsage was of Sweet-heart roses showered with Bristol Fairy.

"Liebestraum," by Lisza, was played softly during the ceremony, and Mendelssohn's Wedding March was used as a recessional.

The bride is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. McClees. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Sumrell, and is one of the county's most prominent young farmers.

Miscellaneous Club
On Tuesday evening Mrs. Emmett Edwards entertained the Miscellaneous Club at her home near here.

Summer Reading
Of course our summer reading will heavily accent entertainment, for when the heat bears down upon us there is a definite need for something that is highly amusing to read in order to forget our uncomfortable feeling. What we need is a book that is absorbing, that has color, suspense, mystery, excitement and a love story which is refreshingly original.

The books mentioned below are designed for summer reading. They are very light and quickly and easily read.

"Not Heaven Itself" by Margaret Pedler—A genuine and appealing stock of a girl's career, from anonymity to fame and from loneliness to love. Barrie Foster made her own way in the world, found the direction of her life was changed by conflicting influences and the way of her own heart.

"Plane Jane," by Roberta Courtland—At the conclusion of her first solo, Jane Anderson was interviewed by a newspaper man allergic to women fliers. Shortly afterwards she met a world-famous daredevil flier and had to decide between a man who loved flying and one who would clip her wings.

"Nurses Are People," by Lucy Agnes Hancock—Roberta Cameron, young and lovely, could manage her life as a nurse but as a person it was more difficult and many problems had to be solved and sorrows borne before she won happiness.

"Who Is This Girl?" by Helen Topping Miller—A story of a girl who did not know who she was, emerging from a sheltered life in a convent, Storm Greenlee, finds herself in the center of a dramatic conflict over her parentage and over the property in Texas which her guardian had left her. Her future happiness depends on the vital question: who is this girl?

"Sweepstakes," by Emily Greenaway—A story of a group of ordinary people in a typical American town. Each one of them—like almost every one of us—has some problem in his life that he is "sure" could be solved if only he had enough money. Each of them buys a ticket to the sweepstakes. This book will appeal to anyone who ever had the urge to take a chance.

"Wherever the Grass Grows," by Allan R. Bosworth—Ruch Hanna, who left his Texas home before the war with an unfounded murder charge hanging over him, returned to find his ranch threatened by Wiley Odom, a northern business man, whose fiancée, Hattie Blake, was already established on an adjacent ranch. Scene after scene of exciting action leads to the dramatic climax and a new life for Ruch Hanna and the girl he loved.

VISIBILITY GOOD—Lord Cranborne, Dominions secretary in England, takes a good look at a camouflaged "sniper" whose patchwork costume is intended to insure him concealment while in the field. The soldier is with a Canadian division.

HE'S A BIG BOY NOW—The six-lobed tail of the Strato-Sentinel, a barrage balloon being given an experimental test at Goodyear plant in Akron, Ohio, is readily visible in this closeup. The helium-filled giant, which has a capacity of 68,000 cubic feet, is being developed along with several other balloon types as part of the nation's defense effort.

HEADING FOR THE OPEN SPACES OVERHEAD—Fattened by its load of non-inflammable helium, a balloon leaves the hangar at Akron, Ohio, where the Goodyear company is developing balloons for use in a barrage screen similar to that serving both the Axis and Britain as a menace to aircraft. The six-lobed balloon, called the Strato-Sentinel, has 68,000-cubic-foot capacity; the smaller D-5, of which 500 have been ordered by the army, is of 30,000-cubic-foot capacity. R.A.F. flyers have encountered a balloon barrage over Berlin; Nazi airmen flying over England have also met these balloons which the Britons dubbed affectionately, "our fat friends," "floating elephants," "old floppies." Steel cables attached to the balloons can form a protective wall about military objectives.

Strength For The Day
By EARL L. DOUGLASS

CHRISTIANS LIGHT UP THE WORLD
The efficiency of electric lights is reckoned in terms of candle-power. A great light is said to be equal to the combined light of so many thousand or million candles.

Light of a terrifying nature are glowing brightly in the world today. Men who disbelieve in God, who worship power, who are unmindful of human rights and indescribably cruel in their procedure, are lighting fires of conquest before which millions of people cringe in terror. The incendiary bombs dropped on cities are horrible symbols as well as terrifying realities. World Dictators are lighting up the world today with huge consuming fires.

Jesus loved to speak of candle-light and the power of one tiny candle to throw a ray which would be helpful to those in darkness. He spoke both of himself and of his followers as the light of the world. And the light which his followers create is made up of millions of slender tapers carried in the weak hands of men. The Christian hope is that the light of these many tapers will some day outshine the leaping flames which godless men have kindled.

Until that day, you and I can but keep our taper alight, confident that our fidelity will add to the ultimate illumination of the world. We may grow restive thinking of our insignificance in a world of overwhelming needs, but we are never useless if we carry our taper bravely and with faith.

NINETY-SIX IN A MONTH

(U. N. C. News Letter)

The highway safety division reports that 96 persons were killed on North Carolina highways last month as compared with 53 during March, 1940, an increase of 81 per cent.

At the same time the bureau of vital statistics of the State Board of Health reported 104 traffic fatalities during the month last year. The figures are different because the vital statistics lists all motor vehicle fatalities and the safety division lists only those occurring on a public street or road.

The safety division reported a traffic toll of 275 for the first three months of the year, an increase of 46 per cent.

"These shocking figures challenge every citizen who travels upon our streets and highways and every agency having to do with traffic accident prevention to devote more time and thought and hard work to the accident problem than ever before," said Ronald Hocutt, director of the safety division.

Washington Daybook

Washington - Around our town: Considering that every traveler who has been from east to west comments on the fact that only one city in the land has a greater proportion of women to men than Washington (that other place being Hollywood), it comes as something of a surprise that the Civil Service Commission has issued a plea for the government to hire more women.

Balloon Barrage

Y'DONT S'POSE THAT'S THEIR IDEA OF AIR DEFENSE Do YUH?

Civil Service isn't concerned with the capital's social problems. All it is interested in is correcting employment wrongs. With national defense in full swing, Civil Service reports that it is difficult to keep young men on the job. If the draft doesn't draw them off, higher wages in the defense trades do.

So Civil Service makes its appeal: If you can hire a woman, hire a woman. They back this up with statistics, showing that in the last breakdown of figures there were three men working for the government here for every two women. The Commission says don't overlook the fact that women can perform almost every kind of work that men can perform - and if you don't believe it, take a look at our arsenals and factories.

Civil Service's plea is a little more remarkable in view of the report that during defense hiring of the last year the proportionate number of new female employes is almost twice that of new male employes.

Soldiers Want Letters
An interesting experiment recently was carried out here with the young men in training. The United Service Organizations asked trainees what they would like to have in the way of gifts from home.

No. 1 on the list was "letters from home." This didn't mean altogether letters from Mother or Dad. It meant letters from the gang too - and friends of the family, and that English teacher in the high school, and old "Doc" who runs the corner drugstore. And what do they want to know? Little chunks of gossip and corner news - who's courting who these days; how that rich little snob got a fender torn off his bright-and-shiny convertible; and how come all-state Joe couldn't make the college team?

Next, they would like handkerchiefs and socks and stamps - not rare stamps either, but the kind you can put on letters. Newspapers from home are right up there among the leaders, because what's going on in the old hometown is a heap more important to a fellow in camp than what's going on in camp is to the folks he left behind.

Down the list, but still pretty swell, are those necessary knick-knacks that take such a chunk of a guy's 21 bucks - razor blades, soap, shaving cream and stuff like that. This includes cigarettes and books and magazines if he's a gent who goes for those things.

Army Has Two Navies
The navy hasn't yet - but the army has - a two-ocean navy. The army's two-ocean navy consists of everything from rowboats to 33 big transports. All told it consists of about 1,000 bottoms.

The army's navy has expanded bow over stern in recent months, principally because of the new Atlantic and Pacific bases, but also because of the greatly increased number of airports along the two seaboard. Airports need fuel and fuel needs tankers. Bases need men and equipment and that means transports and freighters. The army, even now, is building three big transports; one to carry 2,000 troops and the other two, 1,500 each.

Short Shots

Raleigh, June 30 - Appointment of S. C. (Puss) Austin as equipment engineer for the State Highway and Public Works Commission officially put an end to speculation about what was going to happen to Berrien Davis, who has for years been equipment and maintenance engineer; but it failed to stop the tongue wagging which reports of the impending ouster of Davis started. It can still be heard without undue strain on the ears that Davis was relieved of the equipment end of his job because he was not in the good graces of certain firms, selling or wanting to sell, road equipment and machinery. Friends of Davis charge that some of these firms, undermined him because he would not recommend their equipment. Their side, of course, is that they were unjustly discriminated against in favor of other companies. The Davis rebuttal is that he simply performed his duty as he saw it and refused to "do business" with firms offering inferior equipment which did not meet legitimate requirements.

There are too, the usual rumors and reports about the political angles; and at least two newspapers have carried editorials or columnar comment assailing the Davis ouster.

Geography is credited in some quarters with Governor Broughton's final decision to oust Lloyd Griffin as school commission Secretary. It is pointed out that Richard Dixon of Edenton (same town as Griffins) had to be taken care of for his activities in support of Broughton during the primary. But this sort of thing did not prevent the governor from naming two special judges (Blackstock and Johnston) from Asheville nor offering J. C. Rudisill of Newton a judicial post when that town already had a superior court judge.

Surprise of the Broughton judicial appointments was Senator Jeff Johnson of Sampson, but there seems to be quite general agreement that it was a good choice. Newton's Rudisill deserves some sort of prize. According to the Hickory Record he was offered a special judgeship and didn't take it. The Board of Education and Revenue Commissioner A. J. Maxwell don't think much of Chapel Hill's Dr. Neason of the Newsome-Laffer team as a historian, but the North Carolina Legion convention chose him as department chronicler of events. . . . Biggest highway safety spurge noted by this corner was the four page spread in last week's Nashville Graphic. Reading of the papers of North Carolina (dalles and weeklies) proves conclusively, however, that rise in the death toll on the roads is not due to lack of cooperation from the press. Ronald Hocutt's name is to be found in almost every issue of more than half the weeklies every week. . . . More proof that state politics and Legion politics are definitely different was selection of Thurmond Chatham as a delegate to the Legion's national convention. Chatham lost his Conservation and Development board place by backing Willie last fall, but it didn't hurt him with the "buddies". . . . Sanford's coal mines are to be reopened in the near future. Not many folks know it, but coal mining in North Carolina dates back to Revolutionary times, and the Sanford mines have been worked, off and on, since 1820. Daily output, when the mines get under full speed, will be 500 tons a day, it is estimated. . . . Hoke county may have girl school bus drivers next school year. All boys and girls interested in driving a bus have been asked to leave their names with school authorities. . . . Week's biggest bluff: "Eye doctors" now making thousands of dollars by work for the state Commission for the Blind threaten they will "not cooperate" if an optometrist is named on the commission.

Alaska's nearest point to the United States is 600 miles northwest of Seattle.

Solution Of Saturday's Puzzle

DEFENSE BOND QUIZ

Q. Where does the Government spend the money raised by Defense Bonds?
A. This money is spent in the United States. It helps to pay, train, arm, feed, clothe, and house the men in our Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and defense industries. It buys all the materials which these men need thus helping the workers, farmers, merchants, manufacturers, and transportation men all over America.
Q. Can I sell or transfer a Defense Bond to a friend or a dealer in stocks and bonds?
A. No. The bond, for your protection, is registered in your name. But you can cash it at any time, after sixty days, for the full amount you paid, plus any interest due you.
Note - To purchase Defense Bonds and Stamps, go to the nearest post office or bank, or write for information to the Treasurer of the United States, Washington, D. C.

SUNDAY'S TILT WON IN NINTH

Saturday Night's 14-Inning Battle Is Won 4-3

After winning Saturday night's 14-inning battle 4-3 in Goldsboro, the Greensies returned home yesterday and took another thriller over the Bugs, 5-4.

The Greensies will play a double header with Tarboro here tomorrow night, the first game starting at 7:30 o'clock.

In the Sunday affair, the game entered the ninth inning with the Goldbugs behind by a 3-1 count. Then Goldsboro scored three runs and it appeared as if Lefty Joe Long had suffered his second loss in a row—Wilson beat him last Tuesday night.

Brinkley, Bug pinch-hitter crouched a home run with one man on to put the Goldsboro team in a tie with the Greensies, but the visitors were not through. Lou DiGaetano followed suit and the Goldbugs were ahead 4-3.

Pitcher Bill Teller hit for Long in Greenville's half of the ninth and drew a walk. Pete Caraway bunted to advance Teller but both men were safe as the second baseman beat out the slow one for a hit. Teller was forced at third by Kracke's infield "blow," but Caraway reached home when Scagg's grounder was errorless. Crowe forced Kracke at third, but Manager Rube Wilson singled to score Scagg.

TO BE PLAYED ON JULY 14TH

Manager Rube Wilson Runner-Up for His Division

Wilson, June 30—Bill Herring, president, manager and pitcher for the Wilson Tobaccoists, current leaders of the Coastal Plain league, and Frank Rodgers, former Tob skipper who is now directing the Williamston Martins, have been selected as the rival managers of the league's all-star teams which will clash at Wilson's Municipal stadium on Monday night, July 14.

Wilson was awarded the classic because its team was leading the chase through games of June 30th. Arrangements are being made by Wilson club officials to take care of a capacity crowd of 3,500.

The rival skippers were named by scribes of the circuit in a poll conducted by Ed W. Davis, of the Wilson Daily Times.

Herring was the first choice of six of the writers balloting and the second choice of three others for a total of 15 points, while Rodgers received four first place nominations and three seconds for eleven points. Cowboy McHenry, Kinston pilot, was runner up to Herring and Rube Wilson, boss of the second place Greenville Greensies, was runner-up to Rodgers in the balloting. Every one of the eight managers in the circuit received votes.

The managers will now select their own rosters from the four clubs in their divisions. In Rodgers' group are Williamston, Tarboro, Greenville and Rocky Mount while Herring will select his club from players on New Bern, Kinston, Goldsboro and Wilson clubs. Managers are not eligible to play in the "dream" game and not more than four players may be chosen from any one team. Each squad is limited to 15 men.

THIRD STREET WINS BY 12-7

Winners Score In Every Inning Except Second

Third street continued its pace as leaders in the "A" league by out-scoring High School this morning in a slugfest, 12-7. Third Street scored in all but the second inning off the slow ball pitching of Langston. Jordan of Third St. pitched a creditable game and would have fared better if he could have had the opposing hitters to hit singles instead of so many extra base blows. He allowed only seven hits, but two were homers and two triples.

George Garrett led the victors with three for three, and was followed close by Clark and Jordan. Musselwhite's homer and triple and Hunter's two singles led for the losers.

Training School went on a hitting spree this morning behind the steady pitching of Lefty Lupton to win by the score of 14-2. West Greenville was having an off-day and after the first inning they never did seem to get their heart in the game. This same team that was beaten so decisively today was the hottest thing in the league last week winning four out of five games. Their defense which has been one of the best in the league, fell apart; they committed a total of eight errors and failed to hit at all like themselves.

On the other hand, Training school played a good hustling game, led by their captain, Snag Clark, who continued his hitting streak by getting a single and homer out of four trips. Lupton got out of his slump getting a single, double and triple out of three tries. Ben Harrison and Gene Johnson were the

Hollywood Sights And Sounds

By Robbin Coats

Hollywood.—You hear a lot of girls around Hollywood complaining because they don't want to play ingenues. Marsha Hunt, slim, blue-eyed, with a cutely turned nose and the ethereal quality of a Lillian Gish, is one who has done something about it.

Marsha is a girl who knows why she doesn't want to play ingenues. She isn't cerebral in her reasoning either. She's down to earth: "I must be an enormous ham at heart," she says. "Ingenue parts scare me. They're harder for me to play than anything else. I hate the way they're supposed to behave. They always get sore at the hero. They're so painfully righteous. If they had any sense, they'd say, 'I don't care what you do—you're my guy.'"

Marsha is telling all today in the apartment she and husband Jerry Hooper, film editor, will soon be leaving for their new house in the valley. She's fresh as this spring morning, but Puppehen, alas, needs a bath. Puppehen, her Bedlington terrier, shows unmistakable signs of tattle-tale gray.

Marsha Hunt's one "act" ushered her into Hollywood six years ago. She was 17, a year out of school in New York, a Powers model, and she had been acting to get into movies as long as she could remember. She arrived on a "visit" in May 1935, and told train-meeting photographers she had no interest whatever in pictures. Hollywood, of course, broke its back trying to interest her—just as her uncle, whom she was visiting, knew it would. "He had an idea that Hollywood would like anything it couldn't get—even spinach," says Marsha. "I was spinach."

She had an offer seven days later, then a Paramount contract, after which she freely confessed the plot. She spent three years at the studio, being the ingenue, the last year doing nothing. The world, her oyster, was delivering only seed pearls. She went east on one of those movie premiere junkets (free trip) and tried to crash stock. Glenda Farrell, Jerry's

HEARTBREAK HONEYMOON

YESTERDAY: Henry and Luella Pell have just taken their first apartment in New York. Henry is taking over his first important job. It's all too good to be true to Luella— even though Marie Mason, the girl who set Henry aside for a radio job in New York, is pretty close for comfort. But hasn't Henry promised to love and cherish Luella asks herself... and isn't that enough?

Chapter Four "And just as soon as we get settled," said Henry, "I want to show people that the good old Southern hospitality isn't just a legend. My boss says contacts mean a lot to a business man in New York. We've got to entertain—have folks up—make them like us. Be charming, all that sort of thing." "But you didn't have to do that down home," Luella reminded. "Not that you weren't charming, darling—but I mean people did business with you whether you entertained them or not."

"Sure, I know that. But competition is keener up here. A fellow has to pull strings. We've got to circulate among the right people, Luella—mix with the Who's Who crowd—step out, invite and get invited." "Another case of keeping up with the Joneses, I suppose." "Not exactly, I don't mean that we've got to live beyond my income—nothing like that."

"Yes, my Lord and Master," said Luella. But away down deep she was afraid, wondering if she, with her smalltown background and old-fashioned ideas about things in general, would ever fit in with the Who's Who folks. "I haven't forgotten that I look you for better or worse, so you can count on me. You know that, don't you, Henry?" "You bet I do," Henry said. "We'll look up a good negro woman for atmosphere as well as for working, and show folks that the Pell's still know how to live gracefully."

"But how are you going to meet all these people?" Luella asked. "Or any people at all, for that matter?" "The men at the office will see to that," Henry answered. "Already they are mentioning dinners and dances, and such-like. You'll meet them before we know it, and almost before you know it, you'll be an habitual hostess. After all, I am the man who put over some pretty big deals in transferring North Carolina and Florida property, and that gives me a bit of prestige to start off with."

"Yes, Henry, I know, but—" "You just see that our New York home is as beautiful as its mistress, and leave all the rest to old Henry Pell." "Yes, Henry."

Henry's News That had been nearly two weeks before. As now Luella and Henry were rapidly getting settled in their new home. While Henry was busy getting the hang of things at the office, Luella was busy trying to set the hang of the curtains in the living room. Standing up on a step-ladder, she gave a last touch to the rich, old-rose brocade that had once hung in the parlor of the house down in the old hometown. Presently she got down from the ladder, and stood looking about her. The room was perfect. All the pieces of furniture which she adored were in place. The chest of drawers which had gone through the Civil War, and which her grandmother had left her, stood between the two tall front windows, its rich deep red woodwork fairly shining. The brass candlesticks which Henry's great uncle had given them, stood upon it.

In the dining-room end of the long high-ceilinged room stood the dining table, which had been in Luella's family for a forgotten number of generations. Its glowing surface seemed to be smiling upon the room, catching the gleam of the rose bowl which had been one of their wedding presents. "There's one thing certain," Henry had said, "we'll never be broke while we've got all these fine old museum pieces. Think what we could get for them from one of those shops over on Madison Avenue."

"But, Henry," Luella had wailed, "we couldn't sell them... Why, they are all intertwined with our lives, and the lives of our families." "Calm yourself sweetheart," Henry had laughed. "We don't have to part with them. Now that your hubby is on the road to becoming an important New York really executive, we needn't worry about selling heirlooms. What we'll be worrying about is buying more stuff." Luella glanced at the time, and hurried out into the kitchenette. She had told Henry to come directly home from the office, as she would have an honest-to-goodness home-cooked meal ready for him. And as she moved about she was glad that her kitchen was somewhat roomier than most of those they had looked at in other apartments. Some of those had been little more than a series of shallow shelves in a closet. At least in this one there was room for something besides a two-burner gas-plate. She made biscuits, a salad—put potatoes in the oven to bake; and got out the thick lamb chops. She wanted them ready to put on the grill the moment she heard Henry come in. She also set the table, using her choicest china and silver. Everything was ready by a little before six. All she had to do was broil the chops. Henry came in one minute after six. "Hi, there, where's my woman?" he called. "Out here in the kitchen being womanly!" Luella called back. Henry came striding out to join her. He caught her to him, his cheek cool against her hot one. "Got news for you, honey!" he said. "Big news!" "A raise in salary so soon?" said Luella. "No kidding?" Luella said freeing herself and turning to the stove. "What sort of date?" "We're going to a broadcast."

"Oh!" "Marie Mason, of all people, telephoned me at the office, and said—" "Telephoned you—Marie?" How did she get your number?" "She reads the hometown papers," said Henry. "She read about our wedding, and what the article said about my work up here. All she had to do then was look up the firm I'm with." "Oh, I see," said Luella. So Marie had been keeping tabs on Henry. She had even telephoned him during business hours, and— "It was swell hearing her voice again," Henry said. "She asked me if we'd like to come to see her broadcast this evening, and when I said we would, she sent me over two tickets by special messenger. He took them from his pocket, held them up for Luella to see. "Yes, sir, we're stepping out for a fact, Mrs. Pell!" "Well, that can wait," said Luella. "The dinner can't. Go get ready. Everything'll be stone cold."

"I'll take a quick shower and be right with you," said Henry. He hurried on into the bedroom. While he bathed, Luella broiled the chops. They were on the table when Henry came in, wearing a pair of tennis slacks and an old sweater. "Mind if I eat like this?" he asked. "I don't want to dress to go out just yet." "You look sweet," said Luella. "Like a college boy. Sit down, and I'll serve you. What time is the broadcast?" "Ten o'clock," said Henry. "But we have to be there at least ten minutes before, or we can't get in. He sank down in his chair. "We're dancing afterwards, Marie's bringing along a Mr. McIntyre, a radio man, to make a fourth." "Do I have to dress?" Luella asked, as she put a chop and a potato on Henry's plate. "Marie said she would wear the gowns before, or we can't get in. He might wear a simple dinner gown or even the frock you wore up here."

"Yes, sir," said Luella. "It looks as though the Pell's were about to be launched. I only hope they don't break champagne over our heads." Henry laughed. "Thank God, my darling's got a sense of humor," he said. And then, more seriously: "Marie knows a lot of important people, and she told me that when she realized that I was something of a successful land broker she immediately thought of several men who might mean a great deal to me. I think that being a real pal."

Pastor Speaks On Marks Of Christ

How to get the "marks" of Christ Jesus upon one was the theme of Reverend T. M. Grant's sermon yesterday morning at Jarvis Memorial Methodist church. He related the tradition that St. Francis bore the marks of the crucifixion upon his body and hands because he thought so much of sacrifice. "If you want the mark of Christ Jesus, they must come from the inside," Mr. Grant declared. Mr. Grant clarified by eliminating even the suggestion that he meant ceremonies or ritual when he said "marks" of Christ. "The thing I am talking about is inside—the thing that will make a new creature of one," he said. Practicing ceremonies, religious exercises or ritual does not mean necessarily that Christ has done anything to one, though such things have a proper place. "Nevertheless one should carry certain marks of their discipleship with Christ. I have not much patience with people who want to carry insignia to show that they are religious or better than other people."

"But a man genuinely religious has something about him that is distinguishing—it is inside him. It determines what he is," he said. "Then he related how a Christian philosopher had horrified him by saying he, the philosopher, had no soul bit, the philosopher said, 'I am a soul. What there is of permanency about me is my soul and that is what I am.'"

STATE FACING MANY CHANGES

Several Shake-Ups In Both Policies And Personnel

Reflector Bureau. By HENRY AVERILL. Raleigh, June 30.—The state of North Carolina will start a new fiscal year on July 1 with more than the usual number of changes in departmental policies and personnel—in fact with a few completely new departments and divisions which will be getting off from scratch. Likewise it will be the beginning of a Broughton fiscal biennium and not only will there be a new governor in the capitol, but a large proportion of the departments will have new heads.

As usual there will be changes in the budgets of almost every department and, also as usual, these changes are for the most part upward; state spending soaring over previous years just as it has done for decades. Among the completely new setups are (1) a department of motor vehicles, (2) a burial association commission, (3) a retirement system and board to handle it. There will be more or less drastic shakeups in numerous existing agencies, including (1) Removal of the tax on foods under the sales tax, administered by the Revenue department; (2) placing of the sale of fortified wines in 26 ABC counties under the state ABC board (this also will bring certain revisions of Revenue Department procedure and regulations, (3) a new type of Unemployment Compensation Commission, (4) inclusion of hospital care insurance under regulation of the insurance commissioner, and (5) a new method of financing the State Bureau of Identification and Investigation.
