RUSSIANS REPORT GERMAN DIVISION ANNIHILATED

Vichy Armistice Proposal Encounters Complications

Reports Are 'Syrian War Continuing'

French Statement Today Declares No Reply Made To General Dentz' Request For Terms, Following Announcement Yesterday That Vichy Was Studying Allied Conditions For Peace

Vichy, July 10.—(AP)—A Vichy proposal of armistice to end the month-old Syrian war between Vichy forces and British Imperial troops and their De Gaulle comrades-in-arms ran into puzzling complications today as Vice Premier Admiral Jean Darlan returned from Paris conferences with German officials.

Vichy, July 10.—(AP)—The French high command in Syria declared tonight that Britain thus far has ignored its request for an armistice and "combats are therefore continuing with the accompaniment of violence and devastation."

The war continued and a contradiction in Vichy statements cropped up.

Yesterday the authoritative Tel-emondial news agency announced that Vichy was studying allied conditions for an armistice, requested by General Henri Dentz, high commissioner and commander-in-chief in Syria and Lebanon.

Today a French statement said: "No reply has yet been made by the British authorities to General Dentz, who, on the contrary, found himself faced with redoubtable British attacks on all fronts and armed with sorrow that pamphlets offensive to his dignity and military honor were being distributed at Beirut by British agents."

Dentz asked for terms on Tuesday. As a prelude (or possibly part of the armistice) the British demanded Wednesday that Beirut, capital city and vital without bloodshed to the allied siege forces. French sources called this an ultimatum to Dentz and said it was conveyed in leaflets dropped on Beirut by the RAF.

A Berlin spokesman said that Vichy actually had received British terms and described them as "conditions such as would be imposed on the bitterest enemy, but scarcely on a former ally for whom England still professes concern and hope."

Informed British quarters in London said that the Vichy situation showed "the usual Goebbels' attempt to muddle the situation in everyone's mind."

Ankara, Turkey, July 10.—(AP)—French sources here said tonight that Vichy troops evacuated Beirut last night and withdrew to the north under orders from General Henri Dentz, the Syrian high commissioner. It was believed that Australian troops would occupy the city today.

Yodeler 'Cowboy' Must Hide Gun New York.—(AP)—Olivio Santoro, 12-year-old boy yodeler, dons a cowboy outfit for his radio program, but he's stopped wearing his pearl-handled dummy six-shooter on the way to the studio. Policemen stopped him and small boys almost mobbed him. Now he carries the "gun" in his guitar case until he gets to work.

Motorists Beware

Chief of Police George Clark today issued a stern warning that effective Monday any motorists found violating the one-hour limit parking law in zones so designated "would be called in and forced to pay." The chief declared there would be no exceptions to the rule and said it would be useless for anyone to come to headquarters with such a request. The chief also said that persons violating other traffic laws, such as parking outside white lines or double parking would be forced to pay the penalty.

LOCAL MARKET MAKES CHANGE IN SALES PLAN

Half-Day Sales System To Be In Effect This Year DAILY SALE AT ALL WAREHOUSES Farmer Will Be Able To Tell Within Few Minutes Of Exact Time His Tobacco Will Be Sold

The Greenville Tobacco Board of Trade has adopted the split, or half-day sales system and the new method of selling tobacco, whereby a farmer will be able to know within minutes the time his offerings will be auctioned off, will be put into effect at the beginning of the 1941 selling season.

The system was adopted upon recommendation of the Board's Sales and Executive Committees and the action is regarded as the greatest forward step taken by any flue-cured market in many years. Although the plan has been adopted and approved on other markets, Greenville's system is believed to be nearer ideal than any other similar plan.

While the system will offer many advantages to warehousemen, the first thought of the tobaccocon is in the interest of the farmer patronizing the local mart. The plan will offer many advantages over the old block system to all concerned.

It makes possible a sales card free from disruption by blocks. Sales will be classified as morning or afternoon sales with each of Greenville's 10 warehouses having a guaranteed sale every selling day of the week. It was emphasized in the announcement that each warehouse will have a sale each day. Buyers will go to warehouses having morning sales promptly at 9 o'clock and move to the second, or afternoon, sale at the appointed time.

Warehousemen will be able to tell how much tobacco will be sold (Continued on page six)

FDR REQUESTS FOUR BILLION

Huge Sum Asked To Strengthen National Defense

Washington, July 10.—(AP)—President Roosevelt asked Congress today for an appropriation of $4,770,065,588 for the War Department "for the further strengthening of the national defense."

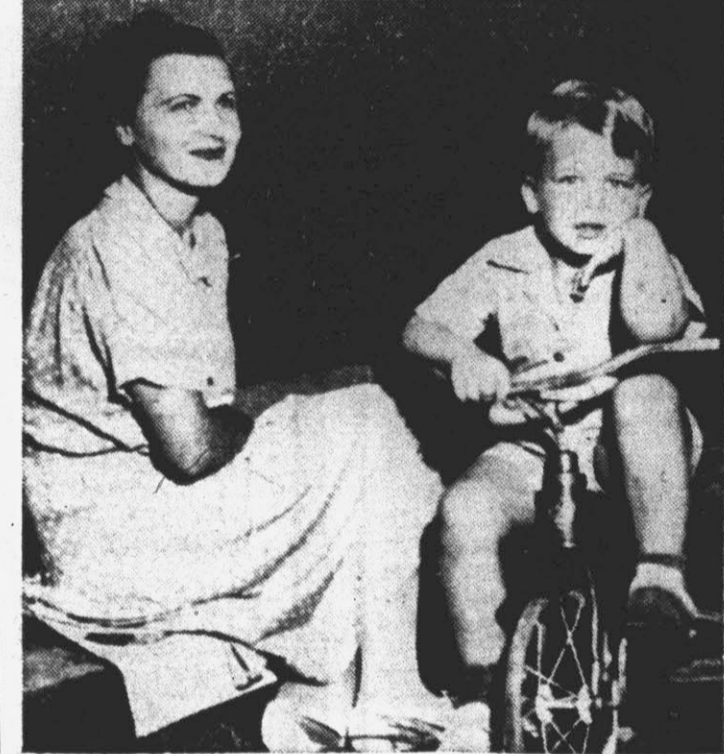

Authoritative sources, predicting this step, had said it was part of a 15 billion dollar program for defense and lease-lend operations. Stephen Early, presidential secretary, said the $4,770,000,000 would be used largely for ordnance and to meet "a pay situation" involving increases for voluntary enlistment. The new army appropriation will be mostly for laying in huge stocks of ordnance and ammunition, and also will provide for the purchase of ordnance and ammunition, and out types, it was said. The request was said to be for a straight cash appropriation in this instance.

BILL EXEMPTS 28-YEAR OLDS

Amendment To Discharge Draftees is Defeated

Washington, July 10.—(AP)—The House approved today legislation providing for the mandatory deferment from military training of men who were 28 years old or older on July 1 and who have not been drafted.

Then the members started discussing an amendment by Rep. Elston (R-Ohio) to permit men 29 or older who have been inducted into service to be discharged upon their own request.

The Elston proposal was defeated, 113 to 103, on a teller vote after Rep. May (D-Ky) said the War Department opposed it.

The draft deferment provision was accepted without a formal vote and with little debate. These provisions were part of a bill which also would give President Roosevelt broad powers to protect workmen willing to return to their jobs in a strike-bound defense plant.

The chief executive would have authority to order production resumed at such a plant and to "afford protection" to workers.

Mrs. J. B. Roberts Claimed By Death

Mrs. Julia Kate Roberts, 61, wife of Elder J. B. Roberts, pastor of the Farmville Primitive Baptist church, died suddenly this morning at the home of a son, J. W. H. Roberts of this city, where she was convalescing following an operation. Funeral services will be conducted at the Farmville Primitive Baptist church tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock by Elders E. L. Cobb and R. H. Braswell of Wilson. Burial will be in Hollywood cemetery, Farmville. Mrs. Roberts was the daughter of the late William and Julia P. Holmes. She is survived by her husband; one daughter, Miss Abigail Roberts of Wilson; two sons, J. W. H. Roberts of this city and L. D. Roberts of Hampton, Va.; and two sisters, Mrs. Elizabeth Hatch and Mrs. Edgar Martin, both of Mount Olive.

RAF RESUMES AIR ASSAULTS AGAINST ITALY

May Signal Sustained Offensive on Italy Proper CROSS CHANNEL RAIDS CONTINUE German Airmen Declared To Have Made Scattered Light Attacks On Britain During Night

Washington, July 10.—(AP)—Senator Taft (R-Ohio) told the Senate today that he had heard weeks ago "on reliable authority that the United States was constructing a naval air base for Great Britain in northern Ireland."

"Since I made the first draft of this speech," Taft added in an address, "Mr. Wendell Wilkie, after a call upon the President, announced that in his opinion we should establish military bases both in northern Ireland and Scotland."

"The occupation of Ireland would relieve perhaps a half million British troops for service elsewhere, and put a half million American boys into the British island."

"A base in Ireland would be much more effective to protect shipping than a base in Iceland. Every argument that has been used for the occupation of Ireland applies to Ireland and England and Portugal." Taft contended that the landing of United States troops in Iceland was an act "exactly equivalent to aggressive war" and one which the President had no right to take without authority from Congress.

If the occupation of Iceland is defense, Taft said, "then any act the President cares to order is defense."

In another development, the Senate Naval Committee voted to summon Secretary Knox and Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, to testify tomorrow on reports that United States navy units have engaged in actual combat with German vessels. Chairman Welsh (D-Mass.) said Knox and Stark would be asked directly to confirm or deny the reports. Knox already has publicly said the navy has not been involved in a sea battle.

The secretary and Stark will testify at a closed session, Welsh said. The committee is considering a resolution by Senator Wheeler (D-Mont.) asking governmental investigation of newspaper reports of hostilities.

Senator McCarran (D-Nev.) joined Senator Wheeler in challenging President Roosevelt to ask Congress for a declaration of war against Germany. "I am satisfied," McCarran told reporters today, "that any attempt to obtain a declaration of war would be defeated so overwhelmingly that on one would raise the question again."

Dunn Is Retained At District Post

Albion Dunn was named counselor for the fourth successive term at the annual meeting of the Fifth District, North Carolina Bar, Inc., held in New Bern yesterday.

Marvin K. Blount was elected a member of the executive committee from Pitt county, and W. J. Bundy was chosen second vice-president. Judge Dunn has served as counselor since 1933. The governing body of the North Carolina Bar, Inc., is composed of one counselor from each judicial district in the state. The body is charged with the duties of promulgating rules of conduct for lawyers. It has charge of enforcement of rules against unauthoritative practice of law and appoints the Board of Examiners.

Following lunch, the attorneys went on a boat ride down the Neuse river to Cherry Point aboard the North Carolina boat Hatteras.

Eleven Pitt Youths Leave For CCC Camp

Seven white and four colored youths left here this morning for Washington, N. C., where they will be enrolled in the Civilian Conservation Corps. K. T. Futrell, welfare officer in charge of the program in this county, said the boys would be sent to a nearby camp. The local welfare office will continue to receive applications and a large number of boys are expected to be inducted into the service on August 20. It was explained that no boys who are needed on the farm are being accepted.

U.S. BOMBERS TO RAID NAZIS

Says Britain To Retaliate for London Assaults

London, July 10.—(AP)—The increasing flow of American-made bombers soon will enable Britain to exact manifold retaliation on Berlin for the German bombardment of London. Britain's new minister of aircraft production, Lieut.-Col. I. T. C. Moore-Brabazon, declared today.

It will not be many months, he said, before Berlin hears the sirens of such attacks. "Those famous Wednesday and Saturday nights (when London was heavily raided) will be child's play, compared with the raids we will be able to make on Berlin," he said.

Speaking for the government in today's installment of House of Commons debate on arms production, Moore-Brabazon said, "we are getting more and more moderate weight-carrying bombers and also big ones. I finally hope to get every single machine from the United States by air."

The ferry service, thus far, has applied only to bombers capable of trans-Atlantic flight.

Board One Issues List Of Selectees

Fifteen colored selectees will be sent to Fort Jackson, S. C., to be inducted into the U. S. Army on Tuesday, July 15, by Pitt County Selective Service Board No. One. Red Army Declared By Moscow To Be Inflicting Heavy Losses On Central Front And Also To Be Holding Fast; Berlin Claims Nazis Have Captured Five Heavy Bunkers On Stalin Line

Annihilation of a German motorized division of some 15,000 men in the blocking of Nazi drives toward Moscow and Leningrad was reported by the Russians today, while the German high command again hid details of the titanic battle raging along a 2,000-mile front.

On the vital 300-mile central front, a Soviet war bulletin declared Red army troops were inflicting terrible losses on the invaders and holding fast.

The Berlin radio asserted Nazi engineer shock troops had stormed and captured five heavy bunkers of the Stalin line "after bitter fighting" and claimed destruction of 110 Soviet warplanes. Moreover, the radio said, German columns advancing against the Stalin defense system had destroyed 123 Russian panzer units "and put the rest to flight."

In the south, the Hungarian high command reported the capture of 25,000 Soviet prisoners by German and Hungarian troops knifing into Galicia. The Germans, silent on any specific gains, declared the world's two largest armies were now fighting a decisive battle.

The Nazi high command confirmed the capture of Salla, fortified Russian town on the Finnish border, after a Red army division was said to have been "crushed" in several days of fighting.

In general terms, the Nazis reported that the left wing of Germany's Baltic army was pounding two spearheads into Russian defenses—one directed at Tallinn capital of Estonia; the other aimed at Leningrad, Russia's second biggest city, at the head of the Gulf of Finland.

Roughly, the main battle line ran from Ostrov, near the Latvian-Estonian frontier; thence 100 miles south to Polotsk; 100 miles southwest to Borisov, on the Minsk-Moscow highway; and 100 miles southeast to Bobruisk, on the Berezina river.

RED OAK NEWS

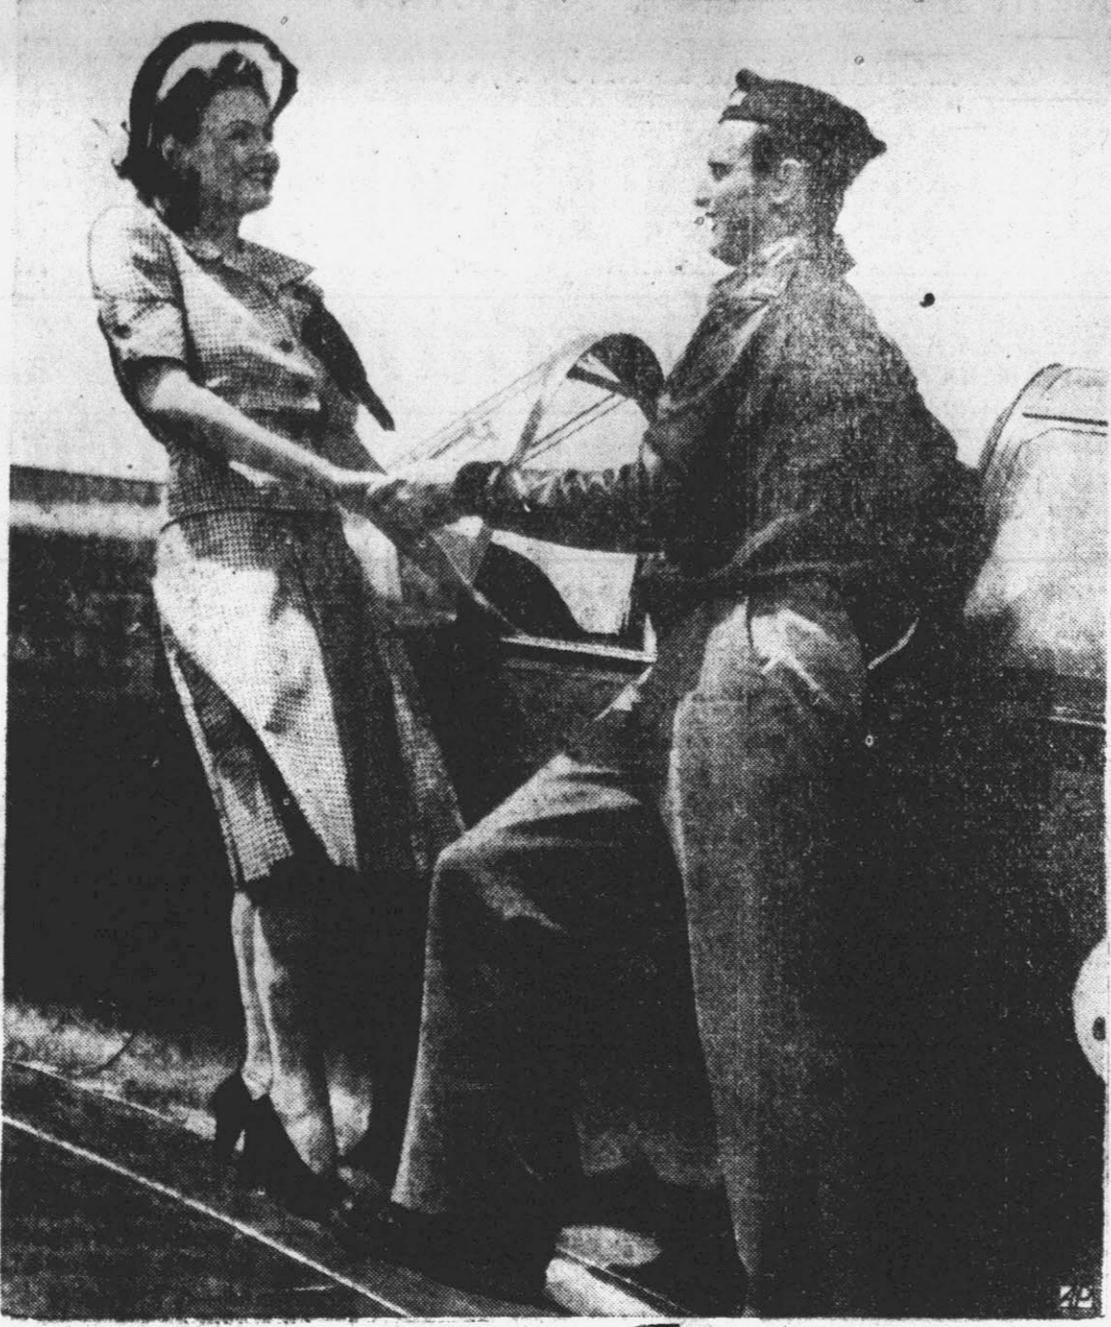

On Wednesday afternoon, July 2, at 2 o'clock, nearly one hundred 4-H boys and girls and their parents of Red Oak and Ballard's community gathered at the Red Oak community center for a tour of some 4-H projects and a picnic.

They left in a body and stopped at Athlen Joyner's to see her bedroom which she had recently remodeled and the women were shown Mrs. Joyner's kitchen which was lovely with its red and white color scheme. Our next stop was at Jane Tyson's, where we saw her newly begun fish-pool and her lovely bedroom. Her dressing table was paper basket and made-over bed.

Forty Years Ago Today

THE DAILY REFLECTOR Thursday, July 10, 1901

It does not get much quieter in town than at present.

The mail boxes are being put up along the rural free delivery routes from Greenville. It is not known yet just when the service will begin.

It looks like the excursion to Norfolk in contemplation by the Baptist Sunday school will have to be abandoned, the committee being unable to get a hearing from the railroad people in time to make arrangements.

Carey Mayo returned Wednesday night from a trip to Tarboro.

They were very attractive and the delicious grape drink served by her mother, Mrs. R. R. Tyson, was enjoyed very much.

A little farther on we stopped by John Wyatt Tyson's, where we saw a lovely green lawn, white painted fence and well-kept grounds around the home. John Wyatt deserves a lot of credit for keeping his yard project. He has sold several hundred dollars worth of hogs since he became a 4-H boy. His mother served candies and toasted peanuts, which of course hit the spot.

Next we visited Mimi and Grace Tripp. These girls have two very attractive bedrooms. Their color schemes are lovely and it must be a pleasure to have such beautiful rooms in which to sleep. The yard is well kept and they have a very attractive fish-pool and rock garden.

On our way to Farmville we stopped at Mrs. Turnage's. She graciously showed us her whole house, which has recently been done over, and her lawn and gardens were lovely. Her daughter's bedroom which at one time served as a rear porch, was one of the most attractive rooms in the house. The color scheme was well chosen in every room and the built-in cupboards added an attractive spot to the front hall and dining room.

The children could hardly wait to get to the picnic grounds and swimming pool at Farmville. Slides, swings, merry-go-rounds, see-saws, etc., were in use every moment of

HEARTBREAK HONEYMOON

By WATKINS B. WRIGHT

YESTERDAY: It could have been a perfect week-end aboard Malcolm Rector's yacht for the young Mr. and Mrs. Henry Pell, Luella Pell thought. But now Henry is playing while Marie Mason is sinking, and Luella can see quite clearly that Henry's interest in Marie is visible to everybody else in the magnificent saloon of the yacht. And she does not like it.

Chapter 12

Tommy Proposes
Before Alma could reply, Marie began singing. Everyone settled back to listen. Luella closed her eyes. She could see the cotton fields down home, and hear the crickets singing. She could almost feel the burning sun, the nudge touch of white bursting pods. She was hoping that the others felt the same way about it, when the song came to an end.

There was a round of applause, and Henry reached for another score. He and Marie went through all the songs. There were five of them, and they made Luella terribly homesick.

Again she wished that Henry had kept his job down home, that they were down there now with their own sort, instead of up here on a yacht with a lot of worldly people and that Latham woman looking at her as though she were something under glass, or that ought to be there.

Tommy winked at her, and went over to where Marie was standing. He laid his hand upon her arm. Marie excused herself to the others, and went out with him. "What a glorious night!" she said when they were standing where the moonlight spilled over them. "What was it you wanted to tell me, Tommy? You sounded urgent just now when you asked me to come out with you."

"I wanted to tell you that I love you," said Tommy. "That I want you to marry me—now—right away."

"Is that all?" said Marie. "Listen, darling, Tommy went on, sinking down about to one knee. I love you. I want you for my wife. I'm perfectly willing for you to go on with your career, if that's what you want, but I want you."

"Do get up off your knee, Tommy," said Marie. "Someone might see you. You look too silly." "Do I?" said Tommy, crestfallen. "I should say so," Marie replied. "Tommy, you're sweet, and I'm fond of you, but—"

"I've heard you say that to half a dozen men," Tommy cut in. "I want you to love me, Marie, marry me. It's time we were married and settled in our own home."

Marie gazed at him. "Try not to be cross, Tommy," she begged. "Try to understand, please. I couldn't bear not having you understand what I'm trying to say. What is it you are trying to say?" Tommy wanted to know. "What I mean, is—well—I'm so sort of all mixed up."

"How do you mean?" "About you—Henry—Luella—myself. But it's about Henry mostly. Marie hesitated, took a deep breath, and said: "You see, Tommy, I—I think I'm still in love with him."

Tommy stared at her, the girl there beside him, the girl in crimson chiffon over which the moonlight was pouring a coat of purest silver. "You're talking utter drivel," he said presently. "You know that Henry is happily married to Luella, and that you've no right to butt in."

"I'm not so sure about Henry being happily married to Luella," said Marie. "Nor am I so sure I haven't the right to interfere."

"Listen, Marie," said Tommy quietly, trying to keep the anger he felt out of his voice. "don't get the idea you are up against a misanderstood husband or anything like that. Henry Pell knew perfectly well what he was doing when he married Luella instead of you. So keep out of his life, don't meddle with his private affairs. Forget Henry, and marry me. It'll help you forget him. I think it's only a sort of hang-over from a school crush anyway."

Failure

"I wonder," said Marie sadly.

And then: "I want more time to think, Tommy, before talking marriage. Let's leave things as they are until we see how this program goes over. I'll be pretty busy for a while, working with Mr. Rector, and Henry, and—"

"You mean you're going on working with Henry, now the songs are done?" "Why, yes, of course. Henry's terribly interested in radio, you know, and I need him to coach me. He knows just how I should sing the songs, and he's got a sort of—of—radio ear. Didn't you hear Mr. Rector at dinner, when he said the radio world needed men like Henry?"

"Yes, I heard," said Tommy. "But Henry came up here to work with a big realty company. And I think a good old reliable realty company is a better gamble for him than radio—if you ask me."

"Well, I didn't ask you," said Marie crossly. "Come on, let's go back inside."

"But, Marie, listen, please," Tommy pleaded. "I want—"

Marie ignored him, and hurried along the deck. Tommy followed her, feeling low and defeated. "It didn't work," he was telling Luella a few moments later. "I only went down on one knee, but Marie wasn't impressed. She thought I looked silly. She would probably have died laughing, if I'd gone down on both knees."

"I'm sorry," said Luella. "I saw you go out with her, and went right to praying. I reckon my prayers are just no good."

"Of course they are," said Tommy. "And so are you. You're a grand girl, Luella, and with the slightest encouragement I could fall in love with you."

"On the rebound, so to speak," said Luella. "Nothing of the sort," said Tommy with considerable feeling. "Maybe it's you I'm falling in love with, after all—and not Marie."

Malcolm Rector called to them to say that Henry's mint juleps were ready. They walked over to a table at which the other guests were grouped.

"To the success of our program!" said Mr. Everett. He nodded toward Henry. "Here's hoping you'll think matters over, Pell, and come in with us if we can find a good opening."

"Thanks!" said Henry, beaming like a happy kid. "I think I'd like that."

Mrs. Everett smiled upon them all. "I think this is turning out to be one of the nicest parties I've ever attended," she said. "I want all of you to come out to our place one week-end soon."

Home Again

But stopping off at the Everett place was not to be a violent storm blew up early Sunday morning. It raged on and on until mid-afternoon. It was impossible to put in anywhere.

"It looks," said Mr. Rector, "as though we'll have to put back to New York."

Everyone expressed regret and disappointment—everyone but Luella. She was glad that the trip was to end. She was tired of the party. Henry hadn't been at all like himself all day. First he had been terribly afraid he was going to be seasick.

that had double-meanings, when she wasn't hanging on to Malcolm Rector's arm and saying things to him under her breath. The party was a washout, so far as Luella was concerned, in spite of the fact that it had started out rather well.

It was late when they found themselves again in the yacht basin at Seventy-ninth Street. The Everetts' car was parked where they had left it the day before, so they drove off in that. Malcolm Rector said he would remain on the yacht over night, and Alma said she would stay with him for the evening meal. Tommy suggested to Henry that he and Luella join him and Marie for dinner some place nearby.

"I think I'd prefer going home," said Luella. "I feel a little shaky—not yet gotten my land legs."

Henry glanced at her. It was easy to see that he was disappointed. Marie shrugged.

"There's more work to do on that cotton field song," she said. "So you'd better come over to my place tomorrow night. Henry, so we can get it in shape."

"Right!" said Henry. "The change from the minor is a bit too sudden. You might see what the composer can do about that."

"I'll call him in the morning," Marie said. "But we can work on the piece where the meter isn't quite right."

It was when Luella and Henry were alone in their own home that Henry said: "Weren't you a bit abrupt in replying to Tommy's suggestion that we go some place for dinner?"

"No," said Luella. "Anyway, I didn't mean to be. Henry, I was tired. Not being able to feel really at ease was trying. It got me down. Frankly, I got a little bored after the first few hours."

"Bored?" said Henry. "With all those people who are doing things in the world?"

"Maybe that's why I was bored. Tommy hadn't taken pity on me now, and then I certainly would have been the forgotten woman."

Chapter 13

Date With Marie
Luella searched Henry's face. "But don't worry about Tommy being alone with me," she said, "as if you would! Tommy's in love with Marie, and I had to listen to him talk about her most of the time."

"Why the accent?" Henry said. "Because you've talked about her so much yourself, Henry," Luella said. "Not that I'm jealous or anything like that, but—Oh, darling, we were going to have such fun together when we came to New York. You said so yourself, and yet—"

"But we are having fun!" "Not the way I expected to. All you do is talk radio, try to write songs, and work at the office. You never have time even to tell me you love me."

Henry stiffened. "Luella, don't start being that sort of wife!" he said.

"What sort of wife?" "You know the sort I mean," said Henry. "The sort of wife who wants her husband telling her every minute that he loves her. We've got to be modern, Luella. We can't go on acting like the married folks acted when our grandparents and parents were married. This is 1941, honey—not the Seventies and the Eighties."

"Really?" Luella was tired, she was annoyed, she was a bit disgusted. "I don't see why we can't act like they did. I like their way of doing things."

"Now you're talking utter nonsense," said Henry. "All of a sudden he was tired also—the reaction probably. And he was annoyed. Darn women! They could be so cock-eyed unreasonable."

"We belong to an entirely different generation. We can't just sit around of evenings just—just being married."

"No?" "No?"

Luella felt as though she could scream. "Well, if you ask me," she snapped. "I think our parents and grandparents had the right idea. Good night!"

Marie The Helper

Henry did go to Marie's apartment on the Monday evening after returning from the Rector yachting party. He stayed until after midnight. He had gone again and again, eager to perfect the songs, excited over the possibility of having them used in radio, and still finding himself frequently wondering, as he had wondered before, if a man could love his wife and another woman at one and the same time.

In spite of the fact that he honestly tried his best to keep his association with Marie on a purely business basis, he often remembered Marie in his arms, the kiss they had shared out on the extension roof of his and Luella's apartment. Marie's disturbing nearness.

It was wrong, tragically wrong for him to keep remembering such things. But fighting a memory was a thing that was terribly difficult—rather like fighting a shadow that kept crossing one's path.

And Marie, always trying to help him, encouraged him—so tremendously interested in him and his verses.

"Of course you know," she was now saying to him, "that Rector and Everett are really sincere in their interest in you, Henry. They have mentioned you to me several times."

"I keep hoping they are," Henry replied. "But I've got my fingers crossed."

"Silly, darling!" said Marie. "Henry looked about them, feeling a little guilty, feeling like a small boy playing hooky from school. For he and Marie were in a cocktail lounge of a small West side hotel.

He had found it necessary to be in that neighborhood in order to examine a piece of property, and since it was late afternoon, he had called Marie on sudden impulse and asked her to meet him for a cocktail. He explained that he wasn't going back to the office, but straight home to dinner. They would have time for a drink and a talk. Presently Marie went on talking.

"It made me very happy," she said, "having you call me. I like little unexpected things like that, Henry—pleasant things coming right out of the sky, so to speak."

She took a sip of her cocktail, then sat down her glass, and leaned across the narrow table.

"There's always a place in radio for a man with ideas, and you've got them," she said. "I know it. And I've a sneaking idea we're going to have some definite developments before long."

"Woman's intuition at work, I reckon," Henry grinned. "Or just a plain old garden variety lunch!"

"Never mind what it is," said Marie. "All you need, Henry, is the opportunity to develop your ideas—to sort of spread out."

"Maybe you're right," Henry said thoughtfully. "But, after all, I'm in the realty business up to my neck. I've been in it since my high school days when old Professor Smithsonian told me he'd pay me a commission if I'd rent those five old shack down by the railroad; you remember, Marie, the houses his aunt left him over where we kids used to play."

"Yes," said Marie without interest. "I remember. But don't grow reminiscent on me just now, Henry. We've got the present to consider, and the future. Let's not talk about the past."

"All right. But what I mean is that I'm tied up with renting apartments and selling lots. Of course, I like working on my verses, and I get as excited as a kid when I think of having you sing them for me, and yet—"

"Of course you get excited!" Marie cut in. "Who wouldn't? Radio's an exciting business. And look at your business, the realty business! It's dull and tiresome, and I don't see any future in it. You'll just go on renting apartments and selling lots, year in and year out, until you're an old man, all tired out."

"Gosh, you certainly do paint a sad picture!" Henry said. "It is sad," said Marie. "watching a man of promise stagnate in a realty office."

"What would you have me do, throw up my job?" "Certainly not. But you can keep right after Rector and Everett. The job they have in mind for you or someone else is just the sort you should have. Program planning, you know—selecting talent, planning the songs and the sketches."

"But I've never had any experience along such lines," Henry said. "Oh, yes, you have!" Marie contradicted. "Down home, working with our local entertainments, directing our plays, playing my accompaniments. All that has helped to establish a background for you."

She smiled into Henry's eyes. "Besides, I know the right people. And I've gotten a good idea about radio work in general. I may stand up in front of a mike and sing, but I've kept my eyes and ears open. Marie'll help you with all she's got."

Taffy For Henry

"That's darned sweet and generous of you, Marie. I appreciate it. But there's a heck of a lot of competition around here, you know I mean there must be hundreds of men who are far more capable of holding down the sort of job you mention."

"What of it? There were hundreds of singers with far more experience and training than I had, but did that prevent me from coming up here and having a try?" "No. But you had a definite something to offer—your singing."

"Well, you've got something definite to offer, too," said Marie. Then: "There's just one thing that's worrying me, that's Alma Latham's attachment for Malcolm Rector."

"Why should that worry you?" "The job I've been telling you about is one Alma might be able to fill, and I think she's after it. And with the hold she has on Malcolm—he's in love with her, or I don't know the symptoms—she may persuade him to forget everyone else, and give the job to her."

Marie paused, gave Henry a searching look. "But you can still put up a fight, can't you?" "Certainly I can," said Henry. "That is, if I finally decide to give up the realty business."

"Don't tell me there are any doubts in your mind!" "As a matter of fact, there are," said Henry. "A married man can't afford to gamble on his future. If I'd come here alone—I mean before Luella and I were married—and found matters as they are, I'd have taken a chance. But it's different once a man marries."

He hesitated a moment, took a drink, remembering Luella and the strained something that had sprung up between them since the Rector party, and which had grown and grown, like a wall that was slowly but surely being built to keep them apart.

"And take Luella," he went on. "She feels very strongly about my giving so much time to the songs; not that she says very much, but I sense it in the way she looks at me at times, and in the things she doesn't say."

"Oh, all married women are like that!" Marie said airily. "Luella's probably a little jealous of the way you've gone ahead in New York, while she's lagged behind. But once you've gotten into radio, and are making a name for yourself, to say nothing of a big salary, she'll feel differently. You owe something to yourself, anyway, Henry my dear."

Her hand was on Henry's now, patting it gently. "You're a man, and a man has a right to make his way in the world. Don't be a hen-pecked husband, Henry, one of those detestable men who let their wives influence them by using a lot of feminine tears and tantrums. Men like that never get anywhere."

"I'm not that sort of man, Marie," Henry said, annoyed. "And I never shall be!"

"Very true, my lamb," Marie smiled. "But don't let Luella's feelings and rather old-fashioned ideas about things in general interfere too much with that clear and calm thinking." She glanced at her watch. "I've got to be going now, Henry."

HINTS TO HOUSEWIVES

When a recipe calls for banana pulp, slice peeled bananas into a bowl, mash well with a fork, then beat with a regular egg beater or a mechanical food mixer until soft and creamy.

Vegetables, meats and fish retain their original flavor when reheated. If placed in a tightly covered double boiler, steamer or egg cooker. This method prevents dryness and scorching.

If your youngsters do much paper cutting and pasting, keep a big sized sheet of unbleached muslin cloth on hand for covering the floor or rug. This makes cleaning up easy.

Slip some of your favorite sachet powder in the ends of the padded hangers holding your best dresses. The subtle odor scents the closet as well as the garments.

Toasted corn bread is tasty with creamed meats, fish or vegetables. Toast on both sides. Leftover corn bread works as well or better than fresh.

Save lemon skins to rub over the hands and nails to remove stains caused by vegetable preparations and general cleaning.

main at peace, its only means were to make concessions and delay the aggression until the dictators decided to march. Many small, bewildered lands wished to remain at peace, but their efforts never passed the wishful stage. The bigger nations, even with a League of Nations as an instrument, could not help.

American sympathy for nations that want to live free and a will to aid the underdog are underlying factors beneath the United States' hurried steps away from a policy of strict neutrality. The passage of the Lend-Lease Bill amounted to a repeal of most of the neutrality laws and, although the statute against American ships moving into war zones still stands, the United States is rapidly pulling away from that rule, too. The United States has not been neutral. The people, as a whole, do not want to be neutral.

The people of the United States do, though want some assurance that the world will remain at peace after Hitler has been whipped. Since about 1935, people of the United States have been jittery about the prospects of war, but now that the show-down is imminent, they are ready to face it, despite the realization that the League of Nations, based on groping measures, was a complete failure. After the war is finished and boundaries are again fixed, if all would join in a league that could enforce its rulings by force, if necessary, the lasting peace of the world might then be assured.

The first League of Nations would not contend with warlike steps of member nations, and therein lay its greatest failures. The League had no rules, outside of the application of weak sanctions, to cope with unruly acts by Germany, Italy and Japan. Of course, favorable conditions for a righteous peace for the victors and vanquished alike are the first objective following an armistice. But that objective cannot be maintained unless such a league would take immediate and united action against black sheep nations in the event of aggressions. There must be strong rules, with military sanctions if need be, to handle outlaws. Peace must be enforced, like war must be prosecuted. Many believe such a league would be effective.

Barefoot is being boomed for the job of directing school bus safety if the task is transferred to the School Commission. Abundant clays in Western North Carolina offer excellent opportunities for manufacture of high grade chinaware. A report of the Conservation and Development department says. Experimental tests are said to have demonstrated that kaolin in the Spruce Pine region is equal in quality to that imported from England for fine chinaware.

BERT MOTLEY ORCHESTRA TO PLAY AT BEACH

Atlantic Beach, July 10.—Music for this Saturday night's dance in the Atlantic Beach casino will be provided by Bert Motley and his orchestra. It has been announced by Manager Newman Willis. This popular dance band will also play for the free concert Sunday afternoon. Manager Willis declared this week that he was greatly pleased with the outstanding success of the July 4 holiday period. The throngs on the beach on Independence Day were said to be the largest in the history of the coastal resort. State highway patrolmen complimented the lack of highway accidents, and said that motorists seemed to exert unusual care and caution, preventing any serious traffic accident on July 4.

Service men in uniform are reported to be availing themselves of the opportunity to enjoy the surf bathing and casino dancing at the offered half price. This is said to be the first coastal resort in North Carolina to offer this special concession to soldiers, sailors, marines and coast guardsmen, in local efforts to cooperate to the fullest extent possible with the national defense projects and camps through this area.

Nightly programs will be continued in the casino during July—roller skating Monday nights; girl-break dances Tuesday nights; mid-week dances Wednesday nights; free dances Thursday nights; prize fights Friday nights; and week-end dances Saturday nights. Free concerts will be continued every Sunday afternoon.

A washed woolen sweater will keep its shape if dried on a specially made sweater frame, adjusted to the desired shape and size. These frames are inexpensive and make sweater washing easy and safe.

Washington Daybook

By Jack Stinnett. Washington - Things that could not happen anywhere else: Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard now knows what the alley gang meant when they yelled, "Cheese it, guys?" The Secretary suggested that United States cheese consumers might cut down their nibbling and make it possible to ship more cheese to England, where the folks miss their Dutch, Scandinavian and Swiss products. Apparently Mr. Wickard stuck his nose into it, because from the cheese country, especially Wisconsin, has come a fuss such as the kindly, gentle Secretary had never kicked up. Rep. Reid F. Murray of Wisconsin ushered the whirlwind into Congress. He said that in the checker country, every schoolboy knows that there is at least two years' supply of that product in the warehouses—and all told, in Canada, New Zealand, Australia and the U. S., about 107,000 tons of surplus cheese.

Short Shots

Raleigh, July 10.—North Carolina's school system was dissected and explained Wednesday for the benefit of a dozen and a half graduate students from the Duke University school of county and state school administration. The student group came to Raleigh under direction of Professor J. H. Goldthorpe, visiting teacher at the Durham school. They met with Nathan Yelton, executive secretary of the North Carolina School Commission, and asked him many questions about the Tar Heel system and set-up. Later the visiting students looked over the N. Y. A. and other educational units here.

Long Beats Tarboro 4-3 For Eleventh Win Of Season

14 STRUCK OUT BY LOCAL ACE

Only Two Hits Yielded By Lefty Until 9th Inning

Lefty Joe Long held the Tarboro Orioles scoreless and yielded only two hits up to the ninth inning last night and then curbed a rally by visitors after they had scored three runs and the game ended with Greenville ahead 4-3, but with two Tarboro men on bases.

While Long was turning in a fine and of pitching, his opponent, Coogan, was doing a nice piece of hitting himself. Long allowed five hits, walked only two and struck out 14. Coogan allowed six hits, walked seven and struck out four.

It was Long's eleventh win of the season against only one loss, this one setback being against Wilson's Athletics.

Greenville drew first blood in the first frame. Kracke, who reached first on a fielder's choice, came home on Caraway's triple. Charlie Scagg then lifted a 350-foot homer over the left field wall to score Caraway ahead of him.

Neither team was able to score again until the eighth when Greenville added one on a walk to Jenkins, a wild pitch and Carl Pierce's single.

Coming into the ninth inning Long showed the results of his hard work during the game in holding the Orioles to two hits — not but two men had reached second up until that time. Two Tarboro men singled and another walked to fill the bases. Two came in on a single and the third and final tally of the game was the result of an error. The Orioles had two men on base, however, when the third out was made.

FORMER CHAMP REGAINS TITLE

President's Cup Play Not Yet Completed, However

Dr. M. B. Massey, former champion, defeated Defending Champion Reynolds May, seven up and six to go, yesterday in the completion of the finals of the Greenville Country Club Championship tournament.

Nine holes were played on Tuesday, before rain halted the match, with Dr. Massey two up. The local dentist played each of yesterday's complete rounds in par 36, while May was taking a 40 on the first round and 38 on the second round.

Only 30 holes were required yesterday. As the two players came to the 29th hole Dr. Massey held a seven up lead and May would have had to win each of the remaining holes to have tied the count. The two halved the 30th with par fours and Dr. Massey became the champion.

May entered the finals by virtue of a defeat over W. L. Allen, while Dr. Massey won over Simon Moye, Jr.

Play in the President's Cup division has not been completed.

J. Con Lanier has reached the finals and will play either Reynolds May or I. J. Edwards.

High School Team Halts Win Streak

The High School team of the "A" league put a stop to Training School's winning streak which had reached eight games. Garrett, pitching for the winners, completely smothered the big guns of the league leaders. He allowed only five hits and one run and was not in trouble except in two innings, once in the fourth with runners on first and second and no outs, the batter hit a liner to Teel playing second for the High School, the runners were both off in an attempted steal and an easy triple play was the result; then again in the seventh, with the bases loaded and one out a fast double play ended the game.

Dunn, Jordan, Musselwhite and Dupree led the hitting for High School, Lupton and Harrison got four out of the Training School's five hits.

LONG TO START ALL-STAR TILT

Scagg, Jenkins And Kee Also Picked On North Team

Wilson, July 10 — When the "northern" team takes the field here Monday night in the Coastal Plain League's annual "dream" game they will have the better of the argument on paper as far as pitching is concerned, but will be conceding an advantage to the "southern" forces when it comes to batting punch.

Frank Rodgers, manager of the Williamston Martins, who edged out Rube Wilson, popular skipper of the Greenville Greensies, for the jobs of picking and directing the northern forces will be serving his second straight year as the generalissimo of an all-star outfit. Last year he relied on pitching and came through with a 3 to 1 triumph over the opposition bossed by Mac Arnette then manager of the Goldsboro Bugs.

In selecting his all-star outfit Rodgers picked two of Greenville's aces, Long Kee, his own Pete Kunis and H. Wilson, of the Rocky Mount Leafs. This quartette had racked up a total of 33 wins against 10 defeats at the time the last official league averages were released, and bid fair to finish among the circuit's top chunkers.

Offensively the other members of the Rodgers' cast are batting at a clip of around .312 and have socked at least seven home runs, ten home runs. The all-star selection, the first nine comprise the batting order as announced by Rodgers, follow: Harry Hendershot, Tarboro, ss; Frankie Ware, Rocky Mount, 2b; Eddie Sadol, Tarboro, 1b; Tommy Kurst, Rocky Mount, rf; Charlie Scagg, Greenville, lf; Harry Jenkins, Greenville, 3b; Red Mincy, Rocky Mount, cf; Charlie Wilcox, Williamston, catcher and Long, Greenville, starting pitcher. Reserves: Bud Cayton, Tarboro, and Chet Sparr, Williamston, infielders;

Fred Hoyle, Williamston, outfielder; Steve DeCubellis, Tarboro, catcher; Zelly Kee, Greenville; Pete Kunis, Williamston and H. Wilson, Rocky Mount, pitchers.

The all-star battle will be played in Wilson's Municipal stadium on Monday night, July 14, starting at 8:15 o'clock. It will be the second straight year the classic has been awarded to Wilson. Admission will be 50 cents including tax.

Selections of Bill Herring for his southern team will be announced tomorrow as will umpires selected by Ray H. Goodmon, Coastal prexy.

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filaments which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. When they get tired and don't work right in the daytime, many people have to get up nights. Frequent urination, sometimes with smarting and burning, sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't neglect this condition and lose valuable, restful sleep.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may also cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of bone and energy, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Five Points Food Market Opening Friday Morning

A new and modern grocery store and meat market—Five Points Food Market—will be opened here tomorrow morning by W. M. Swindell, who will be remembered by many Greenville people from his service with the A and P store on Dickinson avenue several years ago.

Mr. Swindell moved away from Greenville about seven years ago, he is returning from Raleigh to open up the new business.

The store and meat market will, as its name indicates, be located at Five Points, on the northwest corner. A complete line of fancy groceries has been purchased and was being arranged today in order to start business tomorrow morning. The market will feature western meats.

Mrs. Swindell, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Patrick of this city, will be chief assistant to her husband.

Several Vacancies In U.S. Army Air Corps

Wilson, July 10.—Several vacancies still exist in the United States Army air corps it was announced by C. C. Floyd, head of the U. S. Army recruiting station here today, while an unlimited number of vacancies in the army in the "unassigned" class are also available.

Sergeant Floyd urged all who cared to enlist to report to him at once in the Post Office building at Wilson, N. C. There are a large number of vacancies in this Corps Area for Regular Army Personnel (three year enlistments) and it is desired that as many enlistments as possible be accomplished for the "Regular Army Unassigned." A recruit enlisted for "Regular Army Unassigned" and sent to a reception center can be assured that he will be assigned to an organization for which he has the best qualifications; in other words a mechanic or chuffeur can be assured of an assignment to a motored organization, and the same is true of the other types and qualifications.

Committee Is In Session To Set Teacher Salaries

By HENRY AVERILL
Raleigh, July 10.—The salary committee of North Carolina's School Commission is in session today, studying a new salary scale for teachers, methods of reducing the pay scale differential between white and Negro teachers and a salary scale for a new teacher classification—the so-called "master's degree" certificate.

Surveys have been directed to be made in these counties, he added, and it is believed that they will be completed in time to make reasonably accurate and fair allotments even before the opening of school in the fall. In any event, there will undoubtedly be an upward revision in number of teachers in all counties.

The slight decrease in total allotments proved that Mr. Yelton took into consideration the reduction of daily average attendance in many schools last year because of epidemics.

Cattle And Swine Farm Tour Is Set

A half-day tour to beef cattle and swine farms has been arranged by the Pitt County Agricultural Department for Friday, starting at 12:45 p. m.

In making the announcement, the office issued a statement declaring that "if farmers who are adding cattle to their farms now are going to make anything from cattle and stay in business, a practical and sufficient grazing and feed program will have to be put into effect on the farm." It added that some progress had been made along this line and stated that the tour was being arranged so farmers could see what some of their neighbors were doing.

Itinerary of the tour follows: 12:45, meet at the county agent's office; 1:30 Alton Gardner's farm, Gardner's crossroads; 2:45, Dr. W. I. Wooten's farm at Helen's crossroads; 3:50, Herman McLawhorn's farm, Harrington farm, near Scuffletown; 4:25, Herman McLawhorn's home place near Winterville; 5:00 G. W. Peed's farm, Winterville highway; 5:40, A. R. Barnhill's farm, Route Five, Greenville; 6:40 V. C. Fleming's farm, Bethel highway.

Included in the projects to be visited are permanent pasture, seeding and fertilizer feeding, temporary grazing program, breeding program, cow identification, beef cattle, thrift pig program, grazing program for swine, safety bull pen and many others.

U. S. Buddhists Honolulu.—(AP)—Since it was introduced in Hawaii 50 years ago, Buddhism has obtained 49,713 adherents, says Kenji Ohtomo of the Young Men's Buddhist Association. It's membership represents about 35 per cent of this territory's Japanese population.

He pointed out that the allotments, the tentative schedule calls for 6,521 high school and 18,019 elementary school teachers—divided 4,461 high school and 13,631 elementary teachers for the rural schools and 2,060 high school and 4,388 elementary teachers for city schools. Corresponding figures for 1940-41 were 6,443 high school and 18,114 elementary teachers—divided 4,387 high school, 13,737 elementary teachers for the rural schools; 2,066 high school, and 4,438 elementary teachers for city schools.

In a few counties allotments were announced by Nathan Yelton, commission secretary, as "not final, adjustments, plus or minus to be made at a later date." These counties are Carteret, Dare, Forsyth, Stokes; and the city unit for Albemarle.

It was not so stated formally and officially, but Mr. Yelton said that revision of the allotment totals will undoubtedly have to be made in such counties as Onslow, New Hanover, Cumberland and others in which there are big defense camps or projects.

DISAGREED IN SAFETY VIEWS

Differences Of Opinion On School Bus Program

Reflector Bureau
By HENRY AVERILL
Raleigh, July 10.—No bitter fight is in prospect, as the whole situation isn't the kind to arouse passions to any marked degree; but there are differences of opinion as to the proper method of handling the school bus safety problem and program and these differences are more than likely to break into the open before any definite plan is finally adopted.

Briefly, there is one school of thought which holds that responsibility for a thorough-going, far-reaching program of school bus safety education and control should be under the Highway Safety division of the Department of Motor Vehicles. There is another school which holds that the primary responsibility for and direction of such a program should be in the hands of the School Commission.

In previous deliberation on the subject, the latter group has seemed to be in the ascendant—the School Commission's special school bus committee having gone so far as to adopt a resolution calling for a program under the Commission.

That's where the discussion is going to come in. Since the school bus situation came in for so much public airing as the result of a couple of fatal accidents, the School Commission has a new head (Nathan Yelton in place of Lloyd Griffin) and the Highway Safety division is under a new departmental boss (Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Boddie Ward vice Revenue Commissioner Allen J. Maxwell); and there is a growing belief that at least one of these—possibly both—think a little differently on the matter than his predecessor.

Neither is talking either on or off the record about it, but indirectly your reporter hears on what seems excellent authority that Mr. Yelton is inclined to the view that the Highway Safety division is better equipped to take charge of the bus safety problem than is the school commission.

It is argued, quite logically, that the safety division has the organization and personnel needed for an adequate program of education and control. The division has its field force which can be used as instructors. It is under the same department as the Highway Patrol and patrolmen can be impressed into service through it much more easily than through the school commission.

On the other hand, it is contended the School Commission has no such advantages, and is not immediately prepared to go into any broad program. True, it can enlist the teaching staff of the school system, the mechanical forces now engaged in bus maintenance and the heads of the schools in the various units; but there is no organized, trained safety force to oversee the whole setup.

Thus it would result that placing the bus safety program under the commission would mean putting it into the hands of two or three people, possibly themselves improperly equipped for such a job and certainly without the force necessary to put over a big program.

In short, Mr. Yelton is pictured as believing that the Safety Division, given the wholehearted, loyal cooperation of the school commission and all local school units (and he feels he can safely promise this cooperation) stands a much better chance to set up and carry through an extensive safety program for school buses than would skeleton organization within the commission.

N.C. PRODUCES FOOD AND FEED

All-Out Campaign Is Meeting Harty Response

Raleigh, July 10.—North Carolina's all out effort to produce the food and feed needed for family living this year is meeting with a hearty response, according to reports reaching the offices of the county home and farm agents of the State College Extension Service.

Recent excessive rains have been detrimental somewhat to cotton and tobacco, but the moisture has been of great value to home gardens, truck crops, corn, cowpeas, pastures, home orchards, and small fruits. Pastures have been revived and the milk flow of dairy cattle has increased as indicated by better deliveries of fluid milk to routes serving milk manufacturing plants. Home agents report that fresh vegetables are appearing in larger quantities at the curb markets clubbed by home demonstration club women and there is a heavy demand for bulletins on canning and preserving.

Swine growers, encouraged by the better prices for pork and by better prospects for corn production, are giving their breeding stock excellent attention. The feed-egg price ratio is favorable and reports from hatcheries indicate that many new people have entered poultry work this season. Poultry experts of State College say that the numbers of laying hens in flocks are being increased over last year.

Much of the home grown wheat, barley, and oats grown during the past winter will be used for food and feed, with a large percentage going to mashers for the feeding of chickens and livestock. Negro farm families as well as white are joining in the "Food For Family Living" campaign and it is expected that many will produce the 75 per cent of home needs which will entitle them to one of the honor or certificates to be awarded this year.

LOCAL MARKET MAKES CHANGE IN SALES PLAN

(Continued From Page One) at a morning or afternoon sale and when a farmer places his tobacco on the floor an official of the warehouse will be able to advise him within a few minutes of the time the buyers will reach the individual farmer's offerings.

While the warehousemen and market in general will be benefited in many ways under the new system, the grower himself will receive the greatest advantages by being offered a sales card upon which he can always rely, being assured that the sales will be run strictly according to the card. Such block, as caused by congestion in the past, will be eliminated. A farmer will be able to sell his tobacco without congestion or confusion, promptly and orderly and he will know at what time he can expect the buyers to reach his offerings.

Although untried on this market, the new system is certain of proving successful and to the advantage of all persons involved, in the minds of the Board of Trade.

With 10 warehouse firms on the market and five sets of buyers and with morning and afternoon sales a grower will be able to sell his tobacco at the warehouse of his choice, no matter which day of the
