NAZIS CONCEDE CONQUEST AT STANDSTILL

Vichy Government Rejects Britain's Armistice Terms

DESCRIBED AS UNACCEPTABLE

French Recognition of De Gaulle Movement Declared To Have Been Point Upon Which Vichy Declined To Enter Into Negotiations; Surrender Of Arms And Warships Also Provided

Vichy, July 11.—(AP)—The Vichy government, after studying British terms for an armistice in Syria, announced today it had found them unacceptable and indications were that the fight with the British and De Gaulle would go on.

The English text of armistice conditions is in basis and in form unacceptable for the French government, said the announcement. It added that the terms "seem to have been edited precisely to prevent all possibility of eventual agreement on the points in question."

The British demands included complete surrender of arms and warships, occupation of Syria by British forces and implied Vichy recognition of the De Gaulle movement, according to the Vichy outline.

It was on the last point that the French said they were unable to enter discussions to end the five weeks' war in the League-mandated land. They called it an attack against "the dignity of the nation."

The French declared "it is impossible for the French government to treat with De Gaulle leaders traitors to their country."

General Charles De Gaulle, leader for the Middle East, General Edouard de Larminat, was sentenced in absentia to death only yesterday by a Vichy court.

The possibility still stood that General Henri Dentz, commander in chief and high commissioner for Syria, confronted by overpowering British-Free French thrusts through the mandate territory, might come to terms on his own responsibility.

London, July 11.—(AP)—An informed British source said today the British government replied to the request of High Commissioner General Henri Dentz for an armistice to end the Syrian war with a 10-point statement.

These points, as outlined by the source, follow: 1. Britain has no territorial demands on Syria or Lebanon, but wishes to insure that they are not used as sea or air bases against the British forces.

N. Y. BUILDING IS THREATENED

Strike Authorized By 4,000 Electrical Workers

By The Associated Press Officials of the American Federation of Labor Brotherhood of Electrical Workers had authorization today from 4,000 union members to call a strike in New York city which might halt construction on all buildings being erected in the metropolis.

No date was set for the strike, which union officials said would involve more than 250,000 building trades workers.

A strike of 60 AFL building and construction trades union members was called yesterday at a $2-500,000 naval ammunition dump being built 50 miles north of San Diego, Calif. A union spokesman declared the contractor had violated a verbal agreement regarding working conditions. He said wages and hours were not involved.

Seeking To Extradite Mother and Daughter

Raleigh, July 11.—(AP)—Parole Commissioner Edwin Gill said he would hold an extradition hearing here Monday for a South Carolina mother and daughter who he listed as Clio and Geraldine Good-year.

Gill said the two were charged under a warrant issued in Marion county, S. C., with murder in connection with the disappearance in 1935 of Bryce Goodyear, husband of Clio and father of Geraldine.

TWO BRANCHES UNABLE AGREE ON MAJOR BILL

Secretary Of Navy And Navy's Chief Of Operations Declared To Have Denied In Closed Session 'Line By Line' Reports That The American Navy Had Engaged In A Shooting War

Washington, July 11.—(AP)—Secretary Knox and Admiral Harold R. Stark voiced what were termed by committeemen "categorical denials" before the Senate Naval Committee today of published charges that the American navy had engaged in combat with naval units.

In a closed session lasting more than three hours, the Secretary of the Navy and the navy's chief of operations were reported to have denied "line by line" demands made in a resolution introduced by Senator Wheeler (D-Mont.) to know whether the navy had engaged in a "shooting war."

Shortly before Knox left the committee room, President Roosevelt said he would not be surprised if American steel had gone into 50 British bases and if American workmen all over the world were being paid by the British government.

And this, he said, was perfectly legal. One member of the Naval Committee, who asked that he not be quoted by name, said these denials were "categorical."

The outlook on the strike-control portion of the measure was more uncertain for the House on four separate bi-partisan roll calls yesterday voted down the anti-strike clauses which the House committee had substituted for those previously approved by the Senate.

All that was left in the dual measure when it finally passed, 345 to 17 was its first paragraph providing for mandatory deferment from military training of men who were 28 and older on July 1.

On this particular point the bill as it passed the Senate provided only that the President be given discretionary authority to defer men of such ages.

The House never had a chance to vote on any of the main sections of the Senate strike provision yesterday, all of the tests coming on the substitute reported by its Military Committee, empowering the President to order production resumed at strike-bound plants and to protect workers desiring to return to their jobs.

Democratic leaders predicted, therefore, that while the House appeared dead set against the substitute it might ultimately approve the Senate version or part of it, at least.

AMERICANS IN NORTH IRELAND Declared By Belfast To Be Engaged On Project

Belfast, Northern Ireland, July 11.—(AP)—Technicians and workmen from the United States are engaged on a construction project of an undisclosed nature in Northern Ireland.

In London, the Foreign Office said these Americans were "direct employees of the British government" and asserted that reports that the United States is establishing an air base in Northern Ireland "are not borne out by information available in London."

BRITISH CRAFT AGAIN ATTACK ITALIAN CITY

Naples Bombed By RAF For Second Straight Night

CHANNEL COAST CITIES ATTACK'D

Bad Weather Over Continent Interferes With Raids; German Night Raiders Again In Action

Rome, July 11.—(AP)—British planes bombed Naples last night, the second night in a row, the Italian high command announced, and caused "much damage to civilian dwellings."

Five persons were reported killed and 20 injured in the raid, which lasted nearly three hours.

London, July 11.—(AP)—British bombers last night attacked Cologne and other targets in the German Rhineland and blasted at Ostend, Calais and Boulogne on the Nazi-occupied channel coast, the Air Ministry said today.

Bad weather over the continent interfered with the raids and made observation difficult, a communique said, but large fires were reported started at several points in western Germany.

The British acknowledged that two of their planes had failed to return.

German night raiders meanwhile concentrated on England's north-east coast, authoritative sources said.

Some damage and a number of casualties were reported from one coast town, but the government said that elsewhere in the United Kingdom there was little damage and few casualties.

In the fiercest of air battles in recent weeks Germany lost 16 fighters and England 11 planes yesterday, the Air Ministry said.

Red warplanes were declared to have shot 58 German planes out of the sky, or destroyed them on the ground, compared with a loss of nine Soviet aircraft.

Silent on present operations, Hitler's field headquarters went back to the bloody struggle in the forests of Bialystok, reporting the conclusion of that conflict with the capture of 322,896 Red army troops, 3,332 tanks, 1,800 guns and an enormous quantity of supplies.

The Red air force was reported by Moscow to be blasting at northern and southern wings of the front where some sparks of blitzkrieg continued. In the Ostrov region to the north, Russian aviation was said to be smashing German motor and tank detachments seeking a breakthrough to Leningrad.

Guerrilla activity behind the German lines was meeting with success, the Russians said.

London Sees New Attack By Germans

Mighty New Nazi Offensive To Crush Red Armies Declared By British Circles To Be Under Way; Moscow Communique Indicates 20-day Old Blitzkrieg Stopped Cold

(By The Associated Press) Adolf Hitler's invasion armies driving eastward into Russia from Bialystok-Minsk sector have come to a standstill in several places, the official German news agency conceded today, while a Soviet communique implied that the 20-day-old Nazi blitzkrieg has been stopped cold.

At the same time, reliable sources in London said that a mighty new German offensive to crush the Red armies was under way. On its success or failure, observers said, may depend the outcome of the Russo-German war.

DNE, official German news agency, attributed the halt to the necessity of clearing roads littered with the wreckage of Red army machines.

According to previous reports from Vichy military circles, the German government has been virtually stalled for more than a week now, in sharp contrast to its hurricane sweep through the Lowlands of Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg into France last summer.

For the fourth straight day, Hitler's high command made no claims to new gains on the 2,000-mile front stretching from the Arctic shores to the Black sea.

The Russians indicated that the sting had been taken out of the Nazi blitz and that German legions were no longer attacking.

FUND FOR NAVY IS REQUESTED

Total Of $3,323,000, 000 Asked by Chief Executive

Washington, July 11.—(AP)—President Roosevelt asked Congress today for $3,323,000,000 in cash and contract authorizations for the Navy and Maritime Commission.

With a request yesterday for $4,770,000,000 for the army, today's figures struck a two-day total of $8,093,000,000 for defense.

Included in the $1,625,000,000 which Mr. Roosevelt sought for the navy in cash was $400,000,000 for maintenance and repair of defense installation in government or privately-owned merchantships.

Correspondents at once asked whether this meant that merchant vessels would be armed. Mr. Roosevelt assured his press conference that this was not contemplated and that the bulk of the sum undoubtedly would be used for naval ships.

He suggested it would be applied to such things as fitting vessels with equipment to combat magnetic mines. He added he supposed conversion of some private vessels to navy use as contemplated also.

Mr. Roosevelt sought $698,000,000 in cash and $1,000,000,000 in additional contract authorization for the Maritime Commission. He said the money would be used for a great many new ships, but did not disclose the exact number.

ready with bucket and belying pin to join in the fray—for Loxi Claiborne is no swooning ingenue but right handy in a brawl. The plug-uglies are on deck, taking further directions from the Master, who is by the camera on its platform. He is close enough to be heard easily without it, but the loudspeaker is on and through it his voice penetrates to every corner of the stage. Thus all, including visitors, may have a ringside seat on the Master's Mood.

The Mood, at the moment, is not pleasant. It is impatient, and the voice is barbed with irritation. From Olympus are hurled verbal thunderbolts at the humans below. The monologue, during rehearsal, goes something like this:

"You, Romanoff, are sprawled there—No! Not there—there! No, higher. Fall, now—No, no, no! There, that's it. And you, Mr. (Victory) Killian, over here—hold that thing (a forked spear) as if it were heavy—it isn't a toothpick, you know. Now, action."

Business of the scene, bodies sprawling, Paulette welding her weapons, DeMille again, irritation rising:

"No, no, no!"
To Paulette, his star, with sarcasm: "Darling, you must have been born on an express train! Take your time! Register! Let the audience see everything you do. I don't know how to get this through that skull of yours—unless I knock it in." Less truculently: "Unless I knock it in. That's a last resort—but it is a resort!"

Russian sources describe this as a Red army anti-aircraft gun on the Russo-German war front. This picture is another test transmission by radio from Moscow.

DeMille goes on, "Hurry—hurry—No, over here! Get up, Romanoff! no-o-o!" The gods are angry. Olympus rages. DeMille is making a movie. Later today, the Mood will change. DeMille will be gentle, gentlemanly, witty. He will be the kindly genius, and he will send the sunbeams floating down from the august heights. It is the old DeMille act. He has used it always—to get performances from his people, they say. He will get a performance from Paulette, too.

Interesting Gallery Exhibits. The Greenville WPA Art Gallery is very fortunate in having some unusually interesting exhibits for the summer months. They are now showing a combination of three exhibits, a collecting of sculpture and wood engraving are on view in the gallery on the second floor of Sheppard Memorial Library. These works of art have been assembled by the exhibition section of the Work Projects Administration. A special exhibit of children's paintings from the North Carolina schools is being shown in the art classroom of the WPA Art Project in the basement of the library. This exhibit has been assembled and will be circulated next winter by the North Carolina Federation of Women's Clubs. Greenville is fortunate in securing it during the summer months when it can be kept for a longer period of time.

Small-scale symbolic figures and subjects from the animal kingdom have been chosen by the artists for the sculpture exhibit. Characters from popular literature such as the bird girl of W. H. Hudson's "Green Mansions," allegorical subjects such as "Peace" and the "Pioneer Spirit" and animal subjects that are imaginative and playful are representative of the work to be seen in the ceramics exhibit. The art gallery takes on the real museum atmosphere with this collection of sculpture. One piece of wood-carving which shows the process of cutting away the material is shown. This shows a good contrast with the building up process of the clay figures.

A set of wood engravings are shown on the walls of the second floor gallery. These prints are made from blocks of wood that have been engraved with metal engravers tools.

The set of children's paintings being shown in the basement classroom show the trend of the time in good art teaching. Original ideas, freedom of expression, originality of brush work and familiarity of subject matter have been stressed in this work rather than the making of a fine picture.

The public is invited to view all of the exhibits free of charge. They will probably be shown through the month of July. The art gallery hours are from 2 to 6 p. m., each day except Sunday. The gallery is open on Wednesday afternoons but is closed all day on Sundays.

Hollywood—DeMille has changed his costume, he has changed his title and picture, but he has not changed his "act".

The customary DeMillian boots and riding pants were abandoned when he began this one—he now works in mufti, with an eyeshade to complete the effect.

The picture this time is "Reap the Wild Wind," another swashbuckler with a Florida Keys setting in antebellum days. Paulette Goddard is the heroine, in curls and crimoline and Ray Milland, John Wayne Robert Preston, Raymond Massey are among the hovering males.

The act? Still the same DeMille routine, ever interesting to watch as today on a scene in Milland's boat, about to be invaded by ruffians with Shanghaiing intent.

The boat is in the studio tank with real waves rippling gently shoreward to merge with painted ruffians on the huge beach cyclorama—real as lie until a propan stands up midway, watching, and rests his elbow on a wave.

Paulette is at her post on deck.

HEARTBREAK HONEYMOON

By WATKINS E. WRIGHT

YESTERDAY: Henry Pell is a nice young man, but susceptible. And Luella Pell is a good wife and quite his equal. But right now Henry is doing well in a good job in New York, and is trying to write songs for his old flame, Marie Mason, on the side, and is seeing a lot more of Marie than Luella likes. Marie helps it along by hinting that Luella is a drag on Henry.

writer. She's got Henry all up in the air—no pun intended—and he's just big enough in some ways to want to have a try at being that Number One writer of songs.

"I wonder if he's in love with Marie—still," said Luella. "Or, perhaps it's the life she lives, the excitement, that appeals to him. The way she gets him into an atmosphere he's never known before."

She paused, was thoughtful for a moment. "Maybe he should have married Marie after all. Maybe he oughtn't to have rushed into marrying me until he had come up here, worked awhile as a bachelor, and seen a lot of Marie. What do you think, Tommy?"

"I wouldn't know," said Tommy. "But I do know that if you were my wife, Luella, things would be different for you—for us both. Have you forgotten what I said to you on Rector's yacht; about maybe it was you I'm in love with?"

"Let's not talk about that, Tommy," Luella said uneasily. "One of the men in that book I told you about, said almost the same thing to one of the married women in it. They got terribly involved before the final chapter."

"Drat your old book!" said Tommy.

"The dratted thing does haunt me now and then," said Luella. "But, maybe a book like that does some good, after all—makes wives stop and think."

"Well, to the devil with it anyway," Tommy said. "And now, much as I dislike the idea, I've got to be getting back to the office."

"It was fun seeing you, Tommy," said Luella, pushing back her chair.

"Fun is hardly the word, I'm afraid," said Tommy. "Regards to Henry," he added, as they went out. "We mustn't let him get the idea I'm a menace, or a friend in villain's clothing—although I'd sometimes like to beat him up for not appreciating you, Luella."

"Thanks," said Luella, trying to sound a lot more frivolous than she felt. "I wouldn't like that, Henry would look awful with a black eye!"

"Bye, Luella," said Tommy. "You're sweet—damned sweet."

Luella waved to him, and was gone—home to a waiting and hungry Henry, a man who looked as though he would take her in his arms, and then, for some unexplainable reason, didn't.

Suddenly, and without warning, there began a series of social events in the lives of Luella and Henry. During the next few weeks they were invited to two dinner parties, a theater party, and for a week-end visit to a charming little town over in New Jersey.

Henry's business associates, and their wives had come alive at last, Luella decided. And heaven knows it was time! Down where she came from, folks would certainly never neglect a pair of newcomers as the people up here in New York had neglected Henry and her.

They dined in the over-decorated Park Avenue penthouse belonging to a couple called Fran and Van, two amazingly good-looking young people who adored the opera and who kept referring to Lily Foss, John Charles Thomas, Grace Moore and others connected with the operatic world as though they were as thick as peas in a pod.

They saw a rip-roaring musical comedy as the guests of a couple called Fred and Mae, a forty-ish pair who drank too much, and were bridge crazy, speaking of winners and losses that made Luella gasp.

They had dinner with Pete and Sue in a pleasant small apartment in Jackson Heights, Pete and Sue being a couple in the middle-thirties who apparently got a tremendous kick out of each other and the joy of merely being alive.

Finally they spent on Saturday noon to early Monday morning in the Colonial house of a couple called Carter and Irene, two people who talked endlessly of golf and tennis, and the "pros" they knew personally, when they were not singing each other's praises.

Four couples who, Henry explained to Luella, were typically New York.

"All from somewhere else, just like us," he said, "and getting ahead in the world—that is, all but Pete and Sue."

"Aren't they getting ahead?" Luella wanted to know.

"I'm afraid not," Henry answered. "Pete's the one man in our organization who doesn't seem to be progressing. He's too easy-going, too well satisfied to have a fair-paying job that keeps him and Sue in the bare necessities."

"I thought they lived rather well," said Luella.

"Oh, I didn't mean they were poverty-stricken or anything like that," said Henry. "But they haven't got the push the other couples have. No vision."

Then he told Luella that he thought the best way to return the hospitality of the four couples was to have them for dinner.

"You know," he said, "one of those dinners like you had for Marie and Tommy."

"But won't it be rather crowded, Henry, having ten people for dinner?"

"We can manage," Henry said.

Luella glanced around. "People laughing and joking," she said. "Sometimes, I wonder if I'll ever laugh again, really mean it."

"That's no way to talk when you've got a man on your hands who needs cheering," said Tommy. "I asked you to meet me here because I felt you'd do me good."

Luella lifted her glass, and shrugged. "Only a matter of months, my life in New York," she said. "And yet there are times when it seems like an eternity. Married life, even when you're married to a man you've known practically all your life, can have endless difficulties."

"They say," Tommy remarked, "that the first year is the hardest, or is it the first hundred years? Anyway, maybe if you weather this first year satisfactorily, Luella, you will be all set for the other ninety-nine."

Luella leaned forward. There was great intensity in her face, and her unhappy gray-green eyes. "Oh, Tommy," she said, "what has happened to Henry and me? I can't put my finger on it. We were going along so happily, and all at once he's gotten to be almost like a stranger. I haven't been perfect, but I haven't nagged or anything like that."

"It's not your fault," Tommy said quietly, "so don't condemn yourself."

"Then, whose fault is it?"

"Henry's mostly, I think."

"How do you mean?"

"Do you really want to know, Luella?"

"Yes, Tommy, I do," said Luella. "I suppose it's awful of me to talk about my husband like this—to discuss him with you—and I hate seeming to be a whining, complaining wife, but—but—well, I've simply got to discuss him with someone, Tommy, or—or—blow up."

Facts about Henry

"Then discuss him by all means!" said Tommy. "Sure you don't mind if I'm pretty frank?" he asked, and when Luella said "no" as though she meant it, he went on.

"Manhattan's gone to Henry's head. It often happens with high-strung, ambitious young men—especially those who are impressionable, like Henry. They get the idea that they're going to be big shots overnight, and they forget all the decent human things. Henry's gone haywire over Marie and her work. She's made him think he can become radio's Number One song writer. She's got Henry all up in the air—no pun intended—and he's just big enough in some ways to want to have a try at being that Number One writer of songs.

"I wonder if he's in love with Marie—still," said Luella. "Or, perhaps it's the life she lives, the excitement, that appeals to him. The way she gets him into an atmosphere he's never known before."

She paused, was thoughtful for a moment. "Maybe he should have married Marie after all. Maybe he oughtn't to have rushed into marrying me until he had come up here, worked awhile as a bachelor, and seen a lot of Marie. What do you think, Tommy?"

"I wouldn't know," said Tommy. "But I do know that if you were my wife, Luella, things would be different for you—for us both. Have you forgotten what I said to you on Rector's yacht; about maybe it was you I'm in love with?"

"Let's not talk about that, Tommy," Luella said uneasily. "One of the men in that book I told you about, said almost the same thing to one of the married women in it. They got terribly involved before the final chapter."

"Drat your old book!" said Tommy.

"Well, to the devil with it anyway," Tommy said. "And now, much as I dislike the idea, I've got to be getting back to the office."

"It was fun seeing you, Tommy," said Luella, pushing back her chair.

"Thanks," said Luella, trying to sound a lot more frivolous than she felt. "I wouldn't like that, Henry would look awful with a black eye!"

"Bye, Luella," said Tommy. "You're sweet—damned sweet."

The Man Who Guards Our Route To Iceland

ADMIRAL ERNEST J. KING—Tough? Don't fool with nitroglycerin!

Back in 1901 when handsome, very serious Ernest King of Lorain, Ohio, was graduated from the Naval Academy, his Lucky Bag recording was:

"Temper? Don't fool with nitroglycerin!"

Now rated the toughest sea dog among the navy's high ranking officers, 62-year-old Admiral Ernest J. King commands the United States forces which guard the Atlantic all the way to Iceland.

The tall, sneaky leather-faced King is no "apple polisher" for navy brass hats. His assignment to the critical defense outpost caps a career of outstanding command performance, particularly in the aircraft and submarine services.

Qualifying as a naval aviator at the age of 43 and holding a succession of 24 commands, he is said to have done more in perfecting the tactical value of aircraft to the fleet than any other man in the navy. He has stressed the use of the navy air force as a powerful offensive—rather than defense—weapon of the fleet.

Prior to his aeronautical service, brilliant supervision of the salvage of the sunken submarines S-51 and S-4 won him the Distinguished Service Medal with Gold Star.

Old Eagle-Eye Ernie, as they call him in the navy, drives his men and himself at a hard pace. Many a junior officer has cussed him as an "unreasonable, hard-bitten, son of a sea cook." Most of them admit, however, he would be a handy man to have around if trouble were brewing. A high ranking officer, who has had considerable service with him says: "King's a pleasant gentleman ashore but a tough hombre at sea. Determined and a very quick thinker in an emergency, he has what it takes to command a fleet in wartime."

As commander of the patrol force (the Atlantic fleet) he directs the operations of 180 warships. The exact makeup of the Atlantic fleet is now a strictly confidential matter. Some time ago it comprised three old battleships, a few cruisers, many destroyers and speedboats and some long-range bombing planes together with other aircraft.

Admiral King saw service in the eastern Atlantic waters during the World War when he was assistant chief of staff for Admiral Henry T. Mayo, commander-in-chief of the United States fleet. For that service he was awarded the coveted Navy Cross.

Six feet two inches tall, fairly broad-shouldered and slim waisted, King is an imposing figure in full naval dress and a breast load of decorations. He is the father of six girls and one boy. Dancing with one of his daughters, he appears as sprightly as a young ensign. He likes golf but is fussy about the most minor rules of the game.

Strength For The Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

A FABLE ABOUT FROGS
A Russian author, General Krassnoff, in his book "The Unforgiven," tells a fable of two frogs. They fell by chance into a crock full of cream. One frog who was a pessimist, immediately exclaimed, "I'm done for," and sank to the bottom of the crock. The other frog, determined to last as long as he could began forthwith to work his legs.
The next morning, exhausted but still alive, he was sitting on a lump of fresh butter.

This fable teaches us that people are more often differentiated from each other by will power than they are by intellect, wealth, or heritage.
The people who, when they find themselves in some difficulty, cry out, "I'm done for," usually are,
they sink to the bottom, and the world notes another dead frog. But there are some people who will not have it so. And these people generally end as the frog did, exhausted perhaps, but safe and sound on a lump of fresh butter.

Most success stories are stories about frogs who insisted on kicking their leg instead of going to the bottom. Most people who make outstanding successes in life are people who reach positions of distinction, not so much because of pull,
family background, or even brains,
but because of an unwavering determination to achieve in life regardless of difficulties.

Chief of Police George Clark has announced that in the future his officers will give strict enforcement to the parking ordinances in our downtown business section. Strict enforcement of all the traffic laws including that which prohibits children under 16 years of age from driving would be much better. Traffic laws are but measures for the public safety and rigid enforcement of all our traffic laws both in the cities and on the highways would go a long way toward reducing the present far too great accident toll in this state.

Congress has again turned thumbs down on anti-strike legislation. We repeat, we don't see the fairness of drafting our young men into military service at $21 per month and at the same time letting laborers in vital defense industries who are drawing twice that much money each week tie up our whole preparedness plan by striking. If America is in earnest about this all-out defense program it must increase the pay of the military with capital, labor and every individual citizen showing a willingness to carry his or her part of the burden.

Of course there is no gag rule in democracy, and there is no desire to put on one,
but this country and the world at large might be better off if certain individuals in this country at this time would run out of breath for a while. Sure, we mean Wheeler, Taft, and others like them who apparently are

Washington Daybook

By Jack Stimpert

Washington—Our army in training may be as serious as all getting out, but it has its lighter side, too.
I've been plowing through scores
of "army camp papers"—dailies, weeklies and monthlies—everything
from mimeographed four-sheets,
to profit-making, printed dailies, with paid advertising. And I can report that most he-said-she-said-he-said jokes are the same old Joe Millers that were around when the boys floated off to Cuba and the Philippines. BUT funny situation humor is in the saddle and nothing funny happens that isn't given the green light for general circulation.

The army cartoonists are surprisingly good. The one from the Fort Niagara Drum showing an irate bandmaster, shouting at a rookie, playing the drums plenty hot and in the groove. "I don't care if Krupa does play it that way, you're in the army now." is national magazine stuff.
Another, from Army Times, shows
a befuddled trainee dashing about after taps and moaning to a lieutenant: "I know it's after taps, sir,
but I camouflaged my tent and now
I can't find it."
The Hickam Highlights, from Hawaii, and The Jungle Cat, publication of the 11th Engineers in Panama, have cartoonists who have caught the spirit of the tropics.
Most of their cartoons are sultry and although not too shocking for some of the sophisticated magazines
no fit subject for a family newspaper.

In the funny situation department:
The Dixie (Camp Blanding) reports that the 124th Infantry was delighted when Pvt. Thomas W.
Arseneau and Arvel Adkins joined up. The men had been animal trainers with Ringling Bros. & Barnum and Bailey's circus. Their first assignment was to tame the company's toughest sergeant.
Then there was the scornful advice of Corp. Chester Falls to a rookie who flinched every time he pulled the trigger in rifle practice:
"Stop trying to dodge that bullet, soldier! It comes out the front end, not the back."
Fort Dix, N. J., likes the story of the 60 nurses who had to don gas masks and walk through the gas chamber. The boys expected them to come out trembling, but almost to a woman they pulled off their masks to complain: "Gosh, doesn't that leave your hair a mess."

At Fort Bliss, one of the favorites is about the private (name withheld) who was on leave and wired headquarters: "Arriving El Paso, nine p. m. Have GI truck pick me up." The telegram, now in the camp files, bears the pencilled notation: "No action taken."
The Camp Custer News adds the story of the trainee who was operating a message station on maneuvers in Tennessee. It was "Missouri weather," the News reports, and along came "a junior cloudburst."
The trainee, seeking shelter, spied
a tent, ducked in and started wringling out his clothes only to glance
up and find himself face to face with the Major General.
There also was Pvt. Steve Kowach who humped off to Nashville on leave, went to a hotel and demanded the softest bed they had in the place. He got, for $2, found it was so soft he couldn't get to sleep and spent the night on the floor.
The Dispatch at Camp Roberts, Calif., tells of a private who had been in camp a month. Every night right after dinner, he went to barracks, undressed wearily and rolled into bed. He night, when his bunkmate was alongside, he said: "Say, Soldier, if we ever do have an easy

day, remind me to stay up and hear taps, will you?"
Then there was the private on K.
P., who asked by the "cookie" if he had ever had any experience
peeling potatoes, said: "Sure; I paid out a night club check that way once."

The stock jokes run to such things
as: "Sergeant—Where is the balance of your gun? Rookie—I tell you, Sarge, this is all they gave me."
And the one about the farmer who complained to the commander that he wanted his son sent home right away because he was getting soft from easy work and too much loafing.
That, in one form or another, has been used in nearly every camp.
American Legionnaires will tell you that it, like many others, was just as good 24 years ago. But so were a lot of those being told today by some of our highest-paid comedians
of radio, stage and screen.

Short Shots

By HENRY AVERILL
Raleigh, July 11—Rival politicians and a large number of political writers (including the conductor of this column) have indicated their opinion that Oscar Pitts, prison director, is almost everything except a gentleman and a cedar tree when viewed from a political angle.
He has been cussed for his political activities, denounced as a weed
feeling boss of no great stature, termed a meddler in things he has nothing whatever to do with, and generally given as thorough going over as the laundry does a dirty shirt.

Yet withal it is a noticeable fact that not one word has been said or written (so far as this correspondent is aware) questioning his ability and capacity in the state job he occupies.

That is something quite out of the ordinary. It is accounted for by the fact that Director Pitts has proved too often and too conclusively that he knows his duties and works at them in a fashion which many other state officials would do well to emulate. He may spend a lot of time on his politics, but so far nobody has ever been able to catch him neglecting his work in order to play that fascinating game.
Not only that, but there probably isn't a new man in Raleigh who isn't personally friendly with him.
He's easy to talk to, frank with his opinions and has never yet been accused of giving a reporter the good old-fashioned run-around. His statements, on or off the record,
can be accepted at full face value.

Pick Your Uniform (And Then Join Up)

Air raid warden's work uniform. Big pockets would make a handbag unnecessary, but think how they'll look full of comb, lipstick, keys, etc. Air raid warden would be directed by police in most cities.
Bertie Hill posed for these pictures.

Utility apron. Cute? Nobody knows what you're supposed to do when you wear this, but the insignia shows a woman towing a couple of children. Canteen worker's insignia shows cup of coffee and doughnut. Most proposed uniforms are blue.

—OR THIS?
Proposed for '41 air wardens

THIS—
Y.W.C.A. uniform, 1917

By AMY PORTER
(AP Fashion Editor)

Everybody loves a uniform—on a man.
On a woman—well, it depends on the uniform. Nobody thinks the uniforms the women wore during the World War are anything to brag about now. Distinctly hippy, bossomy, and bulky, they were. Voluminous skirts, reinforced by petticoats, reached the ankles. Square hats sat squarely on the head. High buttoned boots covered thick lisle hose.
Prospects are happier for this era's women defense workers. Six proposed uniforms, now under consideration by the Civilian Defense Council in Washington, all are in tune with current styles. The air raid warden's suit is a favorite with the girls who've seen it. Take off the "USA-CD" insignia, and you might easily choose it for your regular wardrobe. The utility apron is a glorified pinafore, with a nice neat waistline. You'd slip this on over any frock you happened to be wearing. The little starched halo hat that goes with it is in added attraction.
Nobody is sure, as yet, just what sort of work goes with each uniform.
Style-minded girls probably will pick the uniforms they like, then take whatever work goes with them.
Probably you'll have to buy your own outfit, but the cost will be kept as low as possible.

DEFENSE BOND QUIZ

Q. I would like to provide a regular income for myself when I retire.
Can this be done by means of the Defense Savings Bonds?
A. Yes. If you purchase a Bond for $37.50 each month, each Bond will mature in exactly 10 years.
Thus at the end of 10 years you will have $50 payable each month
as each of your Bonds reaches maturity.
Q. But I will need more than $50
a month.
A. Then you should invest a larger amount each month. Every $75
you put into Defense Bonds will pay you $100 ten years from now. Meanwhile, your money serves your Government during this period of national emergency.

Featherstun And Teller Turn In 13-5 Win Over Orioles

FIRST WIN IN TARBOROPARK

New Greenville Hurler Gets Credit for First Game

Bill Teller went to the relief of his roommate, Bloomy Featherstun, new Greenville hurler who has seen service in this league with New Bern and Kinston, in last night's game in Tarboro and the locals turned in a 13-5 win to sweep the series. It was the first game the Orioles have won in the Orioles' park.

Featherstun hurled one-hit ball but was generous with his walks and was relieved in the sixth. He got credit for the win, however, in his first game with the Orioles. Teller took over and finished the game without allowing Tarboro to threaten after the sixth.

The Orioles got their first three runs, in the initial inning, without benefit of a single hit. They made two more in the sixth.

The Orioles started off by scoring three in the first frame, added three more in the third and made one in the fifth. Tarboro pulled up a 5-7 count in the sixth, but were edged scoreless thereafter while the Orioles made four in the seventh and five in the eighth and a final tally in the ninth. Doubles were poked out by five Greenville players, Caraway, Crowe, Jenkins, Kracke and Pierce. Caraway and Jenkins got three for five and three for six, respectively, to lead at bat. Tarboro made five errors and Greenville two in the game which took more than two and one-half hours to play.

Today's Short Story
Feminine legs in London are being clad in stockings made of "seaweed silk"—produced from seaweed. One outstanding quality claimed is non-inflammability.

Parents Hold Lashley Quads For First Time

For the first time since the Lashley quadruplets were born in a farm house near Leitchfield, Ky., four months ago, their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Porter Lashley, were allowed to hold the babies in a Louisville hospital July 9. The infants, left to right, are John, Beulah, Mildred and Martine. Papa Lashley is building a special nursery and plans to take the quads home about three weeks hence.

Double-Daylight Time
London.—(AP)—Double daylight saving time, introduced to help speed Britain's industrial war effort, has brought prosperity to London's show business.

In the first week theaters, moving picture houses and greyhound race tracks did their best business of the year, since many put on evening performances for the first time.

It is about 25 years since daylight saving became law in Britain. The government adopted it as a wartime measure in 1916.

Carlsbad, N. M.—(AP)—For 18 years the fire department siren sounded, on the second, at high noon.

spread the word, when a flood threatened, that three dams might "burst loose any minute" and if they did the fire siren would blow.

Nathan Wright, the whistle blower, heard about it.

"We're afraid to blow the darn thing any more for fear folks will head for the tall timber without asking any questions," says Wright. "So until they forget about floods the siren will be silent."

Educational Meet Is Held At ECTC

Approximately fifty of the leading superintendents and teachers from the Eastern section of the state held a conference at East Carolina Teachers College today on Rural Education.

W. H. Cude of Colfax and L. S. Inscope, superintendent of Nash county schools, had charge of the conference and K. H. McIntyre presided.

The theme was the part the county units of the North Carolina Education Association must play in putting over the program of the N. C. E. A.

The program, in the main, was that announced before-hand except for a few changes in speakers, as follows: Mrs. Ruth Vick Everett, field secretary of North Carolina Education Association in Mr. T. R. Everett's place and S. C. Sealing of Guilford county for Supt. J. H. Rose. Superintendent L. S. Inscope talked on "Enforcement and Extension of Compulsory Attendance."

1941 Sales Cards Being Distributed

The Greenville Tobacco Board of Trade has had its sales card printed and Sales Supervisor Rankin today was distributing them in public places in preparation for the opening of the market on Tuesday August 26.

As announced yesterday, the split or half-day sales, system has been adopted for this season and sales will be held in each of the 10 warehouses daily.

The cards indicate the number of selling hours for each warehouse daily and farmers will be able to tell within a few minutes of the exact time their offerings will be sold at the time they put them on the floor. Blocks will not interrupt the sales card and every warehouse has a guaranteed sale each selling day.

Another rule adopted for this year provides that no tobacco will be weighed between the hours of midnight Saturdays and midnight Sundays.

A mother traveling by train or motor with a small child will certainly bless you if you give her a box of wrapped up toys, each marked for time of opening.

The Vocational Bible School of Mt. Calvary Free Will Baptist church has been very interesting to the children. New members are enrolled daily. Prof. Artstave gave a very interesting lecture on Obedience last Friday. Mrs. Maggie Woodard spoke Monday on Work While It Is Day. These lectures are most inspirational to instructors and children. Mr. Churchill Thomas, general supervising director, announces that the Bible school will close Wednesday, July 16, with a program at the church at night. Social Fete Held By College Group Members of the senior class majoring in elementary education who are doing their practice teaching and observation in the Training School this term and their critic teachers and supervisors had dinner together last night and had a delightful after dinner program.

The first part was a song fest and "Information Please" program held in the dining hall and the second part was a movie, "North Carolina as Vacation Land" shown in an auditorium in the Classroom building.

The leader of the quiz program was Miss Mamie E. Jenkins and the "experts," introduced as Mrs. Professor Quiz, Mrs. I. Q. Nottall, Madame Asket-Basket, and Mrs. R. U. Sure, were Misses Myrtle Ownley, of Elizabeth City, Ruby Lucas of Goldsboro, and Maywood Wagner of Virginia. The quiz was on Mother Goose rhymes, characters in children's stories, children's poems, and familiar songs.

Dr. B. B. Brandt managed the movie.

Miss Doris Coates and a planning committee of students had charge of the affair. The committee was composed of Misses Caroline Pollock of Trenton, Hazel Baker of Snow Hill, Maywood Wagner of Virginia, Nyda Robinson of Clinton, Edith Ausley of Micro, and Audrey, of Mount Olive.

EVERY COUNTY HAS A FBI MAN

At Least One Volunteer Operator In Each Unit

Reflector Bureau
By HENRY AVERILL
Raleigh, July 11.—In every North Carolina county the FBI has at least one volunteer undercover operative, usually more, who is constantly on the lookout for subversive agents and saboteurs.

In many counties of the state there are Legion "minute men" sworn in as special deputies armed and ready to aid the sheriff or other law enforcement officers on instant call.

A large number of North Carolina counties have civic defense groups, made up of representatives of various groups and organizations operating under direction of an American Legion county defense chairman.

Bryce P. Beard of Salisbury, department chairman of the American Legion's defense committee, told the Raleigh Legion luncheon club these facts in a more or less detailed report to Department Commander Roy L. McMillan on the defense group's activities.

Mr. Beard was here for a meeting of the official state defense committee, headed by Colonel W. J. Harrelson of State College. Colonel Harrelson, himself a legionnaire, attended the luncheon at which Mr. Beard spoke.

The Legion set up its defense committee shortly before the High Point convention last year, then Department Commander June Rose selecting Mr. Beard as chairman. He served through the administration of Dave Hall of Belmont and will probably be continued in the post of Mr. McMillan.

Beard said the plan for enlisting volunteer aides for the FBI proved so successful in North Carolina that it was copied in all other states.

Here's how the system was set up. Mr. Beard appointed a county defense chairman in every county. Each of these chairmen in turn selected a "G-2" (intelligence) operative, upon whom the FBI called for recommendations for volunteer operatives. The name calls were made on the sheriff's chiefs of police and county board chairmen. From the recommendations, submitted by these men (made independently) the FBI selected and named such volunteer operatives as it thought best qualified.

Not even the G-2's and others who did the recommending know whether or not the men they recommended were chosen.

But, says Mr. Beard, these volunteer FBI operatives are on the job in every North Carolina county.

The "minute men," Beard said, were set up when it appeared that there would be no state or federalized home guard to take the place of the state's National Guardsmen as they were called to active ser-

OPPOSITION TO APPOINTMENTS

Talk Even Heard Of Abolishing Cosmetic Board

Reflector Bureau.
By HENRY AVERILL
Raleigh, July 11.—Practically every major or minor appointment by Governor J. Melville Broughton has provoked an angry reaction somewhere; and his recent naming of members on the cosmetic art board is no exception.

So strong is the resentment in some quarters that there is talk of a fight in the 1943 legislature to take appointive power away from the governor or, if this isn't possible, to abolish the board altogether. This talk comes, too, from cosmetologist circles, and not from outsiders.

Cosmetologists, in case you don't know it, are beauty shop operators and operatives. Like so many other quasi or pseudo-professions they have succeeded in having a regulatory board set up with all kinds of powers. Theory, of course, is that regulation is necessary for health reasons. Actually it makes good jobs for a few and permits the 'ins' to keep some of the 'outs' out of the business.

Objections to the Broughton appointments are based primarily, on the fact that the governor is declared to have acted contrary to the usual procedure which calls for ap-vice. These volunteers were sworn in by the various sheriffs and have since been ready at a moment's notice to give their help to law enforcement officers in time of need.

In cities and counties where home guard units have since been set up, need for the minute men is remote and units have not been kept together, but in others where there are not home guards, they still are prepared to go on the job as quickly as their name implies.
