Matsuoka, Who Effected Pact With Russia After Axis Treaty Concluded, Not Retained As Member

Tokyo, July 18.—(AP)—Prince Fumimaro Kono... formed a streamlined cabinet today with himself again as Premier...

Yosuke Matsuoka, who concluded the neutrality pact with Soviet Russia after aligning Japanese policy with the Axis as foreign minister in the preceding Kono... government.

He was succeeded by a prominent naval expert, Teijiro Toyoda, whose foreign policy outlook is little known.

The Chinese press at Hongkong said that the chief motive of the reorganization was to tear up the neutrality agreement with Russia.

The Japanese press forecast a considered, cautious foreign policy unaffected by the cabinet changes. Toyoda had been Minister of Commerce and Industry in the second Kono... cabinet, which resigned two days ago.

U. S. Shipbuilding To Be Stepped Up

London, July 18.—(AP)—The United States is going to build enough ships to bring goods into the United Kingdom and into every theatre in the world where democracies are fighting Hitler.

The Greenville Board of Aldermen, in a special session last night called by Mayor B. B. Sugg, unanimously went on record to cooperate fully with the suggestion of President Roosevelt and Gov. Broughton to adopt daylight saving time in behalf of national defense.

The board instructed the mayor to issue a proclamation calling for the adoption of the new time scale for all municipal employees and urging various business and industrial concerns to fall in line.

MAP CAMPAIGN FOR ALUMINUM

J. B. Kittrell, who on Tuesday was named county chairman of the campaign to gather all available scrap aluminum to be turned over to the government for use in the defense program, declared today that prompt action was necessary and because of this fact he had appointed the various committees without first having contacted the individuals named.

Mr. Kittrell declared that his first reaction was to reject the job because of pressing personal business, but added that when the importance of the campaign and the necessity for speed were pointed out he accepted, feeling that other citizens in the county would respond to a call to cooperate to the fullest extent.

In naming the various committees, Mr. Kittrell said he purposely picked busy men "because I wanted to be sure the job was done well." He urged the chairman of the several committees to start outlining their plans at once and contact other members of the group and start arranging to collect aluminum.

The sole purpose of the campaign is to collect as much scrap aluminum as possible and as quickly as possible, he declared. He asked that anyone willing to aid in the campaign and not named for any specific duty, call his office—2322—or the office of J. H. Rose—3721.

The list of committees follow: Publicity—Representatives of the press. Radio—Ralph Deal, chairman; J. C. Lanier, Charles Bisette. Transportation—John Clark, chairman; Ty Wagner, C. K. Beaty.

Roosevelt Asserts American Policy To Defend Iceland Is Backed Up With Orders To Provide Adequate Protection Against Attack Or Threat Of Attack; Further Troop Movements Not To Be Revealed, However

Washington, July 18.—(AP)—President Roosevelt declared today it was the policy of the United States to defend Iceland and also to afford protection for the American garrison in the North Atlantic island.

Therefore, he told a press conference, it is what he termed ABC stuff to keep open the sea lanes to Iceland. The orders, he said, are to provide protection against attack or any threat of attack.

Mr. Roosevelt discussed the Iceland situation in response to this question: "What is being done to keep the sea lanes to Iceland open?" He referred reporters to his message to Congress notifying it that American forces had entered the island and said that message was perfectly definite and clear and nothing really need be said further.

He said it was felt by all military authorities who have the best access to information and knowledge of defense needs of the nation and hemisphere that the possible occupation of Iceland by an unfriendly power would be a serious blow at national and hemisphere defense.

So it is necessary, he continued, to help keep out any hostile power by the occupation of Iceland. That occupation has been partially completed, he said, but he is not going to tell of future movements of troops.

In other words, Mr. Roosevelt declared, authorizing direct quotation "I don't think it's right that I should pull a Wheeler."

Senator Wheeler (D-Mont.) in a statement of administration foreign policy, had said ahead of official announcement that American forces would occupy Iceland. His statement drew criticism both in this country and in Britain.

Czechs Join Side Of Soviet Russia

London, July 18.—(AP)—Czechoslovak military units, operating under the Red army high command, will fight against Germany, it was agreed in a mutual aid and support treaty signed by representatives of Soviet Russia and the refugee government of Czechoslovakia at the Russian embassy here today.

Pledging support "in every way agreement provided for an exchange of ministers and was effective immediately after signing and not subject to ratification. The military units are to be formed with a commander appointed by the refugee government, it was said.

Shipment Is Made By Red Cross In County

The garments are destined for war relief, with emphasis being placed on Great Britain. The garments included knitted sweaters, shawls, dresses for women and children and layettes.

Extended Service

Washington, July 18.—(AP)—President Roosevelt disclosed today that he would send to Congress next week a message urging extended service for selectees, reservists and National Guardsmen. He spoke to a press conference of the necessity of avoiding complete disintegration of the army and said that the burden was very definitely on Congress. Service of these men is now limited to one year. Asked whether he would recommend also that draftees and guardsmen be authorized to serve outside the Western hemisphere, he replied in the negative.

OTHER POWERS SPECULATE ON JAP SHAKE-UP

U. S. Sees Prospect Of Increasing Tension In Pacific

BERLIN CIRCLES HAVE LITTLE SAY

One London Spokesman Sees Move As Swing Away From Axis Influence Toward Purely Japanese Policy

Washington, July 18.—(AP)—The formation of what appeared to be strictly a "war cabinet" in Japan held the prospect today of increasing tension in the Pacific, but whether it presaged an immediate military move remained uncertain here.

Officials withheld comment on the new predominantly military government under Premier Prince Fumimaro Kono... until closer analysis of all its membership.

Two members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee—Chairman George (D-Ga.) and Senator Connally (D-Tex.) declared that the cabinet shake-up may foreshadow some Japanese action against Russia.

A similar view was expressed by Chairman Reynolds (D-N.C.) of the Senate Military Committee. Reynolds told reporters he believed the cabinet overhaul means that "the militarists are going to have control in Japan and that they probably will start an attack against Siberia."

The North Carolina senator said he saw no way by which the cabinet change could result in better Japanese-American relations.

Berlin, July 18.—(AP)—Authorized German sources were guarded today in comment on the shake-up in the Japanese cabinet, but one spokesman left the implication that "the beaten Soviet army" presented Japan with pressing problems.

Asked what problems confronted Germany's Far Eastern ally, the spokesman said "they are obvious." He said Japan was seeking a "concentration of power."

London, July 28.—(AP)—At first glance, the Japanese cabinet revision appears to be a swing away from Axis influence toward a "purely Japanese policy," a well posted British political source declared today.

He emphasized, however, that this did not necessarily mean a policy favorable to British interests.

Wage-Hour Restitutions Voluntary, After Checkup

Reflector Bureau. Raleigh, July 18.—Most restitution payments for wage-hour law violations are "voluntary," but made after inspection by enforcement officers have shown they are due, it appears from statistics on the first six months to 1941, issued today by Commissioner of Labor Forrest Shuford. The figures show that for the period a grand total of $299,142.82 was made in restitution payments in North Carolina—divided as follows: Voluntarily paid was the result of inspections in which violations were found, $163,044.30 to 7,826 employees; voluntarily paid to employees as a result of AD-85 procedure, $83,554.00 to 3,141 employees; and result of legal action by Regional Attorney D. Lutz McBryde, $52,142 to 2,266 employees. These restitutions were made to employees working interstate commerce or in their production of goods for interstate commerce who were not paid the minimum wage of 30 cents an hour and overtime compensation at one and one-half times the regular rate for hours worked in excess of 40 hours in a week. The Shuford figures showed that since the North Carolina Department of Labor took over sole responsibility for enforcing the Fair Labor Standards Act, restitutions were one hundred per cent greater in the two months preceding the signing of the state agreement conferring this responsibility. Cases closed in the six months numbered 968, of which 539 were on complaint and 429 were routine. Complaints were received against 51 establishments for the first time. Complaints were received from employees, former employees, competitors, trade associations, labor organizations and others.

Mediation Board Seeks Peace In Bendix Strike

Dispute Certified To Board By Labor Department

(By The Associated Press) The National Defense Mediation Board today took over attempts to settle a strike at a Bendix, N. J., factory where six men were injured yesterday in a flare of violence on the picket line.

In certifying the dispute to the Mediation Board, the Labor Department said CIO workers at Air Associates, Inc., were demanding a union contract and reinstatement of men allegedly discharged for union activity.

The union started picketing the plant last Saturday. When a group of workers attempted to enter the plant at the start of the day shift yesterday, men and women who were gathered about the gate showed the workers' automobiles with red rocks. Police dispersed the crowd with tear gas.

The firm has defense orders for aviation equipment.

Nazis Claim Advantages In Fighting

German Report That Gigantic Battles Developing In Her Favor In Contrast to Soviet High Command Statement That Soviet Armies Are Holding All Vital Positions on Eastern Front

(By The Associated Press) Rain drenched the bloody Russian-German war front today, threatening to bog down Adolf Hitler's mechanized armies at a critical moment in the 27-day-old campaign, but the Nazi high command asserted that "gigantic battles on the Eastern front are developing in our favor in all directions."

By contrast, the Soviet high command declared that, after violent all-night fighting, the Red armies were still holding all vital positions with "no sign of nine million men."

Dispatches from Berlin said German columns driving toward Leningrad, Russia's second biggest city, had captured a Russian airplane depot with 1,500 planes, and also seized 4,000 horses, 1,000 trucks and 1,000 prisoners amid heavy losses to the Soviets.

Beyond this claim, the Germans made no specific report of fresh gains, asserting broadly that a sweeping Nazi victory was "in sight."

Soviet dispatches pictured Red army troops as violently assailing the flanks of the German drive toward Moscow, offering suicidal resistance at many strong points behind Nazi spearheads and conducting a ceaseless guerrilla warfare.

A Soviet communique again spoke of heavy fighting during the night in the Bobruisk sector, on the south side of the Smolensk salient where the Germans have crashed through the center of the Stalin line.

It was in the Bobruisk area that Moscow reported Soviet troops had opened a powerful counter-offensive, hurling the Germans back across the Dnepr river for more than 19 miles.

The main fighting was reported by the Soviets still to be in the Smolensk area, 230 miles west of Moscow, in the Pskov-Porkhov section, 150 miles southwest of Leningrad, and the Volynsk sector, 430 miles west of Kiev.

In addition, the Russians said serious fighting again had developed in Bessarabia. A German report from Bucharest said the Bessarabian capital, Chisinau, had been occupied by German and Rumanian troops.

The Germans pictured Kiev as short of its last protective fortresses, many of which were reported destroyed by suicide squads hidden in three-story deep subterranean vaults.

Board of Aldermen
The Board of Aldermen held a special meeting Thursday night for the purpose of electing a member to fill the vacancy in the Fifth ward, for reconsideration and addition of special license taxes, and appoint committees. All the members were present.

The tax on peddlers of clocks, stoves and ranges was stricken out, the state revenue act making no provision for this.

The tax on stock brokers and dealers in future contracts was reduced from $1,000 to $100.

The tax on itinerant oculists or opticians was changed from $15 per day to $25 per year.

The tax on buyers and pinhookers placed at $10 per year, and on option buyers at $10 per year.

Vendors of lemonade and other cold drinks on the streets were taxed $5.00 per year.

You just can't count on the weather, so had as well take it as it comes along. We've seen it dry, we've seen it wetter, we've seen it hotter and we've seen it colder than it is now.

Hollywood

By Ruth Gordon

Hollywood Preston Sturges tells us "Sullivan's Travels" isn't a satire on Hollywood. And of course it isn't—it's about a highly successful comedy director Joel McCrea) who has selected one outfit (in the script) "Oh, Brother, Where Art Thou?"
They won't let him do it, because he knows nothing of trouble or sorrow, so he goes out in search of trouble. What does he meet? Veronica Lake. But he doesn't meet trouble. It runs away from him—until all of a sudden he finds himself sentenced to the chain gang of a far-away state. Of course that's not satire, is it? It's just a pretty "silly" but Sturges hasn't yet made a movie that wasn't a check-ful of tongue.

Ruth Gordon, distinguished in "Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet" and "Abe Lincoln of Illinois," will work with Garbo in that new movie comedy... Boudoir hint: Lupe Velazquez has velvet white satin retreat, has two to be—one black, one white—for her black and white Chihuahua... George Murphy, who had about given up hope of getting another dancing role in movies, gets one in "Panama Hat" with Ann Southern—he's leading man, too.

Regis Toomey, now coming back strong, used to be a leading light of early talkies. Then Hollywood began passing him by. In the slump, he set himself one rule to follow for a year.
"I'll never get anywhere playing in unimportant pictures," he said, "even if I get leading parts. I'll play anything—one day, two days' work, anything—in an important picture."

John Payne is to do that "Havana" musical for Zanuck... Conrada Heidt, the super-villain, is to return when he plays "Dr. Kildare" a visit as guest star... Odd title for missed him, and cracked her nose against his. Make-up covered.
When I know it's my own test, she says, "I'm too self-conscious. When I know it's for someone else, I'm at ease."

MODES of the MOMENT

This woman's flowers-and-candy days happily are not over. She dresses smartly, wearing this pastel shantung shirtwaist frock for warm days. An admiring family sends her flowers for little occasions, sometimes surprising her with flowers by wire. Corsage of white and purple iris.

Fluffy ruffles cotton playsuit, very becoming to movie actress Priscilla Lane, who models it. The stripes, shading from beige to brown, run diagonally on the bra top and puffed sleeves. The full skirt has a shirred elastic waistband.

er: Betty Grable came out of a love scene with him—with a black-and-blue nose. Plunged herself into his arms for "A Yank in the R.A.F." and cracked her nose against his. Make-up covered.
When I know it's my own test, she says, "I'm too self-conscious. When I know it's for someone else, I'm at ease."

The U. S. Navy expects to be able to turn out 7,000 full-fledged pilots a year by the end of 1941.

Man About Manhattan

By George Tucker

New York — On paper, the American Concert Association seems just like any other musical organization, except for this fact—back of it stands a thoughtful young man who has found how to make cultural entertainment pay.

He is Reed Lawton, baritone, who is turning to account his experiences and observations in Italy, in France, in Germany, and in those other continental centers where so many Americans, for generations have gone to study opera.

The study of opera had travel is expensive. It is prohibitive when a world is at war. It shuts doors even to those who have the means for leisurely study.

Lawton's idea was to open new doors—not to ancient European halls but to new eager American audiences—and it works like this:
1. In forming the American Concert Association he gathered to himself a wide range of notable talent—the Westminster choir, for instance; the duo pianists Fray and Braggottli... He got John Tyers, the baritone; he secured the services of the Edwin Strawbridge ballet, and Henrietta Schumann, pianist... He secured many others.

2. Next, he went into the towns of the East, the South, and the Midwest. He set up organizations in each of those towns, sponsored by civic authorities and the leading citizens, the bankers and the ministers.

3. These organizations each arranged a series of three concerts. The concerts were $1 each. The tickets were sold in blocks of three.
4. Lawton's next move was a careful search for talent of a high order but which was unknown... He ferreted out those people who would have been spending their time and their money in European opera classes if war hadn't kept them at home.

These unknown artists, whose successes seem assured once they have found their way to the public, will receive the benefits of Lawton's association.

For instance: one of the concerts in each city will feature the famous Westminster choir. Another will feature one or more of these young, unknown artists. And Lawton himself will take over in the third.

Lawton's remuneration is determined in this manner. Suppose 700 blocks of tickets, amounting to $2,100, are sold in a particular town. The Westminster choir, in great demand, will have to be paid something like $1,500 for its single appearance. That leaves $600. Lawton then sends one of his accomplished young proteges, giving them entry to the public which they otherwise could not obtain. And instead of taking money for the privilege, he'll pay them, say, $200. That leaves $400. Well, that $400 is Lawton's, for he himself is the American Concert Association.

At the moment he has concerts arranged in 27 towns. Before the summer is over he is sure he will have at least 50 towns.
Not bad; not by any means.

HEARTBREAK HONEYMOON

Yesterday, Henry and Luella Pell are, through Luella will not admit it, on the verge of separating although they have been married only a year. Marie Mason is the cause of Henry's backsliding—and Tommy McIntyre, who had been in love with Marie, would like to make it up to Luella if only she would let him. But she will not.

Chapter 20 Marie's Trip

"May I come up for a few moments?" Tommy asked, when he brought the car to a standstill in front of Luella's house.

"No, Tommy," said Luella. Then suddenly: "Tommy, I've got an idea!"

"What about?"

"About you and Marie," said Luella. "Why don't you go away for a while? Take that vacation you've been planning—go down to Florida to that cottage you told me about."

"Are you, by any chance, trying to get rid of me, Luella?" Tommy asked, half joking, half serious.

"No, but maybe if Marie suddenly realized that you'd gotten out of the picture, so to speak, she would begin to understand how much she really needs you."

"I see. There might be something in it, but I can't get away now. That's impossible," Tommy grinned.

"Besides, I still remember how your other idea ended—you know, that proposal on shipboard in the moonlight."

"Yes, I know," said Luella. "Well, get away when you can. I think it's the thing to do. Meanwhile have an honest, out-in-the-open, heart-to-heart talk with Marie. Tommy, maybe if you'll try real hard we can get things straightened out as they should be." She tried to smile. "I mean, you back with Marie, and Henry back with me."

"I've tried to talk to Marie several times," said Tommy. "But she's always busy. I tried last night. I telephoned on Friday because I knew it was one night she was usually free. But she was at home."

"She's probably week-ending with some of the radio officials."

"No," said Tommy. "Her maid said she had taken a plane for Chicago."

"Chicago?" said Luella.

"Yes," said Tommy. "She gave Luella a searching look. 'She's week-ending out there. Is there anything wrong, Luella?'"

Luella shook her head. "No, Tommy," she lied. Marie week-ending in Chicago. Thank goodness, Tommy didn't know Henry was out there. There also, she managed a feeble smile. "Thanks, Tommy, for a grand time. I think I'll go straight to bed. The salt air makes you sleepy as well as hungry."

"We'll have a lot of grand times together," Tommy said, "if you only give the word."

"Good night, Tommy."

"Good night, Luella—dearest," Tommy said very softly.

Luella turned away, fighting back tears, fighting the ache in her heart, and hurried inside.

Ticklish Spot

Out in Chicago Henry Pell was facing Marie Mason in a secluded corner of a hotel mezzanine.

"It's fun being here together like this, isn't it?" said Marie. "Exciting—sort of—of—devilish."

"Yes, Marie," said Henry, "but I—you see—"

"Is anything troubling you, Henry?" Marie asked, eyeing him closely.

"No, only—"

"You mean you're sorry I flew out here to see you?"

"No, it's not that exactly. It's only that I hope no one sees us together. They might not—well—understand."

"And suspect the worst?" said Marie. "Thank the worst and tell Luella?" She shrugged. "Listen, Henry, darling, we're strictly modern, you and I, and you mustn't feel guilty, as though we'd been caught down home together. After all, we're grown-up, and—"

"Oh, I'm modern enough," said Henry. "I haven't any old-fashioned ideas about people being scared stiff of the 'thou shalt not's'. What does bother me, though, is having Luella find out, and take it into her head to—to—do something extreme."

"Nonsense!" laughed Marie. "Luella's not an extremist—anything else but that! Besides, I did fly out here on business. That's true, isn't it?"

"Yes, Marie, I know. And it was swell of you to do it, especially when you have to be back in New York Monday for your broadcast. But—oh, the devil! Are you sure, Alma Latham's about to land that job with Rector and Everett?"

"I certainly am!" said Marie. "Good heavens, Henry, you don't think I'd fly all the way to Chicago on a mere surmise or suspicion, do you? Malcolm Rector's in love with Alma—as I've told you before—and he's strong for giving her the job. He likes for women to justify their existence, and Alma knows this. So she's leaving no stone unturned. She's even playing up to Mr. Everett."

She leaned toward Henry, her eyes big and shining. "The moment I felt that your chances were slipping, unless you were on the spot, I called up your office. And when they told me you'd gone out to Chicago, and would be gone for a week, I simply went panicky. I jumped a plane, and came out. I couldn't write all I wanted to say, and yet I felt you should know exactly how things stood."

Henry laid his hand over one of Marie's. "You were sweet to do that," he said. "I appreciate it, but—"

"There are not 'buts', Henry," Marie interrupted. "You've got to get back to New York and sell yourself to Rector and Everett."

"I'm interested in that radio job, Marie, really I am," Henry said, "but I can't possibly get back to New York before next Wednesday. I have no earthly excuse for leaving here before the week is up. Besides there's plenty here for me to do."

"But you'll be back Wednesday, won't you?" said Marie. "You must promise me, Henry. It means so much to me—more than I can say."

"I'll do my darndest,"

"I couldn't bear having you not get that job," Marie went on. "There are so many things we can do together, and, as you said yourself, radio is the coming thing. Then there's television."

Henry smiled. "And what a lovely thing you'll be in television!" he said. Then, more seriously: "Maybe I could handle the radio as a sort of avocation. You know, hold on to the job I have now, and write songs as a sideline."

"You couldn't possibly do that," said Marie. "We'd never be able to get things done. You'd be pulled this way and that, if not by the realty job, then by Luella."

"Oh, yes, Luella," said Henry quickly. He stiffened. "Say, that looked like a man I know in New York."

"For Pete's sake, Henry, stop being so jittery," said Marie. "One would think you'd eloped with me—that you'd run off with a woman who'd broken up your happy home."

"That's just it!" said Henry. "Luella may get just such an idea. She—she—might even name you as co-respondent."

Delayed

Marie laughed. "Luella, naming a co-respondent!" she said. "Don't be absurd, Henry. If anyone ever names a co-respondent it will have to be you. Luella will certainly never do it."

"I'm not so sure," said Henry. "Sometimes those who seem to be the meekest or the most long-suffering are the very ones who raise the dickens when they're good and mad." He lit a cigarette, blew a smoke-ring. "With this new job hanging in the air, and me just trying to get somewhere in radio, I couldn't afford to risk a scandal. Nor could you, Marie."

"I'm not afraid," said Marie. "I know Luella better than you do."

"Yes? I wonder about that, Marie."

"She'll slip quietly away and weep," Marie went on. "but she will never have the courage to sue you, or name me or anyone else. Now, let's forget Luella, and go back to business."

"That suits me all right," said Henry. "I don't relish the idea of Luella slipping off somewhere to weep."

"You still love her?"

"I married her, didn't I?" Henry feigned. "Anyway I hate to think of her being hurt."

"Cautious man!" Marie teased. "Come on, let's forget business also for the time being, and go dancing." She got up. "I hear some marvelous music coming from the grill."

Henry took her arm. They went down the stairs to the main floor.

A few moments later they were moving, as one over the shining space in the grill room that was reserved for dancers.

Marie flew back to New York the next afternoon. Henry stood on the edge of the airfield and watched the plane that was taking her away. Her eyes a moment, felt a great wave of worry and uncertainty engulfing him. He fought it off with effort, and went to find a cab that would take him back to the city. There, he hoped, he would be able to stretch out upon his bed and do some clear and constructive thinking.

Luella, silently weeping, Marie, going places.

And Henry Pell. Well, what about Henry Pell?

Work piled on. On Monday there were endless details to be attended to. Tuesday there were more. Wednesday there were complications. Getting back to New York on Wednesday was out of the question. He couldn't make it on Thursday, either. It was Friday before Henry could manage it. Now, at last, he was on his way home. The train would be pulling into Grand Central Station in a short time.

He thought about Luella. He hoped she wouldn't feel too bad about his not having written to her. Now the station. Now a taxicab.

Atlanta.—When a man steps up and starts rolling toy automobiles around the bench in Atlanta's traffic court, it's not a game.

The rolling is done before the watchful eyes of Recorder Luke Arnold, who is convinced that his little automobiles help materially in reconstruction of an accident scene. Oral descriptions often result in confusion on the part of the witnesses to a point where no one can understand just what happened, Arnold points out.

A witness lines up the toy cars to conform with the situation he is describing. The next witness may shift the arrangement to fit his version of the story, but the chubby judge is confident that in the end everyone is better able to understand the claims and counter claims.

Raleigh, July 17.—North Carolina's sheriffs are going to relax and have fun at their convention at Elizabeth City, August 13 and 14 as well as attend to the business chores presented; it is made abundantly clear from the program released by John R. Morris of New Hanover county, secretary of the association.

Governor J. Melville Broughton will be the principal speaker. He will make his address at the banquet.

Strength For The Day

By FARI L. DOUGLASS

DIVINE PURPOSE IF CONSISTENT

What do men believe about God? Some believe that He made the world and went away and left it. He has no interest in our affairs, they say, else He would not allow things to happen that do happen in the world continually. There are others who believe that God both made the world and has power over it today, but they feel that this power is more or less general. Many people feel that while God has all power, He has delegated the operation of that power to impersonal laws, and these laws operate automatically. In the end, He will see to it that the working of the machine produces certain definite results which He wants to have occur, but in the meantime He leaves the details of life to the working of natural law.

Those deeply committed to the teachings of revealed religion believe that God's power is particular. The teaching of the Bible is that the power of God is particularly applied to every situation. To the smallest detail in the whole of His creation, He is guiding things toward a certain end. Behind all circumstances is a personal God exerting His power in a personal way. There is nothing general about Providence. God works toward definite ends in definite ways.

Washington Daybook

By Jack Stinson

Washington—America is seeing America as it never has before. The United States with the strings of a constantly tightening national emergency and the widespread fattening of pay envelopes, and you'll see why 1941 may be the greatest travel year on the books for some time to come.

There's no better pulse-taker of travel in the country than Thomas P. Henry, president of the Automobile Association of America. He gathers statistics from dozens of sources and this year he is able to toss them into the hopper and grind out the simple phrase: "Travel is booming."

Car registrations have exceeded late winter estimates. Gasoline consumption has soared to a new all-time peak. The national parks, Canada and Mexico are adding up seasonal records ahead of all previous years. And for further proof that America is on the go as never before, there is the record breaking routings handled by the AAA and other motor clubs.

Let's take a few of the state and city auto club reports, just to give some idea: Michigan, 38 per cent increase over last year; Philadelphia, Cincinnati, Norfolk, Cleveland and the states of Missouri and Rhode Island, approximately 20 per cent increase; Louisville up 38 per cent; the state of New York, 27 per cent; and California 32 per cent.

Canadian Figures Jump
The national park figures are slow coming in, but estimates for the first month or six weeks of the season indicate a 10 to 20 per cent visitor increase in all parks over last year's high figures.

D. Leo Dolan, chief of the Canadian Travel Bureau, reports that in one week, at eight Canadian entry points in New Brunswick, Quebec and Ontario, travel to Canada on 60-day permits, travel to Canada on 48 hours or less and did not have to have extended permits were not counted) increased from two to two and a half times over 1940.

In recent months I have had a number of queries from readers asking if it is possible to go to Canada while she is at war. According to Mr. Dolan, more than 14,000,000 Americans went to Canada in 1940 for stays of longer than 48 hours and restrictions are no different now than they were then. The same applies to Mexico. Because of some whimsy not yet made clear, travel to our nearest "good neighbor" to the south started off very slowly this year. For four months, it was no more than normal and a little under last year; but the next two months saw approximately a 30 per cent increase over last year's high figures. Since then, the flow across the Rio Grande and borders to the west is developing into a sizeable flood.

Take Your Choice
So there you have it. America is on wheels as it never was before. From Lake St. Jean to Acapulco, they are angling for quinine or red trout, or buying gardenias at a few cents an armload, or sending wish-you-were-here postcards to the folks back home.

The "good neighbor" boys in Washington have their own version of the travel to Canada and Mexico (and the rest of Latin America) but the travel experts here who take a broader view say it's just a simple case of restlessness and rising incomes.

The former always occurs in periods of great national tension. When money comes along at the same time, folks just have to get out and get going, whether it's to see the Gaspé, Popocatepetl, or to visit son John, who is earning his $21-per-as-trainee in Uncle Sam's own version of a blitzkrieg army.

ing about first ranking in the matter of running into mishaps. Two minor accidents have just been followed by one quite possibly unique. It's fan went completely haywire and cut through the radiator in several places, stranding the Governor and several companions the other side of Fayetteville for some time. . . . The North Carolina Employment Service reports that one of the finest labor organizers and crew leaders found during the 1941 crop season was a Negro woman whose energy, skilled in recruiting labor and ability to get work out of her crews were responsible for a large number of farm placements with potato growers. Her comment: From Florida on up to now in Beau- fort county I never does nothing "all I see is the employment office man."

Sideline observers are trying to figure out whether J. Paul Leonard, arch sale tax foe and executive secretary of the N. C. State Fair Tax Association is slipping or whether he's in better position than usual. He has sent out a circular letter to his members and in it does not anywhere ask for money. . . . He doesn't miss any chance to score state officials, however. "And as prices of many human needs advance, our own state government becomes North Carolina No. 1 profiteer because it demands the first three per cent cut on the increase price of everything" writes J. Paul.

Moonshine Crop — Pele Zarzoli scoffed last year at the prognostications of Professor Cotton Whitaker, an unofficial weather prophet of note who believes crops planted in the dark of the moon have greater yields than those planted in the light of the moon. A gardening contest was arranged. Zarzoli's crops, planted under a full moon, proved clearly superior to those of Whitaker, planted when there was little, if any, moonlight. In recognition of his ability, Zarzoli was made foreman of a WPA truck farm of 25 acres.

DEFENSE BOND QUIZ

Q. A large number of sales of Defense Bonds and Stamps are emotional responses to newspaper editorials or to speeches by famous men and women. Later, when the buyers cool down, will they not want their money back?

A. Results don't show this. The emotion which inspires the buying of Defense Bonds and Stamps is not fleeting. It is based on a determination to guard and defend the American way of life at any cost.
Q. Is a big sales drive in preparation?
A. No. Purchases are voluntary. There is no place for any kind of coercion in offering Defense Bonds and Stamps.

FSA Puts Boom Towns On Wheels And Auto Trailer Business Surges

Trailer homes on their way to Wilmington, N. C., where they were set up to house civilian workers in the shipyard.

By JACK STINETT

Washington — Stories about "trailer towns" have been popping up for years, but the Farm Security Administration has ticked off the greatest story of them all. It's connected with national defense.

Let's go back to the days of the "Okies," when FSA was under the guns and trying to provide "temporary shelter" for the migrant workers flowing back and forth across the land. The trailer offered a quick solution and, in a comparatively small way, it was put to use.

The problem had hardly been gotten in hand when along came national defense. Boom towns appeared overnight. There was no chance to provide adequate housing. Congress, in desperation, appropriated $300,000,000 for defense housing. Some of the problems could be solved by so-called "low cost housing projects," developed over a period of months.

But one problem was a stumper—the "stopgap housing," or temporary shelter—which would take care of a rapid influx of workers in communities totally unprepared to house even a 10 per cent increase in population—much less the two three or four hundred per cent increases that did result in some communities.

All Output Absorbed
The government turned to the only agency that had had any experience in this problem and FSA went all out for "mobile housing." This "mobile housing" has resulted in a phase of living which may hang on for many years. In an even dozen defense areas, FSA now has 3,179 trailers, housing from two to five persons, at rentals of from $6 to $6.50 a week. Not only is the total output of the trailer industry completely absorbed now but according to estimates here the output for the next six months is wholly contracted.

At the moment, there are camps of 200 or more trailers at Baltimore, Erie, Pa.; Ravenna, Ohio; Burlington, Iowa; Kingsbury-LaPorte, Ind.; Jacksonville, and Wilmington, N. C.; Nashville, Tenn.; and San Diego; and smaller camps at Paso Robles and Benicia, Calif., tory workers' incomes. Thus, the recession of 1937 played hobbs with the trailer industry and when the government went into the market with a wholesale demand, it found a very low supply.

Under the impetus of government demand, the trailer business is booming again, but whether it will last is another problem. "Stop gap" housing is just what the name implies and it doesn't last forever. Better methods catch up with it and make it obsolete.

Day after tomorrow, with low-cost, prefabricated housing supplanting the stop-gaps, the story of trailer towns of from 1,000 to 2,000 persons may be merely something with which bearded grandpas will bore or delight the children.

Greenies Hope To Play Martins In Williamston Tonight

NIP AND TUCK BATTLE WAGED

Training School, However, Comes Out With Win

The Greenies haven't played a game this week, rain last night again causing postponement of all games in the Coastal Plain loop.

If the weather permits, the Greenies will engage the Williamston Martins there tonight. Again, if weather permits, the Greenies will play at home tomorrow night, meeting the Martins at Guy Smith park at 8 o'clock.

The Greenies have not played a game since last Sunday, when the locals dropped their straight contest. The Greenies were defeated here 2-0 when errors accounted for the two tallies. Bill Teller who was on the mound for the Greenies allowed only one hit in the six innings he pitched. The game was short by rain and since that time more rains have kept the entire league idle.

And Thus The Streak Was Concluded

Joe DiMaggio, New York Yankee slugger, singled on the first ball pitched to him by Al Milnar in the first inning of a game with Cleveland on Wednesday to run his consecutive hitting streak to 56 games. Joe is shown sliding in home following Rossar's single. The Wednesday game ended the streak of consecutive hits, however, as the slugger was held hitless yesterday.

RANIS HOLD UP PLAY IN LOOP

Locals Scheduled To Meet Martins Here Saturday Night

Training School went back to its winning ways this morning by defeating the High School in one of the most interesting games played to date in the "A" league. It was a nip and tuck battle from the beginning to end, in the first Snag Clark hit for the circuit with two on base. High School came right back in their half of the same inning to score twice. The East Siders came back in the second to score twice and get the lead which they held until the fifth at which time High School went ahead with a two run rally. Training School tied the game up again by tallying once in the sixth and won it in the last inning with a three-run rally.

brilliant infield play of both teams. Brown and Musselwhite, the key-stone combination of High School completed two fast double plays that helped to hold the offense in check. Connor Merritt at shortstop featured for the winners. Snag Clark, pitching for the winners was very stingy with hits, allowing four but kept himself in trouble by his wildness. Merritt and Lupton of Training School led all their hitters with two hits apiece.
