JAPAN SUSPENDS STEAMSHIP SERVICE WITH U. S.

Moscow Acknowledges Nazis Within 50 Miles Of Kiev

INVASION NOW POSSIBLE British Invasion Is Being Widely Rumored

44 DAYS OLD
New Slaughter By the Thousands Claimed By Both Sides; Hitler's High Command Also Reports Success In Vital Central Sector Guarding Moscow; Counter Claims are Issued by Moscow

By The Associated Press
German troops, lunging past the bloody Zhitomir sector on the southern front, have advanced within 50 miles of Kiev, capital of the Soviet Ukraine, the Russians admitted today, while both sides told of new slaughter by the thousands in the 44-day-old struggle.

Adolf Hitler's high command also claimed new success on the vital central front guarding Moscow.

"The bulk of Soviet armed forces trapped east of Smolensk now have been destroyed. The remainder is facing dissolution," a German communiqué said.

Smolensk is 230 miles west of Moscow.

Nazi dispatches said 2,000 Russians were killed, thousands taken prisoner and 71 tanks captured in an untested northern area. This may have been the same action reported by the German high command, which said ten thousand Red army troops were taken prisoner west of Lake Pechip in Estonia, on the northern front below Leningrad, along with many tanks, cannon and supplies.

The Russians countered with a report that a Soviet tank column smashed through German forces near "T" town on the northwest front, killing at least 1,000 Nazi soldiers and littering the battlefield with the wreckage of more than 100 shell-torn tanks, armored cars and quantities of field artillery.

The Red army's report of the fighting indicated the fronts remained stabilized at the northern flank and near Smolensk, but acknowledged a two-pronged German thrust in the Ukraine.

Moscow had its 11th air raid of the war last night, but the Russians said few bombers got through and little damage was caused.

School Under Way For Bus Drivers

A school bus drivers school for drivers in this county got under way at Winterville this morning and will continue through Friday. Today, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday will be for white drivers, while colored drivers will attend on Friday.

A schedule has been worked out for the various schools, but sponsors declared that if a driver can not attend on the day designated for his school he would be admitted on any of the other days.

The school is being sponsored by the North Carolina Highway Safety Division and the State Highway Patrol, in cooperation with local officials, including the Board of Education, County Superintendent of Schools and the school bus mechanic, Ronald Hecutt, head of the state safety division, has expressed his appreciation for the cooperation shown by local authorities.

The school bus drivers school was one result of the investigation ordered by Governor Broughton following serious wrecks of school trucks and it is mandatory that every driver take the course. Substitutes also are required to take the course and pass the examinations.

G. W. Tomlinson of the safety division, was in Winterville this morning for the opening of the school. Patrolmen Teague, Hackett and Young also were attending the school. Mrs. Alice Elliott Futrell, also of the safety division, is expected to arrive later to take part in the work.

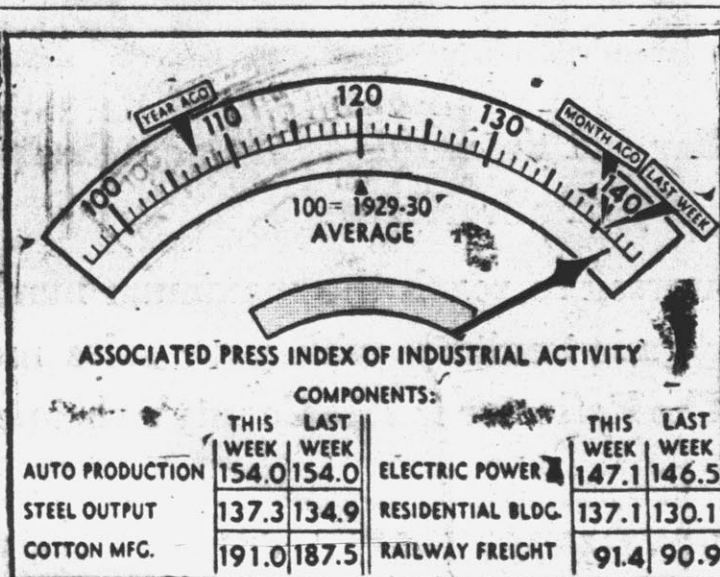

British Bombers

London, Aug. 4.—(AP)—British bombers pounded Germany and occupied France day and night over the week-end, carrying their heavy offensive to a peak with a Saturday night mass attack on Berlin.

There were no forays into western Germany last night.

Despite unfavorable weather, the raids last night carried to Hanover and Frankfurt, where industries and communications were the objectives, as well as to the docks at Calais.

A.P. Index Scores New High

The Associated Press Index of Industrial Activity scored a broad gain last week, rising to 147.1, a new record high, compared to 146.5 the previous week. A sharp expansion in residential building activity led the advance by five of the six index components.

Georgia Tobacco Marts Set To Open Tomorrow

MAD RUSH ON FOR SILK HOSE

Rayon Yarn Producers Operate Under Govt. Orders

Washington, Aug. 4.—(AP)—In the midst of a mad rush by the nation's women to stock up on silk hosiery, rayon yarn producers operated today under government orders to earmark 10 per cent of their output for silk users affected by a stop-production command from defense officials.

Purpose of the rayon order, the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply explained Saturday was to "avert complete dislocation" of the $250,000,000 silk processing industry and its 175,000 workers.

Hosiery mills will get 70 per cent of the rayon yarn set aside and the remaining 30 per cent will go to adjust hardships of present rayon customers or to manufacturers who had been using silk for other purposes than making hosiery.

Meanwhile, a bull market on silk sheathing for feminine limbs prevailed from coast to coast.

Managers of 12 New York stores said that last week's stocking orders had increased 200 to 500 per cent and that another two weeks would exhaust the reserve supply normally good for four months.

City May Not Have Christmas Lighting

Members of the Greenville Merchants Association are being asked by President T. E. Wilson to begin thinking of the possibility of dispensing with the annual Christmas street lighting this year as a means of conserving electrical energy in cooperation with the national defense program.

President Wilson points out that the trade promotion committee of the Winston-Salem Merchants Association has recommended that city not have its usual Christmas lighting this year and is asking local business men to consider such a move for Greenville.

$10 Contributed By Local Negro School

Professor C. M. Epps, principal of the Greenville colored school, has received a letter from State Treasurer George Ross Poul, head of the Old North State Fund to raise money to buy a flying ambulance for Great Britain, expressing appreciation for the $10 contributed by students of the Greenville Industrial High School.

The money was raised and dispatched to state headquarters before the local campaign got underway, but the county will receive credit for the advance contribution on its goal of $1,250.

Growers Cheered Over Guarantees By Government

Valdosta, Ga., Aug. 4.—(AP)—Fifteen tobacco market towns in Georgia and two in north Florida were prepared today for the opening bids of the 1941 bright leaf selling season tomorrow morning.

The growers were cheered by federal price guarantees of profitable averages.

Volume and quality were slashed from last season. Bad weather conditions, disease and pests combined to bring the Georgia production down to an estimated 50,000,000 or 60,000,000 pounds, compared to last season's almost 77,000,000 pounds.

The leaf being cured now, however, has good smoking quality, and there were indications the federally-supported price stabilization program would bring the yield very near to 1940's $11,000,000.

Half a dozen markets have established grading and sorting services, free to the farmers, in a further effort to reduce the element of chance in disposing of the luxury crop.

Stations Closed, But No Gas Saved

By The Associated Press
A writer of sectional reports, in the absence of any official judgment as to the success or failure of the eastern seaboard's first gasoline curfew last night, appeared today to boil down to these points:

1. Virtually all service stations from Maine to Florida (except for half of New York's independents) complied with Petroleum Coordinator Harold L. Ickes' request to close from 7 p. m. to 7 a. m. daily as a national defense measure to conserve gasoline.

2. The day time sales of gasoline everywhere along the eastern seaboard exceeded the total volume of an average August Sunday's day-time sales.

3. Traffic was just as heavy and in many places heavier than usual during the afternoon hours.

In New York city the chain stations closed promptly at 7 p. m., but about half of the independents, which constitute 50 per cent of the city's total, remained open.

At Least Some Relief From Saturday's Rain

Rain late Saturday afternoon brought at least some relief from the current hot spell and the mercury dropped to a low of 71 degrees yesterday. It was the first relief from the hot, dry spell in a week.

Reports That Britain Will Open Northern European Front—Possibly In Finland—Unconfirmed But Continue To Go Unchallenged By Officialdom; Editorial Comment Lacking On News Stories

London, Aug. 4.—(AP)—A flood of reports—unchallenged officially—persisted today that Britain would soon open a northern European front, possibly in Finland, while Germany still is heavily engaged with Soviet Russia.

The press carried reports from Goteborg, Sweden, that a large British naval force already is in the Arctic.

Editorial comment was lacking on this score, but the Daily Express printed what is called "stories of Axis fears" from points as far apart as Finland and Iran under the heading:

"All the Axis is asking where we will invade."

Britain is known to have prepared a shock force for an amphibious drive against the continent, but there was no confirmation of the current rumors in any London column.

Naturally, a foe is not tipped off to such an operation. The fact this dispatch was permitted to move through the stringent British censorship might mean the British felt that enough currency to rumors of such an operation might serve to divert considerable German strength.

British said today obviously an invasion undertaking could best be attempted the farthest distance possible from the Nazi air force and near occupied territory in which resistance to German rule is believed to be gaining.

This led neutral observers to put their finger on northern Finland as the most likely spot, possibly near Petsamo and Rybachy peninsula, at the northernmost point of the Russian-Finnish frontier. Petsamo is Finnish; the Peninsula Russian. On the west is Norway.

Final Rites Held For Simpson Man

J. R. Vick, 56, died at his home in Simpson at 3:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon, after several months' illness. Funeral services were conducted from the home this afternoon at 5 o'clock (EST) by Rev. W. A. Crow, Methodist minister of Grimesland, and buried followed in Grimesland, and burial followed in Simpson.

Mr. Vick was born, reared and spent his entire life in Pitt county. He was a member of the Salem Methodist church in Simpson.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Fannie Vick; one half-sister, Mrs. Rachel Taylor of Chocowinity, and three nieces, Miss Louise and Miss Verna Mae Deener, who have been living with Mr. and Mrs. Vick, and Mrs. J. L. Boyd of Grimesland.

May Poll Merchants On Thanksgiving Day

The Greenville organization, along with other Merchants Associations throughout the state, probably will be polled some time in the near future regarding the observance of Thanksgiving Day.

President Roosevelt has announced that after this year he will adhere to the traditional last Thursday in November. Upon taking office Governor Broughton announced that he would proclaim the same day for North Carolina as the chief executive proclaimed for the nation.

It has been suggested that all local Merchants Associations be bulletined to ascertain if the state organization should ask Governor Broughton to issue his proclamation in November. Upon taking office Governor Broughton announced that he would proclaim the same day for North Carolina as the chief executive proclaimed for the nation.

Hull Back At Desk
Washington, Aug. 4.—(AP)—Secretary Hull returned today to the State Department and reported himself fully recovered from a mild illness that had kept him from his office for two months.

TAX BILL VOTE IS PREDICTED BY NIGHTFALL

Record Measure Raises Three And One-Half Billion

MAY ELIMINATE JOINT PROVISION

President Seems To Have Strengthened Chances For Eliminating Provision For Joint Returns

Washington, Aug. 4.—(AP)—Passage by nightfall of the $3,529,200,000 tax bill, stiffest in national history, was the goal of House leaders today, but President Roosevelt appeared to have strengthened chances for elimination of the provision requiring all married persons to file joint income tax returns.

In an 11th hour appeal to the House Ways and Means Committee, made public Saturday, the chief executive suggested three changes in the committee's draft of the legislation. One provision would exempt income actually earned by either husbands or wives, but the committee rejected all three proposals by "decisive majorities."

Nevertheless, informed legislators forecast that as a result of the President's action, the already strong opposition to the joint return provision could count on picking up additional votes.

Mr. Roosevelt also suggested committee revision of the excess profits tax so as to hit certain types of wealthy corporations harder and the lowering of existing individual income tax exemptions from $800 for single persons to $750 and from $2,000 for married couples to $1,500.

However, the House already has agreed upon drastic parliamentary procedure for consideration of the bill and this will preclude direct action on any of the President's suggestions. Under the rule adopted, the only amendments that can be voted on are those recommended by the Ways and Means Committee.

The only exception is the agreement for a separate vote on the joint return provision, but here the rule allows only acceptance or rejection, not modification, as Mr. Roosevelt suggested.

Axis Withdrawing In Tobruk Siege

Cairo, Aug. 4.—(AP)—Axis troops are withdrawing from advance positions in the siege ring they clamped four months ago around Tobruk, Libya, a British general headquarters communique declared today.

This, however, did not indicate lifting of the siege, nor any major withdrawal of the German-Italian forces from their re-won hold on eastern Libya.

The British have reported repeatedly in the past weeks that their hit-and-run night patrols striking out from Tobruk have failed to make contact with the besiegers and the latter, apparently, have decided that the siege can be held just as effectively without risking men in exposed outposts.

Attend Convention.
Chief George Gardner and Volunteer J. A. Joyner of the Greenville fire department left this morning for Asheville to attend the annual convention of the North Carolina firemen's association. They will be gone most of the week.

Jap Silk Unpacked In U.S. Factory

Miss Helen Gately, who also worked in the silk industry during World War I, unpacks raw Japanese silk in a Cambridge, Mass., factory as new silk regulations become effective, halting all but defense production.

Workers Ordered Back At Ordnance Factories

Encouragem't Noted In Weekend Labor Developments

(By The Associated Press)
American Federation of Labor unionists at four mid-west ordnance plants were ordered back to work by their officials today, after Saturday and Sunday "holidays" which a union chief described as occasioned by misunderstandings.

Members of some local munition plants in St. Louis, Kansas City and Plum Brook and Ravenscroft, Ohio, failed to report for work after the War Department notified them their overtime pay henceforth would be time and a half instead of double.

But yesterday, John Coyne, president of the AFL Executive Council for the building trades department, said the workers would be back on the job today in conformity with a July 27 agreement between his division and the War Department, making time and a half a uniform overtime rate for such unions.

Elsewhere, there were these weekend labor developments:

Tampa, Fla.—The Gulf Coast Metal Trades Council (AFL) ratified a two-year wage agreement covering 10 Gulf coast shipyards. The pact, subject to supplementary agreements between individual yards and their employees, would give the workers an average 10 per cent pay increase, making the basic wage for mechanics $1.07 an hour.

Newark, N. J.—Members of CIO's Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America, over-riding a secret ballot of last week, accepted a proposal by the Defense Mediation Board for a contract at the Federal Shipbuilding and Drydock Company, Kearney, N. J. The firm has $493,000,000 of war and merchantship orders.

Plans Discussed By Promotion Committee

Fall promotions were discussed at a special meeting of the Sales Promotion Committee of the Greenville Merchants Association held this morning at the call of Chairman L. A. Stroud.

Many plans are being made by the association's committee to stimulate trade during the coming months.

Filling Station Fire Early This Morning

The filling station located on the corner of Cotanche and East Fifth street was damaged by fire early this morning which is believed to have started from a short circuit in wiring in the ceiling.

The station, operated by Zeb Little, was declared by firemen to have suffered "quite a bit of damage" from smoke and water, but no estimate of the loss was made. The call came in at 3:45 from the Fire Points box and despite the early hour, a comparatively large number of spectators gathered.

NEW BUS LINES TO SERVE CITY

Franchises Granted For Operation Of New Lines

Greatly increased bus service for Greenville and other nearby towns has been provided under an order issued by the State Utilities Commission under which several franchises were granted.

The order provides that the new lines shall be put into operation 30 days after the granting of the franchise. The order was signed July 30, assuring the new lines within a month.

Paul T. Ricks was granted a franchise to operate a two-day daily service from Greenville to Bethel and to Roanoke Rapids via Hasell, Hobgood and Scotland Neck (the old Coast Line route).

The commission also indicated the granting of a franchise to the local firm from Greenville to Norlina via Pinetops and Rocky Mount upon compliance with certain requirements of the Utilities Commission.

The Carolina Coach Company was granted a franchise to operate from Wilson to Snow Hill and from Snow Hill to Ayden; and also a franchise to operate a line from Greenville to Bethel.

The Seashore Transportation Service, which already operates a line from New Bern to Vancoboro, was granted authority to extend its route from Vancoboro to Greenville giving the line the direct Greenville-New Bern route.

The Virginia-Carolina Coach Company was granted a franchise to operate from Greenville to Pinebluffs, also serving Bruce and Falkland.

President Off On Vacation Cruise

New London, Conn., Aug. 4.—(AP)—The White House yacht Potomac rode the Atlantic ocean today, carrying a sea-loving president on a vacation cruise.

President Roosevelt was free to get into old, loose clothes and a battered hat, and to fish, read or nap as he pleased.

The movements of the Potomac were screened in secrecy after the chief executive was piped aboard at the naval submarine base here last night and she sailed away for a week or 10 days on salt water. The White House had asked that press and radio refrain from reporting the boat's position.

A special train which brought Mr. Roosevelt from Washington to New London was moved to Boston and held there so he could hurry back to the capital should world events dictate that the cruise be cut short.

Step Viewed As Ominous In Far East

Some 600 Americans Stranded In Island Empire As Tokyo Orders Suspension Of All Direct Service With This Country; Complete National Economic Mobilization For Japan Predicted

By The Associated Press
Japan took an ominous new step in the Far East crisis today with the suspension of all direct steamship service to the United States, leaving some 600 Americans stranded in the island empire, reliable informants said.

Simultaneously, the Japan Times and Advertiser, organ of the Tokyo Foreign Office, said the Japanese government next week was likely to invoke a complete national economic mobilization to cope with United States and British economic pressure.

(By The Associated Press)
A British naval squadron including the 35,000-ton battleship Warspite was reported without confirmation today to have been sighted in the Gulf of Siam, presumably countering Japan's thrust into Indo-China and toward other bases within striking distance of Britain's great port of Singapore.

The Warspite, report, if true, would strongly indicate Britain's determination to meet the new threats to British interests with increased power.

The Warspite, which is actually in Asiatic waters, is the first capital ship the British Royal Navy has sent east of the Suez in many years.

While steamship departures from Japan were suddenly canceled, big Japanese liners in United States west coast ports prepared for speedy dashes home.

At San Francisco, the $15,000,000 Tatsumi Maru discharged the last of her $2,500,000 cargo of raw silk with emergency longshore crews working around the clock, rushed aboard 1,000 barrels of fuel oil and a balanced cargo, and sailed for Japan.

A Japanese tanker had previously sailed from San Francisco empty, the second to leave the United States without cargo.

At Seattle, the S. S. Hatan-Maru also piled her raw silk on the docks and was posted to sail as soon as loaded.

$212 Contributed In Drive To Date

John Mitchell, county treasurer for the Old North State Fund, stated today that only two canvassers have made complete reports to date. Both of these have exceeded their quotas and unofficial reports indicate that several others are approaching or have already passed the figure allotted them.

The Old North State Fund, a state wide organization, is composed of citizens of North Carolina who are giving of their time and energy in order that the State may present a fully equipped airplane ambulance to the people of Great Britain. (Continued on page six)

There will be a square dance in Grifton Tuesday night, August 5, sponsored by the Improve Your Health Club. A small admission will be charged. The public is invited.

Christian Science Service.

"Love" was the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Christian Science churches and societies on Sunday, August 3.

The golden text was from Zeph. 3:17. "The Lord thy God in the midst of thee is mighty; he will save, he will rejoice over thee with joy; he will rest in his love, he will joy over thee with singing."

Among the citations which comprised the lesson-sermon were the following from the Bible: "Trust in the Lord, and do good; so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed. The Lord knoweth the days of the upright; and their inheritance shall be for ever. They shall not be ashamed in the evil time; and in the days of famine they shall be satisfied." (Ps. 37:3, 18, 19).

The lesson-sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "God gives the lesser idea of Himself for a link to the greater, and in return, the higher always protects the lower. Love giveth to the least spiritual idea might, immortality, and goodness, which shine through all as the blossom shines through the bud. All the varied expressions of God reflect faith, holiness, immortality—infinitesimal Life, Truth and Love."

Library News

Shirer's Berlin Diary.

William L. Shirer, a Berlin correspondent of the Columbia Broadcasting System, has probably contributed the most informative and most analytical book on the World War II yet published. The diary form does not make it less interesting, rather more so for several reasons. The statement of facts in their proper sequence gives the reader a perspective not found elsewhere. And this form records the writer's impressions of the moment, thus giving those valuable first reactions which are said to be the best.

The book will have a wide appeal, for aside from being a war book, it is in a minor way a travel book of Europe, a treatise on transatlantic broadcasting, and a book of side glances of international figures in the political, newspaper and literary worlds. These short sketches of prominent characters include a splendid close-up of Hitler, converging in this one terse statement, "He cannot forgive a man who has crossed him, even in death."

Shirer offers in his book the first uncensored and intimate account of Germany in the Second World War. He is a keen, sensitive observer, and almost fearless. Though some may think he appears as a sort of a know-it-all, when they consider his advantages during those seven years (1934-1941) such knowledge as he manifests is to be expected. He seems to have been as neutral in his attitude and judgment as possible for one to be. And his criticisms of all the nations, including America, are definitely to the point and well-taken, though time will have to prove them correct. His position as American correspondent, therefore an outsider, observing Germany, England, France, Italy and Russia offers him a general understanding of conditions obtaining in Europe not possible to a native of any one of them.

In this book there is a definite attempt to analyze the German temperament. Shirer tries to explain how the German people can commit atrocities with such absolute nonchalance. He says after certain tragic incidents: "Just another example of that supreme characteristic of being unable to see for a second the other fellows' point of view... Just another beautiful example of Nazi hypocrisy." Again, he writes of the German's lack of balance, his bullying sadism when he is on top, his constitutional inability to grasp even faintly what is in other peoples' minds and hearts, his instinctive feeling that relations between two peoples can only be on the basis of master and slave.

Because of the above characteristics Shirer says the Germans are incapable of organizing Europe and will in the long run fail.

AMUSED MUSING—One, two, three is the count for this canny miss who already is getting her wardrobe ready for campus conquests. And one individualized combination for that wardrobe comes in this pleasant trio: a crimson pompadour hair band, heavily-fringed mittens, and shoe laces, all matching. They're all crocheted of cotton thread.

LEADER OF THE PACK TURNS HOME—Ken Weber's famous flattie Kemerick takes the lead in this trial run through the Santa Barbara, Cal., channel course. A flattie is sloop rigged, with flat bottom, straight sides and a centerboard.

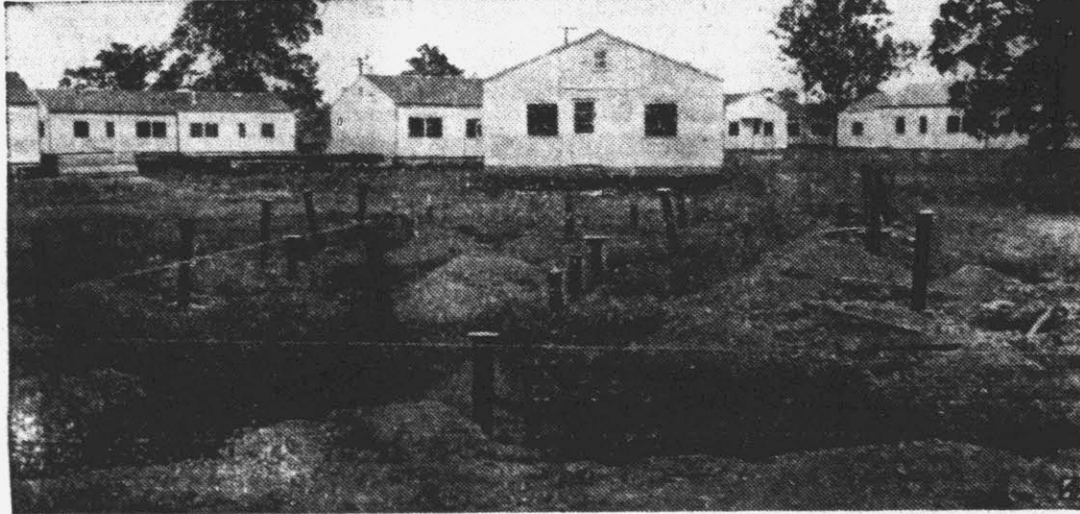

ROCKY ROAD—Solid granite had to give way at Gilead, Me., for this pipe line ditch, part of a 236-mile, $8,000,000, pipe line being built to carry crude oil from Portland, Me., to Montreal, Canada. Oil flow starts about Dec. 1.

BEANIE—Long fringe bobs are OK, if they're part of a pert beanie cap like this of green cotton crochet.

SAYS WHICH?—Belligerent Jimmy Dykes, whose friction with umpires enlivens Chicago White Sox games, ran true to form vocally in a Philadelphia golf match when Walter McGrath dared to question him about his score: it was 94.

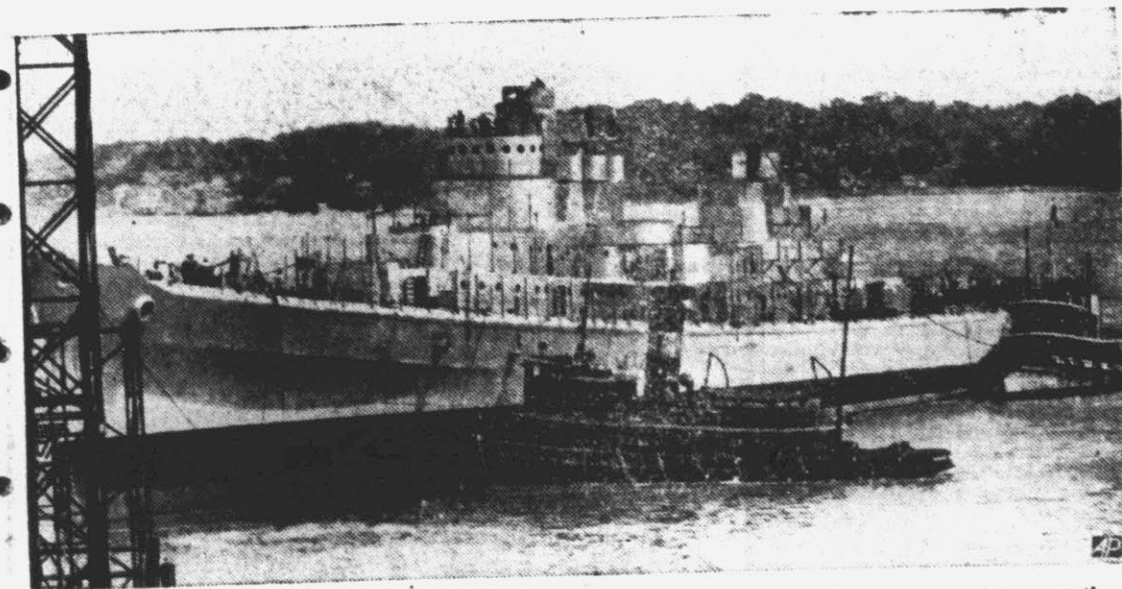

HOMES SPEED-UP—Prefabricated houses, part of a 650-structure project at Indianhead, Md., will soon cover these pilings. The houses can be quickly assembled and dismantled.

THRESHING CREATES DEMAND—Given a 30-day furlough on petition of 57 Monroe county farmers who needed his help with threshing, Pvt. John V. Prochaska (on tractor) of Hollo-way, Mich., is due back at Fort Sheridan, Ill., on Aug. 16. He's with the 210th coast artillery. Above, he finishes at Farmer John Cilley's, and cases threshing rig away from straw stack.

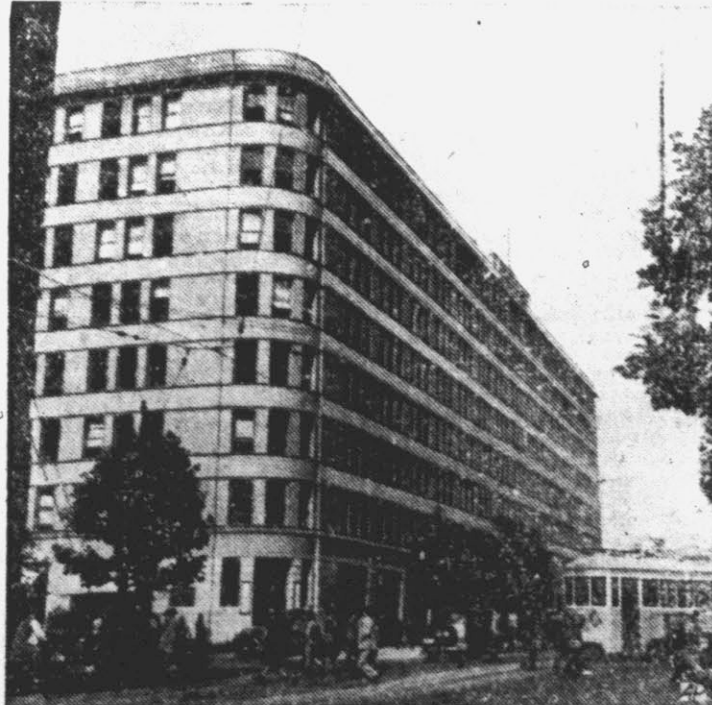

INSIDE STUFF—Intently a workman files the end of 12 3/4-inch pipe, before welding, on the $8,000,000 Portland, Me., to Montreal oil pipe line being built. Overland pipe route will save tankers' 12 days' passage in the St. Lawrence.

Strength For The Day
By CARL L. DOUGLASS

SUGAR-COATED REALITY
A euphemism is a figure of speech, by which a word or a phrase, more agreeable or less offensive, is substituted for one more accurately descriptive of what is meant. In other words, it is an attempt to make an unpleasant truth appear pleasant.

We create euphemisms to shield us from disconcerting realities. If we want to dress up an evil act in a good name, we can always do so. We can always find something that will spare our feelings, save our self-respect, no matter how mean and unworthy our conduct may be. People lie and call it diplomacy; they steal and call it shrewdness; they refer to adultery as love, and to avarice as ambition. They lose their tempers and call their uncontrolled passion righteous indignation. They hate people of another race and call it patriotism. They storm at other men's religion and call it fidelity to their own faith.

All these things involve the skillful use of euphemisms. We will not face our sins and shortcomings and call them by their real names. We refuse to recognize that wrongdoing is most accurately designated by the word sin, a little one-syllabled word with the significant letter "i" in the center.

When we sin, we avert our faces and try to think up some good, plausible euphemism. The ugly fact is too bitter to swallow without a thick sugar coating.

Word now comes from Vichy that Marshal Petain declares he is willing to give up his popularity for the salvation of France. Just what this statement means, the world is waiting to find out, but the United States was exactly right in advising the Vichy government that this country would countenance no further giving-in on the part of France to the Nazis. It is essential for the safety of the Western Hemisphere that the French colonies on the west coast of Africa are not made jumping-off places for the Nazis and the United States is not going to sit idle and see them fall into German hands.

The eastern seaboard might soon face gasoline rationing, but the best way to avoid the invocation of such restrictions is for every motorist in the affected territory to voluntarily cut down the use of gasoline to minimum requirements. If the shorter filling station schedule does not accomplish the desired savings in the fuel, we may rest assured that more drastic steps will be taken.

Saturday afternoon's shower, though brief, was a welcome respite from the heat wave under which local citizens had sweltered for eight days in a row.

Local tobacco growers who might be contemplating taking some of their tobacco to the border markets for next week's opening will do well to change their minds and hold their offerings for the opening of the local markets three weeks hence. Not only will the growers save the extra cost of transporting their tobacco the greater distance, but at the same time they will be aiding the campaign now on to curtail gasoline consumption in the eastern states.

Washington Daybook
By Jack Stinebaugh

Washington — Young America is a great deal more patriotic, more intelligent, better informed and less rebellious toward laws laid down for it than young America was in World War I.

That conclusion can be drawn from some figures from the Department of Justice.

After approximately 10 months since the first selective service registration, the department tells me it has had 20,000 complaints of violation of the selective service laws. There have been 226 individuals convicted and there are 365 persons awaiting trial.

If these seem startling figures, just compare them with Maj. Gen. Enoch Crowder's report on the draft in World War I. Fifteen months after the first registration then, 474,861 "draft dodgers" had been reported; 67,838 men had been apprehended and sent to camp or to prison; and still there were 295,184 cases on the books for the Federal Bureau of Investigation to ferret out.

Editorial campaigns and word-of-mouth battles, pro and con, were waged against "slackers" (men who failed or refused to register); "delinquents" (men who didn't answer their questionnaires or report for physical examinations); and "deserters" (men who refused to obey or ignored orders to report for induction).

As far as the public was concerned, they were either "slackers" or "draft dodgers" and for the most part were considered just a step below a worm. It is particularly significant that although we are nearing the one-year mark for selective service today there has been hardly a mention of "slackers" and "draft dodgers."

Big Round-Ups.
In the spring and summer of 1918, when the World War I draft law was only a shadow older than the present one, the FBI was conducting "slacker raids" in key industrial centers. The first was in Pittsburgh in March. So successful was it in netting draft dodgers, similar raids followed immediately in Chicago and Boston. Seven hundred "deserters" were picked up in the former city and 800 in the latter. But the daddy of all such raids was held in New York, Brooklyn and Jersey City between September 3 and 5. In those three days more than 50,000 men were examined or rounded up for questioning. When it was all over, 16,505 "draft dodgers" either had been packed off to camp or were held for trial.

All of this happened in a period when only 10,640,846 men had registered for the draft, compared to approximately 17,250,000 who have registered today.

Aside from the fact that World War I was a shooting war and this, so far, isn't for the United States, draft evasions follow pretty much the same pattern. Most delinquencies arise from ignorance of the law or simple indifference to it. One fellow investigated recently was in jail and didn't get his mail; another was snowed in and couldn't report for induction; another moved and failed to leave a forwarding address; a fourth just wrote his board: "Dear Local Draft Board No. — I never saw anybody go to so much trouble to make mass-murderers of us. Love."

When finally caught up with he said he was just "having some fun" and went along to camp meekly enough. Another said he didn't believe in the statute and "there isn't anything in America worth fighting for anyway." And so it goes.

Most Of It Unnecessary.
It causes a lot of grief for the FBI and the Department of Justice, but their only complaint is that most of it is unnecessary. Strict compliance of willing youths with the law would cut the delinquencies to an insignificant number. If the reported delinquents, who really are without blame, would report to their boards or the FBI as soon as they discover they are on the trouble list, it would cut that number in half.

But even as it is, it appears that the youngsters of today are smart enough and sufficiently on the side of selective service so that the government will never have to stoop to the World War level of putting a $50 reward on the head of every draft evader.

Short Shots
Raleigh, Aug. 4 — While conceding that there is a much greater degree of editorial agreement among North Carolina papers than is usually found in any similar number of publications, your reporter has been strongly impressed with the absolute unanimity with which the press has lashed out at the stand taken by U. S. Senator Robert R. Reynolds on measures backed by the Administration during the present crisis.

It is possible that somewhere there has been an editorial voice raised in agreement with his isolationist views; but if so it has escaped this corner's notice.

All the critics are not of the same degree of bitterness. Many, if not most, concede the virtue of sincerity to the Buncombe county product; but some go even further in castigating of Bob's motives than did Secretary Stimson when he jumped on Senator Wheeler's postal card campaign among the draftees.

There is ample evidence, too, that the newspaper view of the Reynolds attitude is shared by an overwhelming majority of everyday citizens on the street. This is, indeed, of much greater significance than the press views; because the reelection of President Roosevelt in 1936 and again in 1940 was each time accomplished in the face of an overwhelming preponderance of hostile editors.

All of which makes it fortunate for Bob that he does not come up for renomination next year, as does Senator J. W. Bailey. The latter, from all signs, is gaining in public opinion by reason of his wholehearted support of the Roosevelt foreign policy. Reynolds, in 1942, would be a pushover; Bailey now looks like a shoo-in.

MADE UP TO KILL
by Kelley Ross

Chapter Seven
"Author, Author!"
"No," said Detective Peterson. "Troy doesn't know anything about it at all. And that's about as far as I've got on this case. Troy was talking to the checkroom girl all during the second act intermission. I checked on him as soon as I saw him in your apartment this morning."

Jeff's mouth fell open. "Checked up on me? Why?"

"Because," Peterson said, "you look like the type that would poison a girl."

Jeff stared at him speechless and then at the rest of us for reassurance. We couldn't help laughing. It felt good to laugh.

At the wall mirror Jeff inspected his face minutely, as though he had never noticed it before. He rubbed his chin. "It's because I need a shave. I always look like the killer type when I need a shave." His confidence in himself seemed to have been restored.

"Peterson," Bowers said, "what is this Lee Gray business about?"

The detective smoothed open the paper that he still held in his hand. "We found this note in Carol Blanton's purse. It seems to be a warning. It says: 'Meet me in front of the Broadhurst. I have got to see you right after the play. I can't tell you what this means.'"

It's signed Lee Gray. This Lee Gray might have known what was in store for Miss Blanton and this note might be meant for a warning. And then again it mightn't be. But I think it is."

I said sweetly: "Wouldn't it be a good idea to ask Carol who Lee Gray is?" After all, it was sent to her; she's the one who's likely to know."

"I'm going to ask her, Miss Rogers. Just as soon as she's able to answer."

We all turned at the creaking of the door. The man who stood there seemed to me the tallest man I'd ever seen. His parents, I thought, inately must have been Basil Rathbone and a skyscraper. Perhaps it was partly because he was thin and long-necked and held his head so unbelievably high that he seemed so towering. He had brown hair and heavy-lidded eyes that were speckled colored, like tweed, and his mouth was thin and unpleasant.

"Mr. Morris, isn't it?" and I felt a nervous little tingle that was quickly followed by a surge of disappointment.

So this was our author. This was England's pet playwright. I hadn't expected him to look like that. He was a thin, pale, slightly forced politeness as Bowers introduced us all to him. The smile didn't make him any prettier. Bowers ushered him into a chair and held out a chromolite cigarette box. Taking a cigarette, Morris glanced at the brand and pointedly replaced it. His eyes roved the room and stopped at the doorway.

"Mr. Peterson?" Somehow he managed even when he sat, to give the impression of looking down on the people standing around him. "Peterson of the police. It was you who shattered my ears with a telephone call at ten this morning."

Peterson nodded. "Thanks for getting here."

"I was coming regardless of your request. It's a coincidence, I assure you. Now what is this about someone besides the entire audience, I mean?"

We sat in startled silence. Phoebe turned sharply, her eyes blazing, to start at him. Even Peterson was stopped by the colossal rudeness of this man who sat smiling, apparently oblivious of the shrapnel he had burst at us.

In a voice not quite level, Bowers said, "Carol Blanton was poisoned last night on the stage. There was morphine in the glass she drank from."

"Blanton? Which one was that?" "The little girl who played Dina."

The Great Man
A shade of something that might have been annoyance swept over his face. "That's really too bad. She seemed to have some idea of what my play was about."

Peterson had had enough of that. He stood in front of Morris and, with both hands in his pockets, seemed to be potting a shaking finger in his face. "Who is Lee Gray?"

Morris lit a cigarette that he extracted from his pocket and smiled through a cloud of smoke. "I see. The direct method. Well, Lee Gray is that the name? Sorry, Mr. Peterson, I've never heard of her."

"We could hear Phoebe catch her breath. 'Of her? Of her, did you say? Is Lee Gray?'"

Peterson was eyeing Morris curiously. "Yes. It's a woman. The handwriting is definitely feminine. How did you know, Mr. Morris, that Lee Gray was a woman?"

Morris was annoyed. "I choose my pronouns at random, Mr. Peterson. The name Lee is a very common female name in England. So common that I shouldn't think of knowing anyone by that name."

"Is this your first visit to America?"

"Are there people who come here twice?"

From the way the detective looked at him then I could tell he would not be inviting him out for Sunday dinner. Daggers were beginning to shuttle between them. "I'd like you to stay in New York until we get this business straightened out, Morris."

"Sorry. I have other plans."

"What other plans?"

Morris stood up. "I will not be asked rude questions by stupid policemen."

"What other plans?"

Bowers was between them. "Surely, Mr. Peterson, you're not trying to connect Mr. Morris in any way with what happened here last night? He only arrived in New York late yesterday afternoon."

"That was in plenty of time."

"He's had absolutely nothing to do with this production. He's never seen Miss Blanton, nor any of the people connected with Green Apples, for that matter, before last night, isn't that right?"

"I assure you," Morris said in a smiling voice, "that if I had, my play should have been very differently cast. And I suspected of having poisoned this Miss Blanton?"

Bowers interrupted quickly. "Of course not, Mr. Morris. It's merely—merely police routine more or less. Mr. Peterson has already established the fact that the poisoning was done by—by a member of our company and not by any outsider. That's so, isn't it, Mr. Peterson?"

Peterson nodded. "Right." He smiled complacently at our playwright. "However, Mr. Morris is not an outsider and I am including him in the company. He knew this play as well as anyone in the company. We know that it was possible for him to have been backstage during that intermission. I'm afraid, Mr. Morris, that right now you are as much a suspect as anyone who belonged backstage."

Morris seemed thoroughly amused. "Really, Officer, the only thing in which I'm interested is the theater. And the poisoning of one ingenue wouldn't help the American theater much."

"Apparently you didn't care for our production," Clint Bowers said. The deep hurt stood out on his face as he cut through his voice. "It got rather good reviews."

"And Mr. Bowers gives raves for his direction," Phoebe put in staunchly, but her lips trembled at the corners.

"Oh, was it directed?"

Carol Again
Hate flared in Phoebe's eyes as her face went white. The pencil she had been toying with cracked like a birthday party snapper in the silence of the room.

"Tell me, Bowers," Morris continued. "This Eve North. Why? Is she your mother?"

I could bring myself to look at Bowers then, or Phoebe, or anyone. All New York had been asking that question, I guess, but they hadn't used the word "mother." And no one had used it any place but behind Clint Bowers' back. When he spoke at last his voice was calm.

"I think that the critics were most unfair to Eve. She held the whole play together without starting herself. If at times she looked bad it was only to make some one else seem good. Eve North is the most unselfish actress I have ever known."

Morris shrugged. "Well, of course I hope you have a run. After all, it is my play, although I scarcely recognized it."

"We'll try to do better for you tonight," I said bitterly.

"Please do. Only not for me. I'm leaving for Hollywood on the five o'clock plane. They've offered me more money than I knew existed and, although I'm fairly sure I'll loathe it, I'm rather anxious to go."

"You'll stay in town," Peterson sounded like a burlesque on a tough cop, but he didn't look like one. "You'll do me that favor, Mr. Morris, so I won't have to go to the trouble of making you."

Morris looked at him through half-closed eyes. "Very well. Only I make one stipulation. I absolutely refuse to subject myself to another performance of Green Apples."

"You don't have to subject yourself to anything but New York."

The policeman flipped his hat on the back of his head and opened the door. Facing him was a pale little girl in a navy-blue suit and a turned-up hat.

We sat and stared at her as if she were a ghost. She put up one hand and grasped the open door but made no other move. Her eyes swept over the room. For a moment I thought that she would turn and disappear as suddenly and quietly as she had come.

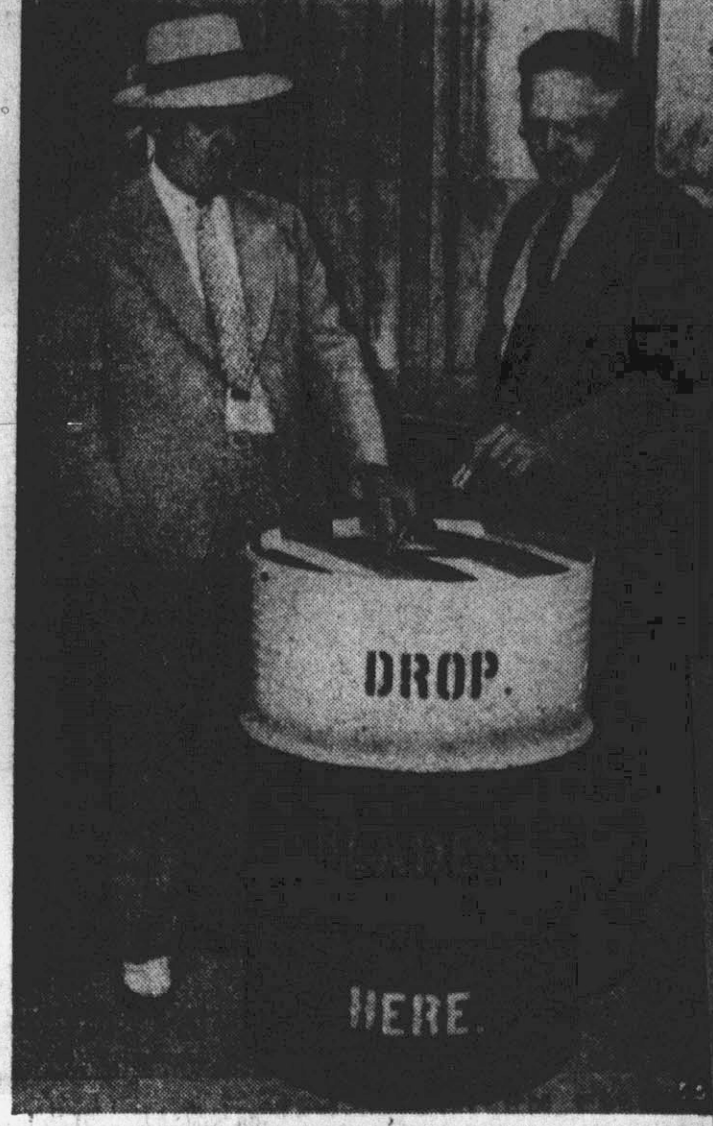

And then we came to, and Bowers was dragging out a chair for her and Jeff was trying to make her drink a glass of water and Phoebe fluttered around helplessly. There was a hasty blurred introduction to Greeley Morris and everyone asked questions that no one tried to answer.

Carol said: "There's a taxi waiting downstairs. I didn't have any money."

Jeff took charge. "Let it wait. You tell us why you're running around the streets like this. When did you leave the hospital? Why aren't you in bed taking care of yourself?"

Carol smiled. Under her eyes were dark purple hollows and her mouth seemed tight and thin. "I'm all right, Jeff. And they discharged me at the hospital; I didn't escape. I'm not running around the streets either. I just stopped in to tell Mr. Bowers that I could play tonight."

HERE'S THE ANSWER—From S. R. Smith (left), streets commissioner of Tulsa, Okla., comes an answer to that old question: what to do with used razor blades, and his scheme will aid the defense program, too. The barrel is at Tulsa's city hall. Rifle barrels are made of the same sort of steel, explain Smith and Clyde King (right), Chamber of Commerce president.

Bears Best Greenies 1-0; Locals Get Saturday Win

TELLER HURLS 9 TO 2 VICTORY

Setback Suffered In Sunday's Close Battle, However

The New Bern Bears took a 1-0 decision over the Greenies at Guy Smith park yesterday afternoon after the locals had scored a 9-2 victory over Goldsboro on Saturday night.

The single run scored in yesterday's contest was made by Swiggett. New Bern left fielder, reached second when Kracke errored. Thompson singled, but Swiggett was held at third. Thompson purposely got caught between first and second and Swiggett raced home as Kracke waited too late to throw to Overton. The Greenies threatened several times, the most serious coming in the sixth when Kracke singled, advanced to second on an infield out and went to third on Thompson's error. Wilson hit a long fly and Kracke tagged up at third for the run to the plate. Swiggett, however, made a pretty peg home that ended Kracke.

Kracke hurled for the Greenies and allowed only four hits, one less than five collected by the Greenies the offerings of Longest. Kracke two for four to lead the Green-ies was altogether a different story Goldsboro Saturday night as Bill Teller pitched the Greenies to a win over the up and coming Bears, with every Greenville player getting at least one safe blow with Kracke's two for three again being the tops for the locals.

NO town in America leads a well-rounded existence without an Indian legend... a legend complete with a tree-grown spot where one may stand and say impressively, "Here, this is where it happened."

Who cares whether the legend is true, or that almost all Indian legends sound alike? Grant me the right to believe the one about my town, and I'll believe the one about yours.

Mine is about a Wisconsin village on the Mississippi, a tiny place called Maiden Rock, and there it was on a high bluff overlooking the river—my grandmother taught me to believe—that fair Wenona, daughter of Red Wing, leaped to the rocks below so that she could join young White Eagle in the happy hunting grounds.

Of course it reads like your town's legend, and why not? The dramatic motivation for most of them is love for an enemy (i.e., member of a rival tribe) or conflict between mortal and immortal (being of the days when the spirits enjoyed a greater prestige than at present).

It's a good story and it always has been a good story, one that novelists have been hacking away at ever since Adam first needed an alibi and discovered the value of an imagination.

The same sort of thing could happen today. White Eagle's trouble was that he belonged to the wrong party. He was a Chippewa, and Red Wing, who was a Dakota, wanted him to stay the hell out of his ward. I've stood on the very spot where the Dakotas liquidated White Eagle with an arrow, stood where Wenona leaped. And it's a nasty drop.

Other people also must have believed the legend, for most of the major and minor members of the cast had cities and towns named after them. All but poor White Eagle. He was forgotten for a long time. Then they named a gasoline after him.

Interest In Local Movie Increases

Interest in the juvenile comedy which is to be made here entirely with local children, continues to grow, according to the manager of the Pitt Theatre, sponsoring the local production.

To give local youngsters between the ages of 3 and 14 an opportunity of appearing before a camera crew and acting a story that will make a two-reel comedy, the theatre has engaged the Melton Barker Productions. This organization is familiar with the casting and filming of youngsters and has been active throughout the nation in producing juvenile comedies.

Registrations of applicants by local boys and girls who want to appear before the movie camera continue briskly, but the theatre manager, Melton Barker, casting director, are eager to get additional youngsters. As soon as all the applications are received, actual casting will begin. Mr. Barker will assemble the applicants and put them through a test. Those selected through this test will then be assigned roles for the production. Around 75 youngsters will be selected.

Actresses Affected By Silk Freezing Order

These show girls (left), who point out that silk stockings are a necessary decoration for their livelihood, try on stockings at an Atlanta, Ga., drugstore after hearing of the government's silk freezing order. And among the millions of women also affected, was Ruth Ford (right), Broadway actress and recent arrival at Hollywood, who says from now on she is going to wear cotton stockings at social affairs as well as on the street to help conserve silk for defense purposes. Show girls in the picture at left, left to right: Peggy Chandler of Dallas, Tex.; Grace Burke of St. Louis, and Maurine Hall of Dallas.

4-H CLUB MEET IS CONCLUDED

Session Attended By More Than 900 Boys and Girls

Raleigh, August 4.—Nine hundred and eighty-six 4-H club boys and girls from 96 counties concluded one of the best-attended and most successful state 4-H club meetings ever held here in a brilliant candle-light program in the Riddick stadium last Friday night with a united pledge to continued "health and democracy" among Tar Heel farm youth.

Elected by the delegates to the week-long short course to serve as state 4-H club officers for 1942 were Frances Banks of Pasquotank county, president; Leslie Myers of Surry, vice president; Bill Ciapp of Alamance, secretary-treasurer, and Eleanor Booth of Jones, historian.

Archie White, 17, of Craven county, and Emma Lou Hurst, 15, of Macon county, were crowned king and queen of state 4-H health in a night ceremony at which Governor J. M. Broughton was the guest speaker. Young White is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. White of Cove City and scored the remarkably high rating of 99.7 in competition with other health winners. Miss Hurst, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Hurst, Jr., of Franklin, was not far behind with a rating of 99.2.

The health winners will enter national competition with other state winners at the National Club Congress in Chicago next fall.

Other short course contest winners included the Iredell county dairy cattle judging team composed of Kenneth Niblock, Miner Hix and Barry Miller. The team will receive a free trip to the National Dairy Show in Chicago, also scheduled for the fall, where they will compete for the national title against the best judging teams in the country.

PTA Institute Opens At N. C. University

Chapel Hill, Aug. 4.—Plans were completed today for the opening tonight of the 14th annual Parent-Teacher Institute, to be sponsored by the North Carolina Congress of Parents and Teachers and the University here in Chapel Hill this week.

Sessions, which will be held in Hill Music Hall, will get under way at 7:30 o'clock, and continue through Friday morning.

Mrs. J. S. Blair, Elizabethtown, president of the State Congress, will direct a State Leaders' Hour each morning, and Mrs. Bess N. Rosa, Woman's College of the University, and Mrs. J. G. Tingen of Burlington will conduct a State program hour each afternoon after which group conferences will be held.

Thursday evening the delegates will be guests of Duke University.
