Hinted Government To Take Over Shipbuilding Yards

ACTION URGED BY NAVAL AIDE

Acting Secretary Of Navy Says "Steps Must Be Taken One Way Or Another;" Several Hundred Of AFL Members Go On Strike At Curtis Wright Propellor Division Plants At Caldwell, N. J.

(By The Associated Press) Ralph A. Bard, acting Secretary of the Navy, said today that unless labor and management settled their dispute at Kearny, N. J., shipyards, "steps must be taken which will in one way or another" get production resumed there.

(By The Associated Press) Several hundred AFL members walked out on $100,000,000 worth of defense work at the Curtis Wright Corporation's propeller division plant at Caldwell, N. J., today while a CIO strike continued to hold up $493,000,000 of naval and merchant shipbuilding at Kearny, N. J.

The latter case may be referred directly to President Roosevelt for action, a defense official indicated.

At Caldwell, a company official said the plant's entire production on defense orders was imperiled. The plant employs several thousand workers.

Those who walked off their jobs were members of the AFL-International Association of Machinists. John Hart, company spokesman, said the workers "asked more money, but have made no specific demands and have not presented their requests in writing."

The AFL union yesterday lost a National Labor Relations Board election for collective bargaining agent at Curtis Wright's Caldwell and Clifton plants. Propellor Craft, an independent union, won 1,094 to 526.

The walkoff occurred shortly before William S. Knudsen, director of the Office of Production Management, was scheduled to inspect the plant. The workers who walked off strolled quietly about the outer walls of the plant and attempted no picketing.

The Kearny strike may be referred to the President, said Frank Graham, acting chairman of the Defense Mediation Board, unless 18,000 employees of the Federal Shipbuilding and Drydock Company go back to work soon.

In a previous dispute which the Mediation Board referred to the White House, President Roosevelt ordered troops to reopen the North American Aviation Company's California plant. That factory had government orders for warplanes. The Kearny shipyard is building a cruiser and six destroyers for the Navy. In addition to several urgently needed tankers and cargo ships.

The Navy Department is watching the Kearny situation closely, a spokesman said.

Longing Eyes

Washington, Aug. 8.—(AP)—Secretary of State Hull said today that Germany was looking with longing eyes to the Western Hemisphere for further conquests.

He asserted also that Japan alone was responsible for any encirclement of itself in the Pacific.

These comments were made by Hull at his press conference on statements by official spokesmen in Berlin and Tokyo.

The Berlin sources said a German campaign was to be launched to expose what they called ruthless power politics by President Roosevelt in Latin America.

The Japanese spokesman asserted that Japan was encircled by the United States, China and The Netherlands.

Hull described the Berlin claim as a transparent piece of propaganda which he said would not deceive, much less be seriously considered, by any country in this hemisphere.

Red Bombers Believed To Have Raided Berlin

London Denies Responsibility For Night Raid

London, Aug. 8.—(AP)—A reliable source with Soviet contacts said today he had been informed that the Red air force attacked Berlin last night.

This source gave no details. Earlier the German high command had told of minor damage to Berlin buildings and the death of several civilians as the result of bombs dropped by a few planes.

The British denied they had bombed Berlin, a communique limiting last night's German targets to Essen, Dortmund and Hamm. Subsequently, German spokesmen insisted the planes which bombed the Reich's capital were British, and scoffed at the idea that they were Russian.

An Air Ministry communique issued in London said the British raiders caused great damage and started widespread fires in Essen, Dortmund and Hamm, in western Germany.

He was later transferred to Fort Sill, Okla., where he has been three months and now has been raised to the rank of captain.

Freckle Royalty On The Throne

Tokyo, Aug. 8.—(AP)—The Japanese declared today that their empire is ringed by the military, political and economic power of the United States, Britain, China and The Netherlands, but that it would be easy to break the economic encirclement if Japan adopts "the German fashion."

There was nothing specific in the latter comment to indicate that more than a bloodless campaign was suggested. It came from one of Japan's most authoritative naval experts, Lieut. Commander Total Ichimaru. Writing in the newspaper Hochi, he said:

"Manchoukuo, China, Indo-China and Thailand have joined the prosperity sphere. Now we can draw on Indo-China and Thailand for iron, coal and rice and other food."

Getting the Netherlands, Indies and Malay rubber is a bit difficult, but should be a cinch if we tackle the problem after the German fashion."

Domei, Japanese news agency, said it was reliably understood that Foreign Minister Vice Admiral Tetsu Toyoda was selecting a special envoy for French Indo-China to be charged, presumably, with all diplomatic and economic negotiations.

Japan has recognized officially military, political and economic encirclement of her empire by the United States, Great Britain, China and the Netherlands, East Indies, cabinet information bureau spokesmen said today.

Ishii's blunt statement was the first government comment charging the formation of a cordon around Japan.

J. T. Leggett Located At Alaska Naval Base

County Jailor W. G. Leggett today received a letter from his son, Joffre T. Leggett, who is stationed at the Naval Air Station at Sitka, Alaska, but no details of the government's activities were stated.

Leggett has been with the service for four years. He is married and he and his wife are living in a home provided by the federal government.

Additional Reports Made On Old North State Fund

Four community chairmen of local Old North State Fund drives have turned in reports and collections to County Treasurer John Mitchell, the four being campaign directors at Ayden, Stokes, Pataolus and Greenville.

Although no official report has been made on Winterville, it was disclosed last Saturday that the quota there already had been reached.

The four towns which have officially reported are Stokes, (Carolina Township) $83, with a quota of $75; Ayden, $119.45, with a quota of $150; Pataolus, $17.95, with a quota of $50; Greenville, 473.91 with a quota of $650.

Treasurer Mitchell today called attention to the fact that everyone would be encouraged to make a contribution to the fund, however small. "In giving our money to help save the lives of British soldiers and citizens," he said, "we are helping to save the lives of our own American boys who will never have to fight if the English can secure the necessary equipment."

NO TIME IS LOST BY HOUSE ON SERVICE BILL

Legislation Immediately Called Up at A.M. Session

SENATE VERSION SETS 18 MONTHS

Administration Leaders In House, However, Stand Firm for Indefinite Extension Of Service

Washington, Aug. 8.—(AP)—The House wasted no time today in calling up army service extension legislation, and administration leaders stood firm for an indefinite extension in preference to the 18-months maximum just voted by the Senate.

The Senate approved the 18-months extension by a 54 to 30 tally late yesterday, providing $10 a month more pay for service beyond one year, and House leaders promptly ordered an unusual forenoon session today with the determination to get a vote by Monday at the latest.

Manifesting no misgivings as to how the House vote would go, Chairman May (D-Ky.) of the Military Committee, predicted that the chamber would disregard the Senate's 18-months time limitation.

"I'm getting sick and tired of this question of whether we are going to defend our country for six more months or 18 more months," May told reporters. "I believe in national defense without any time limit."

The heart of the Senate measure was the provision that would add a maximum of 18 months additional military duty to the present "hitches" of all selectees, national guardsmen, reserves and regular army enlistees. All are now subject to only one year service, except the regulars, who signed up for three years.

But before the measure passed at the end of a stormy session lasting more than six hours, the Senate wrote in a provision that would give all men with more than a year's service a $10 a month pay boost.

This would have the effect of upping the present base pay of a private soldier to $40 a month after the first year.

One House threat was the announced intention of a Republican group, headed by Rep. Short if Missouri, to fight for the complete exemption of selectees from additional duty, and limit the service extensions to regulars, reservists and guardsmen.

Secretary Urges Lower Income Tax Exemptions In All-Out Tax Program

Morganthau Also Calls For Stiffening Up On Other Taxes, Particularly on Married Couples And Corporations; Would Not Lower Exemptions. However, Unless Those Able To Pay Also Affected

Washington, Aug. 8.—(AP)—Advocating an "all-out tax program for defense," Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau asked Congress today to tax millions of additional persons with small incomes by cutting personal income tax exemptions and to stiffen other taxes on married couples, corporations and others.

He told the Senate Finance Committee that the revenue from the House-approved tax bill should be increased from its present sum to "at least" $3,500,000,000. He hinted strongly he would like much more.

Reading a 15-page statement, the Treasury head asked a dozen changes to boost the yield of the tax bill, but said his proposed new taxes on "millions of people with low income" should not be attempted "unless we reach in other places where ability to pay is escaping its fair share of taxes."

He explained that this applied to married couples and corporations, particularly.

Morganthau gave no figures on how deeply he thought personal exemptions should be cut. Only last year, however, the exemptions for heads of families was cut from $2,500 to $2,000 and the exemption for single persons was reduced from $1,000 to $800.

Suggestions have been heard recently that the new exemptions might be $1,500 for married couples and $700 for single persons.

Only One Case Tried In City Court Today

Only one new case was tried at the regular Friday morning session of Municipal recorder's court, a suspended sentence was ordered in effect in an old case and several cases were continued.

James Blow, Negro, was convicted in January on a bastardy charge and given a 90-day sentence, suspended upon payment of $1 weekly for the support of his illegitimate child. The court found that the terms of the judgment had not been complied with and ordered the road sentence put into effect.

Possible Delay Seen For City Fire Truck

Mayor B. B. Sugg has been advised by Peter Fersch and Sons Company, with whom the city recently contracted for a new aerial fire truck, that delivery of the equipment may be held up because of the defense program.

The company explained that it had been called on to make several trucks for the government and that this may delay delivery of the local truck beyond the stipulated time of 150 working days from the date of contract, about two months ago.

Mr. Sugg was advised, however, that the company was "doing its best" to get the truck delivered within the contracted date.

Branded As Fairy Tales By Russians

German Troops Knifing Deep Into Lower Ukraine Declared By Hitler's High Command To Have Annihilated Red Army Force; Moscow Claims German Losses Three Times As Large As Reds

(By The Associated Press) Adolf Hitler's high command reported today that German troops, knifing deep into the lower Ukraine, had annihilated a Red army force trapped southeast of Uman, 125 miles south of Kiev, capturing more than 30,000 prisoners and the supreme commander of the Russian Sixth army.

While the Germans pictured their armies as plunging headlong against wobbling Soviet defenses, Russia's Marshal Semenov "Timoshenko" voiced a new note of confidence in this appeal to peoples in German-occupied territories:

"Join your comrades and fight, starve, shoot and blow up the Germans and help the Red army root Hitler's dogs. Spill blood for blood, death for death, for the hour of victory is near."

Dispatches from Istanbul quoted well-informed sources there as saying that Britain was prepared to send several divisions of Indian troops through Afghanistan to bolster Russia's defenses in the oil-rich Caucasus.

These sources reported that Afghanistan would formally protest the passage of British troops into the U. S. S. R., but ultimately would yield.

Earlier, unofficial Nazi reports said Kiev itself, the Ukraine capital, had been surrounded. But the high command report indicated the main German thrust was directed at cutting off the Black Sea port of Odessa, some 140 miles below Uman.

In the north, the Nazi high command said, German columns driving toward Leningrad had crossed the Wesenberg, 68 miles southeast of the old Czarist capital, and penetrated to the Gulf of Finland.

If true, this would indicate that the Russian-held capital of Estonia, Tallinn, is cut off by land. It would mean, too, that the Russian Baltic fleet was in jeopardy from German guns pressing toward its big base at Kronstadt.

Hitler's field headquarters also declared that German and Finnish troops driving on Leningrad from the north, in a giant squeeze maneuver, were making further successful progress.

London military quarters said there were indications that the Germans were advancing into southwest Russia in a move to encircle the key point of Odessa on the Black Sea, and that the main Odessa-Kiev railroad line had been cut.

The Soviet high command, officially labeling Hitler's claim of vast successes as "Arabian fairy tales," declared that the 48-day-old struggle had cost the Germans more than 1,500,000 men, against 600,000 Soviet losses, and termed the Bialystok a complete failure.

According to Soviet figures, the ratio of Nazi losses would be nearly three to one, or about the normal toll for an attacking army.

Russian military dispatches again reported fierce overnight fighting in the familiar sectors of Karkiatnik (Continued on page six)

CITY BOARD IN REGULAR MEET

Resignation Of J. D. Simpson Accepted With Regrets

The Greenville Board of Aldermen, in regular session last night took final action on the 1941-42 budget, which was formally adopted at the previous regular meeting, accepted, with regrets, the resignation of J. D. Simpson and attended to a number of routine problems.

A request by Clarence F. Harper that he be permitted to sell wine on Sundays, contrary to an ordinance banning sales from midnight Saturday to midnight Sunday, was turned down by the board.

The question of salaries was brought before the board with the result that the Street Committee was authorized to adjust salaries in that department. The salary of City Clerk J. O. Duval was increased by $10 a month, to $210. The board also agreed to increase the allotment of Mrs. Olympia Jones, city hostess, from $7.50 to $10 quarterly.

The board decided to purchase a car load of cold patch for repairing streets. It also was agreed to fix six or seven street corners when and if funds were available. It was pointed out that several corners in the city needed to be rounded more.

Bids for police cars will be opened at the October meeting, but it was agreed to call for bids on a new motorcycle in the immediate future.

The board approved the Police Committee's recommendation that L. D. Page be promoted to the rank of sergeant and H. B. Drum to the rank of corporal.

The question of the city and county cooperating on a cemetery for ex-soldiers was taken up and the matter referred to the Cemetery committee.

Following Mr. Simpson's formal resignation, Mayor Sugg and members expressed regret at losing him and praised his work in the past. Mr. Simpson has been transferred to Georgia by the Railway Express.

F. M. Wooten appeared before the board and called attention to ordinances passed in October, 1930 authorizing the cities of W. A. Tarboro, Greenville, Washington, New Bern, Kinston and Farmville to create an electric power circuit by providing means to connect transmission wires at convenient points on county lines of the counties involved. The purpose would be to exchange electric current as needs might develop and monthly records of receiving and delivering current would be kept and compensation made for excess received by any municipality.

He further called attention to an act of the General Assembly creating the (Continued On Page Six)

Seventy-eight children have placed flags on the reading chart showing that they have finished the suggested summer reading. Thirty-four others lack only one or two books each and will finish in the next few days. Reading library books has been real fun for many children this summer, a larger number than usual. No story hours or other features of any kind have been planned. Mrs. Kasey and the regular members of the library staff have given the whole emphasis to books and reading. Those children who knew about the library are still coming in and they bring with them friends who haven't been coming or new children who have just come to Greenville. Hollywood

Hollywood.—They're going to make a movie out here from a script that was lived. It's a simple script about a poor rather puny little fellow, an American boy, who grew up into a tall, husky American hero and won fortune and fame and never let either turn his head. His name was Lou Gehrig. Movie and baseball fans, and several producers, seem to have seen the possibilities in the script almost simultaneously. Samuel Goldwyn, as you know, has signed for the screen rights with Lou's pretty young widow, Eleanor Gehrig. Mrs. Gehrig brought along her two gigantic scrap books, full record of an astonishing career from high school days to the tragic end of his life. "I don't know what the script will be," she says, "but I hope the story will be filmed as it actually happened—the story of an American boy. Mrs. Gehrig wishes—and it is the producer's intention—to have the film the story of a life that happened to be lived in baseball rather than a baseball story. She hasn't any choice of an actor to play Lou, or an actress to play her—though it's generally supposed that Gary Cooper, leaner than Gehrig was, will take the part. Eleanor Gehrig, with her reminiscences, could almost write the scenario herself—this story of the son of immigrant parents, born in one of New York's poorest sections under the clatter of the "L." The story of his early love for sports counteracting his naturally delicate health, building up his body. High school days, and football at Columbia University, and the two years in the minor leagues and then the 14 years with the Yankees. "Boy meets girl? It's perfect, just as it happened. "I lived in Chicago and had seen him before, but I was a White Sox fan, and I remember rooting like everything for Lou Gehrig. Babe Ruth, and a few others to break a leg. Then we met and I became a Yankee fan. After we were engaged—it was the first all-star game in Chicago—I bought boxes for all my friends to see my hero play, my darling. He played. Somebody popped out a fly, and Lou missed it. Made the only error of the game and not a hit—my darling!" And something about the western movie Lou made in Hollywood, "The Rawhide." "He'd never been on a horse in his life, but he loved it," she says. Colonel Ruppert late owner of the Yankees) nearly died when he saw the picture, with all its stunting and wild riding—until Lou assured him it was done with doubles and he hadn't really risked his life. State School Attendance Drops First Time Since '35

Reflector Bureau By HENRY AVERILL Raleigh, Aug. 8 — North Carolina's average daily school attendance last session dropped slightly from the previous school year, for the first time since 1935, it is shown by official figures in the School Commission office. On an average 786,299 Tar Heel children attended school daily during the 1940-41 session; a figure slightly more than 5,000 under the 1939-40 daily average of 791,425. It was also more than 4,000 under the 790,927 average made in the 1938-39 year.

The decline is generally ascribed to a particularly virulent epidemic of measles during the year, which kept many thousands of children out for days at a time, although the disease showed an almost negligible mortality rate. Everybody apparently recovered, but the quarantine resulting from measles cases seriously cut into attendance averages. This slight decline in average daily attendance largely for the increased difficulty the Commission found this summer in allotting teachers for the 1941-42 year; as local authorities sought in almost case of a proposed teacher cut, to show that the drop in average was due to an epidemic to which special consideration should be given.

Secretary Nathan Yelton started on the assumption that there should be few, if any, reductions in the number of teachers and he carried through on this principle all the way; but there developed cases in which there was no way to avert at least a tentative cut in the teacher allocation. The result was allotment of 66 fewer teachers to start the coming school than were employed at the close of the 1940-41 session.

It is known they'll show the way he was with youngsters who idolized him, and how he turned down small fortunes—when his creeping illness took him out of baseball to take a $6,000 a year job as public relations commissioner, working with Yelton. They'll have a good movie if they merely follow the script that Lou Gehrig lived.

SEC's Pennsylvania Order Confirms Prediction Reflector Bureau By HENRY AVERILL

Raleigh, Aug. 8 — News reports that the Securities Exchange Commission has commenced action against the Pennsylvania Power and Light Company confirms completely this bureau's recent story on the "inside" of the Federal Power Commission's efforts to force Carolina Power and Light to reduce its book valuation by $24,000,000. Under date of August 2 this bureau wrote of the C.P. and L. action: "It's an odds-on bet that the process of squeezing out the valuation of assets is going to be repeated in the case of all other NFL affiliates after the FPC has ordered CPL to

Chapter Eleven
Murder

Carol had got through her big scene nicely and her exit applause had started in the orchestra and thundered solidly through the whole house. I realized then that our audience was not as nervous as we had supposed, but that suspense was hovering over them as well as us. They waited, as we were waiting, for the evening to end safely. That hand had been for Carol's courage as well as for her acting.

Through the wide French doors I could see her in the wings making toward the stairs, both Peterson and Jeff close at her heels. Almost two thirds over now, and Carol was still safe.

There were only Eve and old Ben Kerry and I on stage now, and in a moment Eve followed Carol through the door on stage right. Kerry lounged in the chair beside the big golden oak desk where I sat writing what was supposed to be a passionate love note. I scribbled, "Green Apples, Green Apples, Eve North in Green Apples" and rushed through my few lines with Kerry. He rose now, heavily, and with an avuncular pat on my shoulder started for the door.

The act was nearly over now, a little scene with Eve, then Carol's entrance and then the blessed respite of an intermission.

It was the half-smothered sound he made that caused me to look up from my desk and stare at old Ben Kerry and wonder hysterically if he had gone mad. Instead of exiting through the door right he had closed it softly and turned and taken one faltering step back into the room.

And then I saw his face. For one terrifying moment I thought it wasn't Kerry's face at all. In spite of the florid make-up that he used, it had somehow the look of a plaster cast, numb and frozen. But his eyes darted wildly around the stage, stopping for a moment as they rested on me and seeing nothing.

I searched frantically for something to ad lib. "Back so soon?" rose in my lips and I mumbled it and could think of nothing else. I had to get the old man off the stage. Eve wouldn't make her entrance until I had.

I tried to catch his eye and motion toward the door. He stared at me and made no move to go. Silence pressed down in cold stifling clouds over the house and then was stabbed by a titter in the audience.

I got out of my chair at last and took Kerry by the shoulders, turning him forcibly around to face the door. The titter spread to a running laugh, rolling through the audience, the balcony, the boxes. I said, trying to fight the laughter "Good night, Uncle George," and in Kerry's ear I muttered, "For God's sake, get out!" I held the door open for him. It was then, I guess, I screamed.

Before I touched the shapeless mass of the floor at my feet, even before I saw the sharp glimmer of the knife beside it, I knew that she was dead. I knew from the way the thick velvet of the cape fell over her body and from the terrible stillness of it. I knew it and yet I screamed, "Carol, Carol!" and I tried to lift her.

I saw the jacket then, the shimmering white jacket that was splashed now with thick green stains and crumpled under her head. With feverish fingers I tore the big black cape from her shoulders. My arms went limp and numb with horror.

The black beneath the cape was hideously shriveled, the arms and shoulders a network of ancient brutal scars. Somehow I managed to put my hands under her head and turn it toward me. Eve North's dead eyes stared up into my face.

Aftermath Of Murder

It was half past four when we left the theater. Carol sat between Jeff and me in the cab, her hands working spasmodically in her lap at the little ball of felt that had much earlier in the evening, been a hat.

It was no good. If I could blot out Eve's face there would be Carol's Not Carol now, white and tired, but Carol as she ran down from her dressing room when she heard my scream, and stopped and stood there above the grotesque figure in her velvet wrap.

I was crouching over Eve, staring up at Carol. I had waited for her to faint or to cry, but not to laugh. She had reached out her hand to life a fold of the black velvet and to finger it, as though a sales girl had just pushed a bolt over the counter toward her, and she had laughed. Then Jeff slapped her hand, and the print of his hand was white and then red across her face. He put his arm around her and led her away. She was crying then and the long choking sobs were almost as awful as that first terrible laughter.

It was Amelia's face that was the worst of all. There had been no grief or horror on it, just a cold look that made it seem as dead as Eve's. Only once had Amelia shown any emotion. When she had started to go to Eve and Peterson's hand shot out to grasp her wrist, she had wrenched herself free as easily as if her arm had been imprisoned in a filmy spider web.

Kneeling beside her mistress she had lifted the cloak and thrown it over Eve's back and shoulders. Slowly she stood up. "You've killed her," she said. Each word was an icicle. "Don't stare at her now. She'd rather you kill her than stare."

I rubbed a clear space in the steamy window glass and peered out. We were passing forty-eighth Street. Could it have been only last night, only nine hours ago that Carol and I walked past this street on our way to the theater? My mind went hurtling back over those hours, seeing it all in gruesome detail; I couldn't stop it.

That static moment after Amelia's outburst which had been jabbed by Peterson's quiet cursing and Sullivan's rough voice barking in to the telephone. The men trooping in from the radio cars. Blue uniforms dotting the stage, herding us into corners, standing over Eve's body. Orders in brief, sharp

For A Late-Summer Lift, Dress To Look Like Fall

Dolman sleeves are pointed up with strips of contrasting color in this brilliant blue crepe transition frock, modeled by movie actress Maris Wrixon. The summery white accessories will give way to the darker ones—possibly an amber-toned velour hat and amber suede gloves—as summer blends into fall.

By AMY PORTER
(AP Fashion Editor)

The wily feeling that strikes you in August may be due, not to the heat, but to the limp and droopy state of your hot weather wardrobe. The cure, according to stylists, who are good psychologists in their own right, is a transition dress. Such a dress bridges the sartorial gap from summer to fall, restores your confidence in your own appearance, blends into the summer scene, speaks smartly of the coming season.

Make sure that your transitioner is adaptable to either summer or fall accessories. It should look well with your big white hat and white gloves, and even better with a fall velour hat and dark suede gloves. It should have a finished town air, so that you can wear it wherever you'd wear a suit, yet it should be prepared to slip gracefully under a coat, come the first cold snap.

Black Satin Popular

Stores have new stocks of such prophetics now. Deeper armholes, rounded shoulders, slimmer skirts are the signs by which you'll know them.

Black satin is especially popular in these dresses, though it's not first choice with this department. We'd vote for crepe or sheer wool in a rich fall color—brown, the new deep-tones. The door swinging wide to admit more men in uniform, more plainclothes men, the coroner, photographers. They kept on coming, a steady one-way stream through old Nick's stage door. And in the alley outside the mumbering of the quick-gathered crowd and the yammering of the newspapermen.

I had answered questions, the same questions, until the words I spoke had taken on an unfamiliar sound and my throat grew dry and bitter. Over and over I told my story. I told it to a man with beetling brows and a ridiculously gentle voice who was the Inspector, and the police stenographer's pencil flew across his notebook as I talked. I told it to a fat detective sergeant and to a skinny red-haired one. I droned through it again for the two special investigators from the District Attorney's office, one who fumed and snapped at me, one who seemed to hardly listen.

Jinx Contributes

Those hours had the timelessness of a nightmare. When for a moment I had stood alone watching the coroner examine Eve, it seemed that all of it had been squeezed into a few brief seconds. But when I faced the barrage of seemingly endless questions I felt that my whole life had been spent on the stage of the Colony Theater and that those words were the only ones I had ever spoken.

We had heard the newswomen on the street yelling about the "Big Theyater Molder" before they had let us go.

Now it was over. Eve was dead and Carol was alive. There had been no arrests. I leaned my head wearily against the icy pane and it felt good. There had been no arrests. Then it wasn't over. Eve was dead but it wasn't over. Somewhere someone was still waiting to kill Carol.

The cab stopped in front of our apartment and we went in. Jinx was sitting cross-legged on the bench in the lobby, half asleep. He jumped up with a start when the door slammed closed behind us and his clothes men, the coroner, photographers. They kept on coming, a steady one-way stream through old Nick's stage door. And in the alley outside the mumbering of the quick-gathered crowd and the yammering of the newspapermen.

Jinx winked one of his popping eyes at Jeff. "I see you ain't scared of riding with me no more," he chuckled.

Jeff made a noble attempt at lightness. "You're the safest pilot I've ever known, Jinx. I never know fear with you at the stick." "You musta been scared Sunday. You walked up and down."

"I wasn't here on Sunday," Jeff said.

"Sure, you was, Mr. Troy." I said a little sharply. "There wasn't anyone here Sunday, Jinx. You've got your dates mixed."

He looked puzzled. "Yeah, I guess so. Sorry."

We went into the apartment and it was a warm and pleasant contrast to the bitter cold outside. I went straight to the cabinet under the built-in bookcases and put a bottle of Scotch on the coffee table. "I want a drink," I said. "A good, stiff drink. Do you?"

"Yes," Jeff said.

Carol reached into the cabinet and brought out a bottle of brandy and a shot glass. She filled the glass to the top and gulped it down. It was Courvoisier and very strong. Without even a grimace she refilled the glass and swallowed. When you'd seen through what that girl had, I thought, you probably couldn't feel anything. Suddenly she set the glass down, walked slowly to the window and stood staring out.

"If I hadn't left my wrap on the stairs, Eve wouldn't have put it on. Eve wouldn't be dead. Eve would still be living and I—" She stopped and covered her eyes with clenched fists.

Jeff poured another shot of brandy and followed her. "Drink this."

Strength For The Day By EARL L. DOUGLASS

CONCERNING REAL GOODNESS Genuine goodness is rather rare in the world. Think for a moment of how many genuinely good people you know. You will doubtless discover that the number is small. This does not mean that the world is full of evil people. It only means that goodness of an arresting quality is something not frequently encountered.

"It is true, it is not," I hear you inquire, "that a man may be good without being religious. To which the answer is that the good man who is not religious probably got his goodness from people who were religious. Goodness is not something we pull out of the air. It is a contagious thing, we 'catch it,' as it were, from others. The difference between a good man avowedly religious and a good man apparently indifferent to religion is that in the first man's life 'the source of his goodness is revealed, while in the second man's life it is hidden. The non-religious good man got his goodness from religious forebears, associates, environment, even though he was unconscious of the influence exerted by these persons and factors."

The thoroughly good man is not frequently encountered, but when we do cross the pathway of one whose life is crystal clear in its purity, honesty, and kindness, we feel that a loving hand from out another world has touched our hearts.

LET'S PUT IT OVER

Efforts will be made to complete solicitations for the Old North State Fund here the first of the week. We are sure that when final reports are in, Pitt County will have met its quota of $1,250, but at the present time the fund is far short of this goal and there must be many more contributions if the quota is to be attained. It is possible that you have not been called upon by any of the solicitors, but you should not let this keep you from contributing. If you wish to make a donation send it to R. C. Deal, local chairman, or call him and he will send someone for your contribution. Some other counties in the state have already completed their drives and have made their reports to state headquarters. Let's lose no more time in putting Pitt County over the top in this drive.

TIME FOR PLAIN TALK AND ACTION

"Hints of drastic government action, if necessary, to keep shipyards in full production were thrown out by high officials yesterday after walkouts halted work at four East Coast shipyards," reads a news report from Washington.

According to our way of thinking, it's time for the government to stop throwing out hints and speak out in plain language to the effect that from now on it is not going to countenance any more strikes in our vital defense industries. When a government finds itself in the state of such an emergency that it finds it necessary to draft young men, without their consent, from all walks of life, to serve in the armed forces of the country, then it is high time for the government to see to it that laborers do not hinder the defense program by going on strike.

If Congress and the administration would quit looking at the political side of the picture and forget about the labor votes for the present, anti-strike legislation to put a stop to strikes during the present emergency might have a chance of being enacted into law.

Washington Daybook

Washington — "Sergeant York" is the only movie ever written from the Congressional Record.

As late as 1935, it was being written into the Record that Sgt. Alvin C. York, of Pail Mall, near Jamestown, in the mountains of Tennessee, could have made a fortune by exploiting his positions of No. 1 hero of the World War, but chose only to pull in a few dollars for speeches in such places as the Bible Class of the Church of Christ and Christian Union needed them to carry on.

Until 1941, he turned down more offers from the stage and movies than the most romantic miss ever had in wildest fancy. But finally the need for funds to carry on his work in the Tennessee hill country drove the still towering, silent hill-billy, to put his John Henry on a Hollywood contract.

When he did, there were two stipulations he insisted should be written into it. The first was that Gary Cooper, whom he had never seen off-screen, should play the role of Al York. The second was that there would be no act of heroism or deed of bravery in the movie which had not been written into the Congressional Record.

Reams Of Description. The results were that the studio making the film had to trade Betty Davis to get Gary Cooper for the title role — and the story's authors had to go to the Congressional Record for every detail of the battle scenes.

What they found there were reams of description, introduced into the Senate record by Sen. Kenneth McKellar of Tennessee, who still holds forth on the Senate floor and is the third oldest member of the upper house in point of continuous service. On the House side were additional reams of lurid description introduced by a slim, short-statured congressman from Pickett county, Tenn. He was addressed then as Rep. Cordell Hull.

Having seen the picture and read the Record, I can vouch for once that the Congressional Record proved a thoroughly adequate scenario. As a matter of fact there was one place where the Record was so vivid that the script writers had to tone it down. It had to do with the number of Germans Sergeant York picked off.

According to the Record, the saint, a deliberate York (he was then a corporal, left in charge of a seven-man squad because all other officers and men had been killed or wounded) fired his rifle until it was burning hot and when 90 Germans marched down the hill to surrender (42 more were picked up later), it was because nearly 30 of their comrades had fallen under the deadly fire of this one-man blitzkrieg from the Tennessee uplands. The Hollywood scripters must have decided that was a little too much killing for the second elder of the Church of Christ. They cut the number in half.

Called It 'Natural.' Otherwise they followed the Congressional Record... and apparently close enough to suit the Sergeant. When he saw the picture for the first time, his first and only comment was: "It shore was natural." The big, gangling, kindly Sergeant was in town recently and found the front door of the White House as wide open to him as that of his house on the farm in the hill country. There is at least one other wider open in Washington that is even wider open any time Sgt. Alvin C. York wants to walk up to it. It's the one over at the War Department. There isn't a man living (and few dead from the Revolution) who is a better ad for the U.S. Army. A rip-roaring, hell-raising hill man who got religion and had to wrestle with his conscience before patriotism overcame his objections to war, York is the kind of hero that the propagandists dream about. And the script writers, too. Imagine having to do nothing more than sticking to the letter of the Congressional Record to get a movie.

Man About Manhattan By George Tucker. New York.—She looks as a ballerina should look. That's Tamara Tounonova, prima ballerina of the Monte Carlo ballet. She is Russian. She is vividly dark. She is 22. But when I saw her she was sneaking through the corridor of the Meurice hotel, half frightened murmuring "Moura"—"Moura"—"Come to me my precious Moura." But Moura had her thoughts on the hotel roof and scampered anxiously out of reach and up the stairs. Tounonova tossed her dark curls indignantly. "You always address a prima ballerina by her last name I don't know why, but you do." I seem to have neglected identifying Moura. We from the south of Russia, and when you are from the south of Russia you grow younger as you grow older." That was a comforting thought and as I am from the South myself but of the United States, I could almost feel the years fall away from my now reasonably ancient frame. She had not the slightest inkling as to the young man. "Probably somebody I've never even seen. But I will tell you this. It will be an American. I will not marry a Russian. It wouldn't go, not with my temperament." So there it is, you young bucks and don't say you weren't tipped off. Right now Tounonova is on the road with the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo. She goes from Texas to California and back again, and up through New England and Canada. She has coal black hair that divides in the middle and dangles beneath her chin. Her birthday is March 2. It was a pitchers' duel between Dan Matthews and Kelly Kee last night with both hurlers about on even terms.

The real winner of the night was Bennie Crowe, and his new bride A collection taken up to buy the ace fielder a wedding gift netted $61.89 and some club officials will make a suitable purchase.

The Greenies have had tough sledding this week and it looks as if the locals will have a tough time the remainder of the week. They meet Rocky Mount again tonight and then entertain Wilson here Saturday night. The two top clubs will play in Wilson Sunday afternoon.

The Greenies have not won a single game since last Saturday night's 6-5 victory over Goldsboro, which made up for a 4-2 loss to the Bug the night before. The Greenies lost to New Bern here Sunday afternoon by the score of 1-0, tied with the Bears Monday night, took a 4-3 defeat from the Martins Tuesday night and again lost to the Martins Wednesday night, 3-2.

With the Greenies slightly slipping, four teams are fighting desperately to share in the play-off series and Manager Rube Wilson will get behind his players to insure that the locals are not eased out of the top division after staying in second place throughout the season.

Rocky Mount got one run in the first inning last night on Kasper's double and Kurt's single. The visitors added two more in the second on three singles.

The Greenies got their two runs in the fourth when Jenkins and Scagg singled and Crowe walked to fill the bases. Carl Pierce came through with a timely single to send the two runs across the plate. From then on neither team was able to score.

Biggs Is Best, But...
Milwaukee (AP) — Karel Kowalski, professional tennis star, thinks Bob Riggs is the best amateur player today but he isn't so sure that he'll win any more championships. Says Karel:
"Kovacs is a funny fellow. He makes shots no one else can make but he is not good every day. McNeil is just a swinger. When he is hitting he can give anybody a game, but that is not often enough."

N.Y. Stock Market

New York, Aug. 8.—(AP)—The stock market saved its buying fuel today and, except for a smattering of specialties, rallying excursions were short and unimpressive. The list, stalemated for the past nine sessions, showed scant disposition to climb out of the rut at the opening and, near the fourth hour, fractional variations either way were the rule. Dealings were under those of yesterday's slow proceedings.

When Women Can't Have Silk Hose— Well, Here's What Some Do About It

(AP Feature Service)

No more silk from Japan. No more silk stockings for women of the United States. Well, that's what it looks like. As to what women will do about it—your guess is as good as the next one. Silkless society is not uncommon these days, insofar as it applies to the covering of feminine legs. For example:

LONDON Long "woolies" are warm at least.

PARIS Tweed hose can match one's suit.

VIENNA Half socks, all wool

ROME Bare legs can hide....

U.S.A. Or be painted over.

The Soviet high command, countering Nazi claims of having broken the Stalin line, declared that actually no such line of fortifications even existed and that the fiction of a vast Russian defense comparable to France's Maginot line was invented by the Germans to justify their tremendous losses.

As to the German report of 895,000 Russian prisoners taken, the Red army communique commented: "Occupying a Soviet district, the Fascists immediately and forcibly mobilized the population for hard labor and drive them to the rear, declaring them to be war prisoners."

William D. Patton, casting director for the Gang Comedy to be produced in Greenville soon, shown above with a group of youngsters typical of how the local children will appear in the movie, arrived today to make preliminary preparations for production on the picture.

Entries are pouring into the office of the Pitt Theatre for the two-reel, all-talking kid movie, to be made here, using Greenville children between the ages of three and fourteen years.

The Melton Barker Juvenile Productions, famed as producers of younger movies, have been engaged by the management of the Pitt Theatre to shoot the kiddies as they

Patton has arranged his casting schedule to start Saturday at the Pitt Theatre and his casting hours will be from 9 to 12 a. m., and from 4 to 6 p. m.

All children who have registered at the theatre are being notified by telephone or post card at which time to report for the try-outs.

Patton is desirous of receiving more entries, thus giving him a chance to have a wide range of choice in filling the parts of the story. Children who have not registered may report for trials during the time scheduled above.

The attorney warned that "the city seems to be inviting a controversy and very probably trouble in going into the commercial production of electric current and selling it beyond boundaries of Pitt county," calling particular attention to what he declared he understood to be the connection with Vanceboro. He said "such fields belong to the public service corporations and that it was not within contemplation of the law which authorized the municipality to own and operate the plant for the benefit of our own citizens."
