Border Marts Indicate Averages Of 25 Cents Or Better

FARMERS SAID TO BE PLEASED

Quality Declared To Be Better Than Expected; Fairmont Reports U. S. Government Figures For First Hour Showing $27.62 Average; Strong Bidding Reported On Tobacco For Domestic Use

Florence, S. C., Aug. 12.—(AP)—Auction markets of the Carolinas flue-cured border belts swung into action today and opening prices were reported unofficially ranging from 22 to 30 cents a pound.

The nine South Carolina markets in the belt averaged about 15 cents last season, while the seven North Carolina markets averaged 16.14 cents. The Georgia-Florida markets first to open in the country, averaged 23.06 cents last week.

First reports said farmers generally appeared pleased with prices and a number of points reported not a single grower dissatisfied with payments he received during the first hour's sale.

The Tabor City, N. C., market opened with brisk bidding and good prices for domestic types with the export companies buying little. The first 3,590 pounds sold there brought an average of 22.6 cents. Prices ranged from four to 38 cents. There was a considerable quantity of good smoking tobacco in the 20-30 cents range, but much common leaf in the six to 10 cents class. There was an unusual scarcity of middle grades in the "teens" price class at Tabor City.

At Whiteville, N. C., the average paid for the better than expected quality offerings on the first 20 rows was 26.85 cents. The prices there ranged from four to 37 cents and more than one million pounds were on the floors.

Sales Supervisor Lawson Jordan of Mullins, largest market in the belt, reported that the 31,688 pounds sold during the first 20 minutes of auctioneering there, brought an average of 26.49 cents.

The top price paid, Lawson said was 50 cents for extra good quality leaf. A total of 1,800,000 pounds was offered at Mullins.

At Conway, where 750,000 pounds were offered, the average price paid during the first five minutes of the auctioneering was 27 1/2 cents. All Conway warehouses were full with weed described as "very good" quality and the prices ran as high as 45 cents.

At Timmonsville, Sales Supervisor J. F. Hawkins said the offerings were of good quality domestic smoking types and indicated that the first day's average would be around 28 cents.

The first hour on the Loris market saw 25,000 pounds sold for an average of 27.70 cents. Offerings were fair in quality, but light in weight. With 450,000 pounds on the floors, sales were blocked.

At Kinston, prices for the first two rows ran from two to 27 cents and the indicated average was 25 cents. The medium to good quality offerings totaled 175,000 pounds.

The first row of the 300,000 to 400,000 pounds offered at Pamlico brought prices which averaged from 30 to 30 1/2 cents.

The quality there was described as fair.

Prices during the first hour's sales in Darlington, where around 300,000 pounds were on the floors, the prices ranged from six to 36 cents.

Prices during the first hour's sale on the Chadbourne, N. C., market indicated the average there would be between 25 and 28 cents. The better grades were selling about one-third higher than last year. Offerings were between 225,000 and 250,000 pounds.

Approximately 1,000,000 pounds of tobacco, described as better than that offered opening day last year, was on the Lumberton market and the unofficial indicated average was 25 cents.

C. B. Stafford of the Fairmont tobacco board of trade released these official U. S. government figures on the trading there during the first hour—80,738 pounds sold, $22,302.53 paid, and the average price 27.62 cents a pound.

KNOX CONFERS ON IDLE YARDS

Situation Is Discussed With Shipbuilding Firm Head

Washington, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Navy Secretary Knox and L. H. Korndorff, president of the Federal Shipbuilding and Drydock Company, conferred for more than an hour today on the company's offer to turn over its strike-bound Kearny, N. J., yard to the navy, then adjourned their discussions to a later hour.

Other than a brief announcement by Korndorff that the conference would be resumed later in the day there was no disclosure regarding the meeting.

The tall shipyard executive declined to say whether the navy intended to accept his offer, made yesterday, and thus restore work on $493,000,000 of defense shipbuilding contracts.

Sidney Hillman, associate director general of the Office of Production Management, participated in the conference for a time, but left a head of Korndorff.

Knox withheld any hint of his attitude toward the company's offer affecting the big plant where 17,000 workers have been idle since Thursday.

In proposing the drastic step Korndorff declared that the strike "involves no issue but the maintenance of the open shop. We are unwilling to abandon the defense of the freedom of the American worker to choose whether he will belong to a union or not."

Edw. Y. Beardsley Claimed By Death

Edward Yancey Beardsley, 64, died suddenly at his home near Farmville yesterday afternoon at 6 o'clock. Funeral services will be conducted at the home tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock by Rev. Key Taylor, Methodist minister of Walsenburg, assisted by Rev. C. B. Mashburn, Farmville Christian minister. Burial will follow in Hollywood cemetery, Farmville.

Mr. Beardsley was born and reared in Beaver Dam township, but operated a mercantile business in Raleigh from 1909 to 1927. He later returned to this county and had since operated a store near Farmville.

Surviving is one sister, Mrs. W. L. Fulford of Farmville, Route Two.

House Opens Debate On Bill To Extend Service Men Now Under Arms

Washington, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Rep. Thomason (D-Texas) called on the House today to extend the service of the nation's citizen-soldiers because, he said, on the basis of expert military opinion, Adolf Hitler is "going to take Russia" and then England will be "next on the list."

"Brave old England," Thomason said amid applause, "I hope she stands, but there is not a man on this floor who doesn't know if she falls who will be next on Hitler's list."

Germany has 260 seasoned divisions in the field, with 40 more in training which will be ready for service this fall, he said, adding:

"Our army has 33 divisions and is untrained."

While explaining he could not reveal information that had been given to the Military Committee in executive session, Thomason said there were more than 200 German schools in Argentina, 1,200,000 Germans in Brazil, many of them active in organized propaganda groups, and declared that Germany also had numerous air bases in Latin America, some of them "within striking distance of the Panama canal."

Rep. Andrews (R-N.Y.) ranking minority member of the Military Committee, directed his remarks repeatedly to the members on my side "as he urged a vote for retention of selectees "as the soundest course for security of our country and its future." Democrats generally applauded his remarks, but only four of five members of his party applauded.

Opening the attack on the measure, Rep. Dewey Short (D-Mo.) read excerpts from two letters from draftees who he did not identify. One from California expressed the opinion that the men in service felt that they had been "deliberately tricked and railroaded" by proposals to extend their training.

Peru And Ecuador Renew Hostilities

(By The Associated Press)
Fighting between frontier forces of Ecuador and Peru began anew during the week-end, each government blaming the other for the outbreak in hostilities.

The Peruvian foreign office issued a communique last night saying Ecuadorian forces staged a number of surprise attacks along the Napo river, but that each was repulsed. The communique said clashes occurred throughout yesterday.

Ecuador's secretary general said at Quito last night that Peruvian troops attacked the town of Zapullo Saturday night and again on Sunday morning, but were turned back by Ecuadorian forces.

Poor communications from the border to capitals of the two countries admitted only a few reports on the fighting, both sides said.

DEVELOPMENTS ON ALL FRONTS

London Bluntly Warns Japan Will Have War If She Wants It; Australian War Cabinet Meets; Senator George Sees Complete Break With the Japs

By The Associated Press
In the Far East crisis, a series of swift-breaking developments indicated that events were moving inexorably nearer the explosion point.

1. In London, authoritative quarters declared bluntly "if Japan wants war in the Pacific there will be peace."

2. In Tokyo, the militarist newspaper Kokumin said the United States and Great Britain had been warned that any further anti-Japanese pressure would bring about "nothing but the worst situation," and that Japan was bent on pushing ahead with her new order in East Asia.

3. In Melbourne, Australia's Prime Minister Robert G. Menzies called his war cabinet into a second extraordinary session, and Opposition Leader J. H. Curtin commented solemnly:

"The time has come when Australia asks loyal and devoted service from her sons. I put it as plainly as I can to every Australian that the safety of this country is at stake."

4. In Washington, Senator George D. Aker, ranking member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said "it definitely is in the range of possibility" that the United States might break off all commercial relations with Japan.

5. In Shanghai, Japanese army spokesman, Lieut. Colonel Kunio Akiyama declared his government was gravely concerned over the possibility that Russia's big Pacific port of Vladivostok might become "America's first line of defense against Japan."

Japanese Prepare To Enter Thailand

Manila, P. I., Aug. 12.—(AP)—The Japanese high command is planning to place a total of 180,000 troops in French Indo-China, the majority of them in west Cambodia adjoining the border of Thailand, it was learned on good authority tonight.

The Japanese will enter Thailand, foreign observers believe, as soon as they are organized and prepared to meet the British troops now stationed along the border between Thailand and British Burma and Malaya.

The Japanese now are in complete control of Indo-China. The Indo-China government has been stripped of its administrative powers.

French Military Authority Concentrated Under Darlan

SUM CUT FROM DEFENSE BILL

Million and a Quarter Dollars Slashed From Bill

Washington, Aug. 12.—(AP)—The Senate Appropriations Committee cut $1,234,911,530 off a defense money bill today, leaving a total of $5,828,326,948 in cash and $1,000,000,000 in contract authority for the army, navy, Maritime Commission and other agencies.

As passed by the House, the bill carried $7,100,878,256 in cash and $1,000,000,000 in contract authority. Describing the cut as unprecedented in its amount, Senator Adams (D-Col.) said the committee members voted unanimously to eliminate a House-approved fund of $1,247,063,550 for army ordnance.

This fund would have provided for the purchase of tanks, anti-tank guns and other equipment for mechanized forces. In addition to the potential 3,000,000-man army for which the War department now is buying essential equipment.

Bloom Entertains Local Civic Club

Last night's program at the regular weekly meeting of the Greenville Rotary club was more or less extemporaneous with members and visitors getting together for an hour or so of good fellowship.

A feature of the program was Eli Bloom's presentation of "Levin's at the Wedding."

W. H. Dail, a member of the club made an interesting talk on his recent trip to the New York horse show and racing.

Visiting Rotarians were Dr. Paul Jones, W. A. McAdams and R. A. Joyner of Farmville, J. P. Harris of Bethel and Norman Winslow of Washington, N. C.

Louis Wilkerson also was a guest of the club.

Everybody Got Into The Spirits
Mt. Airy, N. C. — (AP)—Sheriff Harvey S. Boyd said he never saw so many swimmers in Ararat river as he did after he poured 72 gallons of good whiskey into the stream.

A large crowd soon got the idea of swimming—several with their clothes on. And persons fishing below the pouring-in site reported they had never seen the fish bite so well.

Full Authority Vested In Anti-British Official

Vichy, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Vice Premier Admiral Jean Darlan was named Minister of National Defense today in a reorganization of the French cabinet which concentrated all military powers in his hands.

Darlan, who on June 10 called for "loyal" collaboration with Germany and who has publicly attacked Britain's war role since the fall of France, was placed in charge of the following by today's decree:

1. General organization of national defense.
2. Distribution and use of the armed forces.
3. General inspection of the armed forces.

Admiral Darlan on June 10 told the French people in a speech that France must cleave to Germany or perish and said strongly that France must be a wholehearted and loyal collaborator to merit a favorable peace settlement and secure a place in the "new Europe" which the Nazis had promised.

The admiral's anti-British sentiment became open and bitter after the British fleet attacked French naval units off North Africa last year to make certain they did not fall into German hands. Of the activities of the British navy he has used such terms as "piracy."

Eight Cases Removed From County Docket

Eight cases were removed from the county court docket at the morning session here today, four being transferred to Superior court for a jury trial, one found guilty.

William Walston, charged with embezzlement, was absolved when he was found not guilty of the charge.

James Jones, colored, tried on a charge of illegal liquor for sale was given a six months sentence suspended upon payment of costs and on further condition that he remain of good behavior and not violate any liquor laws.

Melton Robins and Foster Robins, Jr., colored, was convicted of a charge of trespass and attempt to break and enter a house, but judgment was continued.

William H. Roebuck tendered a plea of guilty to driving drunk and was fined $50, taxed with court costs and had his driving license suspended for one year.

A case charging Marvin Jones with illegal liquor for sale was transferred to Superior court, as were three against Foy Rodgers on involving trespass, assault and allowing livestock to run at large.

BRITISH CRAFT RAID COLOGNE

Rhineland City Bombed In Daring Daylight Foray

London, Aug. 12.—(AP)—The Royal Air Force bombed Cologne in an audacious daylight raid today and sent a great air armada out to attack the French coast as well as the city of Cologne.

The raid on the ancient Rhineland metropolis was described by the British Press Association as possibly the heaviest daylight attack yet made on Germany. The assault on the French coast was carried out in such force that observers on the English southeast coast gave up trying to count the number of planes roaring over the channel.

High-flying bombers and protecting fighter planes swept eastward in both "V" and diamond formations. Crowds gathered all afternoon to watch the spectacular offensive.

Blenheim bombers were reported to have carried out the bombing of Cologne, the third daylight attack on this city since the beginning of the war.

Colored Citizens Contribute $85.69

By W. H. DAVENPORT
The Negroes of Greenville and Pitt county closed their drive, which had been conducted in the interest of the Old North State Fund, with a total of $85.69. The bulk of this amount was donated by Greenville citizens, due to the fact that it was impossible to properly organize the county because of such a limited amount of time.

The members of the committee appointed by the governor were Prof. C. M. Epps, Prof. C. C. McGlone and Dr. J. A. Battle. These members, together with the local committee, wish to thank all those who made contributions, and to commend all who took a part, for the wonderful spirit of cooperation.

"The Negroes of Pitt county are proud of the opportunity to assist in rendering such a service to a nation that is striving so hard to stave off totalitarianism and to preserve for all times to come the democratic way of life," declared a campaign official.

Sinking Of Troop Ships Is Reported

Dispatches Declare Reds Desperately Trying To Escape, With Inland Avenues Of Escape Virtually Cut Off; Violent Aerial Battle Reported Over Front; Moscow Quiet On Odessa

By The Associated Press
German military dispatches pictured Russia's big Black sea port of Odessa as doomed to quick surrender today, with Nazi troops storming down both sides of the Bug river and Red army forces desperately attempting to escape by sea.

DNB, the official German news agency, reported German bombers already had sunk six troop-laden Russian transports off the Ukraine coast near Odessa.

The Germans declared inland avenues of escape from both Odessa and Ochakov, farther east, had been virtually cut off.

Battle maps issued in Berlin showed the Nazi push forming a huge bulge deep into the southern Ukraine, below Kiev, and Nazi front line dispatches asserted German troops also were closing in on the Ukraine capital.

Violent aerial battles were reported raging over the blood-drenched field as Soviet warplanes smashed at German infantry and motorized forces and Nazi pursuit planes attempted to fight them off.

All major arteries behind the Soviet lines in the southern Ukraine were reported jammed with retreating Red army troops, under failing attacks by German warplanes. The Germans said rail traffic was disrupted, with seven trains derailed or damaged in a single sector.

The Russians made no mention of Odessa. They declared the Red army still holding firm in the Smolensk salient as fighting there went into its 28th day, and in the Bel Tserkov sector 50 miles south of Kiev.

A Moscow communique said the Red army was putting up a stubborn fight against strong German drives on the north and south flanks, in the Soltsi sector 120 miles south of Leningrad, and the Uman area midway between Kiev and Odessa.

The Germans acknowledged a new Russian raid on Berlin last night, but said only two planes reached the general region of the capital.

The Russians said fires were started in their bombing of central Berlin the night before. Moscow also was raided last night—its 17th air attack but the Russians said it was one of the shortest and weakest their capital had experienced.

A special feature of the picnic will be the awarding of special premiums to members of the force who have had seven years service.

MADE UP TO KILL

by Kelley Ross

Chapter 14
This Murder
Bowers had risen from his desk. He sat hunched over the disorderly mass of papers, his head bowed in his hands. When he lifted his face to us, I was shocked at its gray haggardness. Philip coughed a forced, staccato cough.
"We couldn't help overhearing, Clint. 'Green Apples' is closing then?"
Bowers nodded. "Yes. Definitely."
"Then—I suppose it will be all right for me to accept any offer that might come my way? I'm considering Hollywood."
"I'll be all right so far as I'm concerned. The police, however—"
Ashley smiled a sort of grave amusement. "I hardly think there will be any difficulty there. After all, my long record on the American stage—"
"Your long record on the American stage?" I repeated indignantly. His calm assurance made me sick at my stomach. "What's that got to do with whether or not you tried to kill Carol?"
"Relax, Halla." Jeff put his hand on my shoulder.
"It's quite all right," Ashley said, oozing with patronage. "We're all horribly upset and overwrought. It's been a frightful experience, this—"
"This murder," Bowers said quietly.
"We had all been chattering 'Murder' for the past 24 hours. It had become the prime word in our vocabularies and had almost lost any connotation. But when Bowers said it now, so quietly and bluntly, it found its place again, and Eve's horrible dead body and Carol's scared white face were with us in the room."
Jeff moved uneasily. "I'm afraid I didn't exactly live up to my recommendation of myself."
"No," Bowers said. "You couldn't help it. Don't blame yourself, Jeff. I asked you to watch Carol."
"I might have watched a little further."
"You couldn't know that Eve would pick up Carol's cape and stand there, where in a minute Carol would be standing, looking like Carol—"
"Madness," Ashley said.
"Eve didn't think she needed something to cover her scars, and she took the first thing she could find. She didn't think about murder; she thought about her entrance. Eve was like that. No, Jeff there was nothing anybody could have done."
"Darling, you did your best," I said. "Clint knows that. Why, even Peterson couldn't prevent it."
"My responsibility was greater than his. He was doing a job that had been assigned. It was routine for him. I was trying to do a job that I'd made for myself. And I failed." He stopped and took a deep breath. "Well, the point is, I'm going on. And you can forget that money was ever mentioned yesterday, Clint."
Bowers looked at him for a long moment. "We won't forget anything, Jeff. Since last night—since Eve—" He swung his chair around so that his face was turned from us.
No one spoke. It was as though all of us were searching our minds for the right thing to say and there was no right thing. At last Philip coughed again and stood up.
"It's a beastly business. I wish there were something I could do. I know there isn't. Just—if ever you have anything for me again, Clint, I'd consider it a privilege to play for you."
"If ever I produce again."
"But of course you will! And soon, old man, very soon." Philip patted him on the shoulder.
"Without Eve? I haven't produced a play in five years without Eve. No play comes into this office except some agent thinks there is an Eve North part in it." He wasn't talking to us; he was thinking out loud. "I've built every production around her. Everyone in the cast a contrast to her. Every set a background for her. I—I wouldn't know how to go about producing without Eve."
Once More, Lee Gray
He stopped and his eyes, soft and sad, turned bitter. He stared unseeing at the sheaf of papers on his desk. We made mumbled exits that Bowers scarcely noticed.
I walked between Jeff and Ashley up to Broadway, breathing the crisp air gustily as though I might expel with it the tragic atmosphere of that office over the Colony. Philip was going on again at greater length to explain how Eve's murder was inconveniencing him personally. At Times Square a delivery truck pulled up to a kiosk and dumped a bundle of papers. I slipped away and bought one to see what was being said about the case. Jeff flicked the front section from me. I turned to the theatrical pages while Philip droned away, seemingly unaware of our lack of attention.
In the notes of coming productions I saw something that made me gulp in astonishment, and it was a minute before I could collect enough breath to speak.
"Jeff! Jeff, listen to this! For his next production 'Through Heavens Fall,' Vincent Parker has engaged Morgan Thomsand, Marge Flint and—Lee Gray!"
Jeff ripped the paper from my hand. I pointed to the item and he read it aloud as if he expected the name. If it had been there at all, to be gone by now. "—Morgan Thomsand, Marge Flint and Lee Gray. Halla, who is Vincent Parker? Does he have an office? Where is it?"
"It's in Radio City. I know him." "C'mon," Jeff said, "let's get moving."
"Just a second," Ashley put his hand on Jeff's arm. "Are you—are you going to Parker's office now? Immediately?"
"Sooner than that. C'mon, Ashley, walk up with us."
"No, thanks. I wouldn't be seen in Parker's office. I couldn't afford to. Besides, I've a terribly important appointment downtown."
"Wall Street, no doubt," I said maliciously.
"As a matter of fact, it is Wall Street. Taxi!"
Ashley stepped into his cab and I had to run to catch up with Jeff who was halfway across Broadway by that time.
On Sixth Avenue he didn't even stop, as the usually did, to make sure the khaki colored men digging the new subway were getting along all right. Breathless, I grabbed his arm and pulled myself abreast of him.
Jeff snorted and two middle-aged women saped at me. Automatically I still raised my voice to a shriek on Sixth Avenue to combat the roar of the El trains that were no longer extant.

I tried again, in a softer tone. "Jeff, shouldn't Peterson know about this?"
"He probably does. Save your air. We should've taken a cab."
Mr. Parker
At Radio City we took one of those rocket ships they call express elevators and I answered the operator's questioning look. "Sixty-two." He punched the button with a flip of his knuckle and leaned back against the wall, waiting for the car to fill. When he had become convinced that no one would ride in the same elevator with Jeff and me, he took off for the sixty-second floor.
The doors slid open and we stepped out. Jeff started to say something, then stopped. I glanced in the direction he was staring. Backing slowly into the next car, while the crowd settled in the rear, was Philip Ashley. The doors closed. It was impossible for Ashley not to have seen us, but his eyes gave no flicker of recognition. His face was dead pan.
"Well," I said, so this is Wall Street."
"Yeah."
"But why should he do that?"
"Maybe he wanted to find out about Lee Gray before we did. We will see."
Parker's secretary announced me over the telephone without first asking my name. That made me feel fine and smug. That girl and her colleagues had almost nipped my theatrical career in the bud until one day I had managed to slip past her, and Vincent Parker had given me my first part in New York.
Mr. Parker would see me in a few minutes. In answer to Jeff's question, the secretary told him that Philip Ashley had not been in to see Parker within the last few minutes or, as far as she knew, ever. Jeff sat down beside me.
"Halla," he said, "let me do the talking about L. G."
Vincent Parker opened his door and beckoned to me. He looked like five and a half feet of rain-bow with his dark-blue shirt, yellow knitted tie, brown tweed suit and very conservative battleship gray spats. His face split in a grin that shook his ears. When Jeff followed me into the office he flattered me by looking disappointed that I wasn't alone.
"She's my girl," Jeff explained. "I never leave her alone with strange men."
"If you think I'm strange you oughta see my brother!" Parker said. When he had stopped laughing I introduced Jeff to him and we seated ourselves. Parker behind his huge, streamlined desk, Jeff and I on a luxurious divan that Vincent must have bought second-hand from some insolvent Caliph.
"Nicely appointed chamber," Jeff said. He had nearly broken my neck to get us up here and now he was being the suave, casual Philo Vance type. "Who decorated your office? Billy Rose?"
"Billy Rose?" Naw. Great little fellow, though. I knew Billy when he was short-hand champion of the world. Billy thinks a lot of me and I've always admired him, too."
"I understand you're going to do a play, Mr. Parker." I said, trying to get Jeff to the point.
"When you call me Mr. Parker Halla, I don't know to whom you are referring. The first name is Vincent. It ain't as if we were mere acquaintances. I gave you your start on Broadway. Tell me if I'm wrong."
"Vincent," I blurted, "who is Lee Gray? What is she, where is she?"
Parker beamed. "You want to know, too, huh?"
"Too!" Jeff barked. "Who else has been asking?"
"The cops. One of the drama-page boys on the Post tipped them off when he seen my press release. I figured, it would save plenty of comment."
"Well, who is Lee Gray?"
"Frankly, Halla, I don't know."

Strength For The Day
By EARL L. DOUGLASS

VALOR NEVER WON

We pay too little attention to our sins of omission. It is strange the way people hold up their hands and exclaim if someone happens to utter an oath, or how vast multitudes believe that one is thoroughly pleasing to God if he is strict as regards Sabbath observance.

These things are important; no one will deny that. But God marks just as severely the good things we fail to do as He does the evil things we actually do. In the worst picture of fiery judgment we have in the New Testament, the Eternal Judge is pictured as condemning those who were indifferent to hunger, thirst, and loneliness among the milling throng about them. It was not what the scribes and Pharisees did which called forth our Lord's condemnation so much as the gracious acts of mercy they left undone. He seemed to regard the sins of omission with more abhorrence than He did the sins of commission.

Margaret Wilkinson has written these words:

"I never cut my neighbor's throat; My neighbor's gold I never stole; I never spoiled his house and land; But God have mercy on my soul!"

For I am haunted night and day By all the deeds I have not done; O unattempted loveliness! O costly valor never won!"

LABOR Vs. NATIONAL WELFARE

Airplane manufacturing has been slowed down by a strike in one of the large propeller plants. The shipbuilding program is lagging behind because of a strike in one of the larger shipbuilding plants, and yet the government talks instead of taking firm action to put a stop to this kind of foolishness. We must be making a tremendous impression upon our enemies when we hand out big words and threats to them and at the same time cannot get our defense house in order because we are so afraid of labor that we are willing to let it threaten our whole program with a series of unwarranted strikes. We are wondering just how much longer the administration is going to continue to place a higher value on the labor vote than it does on the national welfare.

-- But We Don't Talk About That!

Washington Daybook
By Jack Stinson

Washington—The American man-in-the-street hasn't begun to grasp all the dislocations that are developing as the result of a world at war.

I'm going to tell you about a comparatively minor one which nevertheless will affect every community in the United States. It is that on Easter almost every church in the country will be barren of Easter lilies and in the time between now and then weddings, funerals and religious ceremonies which ordinarily employ this symbol of purity as their chief decoration will have to look to some other flower.

The United States yearly imports 27,000,000 lily bulbs—almost entirely from Japan, though some previously came from Holland. This is 97 per cent of the country's annual consumption. The other 3 per cent is raised here, mostly in the Pacific northwest. This year that 3 per cent will have to do, though it may be augmented somewhat by bulbs which florists already have on hand.

Even before the present freezing of Japanese credits which shuts off the supply completely, the lily bulb business had wilted. A New York florist recently appeared at the Department of Agriculture, wringing his hands. He had ordered 700 cases of Japanese lily bulbs. He had been notified that he could have 50. No reason was given. Whether the lily bulb crop in Japan is a failure this year or whether the Japanese are too busy with their war effort was not explained. Now, of course, this florist, who ordinarily handles 700 cases, will face a lot of his Easter customers without a bloom.

Solution Sought

Confronted with this situation, the Department of Agriculture has rolled up its sleeves and gone to work—and as a result, it's possible that in a few years the farmers of the South may have a new industry.

In its efforts to discover new crops for the country, the department's Bureau of Plant Industry, at its experiment farm at Beltsville, Md., has been trying for years to develop an Easter lily bulb that would grow outside the small area in the Pacific northwest. An Easter lily bulb, in its growth season, divides into "scales" (about 50 to the bulb) and it is from these that the lily plant comes. So far, in this country, the bulbs have been subject to a malicious disease which either destroys the bulb altogether or prevents its division into scales. Whether the bureau has got a disease-resistant bulb that can be grown in great quantities is not positive, but with our whole supply shut off they are going to darn well find out. Here's how:

From the old Farm Resettlement Administration, the Farm Security Administration inherited several big farms. One was Scuppernon Farm in North Carolina, near Cape Fear river, and not far from Dismal Swamp. The other was Terrebonne Farm in the Cajon country of the Mississippi Delta.

On these two farms, the FSA intends this summer to put out 10,000 hand-picked bulbs. It is a purely experimental effort, but if it is successful it will result in a half-million scales and next spring, 500,000 more lilies—more than half the total of the United States' present crop. It would also give the country a big jump on a new plant industry—one that could be developed in the South where the farmers have suffered most and where farm relief has been the greatest burden.

One Real Fly

There are two flies in the ointment of American production of Japanese lilies. One is just exactly that—an aphid—a member of that vast family of tiny winged bugs that prey on many fruits and plants and clutter up the street lights and even swarm into the houses on summer nights. It is this aphid that carries the virus which destroys the bulbs. The horde of aphids being what they are, the only thing that can be done is to develop a disease resistant plant.

The other difficulty is to produce plants that can stand "forcing" (artificial heat treatment to bring them to bloom at the desired time) without "blasting" (destruction and even hearing of the petals as the buds burst).

In any event you can get that the Department of Agriculture for the next year is going to have a sharp eye on Terrebonne and Scuppernon.

Short Shots

Raleigh, Aug. 12.—Your reporter cannot by any stretch of imagination be listed among those who carry a torch for Governor Broughton (except when the torch can be applied to the gold old-fashioned purpose of burning him up), but it seems to this corner that Jim Barrett, sometimes bellicose ballyhoos for the State Federation of Labor, went clear out of bounds in his slap at Broughton for not accepting an invitation to speak at the Federation convention now under way in Charlotte.

The facts do not sustain Barrett's charge that Broughton is deliberately snubbing or snubbing the horny handed sons of toil.

The Governor himself was not in gress, John K. Slear, secretary to Congressman A. L. Bulwinkle, is now pictured as having his cap pointed at the Charlotte postmaster's job—a $6,000 lifetime place (unless he gets too actively into politics like Colonel Paul Youns did). Slear lives in Mockingbird and, therefore, cannot continue as Bulwinkle's right bower, no matter how successful the Gastonia major is in keeping his House seat. Not all the soldiers of Uncle Sam's army have heard of General Lear, it seems. A convoy from a signal corps unit unmistakably "Yoo-hooed" a batch of pretty girls leaning out the Department of Labor windows in what used to be the old Red Brick building. The girls weren't in the least angry about it, either. A state official returning from a tour of the South hills section Sunday, says he bought five bushels of the very finest peaches for a quarter a bushel. Entering the anteroom a visitor told Secretary Tom Banks he wanted to see Governor J. M. Broughton "in the interests of highway safety." Tom suggested that the Governor being out of town, the caller call on Motor Vehicle Commissioner Boddie Ward. "I did," replied the man, "but he didn't know anything." True state of affairs soon came out—the visitor wanted a job—probably about as far as his "interest" in highway safety extends.

Man About Manhattan
By George Tucker

New York.—Height has a lot to do with a man's success—if he is a concert artist. Have you ever stopped to think about that? Well, think about it. Think about Lawrence Tibbett and Nelson Eddy. Think about James Melton and John Charles Thomas. These are the heavy money boys. They're tall—they're men with commanding presence. They dress to accentuate that height and they stand proudly. They dominate an audience physically as well as with their vocal equipment.

This never occurred to me until Willard Matthews mentioned it the other day. Willard Matthews isn't very tall. He's probably about five-feet-six. So he never got very far as a singer, though he had a very fine baritone voice.

When they started kicking him around and saying, "Sonny, you look sort of short standing next to six-foot Johnny over there," he began looking at the business from the other end of things—the management end. Today Willard Matthews, aged 29, has his own concert management bureau. He has more than 30 recognized artists under his wing. He has the Edwin Strawbridge ballet dancers, the Farman symphonietta, the Madrigalist singers.

One of his clients is Robert Crawford, the flying baritone. Crawford is an officer in the air corps reserve and flies to all his concerts. But he doesn't always leave town when he comes off the stage. He sometimes stays all night and next day delivers, without cost, a 45-minute lecture on flying and national defense.

Before Matthews found out how much a man's height meant to a singer he was Nelson Eddy's secretary. He telephoned Eddy one day in Philadelphia and said, "How about an audition, I'm a baritone." When he got there, Eddy was waiting. They became friends, and Matthews wound up by accepting the position of secretary to the singer.

This is Matthews' fourth year. In 1937 he began his career with exactly $18, using his apartment as a business office. Last year he did more than $50,000 worth of business. He thinks he will easily double that amount this season. The season proper begins in October and lasts until April. He has great plans, and those plans evolve around a number of sopranos, baritone, tenors, contraltos, pianists, dancers, ensembles and choirs.

They're all American born. This is the time, he thinks, for American artists to break forever the sickening myth that only Europeans can master the concert stage. If they can't do it now, with Europe closed off by war, they never will be able to do it.

Willard Matthews, ex-baritone thinks they can. His women, he says, are lovely, and his men, well whatever they do, you can be sure of one thing—almost without exception they're tall.

What do women DESPISE most in a man?

Here's the answer that countless women give: Halitosis (Bad Breath). Women simply won't tolerate it in a man. So if you want to make a hit with your girl friend, look after your breath before your next date with her. Be sure to rinse your mouth with Listerine Antiseptic. It's wonderful for combating bad breath due to food fermentation in the mouth. That, say some authorities, is the major cause of this condition, although bad breath is sometimes due to systemic disorders. Listerine Antiseptic halts the fermentation and overcomes its odors. The breath quickly becomes sweeter, purer, less likely to offend.

Greenville Divides Twin Bill With Tarboro's Orioles

BOTH BATTLES HURLED BY KEE

Freak Homer In 8th Gives Tarboro 2nd Game Win

Kelly Kee pitched both ends of the double header in Tarboro last night and came very close to racking up two victories, but a freak home run by Tarboro's Cayton in the eighth accounted for two runs and the Orioles took the second game 2-1 after the Greenies had won the first by the score of 4-3.

In the second affair the Greenies scored one in the fourth when Scagg opened with a double, Finfrack beat out an infield hit, sending Scagg to third. Scagg came home on Overton's single through the pitcher's box.

The locals held the one-run lead until the eighth inning. Walker drew a walk, Murray sacrificed and Cayton sent one to right center which got lost under the fence and both runners scored. The hit ordinarily would have been no more than a two-bagger, but under ground rules he was entitled to make what he could and the second baseman made it good for a homer. Kee was the only Greenville player to get more than one hit in the second game. The Greenville hurler came through with two singles.

The Greenies took the twilight contest 4-3, getting one each in the first and second and adding two more in the sixth frame of the seven-inning affair. The Greenies combined two doubles and a triple along with some smart base-running to garner their runs. Tarboro got two in the fourth and one in the sixth, but fell short by one of knocking the count neither team scored in the seventh. Of Greenville's four hits in the first game, Finfrack got two, one of which was a three-bagger.

A similar program is scheduled for this Smith park tonight, with the Greenies meeting Tarboro in a seven-inning twilight game starting 7 o'clock and then playing a regular nine-inning affair immediately following.

Fans Give Pig To Charley Root

Charley Root, 42, oldest active player in the major leagues, holds aloft a pig, one of many gifts fans and team mates presented to him in Chicago when he took the mound for the Chicago Cubs to pitch against Cincinnati. He also received a station wagon bought with the dimes of fans, and a check for $1,600 from the Cubs. Charley went the entire route but gave up 11 hits and the Reds won 3 to 1.

BOTTLERS WIN PLAY STARTED 15-4 DECISION IN BOYS LOOPS

Pull Ahead 2-1 In Simpson Play-off Series

The Pepsi Cola softball team runners up to Blount-Harvey in the regular season play, gained its second victory in the Simpson play-off series last night and now holds a 2-1 advantage in the series.

The bottlers handed the department store team a 15-4 licking. The next game is scheduled for tomorrow night at Third Street park.

The winners got off to an early start and were able to add runs each inning with the exception of one, with every man on the team getting at least one safety.

Blount-Harvey was able to amass only seven hits and good fielding helped the bottlers to hold down their foes' runs. Blount-Harvey made one in the first and another in the third and added its final two in the seventh.

In The B League

Behind the superb pitching of Harold Williams, West Greenville won over Third Street, 10-3 in the B league. Williams kept the few hits made off him well scattered and defied the Third Streeters a run until the eighth inning, when one was made. The losers' other two came in the final frame. Williams also starred at bat for the winners, getting two for two. M. Lawhorn got two for four for runner-up honors. For the losers S. Garrett, B. Adams, Stocks and Tripp were leading hitters. Carl Alligood turned in the outstanding fielding features of the game.

Hollywood

Sights And Sounds
By Robbie Crane

Hollywood.—New star bet: Dana Andrews.

He is 29, six feet, broad-shouldered, the hero of "Swamp Water." He is no "overnight success." He's been working at Hollywood for 11 years.

Everything has happened to him including being "split" more ways than a watermelon. His contract is shared by two studios. His earnings are split even more—shares go to two business friends who staked his career, to his agent, the residue to himself. "I'm a split personality," he says.

On location down in Georgia he met Vereen Bell, author of "Swamp Water." "You look like a country boy, all right," said Bell.

He also looked like a young army officer in "Kit Carson," like the young plantation man in "Tobacco Road." He was born in Collins, Miss., the son of a minister. His home town now is Huntsville, Tex. where he went to college and decided to become a singer. He became an accountant. Steadier pay. But finally he hitch-hiked to Hollywood.

Closest he got to a movie studio was a filling station in Van Nuys

New York, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Stocks made occasional stabs at recovery in today's market, but few made much of an impression. Wavering tendencies were displayed by leaders at the start.

While a handful of gainers was in evidence near the fourth hour, losses of fractions to a point or so were well distributed. Dealings were negligible throughout.

FOREST TRAIN TO TOUR STATE

All-Forestry Exhibit Also To Visit Other States

Raleigh, Aug. 12.—An all-forestry exhibit train will tour North Carolina and five other southeastern states, starting in Clinton, S. C., on August 23, it was announced today by R. W. Graeber, Extension forester of State College. Eleven stops will be made in North and South Carolina.

The train will be operated by the Seaboard Railway in cooperation with the U. S. Forest Service, the Extension foresters, the Schools of Forestry, and the Forestry Associations in the six states. Other states to be visited by the train, in addition to North and South Carolina are Georgia, Alabama, Virginia and Florida.

Graeber plans to be with the train on all its stops in North Carolina. He said that a schedule of the tour has not yet been completed.

"The forestry train," Graeber said, "will demonstrate how forestry problems can be met by the people of the southeast. One of the cars making up the exhibit has as its slogan: 'The South's forests are vital to Southern and National welfare' and will explain the benefits of the forests to labor, agriculture, business in general, and to all our citizens."

A second car, the Extension Specialist explained, will contain exhibits detailing the necessity of protecting the forests from fire in order that benefits may be derived from them. A third car will be used as a motion picture theater to present motion and still pictures, and lectures.

"We feel," Graeber declared, "that this traveling exhibit will help greatly to impress upon the public two of the major forestry problems of this section: Forest protection and wise use of forests."

Fiscatorial Patriarch Erwin, Tenn. (AP)—"Old Bill" is a rainbow trout, but like most long-time government "employees" he has been retired on pension. "Old Bill" is the patriarch of the government fish hatchery here. "Too old for propagation purposes"—he's 14 and weighs 13 pounds—"Old Bill" still receives careful attention from the hatchery attendants.

Agencies To Get Chance To List Needs and Desires

Reflector Bureau.

By HENRY AVERILL
Raleigh, Aug. 12.—Whether it will mean anything after it's done is quite problematical, but on August 23 a list of North Carolina's public works needs and desires will be compiled in great detail.

Governor J. M. Broughton has sent letters to no less than 52 departments and institutions advising them that at 10:30 a. m., Saturday, August 23, they are expected to gather in the hall of the House for a session over which J. L. Hales, state director of Public Works Reserve division will preside.

The idea behind PWR is to prepare, in long advance, a list of all public work projects which can be built to advantage when the present war emergency passes and things go "bloody" instead of as now, "boom."

Wherefore the meeting will give the 52 chiefs a chance to get off their chests whatever long range construction plans they may have in mind for their respective units. In view of the fact that there were submitted to the advisory budget commission, prior to the last legislature, requests for well over ten million dollars worth of "permanent improvements," it is obvious that the PWR meeting is going to be marked by suggestion for projects running into rows and rows of zeros after some ordinary numeral.

But it is well to point out in advance that there will be no need to anticipate immediate bankruptcy for the state because of these staggering proposals. They will be just that—proposals—and probably will be filed in the archives where they will quietly gather dust through the years.

REA AFFECTED BY NEW ORDER

Allotment Regarded Hardly A Drop In The Bucket

Reflector Bureau.

By HENRY AVERILL
Raleigh, Aug. 12.—The State Rural Electrification has just received the bad news about federal allocation of material essential in construction of rural power lines—and, on its face, at least, the news is emphatically bad.

Leon Henderson, director of OPACS (the Office of Prices and Civilian Supply, if you aren't familiar with this recent addition to the New Deal's alphabetical family), has sent out a bulletin allotting to all rural power projects in the whole country for the next six months, beginning August 1, the following essential materials:

4,500 short tons of copper.
3,100 short tons of steel.
140 short tons of zinc.
3 1/2 short tons of aluminum.

In approximate figures, it takes considerably more than a thousand pounds of copper for a mile of power line. Thus a ton of copper will build two miles of line. Simple multiplication gives 9,000 miles as grand total of lines which can be strung anywhere in the United States through the next six months.

Considering the fact that North Carolina alone added some 6,000 miles to its system last year, it is easy to see that 4,500 short tons of copper is hardly a "drop in the bucket" when applied to the whole country.

Not only that but the Henderson allocations must first be applied to all projects now in course of construction. OPM (Office of Production Management) is charged with the duty of enforcing the Henderson decree.

Despite the bleak outlook for further extension of rural electric systems, Director Gwyn Price of the state REA is not discouraged or down hearted.

"It may not be as bad as it looks on the surface," he said. "There are no figures on how much copper and other material were used in the REA program during the last six months, and it is possible that the allotments will build more line than we think."

"Then, too, it is probable that there will be relaxations in the strict rationing in cases where the proposed lines can be shown to be of aid in national defense."

The state authority is making a thorough study of proposed lines in North Carolina in order to determine which can be called of prime importance in the defense scheme

An effort to save material is evident in a paragraph of the Henderson bulletin calling on rural lines to substitute flat rates wherever possible, thus making the use of meters unnecessary. That would save considerable quantities of zinc and aluminum—both of which are vital raw materials for the defense program.

Even should the scarcity of materials cut sharply into the construction projects upon which the state REA has placed its approval and limit those to be proposed, there still remains a big job for the unit Mr. Price heads.

No adequate data are available on the use of electric appliances on rural lines already built. A full in building would give the REA a chance to center its efforts on obtaining this information with a view to using it in an intensive campaign to increase the use of power on the lines already built. Some of them will likely never "pay out" unless there is a big pickup in use of current by customers as well as the addition of numbers of customers not now served but who are located within serving distance of the present lines.

Dr. Simons To Preach For Bertie Revival

At the close of the service on Sunday morning, Dr. J. D. Simons, pastor of Memorial Baptist Church, brought to the attention of the congregation a letter from the Mars Hill Baptist Church in Bertie county, inviting him to be their guest preacher in a revival.

The church granted him a leave of absence to hold the special meetings which will begin on September 8th.

Dr. Simons is a native of the Mars Hill community and he united with the church there when he was a boy.

Reverend A. P. Musplian is pastor of the Mars Hill church.
