Ark Royal Damag'd

Rome, Oct. 6.—(AP)—The 22,000-ton British aircraft carrier Ark Royal was damaged seriously by a torpedo from an Italian submarine after the air attack September 2 on a British Mediterranean convoy and has returned to Gibraltar at slow speed, a special Italian communique announced today.

Three of Britain's biggest battleships, the Rodney, Nelson and King George, V, also were in the naval formation against which the Italian submarine attack was reported to have been made last Wednesday.

The 33,900-ton Nelson was declared by the Italians previously to have been hit on the bow by an aerial torpedo in the air-naval battle against the British convoy. She is a sister ship of the Rodney, both being of a type exceeded in the British navy only by the King George V, class of 35,000-ton battleships.

A Lisbon dispatch was quoted here as saying the Nelson was so severely damaged by an aerial torpedo that she would be under repair for several months.

WILL CONSIDER BILL CHANGES

Leaders To Confer on Neutrality Act Revisions

Hyde Park, Oct. 6.—(AP)—The temporary White House announced today that Secretary Hull, Vice-President Wallace, five senators and two House members would confer with President Roosevelt in Washington tomorrow on revision of the neutrality law.

Mr. Roosevelt has indicated that the decision would enable him to reach a decision on whether to recommend that the law be scrapped or that it simply be modified to permit the arming of American merchantmen and, perhaps, to let American vessels sail into combat zones from which they are now barred.

The senators invited to the White House are Barkley (D-Ky.) the majority leader; Connally (D-Tex.) Foreign Relations Committee chairman; George (D-Ga.) former chairman of the committee; McNary (R-Ore.) the minority leader; and Austin (R-Vt.) assistant minority leader.

Barkley, Connally and Austin have endorsed both the arming of cargo carriers and the removal of the ban against their entering combat areas, while George is reported to favor only the arming of ships and McNary is represented as being against any major change in the neutrality act for the present.

As observers for the House, Chairman Bloom (D-N.Y.) of the Foreign Affairs Committee, and Rep. Easton (R-N.J.) a committee member, will sit on the parley.

Another Negro, whose name was not known, was injured by a stray bullet.

Possibility Of Offer Given Credence In British And American Diplomatic Quarters, With Both Certain Plan Will Be Rejected; Hitler Would Ignore Britain After Eliminating Russia

Cairo, Oct. 6.—(AP)—Adolf Hitler will make a new peace offer to Britain and the United States as well before the year's end, according to information reaching here.

Hitler, according to one American recently arrived from German-controlled territory, expects to be able within this time to announce that Russia has been put out of the war and to state that he is going ahead with his "new order" on the continent and ignore England except to carry out reprisals against her for any bombing done to Germany.

The Germans expect that England after a period of such a stalemate would accept a peace, this informant said.

The peace offer forecast is given considerable credence in both British and American diplomatic quarters here, but both are certain that the offer will be rejected and that the war will go on.

According to this information, Hitler will concentrate Germany's full war-waging power against Russia in the next six weeks in the hope of making sufficient gains to tell the world he has put the Soviet Union out of the combat and crushed Bolshevism.

Attacks on Britain and the Near East would be held to a bare minimum, while all strength possible would be turned on Russia.

MANEUVERS IN INITIAL STAGE

Soldiers Of First Army Take to Fields, Woods

Camden, S. C., Oct. 6.—(AP)—Soldiers of the first army, 359,000 strong, took the fields and woods today in the initial phase of a two-months maneuver program that will reach its peak during the last two weeks of November, when all elements of an up-to-date army will be thrown into simulated battle.

Over an area approximately 140 miles long and 80 miles wide, covering 10,000 square miles evenly divided between the Carolinas, the officers and men of Lieut. General Hugh A. Drum's army began an intensive practice for war that will not end until December 1.

On foot and by motor transport they began moving out of their base camps this morning to participate in various training problems. For the first two weeks, the maneuvers will be confined to exercises executed separately by each of the three corps in the first army each within its own area. Later they will come mock warfare in which other corps are pitted against the first army and finally, the big windup in which the First army will engage in simulated battle against the fourth corps of the third army.

DAMAGE FROM STORM BELOW EXPECTATIONS

Small Hurricane Whips Across Southern Florida

BRUNT FELT BY NASSAU, MIAMI

Although Little Damage Caused Thus Far, Weather Bureau Warns Against Relaxed Vigilance

Miami, Fla., Oct. 6.—(AP)—A small hurricane whipped across extreme southern Florida today, leaving little damage in an area prepared for much worse.

Nassau and Miami appeared chief sufferers from the swiftly-moving tropical disturbance, but even there the property toll was slight and no fatalities or serious injuries were reported.

A 9 a. m. Weather Bureau advisory said the hurricane—so compact that it squeezed through the 28-mile stretch between Miami and Homestead—would pass into the Gulf of Mexico this morning between Everglades and Fort Myers.

Warning against relaxed vigilance, the Bureau said the "very small, but very dangerous center" would complete the crossing of sparsely settled inland south Florida without loss of intensity.

Hurricane warnings were displayed on Everglades to Punta Gorda, on Florida's west coast and ships in the path in the gulf were advised to proceed with caution.

Highest winds reported to the Weather Bureau throughout the passage of the storm from a beginning 1,000 miles out in the Atlantic, through the Bahama Islands and across the east Florida coast were 123 mile gusts recorded at the Pan-American Airways seaplane base near here.

Nassau experienced winds as high as 102 miles an hour. Several small craft were driven ashore at the Duke of Windsor's capital city. The Duke and his Duchess are in Canada on a vacation.

Campaign On Leningrad Would Be Subordinated

Is Wed To Cowboy

Vast Offensive Which Appears To Be Emerging At Start Of 16th Week Of Invasion May Be "Gigantic" Operation Hinted At By Adolf Hitler In His Speech Last Friday

By The Associated Press

A vast new German offensive, with Moscow perhaps as its principal goal and the siege of Leningrad subordinated, today appeared to be emerging on the long Eastern front.

Authoritative sources in London which have been calling the turn of the gigantic struggle, now in its 16th week, said the offensive "on a very considerable scale" had been launched all along the front, with the possible exception of the Leningrad area, where German activity seemed to have dwindled.

The offensive may be the "gigantic" operation of which Adolf Hitler hinted in his speech last Friday. At least that was the line taken by German commentators.

Berlin, however, gave no indication of the goal of the new drive, but Dietrich, Aus Deutschland, a commentary service close to official circles, said the operations were so great as to be "similar to the opening of a new campaign."

There were speculations in London that the major objective was the Russian capital, with the attack developing especially from the areas of Rostov, about 230 miles southwest of Moscow.

Some London war observers were inclined to ask whether the indicated Moscow push was not part of an elaborate sham to cover up the failure to take Leningrad "with the overwhelming swiftness" of which the German high command once boasted.

While the Germans were talking thus about a new turn in the war and their high command was claiming the capture of 12,000 more Russian prisoners in the southern Ukraine, Russians declared their Red armies were in stronger positions than at any time since the beginning of the invasion, now in its 16th week.

The Russians also claimed their armies had rolled back the German besiegers of Leningrad as much as two to three miles at some points and had pushed forward at least 21 miles on the southwestern sector—in the Ukraine.

gave an inspiring challenge to the group. She explained that the "Y" is a part of a large, world-wide organization, the purpose of which is to promote mental, physical, social and spiritual growth.

"Human beings," declared Miss Whitley, "are so made that they are only happy when they are secure, and to feel real security we must put our faith in something greater than ourselves." After pointing out that it is not the work of the officers alone, but that of every member, which helps the "Y" fulfill its aim; she added that the obligation of the members is there all day and every day in the smiles they give and the kind words they say because that is the Christian way of life.

Continuing, she mentioned the importance of the students thinking seriously about the present world situation. The "Y" can help one find a philosophy of life in the present uncertain times that can be depended upon. As she closed her remarks she asked the faculty, the old and new members for their support of the "Y" in upholding its standards and to unite in trying to the utmost to follow the principles of Jesus.

Also taking part in the program was Miss Bessie Fay Hunt of Winterville, treasurer, who conducted the devotional. Happy Relief From Painful Backache

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way. The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Student Picture. Individual photographs of each Greenville High School student will be made Tuesday of next week by Renfrew photographers to complete office files. Grammar school pictures will be taken Wednesday. Students wishing to buy one of these pictures will be allowed to.

This is the first time this has been done since 1936 in Greenville schools.

"Wit's End". The Dramatic class started studying the art of make-up this morning. How to apply make-up for "Wit's End," a mystery comedy to be given October 8, was studied by the Dramateers.

The Soong Sisters. North Carolinians have an especial interest in Emily Hahn's newest biography "The Soong Sisters," for the father of these famous women lived in Wilmington during his early manhood. And southerners have a pride in them for not only was the father educated at a southern university, but all three of them were graduates of Wesleyan College for Women in Georgia.

It is a biography that is as fascinating as fiction. It is "real life" losing none of its color because it really happened. The story is incredible because it is great, and it is great because it is true.

There are many who have wondered how three members, especially women, of one family could attain such eminence. But after reading the book and studying the background of the parents, the environment and the training in the home, it is easily understood how only a great emergency was needed to bring forth the latent power.

The remarkable thing about the upbringing of these sisters was the independence allowed them in a day before it had become a major point in education. The daughters were a part of a progressive, affectionate, rather Spartan household, their mother stressing self-reliance, their father fostering an interest in social conditions. Their education was such that each was able to develop according to her special ability. And today they have found success in divergent lines. They symbolize three distinct political trends of modern China, this due probably in a great measure to the influence of the famous men who became their husbands.

Some other new books in the library are:

"Tar Heel," by Jonathan Daniels. The author goes wandering a second time over the old North State. This time noting the outstanding and famous personalities that have pointed the way for the people of the South to a new economic and literary place in the country.

"Convenient Season," by David J. Manners—Here is something unusual—an outstanding first novel by

PRICE OF FISH HITS NEW HIGH

Here's One Fish Story That Is On The Up And Up

Reflector Bureau. By HENRY AVERILL

Raleigh, Oct. 4.—This is a fish story—but it has no comedy angles and it's no part of a lie, unfortunately for frugal Tar Heel housewives.

The price of sea foods, based on the aggregate of 20 items has soared this season to an extent not paralleled by the increases in cost of other foods and groceries served on the average North Carolina table, according to A. B. Harless, market news specialist of the State Department of Agriculture.

He explains at least a portion of the increase on the theory that quite a sizeable proportion of the commercial, small-group fishermen have abandoned fishing and turned to more profitable occupations incident to the national defense program.

In other words the fishermen are one of Hollywood's gifted young men. It is the story of a farm in the famous Annapolis Valley in Nova Scotia, where grow the best apples in the world, and at the same time a story of two entwined and passionate love-affairs, one of the present and one of the last generation.

"Not By Bread Alone" by Mary Frances Dover—A story of courage and love, in which three good and strong women have the courage to marry the men they love despite the worldly caution of those who have an eye to the material comforts of life. These women, too, have the love to make happiness for themselves, their husbands and their children in their unworldly marriages.

"The Blind Man's House" by Hugh Walpole—This is the story of Celia Cromwell and her big, handsome blind husband Julius, and their life in the seacoast village of Garth, in England. The author has succeeded in giving the reader a full-sized portrait of an English town in an intensely readable and exciting story.

"Temporary Address: Reno," by Faith Baldwin—A book in which three stories are interwoven into one. Three women come to Reno to rid themselves of a man, to try to find there the solution to their problems and attempt to discover the way to permanent happiness.

Much of the fishing on the North Carolina coast is of the sport variety, but there is a large and now-flourishing business for the commercial anglers.

Mr. Harless cites many instances in which the retail price of sea-foods and fish products have advanced tremendously in the last year.

At Raleigh, for instance, the average retail price of 20 items of sea food has advanced 4.2 cents per unit (pound or quart), some showing a maximum advance of 7 1/2 cents, while only two items have remained unchanged in price.

FOR THE LOVE OF PAM

By VIVIEN GREY

Chapter 25
 Quarrel With Jerry
 "Don't mind Lenore, Pam," he said easily. "She's just young and reckless. She hasn't learned yet that everything you do has a price tag attached to it, and decent people step up and pay. She wants to have her cake and eat it too."
 "Don't you dare talk to her about me!" Lenore said fiercely. "Pam was thankful that Lenore kept her voice low, so passersby would have no inkling that a bitter quarrel was taking place in the Queller-ton doorway."
 "Don't mind her, Pam," Jerry continued. "She's one of those females who live by guess and by gusto, and life always makes a nice little game of breaking people like that."
 "All right!" Lenore snapped. "Do I get that key, or don't I?"
 Jerry looked at her in mock amazement.

"Have I said all that and you don't know what I mean? No! No, he all but shouted, you don't!"
 Lenore turned then to Pam and said scornfully:
 "How does it feel to be the girl whose favors men are making bets about?"
 "As it must feel to be ordered off a place!" Pam's voice was shaking with anger. "And you're being ordered now. I don't want to see you or speak to you until you've learned better manners!"
 Lenore opened her mouth as if to speak.

"Don't!" Pam said fiercely. "Don't say another word to me!"
 Pam shut the door firmly, but without slamming it, while Lenore was still looking at her as if she would have spoken again.
 "Goodbye, Lenore!" Jerry called smoothly, and then turned to Pam, grinning.
 But Pam was in no mood for camouflage.

Jerry, Lenore's taunt stung and rankled.
 "Keep still, Jerry Winthrop!" she cried wildly. "Your sister's poisonous, and you're just as bad. I hate you both. You're a couple of spoiled brats. Neither of you know how to do a single useful thing, and you don't want to learn."
 "You listen to me," Jerry interrupted her angrily. "You've been telling me what I am! All right, now I'll tell you something you don't know. I'm going to show you things about your own business that you haven't had originally enough to think up. I've been taking it on the chin from you. Now you'll do a little taking," he went on breathlessly. "You think I've been wasting my time lately, don't you?"
 "I don't even have to think about that," Pam said scornfully. "I know it."
 "You little spitfire! Will you listen to me?" he demanded. "Wait just a minute!" Jerry rushed to his car, and returned carrying a wood cigar box.

Blaze stood by, looking on as if she thought her two friends had taken sudden leave of their sense.
 Jerry opened the box, saying, "Cast your eyes this way."
 Jerry At Work:
 Pam caught a glimpse of shells in the box. She couldn't keep from looking, but tried to mask her interest with an expressionless face.
 "Come on," Jerry said, "don't pull the deadpan stuff. You never wear your face that way. It isn't either becoming or natural. I've been investigating and writing letters since Dad broke the bad news. I've never looked at women's clothes with so much interest in my life. And I've written to every friend who has a friend in the woman's gadget business. I hadn't intended to come to you with any of this until I had it all in the bag. But you've made me get a mad on that's spilling the whole works. I haven't a useful thought, did you say? Look!" He put into Pam's hand a small, perfect shell, rough and white, it looked as if it had been sprinkled with grated coconut. It had been filed and a little shank sunk firmly into the filling.

"A button!" Pam said with interest that she could not hide.
 "You guessed it the first time. Go to the head of the class. A button. College girls will go big for such buttons on their white woolly sport coats and skating jackets. And these buttons can be made as strong as any fastener ever manufactured."
 Jerry went on then and showed her a number of articles—lapel and purse ornaments made of the tiniest and brightest colored shells. Gay amusing figures for mantels, made of shells and such ordinary things as pipe cleaners. Costume jewelry—big showy things Pam would not have dared go in for, but since Jerry had taken the bold stroke and made them up, she knew they would catch on. They were beautiful.

"I've got some orders clinched already. And I'm getting others," Jerry said.
 Pam looked at him as if seeing an entirely new and different person. "I didn't think you had it in you, Jerry," she said quietly.
 "Oh, you didn't?" Jerry was not quick to get over his anger. "Well, young lady, I'm prepared to back you right off the boards. I was going to bring my ideas to you and ask you to let me earn my way along with you. Well, I've gotten all over that quaint idea!"
 "You have something here, Jerry," Pam's natural honesty asserted itself. "She was compelled to give credit where it was due. "You have originality and a sort of knack for this work." She was speaking slowly. "You've got more of a gift for it than I have."
 Jerry laughed. "The girls' honest," he said, as if discovering something.

"Honestly isn't such a rare thing among regular people," Pam said, matching his irony.
 "Are you getting hateful again?" "Not again."
 "Jerry looked at her intently. He could read the signs of pain in her face."
 "Look, Pam," he said, "I'm sorry about that bet. I mean it. Forgive me, will you, and forget it? It didn't mean anything, really."
 "Didn't mean anything, when you bet with a crowd of boys about me? I can't understand that kind of reasoning, Jerry."

Night came like the closing of the dark covers of a book. Belita came to the door of the living room and looked at the figure still silhouetted against the window.
 When she returned to her kitchen, she found Jerry sitting at the table, looking at a book.
 "What are you doing?" she asked.
 "Reading," he said.
 "What book?"
 "A book on fire prevention and fire insurance."
 "Why?"
 "I'm thinking about getting a fire insurance policy."
 "You're not getting any?"
 "No, I'm not. I'm thinking about getting a fire insurance policy."
 "You're not getting any?"
 "No, I'm not. I'm thinking about getting a fire insurance policy."

"Jerry looked at her intently. He could read the signs of pain in her face."
 "Look, Pam," he said, "I'm sorry about that bet. I mean it. Forgive me, will you, and forget it? It didn't mean anything, really."
 "Didn't mean anything, when you bet with a crowd of boys about me? I can't understand that kind of reasoning, Jerry."

Jerry was at a loss for words with which to amend the situation.
 "Pam, if you had a brother you'd understand," he said. "You've—" But Pam interrupted spiritedly: "If I had a brother, he wouldn't do anything like that!"
 Jerry looked at her thoughtfully. Everything he said seemed wrong.
 "Pam, I—" he began, but her voice broke in impetuosity:
 "And I think I hate you still for it! You made me ridiculous and cheap before that whole crowd."
 "Pam, won't you understand?"
 "You hurt me so, Jerry. I—" The words ended in a sob.

"Darling!" He caught her to his heart and held her there, tenderly close. "I didn't mean to hurt you. I adore you so, Pam. I love you so. I'll spend all my life trying to show you how earnest and how deep that love is. I'd ask you to marry me tonight, if I had anything to offer you, Pam. That's how I feel about you. I want you more than anything else in the world." It had come with impetuous sincerity. Pam knew how much he meant it. She could hear it in his voice. But she wanted assurance over and over. Her wounded pride demanded that she really care for? she asked, still in that hurt, stifled voice.
 It stumped Jerry for a moment and then he tried to explain.
 "About girls they admire, dear. The caring for you came afterwards. You were, when I saw you there on the beach, about the most attractive girl I'd seen in a long time. You still are, Pam."
 "Oh, Jerry, don't try to save it over with sweet talk!" Pam said impatiently. "I'm not going to let you make a complete nitwit of me. You know you're not the only man in Key West!"

"Has it ever occurred to you you're not the only girl?" Jerry demanded crisply.
 "Oh, Jerry, we're not getting anywhere! Nowhere at all! What I planned as a lovely party turned into a quarrel. I'm disgusted with us. Go home! We can't be together but we quarrel."
 "I can answer that one," Jerry said quietly. "It's because we love each other. And you're trying to deny it."
 Pam turned on him in a fury. "Get going, Jerry Winthrop!" she said.
 "You are in love with me! Some day you'll admit it!"
 "In love with you? I'm going to marry Leo Shore! Marry him, do you hear? And I never want to see you again."
 Pam was stunned at the words she had spoken. Marry Leo. The words had come out of her helpless fury. Marry Leo Shore! She raged at herself for letting her emotions trick her into such a statement. Jerry looked stricken as he turned from her. All of the light and happiness, even the anger, had gone from his face.

And she knew Jerry had been right. It was because she loved him that she churned to helpless fury when things went wrong between them.
 Pam loathed herself for the foolish, dishonest thing she had done. It went counter to all of the theories on which she had built her life. She stood motionless long after Jerry had gone, watching the quiet street from her window, thinking she knew she loved Jerry. Well, she scolded herself, then why didn't she take him and take her chances on his turning out rightly?

"Jerry looked at her intently. He could read the signs of pain in her face."
 "Look, Pam," he said, "I'm sorry about that bet. I mean it. Forgive me, will you, and forget it? It didn't mean anything, really."
 "Didn't mean anything, when you bet with a crowd of boys about me? I can't understand that kind of reasoning, Jerry."

Strength For The Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

THE FACE A MIRROR
Sidney Smith once said of Francis Horner that the Ten Commandments were stamped on his face.
Victor Hugo has written the following words: "Human physiognomy is formed by the conscience, and is the result of a multitude of mysterious excavations."

Sometimes our faces come to indicate the kind of life we live.
Evil, avarice, and lust quickly stamp the features with an imprimatur which is easily recognized.
On the other hand, those who live quiet, trusting lives and who carry about in their hearts every day the desire to help their neighbors when the opportunity presents itself, have in the very creases of their faces as well as in the look of their eyes, a kindness which men everywhere observe and understand.

Victor Hugo's statement that the appearance of our faces is formed by the conscience and is the result of a multitude of mysterious excavations, is arresting. To excavate means to scoop or cut out, and Hugo in this connection means that the people whose faces attract us are those who have distinguished their lives, denied themselves certain things, endured trouble. These "mysterious excavations" are the things that make character, and character is always reflected on our faces as sunshine is reflected on a mirror.

As the years pass, the record of our thoughts and deeds is written in our features so that even who runs may read.

FAREWELL TO LINDBERGH

By BASH BREWER
(Publisher, The Standard-Times, Mercury, New Bedford, Mass.)

It is time to write Finis to the Lindbergh hoax.

It already has gone too far for the country's good—and far too far —for Lindbergh's.

This tragic young hero is no wizard of statecraft, defense or philosophy—even he admits this.

He has forfeited, by resignation or otherwise, every job he has filled since he returned from his epic Paris trip.

His English is faulty and his thinking, on his own, is halting, vague, and evasive.

Witness his four and one-half hours' testimony before the Len-dase Committee of the House in January.

Here, compelled to answer questions without advisers, only Lindbergh seem unaware of his adolescence.

Even Lindbergh's views on aviation, the one field in which he may claim distinction, are challenged by equal or superior authorities, such as Major Alexander P. de Seversky,

What has lifted this solo pilot hero to the pinnacle of public attention, from which he takes on subjects of which he is profoundly ignorant?

An opposition to Lindbergh, as ignorant of him as he is of himself, has lifted him aloft like the resistance of the air lifts the plane he flies.

Lindbergh essentially has a martyr complex, dating from the time when, as a boy, he heard his father's pleas against war and saw his father stoned and egged for his pains.

Unfair criticism was all he needed to convince himself that he was a modern Joan of Arc.

Even the President has more than once picked on this confused adolescent to help stamp him to the world (and to himself) as a public figure of importance.

These attacks have drawn the crowds and made "the show," a rather sordid show, with Lindbergh appearing more like Almee Sempie McPherson than Joan of Arc.

At the show, stogy old war horse, like Wheeler and Nye, bask, with tongue in cheek, as Lindy limps his limbs.

At this sordid show, Lindbergh

Don't Look Now, Cap'n-- night after night uses the theme song:

"Mothers and wives, do you want your sons and husbands dying on foreign battlefields?"

It takes "courage" of course, to ask this question of wives and mothers.

It takes even more than "courage" to accept the accompanying thunderous applause.

But a martyr, thoroughly sold on himself, "can do no wrong."

Lindbergh actually believes he is right.

Attacks of critics and applause of the crowd, both of which he hates, have sold him that he is the Country's anointed savior.

When Lindbergh was headed to Paris 14 years ago, he took letters of introduction along.

Lindbergh today has no more idea of the meaning of what he does and its consequences than when he took along his letters to Paris.

The bald truth is that, ever since the Paris flight, somebody has been playing Lindbergh for a sucker.

He has been a "natural" for anyone who could "sneak up on his blind side" (sincerity to use his name and name).

Hitler and Goering knew Lindbergh, as he didn't know himself, and used him.

Goering didn't fool Lindbergh about the German air strength—he didn't have to—or want to.

Hitler wanted to take Czechoslovakia, Austria, Poland and all else if he could by frightening and without fighting.

He let Lindbergh see all—become frightened—and frighten Britain.

He used Lindbergh for a sucker—of course without Lindbergh's knowing it.

With Russia, at the time of Munich, the military situation and strategy were exactly the opposite of Germany's.

Russia, knowing attack from Germany was to come, deemed it wise to conceal her military strength from all.

If Hitler knew the facts, he might attack too soon, before Russia was fully prepared.

Hence Russia let Lindbergh report
Russian defense, including planes,
"unbelievably bad."

Three months of warfare between Hitler and Russia prove Lindbergh wrong.

Even the Germans admit they have been fooled by the strength and tactics of Russian defense.

With unbelievable naivete, Lindbergh thinks it was he who "discovered" German air strength.

"I was proved to be right in everything I prophesied about the war in Europe," he says.

For four or five years before the war, such able men as Bernard Baruch made yearly trips to Europe, were fully informed, and made reports to us and British officials.

Returning in 1938, Baruch said to the President, "Don't put too much faith in France and Britain.
They are broken reeds."

For five years before the present war, Winston Churchill warned Britain of Hitler's growing military strength, and urged Britain to prepare.

Leaders, time and again, spoke warnings in France.

Both France and Britain were then emphasizing popular reforms, as was America, while Hitler's dictatorship was arming to the teeth.

Though Lindbergh did not "discover" the danger to France and Britain, he is, however, the only one who has laid claim to the honor.

He also is the only one who has said he "was always right."

He prophesied that Britain would fall within 30 to 60 days after Dunkirk.

But this apparently Lindbergh has forgotten.

He was astonished at the defeat of the Luftwaffe over Britain after Dunkirk.

But this also apparently he has forgotten.

In the battle over Britain, Major de Seversky correctly prophesied British victory.

Of such substance is the Lindbergh myth made.

Even in his use of English and his knowledge of elementary history, Lindbergh shows a strange combination of ignorance and confusion.

He constantly harps on "Interventionists" in Europe and America as being to blame for all wars and all defeats.

But "interventionist" to Lindbergh has no dictionary meaning; nor has it the same meaning in any two instances.

In Europe he calls France and Britain "interventionists" because, after the defeat of Austria and Czechoslovakia and the attack on Poland was was declared on Germany.

But it was not "intervention" when Germany attacked successively almost every country in Europe.

An interventionist in Europe, to Lindbergh, is any country except Germany, especially any defeated country.

In America, an interventionist, to Lindbergh, is anyone who believes America must defend herself by opposing Hitler.

"Interventionists," says Lindbergh, "have only a record of failure everywhere."

It seems to have escaped Lindbergh completely that George Washington led American interventionists against England and won American independence.

It also escaped Lindbergh that,
but for the "intervention" of France on the side of the American colonists, the War for Independence never would have been won.

It seems odd to have occurred to Lindbergh that Lincoln intervened to prevent the secession of the South and to preserve the Union.

"Interventionist," to Lindbergh, his favorite word, is someone, either in Europe or America, who opposes Hitler, but it is not Hitler.

The wide open spaces in Lind-bergh's conception of American problems are illustrated by his attitude toward the sea.

In not one word I have been able to find has Lindbergh suggested he realized the importance of freedom of the seas to the United States.

He constantly harps on the idea that, with sufficient planes and other equipment, we can prevent attack —on America.

He even says we "should fight" if South America is threatened.

He says airplanes cannot transport troops in sufficient number overseas to attack us, that only ships can do this.

But it never seems to have occurred to Lindbergh that we could not get troops to South America
if Hitler controlled the seas.

Nor has it apparently occurred to him the kind of defense he assures us we can make would leave us entirely shut off from the rest of the world.

We could not trade with the world, to buy or sell, with Hitler in control of seas.

Strategic raw materials that we must have would be unavailable, even for defense.

With Hitler in control of the seas, we would not be in much better situation than Germany today, with the exception of food.

Apparently, to Lindbergh, the ocean still is only something to fly over.

The plain truth is, that with the world afloat, and danger to America the greatest in its history—

Lindbergh, the boy hero of Paris, has become our number one psychological child.

It makes no difference that he is sincere—he was entirely sincere when he was running errands for Hitler before Munich.

He is again being made a sucker and by elements whose interests are diametrically opposed to the United States.

This time it is America, not France, England, Czechoslovakia or

Washington Daybook

Washington—Thomas E. Dewey, who not so long ago had at least a toe-hold on nomination for the presidency, came to Washington the other day to cut himself a slice of red tape.

Along in the spring he was selected chairman of that drive to raise $11,000,000 for the United Service Organizations—the community chest for recreation in the armed forces. Dewey did his part and the money topped the goal.

The government had sponsored the idea and agreed to furnish off-lease-reservation housing for the USO. Into the national defense housing bill for $120,000,000 went provision for building 225 USO cantonments. The bill passed and John M. Carmody's federal works agency was given administration.

So what happens? Nothing, says Dewey. With no cantonments built and no word of any building, Dewey began to get a lot of complaints. What was happening with all that $11,000,000?

That's why the former presidential aspirant came to Washington to snip a little red tape. He wouldn't tell how he did it, but he did say that "I think everything will be all right from now on. I just called a few people and saw a few more. For the most part, I found everybody very cooperative—especially in the Army and Navy."

Delay A Capital Mystery
The delay in getting the USO recreation drive under way has been one of the mysteries of the capital. The subject of army morale has been widely discussed. Editorials, articles and speeches on it have been included in the Congressional Record almost daily.

Some that Lindbergh has prophesied. Some he has helped to bring about. And some, that by futile criticism, we have helped Lindbergh to bring about.

We are going to need the Lindbergh Flight to Paris romance to dream about in the hard days ahead. Let us salvage what we can of the Lindbergh saga, one of the most priceless in our history.

Anne Lindbergh said of her lone and solitary hero, recently, "Charles at least has the memory of his father with him. I'm entirely alone."

Both live in a dream world, the wife in fleecy clouds, the husband at the stake of martyrdom.

I would like to see the dream broken by both long enough for Lindbergh to know what he has been doing TO—and not FOR—"his country."

Peter Cooper, best known for building the Tom Thumb in 1830, for financing the laying of the Atlantic cable and for founding Cooper Union, spent most of his 52 years inventing new devices.

"Ten Times More Enjoyable" Perhaps he is right. Typical of the conflicting stories that have poured into Washington are those which grew out of an investigation of a Massachusetts camp. The investigation indicated a morale so minus as to be alarming. Then a private, who had been in the camp nearly 10 months, sat down and composed a piece which was written into the Congressional Record.

"Anyone who snoops around a town of 28,000," he said in part, "can find rumors about everyone from the mayor to the street cleaner.... And the same goes for a camp of 28,000 soldiers."

"Just give a soldier a chance to grape. Just give him the right conversational lead, and he'll tell you a swell story. It's the fashion. It's just as much a military custom as saluting—and ten times more enjoyable...."

That, mind you, came from one of the "downtrodden" privates. It isn't an isolated expression either.

It may be an explanation of why national defense bigwigs have been more concerned generally with officer matters and are more inclined to let the Army and urban centers in camp areas work out the problems of morale. It even may explain why government officials weren't prodded a little sooner into relieving Mr. Dewey of that $11,000,000 gunny sack he was holding.

New roads now permit auto travel to Panama's jungle provinces.

Phantoms Look To Saturday Night Tilt With Plymouth

HIGHS TO FACE SCRAPPY TEAM

No Serious Injuries Suffered in Loss to Goldsboro

After dropping a heartbreaker to Goldsboro Friday night, the first loss of the season, the Phantoms will begin today getting ready for the strong Plymouth eleven who play here Friday night.

With the exception of some minor bruises and bumps, the locals came out of their encounter with the big Goldsboro team in good shape. A few of the regulars will have to stay out of the rough work for a few days but should be ready to go by game time next Friday. It is expected that the tackles and ends will come in for some strenuous drills this week, the play in this department was decidedly under par against Goldsboro.

Plymouth will bring a scrappy and aggressive team that is coached by Louis Trunno, one of Wake Forest's better known players of last season. Plymouth did not play the Phantoms last year. In the last meeting of these two teams in 1939 the Phantoms emerged victorious after a hard battle 13-0. The game next Friday night will mark the last of the non-conference foes that the Phantoms will face this season. After this game the locals will meet on successive Fridays, Tarboro, Kinston, Elizabeth City, New Bern, Roanoke Rapids and Washington.

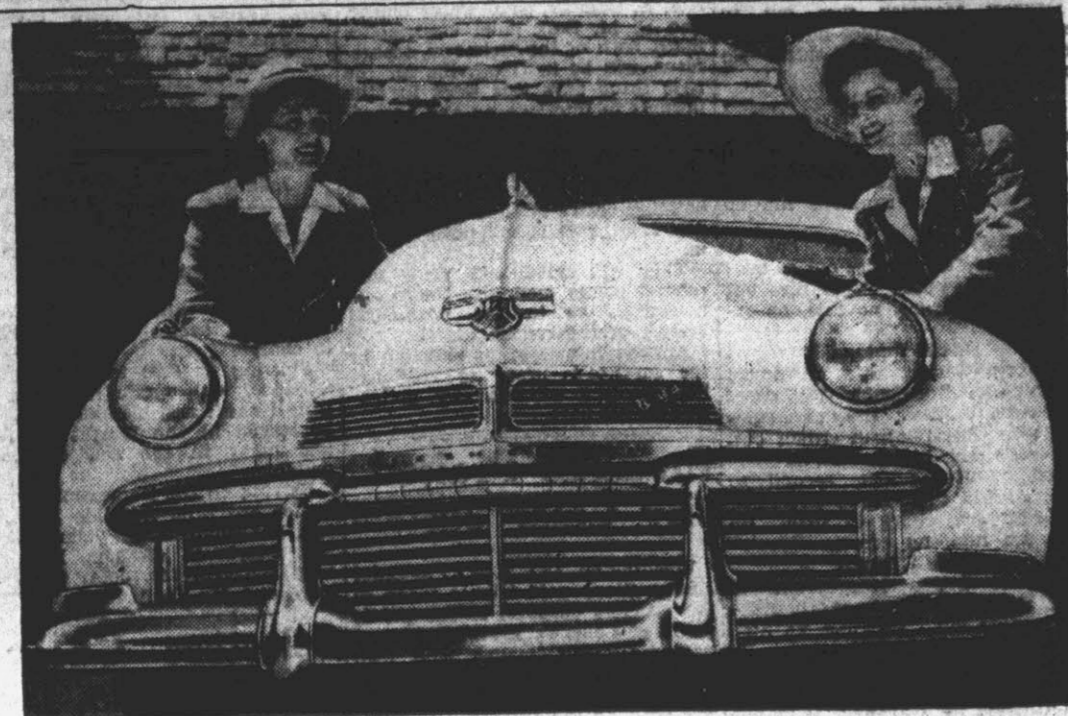

AUTOMOBILES RUN FOR THE FUN IN SOUTHERN ORIENT

Bangkok—(AP)—One of the last places to look for gasoline, in the fuel-starved Far East today, is in the gas tank of an automobile.

You may find almost anything else in the tank—alcohol, charcoal, potato peelings, or plain kindling wood. But usually, not gasoline. Armies at war, or waiting for war, are getting practically all their governments can buy and import. The man with the private car gets whatever else he can to make the old buggy run.

Any substitute that gives off inflammable fumes is a substitute. Alcohol, distilled in large quantities from rice or maize, is the accepted ersatz in the Southern Orient. It does very well, as a fuel.

An insurance agent, working for a Shanghai firm, actually uses a Chinese rice wine, noted for its high alcoholic content. He has been known to stop and drain a cup or so Front end appearances of all five series of new Oldsmobiles are similar and present an artistic combination of headlamps, parking lights, fenders, radiator grilles and bumpers. Contributing to the sturdy and massive front end design are Oldsmobile's exclusive "double-duty" bumpers, which also provide great added protection to the car.

Training School And West Greenville Lock Horns

By CHARLES BROWN
Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the West Greenville football field the Training School Wolfpack met with a clashing 0-0 game. Ground-gainers and stars for the Wolfpack were Jimmie Gibson, playing brilliantly and plunging through defensive lines for large gains; alternating in the backfield were Howard Proctor, speed-merchant of the team, and Jimmie Cox, sparking and helping all his fellow players. West Greenville really showed signs of having a wonderful offensive team, doing well in the defensive plays, too. All Terrors are spec-

Man About Manhattan

New York—Sport note: Purists at golf will be pained to hear that the staid English have unbecomingly taken air raid shelter during bombing without being penalized a stroke.

This revolutionary news was contained in a letter to film star Basil Rathbone from colleagues in London, and the rules further state: "In golf competitions during gun-fire or when bombs are falling players may take cover without penalty. A player whose stroke is affected by the simultaneous explosion of a bomb or shell or machine-gun fire may play another ball from the same place—penalty, one stroke. Players are asked to collect bomb and shell splinters to avoid damage to the mowers."

Quiz: While we're on the subject of England, how many fully sovereign states do you think there are left in Europe? The answer is—Andorra, Eire, Liechtenstein, Monaco, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Turkey, and Vatican City. The palm for quick wit goes to that young Dutch housewife who was arrested recently in Holland for listening to a British broadcast. She defended herself by declaring, "After the fall of France, Adolf Hitler announced that in October he would speak over the English wireless. I was so afraid of missing this historic speech—"

Bands like to feature small combinations, usually with lyrical presentations, and they strive for effective names. For instance Orrin Tucker calls his combination "The Body Guards." Blue Barron styles his "The Three Blue Tones." Thus it is that Teddy Powell announces a new combination within his orchestra to be known as "The Teddy Bears." In this group the orchestra leader himself plays a guitar—first time in four years he has handled anything other than a baton.

So far, only one of the new plays has come in for what may be called "the withering fire" of the drama critics. This is the comedy starring Gladys George, and of it one critic wrote: "Miss Gladys George frolicked about in her make-up box at the Longacre last night, put on the white hair and parchment skin of age, and almost withered away as a frail but gusty antique who is the central character in Edwin B. Self's "The Distant City." Her misfortune, I fear, is that the play withered away first, leaving her, like a hitch-hiker on a detoured road, without a vehicle."

Other reviews were in similar vein, which means that the boys seem to have found their batting eyes early this year.

Selfishness Seen As Man's Trouble

By WYATT BROWN
"The trouble with men is that they are selfish," declared Reverend T. M. Grant, pastor, yesterday morning in his sermon at Jarvis Memorial Methodist church. "By putting Christ at the center of one's life, selfishness can be conquered."

In building a background for his remarks Mr. Grant related how Christ had been misunderstood as to his exact mission by the people of "his" day. People thought they could bend his will to meet the exigencies of the day. The Master felt he could not compromise.

"He plainly and emphatically outlined some principles of discipline in the Beatitudes," Mr. Grant said. "To be a Christian a man must think very little of himself. But men counted most with the Master. Institutions and customs might pass away, but human personality belonged in the first place with my Master. He did not teach total depravity."

"He had in mind the idea that the trouble with men is that they are eternally selfish. Selfishness is something in your system that will spoil you and bring you great unhappiness unless it is controlled. I want to tell you the way to conquer selfishness," Mr. Grant continued.

Interrupting the progress of his remarks Mr. Grant interpolated remarks about the brevity of Christ's remarks. He always spoke briefly. People who talk a lot are led into temptation of saying things not true.

At this point Mr. Grant spoke of the fact that the day was World Communion Sunday and that all Christians in all the world were saying, "Thy will be done, O Lord, not mine."

"What I am trying to say is if we would conquer selfishness, we must be willing to live adventurously and give ourselves to unusual living. Make the Man of Galilee the center of your affection. Let little things have no place of permanency in your lives," Mr. Grant exhorted in conclusion.

Leaf Prices Here Retain High Mark

An estimated 1,650,000 pounds of tobacco were on the floors of the local warehouses as sales this morning, with the quality described as about the same as Friday.

Prices were reported to be maintaining the season's high peak, with some leaf possibly selling a little stronger.

Friday's sales of 1,787,944 pounds brought $668,656.55, an average of 37.39 cents per pound.

Sales for all of last week averaged 31.28 cents per pound, the local figure being 1.80 cents higher than the average for the entire belt according to the Agricultural Marketing section of the U. S. Government.

Brandeis Praised By Chief Justice

Washington, Oct. 6.—(AP)—Chief Justice Stone paid tribute today to the "tireless devotion to the public good" of Louis D. Brandeis, retired Supreme Court justice who died last night at the age of 84.

A statement praising the jurist was read by the chief justice when the court re-convened for the beginning of its new term. American flags at the front of the building were placed at half staff in memory of the justice.

The family announced that the funeral, for which arrangements were incomplete, would be strictly private and requested that no flowers be sent. Memorial services would be held later, the announcement said.

ECTC Homecom'g Program Planned

The annual Homecoming of East Carolina Teachers College, which will be held on Saturday, October 18, will feature, along with the customary luncheon, football game and dance, a "visiting hour" in connection with the brief morning program, and a parade of floats in the afternoon. Alumni will register in the Austin building from 10:30 to 11:00. At the short morning program at 11 o'clock President Meadows and Mrs. J. C. Holland, alumni president, will speak briefly to greet the homecomers, and the college orchestra, under the direction of A. L. Dittmer, and the A. Capella Choir of 45 men and women will give several selections.

The 1 o'clock luncheon will be served in the dining hall.

Since W. C. T. C. was the winner last year in football over E. C. T. C. and E. C. T. C. has started its season this fall with a victory over the strong Tusculum College team, the game, scheduled for 2:30, should
