MOSCOW FACES GREATEST PERIL OF WAR

British Acknowledge Tough Fighting In Africa

LESS OPTIMISM NOW APPARENT

London Sources Declare Battle Now Entering Upon Second Stage, That Of Defeating Encircled Enemy, After Having Moved Up Formations In Successful Initial Phase Of Conflict

(By The Associated Press)
The British, veering somewhat from past optimism over their North African offensive, acknowledged today they had a tremendous fight on their hands.

In London, an authoritative source said that the battle of Libya, now rounding out its first week, had entered the second stage—defeat of the encircled enemy—but that the fighting was so confused it now was impossible to say how the struggle of men and machines in the desert was proceeding.

The first phase of the offensive, he explained, "was the moving forward of armored formations to where we wanted them and the start of this shattering movement against frontier defenses." This phase, he said, had gone "extremely well."

It was probably that the Royal Air Force still maintained air superiority over the Germans and Italians in the African theatre, not to mention the whiplash the British Navy holds over the Mediterranean supply lines of the Axis.

But the most the London source would say of the situation of the Axis land forces was that it was "not at all good." The British Imperial Army, he said, had found a "resolute, well commanded and fighting very desperately."

The Italian high command said that besides a great continuing loss of tanks and armored cars, the British had lost as a captive of the Axis one of their brigade commanders, a General Sperling.

Fifty British tanks as well as other armored vehicles, have been put out of action in the Tobruk sector alone, the Italian command said. The British fourth armored brigade and several other units were said to have been badly mauled, if not destroyed.

The latest war report from Cairo said that Gambut, midway between Tobruk and Bardia, had fallen to the British.

Capital Attorney Is Victim Of Killing

Leesburg, Va., Nov. 24.—(AP)—Ward Loveless, 55, prominent Washington, D. C., attorney and owner of extensive Loudoun county farm lands, was killed on his country estate near Peonion Springs yesterday or early today.

The body was found by a Negro servant at 8 a. m. It had been wedged into a small china closet, feet sticking out and a heavy bullet table placed in front of the closet.

Blood had been spattered about three rooms of the home and there was evidence of a terrific struggle. Loudoun County Coroner John A. Gibson could not determine immediately whether Loveless had been shot or beaten to death. Three empty pistol shells of different types were found on the floor of the home.

In Train Wreck

Corinth, Miss., Nov. 24.—(AP)—One passenger was killed and more than 80 injured, three seriously they may die, when eight cars of the Illinois Central's fast passenger train the Seminole left the tracks and hurtled down a 30-foot embankment a mile south of here yesterday.

The fast train was bound from Florida to Chicago.

The heroism of dining car waiters, credited with pulling a number of passengers from the flame-swept coach, was praised by J. E. Winslow, 60, of Greenville, N. C.

"Those waiters were as fine as anything I ever saw," he said. "They knocked holes through the top and pulled me out. I had been knocked down and couldn't get up. I never saw anything like these waiters. They saved others, too." Winslow suffered cuts and lacerations of the head.

Shot In Mine Strike Battle

Guns blazed for more than an hour in a battle between coal mine pickets and non-strikers near Uniontown, Pa., and here are two of the 10 men who were wounded. Shot above the right eye, John Stepanic (right) comforts Mike Febete (on stretcher), who was shot in the hand, groin and side, as they waited to go into the operating room of a hospital at Uniontown. The fight took place on a road leading to the H. C. Frick Coke company's Edenborn mine.

Wide Sweep By British Acknowledged By Italy

LABOR PARLEY CALLED BY FDR

Congressmen and Labor Dept. Heads Summoned

Washington, Nov. 24.—(AP)—President Roosevelt invited 10 members of Congress and two representatives of the Labor Department to meet with him at the White House tonight to discuss labor legislation.

They included Speaker Rayburn, Secretary Perkins, House Majority Leader McCormack (D-Mass.) and Chairman Norton (D-N.J.) of the House Labor Committee.

A bi-partisan angle was provided by the inclusion of House Minority Leader Martin (R-Mass.) and Rep. Welch (R-Calif.), a member of the Labor Committee.

There was no indication from the White House whether Mr. Roosevelt had some specific measure in mind or merely wished to obtain the views of the congressional delegation and the Labor Department on measures already pending.

Earlier at a meeting of the House Labor Committee, Mrs. Norton said that the only two witnesses heard were Rep. Smith (D-Va.) and Vinson (D-Ga.), authors of two bills to control defense strikes.

"We still want to get a bill out this week—we are very anxious to do it," Mrs. Norton said.

A general strike by 8,500 American Federation of Labor machinists slowed production on millions of dollars of defense orders in the St. Louis area as miners in captive coal mines went back to work after a week-long strike.

The labor picture was definitely brighter than last week, when the captive miners were joined by thousands of commercial miners in sympathy strikes, but President Roosevelt was said to favor legislative remedies against recurrence of the recent series of labor crises.

Sons Of Legion To Be Organized

All sons of members of the American Legion are requested to meet at the armory Wednesday night, November 26, to form a unit of the Sons of the Legion. Legionnaires Arthur B. Corey and Coon Williams will be present to assist in the organization.

Admitted In Conceding Fall Of Italian Garrison

London, Nov. 24.—(AP)—The extreme British left wing has swept westward a total of more than 200 miles since the beginning of the Libyan invasion. Axis sources themselves disclosed today, while the right was claiming the capture of the important Axis supply center of Gambut along the shores of the Mediterranean.

This deep penetration for the southernmost imperial column was disclosed in an Italian communiqué conceding the fall of an Italian garrison north of Gialo oasis. The British in this area, it appeared, were beating on toward the Gulf of Sirte, well below the major axis port of Benghazi.

Thus, it seemed that a grand maneuver of encirclement was developing in the south, while more spectacular battles raged for control of the Mediterranean coast.

Although there was no official British comment on the point, it seemed that the Axis communications were being threatened with severance hundreds of miles behind the active battle front and that the intention was to confront with this southern column any German and Italian forces which, surviving the present struggles to the north, sought to withdraw toward Tripoli in extreme western Libya.

Matthews to Head Local Civic Club

O. P. Matthews, manager of Blount-Harvey's department store, will head the Greenville Kiwanis club during the coming year, having been elected president to succeed Dr. Robert S. Boyd at the regular annual election.

Mr. Matthews has been active in the club's affairs for some time and is one of its most active members.

C. D. Ward of Winterville was named vice president and D. C. Moore, Jr., was re-appointed secretary. New directors named were Eli Bloom, John W. Glover, Charles R. Flye, Noah C. Raynor and Ed Batchelor. Hold-over directors are W. J. Bundy, James O. Morton and Clyde Hollowell.

Rev. G. W. Perry, new pastor of Jarvis Memorial Methodist church, was a special guest of the club. V. A. Merritt and Thomas A. Etheridge were inducted into membership. J. Hicks Corey, Jr., was a guest of the club.

The principal address of the meeting was made by David W. Mosier, who delivered a Thanksgiving Day address.

U. S. SOLDIERS TO BE SENT TO DUTCH GUIANA

Contingent to Protect Valuable Bauxite Mines

PLAN ANNOUNCED BY WHITE HOUSE

Arrangements For American Soldiers To Take Up Duty Agreed To By Netherlands Government

Washington, Nov. 24.—(AP)—The White House announced today that a contingent of American troops would be sent into Dutch Guiana to protect valuable bauxite mines which supply the United States with large supplies for raw aluminum.

The arrangement was made by the United States and Netherlands governments with the government of Brazil giving its wholehearted approval.

Dutch Guiana lies on the northeast coast of South America between British and Guiana and French Guiana, and is bordered on the south by Brazil. The capital is Paramaribo, an Atlantic ocean port. The population approximates 170,000 and the area is about that of Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

A formal White House statement referring to the country by its Dutch name of Surinam, asserted:

"The bauxite mines in Surinam furnish upwards of 60 per cent of the requirements of the United States aluminum industry which is vital to the defense of the United States, the Western Hemisphere and the nations actively resisting aggression."

"It is therefore necessary that the safety of these mines should be as completely assured as present conditions demand."

Normally, the statement said, The Netherlands government would draw on Netherlands Indies force to strengthen the defenses of Dutch Guiana, but in view of "the present situation in the southwestern Pacific it is thought inadvisable to follow that course."

As a result of consultations between the governments of The Netherlands and the United States it was agreed that an American army contingent go to Surinam to "cooperate with The Netherlands forces in assuring the protection of the bauxite mines in that territory."

Legislation Is Held Unconstitutional

Washington, Nov. 24.—(AP)—The Supreme Court held unconstitutional legislation which prohibited anyone from assisting non-resident indigent persons to come into the state.

Justice Byrnes delivered the decision on what was popularly known as the "anti-okie" law intended to discourage the movement into the state of persons believed likely to become public charges.

Twenty-seven other states were said to have similar statutes. Byrnes said in the decision—his first since taking his seat last October—that the legislation "imposes an unconstitutional burden upon interstate commerce."

The litigation specifically involved the conviction of Fred F. Edwards of Marysville, Calif., on a charge of violating the statute by driving his jobless brother-in-law, Frank Duncan, from Spoor, Texas, to Marysville in 1939.

Byrnes said that the record in the case "illustrates the inadequate basis in fact for the theory that relief is presently a local matter."

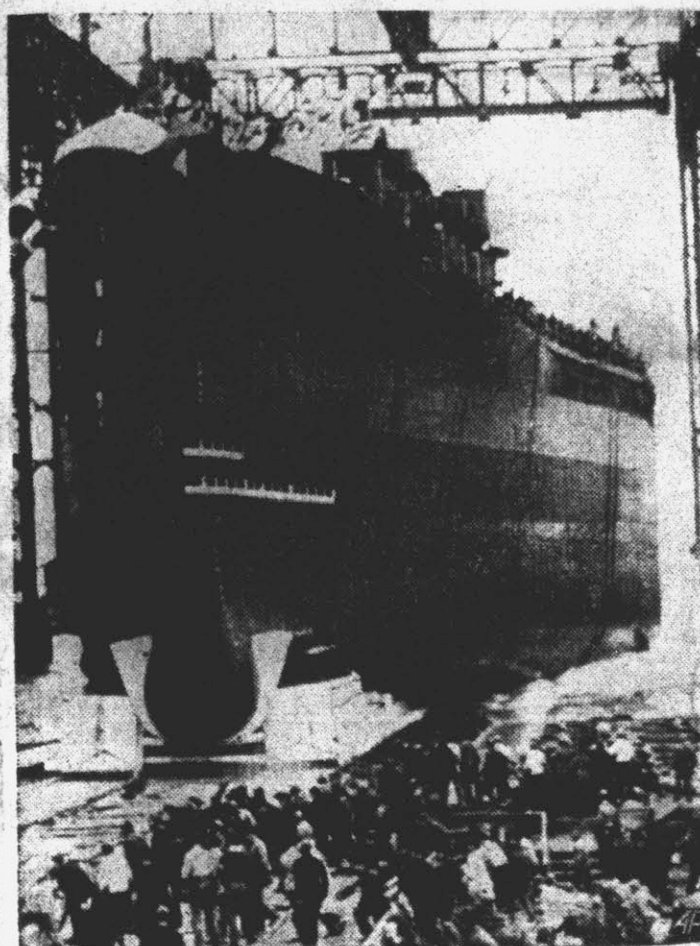

"In not inconsiderable measure, the justice added, 'the relief of the needy has become the common responsibility and concern of the whole nation.'"

"We do not think that it will now be seriously contended that because a person is without employment and without funds he constitutes a 'moral pestilence.' Poverty and immorality are not synonymous."

Some Jam

London.—(AP)—Women of Northamptonshire have made 10,000 pounds of fresh fruit jam under the nation's cooperative fruit preserving scheme to build up winter food supplies.

Battleship Indiana Launched

Six months ahead of schedule, the 35,000-ton battleship Indiana slips down the ways and into the James river during formal launching ceremonies at the plant of the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock company at Newport News, Va. Speaking at the launching, Naval Secretary Knox described the Indiana as a symbol of this nation's will to survive in a world at war.

Murder, Fatal Accident, Robbery This Weekend

Local Officers Kept Busy Saturday and Sunday

One murder, either an attempted suicide or attempted murder, one fatal traffic accident and numerous routine charges such as riotous and disorderly conduct, breaking and entering, reckless driving, drunken driving and other traffic violations kept local police authorities busy throughout the week-end.

Robert L. (Bob) Preddy, Negro, of 606 Clark street, is being held for questioning following the slaying of his wife Mary Harris Preddy, Saturday night about 10 o'clock at their home. Preddy is suffering from a superficial bullet wound in the left shoulder. According to members of the city police force, Mary Harris Preddy returned home after having been up the street shopping with Gladie Battle. Upon returning she was reported to have been told by one of the Preddy children that their father, who had gone out at the time, had been "cutting up."

Police reported that Preddy returned home and called to his daughter to open the door. His wife, however, opened the door, officers said, and then the shooting began.

Prededy claims, and police are inclined to put some credence in his story, that his wife shot him in the shoulder and that he then wrested the gun from her and shot her, one bullet entering the right chest, another the left chest and a third in the temple. She also was declared to have been clubbed over the head with the pistol. The theory was first advanced that Preddy turned the gun on himself and fired the bullet in his shoulder after having slain his wife. Police are continuing their investigation to determine if Preddy shot himself or was shot by his wife, as he claims. Preddy is employed by a local bottling concern, while his wife took in laundry.

In the fatal accident case, Morgan Lee Graham, eight-year-old son of Willie Graham, Negro, of 513 Vance street, was instantly killed about 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon when he was struck by an automobile being driven by Hilliard Vines, Negro, who was exonerated at a coroner's inquest this morning. According to the evidence at the inquest, the little boy ran across in the colored section of West Fifth street directly in front of the car. The fatal accident occurred nearly in front of Jordan's store.

George Clark, Negro, is being held on a charge of breaking and entering after reportedly having been caught in the act of getting into Reid's store on Dickinson avenue. Night Policemen J. H. Mobley, R. D. House and D. J. Dees noticed the "Negro" while on automobile patrol duty about 3:45 o'clock Sunday.

FARMERS FEEL DEFENSE NEED

Less Steel to be Available For Farm Machinery

According to R. R. Bennett, county agent of Pitt county, there will be a reduction in the amount of steel that will go into 1942 production of farm machinery. Steel for defense will mean reduced amounts for machinery, and it is imperative that every farmer prepare himself for this condition.

Mr. Bennett says that he has received word from David S. Weaver, agricultural engineer, State College, that a program for the repair of farm machinery is under way. With the new machinery distinctly limited and with increased crop production in view, it is doubly important that all field machinery be put into first-class working condition this winter.

Mr. Bennett suggests that the following steps be taken by every farmer to insure a good working set of field implements during the coming crop season. First, assemble all machinery possible under one roof and carefully check over each piece item by item. Examination should be made for broken and worn parts. Second, make a complete list of the parts which must be replaced due to breakage or wear, listing the machine, the size, the number name of the manufacturer, and the number of the part to be replaced if possible. If not possible to find the number, make a good description of it. Third, classify these needs according to manufacturers. Fourth, place your order for these repair parts at once. This is imperative as it will enable manufacturers to use what iron and steel is available for replacement parts of those most needed.

"Taking care of this matter at once will assist materially in the national defense program," says Mr. Bennett, "and will also make for better operation during the next crop year. Unnecessary delay in the repair of machinery may thus be avoided and the rainy, cold working days when field work is not possible may be put in to good advantage in the repair of farm machinery in the farm shop."

AXIS SEEKING ENLARGE BLOC AGAINST REDS

Seven New Nations to Join Anti-Comintern Group

CEREMONIES SET FOR TOMORROW

Uncertain, However, Whether Turkey and France Will Sign Despite Increased Nazi Pressure

Berlin, Nov. 24.—(AP)—Authorized Germans announced today that seven more governments would join the six present signers of the anti-Comintern pact tomorrow.

The seven new signers are to be Finland, Denmark, Bulgaria, Croatia, Rumania, Slovakia and the Japanese-sponsored Nanking government. Germany, Japan, Italy, Spain, Hungary and Manchukuo are to renew their signatures at a ceremony marking the fifth anniversary of the pact.

Besides the desire of Italy and Germany to form a European bloc against what their statesmen call pan-Slavic dreams of westward Russian expansion, observers read into the announcement that the ceremony is connected with the fight against "world Bolshevism," a reference to Britain and the United States, who, Germany considers, are sponsors of world Bolshevism.

Although German efforts to bring France and Turkey into the alignment have been increasingly apparent, it remained anybody's guess whether either country would be represented tomorrow.

Italy's delegation was the first to reach Berlin and got an impressive welcome.

The continental anti-Comintern line-up as it will stand after the adherence of the new nations tomorrow, will leave just Turkey, Portugal, Sweden, Switzerland, Greece, France, Belgium and The Netherlands outside the fold.

Such adherence, Germans said, was impractical until relations between Vichy and the Axis powers had been definitely settled by a final peace agreement replacing the armistice.

Persistent reports of another impending meeting at which Adolf Hitler, Premier Mussolini and Marshal Petain would sit down at the conference table remained unconfirmed here.

Fails Pass Check On Local Officers

In addition to facing a charge of failing to appear in court as cited on a charge of speeding, James Albert Moring of Farmville, Route Two, also faces a possible charge of attempting to pass a forged check on Chief of Police George Clark. Lester Jones of the State Highway Patrol and others at the local police station last night.

Corporal C. R. Williams of the patrol was in the station at the time and after hearing the man call his name recalled that he had a warrant sent here from Tarboro. To make sure the patrolman went upstairs to the patrol office, got the warrant and then caught the man about two blocks from the police station and arrested him on the Tarboro warrant.

Suspecting that the check might not be genuine, Corporal Williams investigated and reported that he found it to be forged. The check was drawn on the Guaranty Bank and Trust Company of Snow Hill and signed with the name of Mrs. Cora Shirley. The officer contacted Mrs. Shirley and quoted her as saying that she did not write it, for $31. Mrs. Shirley is the mother-in-law of Moring.

Nazi Wedge Driven Into Red Defense

Germans Force Way Through Point Between Kalinin And Moscow To Swarm Against Soviet's Second Line Defense; Russians Declared To Be Holding On The Southern Front, However

Kuibyshev, Russia, Nov. 24.—(AP)—German shock troops which drove a new wedge between Moscow and Kalinin and swarmed against the Red armies' second line of defense south and west of the capital, put Moscow today in its most serious danger of the war.

Military sources declared, however, that on the Southern front, where German tanks battered their way into the Don river port of Rostov, the Red army had launched its greatest counter attack of the war, driving the Germans in some places as much as 37 miles across the Donets plateau.

The Russians declared that violent street fighting continued in Rostov itself. (The German high command declared last Saturday that the port was captured and firmly in German hands.)

Military reports said bluntly that the Red army had entered the most critical period in its resistance against a fierce onslaught toward Moscow, aimed at taking "most important objectives."

In this big drive the Germans were estimated to have hurled more than 40 divisions—roughly 600,000 men—and half their tank force against the stubbornly defended approaches to the capital.

Military dispatches said this powerful attacking force had thrust a new wedge into the Russian ring in the vicinity of Klin, 50 miles northwest of Moscow, in an attempt to cut between the capital and Kalinin, 95 miles northwest of Moscow.

The fighting here was the nearest to the capital yet reported by the Russians. (The Germans said today they had smashed to about 31 miles from Moscow.)

Fighting off attack after attack by tank and mechanized forces, the Russians declared they were holding firmly to their positions at Kalinin and Volokolamsk flanking the new wedge.

Cobb Is Accepted By Lieut. Tunney

Charles D. Cobb, son of Mr. and Mrs. K. W. Cobb of this city, is one of 15 young men accepted for enlistment in the Naval Reserve as physical education instructors in the Navy's new athletic program.

Cobb, who is now teaching and coaching at a Durham high school, received his education at Greenville High School, Duke University and East Carolina Teachers College, receiving his degree at the local institution.

The men approved will be part of the 600 physical instructors who will operate a streamlined athletic program for the Navy under direction of Lieut. Commander James J. (Gene) Tunney, former heavyweight boxing champion of the world.

The 15 men the most of whom are known in this section, are: John E. Rackley, Smithfield (Appalachian State Teachers College); Julian C. Jessup Hertford (Duke University); Harry Lee Welch, High Point (Duke University); Charles D. Cobb, Greenville (Duke University).

Because of the earlier Thanksgiving this year, there will be a longer time than usual for unbroken work before Christmas.

Christian Science Service. "Soul and Body" was the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Christian Science churches and societies Sunday, November 23.

The golden text was from Psalms 84: "Rejoice the soul of thy servant: for unto thee, O Lord, do I lift up my soul."

Among the citations which comprised the lesson-sermon were the following from the Bible: "What? know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, and yet are not your own? For ye are bought with a price: therefore glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are Gods. (1 Cor. 6:19-20).

The lesson-sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "The material body and mind are temporal, but the real man is spiritual and eternal. The identity of the real man is not lost, but found through this explanation; for the conscious infinite of existence and of all identity is thereby discerned and remains unchanged."

Dust all gone.

Hog killings are in order. Virginia beat North Carolina in the game of football at Norfolk Saturday.

A rich treat is in store for our people when the Old Maids' Convention assemblies on Thanksgiving night. Don't miss it.

Victor Reale's Italian band came in this morning.

MRS. EDWIN BURTIS AYCOCK

Aycock-Hodges.

A marriage of impressive beauty and dignity was solemnized on Saturday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock at the Immanuel Baptist Church when Miss Jean Hodges became the bride of Dr. Edwin Burtis Aycock, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Hartwell Campbell.

The altar was a bower of white flowers and greenery. Standards of large white chrysanthemums were placed at intervals and palms, ferns and Southern smilax illuminated by the soft glow of many cathedral candles made a beautiful setting for the wedding scene.

A program of nuptial music was rendered by Miss Elizabeth Howell, organist, as friends and relatives assembled. The traditional wedding marches were used and Miss Howell played softly "Serenade" by Schubert, while the vows were being spoken.

To the soft accompaniment of the organ Miss Louise Kilgo, in her sweet manner, sang "Because" and "All For You."

As the officiating minister took his place at the altar, the bride entered the church. First to enter were the ushers, Howard Hodges, Jr., brother of the bride, Cary Warren, cousin of the bride, George Wilkerson, all of Greenville, and William Hayes of Fremont, N. C., cousin of the groom.

Next came Miss Mary Marshall Farrar of Tarboro, whom Miss Hodges chose as her maid of honor and only attendant. Miss Farrar wore an exquisite gown of off-white faille crepe with large picture hat and carried an arm bouquet of American Beauty roses tied with two-tone "Serenita" moire ribbon.

The bride, entering the church with her father by whom she was given in marriage, was indeed beautiful in her wedding gown, a Le-long model of gardenia white satin, made with a corseted waist and net with a swirl of alencon lace hanging over the shoulders of the bodice.

The sleeves were full above the elbow and forming a tight sleeve ending in a point over the wrist. The skirt was quite full and fell into a dramatic spread of train. She wore a fine orange blossom wreath with crowns all-illusion veil softly draped and carried a formal bouquet of orchids and stephanotis.

They were met at the altar by the bridegroom and his brother, Bayard Aycock of Currituck, N. C., as best man.

The bride's mother was becomingly attired in black fortune crepe with matching accessories and wore a shoulder corsage of Better-Times roses and silver ribbon.

Mrs. Susie E. Warren, grandmother of the bride, wore for the wedding a most becoming dress of black crepe and her corsage was of white gardenias.

The groom's mother, Mrs. Frank B. Aycock of Fremont, N. C., was dressed in fall crepe and wore a corsage of Better Times roses.

Mrs. Aycock is the attractive and popular daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Latham Hodges and the granddaughter of Mrs. Susie E. Warren and the late Ollen Warren of Greenville.

She was educated in the city schools, St. Mary's College in Raleigh, and Marjorie Webster Schools in Washington, D. C. She is highly esteemed for her charming personality. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Aycock of Fremont, having graduated from Fremont High School and the University of North Carolina, he later received his degree in medicine from McGill University in Montreal, Canada, in 1936. Dr. Aycock interned in Vancouver General Hospital two years and in 1939 was on the staff of the Tranquille Sanatorium at Tranquille, B. C., Canada.

After a short wedding trip, Dr. and Mrs. Aycock will be at home, 1506 East Fourth street, Greenville.

For traveling the bride wore a handsome costume suit of green and gold wool with brown accessories and an orchid from her mother's bouquet.

Immediately following the wedding, Mr. and Mrs. Howard L. Hodges entertained at an informal tea honoring Dr. and Mrs. Edwin Burtis Aycock.

In the dining room, from either end of a beautifully appointed table, covered with a lace cloth and centered with roses and snapdragons, carnations and tall white candles, Mrs. George Sharpe of Burlington, and Mrs. Harry Smith of Weldon, poured coffee.

Sandwiches and choice tid-bits were passed by Mrs. E. T. Lloyd and Miss Adelaide Warren to the wedding party, relatives, out-of-town guests and most intimate friends of the bride and groom.

On Friday evening immediately following the rehearsal for the Aycock-Hodges wedding, Mr. and Mrs. George Sharpe of Burlington, and Major and Mrs. E. T. Lloyd entertained informally at the home of Major and Mrs. Lloyd.

The hosts and hostesses greeted their guests and directed them to the punch bowl, where Miss Harriet Lloyd and Mr. James Wilson presided.

Beautiful arrangements of yellow chrysanthemums and ivy presented a lovely picture in the living room and sun room.

The dining room was indeed lovely with its color scheme of green and white. The table was centered with a seven-branched candelabra and the soft glow from the ivory candles blended perfectly with the artistic arrangement of the table. On one corner of the table was a lovely three-tiered wedding cake iced in green and white and surmounted by a miniature bride and groom, while diagonally across at the other end was an exquisite all-white cascade bouquet of bride's roses and stephanotis. A handsome antique crystal hurricane lamp banked with white flowers and greenery made a choice background for all kinds of knickknacks. Assisting Mrs. Sharpe and Mrs. Lloyd in serving sandwiches, fancy desserts, sweets and mints were Mrs. E. H. Smith of Weldon and Miss Adelaide Warren.

One of the loveliest social affairs of the week given to honor Miss Hodges was on Friday at the home of Mrs. N. O. Warren, when Mrs. E. S. Warren and Mrs. N. O. Warren were gracious hostesses at a luncheon.

On arrival at one o'clock, guests were welcomed by the hostesses and honor guest and directed to attractively appointed tables placed throughout the home in a beautiful setting of white flowers. Dainty bridal cards assisted the guests in finding their places.

The dining table was covered with an exquisite lace cloth and centered with an all-white arrangement graced by long white tapers in silver candelabra.

Seated at the table were Miss Hodges, honoree, Miss Mary Marshall Farrar, Miss Hodges' maid of honor, Miss Louise Kilgo, soloist, Miss Anna Long, bride of December, Mrs. Hoover Taft, Mrs. James Davenport, Mrs. Charles Flanagan and Mrs. Bruce Sugg, Jr., recent brides.

Brides books daintily tied with white satin ribbon and miniature flowers, marked the places for the brides.

A tempting three-course luncheon was served, carrying out the bridal motif of green and white.

Out-of-town guests here for the luncheon were: Mrs. F. B. Aycock and Mrs. W. B. Hayes of Fremont; Mrs. George Sharpe of Burlington; Mrs. Tom Farrar and Miss Mary Marshall Farrar of Tarboro.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Latham Hodges entertained at a luncheon at the home of Mrs. E. B. Ferguson on Saturday at one o'clock, honoring the Aycock-Hodges bridal party, members of the immediate families and out-of-town guests here for the wedding.

Mrs. Harry Smith of Weldon, and Mrs. Egbert Lloyd of Greenville sisters of Mrs. Hodges, served a tempting three-course luncheon from a beautifully appointed table.

Autumn flowers were used as decorations throughout the house.

Out-of-town guests here for the wedding were: Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Aycock, Mrs. Jesse Aycock, Mr. Jesse Aycock, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Hayes, Mrs. Ella Peele, Miss Ora Copeland, Mrs. L. D. Hooks, Mrs. L. O. Hayes, and Miss Mary Hilliard of Fremont; Mr. Dave Rumph of Monticello, Ga.; Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Smith and E. H. Smith, Jr., of Weldon; Mr. and Mrs. George Sharpe of Burlington; Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Farrar, Miss Mary Marshall Farrar, Miss Minnie Lou Parker, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Britt, Henry Britt, Jr., Mr. Bill Raby, Miss Ann Shook, Mr. Beans Evans, Miss Deanie Creech of Tarboro; Mrs. James Westbrook of New Bern; Mrs. C. B. Barrus and Miss Frances Barrus of Clinton; Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Aycock, Jr. of Currituck; Miss Marian Young of McKeesport, Pa.; Mr. Buddy Hazel of Asheville; Mr. and Mrs. Riddick Lamb of Wilson; and Lieutenant Hiram Skogmo of Milwaukee, Wis.

Move To Greenville. Reverend and Mrs. George Perry, who formerly lived in Durham, have moved into the Methodist parsonage on East Tenth street. Rev. Mr. Perry delivered his first sermon in Greenville yesterday morning at the 11 o'clock service.

Some Stabilizing Books. In these times of crisis everyone needs the comfort and inspiration that genuine religion offers, he needs some belief, something to lean on, to keep him stable in a fast changing world. For those who are searching for help along this line or who want to increase their faith in things eternal, the Sheppard Memorial Library recently prepared a shelf of timely religious books that are especially designed to help the layman.

The shelf is made up of books both old and new, some of the new ones being "Living Profusely," by Kirby Page—a praying man gathers up and makes available for our use the treasures of his own deepest life and the best thoughts of kindred spirits as to the way we all may live prayerfully.

"Christianity," by Harris Franklin Hall—This volume is an attempt to deal with several questions, "What is religion and what is its place in human life? More particularly, what is the Christian religion and can it maintain its claim to be supreme and final?"

"Christianity in a Changing World," by Shirley Jackson Case—a stimulating view of the current scene from the standpoint of the long perspective of history, answering the question, can Christianity survive the calamities that have befallen the modern world?

"The World's Need of Christ" by Charles A. Ellwood—a sociologist examines the philosophy of Jesus, and finds that only in Christ's teaching is to be found a pathway to peace and brotherly cooperation among men.

"Living Under Tension" by Harry Emerson Fosdick—A book of sermons containing preaching of a new type, not theological but psychological, direct in its appeal, disarming in its intimacy.

"Can Religious Education Be Christian?" by Harrison S. Elliott—A college professor in close touch with educational and religious problems of churches, associations and social agencies, gives splendid pointers as to how religious education can be Christian.

"The Eternal Voice," by Leslie D. Weatherhead—A collection of sermons preached from the pulpit of the City Temple, London, England. Throughout this book has only one aim—that the reader should catch, if only a whisper, some message of the Eternal Voice and respond to it.

"This is the Victory" by Leslie D. Weatherhead—In a world whose philosophy has broken down, England's great spiritual leader here proclaims renewed faith in a God who is sensitive to the wounds of the world—whose stability gives human minds a place to rest amid desperate weariness and turmoil—whose vision for mankind still functions above all human programs—whose divine will is man's only victory and only peace.

Strength For The Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

MOODS DETERMINE HAPPINESS

The world is a happy place if our hearts are happy, and a dull and dismal place if our thoughts and moods are overcast with clouds.

For some perverse and foolish reason, we generally insist in hours of unhappiness on pointing at some thing or some person in the world round about us and putting the blame for our unhappiness on this external object. There are of course external circumstances which bring us grief and pain. But most of our suffering comes from the inside of our own hearts. Frequently we are discouraged not because circumstances warrant discouragement, but because a foreboding disposition of mind drives us to see the darkest possibility in every situation. The angry thoughts we turn over in our minds, the unfulfilled desires which we allow to rack us, the envy we harbor in our consciences—these are the things which make us unhappy. Many people who apparently have nothing to make them happy are contented from morning until night; and others who have so much they do not know what to do with it are restless and near to despair.

Nothing can make us happy but our moods; and the thoughts we hold in our minds, the ideals we cherish, the ends in life which we pursue, produce our moods. As Abraham Lincoln once remarked, we all are about as happy as we make up our minds to be—or as unhappy.

ALL-OUT WAR

W. Averell Harriman's statement to the British people yesterday that the American Navy is shooting Germans leaves no room for speculation that we are actually in the war.

Although there has been no formal declaration of hostility by either side, this war is real. The fact that the United States and Germany are so opposed to each other by every standard brings home the reality of the present conflict.

Germany has set out to sweep American vessels from the sea, and the United States has sworn to uphold its right to freedom of the seas. The United States is determined that the great English-speaking nations, based on democratic institutions, shall not go down. There is no other choice. The United States is facing its greatest danger in history. If the line of supply to Britain is cut, the whole system of free government is in grave danger.
The United States cannot take that risk, cannot allow Britain to become isolated from its allies, Russia and the United States. To desert Britain and Russia now would be repeating the recent history of France. What happened in France will happen, and quickly, to Great Britain if the sea lanes are not kept open.

For those reasons, it is no longer just a job of keeping Britain supplied. It is a job for the United States Navy to fight, to the finish, an all-out war in the Atlantic.

But Making It Stick Is Something Else

Washington Daybook

By Jack Sinnott

Washington—Capital talk:

Of all the odd purchases of the United States Army, the one that stirs the imagination most is the made recently for a million dollars worth of human blood. Five contracts were let to chemical laboratories, totaling $1,026,250 for the purchase of gallons of human plasma. The blood bank is stored against that time, if ever when it might be needed for blood transfusions. This doesn't necessarily mean a fighting war reserve of human blood. With 1,500,000 men in the Army now, the amount of blood needed for accidents resulting from training activities of a mechanized army and for "normal" illnesses is tremendous.

Washington got a good spanking the other day for the way it has been entertaining and receiving soldiers on leave. Dr. Frank S. Lloyd, of the Federal Security Agency recreation division administered the verbal padding, with such observations as, "This is the coldest, snoot-iest, most upturned nose area in the United States, barring none."

This ties in with a recent personal experience. Falling in with three lads on leave from Fort Eustis, Va., I asked them what about the national capital they disliked most and the answer was immediate and all agreed: "We never have anybody to talk to." Explanation brought out that the boys get pretty weary of being treated like persons apart —or like martyrs.

According to morale officers, a queer bit of vicious racketeering has developed here which has slowed down the District's program for placing visiting soldiers in private homes. Number of the "families" who called and offered to take lads in turned out to be houses of prostitution. Now every offer has to be investigated before it can be placed on the invitation list. The process has resulted in only comparatively few homes being added each week.

The President has just rid himself of one of the minor headaches of national defense—the appointment of dollar-a-year men. The law specifically gives the President the authority to appoint the dollar-a-year and WOC (without compensation) aides to the government.
There being hundreds of them, the task had become considerable and continuous since so many are called in for specific jobs and remain only a short while.

The Democrats said the President was getting in too many Republicans; the Republicans that the President was giving too many jobs to party men in the business field.
The President got a ruling from Attorney General Biddle that it was his prerogative to delegate this appointive power and immediately the President washed his hands of the whole business. Hereafter the dollar-a-year boys will be named by the national defense division heads
—Donald Nelson, William Knudsen, Sidney Hillman and Leon Henderson.

However, this won't make any difference in the assignment of treasury investigators and FBI men to give the records and affiliations of all such appointees a thorough fine-tooth combing. It's not generally known, but a number of recommended dollar-a-year men have been turned down because of these investigations.

Around... Capital Square

Reflector Bureau.

By BOB THOMPSON

Wagging Tongues—Seldom have tongues around Capitol Square any harder than they are now.
The subject is the effort of Senator J. W. Bailey's son, Pou, to avoid the draft. The consensus of politics hereabouts is that the thing is quite likely to have political repercussions when Bailey comes up again at the primary next May.

Certain members of the American Legion, who long have smarted under the fact that North Carolina has never elected a veteran either as Governor or Senator, are saying openly that Bailey has given them their chance.

Indispensable—The thing started last summer. A few days after Bailey had passed the state bar exam he entered the Federal Bureau of Investigation's school for prospective G-men. Four days thereafter the local draft board, which put young Bailey in Class A-1, received a letter signed by J. Edgar Hoover to the effect that the victim's services were indispensable to the bureau.

Why the story did not break then is hard to understand. There was a lot of talk about it here. The matter was brought to the attention of Governor Broughton by the chairman of the appeal board to which young Bailey took his case. It is understood that the governor, in turn, discussed it with the Senator who, he hopes, will have no opposition next fall. Then the talk died down and many people believed that the effort to keep the young man out of the army had been dropped. But the thing broke wide open last week when it became known that the appeal board had ruled against the young man, despite the intervention of Washington officials who believed that Bailey would be of greater service to his country as an agent of the FBI than as a private in the U. S. Army.

Service—Even the loudest critics of the senior Senator agree that Pou Bailey would be of greater service where he is than where the draft board says he ought to be. But that has not stopped the talk.

"It's the biggest political mistake that could be made," said a prominent elected official to a group which was discussing the matter in his office. "Bailey voted for the selective service act and now he is trying to keep his boy out of the army—or, at least, letting him try.
Think of the votes of mothers and fathers of soldiers which he may lose."

Although Josephus Daniels' News and Observer had been friendly to Bailey recently, it already has compared the case of young Bailey with that of the son of Vice President Wallace—the Senator's outspoken enemy—who is now a private in the army.

system, has come up with some statistics which make the teaching can't see your face, no." The man obligingly swung the flashlight so that it illuminated his long, narrow, clean-shaven face and his shining bald head, on the side of which a blue knitted cap perched cockily.

"There!" the man said. "I guess you remember me now, all right! Well, well, Assey! I always meant to get over to see you since I settled here, but I don't get much of a chance to get away very often." He paused. "I guess you know my wife."

"No, afraid I don't," Assey gently eased himself from the man's grasp. "You did, you'd understand—say, come along to my shed. That's where I spend my spare time when I'm not working my fingers to the bone. You know, I always thought some day you'd turn up like this."

Assey chuckled. "I don't think," he said, "I ever turned up like this before anywhere, least of all in Quisset. Except for driving up the main street, I don't ever see much of the town. Say, where's the Whale Inn?"

"Down the line," The man pointed with his flashlight. "This is all my land here. I'm doing pretty well. Assey. Own place, own garden, own chickens—say, I thought you were the feller that's been swiping them. What do you know about that? The shed's this way. Come over and let's have a chat about old times. Certainly can't beat the old days!"

Taking Assey's arm, he propelled him toward the shed, happily repeating his conviction that nothing was like the old days.

"I'd like nothing better than to chat with you," Assey said, "some time, but—"

"What's the matter with right now?"

"Wa-el," Assey said, "right now I got some pressing business I got to get along to. So—"

"No time like the present!" the man said. "After not seeing me for 30 years, you certainly got a few minutes to talk over old times with me, or you're not the man I take you for! Come on!"

Assey had a sudden inspiration. "Listen!" he said. "Hear that? I think I do hear someone after your chickens! You go that way and I'll go this way and head him off!"

"Take my flash," The man pressed it into Assey's hand. "I got a little twenty-two here, and if you'll locate him, I'll scare him off for good with a pot shot!"

"Give me time, now!" Assey said. "He waited until the man had hurried away, and then he proceeded in the direction of the Inn."

This was no time, Assey reflected as he strode through a series of puddles, to renew old friendships, even if he had the faintest idea who the man might be. Never to the best of his knowledge, had he ever seen this hearty, bald person before in his life.

Before he reached the Inn, the electric current returned to Quisset.

EMERGENCY FOOD AND HOUSING CORPS

The Emergency Food and Housing Corps will be identified by a red coffee cup in white triangle set in blue circle.

Modern warfare necessitates planning and providing emergency feeding and housing for persons whose homes have been damaged or destroyed. Usually public welfare organizations, assisted by enrolled volunteers and private agencies, have the responsibility for conducting such services. Experience in mass feeding, dietetics, and handling large groups of persons is very valuable in this type of work.

The wearing of this insignia is limited to workers enrolled with the Emergency Food and Housing Corps in the city of Greenville Civilian Defense Organization.

THE PHONE BOOTH MURDER

by Phoebe Atwood Taylor

YESTERDAY: What started out to be a clam-delivering expedition for Assey Mayo, the Cape Cod detective, has turned into a murder case. Assey and Jennie found a corpse in the phone booth at the deserted Whale Inn, and then Jennie heard steps on the porch and Assey took out after a man he could not see. Now the man has Assey covered, and Assey is a much puzzled detective.

Chapter Five

A Girl Shows Up

"No chickens tonight, brother!" The man's flashlight swung Assey's face. "No more free chickens for you out of my coop—say, you, what's your name?"

"Mayo," Assey said. "I'll admit to trespassing, mister, but I ain't after your chickens. I'm just trying to find my way."

"I knew who you was! Assey Mayo! Knew you in a minute! Say, you don't remember me, do you?"

"Considering," Assey said, "that I

The street lights came on, the church spire on the main street revealed itself in a glow of flood-lights, and somewhere a thwarted clock chimed twenty-two before someone mercifully put a stop to it.

The rain even began to let up as he turned into the Inn's driveway, past the little whale-shaped light. Jennie had mentioned that the rain's stopping would make any difference now to his thoroughly saturated best gray suit. Assey thought, as he passed Syt's truck and briskly mounted the steps.

He was prepared and ready for one of Jennie's more vehement onslaughts, for a torrent of slightly querulous questions as to where he had been anyway, and what he'd been doing, and why on earth he'd dared to leave her alone so long in that place.

Softly shaded electric lamps were burning, the candles and candelabra were back in their proper places, the telephone closet door was closed.

It illuminated his long narrow, clean-shaven face.

In two strides Assey crossed the room and yanked open the door of the phone closet.

He breathed a sigh of relief as he closed the door.

"The body was still there, anyway! May I help you?"

Assey pivoted around so quickly that he nearly lost his balance.

Newcomer

Over in the far corner of the room, her head and shoulders just visible behind the cupboard shelf where the Inn telephone and register reposed, was a pleasant-looking, dark-haired girl. "You?" the girl repeated, and stood up.

Her rose-colored linen dress was crisp, the girl herself was completely poised and unruffled. She neither looked nor sounded as if she had any inkling of the presence of that slumped-over figure in the telephone closet across the room.

The girl cleared her throat and spoke a little loudly in the umbrella! "The one."

"May I help you? May I direct you anywhere?"

The infection of her voice suggested that directing Assey to two other places would be the only possible help she could offer him.

Assey removed from his head the soaked, shapeless thing which had until recently been his best gray hat.

"Perhaps," he said, "you could direct me to my Cousin Jennie."

"Does she live in Quisset?" the girl said. "If she does, and you'll tell me her full name, I'd be glad to look her up in the telephone book for you."

Assey half-leaned and half-sat on a corner of the center table and looked curiously at the girl.

The best actress in the world, if she had seen or come in contact with Jennie Mayo, couldn't pretend otherwise. Jennie wasn't a person you passed over lightly. And the best actress in the world, if she knew of that body in the closet, couldn't pretend otherwise. That body was something else you didn't pass over lightly.

"Now, I sort of wonder," Assey said aloud, "how this all transpires. Do you mind telling me who you are, and how long you've been here?"

"My name is Doane," the girl said. "My mother, Mrs. Doane, manages this Inn. It's the Whale Inn, by the way, and I rather think it's not the place you're looking for. You was the Commercial House, don't you?"

Chapter Six

Through The Keyhole

Assey chuckled. "I must," he said, "look pretty much of a tramp."

The girl didn't deny it.

"But," Assey continued, "my appearance is deceiving. I've done some tramping this evening, only I ain't one. Miss Doane, how long have you been in this room?"

"Since three this afternoon," the girl said tranquilly. "And now, I'm sure you're in a hurry to get to the Commercial."

"You mean," Assey said, "you been in this room since three this afternoon? All the time?"

"Yes," the girl said firmly.

Assey's eyes narrowed.

"And if you'll be good enough to come to the door," the girl continued, "I'll point out the direction of the Commercial House."

Assey leaned back his head and opened his mouth wide.

"Jennie! Ahoy, Jennie!"

The girl jumped as his quarter-deckbellow roared out.

"Jennie!" Assey took another breath. "Jennie!"

"Look here," the girl said sharply, "you've got to stop that din! I can assure you that there is no one named Jennie here!"

"Assey! Assey!"

"Who's that?" the girl demanded.

"That," Assey said, "is Jennie. Ahoy, Jennie, where are you?"

"Upstairs! Come up here, Assey! I got her, right here!"

The girl ducked down, opened the low-swinging cupboard doors, squeezed herself through them, and ran over to the staircase in front of Assey.

"Absolutely, you can't go up—"

"Aside, youngster," Assey said, and took the stairs three at a time.

He found Jennie on her knees with her eyes focused on the keyhole of a room down the corridor to his right.

"What's going on, Jennie? What are you glued to that keyhole for? Who's in there?"

Jennie put her finger to her lips. "Shhh! She's in this bedroom! Right in here! Shhh!"

"What's the use of shushing?" Assey wanted to know. "Between your yells and mine, I guess somebody knows we're in this general vicinity. Jennie, who's in there? What you been doing?"

"Look!" Jennie got to her feet and held out something she'd picked up from the floor beside her.

Assey took the white-stitched leather pocketbook from her and glanced at the initials.

"O. E. B. This is the one from the phone booth?"

"Listen," Miss Doane had been desperately trying to get a word in edgewise. "Listen, will the two of you simply stop this and—"

"Oh," Assey said. "I forgot you. Go downstairs, will you, and phone Hanson of the state police, and Doc Cummings, the medical examiner, over in Wellfleet. Tell them Assey Mayo wants them at the Whale Inn right away. Hurry, will you? Now, Jennie, what'd you take this from the phone booth for?"

"I never did, Assey! I took it from her!" she pointed toward the door at whose keyhole she had been watching.

Miss Doane broke in before Assey had a chance to speak.

"You don't look like Assey Mayo!" she said. "I've seen innumerable pictures of him. He was a wailing cap and a duck coat with lots of little pockets, and he carries a gun. And, besides, he's in Washington right this minute! I saw a picture of him in the paper this morning, shaking hands with people who make engines or something!"

"I'm back," Assey informed her, "and these are my city clothes. Now, hustle with those calls, will you?"

"Well, all right." But she still looked skeptical as she turned and walked back along the hall to the stairs.

"Now, Jennie," Assey went on, "let me get this straightened out. What's the story on this pocketbook, anyway?"

"I tell you, I took it from the woman that's in the bedroom in there! I didn't take it from the phone booth woman!"

Assey sighed.

"Let's start at the beginning," he said patiently. "Somebody knocks over a bucket of clams, and I rush out into the rain. What did you do then?"

"The minute you left," Jennie said, "I started to feel awful scared and trembly. All alone there with those candles flickering and her in that booth! Why, for a minute or two, I just shook! And then I shut the closet door, and then I began to feel a little better. And then—in she came!"

"Who?" Assey demanded. "This Doane girl that was just here?"

"No, no! The woman at the red light! One with the umbrella! The one."

"Look, Jennie," Assey said soothingly. "I don't blame you for being confused. I tell you what I'll do. I'll phone Sam over at the garage and have him drive my roadster here and take you home. You need to be home. You had a hard day, even before you got to this place, and what's happened since hasn't made it any easier. I'm not a bit surprised you seen a ghost! Come on downstairs, and I'll call Sam."

It was not until he took hold of Jennie's arm that Assey realized his error. The sudden gleam in Jennie's eyes was not gratitude for his consideration, but sheer, unadulterated

Locals End Season With Washington Here Friday Night

TO BE PLAYED AT SMITH PARK

Arch Rivals Expected To Put Up Tough Battle

Greenville High plays Washington here Friday night at Guy Smith stadium at 8 p. m. The rivalry between these two eastern conference teams ranks as the keenest in state high school circles. Dating from way back in the "dusty past," this game annually rates top billing in this section.

Like many traditional games, previous records and scores mean nothing and can be forgotten when these great rivals tangle. Washington started off very slowly this year and seemed to be in for one of its worst seasons, but along about the middle of the season they found themselves and in their latest two games have given performances that should rank them with the best in the league. Two weeks ago they topped the highly favored Kinston team and in their last appearance they flattened Roanoke Rapids. Beating Roanoke Rapids was not such a feat in itself but the manner in which it was done was very convincing.

The Phantoms on the other hand have been sailing along at a nice clip since the "debated" Kinston affair and have a chance to end up in second place in the conference if they can annex this last game of the season. Barring any injuries that may be sustained in this week's hard work, the Phantoms should be in top shape for the season's finale.

Fans will have a chance to see some of the conference's best backs in action for the last time this year. Washington boasts of a fine passer and runner in Parker to lead their devastating attack. The Phantoms' "pony express" will be counted on to lead the way for Coach Farley's contingent.

Future Book For ALL-AMERICA

By DILLON GRAHAM
Sports Editor, AP Feature Service

New names appear each week on the list of All-America possibilities as one performer after another comes through with consistently brilliant performances in 1941 gridiron warfare. Many on the list are surprise newcomers—others are capping fine collegiate careers. Here are some strong bidders:

BERT STIFF, Pennsylvania, was a fourth-stringer last year but as regular fullback is the Quakers' 1941 star.

AL WISTERT, Michigan tackle, is a bright star up on that strong Wolverine front wall.

JIM LANSING, Fordham end, is only a junior but he's an outstanding flankman.

at 8 o'clock.

The students will attend another pep rally Thursday night in the high school ravine.

Who's Who

Evelyn Scheller kept a tally of pupils and teachers mentioned in the first through the fourth issues of Greens Lights. The student leading are Jack Edwards and Leonard Briley with 37. John Spearman with 29, and H. R. Goodall defeats Rachel Fleming in their own private war by being mentioned 28 times, while Rachel was mentioned 27 times.

The teachers with high scores are Mr. Mulholland with 27, Miss Sara Harrison with 26, and Miss Imogene

LIONS TO SELL GRID TICKETS

Local Club Boosts Greenville-Washington Tilt

Plans are being made to have the biggest crowd to ever attend a football game in Greenville.

Local high authorities with the complete cooperation of the Lions club will be out this week to sell tickets for the coming Greenville-Washington tilt. This will mark the first time that such a plan has been tried here. Other towns in the state have used like plans and have had great success.

Considering the great drawing power of this traditional game, one can expect the biggest crowd in Greenville's history. There are two reasons why such an effort is being made to boost this game. Officials are anxious, first, to have a large crowd to back the local boys in their battle with such a keen rival; second, to put as much money into the Athletic Association treasury as possible to defray running expenses.

The Athletic Association does not get any subsideation from any school funds and must make its own way. All of the revenue must come from gate receipts.

Fifty five boys have been equipped and trained during the football season. And when it is taken into consideration how much it costs alone, to equip one boy to take part in football, besides traveling expenses, officials, etc., it can be readily understood why support at home games is imperative.

This annual game with Washington always is the high spot of the season and draws fans from all sections. Washington will bring a big following that will swell the crowd.

British Offensive In Libya

The black arrows on this map indicate the main British thrusts in the new Libyan offensive extending from the Sidi Barrani (1) to the Giarabub Oasis (2). The British reported driving more than 50 miles into Libya but the Germans claimed Axis counter-attacks had thrown them back west of Sidi Omar. The British appeared to be bent on flanking Bardia and heading for Tobruk (3) where an English force has been besieged for months.

U.S. SAILORS MAKE CASTING ABOARD FLEET REPAIR SHIP

The four U.S. bluejackets pictured above are making a casting in the foundry aboard the U.S.S. Medusa, fleet repair ship. Seldom mentioned and perhaps less glamorous than the fighting ships in our Navy, the Base Force ships constitute a vital part in the maintenance and operation of America's first line of defense. This force is made up of cargo ships, store ships, oilers, tugs, hospital ships, icebreakers and repair ships. The foundry work above is but a small part of the work that can be done on the repair ships - important vessels of the Base Force. Optical shops, carpentry, electrical, blacksmith, machine and metal working shops, all completely equipped, are found aboard ships such as the U.S.S. Medusa. All of the skilled workers on these repair ships are Navy or Naval Reserve bluejackets and many of them received their trade training in the Navy. Opportunities for advancement, to learn skilled trades, for travel and adventure are identical whether a man enlists in the regular Navy or Naval Reserve - pay, food, clothing, medical and dental care are the same.

LOAN PROG'R'M AIDS FARMERS

Cited As One Of Reasons For High Cotton Prices

Raleigh, Nov. 24 - One of the chief reasons for higher cotton prices this year has been the Government loan program. E. Y. Floyd, AAA executive assistant of N. C. State College, said today. A floor has been placed under cotton prices at 85 percent of parity, or an average of 14.02 cents per pound. Growers will vote December 13 in a referendum to decide whether quotas will remain in effect on the 1942 cotton crop, and Floyd said it is important to remember that the loan program cannot be offered unless quotas are approved.

"A large majority of farmers - over 90 per cent - were cooperators in the 1941 AAA farm program," the AAA official said, "and therefore, were eligible for the loan at the full rate. These cooperators were in a position to place their cotton in the Government loan, in case they were not offered a price equal to or above the loan rate."

"The law provides that no loan program can be offered to farmers during any marketing year for which quotas have been voted down in a grower referendum," Floyd continued. "The made loans on an uncontrolled surplus would be unwise expenditure of public funds." The loan program has kept cotton prices in the United States considerably above prices in other countries, according to the Triple-A leader. Other factors in the improved price situation have been the 160,000 bales of cotton put in producer pools by the Government since August 1. The cotton will be held off the market until next spring. Over half of the carry-over of 12 million bales of cotton at the beginning of the current marketing season was owned by the Government.

"Cotton prices would not have continued upward at the present level if the total supply had been available to the market," Floyd said, "and growers should remember this when they vote December 13."

Mayor Sugg to Speak In Interest Of Sale

Closing the first part of a series of radio talks in the interest of the Tuberculosis Seal Sale, Mayor B. B. Sugg will speak this evening at 7:15 o'clock over station W.G.T.C. The subject of Mayor Sugg's address is, "We Owe It To Ourselves." He will stress the importance of giving to the children of the family adequate protection along the lines of good health - particularly prevention and early diagnosis in the case of tuberculosis.

Reveals First List Of TB Bond Purchasers

The Tuberculosis Christmas bond and seal sale got off to a good start this morning, following a meeting of solicitors at the Health department offices. Mrs. W. J. Wooten, general campaign chairman, this afternoon released the first list of bond purchasers as follows: $50 bonds, R. M. Garrett, Person-Garrett Tobacco Co., Garris-Evans Lumber Co.; $25 bonds, Mayor B. B. Sugg; $10 bonds, J. E. Winslow, J. B. Kittrell, Dr. R. L. Humber, W. P. Moore, L. B. Garris, Sans Souci Book Club; $5 bond, Chatham Book Club.

DEFENSE BOND QUIZ

Note - To purchase Defense Bonds and Stamps, go to the nearest post office or bank, or write for information to the Treasurer of the United States, Washington, D. C. Also Stamps are now on sale at retail stores.

Q. "What shall I give for Christmas?"

A. The answer to that often baffling question is easy this year. Give Defense Savings Bonds or Stamps.

Q. Why are great numbers of firms paying Christmas bonuses in Defense Savings Bonds and Stamps?

A. To help National Defense, and to stimulate thrift among employees. Now, as never before, individuals need to save in order to meet the problems likely to arise when defense spending ceases.

Theatre To Be Host To Local Grid Team

Coach Bo Farley, his 1941 football proteges, the Greenville High School band and the six cheerleaders will be honored by T. Y. Walker at the Pitt theater Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock in the first of two pep rallies arranged for the Washington - Greenville football classic Friday night.

The purpose of this program is not only to honor this year's Phantoms but is to arouse spirit and interest in the Washington-Greenville game.

The program has been arranged by the Student Council of the high school in collaboration with Mr. Walker, manager of the Pitt theater. Billy Horne, vice president of the student body, will act as master of ceremonies for this twenty-minute pep rally.

Between the first and second shows the band, under the direction of H. A. McDougle, will open the pep rally by playing the school song. The band will also play "Fordham Ram" and "Stand Up And Cheer," two short numbers.

Billy Horne will introduce Coach Farley, who in turn will introduce his players.

After these introductions, the cheerleaders, under the supervision of Joyce Corbett, will lead the audience in three short cheers. Assisting Miss Corbett will be Queenie McGowan, Jane Massey, Catherine Youngblood, Martha Rowe and Mary Ann Duncan.

Defends Soldiers

Olivia White (above), society editor of the Agnes Scott College News at Decatur, Ga., boiled when she read that some girls in eastern colleges opposed dating soldiers because they were "not good matrimonial risks." And so she sat down at her typewriter and pounded out an editorial in vigorous defense of the soldiers. "College girls go out on dates for fun, anyway," she wrote, "and some of the best sports in the world are soldiers." Olivia took particular issue with a Mount Holyoke college girl, insisting that non-dating "snobs" of soldiers by "coy co-eds" wouldn't help army morale.

MURDER, FATAL ACCIDENT, ROBBERY DURING WEEKEND

(Continued from page one) morning. As they stopped, Clark ran. Dees and House took chase, each going in a different direction and the Negro was caught back of Wyatt Brown's house. He had removed the moulding in the front door and was taking out the pane.
