LET'S UNITE GIRLS (Dedicated to the Girls of America) Our present days are cloudy, blue, and obscure.

So why kid ourselves, sit, hope and beguile?

Let's all be friends in war ready to endure.

The trouble and hardships that precede a smile.

No—the sun is not bright in our wonderful world.

But there's a flicker of happiness within my heart;

For I know 'neath the scalp hid by each shining curl,

Lies a mind ready and willing to do its part.

Come on girls—be honest with me. Some nice boy is the flame of your heart.

Perhaps he's in camp—or sailing the sea.

So when is a better time than now to start?

To start what?—you may rise and say,

First—I suggest to lessen suspense. Be kind to our boys, be considerate and pray.

Encourage their loved ones. Anything toward National Defense

Dear girls—as I close may I suggest or say

There are millions of little ways to help the land we love.

Maybe a warm friendly smile will keep a lonely soldier gay.

Defense Bonds will help and prayer to our Father above.

GIRL SCOUT NEWS

The Girl Scout Road To Preparedness

"In Peace or in war the thrilling words 'Be Prepared' have always stood as guide posts to direct Girl Scouts along the trail," wrote Mrs. Paul Rittenhouse recently in a message to the more than 600,000 girls enrolled under the Girl Scout banner.

And because Girl Scouts have followed the motto "Be prepared" for a week, or a year, but for thirty years, the national director in this war-time year was able to add to her message, "I have confidence that everyone of you will meet with the true Girl Scout spirit all the tasks, big and little, that fall to your share in the months ahead."

Looking back on the road the Scouts have traveled down the years since their founding in this country on March 12, 1912, reveals a steady growth in numbers, in development of activities, of training, of service.

From the first troop of eight members three decades ago, Girl Scout membership grew to 5,000 in 1915; to 52,918; to 81,230 in 1923; to 190,209 in 1928; to 315,904 in 1933; to 516,420 in 1938; to 654,670

Here Sunday

E. K. Higdon who will preach at the Christian Church tomorrow morning, is executive secretary of Oriental missions for the United Christian Missionary Society of the Disciples of Christ, with headquarters at Indianapolis, Ind. His responsibilities include the supervision of the mission work of his communion in China, Japan and the Philippine Islands.

Before being elected to his present position, Mr. Higdon was a secretary of the Foreign Missions Conference of North America and has been in missionary work since 1917 when he went to the Philippine Islands.

At Manila he was pastor of the Taft Avenue (student) church, and the Union Church of Manila (American-European). From 1930 to 1937, he was executive secretary of the National Christian Council of the Philippines.

Mr. Higdon took an interest in the Philippine government, serving as a member of the Committee on Child Health Day of the Bureau of Health and as honorary Deputy Organizer of the cooperatives for the Bureau of Agriculture.

Mr. Higdon has always taken an interest in the publicity, promotional and journalistic aspects of the Christian movement. He is the author of "Jesus and National Aspirations," "How to Find God," and the editor of "Christian Use of Money" to which he contributed a chapter. He was for several years the Philippine correspondent of the Christian Century and has had numerous articles on the Philippines published in various magazines and periodicals.

A cordial invitation is extended to the people of Greenville to hear Dr. Higdon's sermon on "Millions Facing Emergencies."

in 1941.

Step by step along with the growth in numbers, was the forming of an everwidening program of activities and service, the gradual building up of a national organization, the enrolling of prominent men and women in roles of leadership and guidance.

Highlights in the development of Girl Scouting in the United States are:

1912—Two companies of Girl Guides formed in Savannah, Ga., by Juliette Gordon Low.

1913—The name Girl Guides changed to Girl Scouts. Miss Edith Johnson made first national headquarters established in the Munsey building, Washington, D. C.

1914—First Girl Scout handbook, called "How Girls Can Help Their Country," published. Title was changed to Scouting for Girls in 1918 and in 1929 to "Girl Scout Handbook."

First khaki uniforms ordered, consisting of middie and skirts and voluminous neckerchiefs.

1915—Girl Scouting, Inc. first constituted and by-laws adopted. First annual convention held in Washington, D. C. National Council formed with Mrs. Juliette Low the first president.

1916—National headquarters moved to New York. First training camp for Girl Scout leaders held on land owned by Mrs. James J. Storrow near Plymouth, Mass. This developed into the first national training school established by Mrs. Storrow in the summer of 1917 in Boston. First troop of Brownies (juniors from 7 to 10 years) formed at Marblehead, Mass. Executive board inaugurated financing plan. Thereafter Mrs. Low had personally financed the entire movement.

THE ONLY TRUE WAY
 The Bible has many interesting things to say about highways. John the Baptist, quoting the prophet Isaiah, declared that he was a voice in the wilderness admonishing men to prepare the way of the Lord, to make his paths straight.

In the first Psalm we are told that the way of the ungodly is like chaff which the wind bloweth away. Jesus spoke about the narrow pathway which leads to life and the broad highway which leads to destruction. His greatest utterance on highways is to be found in the fourteenth chapter of John where He says, "I am the way, the truth, and the life." This is not the same as saying, "I lead men along the way," or "I direct them." He himself constitutes the highway. It is in His person, through His spirit by means of His fellowship that men walk through dark and foreboding surroundings and emerge at last upon a plateau of vision and joy. If we keep close to Christ, our feet are always in the right pathway. In Him is truth, and that quality of life which begins now with a sense of peace and forgiveness, and persists after God has folded up the heavens and the earth, as a traveler on trek folds up a tent.

Our Lord is the way, or the highway, a road that remains intact through all generations. This road is firm on the day of abounding life and sure in the hour of death. "This is the way, walk ye in it."

TIME FOR DEFINITE UNDERSTANDING
 (Scottish Rite News)

Though the relations between the United States and Vichy are strained, there are indications that this country will not risk an outright diplomatic break yet with the country that has shown its friendship for our enemies. This remarkable state of affairs exists despite the recent disclosures that Vichy's North African territory served as a supply route for General Rommel's German columns in their recent counterattack in Libya.

The history of diplomatic relations between the United States and Vichy is a weird story of turning the other cheek, not only but time and time again. From the very first, before Petain sanctioned Vichy's complete collaboration with the German conquerors, it was apparent that any aid sent to France from this country aided Hitler. The first boatload of supplies destined, officially, for the starving children of France was the signal for the release of at least an equal amount of food stocks, already in Vichy's possession, to the Nazis.

It was found that oil supplies, sent as a poorly concealed bribe to Vichy for its North African forces to prevent Petain from turning over the remnants of the French fleet to Hitler, reached Hitler's panzer divisions. As a matter of fact, it looked as though every kind deed the United States was disposed to do for the unfortunate French turned out to be a gift on the back and a material benefit to Hitler.

Now word has come from Vichy that the 26,500 ton battleship Dunkerque, badly damaged by the British at Oran in July, 1940, has been repaired and returned under its own steam to the Toulon naval base. A sister-ship, the Strasbourg, is fully fit for service and in Vichy's hands. Two others, the 21,189 ton Provence and the 35,000 ton Richelieu, are also in France, though the exact state of their repair is not known. Twelve French cruisers, now in French ports, are fit for service.

This is the battlefleet that the United States has, at least in theory, kept from being used against the United States by following appeasement tactics. Yet the significant gathering of this fleet in Vichy's home waters would indicate that Vichy is prepared to press still further its demands upon the United States to guarantee the neutrality of these fighting ships.

What has not been made clear, however, is what this appeasement has accomplished. Many observers, noting the dispatch with which Vichy got its naval forces repaired, cannot see that these diplomatic bribes from the United States have prevented Hitler from doing pretty much as he pleases in France.

Vichy has further shown where its sympathies lie by deliberately breaking its pledged word when it turned over French Indo-China to the Japanese, an action that sealed the fate of Singapore. And the Axis is turning covetous eyes toward the French naval base at Madagascar, which would completely cut Allied supply lines to China and India.

Until some concrete assurances are given that Vichy will remain truly neutral, United States appeasement tactics look strangely like aid to the enemy. It is doubtful if our Allies can accept at full value United States assurances that it is doing all in its power to defeat the Axis until it settles this Vichy problem.

This would mean that he would be too much on the defensive to do much save to keep Stalin from giving Germany a taste of the terrors of invasion such as she has thrust upon other countries in two world wars. It might also mean that the Nazis would be caught between two millstones, because if Hitler shows great weakness in the spring the British are likely to attempt to put an army across the English channel into Western Europe.

As this column has already pointed out, Hitler hopes to break into the Caucasus and Middle East. His primary object is to get oil and other essential supplies, but he also wants to coordinate his efforts with those of the Japanese. With this in view, there's small doubt that the Nazi chief is putting pressure on the Japanese to strike westward into the Indian ocean, as soon as they have finished off Java, to cut the Allied supply routes to the Middle East and Russia.

Washington—The national capital's 30-year-old Cherry Blossom festival is out.

It hasn't been announced definitely yet by the Greater National Capital committee, which has charge of the annual fanfare queen selection, music and pageantry that ordinarily accompany the affair. But civic leaders will give odds it won't come off in 1942 and even money that there won't be another one for years to come.

The cherry trees you see, are Japanese.

The annual ceremony around the Tidal Basin, timed (hopefully) to coincide with the bursting blooms of the cherry trees that partially encircle it has had two purposes since that eventful initial planting in 1912: (1) to signalize the good-will between the United States and Japan, and (2) to stimulate the tourist trade to Washington.

All that's necessary is to turn those two purposes wrong side out and you'll have the two best excuses for not holding the festival this year. What we don't have any of for Japan right now is goodwill. And a spring invasion of tourists to this already pack-jammed city would be about as welcome as a septennial visitation of locusts.

There is, however, one more reason. The area from the Tidal Basin back to the Mall is now just acres of temporary buildings for war workers—and, piles of lumber for such buildings yet to be constructed. Probably the only persons who will see the 1942 blooming of Japan's good will trees will be those federal workers who are laboring in shifts to knock the dome of those shrubs into a dented helmet.

Public opinion about the Cherry Blossom festival has changed, too. A few years ago, when there was talk of cutting down some of the trees to make way for the Jefferson Memorial, several irate city mothers chained themselves to the trees in protest.

Now, letters are pouring into the National Capital Parks Commission demanding that the gifts from Nippon be torn up by the roots, chopped down, burned.

Old timers here see an omen and strange foreboding in the circumstances that surrounded presentation of the trees. The first shipment in 1909, arrived and was found to be full of insect pests, root call worm, and fungus diseases. The trees had to be destroyed. The Japs said, "So sorry, please." Three years later a ship arrived with the trees that finally were planted.

true that "all is fair in war and love"; but victories and marriages won by this slogan surely lead to trouble in the end.

The above is not complaint or criticism of our brave men. We all owe everything to them. But what will such training of the youths of all nations finally do to the world? We know that the great need is for integrity, self-control, and those other qualities which make for real manhood. Certainly, if our enemies cannot be trusted we should be able to trust our own people and not treat them as brainless and soul-less robots.

After the War
 Military men try to cheer me up by saying that after the war this procedure will be stopped and we can again live as human beings; but can we? I recently attended a conference on providing employment after the war. We were told (1) that 25,000,000 will be engaged in war work when the war ends; (2) that the war will end very suddenly without anyone thinking an end is in sight; (3) that 20,000,000 of these people will immediately be thrown out of work.

Thereupon we were told of various plans for new rules and regulations for all employees and workers as to just what we must do, how much we must spend, where we shall work or sell after the war. Apparently there will be more instead of less regulating when peace comes. The present plan is to add to the restrictions in order "to fight the peace" as one of the Washington "higher-ups" expressed it.

Don't Monkey With Nature
 Many of the government restrictions seem crazy to statisticians. We know that when you begin to regulate nature you are putting your head into a hornet's nest. The war today is largely due to tariffs, bonuses and other forms of national greed which have upset natural trade and industry. Some day we must "go through the corn sheller" for our mistakes. Our difficulties will not be solved by returning to letting nature work out these problems through natural rewards and punishments not through artificial commissions and bureaus.

If artificial rationing, priorities, price fixing, censorship, wage and hour regulations, and the thousands of other experiments are necessary, we will do good. Let us be honest with people however, and acknowledge that they will not succeed in the end. They are a form of dope or anesthetic which will work for a short time only. Washington economists are today doing what doctors did in George Washington's days. History says those doctors read our first President when he really needed a blood infusion. The parents of our boys need the same treatment they feel is friendly to them.

America Needs Religion
 My real appeal is that we all (and this includes Washington) start immediately to get people back to the fundamentals of life. We should tell people that jimcrack restrictions and regulations cannot long work. Last week I urged that we people trust in God. Now I beg the President to trust the people. If our people can be trusted to do right we will win the war; but if they cannot be trusted we will surely lose the peace. Greed must be crushed; but this can come about only through a spiritual awakening in Washington. Every broadcast for the sale of Victory Bonds should include an appeal for integrity and selflessness. Let us have a "righteous exulteth a nation" today as it did over 2,500 years ago.

There are no short cuts to victory. Otherwise Hitler would have already won. Laws can be discovered, but they cannot be manufactured. World War II came upon us because we thought more of ourselves and forgot God. We will avoid more of the same after it is over, only as we think less of ourselves and remember God.

State And Duke Win; To Engage In Tournament Finals

TERRORS TAKE 53-52 VICTORY

Duke Reserves Prove Too Much For Wake Forest

Raleigh, March 7.—(AP)—Faithful fans of this basketball capital of the Southern Conference reached the land of dreams come true today for their favorites, the Red Terrors of N. C. State College, will be playing in the finals of the conference tournament for the first time since the tourney was moved to Raleigh in 1933.

The fans are hoping that their hometown boys, who haven't been good enough to get in the tournament for the last two years, will emerge from the finals tonight as conference champs, but they're not doing any large scale wagering. And the reason for that is obvious: The Red Terrors, will be playing the powerful Duke Blue Devils, defending champs and top-seeded team in the tournament.

The Blue Devils breezed through to the finals with ease, the way they breezed through their regular season schedule—15 wins in 16 starts in conference games. They defeated Washington and Lee easily 59-41 in a first round game Thursday afternoon, and although they had tougher going in the semi-finals last night they scored a convincing 54-45 victory over Wake Forest.

The Red Terrors, however, had to come from behind the last eight seconds of play last night to win a 53-52 decision from William and Mary.

The Sovereigns were ahead 29-22 at intermission, and the play was on even terms for the first 10 minutes of the second half. State then staged a rally and went ahead 49-46 with only four minutes to go. The Sovereigns had done it before and they came mighty close to do it again. They started sinking shots right and left, and Jack Freeman sank a field goal at the one-minute mark to give them a 52-51 lead.

And then, little Buckwheat Carvalho, a real Terror at floor play but regarded as one of the poorest shots in the conference, got the ball. He dribbled in from the right and sank a beautiful two-pointer and the Terrors led 53-52.

In eliminating Wake Forest, Duke again relied on the fact that it has two good basketball teams, its first string of veterans and its second string of veterans and its second Coach Eddie Cameron, as usual, alternated the two teams.

The first half was a real contest with the lead changing hands nine times. At intermission the score was 17-11. After the half, the Blue Devils went ahead 29-21, but Herb Cline, Deacon center, went to work and pulled his team into a 33-31 tie.

That was the Deacon driving gam for the Blue Devils had things well in hand the rest of the way.

Havana.—Even though Dolph Camilli is captain of the Dodgers the duty of delivering the lineup to the umpire-in-chief before the start of each game will remain in the hands of Coach Chuck Dressen. Camilli wants the assignment so he can be the only captain of a major league team with an assistant.

Dangerous Baggage

BY ELEANOR ATTERBURY

Chapter 33

They must have climbed some 3,000 feet when Goodwin turned the car swiftly, crossed a creaking bridge, pulled to an abrupt stop.

For a moment, Sharon couldn't see why. A moment later it was all too plain. Yawning not ten yards from where the car stood, lay a deep river canyon. A thousand feet below, a stream hurtled toward the ocean.

"Get out!" Sharon opened the door, stepped away from the car. The motor was still running when Goodwin, too, stepped out from under the wheel. Then, Sharon's heart leapt to her throat, he released the brake. Gently at first, the car rolled toward the brink of that canyon. Then, gathering momentum, it moved faster—faster—disappeared with a crashing of underbrush.

At that moment, she heard the crash. Splintering echoes banged against the canyon wall opposite. Drawn to the cliff's edge almost as if she were hypnotized, Sharon looked down, saw the shiny fragments of what had once been a handsome car. Completely demolished! There was hardly enough left of it to supply evidence it had once been a car.

Horrified, Sharon turned to him. "Why did you do that?" "Destroy evidence in case my pursuers get this far," he said calmly. "Maybe I should have sent you with it."

Sharon's blood drained from her cheeks. "Maybe." "They'll think we were both in it. And they'll waste some precious time climbing down that ravine to search for our mangled bodies." He smiled confidently. "You didn't really believe I could be caught, did you?"

"I think you can—and will be caught," she replied with bold confidence that collapsed inside her. Goodwin's eyes narrowed. "Edda warned me that you were falling for Tom Stafford. I should have listened to her—before it was too late." He moved closer, menacingly. "If I am caught—neither of us will be alive."

"Even that would be preferable to your escaping!" Sharon said bravely. The only thing she could hope for now was that the end would come quickly.

Goodwin laughed, a horrible sound that scraped Sharon's nerves like sandpaper against satin. "Not desperate are you, Sharon?" he teased, mocking her. "There was a time when a kiss from me would have thrilled you."

True enough, Sharon agreed silently. Adroitly, she stepped out of reach. "That was yesterday," she said coolly, and instinctively preparing for flight, she glanced behind her. That way, the deep ravine dropped precipitously. As she looked, her glance snagged on a curve of road winding around the opposite wall of the canyon. Then her pulses

Avalon, Calif.—Special jackets with an electric heating device in one sleeve are being condition the Cubs' pitchers. After a workout a pitcher dons the jacket and absorbs the heat 10 to 20 minutes.

De Land, Fla.—The Browns heard by way of the grapevine today that pitcher Jack Kanner, one of three regulars still unsigned, might give up baseball for a job in a ship-building yard in his native New Orleans. Pitcher George Caster and catcher Rick Ferrell are the others unaccounted for.

bank of the tiny mountain stream, along the stream bed. At least a quarter of a mile from the road, now, Goodwin stopped, put two fingers to his lips and whistled softly.

A moment later, like an echo, came an answering whistle. Amazing, Sharon saw then that the stream fell down over rocks past a low, stone building.

"Another hideout!" she gasped thinking aloud. Goodwin made the descent to the wide porch, pulling her after him. "Not entirely," he said. "My summer home—under normal circumstances."

"A comfortable retreat, shall we say?" He smiled sardonically. "It is so well concealed that even the most diligent seeker would pass it by. I think we'll be comfortable here— indefinitely. Particularly as our hostess has no doubt anticipated our arrival."

Goodwin seemed to think that too. "This way," he growled and caught her arm.

Hide-Out Then, recrossing the bridge, he pushed her ahead of him, down the Edda, as cool as if she were greeting them at the door of her San Francisco apartment, smiled. "How unexpected a surprise, this is, Miss Doyle." Then, to Goodwin, "Something went wrong, did it?" "Plenty. Shall we go in."

Furnished simply, but attractively, in wicker and soft greens, the cottage was a summer dreamhouse. And so well concealed one could live here for weeks—months, maybe—and never be discovered.

Too amazed to be able to put all this together into a clear picture, Sharon just listened.

"Tell me what happened." The Countess—or rather Edda Goodwin or Gottschalk or whatever her name was, Sharon remembered—had exchanged her elaborate dinner dress for smartly tailored slacks.

Goodwin's brief report of events confirmed Tom's version to the last detail. Confirmed, too, Sharon's belief concerning her own mortal peril. Goodwin would not speak so glibly of his part in the treacherous betrayal of his country if he were not sure that Sharon would never be in a position to act as witness against him!

The Countess, too, seemed to take that for granted. Right now, Sharon noticed, they spoke exactly as if she were not there.

"You're clever, darling, to have planned this way out in case something did misfire." Edda smiled sweetly. "But how did you happen to bring Miss Dovie with you?"

"Miss Dovie went over to the enemy, unfortunately, and then over-estimated our credulity." Goodwin said, his masque of "charming cavalier" back in place.

Sharon's lips curled at the top-smooth perfection of his manners and remembered the moment in the cabin when he had cursed her, knocked her to the floor.

"No, really?" The Countess looked at her now, brows raised.

"I found it—advantageous to bring her with me." He laughed quietly, as if enjoying some private little joke.

Sharon, with defiance born of sheer desperation, let her own temper have rein. "He means that he would be behind bars at this moment if he hadn't been cowardly enough to use me as a shield for his own body!"

"It doesn't sound as if Miss Dovie is going to be a very pleasant house-guest," Edda dropped languidly into a deep chair. "Perhaps you had better show her to her room."

"I'd be delighted," Goodwin smiled, crossed the room, opened a small door. "Here you are, Miss Dovie. We hope you will be comfortable."

Call Wary but helpless, Sharon crossed toward him slowly. Careful to keep her chin up, her trembling lips tight, Sharon stepped into the room. A small bed room with but one window, she noticed immediately, and that facing out over the deep ravine.

She faced her pseudo-host and hostess. "I'm sure I shall be much more comfortable—in mind anyway—than either of you," she dared, taunting.

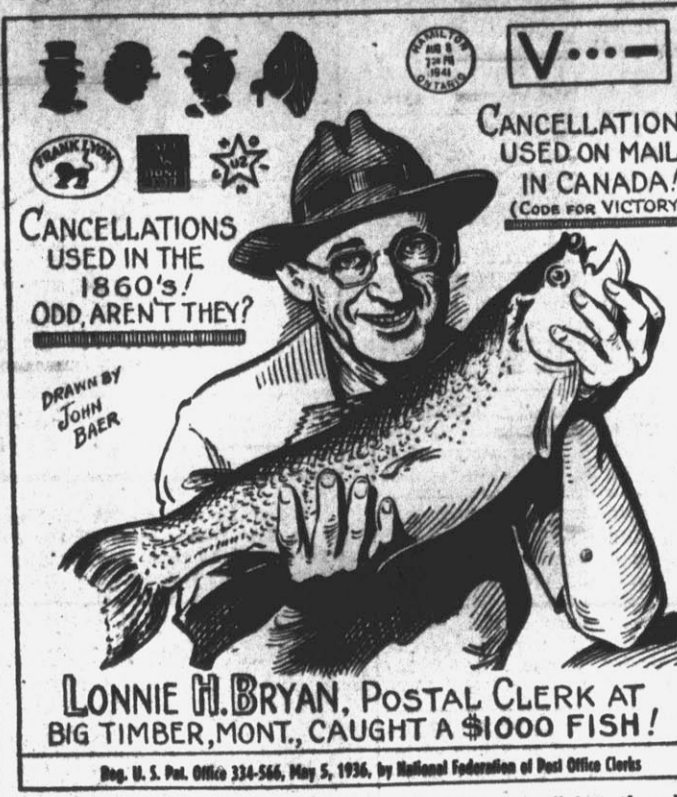

Then just as she closed the door, she noticed the heavy bolt. And knew she was a prisoner even before she heard Goodwin turn the key. Instantly, she knew the maddening frustration of being confined to four narrow walls, powerless to do anything but wait.

The one window faced east and as she stood looking out across the ravine she saw the sun, that was to have announced such a glorious new day, pushing feeble pink rays up behind the mountain. The rain had stopped. The sky had cleared as quickly as if it had had no part in the drenching downpour that must have made it more difficult for Tom.

Tom! Had he been in one of those cars she had seen? And if he had, been he able to follow that faint trail Goodwin had pursued? Goodwin seemed so confident of plenty of time to get away.

She became aware that voices had lowered in the next room.

POSTAL ODDITIES

Stories are plentiful about the "fish that got away" but the above drawing affords ample proof of one that didn't. In exactly 10 minutes after throwing in his hook Lonnie H. Bryan caught a 5-pound, 13 1/2-ounce rainbow trout that brought him the prize of $1,000 in the Livingston National Trout Derby.

Droping to her knees, she pressed her ear against the keyhole shamelessly.

She heard Mr. Goodwin's voice, carefully softened. Then the Countess' murmured replies. They were speaking rapidly, excitedly. Only occasionally could she catch a word, sometimes a phrase. But by piecing them together, she began to pick up the trend of their discussion.

Tom's men would follow the trail to the precipice, discover the wrecked car. They would go back then for rope and tackle to haul out the car. They would search the ravine carefully. All this before they discovered they were on the wrong scent.

Sharon flattened against the door, strained to hear more. They would leave as soon as it was dark in the car the Countess had driven up and cached in an abandoned barn on the lower road.

"But what shall we do about her?" It was the Countess who asked. During the silence which followed, Sharon felt exactly as if she were waiting for a sentence.

Goodwin spoke finally. "Have you any suggestion?"

"Leave her here—asleep," the Countess laughed softly. "So fast asleep she won't waken for several hours. Wouldn't whoever owns this charming cabin be surprised to find a Goldilocks here?"

Sharon fled back to the window. She must get out of here. At once. Noiselessly she opened the window. But the ravine dropped away below too swiftly to risk escape that way.

Reluctantly she closed the window, pressed her hot cheek against the cool pane. Was this going to be the end of the road for her, she wondered, almost resignedly. Was it hoping too much that Tom would find her—in time?

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, March 7.—(AP)—Selected stocks got a finger-hold on recovery in today's market despite persistent unsatisfactory war news and apprehension over taxes.

The list edged downward at the start, with a few blue chips again exhibiting weakness. Trends soon took a turn for the better, however, and initial declines running to a point or so were reduced or converted into advances in many cases. While minus signs were plentiful at the close, modest gains were well distributed in most departments. Numerous issues were unchanged.

Allies Battle Three Jap Thrusts In Java

Allied troops battled Japanese on three fronts in Java after the enemy landed despite severe naval losses. The Dutch reported the Japanese (1) had moved inland from Rembang and taken Blora and were trying to fight their way (broken arrow) to Soerabaja, allied naval base. The Dutch also said Japs, who landed in the Indramayu bay area (2), had driven to Soebang, less than 30 miles from Bandoeng (broken arrow). The third Jap force (3) which landed in the Bantam district, appeared to have been checked in a drive aimed at Batavia (broken arrow).

By The Associated Press A Russian spearhead was reported to have slashed to a point within an artillery range of Nazi-held Vyazma today and the Soviet government declared Red army troops had killed 40,000 Germans on the central front alone in a 28-day period ended March 5.

The London Times urged immediate British action to bring about an agreement with Russia and the United States which would minimize Soviet anxiety concerning prosecution of the war and post-war plans.

"There is beyond a doubt," it said, "a growing inclination among Soviet leaders to feel that Russia has been called upon, with indirect and insufficient help from her allies, to bear the main brunt of Hitler's assault."

The Times said that delays evident in political collaboration between London and Moscow since Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden visited Premier Joseph Stalin last December "have been only too likely to sow the seeds of mistrust in Moscow."

The dispatch, accredited to a correspondent with the United States Pacific fleet, said "great convoys" loaded with American soldiers, pilots, planes, tanks and guns were heading through the southwest Pacific as the vanguards "for a great offensive against the Japanese."

The related battle of Burma provided a momentarily brighter picture.

Camouflaged tanks and fresh Scottish soldiers joined in a British counter-attack which cost the Japs 60 dead and other casualties yesterday in the Pegu sector 40 miles north of Rangoon, the British said. A communique from Rangoon last position.

"Suddenly the truck exploded and Luke Capps' filling station, about 150 yards away, and behind which I was sitting in my car, was leveled to the ground," Bobbitt said.

"My car was demolished and only by the grace of God am I living to tell the details."

Bobbitt said that the highway patrol had cleared the cement roadway, in which a 30-foot gap was left by the explosion, for a distance of some 200 yards.

The truck was driven by Raymond Avery of Charleston, S. C., who was only slightly injured, Bobbitt said.

The automobile was proceeding into highway 301 from highway 70 at a point some two miles from Smithfield when the collision occurred, Bobbitt said. The driver of the car he said, was Mrs. Minnie Lewis of Raleigh.

She was severely burned and in a critical condition. Her husband, Odie Lewis, suffered a broken leg. One of the two marines, riding in the Lewis car, also received a broken leg. Their names were not available. The two Lewis children were not hurt.

"The car caught on fire almost immediately and sprayed the truck with gasoline," Bobbitt said. "But the truck did not immediately catch fire."

"The firemen were making fine headway in controlling the blaze when the water gave out," he continued.

"We then cleared the highway of spectators for a distance of at least 200 yards, but naturally several of the buildings destroyed were within the area which we had cleared and some of those injured were in the buildings."

"The truck was carrying some 30,000 pounds of high explosives, including ammunition," he continued. "The long burning fire, which lit up the heavens for miles around, naturally attracted folk from a wide area and it was difficult to keep them back from the scene."

So tremendous was the power of the explosion that one man was injured a quarter of a mile away by a piece of wreckage. Debris was found 2 1/2 miles away.

Soon after the explosion the sirens of ambulances began to scream as they dashed from neighboring towns. Residents of nearby Smith end Selma rushed into the streets as windows smashed. The general feeling seemed to have been bombed and that the war had reached Eastern North Carolina.

An hour after the explosion many citizens of Smithfield and Selma were walking the streets with bandaged heads and hands, suffering from wounds caused by violently propelled bits of steel and wreckage.

men who suffered injuries in the explosion of a munitions truck near Smithfield were brought to the Rex hospital here today.

They were listed as Harold Selman and Roy Robertson, both of water haven, Fla., and Pvt. Judson Strickland of the New River marine barracks.

Dr. Clarence E. Judg said that Robertson was seriously injured and appeared to have suffered a fractured skull. Hospital attaches said that Selman was also seriously injured. Strickland, they said, was not badly hurt.

Goldsboro, March 7.—(AP)—H. F. Lee of Smithfield was the most seriously injured of six victims of an exploding truck, who were brought to a hospital here today. A piece of shrapnel was removed from his body.

Others less seriously injured and suffering from lacerations were listed at the hospital as a Mrs. Gurkin of Smithfield, a Miss Sanders of Smithfield, Bruce Howell of Goldsboro, Mrs. H. H. Hardy and W. H. Hardister, the addresses of both of whom were not immediately known.
