Red Army's Defense Of Caucasus Oil Cracking

Explosions Behind Lines Indicate Malokop Oil Wells Being Destroyed; Nazis Claim Capture Of Vital Points To The South; Russian Defenses of Stalingrad Holding

By EDDY GILMORE Moscow, Aug. 10.—(AP) Driven back by relentless, hard thrusts of German motorized troops and Alpini, Red army defenses before the oil fields of Malokop and in spurs of the Caucasian foothills appeared to be cracking today.

Front line dispatches telling of tremendous explosions roaring over a broad area seemed to indicate the Russians were carrying out with ruthless abandon the scorched earth policy in the first oil regions the Germans have been able to penetrate in their Caucasian thrust.

The Germans, suddenly extending their drive eastward along the Baku railway toward the Caspian, claimed the capture of Prystgorak, 110 miles southeast of Armavir and midway between the Black sea and Caspian. They already had claimed to have reached the Caucasian slopes on a 250-mile front and captured Malokop and Krasnodar in the northwest Caucasus.

In large-scale tank battles in Krasnodar area of the Don elbow, Soviet armor, including the Soviet machine, appeared to be as strong as the Germans; and the Red army was counterattacking with some success.

Five hundred miles north of the Caucasus, in the Voronezh flank, the Russians were making further headway, expanding their bridgeheads on the west bank of the Don, taking several populated places in violent fighting, and repelling German counter-attacks between the Don and Voronezh.

The Germans were bringing up reserves and still maintaining communications with their groups before the city, however.

In the oil-bearing Malokop-Krasnodar area of the northwest Caucasus, said today's communique, the Germans were "striving hard to advance," and dispatches from the front said great clouds of dust and smoke were draped over a broad landscape already baked by a broiling summer sun.

Praeda said roaring blasts scarred a wide area; and it was reasonable, observers here said, to believe that the Russians would destroy the oil installations before the Germans reached them. The Malokop fields produced about 7 per cent of Russia's petroleum.

As the battle spread southward dispatches told of burning wheat fields, too, indicating that in some sectors the Russians had not been able to harvest the grain before the approach of the enemy as they were able to do farther north.

There was no report here indicating whether the Russians who had been battling along the Black sea (Continued on Page Six)

Charge Negro With Murder 2 Women

William Lang, Negro, charged with the murder of his wife, Nancy Lang, and Nannie Powell, wife of John Powell, Negro, near Falkland Saturday morning, was captured after an all-day manhunt by sheriff's and other officers. Lang was placed in jail here. Coroner A. A. Ellwanger recommended that he be held without bail after a coroner's jury had taken preliminary testimony concerning the tragedy.

Lang's wife left him about a week ago and went to the home of a relative on the W. E. Smith farm north of Fountain. After failing to effect a reconciliation by personal means Lang went back Saturday with a shotgun. After killing his wife he pumped three loads of shot into Nannie Powell, Negro, with whom his wife was staying, officers stated. One load ripped away part of her shoulder, another struck her in the abdominal region, and the third shot mangled a hand.

Indian Campaign Gains Headway; Violence Spreads

British Take Stern Measures To Put Down Riots; Gandhi And Associates Arrested

By BIRESTON GROVER Bombay, Aug. 10.—(AP)—Soldiers and police, fighting to control widespread rioting on the second day of Mohandas K. Gandhi's campaign to end the British rule in India, have fired upon crowds in Bombay ten times yesterday and today as strikes and disturbances spread throughout the country.

Bloodshed ushered in Gandhi's "non-violent" civil disobedience campaign yesterday when the police were forced to fire six times. A Bombay government communique tonight said casualties on Sunday totaled eight killed and 150 wounded, but said it had no tally of today's casualties in clashes in which demonstrators stoned trains and automobiles, and burned government grain shops. Strikes closed some factories and schools.

Twenty-nine were sent to the hospital with bullet wounds suffered when police fired twice into groups in the Dadar district of Bombay, in Poona police fired on a crowd, mostly of students, near Parvarambhai college, and two were removed to a hospital. Schools and colleges there were closed. Coorad, the Hindu name for hoodlums, threw bottles through windows.

The work stoppages in some Bombay mills were in response to Mohandas K. Gandhi's "do or die" call for a "complete deadlock" by strikes and all other non-violent means. As the campaign entered its second day amid shootings, showers of bottles and shouts of demonstrators, there were portents of even greater trouble ahead.

Bands of Hindus stoned some Moslem shops in the "trouble area" of south central Bombay. Police have the greatest fear of repetition of the communal Moslem-Hindu riots which have followed previous civil disobedience campaigns. These riots often were the bloodiest and the most difficult to suppress.

Throughout the city troops were stationed in groups ranging from a dozen soldiers to a full platoon. They evidently were being shown largely for moral effect, however, for they were not participating with the police in breaking up disturbances. But they carried their rifles. The curfew from 7 p. m. to daylight, plus rain kept the city quiet (Continued on Page Six)

The week-end has developed three major crises which, although in widely separated theaters, seem to be closely related—(1) The American offensive against the Japanese in the Solomon and Aleutian Islands. MESSAGES (Compiled from sermon by Rev. George W. Perry, minister, Jarvis Memorial Church, August 9.)

God spoke to me this morning as I passed a flower bed—
A blossom gently gazed at me—
It seemed as if it said—
"Good morning—do you enjoy God's sunshine and God's rain As much as I?—Then tell me When you pass this way again.

God spoke to me this afternoon As I walked down the street,
A perfect stranger smiled at me. A smile sincere, and sweet.
God spoke to me at sunset,
As the sun sank out of sight,
Painting in multicolors
The beauty of God's might.

God speaks to us so often,
Could we but only hear,
Where beauty dwells, God's advocate
The Holy Spirit's near.
Whenever we read the Book of Truth
We know that sound advice
Being delivered to us is God's message through Christ.
—H. Peter—1:3-9.

The lesson-sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Every day makes its demands for higher proofs rather than professions of Christian power. These proofs consist solely in the destruction of sin, sickness, and death by the power of Spirit, as Jesus destroyed them. This is an element of progress, and progress is the law of God, whose law demands of us only what we can certainly fulfill."

Library News

A Helpful Group

Because of the unhappiness and unrest of these days there are many who are unable to face reality as they should. Some outside help from an understanding friend or a good book is needed or else they falter. In recognition of this fact the Sheppard Memorial Library has recently added a very carefully selected group of books designed to make the unstable more stable.

These books are written by well-known psychologists, psychiatrists and members of the clergy who specialize in finding the basis of frustrations that annoy and weaken. These books offer many solutions to personal dilemmas. They point toward a readjustment of life that is possible for anyone who will try to struggle and help himself. And best of all, these books offer a spiritual vision, without which man gropes in the dark without a ray of hope, but with which he can find peace and contentment.

The books in this group are:

"How Jesus Heals Our Minds Today" by David Seabury—An absorbing book that is a friendly discussion of Jesus' teachings, considered in terms of most enlightened clinical psychology. In simple, direct language, the author shows how they can help such forms of maladjustment as self-consciousness, worry, slavery to detail, fear of convention and many other ills induced by the pace and confusion of modern life.

"How To Find Happiness and Keep It" by Ashley Montagu—This is a book that has something entirely new to say. It tells how you can know your own mind, how you can make your own decisions and how you can meet your personal problems that arise from day to day. It shows how every rational creature has unbounded capacities for enjoying life, and explains how you can achieve fulfillment of your destiny as an intelligent, creative man or woman.

he did not expect to go to Hyde Park to vote because there was not much of a Democratic contest in his district. Bowen also is entered in the Democratic primary against Ferdinand A. Hoyt.

The pre-war isolationist issue almost has been raised against Rep. William B. Barry, Queens county Democrat opposed by William F. Brunner, a former representative, and Rep. Vito Marcantonio, a leader of the American Labor party's left wing who is opposed in the ALP, Republican and Democratic primaries of New York City's 30th district once represented by Mayor Fiorello H. La Guardia. La Guardia has endorsed Marcantonio.

Eight other incumbent representatives seek renomination in 25 contests.

Election in the primaries or state convention delegates is expected to give an early indication of the strength of United States Senator James M. Mead, and State Attorney General John J. Bennett, Jr., contenders for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in a battle which pits the political influence of State Democratic Chairman James A. Farley against that of President Roosevelt.

Farley, who split with Mr. Roosevelt on the third term issue, is backing Bennett. The President has said that, if he were a delegate to the Democratic state convention August 19, he would vote for Mead. The high, which may decide control of New York's powerful delegation to the party's 1944 presidential convention, has brought from both sides claims of the support of a majority of potential delegates.

Meanwhile friends of Dewey, who lost to Democratic Governor Herbert H. Lehman in 1938 and has not announced his candidacy, claim pledges of more than enough delegates to give him the Republican nomination. Lehman's decision not to seek a fifth term precipitated the gubernatorial contest.

Farmers Realize Control Is Guard Against Inflation

Gandhi Is Host To Louis Fischer, U. S. Author

SLUMP AFTER BOOM PRICES SURE TO COME

Control of Wages and Profits Must Be Included, However

Editor's Note: Does the farmer cheer when wheat and livestock prices soar? Dr. O. B. Jenness, agricultural economist, says he should not, and doesn't. In the following articles, written for Wide World News, he explains why.

By O. B. JENNESS
(Chief, Div. Agricultural Economics University of Minnesota)

Minneapolis, Aug. 10. — (Wide World)—The farmer has a special interest in having effective brakes applied to inflation before it is permitted to get out of hand.

Prices of farm products have improved considerably as a result of the war situation. This rise has been welcome to farmers who have felt that their prices have been too low in relation to prices generally.

But farmers know from past experience that inflation affects farm costs as well as farm prices. A runaway inflation may be expected to bring a disastrous deflation in its wake. When deflation sets in, farm prices tend to fall much faster than costs. Inflation control is needed to avoid the distress which follows when such a price spree is over.

During a violent inflation the temptation to bid up farm land prices becomes well-nigh irresistible. Individuals forget that land values depend on long-run returns. The worst feature of a land boom is the way it piles up farm debt.

In the last war period, land prices in such agricultural states as Iowa and Minnesota more than doubled. The farm mortgage debt increased relatively more. Thus at its peak in the early 1920's, the farm mortgage debt for the United States totalled over 10 billion dollars compared with only about 3 billion in 1910. In spite of foreclosures, scale-downs and repayments, the total today is still well over 6 billion with land values at or near the 1910 figure.

Another decided inflation and land boom will cause debt totals to head for the stratosphere once more with more distress when the bubble breaks. Clearly, farmers do not want to go through another experience of this kind.

The price control act passed last winter provides that the OPA cannot fix ceilings on farm prices at less than 110 per cent of parity. A popular interpretation of this is that farmers do not want price control. However, indications are that the rank and file of farmers favor holding inflation in check and are willing to accept price control to this end.

What they insist on is that all important factors—prices, wages and profits—must be controlled if serious inflation is to be avoided. They are not convinced that all of these factors are under effective control at the present time.

The remedy, of course, is not to release farm prices from control but to extend it to all the important elements in the inflation situation.

Six of the bodies were found in the buried machine.

Strength FOR THE DAY

By EARL L. DOUGLAS

THE VALUE OF SILENCE

One of the hardest things in the world to do is to be silent. Furthermore one of the things we seldom do—and certainly it is a thing we should often do—is to sit quietly every day, if only for a few moments, in complete and absolute silence, looking out on the green landscape—if there is any about us—and if we have to be on the city streets, then looking up into the blue sky. Few people can sit in absolute silence for a quarter of an hour. If we could learn to do this, we would discover in these periods of silence much wisdom that God can impart to our hearts in no other way.

The greatest contribution the Quakers have made to the spiritual life of the world is to teach men the value of solemn silence. It is one thing to let the mind wander about from one object to another; it is quite a different thing, and something much more profitable, when we can maintain silence amid there is a pondered within us a powerful mood which will enable us to meet with equanimity whatever circumstances the day may bring forth.

Said Carlyle on one occasion: "Do thou thyself but hold thy tongue for one day, and on the morrow how much greater are thy purposes and duties; what wreck and rubbish have the idle musings within thee swept away when intrusive noises were shut out."

One of the great Greek philosophers was known to say that of all virtues silence was the best.

WHAT ABOUT OUR SCRAP CAMPAIGN?

Other sections of the state and country are getting ahead with their scrap campaign but so far little is being done in this county in that respect. Pitt County was one of the few that went over the top in the rubber salvage campaign and can usually be counted on to come through on any undertaking. What about the scrap metal campaign? Isn't it about time we were getting along?

YOUR OPPORTUNITY

The semi-annual Dollar Day of Greenville merchants will be staged in this city on Thursday of this week. These semi-annual trade events offer value-saving opportunities for the buying public of this trade area. Be sure to read the advertisements between now and Thursday, look over the values being offered by the various participating merchants and then on Thursday make it a point to take advantage of the shopping opportunities being offered.

YOU CAN MAKE MONEY BY WAITING

The high prices now being paid on the border tobacco markets no doubt are tempting to some of our growers and will make them want to carry some of their tobacco to those markets before our own belt opens on the 25th of this month. Our advice to each persons is to wait for the opening of our own markets. Prices will be just as good or better here and you will save the cost of transportation as well as save your tires that cannot be replaced. It's just two weeks from tomorrow that our markets open.

Washington Daybook

Washington—As a result of the President's order that all members of Congress on duty with the armed forces return to their posts in the legislative branch of government, three Congressmen have announced that they will throw over their $10,000-a-year jobs to write their names in blood, sweat and tears on the battlefronts.

Three others, still with the armed forces in parts unknown to Washington, have made no public declaration of intention despite the nearness of elections.

Five others have bowed to the President's judgment that they will be more valuable to the war effort in their legislative positions and have returned to run for re-election. Since there has only been eight months of war for the U. S. and so far the supply of military manpower has far exceeded the demand, the 77th Congress has hung over a service record of which it may well be proud.

First of the congressmen to bolt the Presidential order was Lieut.-Com. Robert T. Seerest, the 38-year-old Caldwell, Ohio, ex-coal miner, and father of three children who announced recently that he wouldn't wait for the end of his term but would resign to continue his post with the Navy.

The two who have announced they will not be candidates for reelection in order to stay with the armed forces are Infantry Maj. Albert L. Vreeland, East Orange, N. J., and Lieut. Frank C. Osmer, Jr., Haworth, N. J. Vreeland has been a reserve officer for more than 10 years in military intelligence, went into service on December 9 as a captain and already has won a promotion. Osmer's record is even more unusual. Fulfilling a pledge he made in a speech on the floor of the House to enlist the minute the United States got into war, he went in as a private—the only member of Congress to start out as a buck private in this war, probably a record that holds for World War I, too.

Of the three who have not been heard from, it is considered positive here that Col. Melvin J. Meas, St. Paul, Minn., now on duty as a U. S. Marine Corps flying officer somewhere in the Pacific, will be a candidate for reelection. But no word has been received from Capt. Vincent F. Harrington, the 39-year-old Sioux City, Iowa, who was last heard of in the Army Air Corps at Stout Field, Indianapolis; or from Lieut.-Com. Eugene Worley of Stamford, Texas, who is with the Pacific fleet.

The constituents of Lieut.-Com. Lyndon Johnson, from Johnson City, Texas, didn't wait for him to decide to run again. While he was with the Pacific fleet, a petition of 20,000 voters placed him on the ballot and he was nominated without opposition which, in Texas, assures him of reelection.

Three other congressmen who are back from the war fronts and up for re-election are Lieut.-Com. Francis Walter of Pennsylvania, a naval aviator in World War I; Lieut. Com. Warren G. Magnuson of Seattle, Wash.; and Naval Lieut. James E. Van Zandt of Altoona, Pa., who also is a World War I veteran.

The only senator to serve with the armed forces in this war is Maj. Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., the Beverly, Mass., Republican, who was lined up with the isolationist bloc before Pearl Harbor, but who already has had his baptism under fire with the tanks corps in Libya.

Not that it has anything to do with it, but neither party has a corner on patriotism so far as the service of congressmen is concerned. Of the 11 mentioned above, five are Republicans, six Democrats.

The WAR TODAY

casian pressure. There is danger that the Japanese may take advantage of the Soviet difficulties to attack Siberia, and our offensive may be intended to create a sufficient diversion, especially in the air, to discourage them from striking a knife in Russia's back.

The Indian tragedy provides further incentive for the Japanese to duplicate their Pearl Harbor treachery and strike at Russia. With India thus stricken, and the allies in danger of seeing this vast arsenal and vital strategic base rendered useless—or perhaps much worse—the mind of the United Nations against Japan is weakened.

By the same token China loses striking power against the Japs. Since the Nipponese cut the Burma road she has been getting most of her supplies from the outside world by air from India and over primitive trade trails through the mountains from that country.

However, while our offensive does protect Russia, either design or by circumstance, it undoubtedly is calculated to do more than create a diversion to help our Soviet ally. The Solomons and the neighboring Bismarck archipelago which the Japs hold, together with communications with Australia and New Zealand, and they provide the enemy with an enviable base for an attack on the Australian mainland.

Whether this will be weak to develop into a major operation probably depends on what success meets our initial efforts. The chances are that our command is figuring on ousting the Japs entirely from this whole group of islands if things go well. That would be a great achievement and one which would create a threat against the whole structure of the Nipponese island conquests.

Apart from the strategic considerations, this offensive may provide a most useful answer to the Chinese appeals for allied initiative in the Orient, and the Australian fears of invasion. A success there certainly would do much for morale at a time when Britain and America are having to devote most of their energy to meeting the German onslaught against Russia.

MRS. MURDOCK TAKES A CASE

Chapter 46
Exit Thorndike
Hector looked at Ward Allen. "It was true, wasn't it, that story about the shortage of accounts? Only it was Dean who was short—and on my account?"

"I don't know," Ward said, watching Della sip the brandy and water. "I know he'd taken the bonds—not at first, but today. I could only guess why he'd taken them."

Fenner stopped beside Thorndike. "You'd better let down." "It won't matter now." "What a drink?" "Nothing thanks." He remained sitting but the effect of the shock was passing and pain had begun to write its message on his face.

"You were the one in the shadow of the house," Joyce said softly, remembering the moment on the terrace. Thorndike did not notice the interruption. "I hadn't much choice," he said. "It was getting the bonds or prison. And for me anything would be better than that—even this."

"Funny. Even now when we know where the bonds are, they don't belong to me." She shrugged. "I pay off and get nothing." Thorndike said, as though he had not heard, "is this, I wouldn't have hurt Della. Ward, I had to make you think I would, though. I had to scare you both to silence. I wanted a chance to run for it. Anyone else, yes, I would have shot it out. But not her."

Della got up. Ward tried to restrain her but she shook off his hand. She went to Thorndike and knelt beside him. "I believe you," she said. Thorndike nodded and Della's eyes filled. Somewhere in the distance a siren shrilled, drawing rapidly nearer, then dying out again as it stopped below the windows.

Ward went to Della. He put his hands behind her elbows and lifted her gently to her feet. "Bacon Burned Up" Lieutenant Bacon gnawed on his lower lip and refused to be entirely placated. Arriving at the same time as the ambulance, he had sent Thorndike to the hospital with Sergeant Keogh and word had just come back that the man had died on the way. Now although the others had told him what had happened in the room, he was still far from satisfied.

"Every time I get mixed up with you in a murder case," he said to Murdock, "you hold out on me a little. Now you've got your wife doing it."

"She didn't hold out. Except at first." "She was coming here to have it out with Allen, she even called you and Fenner. Did she call me?" "I wasn't sure," Joyce said. "I thought I was right but I couldn't be sure."

Bacon looked down his nose at her. "Well, I got to hand it to you. It was nice figuring, that part about Reaburn not being able to get a gun; I had the same idea this morning and we've been checking it. The nearest pawnshop to Har-dacker's office is five blocks away, and that closed at nine. So I'd been wondering. About Allen, mostly. We'd checked Thorndike's alibi the night of Clarke's murder. It wasn't anything. He was at his club like he said, but there are a couple of ways of getting out and in again besides the front door. The record showed him being in but it didn't mean a thing."

He turned to Allen. "You actually did see her, huh?" he asked, indicating Della. "That night at Perry Clarke's?" Allen nodded. "I'd parked my car and crossed the street. Just as I was about to step inside the entrance I saw her round the corner. I kept on, not believing it could be she; then I turned and looked again. When she went over to her car I was sure. I couldn't figure it out, but there was nothing I could do. I had to see Clarke and I didn't want her to know anything about it."

"And you went up and knocked and he let you in?" "I thought he was drunk. He staggered and fell back. He never moved after that. I bent over him and then I saw the blood. He spoke just once. 'She took the envelope,' he said—I could hardly hear him—'Dee did it.'"

Allen glanced about. "I'd seen her, you see, and knew that she was against Siberia."

The position of the Russians in the battle north of the Malpas oil field is increasingly serious, as the Hitlerites continue to drive forward with their great weight of mechanical equipment. The most hopeful indication from the allied standpoint is that the Reds continue to fight an orderly withdrawal, without annihilation of great units of troops. There has been no disorder and that is all to the good.

Cubs And Reds Go 18 Innings In One Contest Sunday

GAME LASTED FIVE HOURS

All Time Record Number of Twelve Pitchers Used

By Austin Bealmeak with By AUSTIN BEALMEAK Associated Press Sports Writer

Most baseball teams will go to great lengths to win their games but few of them have had to go as far as the Chicago Cubs, who needed 18 innings yesterday to trip the Cincinnati Reds in the opener of a double-header.

Twelve pitchers, the most ever used in a major league game, paraded to the mound in the struggle, longest in the majors this season and the seventh extra-inning affair for those two clubs in 13 meetings.

Three times the Cubs figured they had it in the bag, but each time the Reds tied it up. Finally Hiram Bithorn, last of six Chicago hurlers, blanked the Reds for six straight innings and the Cubs sandwiched the 18th inning blow of Stan Hack and Don Dalesandro between a walk and an outfield fly for two runs and a 10-8 decision.

The game itself lasted five hours and was interrupted for another hour by weather in the 13th frame. That left only an hour of daylight for the second game, which the Reds won, 2-1, in four and a half innings, with Bithorn the starting and losing hurler.

A total of 37 players participated in the first game—three short of the record held by the Pittsburgh Pirates and Boston Braves. The previous record of 11 pitchers in a single game was set September 6, 1924, when the Philadelphia Phillies used six against the New York Giants, who used five. Since then, four games played in the national league and three in the American have employed that many hurlers.

By squaring accounts in the nightcap, the Reds preserved third place in the National league by a lone percentage point over the New York Giants, who swept a double-header from the Philadelphia Phils.

The Cubs might have won the opener in regulation time if Claude Passeau hadn't weakened in the ninth after pitching eight scoreless innings against Bucky Walters. Reds routed Passeau with four runs which tied the score and came from behind to knot it twice more when the Cubs scored two in the 10th and two in the 12th.

Meanwhile, the St. Louis Cardinals squeezed past the Pittsburgh Pirates, 4-3 and 2-1, to trim Brooklyn's lead to eight lengths. The Dodgers bumped into a postponement at Boston.

Shay Kistler handled the clutch hitting for the Red Birds, driving in the winning margin in the nightcap and setting the stage for the tie-breaking tally in the curtain-raiser, each time with a double.

At Philadelphia, the Giants tripped the Phils 3-2, in the first game when Mel Ott laid down a 10th inning home run with the bases loaded but Bill McGee made things easier in the second game by pitching a five-hit shutout as the Giants won, 2-0. Buster Maynard clouted a home run and made 10 put outs, two shy of the major league record.

In the American league, the New York Yankees increased their lead to a dozen games and the Boston Red Sox moved into second place, although neither team lifted a bat.

It all came about when the Chicago White Sox clipped the Cleveland Indians, 11-1 and 3-2, stretching their winning streak to eight games and dropping the Tribe half a game behind the Red Sox. Ted Lyons pitched four-hit ball in the opener for his 10th win this year and his seventh in a row.

Bob Kennedy, who was sworn in to the naval air corps between games, won the nightcap by singling the winning run across in the ninth.

The Detroit Tigers had the help of 11 St. Louis errors as they downed the Browns, 9-3 and 3-1.

Doubleheaders between the Yanks and Philadelphia Athletics and the Red Sox and Washington Senators were postponed until today.

gies in three trips to the plate. Shortstop Debie led the Red Sox seven-hit assault in the opener as he batted in two runs and got three hits for three times at bat. Glinchski hurled a live hit game as he chalked up win No. 13.

In the time-game Greensboro rallied for five runs in the sixth and seventh after Portsmouth had put across three rallies in the first and one each in the fourth and fifth.

The Norfolk Tars bumped the Charlotte Hornets twice, 3-2 and 2-0. The Tars took the opener in the ninth with a two-run rally as they jumped on Bucky Jacobs for ten safeties.

In the seven-inning nightcap Walter Dubiel blanked the Hornets to chalk up his ninth win. The Tars got nine hits off Manager Harry Smythe.

The Durham Bulls won both ends of a twin-bill from the Winston-Salem Twins, 3-0, and 2-1.

In the opener the Bulls ace hurler, Nancy, held the twins to a single blow and Centerfielder Whitman homered.

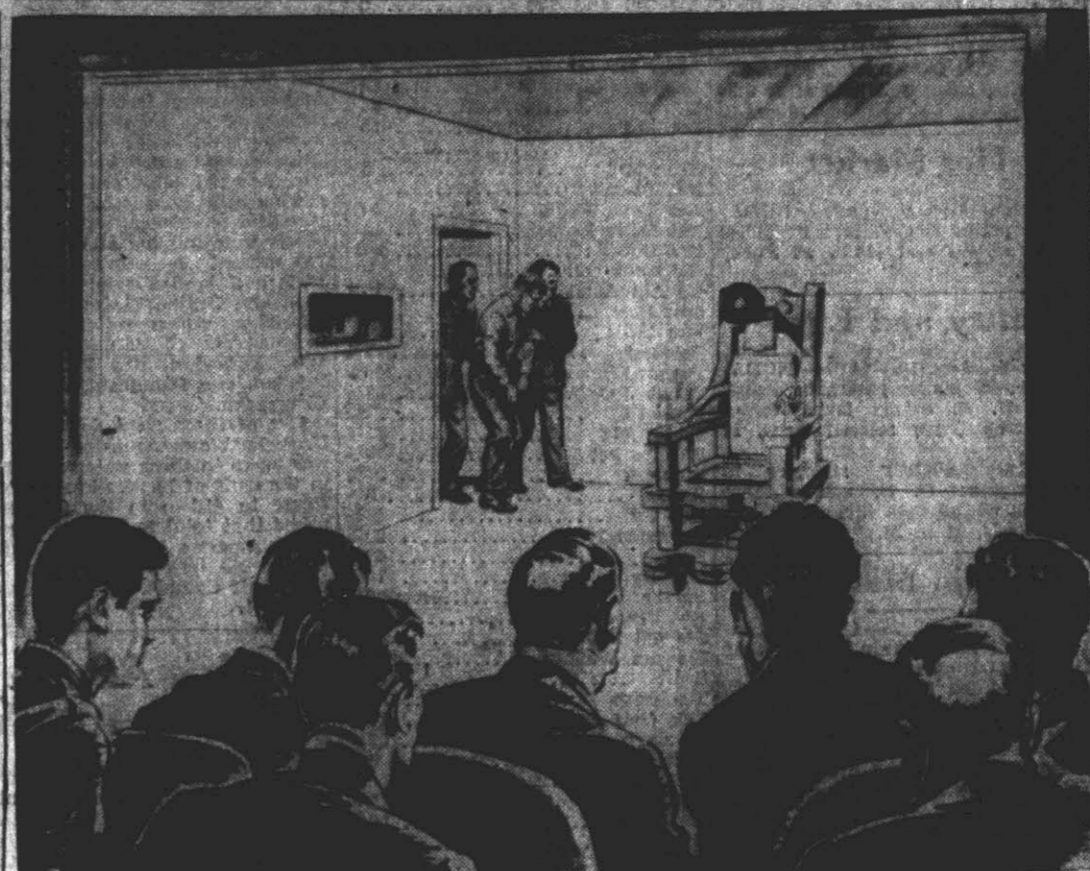

Durham won the seven-inning nightcap behind Haus's four-hit pitching.
