

British Stage Series Of Daring Raids Behind Axis Lines In Africa

Inflict Heavy Blows On Enemy Forces, Supplies And Planes At Three Widely Separated Bases Of Bengasi, Barce And Gialo Oasis In Past Ten Days

By STEPHEN BARBER
Cairo, Sept. 23.—(AP)—Daring British desert patrol raids 500 miles behind the Axis' Egyptian line on three vital enemy points—the big supply port of Bengasi, the nearby coastal airbase site of Barce and the outpost garrison at the Gialo oasis deep in the desert—were disclosed by the British command today.

Announcement of the most spectacular large-scale raiding in the whole war on the Mediterranean front, in which the British said heavy blows were dealt enemy forces, supplies and planes, came only after the Italians yesterday had acknowledged a six-day battle at the Gialo oasis.

The disclosure of these rapid-fire land patrol operations showed that even the land-sea raid on Tobruk the night of September 13 was only one phase of a series of sweeping incursions into enemy territory far west of the El Alamein line.

With United States and British air forces heavily bombing both bases, the British desert raiders struck on the same night, September 13, that other forces were landed at Tobruk.

Although they began 10 days ago, the Bengasi-Barce raids were a tightly held secret until now, after the patrols have returned to their bases.

A remote outpost about 235 miles due south of Bengasi and 300 miles southwest of the El Alamein-Gattara battle line in Egypt, was attacked on the night of September 15.

Bengasi and Barce were attacked two nights before—the same night as the big commando raid on Tobruk, some 220 miles to the east of Bengasi.

The communiqué said the British desert patrols which carried out the raids now have arrived back at their bases. It listed these accomplishments:

At Gialo—"Considerable casualties" inflicted on the enemy garrison and dumps of ammunition and supplies destroyed by artillery fire.

At Bengasi and Barce—more than 30 aircraft damaged or destroyed on the ground and several others "shot down while attacking our troops"; heavy casualties inflicted on "enemy personnel and motor transport."

The communiqué did not tell how the British were able to get men and artillery so far behind the enemy's lines over hundreds of miles of desert sands, but informed sources in London said that the heavy damage mentioned in the communiqué indicated the Axis was caught completely off guard.

The British called the attacks "desert forces," but the fact that the Bengasi-Barce assault coincided with the big commando raid on Tobruk suggested that the desert patrols might have been ferried by sea to landings in the vicinity of the enemy ports and begun their forays from there, swinging in from the southward to the Gialo oasis and eastward by desert to their starting bases.

(This also was suggested by the 48-hour interval between the night attack September 15 on Bengasi and Barce and the assault on Gialo (Continued on Page Six)

Local Guard Unit At Full Strength

The Fourth Company, First Battalion, First Regiment, North Carolina State Guard stationed here has their full quota of three commissioned officers, and fifty enlisted men. There are men on their waiting list to replace men that might be drafted or enlisted in the active armed forces of our nation. Other good citizens are invited to see Captain Jasper L. Jones in regards to placing their name on this list for call in the future as may be needed.

James Levy Corey has recently been promoted to Corporal. Clifton Bullock, Lester D. Paige, Jr., Walter H. Nobles and Sherman M. Parks have been given the rating of privates first class. These honors are given to denote their improved ability as a soldier.

Recent enlistments that gave the Greenville Company their full quota are the following men: Kevin Conaway, J. Key Norris, John Saleed, Jr., M. J. McLeod, E. Frank House, John W. Bunch, Elton H. Byrum, Joseph R. Moyer, and Russell G. Russell.

The Guard drills each Tuesday night and conducts an officers' and non-commissioned officers' school on each Thursday night.

Blast Axis Ships

Cairo, Egypt, Sept. 23.—(AP)—Big bombers of the United States Army Air Forces scored direct hits on two ships of which one exploded and the other burst aflame in a dusk attack yesterday on Axis shipping in the Libyan port of Bengasi, it was disclosed tonight.

The American planes were the advance guard of a wave of RAF heavy bombers which followed after sundown. When the British fliers reached the target they found it obscured by smoke from fires which the Americans had set. When they left still more fires dotted the waterfront.

No planes were lost in this double attack.

BOND AUCTION ON SATURDAY

Valuable Merchandise To Be Offered with Bond Sales

By CHESTER WALSH
The Victory Bond auction sale at the court house next Saturday afternoon is expected to draw the largest crowd to Greenville since the Fourth of July patriotic celebration and parade. W. H. Woodard, president of the Guaranty Bank and Trust Company, and chairman of the Victory Bond Committee, said today the banker promises a surprise—something spectacular at this War Bond sale.

The auctioneers, as the best tobacco sellers in the business, are going to "sell a case" of War Bond buyers, along with other "valuable" articles of merchandise. Woodard declined to reveal the name of the man to be sold on the block, but assured that his name is not Bendall or Kilgo.

Prizes for War Bond buyers will include 100 pounds of sugar, a rocking chair, barrel of flour (enriched), some young pigs of barbecue size, a heifer calf, men's shoes, newspaper subscriptions, etc.

A person who buys a War Bond for $13.75 in ten years receives $25 for it—a profit of $11.25, and will also receive some article of merchandise on the side—maybe the man "for picking cotton or harvesting peanuts." Farm labor is scarce.

An entertaining program is promised at the War Bond auction sale. Chairman Woodard and the merchants of the city and farmers who are donating articles to be sold with (Continued on Page Six)

Incidentally, They Are All Together

Incidentally, this was coincidental! Tom Wilson, Wilbur Brown and Charles Futrelle are all Greenville boys. They enlisted in the U. S. Army Air Corps at different times and at different places. They are now quartered in the same room at the new barracks at Maxwell Flying Field, Ala.

Wilson, Brown and Futrelle have had service in various places. They were a happy trio when they learned that three of the "home town boys" would be quartered together. Wilson is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wilson, Brown is a grandson of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Brown, and Futrelle is a son of Mr. and Mrs. K. T. Futrelle.

Wickard Fears Serious Farm Labor Situation

Washington, Sept. 23.—(AP)—Secretary of Agriculture Wickard said today that unless "we find some way to deal with the farm labor problem and other problems of farm production satisfactorily, we must find some way to deal with a shortage of food."

Testifying before the House Agriculture committee about a growing farm labor shortage which he said "cannot be overlooked or ignored," Wickard suggested that "a national labor service act should be given consideration."

"It is not simply a question affecting agriculture," Wickard said. "It is a question which affects the entire war effort."

Seal With History Goes In Scrap Pile

J. Herbert Waldrop, vice-president and cashier of the Guaranty Bank & Trust Co., today tossed into the community salvage pile at the court house an official seal stamping machine used by the old Pitt Realty & Investment Co., of Greenville. Every piece of scrap metal or rubber will help win the war.

The seal in its long service attended transactions of importance in real estate in years gone by. It had an interesting history. The company using it was incorporated in 1923.

Six cruisers made up the U. S. Navy's Northampton class, each of a standard displacement of 9,050 tons and a normal complement of 691 to 795 men.

performed before the United States entered the war.

"We begin on the 1943 crop with a labor situation far more threatening than a year ago and every sign points to our losing more and more men," the secretary testified. Wickard estimated that by the end of 1943, farms might lose as many as 2,000,000 more men to the armed forces and to industry. His estimate was based on an army of from 8,000,000 to 10,000,000 men by the end of next year.

"We have now come to a turning point in the road," he said. "We face 1943 with the prospect of less machinery, less farm labor, and probably less favorable weather. At the same time the need for production is going to be as great in 1943 as it has been in 1942, and may be greater, depending upon the fortunes of war."

Up to now, Wickard said that (Continued on Page Two)

Big Convoy Fights Way To Russia

London Admits Some Losses But Says Nazi Claims Exaggerated

London, Sept. 23.—(AP)—The great majority of a big convoy of United States, British and Russian merchant ships heavily laden with war supplies for Russia has reached its destination in north Russian ports despite Nazi air and sea attacks, the Admiralty announced today.

It acknowledged some losses, but a communiqué remarked acidly that German claims—to have sunk 38 out of 45 merchantmen—were "more exaggerated than usual."

None of the convoying warships was lost, the Admiralty bulletin added, contradicting the German assertion that six escort vessels were damaged or sunk in the running attack by planes and U-boats in the lengthening autumn darkness of the Arctic.

No figures were issued, the communiqué remarking that "it is not intended to assist the enemy by informing him of the extent of his lack of success."

The communiqué said: "Another important convoy carrying large quantities of war materials has arrived in north Russian ports."

Losses were suffered among the ships in the convoy, but despite heavy attacks by enemy aircraft and U-boats the great majority of the ships arrived at their destinations.

The convoy consisted of British, American and Russian merchant ships.

"It is not intended to assist the enemy by informing him of the extent of his lack of success against this convoy, but it is possible to say that his claims on this occasion have been more exaggerated than usual."

"No ship of the escort of this convoy was lost."

The German high command asserted Sunday that Nazi submarines and planes had smashed a great Russia-bound convoy in Arctic waters, sinking 38 merchant ships totaling 270,000 tons and destroying or damaging six warships in a running battle lasting six days.

With the fanfare of trumpets usually reserved for announcing great achievements, the Berlin radio broadcast a high command claim that only battered remnants of an original 45 freighters and tankers had escaped.

It said this represented a second triumph for the Germans on the northern convoy route, recalling previous unconfirmed Nazi claims that 35 ships in a convoy of 38 had been sunk in the same waters between July 2 and 7.

Soldier Appeals Folks At Home

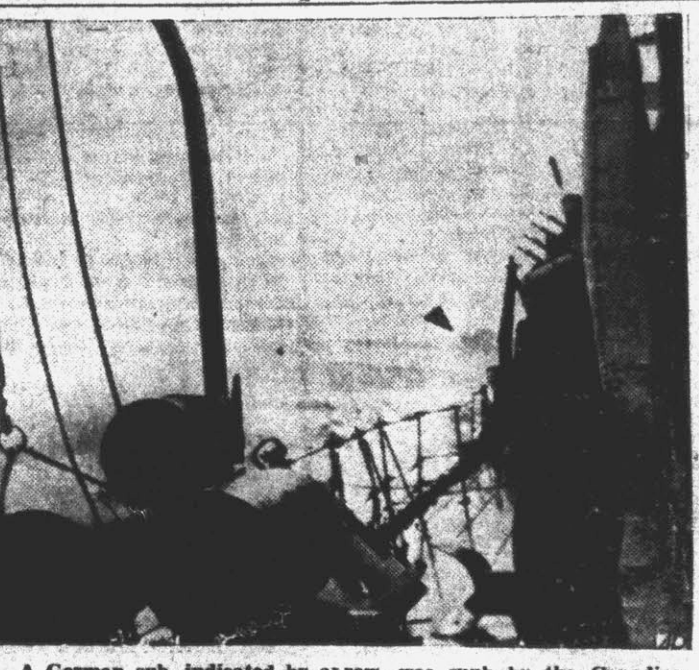

Sergeant Fumery Laughinghouse of the Cox's Mill section of Pitt county, stationed at Dale Mabrey Flying Field, Tallahassee, Fla., in a letter to his mother, Mrs. Annie Laughinghouse, reminded her that there was some scrap iron and rubber on the farm, and suggested that she turn it in to Miss Lella Higgins in Greenville for the Salvage Committee. Mrs. Laughinghouse has about 500 pounds of metal ready for the committee when they call for it.

Sergeant Laughinghouse's letter to his mother reflected a fine spirit of human interest. In part, it said: "The government needs metal and rubber. Now is the time for everybody to do all they can and try to do a little more. I know all of you are doing what you can, but get somebody else to help some. It is going to take all of us to win this war and we are going to win it! You can put your last dollar on that. It is going to take a long time to win this war and maybe some of us will not be here to see it over. But no sacrifice is too great to help win the war. Do what the government asks and buy War Bonds and get others to buy them."

Capital Of Madagascar Is Occupied By British

Stiffened French Resistance Quickly Subdued

London, Sept. 23.—(AP)—British troops which fought their way through stiffened French resistance 55 miles north of Tananarive have occupied the city, inland capital of Madagascar, a broadcast from there reported tonight.

Only a short time before, another Tananarive broadcast heard at Port Louis on the island of Mauritius said Governor General Armand Annet had sent a message of thanks to his forces for their "courageous" defense of the capital. Yet earlier reports said he had already left the capital for the southern part of the island.

The campaign began a fortnight ago when the British landed on the west coast for the push inland. Until they were within cannonshot of the capital they encountered little resistance except for road obstruction and bridge demolition.

The French troops immediately north of the capital had taken their stand in positions supported by artillery, a British army communiqué said.

The forces approaching Tananarive from Brickville on the east coast also have made good progress along the road and railway leading to the capital, the communiqué said.

It reported that the British troops now approaching the outskirts of the capital from the north encountered French troops in positions supported by artillery about 15 miles from the city.

This resistance was overcome, the communiqué said, when the British took their last objective at Mahitsy Village.

Farm Group Continues Efforts Raise Parity

Washington, Sept. 23.—(AP)—Administration Leader Barkley (D-Ky.) asked the Senate today to postpone further consideration of the anti-inflation bill until tomorrow when an effort was made to "compose differences" arising over an amendment proposed by the farm bloc.

"An effort is being made to compose differences with regard to this bill," Senator Barkley said, when the bill was about to come up for a vote at the conclusion of debate.

"I think progress has been made and will be made," Barkley continued. "I think it would be helpful if the Senate would adjourn until tomorrow to give time for this effort."

The House farm bloc joined its Senate counterpart today in a drive to write into the anti-inflation bill higher agricultural parity prices, despite "unalterable" administration opposition.

Russians Lose Some Streets But Repulse Enemy In Hand To Hand Fighting In Other Parts Of City; Von Bock Reported To Have Returned To Berlin

By ROGER D. GREENE
(Associated Press War Editor)

Under terrific, coordinated attack of massed tanks and waves of dive-bombers, the Russians yielded several more streets in one section of Stalingrad today, but beat off the Germans in hand-to-hand battles elsewhere in the city where the invaders were said to have paid a toll of almost 6,000 men in three days for gains measured in yards.

Russian troops slipping westward across the Volga river at night were reported to have driven the Germans from houses, buildings and streets amid savage hand-to-hand fighting in one section of Stalingrad today as the siege entered its 30th day with the invaders still held at arm's length.

At mid-day, Soviet headquarters acknowledged that German infantry, led by 100 tanks, captured several streets, but its communiqué declared:

"In other sectors, all enemy attacks were repulsed."

Nazi field headquarters said German troops had captured further ground in the "center of Stalingrad" despite the defenders' "obstinate resistance" and declared that Soviet counter-attacks had collapsed.

The German command also noted "severe defensive fighting" in the Voronezh zone, 300 miles northwest of Stalingrad, where the Russians have launched repeated diversionary attacks against the Nazi left flank.

More than 1,400 Nazis were listed as killed and 17 tanks knocked out of action in the last 24 hours.

While the gravest danger prevailed inside Stalingrad, Soviet dispatches said the Germans were now actually losing ground northwest and southwest of the battle-ruined Volga metropolises.

Field messages to Red Star, the Soviet army newspaper, said Russian shock troops had driven the Germans from a number of positions in the northwest and recaptured a village in the southwest.

Red Star declared also that the Germans had lost several thousand troops and 22 tanks in a two-day battle for an important height—perhaps referring to a hill overlooking the heart of Stalingrad, which had previously been reported the scene of a bitter five-day battle.

Meanwhile, reports reaching Stockholm, relayed by Reuters, said Adolf Hitler had dismissed Field Marshal Fedor von Bock, gumb Prussian commander of the Stalingrad assault, as a result of a clash over campaign strategy.

These reports said the dispute arose over Hitler's insistence on simultaneous drives against Stalingrad and the Caucasus, while von Bock urged a single concentrated thrust into the Caucasus, arguing that too great a price would have to be paid for conquest of the Volga steel city.

Von Bock was said to have returned to Berlin two weeks ago.

A front-line dispatches to Red Star said Soviet troops stealthily moved across the Volga under cover of darkness struck hard against the Germans in an undersigned sector (Continued on Page Six)

More Bond Sales At Warehouses

Twenty-seven war bonds totaling $3,000 were sold on the floors of three tobacco warehouses here today as sales paused and the bonds were auctioned. Today's sales brought the total for such sales to $6,500 since the plan sponsored by R. E. Corbett got under way yesterday morning. Today's sales were made at Carolina, Centre Brick and Morton's warehouses. J. H. Ross was master of ceremonies and Mrs. R. E. Corbett and Mrs. John Warner assisted.

When the first sales were begun yesterday a 12-pound bag of flour was offered with the purchase of the first bond. The flour with each sale yesterday was returned to the committee for re-auction and the same bag of flour was put back into use this morning. Before one of today's bond purchases, kept the flour was estimated that it had sold a total of $5,000 worth of bonds.

The program will be continued on the market again tomorrow morning with auctions at Victory, McGowan's and Dixie warehouses.

STORM'S END

(The following poem was written by a comrade in service and given to Pvt. Robert Moye of this city, who is stationed at Camp Roberts, Calif.)

When the whirlwind dies to a whispering breeze,
And a pale moon shines through drowsy trees,
And the roses gleam through dusky shade—
Enticing the heart to escape;
We shall return from foreign lands,
From the steaming swamps and the torrid sands—
From wintry isles where blizzards roar,
Or palm trees sway on a tropic shore.

We shall return from a task well done,
From a victory gained and a goal hard won;
We may be grim for a moment's breath,
As our memories stray to fields of death,
And we live once more that eternity
When the devil laughed with fiendish glee.

And the smile of Fortune seemed obscured
By the rack of pain that the world endured.
So give us a laugh and a tender smile,
And let us rest for a little while
In the arms of those whose forms shall press,
Through the darkest hours, on our consciousness—
Whose eyes are the only stars we'll know,
When the sky is veiled by the smoke below—
Whose voices brave the battle's din
To whisper: "Chin up! You have to win!"

Do not despair; we shall return
To the cozy hearth and hearts that yearn.
Though some shall leave the mortal clay
On a war-torn field that is far away;
We'll all march back in a solid file,
With swinging step and a happy smile—
When the battle's done, and the birds ascend
To their blue domain—at the wild storm's end.

Wickard Fears . . .

agriculture had absorbed a large part of the drain on its manpower through the expanded use of women, children and older people, but he added that "this cannot meet the situation much longer."

"Neither," he said, "can the problem be met by paying higher wages. We must recognize that farmers simply cannot pay wages to compete with war industry."

"To do so would result in food costs being forced much higher than present levels; levels which already seem fairly high to many consumers. Keep in mind also that a sharp increase in farm wages accompanied by a sharp increase in farm prices would result in a demand by industrial labor for another boost in its pay. Thus, we would start a vicious circle all over again, just at a time when prudence dictates that we stabilize the cost of living insofar as is possible."

"Farmers should pay fair wages and farm income is now at a level which will allow farmers to pay reasonably good wages. Cash farm income in 1942 is expected to reach a record high of 15 billion dollars, which exceeds the previous high record of 1918. But paying high wages will not increase our total supply of labor. Other steps need to be taken."

Representative Pace. (D-Ga.) pressed Wickard for an opinion on farm bloc pressure to include farm labor costs in calculating parity in the anti-inflation bill, a step opposed by President Roosevelt.

"If we increase farm prices to put them on a competitive basis with other commodities, we will increase the cost of living," the secretary replied, adding:

"We ought to be very careful we don't do something here which would entirely offset any controls we may adopt."

"I'd like to see wages on the farm frozen," Wickard commented in reply to another question by Pace.

The secretary of Agriculture outlined six proposals designed to help farmers meet 1943 labor problems. They included:

Retention on farms of as many experienced managers as possible; transportation of workers from surplus labor areas to critical areas; training of inexperienced persons in the fundamentals of farming; expanded use of women and young people on farms; more recruiting for industry in cities and less in farm areas, and fuller utilization of under-employed on farms by increasing their production.

Asked by committee members whether it might be necessary to enact legislation to keep people on farms, Wickard replied:

"We may be facing that sooner or later."

higher farm parity prices into the administration's anti-inflation bill.

At the same time, Democratic Leader Barkley (Kentucky) told reporters that the vote on this proposal to lift price ceilings on farm products under the legislation, despite the vigorous opposition of President Roosevelt, was likely to be extremely close in the Senate.

"The outcome may depend on the decision of several senators who have not yet made known their position," Barkley said just before the Senate opened its third day of debate and the House its second on a measure authorizing President Roosevelt to stabilize prices, wages and salaries at September 15 levels, so far as practical.

The amendment to the administration bill submitted by Senators Thomas (D-Okla.) and Hatch (D-N.M.) would make it mandatory for the government to include the cost of all farm labor in computing parity prices. Under the pending legislation, no price ceilings could be placed on farm products below 100 per cent of parity.

McNary previously had said he favored a move to drop the level of ceilings from the present 110 per cent of parity standard fixed in the price control act to 100 per cent. He said today, however, he believed that parity itself should be revised to include the farm labor costs along with the expenses of interest, taxes, freight rates and other items which now go into the computation of the standard.

Thomas told the Senate yesterday his amendment would have the effect of increasing the parity price average 12 per cent, but Barkley contended that the increase might reach 20 per cent.

In the House, first attempts to revise the anti-inflation bill on less controversial points met defeat. In swift succession, the representatives shouted proposals which would:

1. Grant the President authority to make adjustments in wages, salaries and prices in any way "to aid in the effective prosecution of the war," as well as to correct "gross inequities" in those three cost-of-living factors.

2. Remove from his "stabilization" authority the condition that it could be exercised "as far as practicable"—thus making it mandatory that he act in all three fields.

3. Require the President to fix "maximums" for prices, wages and salaries, and change the proposed price basic level for computing the three from August 15, 1942 (September 15 in the Senate version of the legislation) to the peacetime standard of December 1, 1941.

However, the House tentatively adopted an amendment offered by Rep. Wolcott (R-Mich.), ranking minority member of the Banking committee, striking from the bill the President's authority to stabilize "other factors affecting the cost of living" besides those of wages, salaries and prices.

Wolcott contended that clause was so broad that it would permit the President to nullify rulings of the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Federal Trade Commission and set aside the operations of several other executive agencies.

THE PRESTIGE AND QUALITY OF

BILL DOES NOT CHECK PRICES IMMEDIATELY

Some Farm Prices Would Go Higher, Others Be Reduced

Washington, Sept. 23.—(AP)—Anti-inflation legislation now being debated in Congress would not give President Roosevelt authority to bring to an immediate halt an advance in farm prices that started with the outbreak of war in Europe in 1939.

Several important agricultural commodities could advance beyond present or recent peak levels before the chief executive could impose price ceilings. Included would be wheat, corn, oats, cotton, rice, barley, flaxseed, dry beans, hay, apples, turkeys, oranges and lemons.

The legislation would authorize ceilings on farm products at either (1) the highest prices reached between January 1, 1942, and September 15, 1942, adjusted for seasonal variations, or (2) parity prices, whichever is higher. In no event could ceilings be established at less than parity prices.

The farm products listed above are selling at less than parity. Hence they would not be subject to ceilings until they reached the parity level.

On the other hand, many important farm products have advanced above parity and consequently would be subject to ceilings. They include hogs, beef cattle, veal calves, lambs, butterfat, whole milk, eggs, chickens, potatoes and sweet potatoes.

Habeas Corpus For Vagrant Defendant

By CHESTER WALSH

Habeas corpus proceedings were instituted in Washington yesterday in connection with the arrest here of Jack Atkinson, colored, for violation of a court order. Atkinson, who has a long police record, local authorities stated, was tried in Recorder's Court last week on a vagrancy charge. Judge Roberts gave him 30 days in jail, sentence to be suspended provided he got a job at manual labor and report to the court Monday. Atkinson failed to comply with the court order. A capias was issued for his apprehension. When police arrested him here he had $220 in cash on his person. Police also found a number of "S" and "C" gasoline ration tickets on him. He was ordered held for agents of the Office of Price Administration.

The habeas corpus proceeding was scheduled to be heard before Judge Luther Hamilton of Morehead City, in Superior Court in Washington at 4 o'clock today. Local police took Atkinson to the hearing.

Atkinson has been in court innumerable times. He always managed to provide ready cash bond, police bond. His $220 did not work when he was arrested here the other day because he had violated a court order. There is no bond for violating a court order or for being guilty of contempt of court.

It is not generally known outside of court and legal circles that even when a justice of the peace fines or jails a person for contempt of his court the Governor of the State does not have the power to change the sentence or do any pardoning.

When police arrested Atkinson on the vagrancy charge last week he had a considerable sum of money on his person. He lost nearly all of this on a garnishee order against him for failure to pay city taxes for a number of years.

Chief of Police George Clark and Judge Roberts are agreed on the idea that "men must work or fight to help win this war." They are working together harmoniously and appear to be getting results, it is understood.

Stresses Need For Shipping

London, Sept. 23.—(AP)—Prime Minister Churchill declared today that "although the shipping position has improved recently it still is grave and we are in urgent need of every ship that can be built."

His statement was in a message to a conference of the shipbuilding industry in which he exhorted the builders "in the name of His Majesty's government, to strive your utmost for only this can you compel victory."

The message, which was read at the conference here, assured the builders that "your record proves that this call will be answered by heart and hand" and added: "Without ships we cannot live and without them we cannot conquer."

A resolution adopted at the one-day session pledged the industry to make the maximum effort to speed building and repair of all vessels.

COURT AFFIRMS ELECTION CASE

Says Candidate Had No Right To Put Name on Ballot

Raleigh, Sept. 23.—(AP)—The State Supreme Court today affirmed a Superior Court ruling that Dan W. McLean, Durham county republican, did not have a right to have his name printed upon a general election ballot for clerk of superior court.

The Durham county board of elections and the Superior Court held that the plaintiff never filed notice of his candidacy or paid any filing or other fee in order to be a candidate in the primary. They said he was not nominated in the primary but in the party convention.

The defendant contended that the primary law did not require republicans to enter a primary but could be nominated by convention.

In the opinion by Associate Justice Bernhill, the court held that "just as the concepts of the direct primary and the secret ballot are consistent so, we think, are the laws providing for these mechanics of elections when construed according to the accepted rules of statutory construction."

"When the provisions for primaries and elections as contained in the several acts of the legislature are considered as one composite whole, it clearly appears that only those who have been legally nominated for county office under the law applicable to the county in which the nomination is made shall have their names appear on the official ballot. A candidate is not a nominee unless and until he has been put in nomination as required by statute. Until he becomes a nominee in the required manner he cannot claim the right to have his name printed on the official ballot."

"Plaintiff failed to file notice of his candidacy or to sign the required pledge or to pay the necessary filing fee. Neither he nor his party could disregard or evade these positive requirements. Hence, he is not the nominee of any political party, within the meaning of the primary law, and is not entitled to the relief he seeks."

The court handed down 19 opinions, none of them death cases.

No cases from Pitt county were included in the opinions handed down by the court today.

Say Italians Are Poor Marksmen

By The Associated Press

Gunnery on an Italian submarine had such poor aim that the submarine was finally forced to expend a valuable torpedo to send a medium-sized U. S. merchant ship to the bottom last month, the Navy disclosed today in announcing the ship's loss off the northern coast of South America.

One of 19 survivors who reached an east coast port said that the submarine closed to short range and unsuccessfully tried to shell their vessel. Half the shells went wild.

"They were awful marksmen," one member of the crew said.

Nineteen men were missing from the ship which was the first announcement of a western Atlantic sinking in six days. It brought the Associated Press total of announced neutral and United Nations sinkings in the western Atlantic to 47.

Survivors were adrift 23 days in the South Atlantic, where the attack occurred, before they were picked up by a United Nations freighter. One man was slightly wounded in the attack.

The Navy did not disclose how the men knew the attacker was Italian, but on August 18 the Italian high command claimed that this ship was sunk by one of their submarines in the Atlantic.

GOP PLEDGES SUPPORT WAR

House Republicans Promise Full Cooperation

By ALEX H. SINGLETON

Washington, Sept. 23.—(AP)—The Republican delegation in the house, holding that "no party, class or section has a corner on patriotism or ability," stood pledged today to fight for a decisive victory in the war, and to recognize this country's "obligation" to help maintain peace through a world understanding and cooperative spirit.

A ten-point program of policies and principles—in effect a platform to carry the party's bid for increased representation in congress after the fall elections—was adopted at an extraordinary conference of house republicans last night.

It linked with its stand on war policy, one which opposed any attempts to negotiate peace, a demand for "full and immediate utilization by the President of the most capable and efficient military and civilian leadership."

In the declaration, the representatives said that the "Republican party has given and will continue to give to the President loyal, wholehearted and patriotic support in the war."

That assurance was followed immediately by the assertion:

"The President should not permit himself to be deterred from the responsibility which is his by those forces and influences which persist in continuing so-called social and governmental reforms at the expense of the war effort."

Minority Leader Martin of Massachusetts said the vote for adoption was "almost unanimous." The resolutions were drafted by a five member committee, composed of representatives Hope of Kansas, Wigglesworth of Massachusetts, Hobson of Kentucky, Dirksen of Illinois, and Carter of California. Martin, who is also chairman of the Republican National Committee, declined to discuss the purpose of the resolutions beyond saying they constituted a "guide" for the house republicans. Political observers, however, were quick to interpret the action as an apparent move to disassociate the party from the label of "isolationism" with which many Democrats have sought to tag it.

Seven Are Killed In Plane Crash

Perham, Me., Sept. 23.—(AP)—Burned and broken trees today marked the wooded hillside grave of an Army plane which carried all seven of its occupants to their death here yesterday.

Officials at the Presque Isle Air Base, 20 miles southeast of here, said a special board of inquiry would investigate the mishap to the plane, which apparently plunged almost straight down, gouging a crater approximately 25 feet in diameter in the rough terrain.

The air base, which said the ship "crashed in limited visibility" while on a routine flight, identified the dead as:

Second Lieut. J. E. Watson and J. W. Reeves, Jr., pilot and co-pilot, respectively; Staff Sgts. J. S. Delano, J. A. Kviz, E. J. Crozier, R. K. Riddle and F. Wewrowbottom.

German Reprisals Against Slovenes

London, Sept. 23.—(AP)—More than 3,000 Slovenes have been shot and 58 villages razed in recent weeks as reprisals for increasing sabotage of Slovene railways, Yugoslav sources reported today.

Withdrew sources, whose names were withheld, said the killings had disrupted lines vital for transportation of war materials and foodstuffs from central and southwestern Europe.

In addition to the Slovenes shot, they said, 165,000 had been deported to Germany and at least 70,000 to Italy.

State May Call Married Men Soon

Raleigh, Sept. 23.—(AP)—A State Selective Service headquarters source expects the supply of single men to be exhausted by the end of the year if the present rate of induction into the army continues, unless new supplies of single men are opened up.

This spokesman said yesterday local draft boards, in view of this, may begin wholesale calling up of married men soon afterward.

Investigate Crash Of Army Bomber

Presque Isle, Me., Sept. 23.—(AP)—The death of an army plane's entire crew of seven left investigators today with only wreckage to help them seek the cause of the craft's crash in a wooded grove six miles northwest of here yesterday.

The plane, which officials of the Presque Isle air base said "crashed in poor visibility" while on a routine trip, fell near an open potato field about a mile from the Aroostook river.

The victims were identified by air base headquarters as: Second Lieutenants R. L. Drugula, pilot, and J. O. Crocker, co-pilot.

Staff Sergeants William H. Finch, Billy J. Hill, George E. Simmons, Lawrence A. Robinson and Joseph Mortino.

Seeks Charter Ku Klux Klan

Raleigh, Sept. 23.—(AP)—A Ku Klux Klan unit will be incorporated by the State of North Carolina only if the aims of the organization are lawful.

Secretary of State Thad Eure said he had so informed a Washington county man who had asked if it would be legal to organize a "Social Ku Klux Klan" and incorporate it as a non-profit organization.

The inquirer said the request was prompted by "quite a bit of trouble with Negroes attacking white women in our county, and the people of this county want to go about protecting their families in an orderly and lawful way."

Plane Crashes Near Charlotte

Charlotte, N. C., Sept. 23.—(AP)—An unidentified airplane was reported to have plunged into the Catawba river this afternoon, carrying its occupant down with it.

The Charlotte Fire Department sent a rescue squad to the scene, near the Buster Boyd Bridge. Later it received a request from the river that a diver be sought from Charleston to assist in recovering the plane.

Sydney, Australia, Sept. 23.—(AP)—The seizure of a large number of bank notes printed in Japan for use in an invasion of Australia was disclosed by military authorities today.

War Needs Spur Mica Mining In Carolina Mountains

The demand for mica, used in a multitude of products for the nation's war needs, has reached an unprecedented level since foreign sources of the supply have been cut off. Arnall Talks With George

In Washington for conferences with President Roosevelt and Georgia members of Congress, Elia Arnall (right), Georgia's Democratic nominee for governor, talks with Senator Walter F. George, dean of the Georgia delegation. Speaking on the March of Time radio broadcast from Washington the night of September 12, Arnall said the most pressing problem in his state is the restoration of the accredited standing of the University of Georgia system. The university system was dismissed from the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools earlier in the year on grounds of political interference by Gov. Eugene Talmadge.

War Needs Spur Mica Mining In Carolina Mountains

The demand for mica, used in a multitude of products for the nation's war needs, has reached an unprecedented level since foreign sources of the supply have been cut off. In the mountains of western North Carolina, mica mining has long been a stable industry—and now, the war has increased the mining tempo there ten-fold. These pictures tell the story. Upper left: A typical mica mill where scrap mica, too small for use as sheet or punch, is ground into silvery dust. Right: Furnished with a rented drill and air compressor, these two mica miners are working 80 feet below ground and will go deeper to follow the vein of ore. They are working in a re-opened mine near Spruce Pine, N. C. Lower left: A mica peeler (left) is hiding two sheets of rum mica. Value of the mineral is increased with the size of the sheet which may be cut from single pieces. Sheets as large as this one now sell for $16 a pound or more.

Japanese Evacuees In Arkansas Camp for Duration

Strength FOR THE DAY

By EARL L. DOUGLAS

TO BELIEVE IS PEACE
The hardest thing in the world for many people to believe is that God loves them. They can believe the Bible teaches, and even theoretically believe that God loves them and wants to redeem them, but actually to bring this belief down into everyday living until it bestows peace on the troubled heart
—this they find almost impossible.

Many of the greatest saints have at times experienced the same difficulty. Bunyan, in one of his books writes: "But the next day at evening, being under many fears, I went to seek the Lord, and as I prayed I cried: 'O Lord, I beseech Thee, show me that Thou hast loved me with everlasting love.' I had no sooner said it than with sweetness this returned upon me, as an echo, or sounding again, 'I have loved thee with an everlasting love.' Now I went to bed in quiet; also when I awaked the next morning, it was fresh upon my soul; and I believed it."

The significant words are, "I believed it." It was no longer a theory for him, it was a belief which had been built into his soul to the firm establishing of his peace.

Why should we doubt that God loves us? Does not the Word of God affirm that He does? And if He does, what is there to fear though the mountains be cast into the midst of the sea?

LET'S GET A MOVE ON

We want every citizen of Greenville and Pitt County to consider carefully what we have to say in this message and take it upon himself or herself to do something about it. You may have an idea that in our pleading with you from day to day to give your wholehearted support to the war effort, we are just writing to fill this column. Such is not the case for the matter of supporting our war effort is a most vital one at this time, and it is because we feel that our people are not awake to the seriousness of the situation that we continue to bring it to your attention.

The matter of the purchase of War Bonds and Stamps is an essential one at this time and, while our county is doing well, it is not doing enough, and everyone must skip just a little harder in order that he or she will have just a little more to invest in these securities.

In the matter of conserving our automobile tires, few of us are really going at it in an effort to help our government. Since gas has been rationed we apparently feel that we are supposed to use all the gas that has been allotted us and many seem to feel that there is no obligation to conserve the tires which are an essential part of our nation's rubber supply at this time. Don't drive unnecessarily and drive in such a manner as to cause as little wear as possible on your tires.

Our scrap metal drive, which got under way recently, is doing good, but nothing than 100 per cent in this

Remote Control Bombardeir

REEMANING

line can win the war for us, and to date we are far short of that 100 per cent effort.

Our nation will need seventeen million tons of scrap metal between now and the end of the year, and this scrap must come from the junk yards, the homes, farms and industrial plants of the country. If there is one pound of scrap left on your premises when the drive is over, it means that just to that extent you have not done your full part.

We want to and CAN win
this war, but let us wake up to the fact that we CAN lose it and that we likely WILL lose it unless we quickly show a desire to win by placing that desire foremost in our minds and going ALL-OUT in our war efforts.

futile efforts to unravel a verbal snarl.

It happened several days back when the President was trying to tell quite seriously about how he drove his own car at 35 miles an hour and at that maximum speed for rubber conservation had 22 cars trying to pass him. (It's a Secret Service safety rule of the road that no car is allowed to pass the President's car. It's also a Secret Service censorship rule that NO ONE can mention the whereabouts of the President when he is or was out of Washington.)

"When I was in Hyde Park the other day," he said. He got no further. Executive Secretary Steve Early interrupted to remind him that that was a censorship violation. The President grinned, agreed. He went on with his narrative.

Well, anyway, I was driving down from Rhinebeck," he said, but Steve was shush-shushing again even before the press conference started laughing. The President tried again.

"All right. What I meant to say was, coming down the Albany Post Road."

When the laughter subsided that time, the President gave up and censorship was changed. He told his story with names and places on the record.

Summer-weary, war-weary Washington has little enough to laugh about these days. Probably that is why with no disrespect whatever to master builder Henry J. Kaiser, it has been snickering over a re-portorial wisecrack that came out of a joint press conference held by Kaiser and War Production Chief Donald Nelson.

Time dragged on until nearly 30 embarrassed minutes had elapsed before the west coast construction genius appeared.

A little breathless, Kaiser apologized for the half-hour delay. "I couldn't find a taxi," he explained.
Somewhat under his breath but loud enough for all to hear, a reporter asked, "Why didn't you build one?"

Take a ride with any car driver in the gasoline rationed states today and you'll find there's no slope too gentle or steep to coast down.

Funny point No. 1: Unless you keep your car in gear, coasting is against the law in nearly every state in the union and you would be surprised at the number of fines paid every year for that offense.

Funny point No. 2: According to automotive engineers here, coasting under the hand and foot of the expert saves so little gasoline you could measure it with an eye-dropper — and as performed by most drivers it actually wastes fuel.

A Promise for Tomorrow

Yesterday: Julie Hamilton is a successful doctor, even if she does look like a glamorous girl.
But she can do nothing for Pete Fowler, who is kept out of the air corps because of an injury—who even seems blind to the fact that Julie adores him. And now Julie's life is complicated by the fact that the father of Dawn Kelland, the girl Pete seems to have chosen, just has had a stroke.

Chapter Five
Sung East
Julie was just leaving the hospital the next morning when she bumped into Bart—literally. Her mind still busy with the details of the operation she had performed, the patients she had visited, she pushed through the heavy revolving door, hurried unseeing down the broad granite steps.

"Where are you going, my pretty maid?" Bart's voice broke into her thoughts.

She stopped, stared at him a moment absently. "Oh, it's you."
"Yes, angel. Bartley Rogers III.
Remember me? I'm the guy that proposes to you twice a week."

She laughed up at him. "Fool.
Why don't you grow up?"
He straightened. "Doing the best I can, ma'am. Why don't you have lunch with me?"

"Can't," she refused, automatically. "Too busy."

"What do you mean, too busy?"
This is Saturday. Even successful lady doctors don't have to work on Saturdays, do they?"

"Well, I really should—"
"Good. We'll drive out to the Club and have some golf afterwards." He took her arm firmly, guided her to the sleek tan coupe parked at the curb.

Without protest, Julie let him put her into the broad seat. She was tired and a round of golf would ease the taut nerves. "Drop by the house first. There may be some messages."

"I will if you promise ahead of time to ignore all summons."
"Maybe." She leaned back against the comfortable seat. "I am weary."

"And glad I came after you?"
Bart prompted, smiling a little wryly. "Come on. Tell me you like betrayed take care of—me."

"I love it."
"And me too?"

She shook her head. "No, not you too."

"Tomorrow, will you?"
"Can't promise anything. Tomorrow's a secret."

Julie's heels clicked hollowly on the wide porch steps as she ran.
Hilda, the stolid Norwegian housekeeper who ruled the Hamilton household with benevolent despotism, met her at the door.

"Any calls, Hilda?"
"Just von, Miss Joolie. Miss Kelland wants Dr. Tom should stop in right away." Taking Julie's bag she put it carefully on the old unbelra-st stand.

"Did you call Dad?"
She nodded and shook her head alternately. "I called him and he was not there. So he was out to Surfside to have a baby."

"Okay. I'll drop by Kelland's on my way out to the Club. Be back about five."

"You should sleep instead of flying out again this way," Hilda scolded gently. "You got black circles under the eyes."

Feet in Her Eyes
Julie laughed, slammed the front door as she went. Black circles under her eyes and butterflies in her tummy. It just wasn't good sense to over-tax her strength. In all her life, she'd never been so tired as she was right this minute.

She stopped at Kelland's long enough to reassure Dawn, explain her father's delay.

"How is your father this morning?"
"Resting quietly, I think." Dawn's white face seemed drawn, years old suddenly. "But I do hope Dr.
Tom gets here soon."

"He will," she promised. Then
"Look, Dawn, you must keep better control over your own nerves. Getting the jitters won't help your father any. Why don't you come out to the Club with us and have a swim or play some golf and relax."

"Thank you, but I couldn't possibly."
Dawn shook her head nervously, lit another cigarette from the stub of one she was just finishing.

"Why not?"
"I—that is—I'm expecting guests."

"Rubbish. Have Jarvis explain what has happened."

"No, really. Thank you, Julie. I couldn't possibly."

Julie caught the look in the wide blue eyes now—the strange fear that she had been there only hours before when Dawn had heard Dr. Tom's verdict. Dawn was in mortal terror. Julie realized suddenly. All out of proportion to the seriousness of her father's condition.

"Dawn—" On impulse, Julie took a step nearer the girl, put out her hand, "is there anything I can do to help?"

Without moving, Dawn seemed to withdraw even farther into herself.
"No. Thank you, Julie. Nothing."

Julie hesitated, keeping her smile serene. "Dad will be in to see you shortly. I'm sure. Meanwhile, don't torture yourself with worry. Bye now."

"Thanks, Julie. Bye."

BY ELEANOR LATTERDAY

to come too, but she's having guests."

"And how!" Bart whistled softly then as a flashy green phaeton turned into the private drive.
"Pretty smooth, huh? Bet a little buggy like that set him back a small fortune. And boy, look at all that beautiful rubber!" feasting his eyes on the two white-walled tires mounted on the rear. "That's possibly tempting fate."

"A disgustingly ostentatious display of wealth," Julie joined in the laugh. "Dawn likes her men."

Julie stopped in the middle of her thought as she caught sight of the swarthy face behind the wheel.
For an instant she met the stranger's glance, piercing black eyes heavy brows, a skin tanned to the color of feathered saddle leather.

"Tall, dark, and in this case not so handsome," Bart muttered as they passed the car, turned out into the street. "Wonder who that is?"

"I wonder," Julie echoed quietly.
"Personally, I wouldn't care to meet that face on a dark night. He looks like a brigand."

Bart laughed. "And probably he's as tame as a pussy cat. Brigands who are really professional don't go around looking like brigands, you know."

"Well, it will be terribly anti-climactic if there isn't something sinister about him," Julie said flippantly.

"Now look here, Julie my sweet," Bart began severely, reached for her hand. "I didn't waylay you so you could talk to me about some other guy. Let's talk about us."

Julie laughed, tried to let go of the idea that skirted her mind just out of reach of clear logic. "Okay.
What shall we say about us?"

"We are nice," Bart began promptly. "We are very becoming to each other. We like the same people. We like the same things. We like each other very much. Don't we?"

"Th-huh," she agreed, smiling a little absently while her thoughts pursued a scurrying ideal like foxhounds on the scent. What connection was there between Dawn's strange terror and her even stranger guest?"

Tighten Down On Tire Rationing

Raleigh, Sept. 23.—Local War Price and Rationing Boards were advised today by W. Hance Hofer, OPA ration attorney, that henceforth only "top essential" applications for new tires and tubes should be carried over from one month to the next.

Local rationing boards have hundreds of applications from month to month that cannot be taken care of due to the shortage of quotas and the eligibility requirements of the applicants.

In the future, by "clean house" of over-hanging applications, the boards can have a more accurate picture consisting of only top essential applications, Hofer explained.

Cards-Dodgers Race Furnishing Fans Plenty Of Thrills

CARDS' LEAD IS UNCHANGED

Three Games Will Clinch Pennant for St. Louis Cards

By SID FEDER
Associated Press Sports Writer

The St. Louis Cardinals look like they're just a deep breath and a loud sneeze away from the National league pennant now, and it's probably just as well for the cardiac condition and the nervous systems of Gus G. Fan and the kiddies that it's almost over.

It's not that this is the closest race in history, mind you, because some of those senior circuit red hots have been as tight as a new pair of shoes after a 12-mile hike. But in this year's stretch drive, it seems the Cardinals and the second-place Brooklyn Bums are specializing in seeing who can raise more lumps in the most throats in every game.

Each time they go to the post, both outfits are keeping everyone—including themselves—in suspense from start to finish before making up their minds either to pull a game out of the fire or blow it.

They've been doing it with such regularity, as a matter of fact, that Gus and the kiddies now have their fingernails just about chewed down to the wrists. On Monday, for instance, the Cards had to go nine innings before they decided to knock over the Pirates. The same day, the Dodgers got enough runs in the first inning to flail the Phillies, but in every frame from there right down to the wire they were in more hot water than it takes to boil beef.

And yesterday it was a case of "this is where we came in" again, although St. Louis didn't let it last as long this time before pouncing the Pirates 9-3 to remain 2½ games up in the pennant race. With the win, the Birds moved into a spot where all they need to clinch are three victories, three Dodger losses or any combination of same.

But the Bums, on the other hand, had to come from behind three times yesterday against the Giants, and then Dolph Camilli had to clout his 25th homer out of the ball park in the 12th inning to break it up. It was definitely not a sight for weak hearts or frightened women.

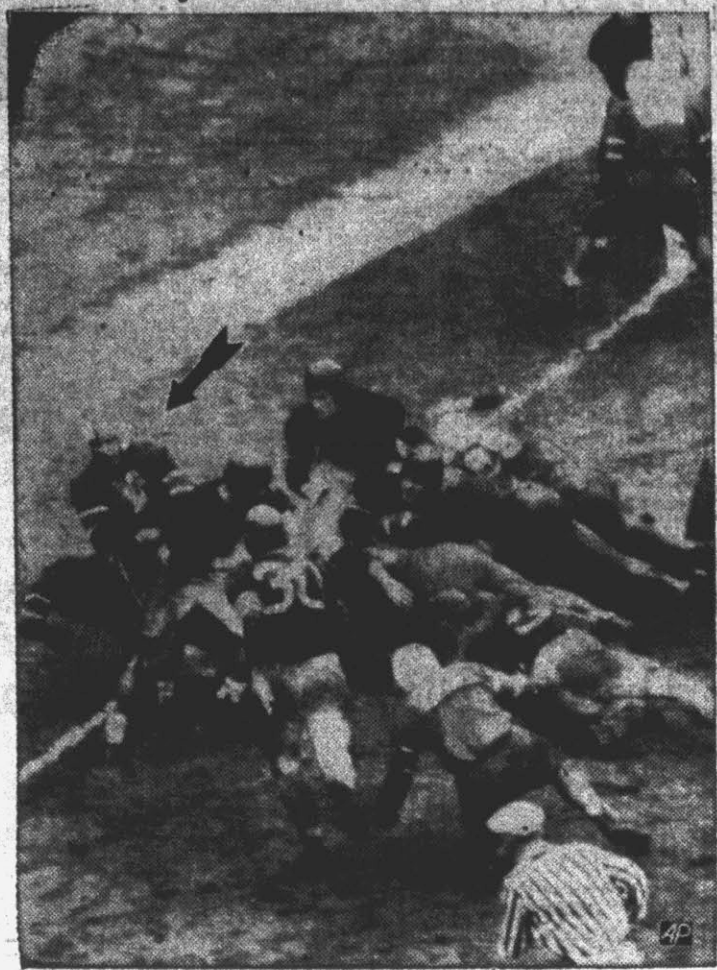

On top of that, the press box had the added pleasure of a double-feature round of fireworks right after the game ended. This happened when Bill Klem, the old arbiter who used to be the loop's most feared umpire, got into a row with Brooklyn Pexy Larry MacPhail and told him what for in a few thousand well chosen words. The argument started over a strike umpire. Al Barlick called on Dolph Camilli in a game of full ten days ago, and in the course of his "rebuttal" old Uncle Bill referred to red-headed Larry as a "big guy when you're winning," among other things.

Out in St. Louis, meantime, the Cardinals had their faithful moaning low when the Pirates pushed three runs over in the third. Then, without any advance warning, the Bucs blew up like a mess of corn mash in a still, and before you knew it, the Redbirds had six runs. Four of these came walking across when Stan Musial hit a homer with the bases loaded after three Buc errors had put the "ducks on the pond."

From there on, it was just a case of how high the Bucs could blow. They presented the Cards with three more runs in the seventh. At the finish, the Pirates had been guilty of such "big league" baseball as five errors, a wild pitch and a hit batsman. I didn't show in the box score, but they also probably took ten years of manager Frankie Frisch's life.

Otherwise, pitching dominated the big league front. Paul Derringer and Johnny Vander Meer served up a five-hitter and a three-hitter, respectively, and the Cincinnati Reds rolled over the Chicago Cubs twice by scores of 4-1. It was no trick at all for the New York Yankees to take a 3-1 decision from the Senators behind Atley Donald's five-hit ebullient. Dizzy Trout tossed a six-hitter as Detroit downed the Chicago White Sox 9-2.

Army Scores But Couldn't Win

Norm Standlee (No. 22), eastern all-army fullback, twists through the Chicago Bears' line in Boston near the end of the third period to score Army's only touchdown. Standlee, a former Bears player, took the ball on the four-yard line. The Bears won 14 to 7.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.
Wide World Sports Columnist

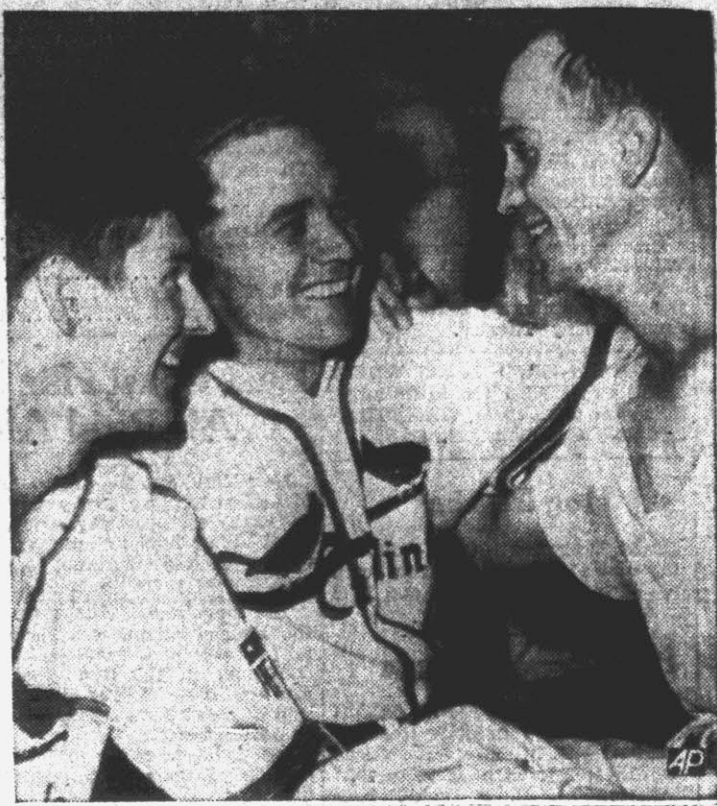

New York, Sept. 23.—Lou Smith, whose innovations at Rockingham Park included that 15-race program for war relief last spring, has come up with a new one for the fall meeting. He has asked every horse-breeder in the United States to contribute one weanling, yearling or even a two-year-old that could be spared to be "sold" to War Bond buyers at Rock. . . . Lou probably expected to get more "steak" horses than state horses, and they might be a good buy, too, these days. . . . So you can imagine his surprise when the first reply came in from Emerson (Valdina) Woodward of Texas, offering a yearling sired by Bahram, the $250,000 English horse. . . . Incidentally, racing men have made themselves look very good with such contributions to the war effort as the seven-day post-season meeting at Belmont. Churchill Downs' victory days and turning their most profitable events into relief programs.

A Rio Grande Start
When little Rio Grande College in Ohio launched its season Thursday by absorbing a 25-0 licking from Louisville U, it must have set a record of some sort. . . . It was the beginning of Rio Grande's fifth straight campaign without a victory—and no one would be more surprised than the players if they failed to reach the end the same way.

One-Minute Sports Page
Lieut. Liudmila Pavlichenko, the Russian gal sniper, watched her first American football game when the Bears played the Army All-Stars at Boston, and her first question was whether the players didn't get hurt. . . . The Army today takes over the Bronx Coliseum, where plenty of good fighters made their starts. . . . In their drive for the National League pennant, the Cards have won 13 games by one run and lost only one. . . . Cornelius Warner, the pole-vault champ, is serving as assistant football coach at Piedmont (Calif.) High School. . . . The Dodgers collected 65 tons of scrap when they accepted old iron in place of tickets the other day. . . . Too bad they didn't have some of it to put into the team a few weeks ago.

Heroes For The Cardinals

Here are the heroes in the St. Louis Cardinals' 2 to 1 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates in St. Louis—a victory that enabled the Cards to maintain their 2½ game margin over the Brooklyn Dodgers in the National League race. Left to right: Marty Marion who scored both runs for the Cards; Ernie White, who hurled the six-hit victory for the Cardinals, and Jimmy Brown, who batted in both Cardinal runs.

the realization that it must be a case of baseball for the nation's sake and not for profit."

Service Dept.

Lieut. Don Bonnam, former Oklahoma A. and M. tackle, who is listed as missing somewhere in the southwest Pacific, weighed 220 pounds in his football days. He reduced to 176 to get into the Air Corps. . . . Another sports casualty is Russ McConnell, formerly of McCall's, who was regarded as one of Canada's greatest college hockey players. He was lost at sea serving with the Canadian Navy. . . . Morris Arnovich, former Giants outfielder, is known as "Preacher" to his Fort Lewis (Wash.) baseball team—because he calls every base hit a sermon on playing the right way. . . . Pvt. Birdie Tebbets, the former Tigers catcher, has completed his basic training at the Waco, Tex., Army Air School and has returned to Detroit on temporary recruiting duty.

Last Laugh
After the Chicago Cards, habitual last-place club of the National Football League's western division, licked the Detroit Lions Sunday. Coach Jimmy Conzelmann approached the newspapermen with outstretched hands. . . . "Would you like to meet me; young man?" he'd ask, "the name's Conzelmann. I coach the Chicago Cardinals. They're leading the league now."

GAME WANTED.
Cary High School would like to schedule a football game for Friday, September 25, with Class A or B team within 50 miles of Cary. Teams interested are asked to telephone 9901 or write to the Principal, Cary High School.

SEEKING GAMES.
Littleton High School is seeking a football opponent for a game to be played at Littleton on September 25. Any teams having open dates at that time and which wish to meet Coach B. F. Martin's club, are asked to get in touch with Martin at Littleton High School.

East Coast Has Air Raid Alert

New York, Sept. 23—(AP)—An unidentified airplane, first reported by the army as "operating over a sea ward area," brought air raid alerts to four eastern states last night before it was found to be friendly.

The blue signal, just short of a full-fledged alarm, was flashed at 8:57 p. m. and resulted in some confusion in the New York area and in some nearby Westchester county communities. The alert lasted 34 minutes.

Key stations of the major broadcasting stations were silenced at 8:50 p. m. In the metropolitan area, Mayor LaGuardia acknowledged there was some confusion as air raid wardens stopped traffic in midtown and downtown areas and turned off street lights in scattered sectors for which, he said, instructions were not issued.

Although no red signal, calling for the sounding of sirens and a general blackout, was received, a few sirens sounded in various sections of New York city.

Volunteer officer candidates undergo a 90-day basic military training course, followed by 12 weeks of instruction in school. Those who fail of appointments as a second lieutenant are permitted to return to civilian life.

Men who have completed high school algebra and trigonometry have the necessary mathematical training for anti-aircraft. Greene said, and "opportunities for advancement are as good here as anywhere in the armed services."

Applications should be filed thru local draft boards.

The auction sale of War Bonds is going to be a great event. It's going to be entertaining and sale of the war bonds will enable Uncle Sam and his Allies to do a quicker and better job of licking the Japs and Germans.

The new institution provides 110 beds for white patients and an equal number for Negroes. "The failure of any health program that ignores or neglects any race or group has long been recognized," the governor said. "We cannot lift the standards of public health in our state unless all citizens are given equal benefits in the health program."

The 1941 legislature, supplementing a movement initiated in the 1939 session, authorized the appropriation of $600,000 for establishing and equipping the Eastern Carolina Sanatorium. More than 100 communities in this section of the state bid for the location of the institution and that, said the governor, was in direct contrast to 35 years ago.

At Kokoda the Allied fighters poured cannon and machine-gun fire into the Japanese positions. Starting fires and silencing an anti-aircraft post, the communiqué said.

Ranging out over the Coral Sea bombers attacked the Japanese airdrome at Buna, on the northern tip of the Solomon Islands, starting large fires and explosions. Returning from their mission the airmen said they could see the fires from a distance of 50 miles.

Other bombers visited the Japanese stronghold of Rabaul on New Britain, flying through a curtain of anti-aircraft fire to attack shipping in the harbor which services both the Japanese New Guinea forces and the enemy operations in the Solomons.

The heavy bombers scored two hits amidships on a large vessel, the communiqué reported.

A Navy communiqué in Washington meanwhile disclosed that Navy and Marine dive-bombers hit and damaged a Japanese cruiser northwest of Guadalcanal, Marine-held island in the Solomons, during an attack Sunday.

The ground fighting in the Owen Stanley range where Allied troops have checked a Japanese advance 32 miles from Port Moresby was not mentioned in the communiqué. A spokesman said this meant the general situation was unchanged.

Capt. Christian Petri of Cleveland led the group of American planes which blasted the Japanese communications lines between Buna and Kokoda.

"We came hedge-hopping across the valleys in ski fashion, up over the ranges and cruising around the valleys," Capt. Petri said on his return. "We wanted to catch the Japs by surprise."

"There was no sign of activity and either they were caught unaware or they were hugging the ground hard as the boys came in behind me pouring out their machine-gun fire."

Japanese Zeros have been scarce in the Owen Stanley area since persistent attacks by Allied aircraft on the enemy field at Buna.

Other pilots who participated in the raid were: Lieut. C. T. Johnson.
