General Assembly Adjourns After Near-Record Session

Appropriate More Money Than Any Legislature In History Of State; Pass Many Far-Reach Bills In Near-Record Short Session

Raleigh, March 10 (AP)—The 1943 legislature, which appropriated more money for general expenditure than any other in the state's history, ended its biennial session at 1:14 p. m., today.

It was the first North Carolina Assembly to sit in wartime since 1865.

Last minute efforts on the part of dry forces to revive a liquor referendum bill failed. They had tried to suspend the house "gag" rule.

Among last measures passed by representatives was one to allow state credit unions to cash checks for 10 cents each. Opponents said that would be competing with banks. Reps. Hatch of Wake and Ritch of Mecklenburg disagreed, however, and Ritch said "this is the beginning of the establishment of a poor man's bank."

Both the senate and house set back their clocks to effect adjournment at noon, so the legislative journals could show the session ended at that time.

There was little actual work in the assembly in the last hours. The law-makers merely waited for bills to be returned from the enrolling office and for their ratification.

The 1943 session lasted but 64 days, which veteran legislators said was the quickest any assembly had finished its business in 20 years.

Although the war powers bill met some strenuous objection, in which opponents claimed the measure gave Governor Broughton "the same power as Hitler" that of ruling by decree, it passed both Houses without change.

The measure gives the governor full authority, subject to the approval of the Council of State, to make any rules or laws for protection of the "lives and properties" of the people of the state or for promotion of the "security of the state and nation during the existing state of war."

The act will enable the governor to put into effect any rationing or other measures which he deems advisable either upon "his own initiative" or on request of the President of the United States, the Army, Navy or Office of Civilian Defense or other federal officer, department or agency.

Morgan Reported Slightly Improved

Boca Grande, Fla., March 10 (AP)—A "slight" but definite improvement in the condition of financier J. P. Morgan who is suffering from a recurrence of an old heart ailment, was reported by his representative today.

A bulletin issued at 10:50 a. m. (EWT) in New York read:

"There has been a slight but definite improvement over the past 24 hours in Mr. Morgan's condition."

The latest word to come from Gasparilla Inn, where three doctors are in attendance at the bedside of the 75-year-old international banker, was from Jack Veiley, the manager, who said Morgan was resting easily, although his condition continued grave.

It was a week after he had been stricken that the first news of Morgan's illness was made public yesterday in a New York bulletin from famed 23 Wall Street, where his simple desk is the hub of huge financial enterprises.

The bulletin said Morgan had been in a critical condition but had shown improvement, although his associates were still "concerned."

Indications that Morgan was making progress came from the fact that his son, Henry Sturgis Morgan, had left Boca Grande after visiting his father. Still at the bedside, however, is Mrs. George Nichols, Morgan's daughter.

Move Toward Restricting Size Of Armed Forces

By JOHN H. WIGGINS

Washington, March 10 (AP)—One senate committee heard testimony today that the nation's armed services will comprise 15,000,000 men instead of 11,000,000 by the end of this year, while another released testimony that all 3-A draft registrants may be inducted by midsummer.

The 15,000,000 figure came from Senator Downey (D-Calif.) during testimony on the Austin-Wadsworth bill to mobilize men and women civilians for industrial and agricultural production.

Downey's asserting that unless some such legislation is enacted American armament goals could not be attained, told the committee:

Heil, Hitler and Goering' Okay

It isn't treason to shout "Heil, Hitler, and Goering" at Fort Jackson, S. C.—and here are the reasons. Left to right: Lieut. Stewart L. Heil from San Francisco, Capt. Paul Hitler, a veteran U. S. army officer, and Capt. Carl G. Goering of Springfield, Ill. They are all in the army at Fort Jackson.

U. S. RESTORES CIVIL RIGHTS

Military Rule Partly Relaxed Over Hawaii Today

By WALTER B. CLAUSEN

Honolulu, March 10 (AP)—Military government over the territory of Hawaii gives way in part today to civil government after 15 months and three days—ever since the Japanese sneak attack on Pearl Harbor drew the United States into the second World War.

The restoration became effective formally at a ceremony at 10 a. m. (3:30 P. M. Eastern Standard time) in historic Iolani palace. In the presence of a joint session of the Hawaiian Legislature, territorial governor I. M. Stansbury, Admiral Chester H. Nimitz and Lieut. Gen. Delos E. Emmons effect the formal transfer of powers.

Eighteen agencies of government, mostly emergency organizations established under military rule, are being restored to civilian control. Martial law, however, remains in effect and civil writs or habeas corpus still are suspended.

Functions being restored to civilians include control of prices, food and other necessities.

Reduce Rates On Cargo Insurance

London, March 10 (AP)—The Institute of London Underwriters today announced world-wide reductions in war risk rates for ship cargoes in a move which appeared to mark a definite turn for the better in the allied war against Axis submarines.

The authoritative "financial times" indicated the move was based on an actual improvement in the number of cargo losses when it said:

"The general downward trend is in some measure a reflection of public and press comment on the anti-submarine war, but it is more likely to be based on underwriting figures than on figures of speech, however authoritative the latter may be."

House Committee Approves Withholding Levy

By FRANCIS M. LE MAY

Washington, March 10 (AP)—The House Ways and Means committee today approved a compromise income tax collection plan imposing a 20 per cent withholding levy on taxable portions of all wages and salaries and leaving to each individual the option of remaining a year behind in tax payments or "doubling-up" taxes in one year and going on a pay-as-you-go basis.

Information About Pleasure Driving

The Pitt County Gasoline Board today announced that while the penalty enforcement of the pleasure driving ban has been stopped, the ban is still in effect and voluntary compliance is expected.

Driving to attend meetings of church auxiliaries is to be considered as non-essential driving except in cases where meetings are held in a church, or other regular place of worship, primarily for worship, prayer, religious study or instruction.

Driving to attend meetings directly connected with, and essential to, the occupation of the driver is allowable under the pleasure driving ban. Such driving may be done only on the basis of "A" ration. Such mileage is not occupational, and does not qualify for the use of a "B" or "C" ration.

RAF UNLOADS TONS OF BOMBS ON NAZI CITY

Britain's Biggest Aircraft Take Part In Raid on Munich Last Night

London, March 10 (AP)—Britain's biggest bombers took to the air last night to blast Munich, cradle of the Nazi party and seat of important war industries, in the 12th RAF assault upon the continent in 14 nights. It was announced today. "Last night aircraft of the bomber command made a heavy attack on industrial objectives at Munich," a British Air Ministry communique said.

"Other aircraft bombed targets in western Germany and laid mines in enemy waters. "Eleven of our aircraft are missing."

It was the second consecutive night that the RAF into southern Germany. The big British bombers made the 1,300-round trip raid to Munich after a heavy assault on Nuremberg Monday night in which Swiss press reports said the cold center of that Nazi party stamping ground was razed. Last night's attack in Munich was believed to have been at least as heavy.

The German high command in its regular communique broadcast by the Berlin radio and recorded by the Associated Press said that the population of Munich suffered losses and "considerable damage was done to dwelling quarters, several hospitals, churches and cultural monuments."

The Germans in broadcasts early today admitted damage had been done. (Continued on Page Six)

PLAN SOLVING OF PROBLEMS

Introduce Bills To Handle Post-War Matters

Washington, March 10 (AP)—A fresh wave of sentiment in congress for reorganizing the war effort and establishing machinery for handling the problems which will come with peace has arisen with introduction of a half dozen bills by legislators from various sections.

To dozens of other bills touching upon these broad subjects were added this week proposals to:

1. Create a "war cabinet," superimposed on the President's administrative setup.

2. Establish a "committee on peace aims."

3. Assign the Federal Trade Commission to begin an investigation of our economic system and how it should be revised to cope with post-war situations.

4. Grant the government full authority to mobilize all resources, industry and public services for total war.

The war cabinet plan was submitted by Rep. Rees (R-Kan.) who said the cabinet should consist of 10 "distinguished citizens of demonstrated executive ability" at $10,000 a year each. Six months after the war ended the cabinet would automatically be abolished. Meanwhile its task would be to take over all questions concerning "the vigorous prosecution" of the war with authority over all executive departments.

Rep. Ludlow (D-Ind.) suggested the committee on peace aims consisting of three senators, three representatives and six members at large be appointed by the President. One of them to be a woman, one from labor, one from the federal government. (Continued on Page Six)

The WAR TODAY

AN ANALYSIS OF THE NEWS

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

Admiral William H. Standley, our ambassador to Russia, seems to have broached a keg of strong liquor when he stated in Moscow that he didn't think the Russian people were being told the complete story of American aid to their country, and that "there's no question about the Soviets trying to create the impression abroad, as well as at home, that they are fighting the war alone."

This acquired an added potency because it was almost coincident with vice president Wallace's declaration that "unless the western Democracies and Russia come to a satisfactory understanding before the war ends, I very much fear that World War No. 3 will be inevitable."

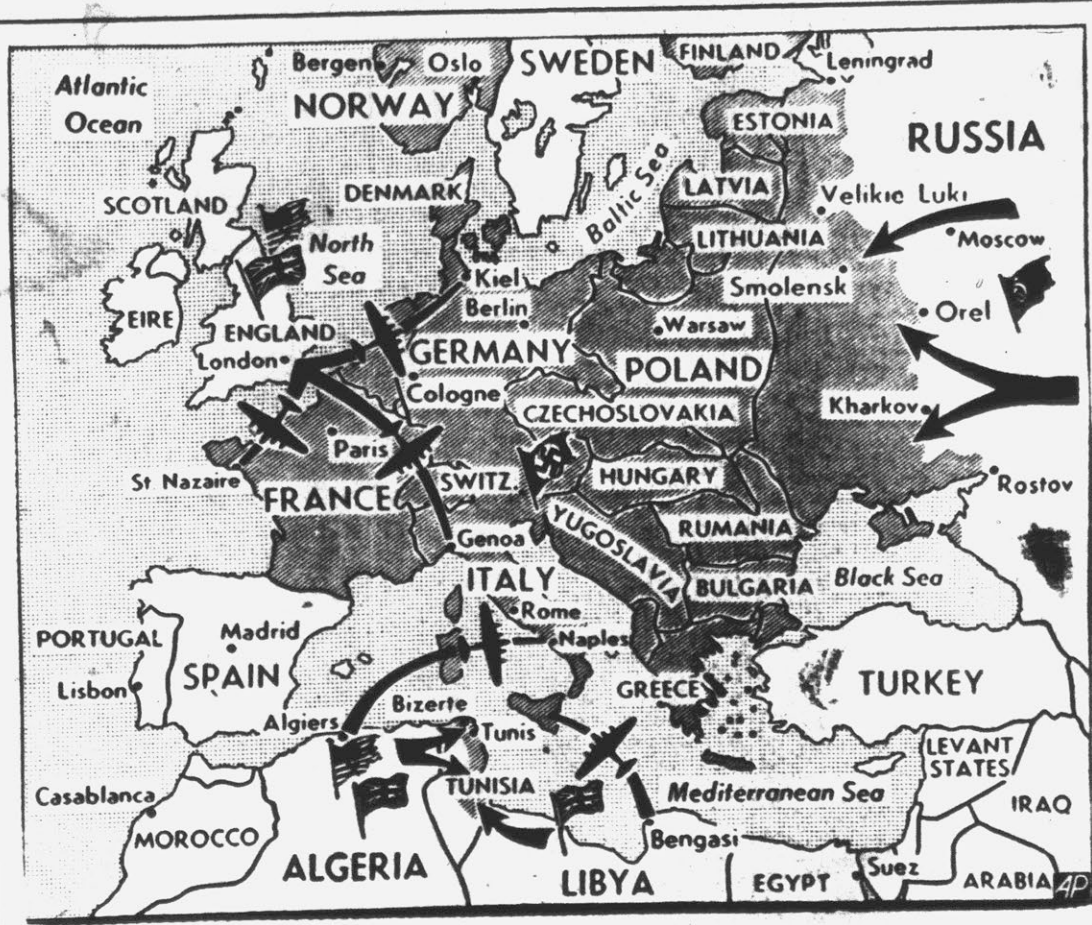

One of the anxious queries in the minds of a host of people, from Britain to Chungking, is just what role the Soviet union is likely to play after the war.

On my recent trip abroad, only one point was certainly expressed, and this was unanimous so far as my observations went.

This was that Russia seemed bound to emerge from the war as

British Pressing Rommel's Forces TO APPROVE LEND-LEASE

Predict Unanimous Roll Call Vote Late Today

By ALEX H. SINGLETON

Washington, March 10 (AP)—A measure extending the lend lease act another year was passed by the House today after it rejected a move to give Congress veto power over any final settlement between nations on the mutual aid pact.

The House roll call will come late today. Then Senate Foreign Relations Committee gave its unanimous approval to the extension today, agreeing to a suggestion by Senator Nye (R-N.D.) that if written into its favorable report a statement that the committee feels the act should in no way commit this government on future economic policies.

Commission Getting Down To Work With Problem

Raleigh, N. C., March 10 (AP)—If suggestions advanced at a meeting of the new state farm labor commission are carried out, North Carolina may see an unprecedented exodus of urbanites to the farms.

Harry B. Caldwell, director of the commission, said the proposals would be given "serious consideration."

If they are accepted and executed, it is available labor in the state including city high school boys and girls, Boy Scouts, unemployed women in urban areas, conscientious objectors and certain prisoners will be moved to the farm between now and summer, commissioner said.

The meeting was held here yesterday, with 51 of the 53 commissioners present. Governor Broughton is ex-officio chairman.

Americans Raid Japs In Burma

New Delhi, India, March 10 (AP)—United States fighters, carrying light bombs and machineguns, yesterday resumed extensive attacks on northern Burma, an American communique announced today.

Seven direct hits were scored on a bridge at Mogauing, cutting the north approach and leaving the center span sagging, and the town of Mogauing itself was showered with fragmentation bombs. A column of black smoke visible for 60 miles was believed to have come from a blown-up ammunition dump and oil depot.

The American Home Department of the Woman's Club meets Friday at 3:30 o'clock at the club house. Mrs. C. C. Hilton will speak on "Safety in the Home." The hostesses are Mrs. D. R. Vincent, Mrs. Bryan Gibbs, and Mrs. J. E. Parkerson.

Chicoed Home Demonstration Club

Friday, March 5, Chicoed Home Demonstration Club met at Home Economic's building at 3 p. m. with the majority of members present and three new members. The major project was "Serving for Victory." After a very interesting meeting the hostesses served a delicious cold plate while club members made plans to feed the visiting servicemen of Greenville at Woman's club building Sunday night, March 7.

The chairman of Feeding Committee checked the food that was donated by club members and friends and found that there was enough and over to feed the number of men listed. Fried chicken and country ham, with all the trimmings as well as home-made cake and hot coffee was on the menu.

A birthday cake was presented to "Irvin" (a Marine). He made his wish, blew the flame from the candles and cut the cake. The joy that beamed in his face and the applause that he got was well worth all effort the club put in the dinner.

The club wishes to thank the hostesses of Greenville Woman's Club for their help, and each that contributed to the feeding of these servicemen. Let it be little or much, we appreciate it and feel that you have rendered a great service.

Again we want to thank the Serving Committee, also the lady who furnished the gorgeous red carnations and did the decorating.

The club members who attended the Servicemen's broadcast were:

Mrs. T. S. Tyson, J. L. Edwards, Bill Carroll, Harvey Smith, Heber Dixon, N. A. Clark, Marvin Smith, J. J. Edwards, E. G. Hardee and Miss Annie Carroll.

Attention Mothers of Junior

Hostesses.

You are asked to meet with the committee of the Servicemen's Center at the Woman's Club, Thursday night at 8 o'clock, March 11. The committee feels that this is an important meeting and urges you to be present.

On Radio Thursday

Robert Lee Humber of Greenville, author of the proposal entitled, "The Declaration of the Federation of the World," will be a guest speaker on the "Town Hall" meeting of the air program in New York Thursday night from 8:30 until 9 o'clock. The program will originate on WJZ and be carried over the Blue Network.

Other speakers on the program will be Norman Thomas, national Socialist leader, and Sir Norman Angell of London. Mr. Humber and his family were in France when the Germans occupied that country in 1939. He is a graduate of Harvard, a Rhodes scholar and an internationally known lawyer.

New Zealand's two islands have about the same area as Colorado; its population is about equal to that of Detroit.

Considering the condition of its finances, the state is spending too much money for colleges and too little for schools. What is a college to the boy who cannot go to a public school?

Folk are really glad it has turned a little cooler. The last few days have been too warm for comfort this time of year.

Fruit trees are getting in bloom. In a big town like Charlotte and with a big actor like Richard Mansfield, we see that the curtain rises promptly at 7:45 o'clock. Here in fashionable Greenville the curtain is lucky if it begins to roll by 9.

Glee Club

The high school glee club will present a concert in the high school auditorium Friday night at 8 o'clock. There will be a solo, trios, quartet, boys' glee club, girls' glee club, mixed chorus, and orchestra. The program is under the supervision of Miss Ona Shindler, music instructor. Miss Eva Hodges, piano instructor, will be accompanist and Mr. Ingram Walters, music practice teacher, will direct the orchestra.

This will be the first concert given by the Glee clubs during the present year. Everyone is invited to attend this concert.

The Junior Red Cross, under the supervision of Miss Naomi Newell, will fill thirty-four bags which are to be sent to soldiers who have been sent overseas. They will be filled with such things as tooth-paste, soap, bath cloths, razor blades, and etc.

V Gardens

Victory gardens will be grown by the nine science classes, under the direction of Mrs. King, this spring. The gardens will be planted near the river, where the science classes formerly had a cultivated plot of ground.

Each ninth grade science class will have a garden about 1-10 of an acre in size and each student will be responsible for about one row. All plots will be the size of a garden for a family of five for summer fresh vegetables.

Beans, peas, beets, tomatoes, and carrots will be raised and the classes plan to study the insects that infest them and learn ways of exterminating the pests.

To Dedicate Scroll

Of Honor Sunday

The Eighth Street Christian church will dedicate its Scroll of Honor bearing stars for the men and women in the military service at the morning service next Sunday, March 14. Dr. H. G. Haney, the pastor, announced today. This is an attempt to duly honor those who are fighting on many fronts for humanity's freedoms. Among the group are splendid women who are sharing their part of the burden in this global war.

The following are the men and women members of the Eighth Street church or Sunday school who are now serving with the armed forces: Katherine Jones Ashe, Richard W. Briley, Leo F. Burks, Jr., Cpl. Robert Sugg Fleming, Sgt. Richard W. Gaylord, Sgt. Louis W. Gaylord, Alonzo E. Forrest, Tom Forrest, Cpl. R. R. Forrest, Lt. J. G. Herschel H. Haney, Cpl. James L. Harris, Jr., Sgt. Woolard, Lt. T. I. Wagner, Henry West, Ensign Harding Sugg, Lt. Harold G. Sugg, Benjamin Bruce Sugg, Jr., Cpl. Harry Wilson, Walter L. Tucker and Dr. W. Early.

The families of all these will be guests of honor at the service next Sunday morning.

EXPECT ACTION ON DEFERMENT

Kay Kyser Draft Appeal Now at White House

Washington, March 10—(AP)—From the self-styled "professor of the college of musical knowledge" Kay Kyser—To the President of the United States went a question today that couldn't be answered by time.

Is morale-building a qualification for draft deferment?

Kyser's appeal for deferment from I-A classification has gone to the White House, supported by director Elmer Davis of the Office of War Information which credited the 36-year-old band leader with much of the success of radio's part in its various war campaigns on the home front.

The showman serves without pay as a program consultant for OWI's radio committee.

In connection with the case, an OWI official disclosed that the agency has asked for draft deferments for seven other radio celebrities holding similar posts in the past, but that the practice was discontinued two months ago.

Douglas Meserve, head of OWI's radio committee, named the eight as Bob Hope, Edgar Bergen, Nelson Eddy, Lanny Ross, Red Skelton, Freeman Gosden of the team of Amos 'n' Andy, Harold Pary (The great Gildersleeve) and Kyser.

Kyser, Bergen and Skelton are the only unmarried members of the group, and Kyser, Ross, Skelton and Pary are the only members under 40, Meserve said.

Kyser's case is the only one that has reached the appeal stage and, although the OWI no longer asks deferment for other than fulltime, salaried members of its staff in key positions, Meserve added, the agency is supporting him because his case has stretched out for "four or five months" and withdrawal now would be unfair.

Kyser, who will be 37 next June 18, appealed on the ground that he was a necessary man and could do more for the war effort in civilian life than in the armed forces. However, his case brought up the question of whether morale building is a qualification for deferment. Principally a showman, he is not an instrumental musician.

Says Problem Will Be Unemployment

London, March 10—(AP)—Sir William Beveridge, author of a sweeping proposal for "cradle-to-grave" social security in Great Britain, told an audience of Americans today avoidance of mass unemployment "is the post-war problem in which people here and I suspect in your country, too—are interested more than anything else."

Beveridge, in a speech prepared for delivery to the American outpost, an organization of Americans in Britain designed to promote understanding to visit Canada and the United States shortly to study the post-war unemployment problem, said he was coming as a private citizen and not to advise the President of the United States on how to deal with social security.

Department Reports On Labor Inspections

Raleigh, N. C., March 10—(AP)—The State Department of Labor made 125 inspections for compliance with federal wage and hour laws and 572 inspections for compliance with state labor laws during February, Commissioner Forrest H. Shuford said today.

Of the federal wage and hour inspections, eighty-two firms were found to be violating one or more provisions of the wage-hour statute, while 798 violations of state labor laws were found in establishments inspected for state compliance.

Shuford's report showed 34 firms violated the basic minimum wage and overtime provisions of the wage and hour law and paid $8,478.47 in back wages to 210 of their employees who had been illegally underpaid according to standards provided for in the fair labor standards act.

Test Ahead For Red Friendship

Chicago, March 10—(AP)—Josef Stalin's friendship with the United States will be tested within the next 30 days when the Kamchatka fishing treaty between Russia and Japan must be decided, in the opinion of the Rev. Bernard R. Hubbard, the "glacier priest."

In an address before the Geographic Society of Chicago last night, father Hubbard, author and explorer and for many years head of the Geology department of the University of Santa Clara (Calif.), asserted that although each year the treaty expires on December 31, "they haggle over it until March and early in April it usually is signed."

"The Japs heretofore have needed the $10,000,000 in fish they get off Kamchatka peninsula, but this year they have all the food they need in conquered territory. But they can't use the weather stations there to watch over the Aleutian Islands."

"If Stalin signs that treaty again it is a sure sign that he wants a strong Japan and a weak United States and China in the Pacific."

North Carolina Eager To Cash In On Wealth

By SIGRID ARNE
Raleigh, March 10 (AP)—The state of North Carolina seems to be sitting on a Pandora's box of magnesium treasure. It would like tremendously to enjoy the profits from selling the ore.

War factories are gobbling magnesium at a great rate but not a single ton of North Carolina's magnesium oxide is being mined.

The situation is complicated. First, the state, itself, has just signed a contract with the International famous engineer, Herman Frasch, of New York, to make a quick, 60-day survey and report which the state plans to use to interest any or all who might invest in mines and reduction plants to produce magnesium metal.

Frasch is to report on several things: The magnesium, coal and iron deposits in the state; the labor supply, the roads and railroads which could haul out the ore, the sources of electric power.

The magnesium belt in North Carolina has been investigated several times by both state and federal geologists, and recently by TVA mineral experts and state geologists.

They report a belt of "olivine" (a magnesium-bearing substance) and with lies along the western part of the state, almost from its northern edge down over the Georgia border, petering out somewhere near Atlanta. Much of the belt lies so close to the surface that it can be seen by passengers on railroad trains which pass through hillside cuts.

The belt is about 175 miles long and about 15 miles wide. It is estimated to contain 1,179,860,000 tons of olivine. Jasper I. Stuckey, North Carolina state geologist, says he believes it's the largest rich body of source material for magnesium in the world.

In an exchange of letters, however, between Governor J. Melville Broughton and Donald Nelson, WPB chief, Nelson wrote that he had been advised there is no proved method for reducing olivine to magnesium.

It is true that there is now no pilot plant for the job. But enough reduction has been done in experiment so that the TVA-North Carolina report can state a few definite facts. For one thing, it costs only 60 cents to $1.50 a ton to quarry, crush and screen the olivine.

This olivine is a greenish, granular substance that looks something like sugar-coated lime gumdrops. It's not gummy, however—it's crumbly like sugar cookies.

This olivine is high in magnesium oxide content. The central deposits average 48.07 percent magnesium oxide. And magnesium oxide—when you get it—cooks down to about 20 percent pure magnesium metal. So the various reports agree.

The border deposits are only a little less rich: They average 40 to 45 per cent magnesium oxide.

This wouldn't have been such a happy find years ago. But many metallurgists now recognize magnesium as stronger than aluminum, and lighter in weight, which means tremendous amount in the construction of airplanes and motors.

Peace time dreaming about magnesium is just as spectacular. There is talk of magnesium railroad coaches, magnesium auto bodies, magnesium parts in motors, refrigerators, and even magnesium alloy pots and pans.

North Carolina's negotiations have enlisted everyone from Gov. Broughton down through the personnel of the state conservation and development board. State funds have been used to advertise the deposits. Hundreds of letters and telegrams are arriving at Raleigh asking about the state's magnesium. To get some order out of the excitement the state employed Robert W. Redwine for the sole job of negotiating on the state's mineral wealth.

He says the state now has more than a hundred queries from concerns big enough to handle mining operations if they can be cleared.

But, Redwine says, he can't get WPB blessing on priorities for the equipment to fit olivine reduction plants.

FOODS FOR THE FAMILY

By Mrs. Adelaide Blanton

Breakfast
Last week as I was registering for my new ration card, a friend sitting next to me said, "What are we going to eat?" The newspapers, magazines, government bulletins, and commercial pamphlets have had so much to say in answer to this question that I hesitate to add anything further. However, as each community has its own problems, some of which are very different from those of other neighborhoods, a few suggestions from the local point of view might not be amiss. Let us consider, then, the problem of breakfast.

My first suggestion is to use more breads. You are reading this everywhere. Most southerners like hot bread; so plan to serve hot bread at least for the morning meal, possibly twice a day. Use whole wheat flour, whole wheat flour, and yellow corn meal not too finely ground. All of these contain valuable minerals and vitamins that are more needed now than ever, in a restricted diet.

Use more hot cereals for breakfast. Oatmeal and milk make almost a complete diet. White syrup instead of sugar used with it is very palatable.

Fresh fruits, good breakfast foods, are not rationed. Apples are not expensive if bought by the peck or bushel, and while syrup can be used in cooking them. Citrus fruits are inexpensive now. In buying them avoid those with very dry skins, as this indicates they have been on the market for some time, and storage destroys some of their vitamin content. Why spend your ration stamps for canned fruit juices when fresh fruits are not rationed? Save these points for other things.

Butter is scarce and likely to be scarcer. Try butter substitutes, which are retailing from 17 to 29 cents a pound. Most of these table fats contain 9,000 units vitamin A a pound, while butter has a little over 16,000 units per pound. This is the chief difference, nutritionally, in the two. This difference can be made up by using good whole milk.

Milk has never been abundant in eastern North Carolina; but if you can get it, allow a pint a day for each adult in the family and a quart for each child. This, with different cheese dishes, will supply much of the proteins, and a very excellent quality, that you may have been getting in meats.

Eggs have been very expensive this winter, but the price is down now, so that we can afford to give the man in the family an egg for breakfast each morning and the other members of the family occasional ones. We do not want to use all of our eggs for breakfast, however, as they will be needed for the other two meals of the day.

Another suggestion is the use of more black molasses. It can be used not only for gingerbreads, puddings, and other desserts at noon and night, but also, with hot griddle cakes or whole wheat biscuits for breakfast. It is an excellent source of calcium and iron.

These are just a few very simple suggestions for the family breakfast. I am including a recipe for spoon bread which makes a delicious breakfast dish.

Recipe
One pint milk, 1 egg, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1 cup meal, 1/2 cup flour, 1 teaspoon double acting or 2 teaspoons single acting baking powder, 2 tablespoons melted fat. Cook at 400 degrees F. time dependent upon depth of pan. Serves four generously, or six less so.

It will be about ninety days before we can hope to get very much from our gardens; in the meantime let us plan our meals for a week in advance (you do better planning when you give it this much thought) let us buy wisely; let us spend more time in our kitchens and thus give our families breakfasts that will not only be good for them but will also be palatable and satisfying.

Farmers Are Busy; Tobacco Plants Safe

Cold weather which hindered plowing and other farming operations the past several weeks was replaced by spring-like temperature in this section today. There was unusual activity on the farms. Plows were moving across the fields today and it appeared that everybody on the farms were taking part in the work.

Apprehension about tobacco plants in the beds during the recent cold snaps appeared to vanish today under a warming sun and very little wind. Little damage was done in plant beds, farmers report.

An old-timer, a farmer who always makes good crops, said today that tobacco growers can make enough money to house the leaf crop if they see that tenants and others give time and attention to gardens. With canned vegetables off the market, prices for green stuff from the farms in midsummer will net farmers enough money to meet the weekly payrolls and not have to borrow money.

Rat Transports 20 Lbs. Sweet Potatoes

By CHESTER WALSH
Twenty pounds of Porto Rico sweet potatoes, some of them weighing as much as two and a half pounds, were found hoarded under an electric refrigerator at Mrs. Lillian S. Gates' home, 311 Summit Street, the other day. The potatoes were packed neatly around the sides of the motor compartment and not one of them close enough to the machinery to cause trouble. A wily wharf rat that had taken up quarters under the Gates home hid the potatoes. The rodent transported the tubers from a large bag in a pantry across the kitchen to the refrigerator and then put them in cold storage for the duration, "the rat thought." Also hoarded away in the refrigerator's motor compartment was a jumbo size loaf of bread, two bunches of turnips, a head of cabbage and a bunch of carrots and a package of headache powders.

Other rats about the premises will take bait from traps and get caught. This rodent from the Arctic region. He can open a box of shredded wheat and store the wheat biscuits under the refrigerator without dropping a crumb. The wharf rat, who visits about the neighborhood, is a pest and public nuisance No. 1.

J. T. Welch, city sanitary inspector, has provided a prescription for the rat's diet tonight that may poison him. The neighbors and Mrs. Gates are going to celebrate if the rodent succumbs.

"That rat has taken nearly everything to eat we have, but didn't get the ration books," neighbors said.

Strength FOR THE DAY

By EARL L. DOUGLAS

THE FUTURE MERCIFULLY HIDDEN

Sometimes we deplore the fact that we have so little real knowledge and can therefore anticipate the future only imperfectly because of our ignorance. We wish that we might be able to look into the future with more penetration. We assure ourselves that if we could do so, we could prepare ourselves to meet situations which now, because of our lack of knowledge, often become overwhelming.

But think about it for a moment. Would you really like to have the capacity to discern the future? Suppose you knew not only the day upon which you would die but could see the future so clearly that tragedy perhaps would be delineated before your eyes. Would not every day be a day of gloom and every event and the day on which they happened be a season of indescribable agony? The horror of legal executions is not that men lose their lives, but that for weeks they anticipate their violent end with ever increasing anxiety.

No, we would not be happier if we could look into the future. One of God's most merciful provisions is that He hides the future from us. We are supposed to live our lives day by day, endeavoring that every day will take care of itself, provided we have put that day and its happenings in the hands of God.

VICTORY GARDENS

We have been talking about "Victory Gardens" to help boost the food supply for the duration. It now begins to appear that we are going to have to go to plowing and digging and cultivating in our own backyards or on vacant lots and at the same time buy some baby chicks and brood them on to maturity.

The time for getting ready for summer gardening is now. Those who do some "city farming" on a small scale will be able to eat tomatoes, cucumbers, peas, turnips and other appetite satisfying vegetables. Others will have a time finding the vegetables on the markets during the summer.

The "Victory Gardeners" will have vegetables to eat next summer while the non-gardeners "go marketing."

Plant a "Victory Garden" now, but do not plant more than you can attend to.

DETERMINING WAR GUILT.

After listening to the news broadcasts or scanning the headlines of the newspapers for the latest war news, the natural reaction of the people in the conquered countries and those countries at war is one of revenge on the Nazis and all things German and Japanese.

Toward the close of World War I, President Wilson drew a sharp distinction between the German people and their rulers. There are many, today, who hold that a similar distinction must, in justice, be made between Hitler and the mass of the

Congressional Record

German people.

This point of view finds numerous dissenters. They argue that the rank and file of the German people were ready to share in the plunder that the Nazis hoped to take from other nations and, therefore, they cannot, in equity, escape responsibility and punishment if they lose the war. Victims of Nazi and Japanese tyranny and cruelties are demanding that all the Germans and the Japanese be given a "blood bath" and be made to suffer something of the pain and grief which they and their war machine have brought to other peoples. Only in this way, they argue, are you going to keep the Germans and the Japanese from preaching the glorifications of war.

At the end of the last war, German territory remained uninvaded. This was due to two factors. One was a humanitarian motive, President Wilson holding that, inasmuch as Germany had agreed to accept the "Fourteen Points," the object of the war had been attained and further fighting would be both useless and inhumane. However, there were many other questions that entered into the problem, such as reparations and indemnities, and some argued that it would be impossible to collect from Germany moneys commensurate with the damage that had been done if its industries had been destroyed. This plan would reimburse those not responsible for the war and thus combine to create a condition which would leave Germany and the German people free from the havoc they had wrought. In the interest of justice and world peace, many people argue that this must not be allowed to happen this time.

Chapter 3

Although it was the Morrisons' custom to have demitasse and brandy served in the patio when the nights were warm and clear, Landa had whispered urgently to the party left the dining room to serve tonight in the living room. She knew Don and his father would be in the rose garden and if their angry words came back to the papaya buyers and Jim it would mean only further embarrassment for them all.

The party had been in the living room sipping their coffee and chatting for what seemed to Landa an interminable age when she glanced up to see Don's figure in the doorway. He hesitated for an instant, the flickering candlelight showing the whiteness of his face, and then made his way across the room and sank into a chair. There was a sudden lull in the conversation as all eyes turned to him. He attempted a brief smile.

"I'm dreadfully sorry about all this, but the padre is old and nervous you know." His tone was thin and unconvincing.

McCullough came quickly to the rescue. "I think I'm the one who should be making the apologies, old chap. I should have had better sense than to argue with the old gentleman when he isn't feeling himself."

Landa found herself listening intently for the heavy step of O'Shanessey on the tile floor of the patio outside.

"He's coming back for his coffee?" she said anxiously to Don.

"I think he'll be back later." Don's face flushed as he said the words. "His favorite horse, Shamrock, has been running a temperature and he's gone to the stables to see how he's getting along."

Landa then tried hopefully to swing the conversation to something other than anything but papaya. "Uncle Mike's quite a horse fancier, you know."

"Fine horses are a luxury I've always dreamed about," Jim Blair said helpfully. "I spent two years in the Cavalry when I was a kid but haven't had much chance to ride the last few years."

"Daddy loved horses, too," Landa said dreamily. "I can remember when I was a little girl he had a horse named Silver Glow, a pure white Arabian, and he and Uncle Mike used to race them on the beach every Sunday morning. It was such fun."

For an instant Don seemed to be his old carefree self again. "And the natives bet their most valuable trinkets on the winner, remember?" he laughed. "Father taught them the art. He felt betting made the occasion more genuine."

McCullough moved uneasily in his chair and set his brandy glass on a table beside him. "Pardon me, Mr. O'Shanessey, for changing the subject," he said, "but to get back to this papaya proposition, it's rather urgent right now for Brown, say the same as I. Let's not discuss this subject again. I'll speak to growers under contract as we can, and I was just wondering if we couldn't get this thing fixed up somehow in the morning. We would like to get on to Santos Diego by noon tomorrow."

A cold misery settled over Don's face, but his voice came sharp and brittle.

"You and Senor Brown are welcome here on our island as long as you wish to stay as our guests, but I think you might as well consider the subject of buying our papayas closed forever," he said.

Landa whirled on him, hurt and astonished. "Don!" she cried. "But I thought you felt as I do! Why shouldn't we sell these gentlemen as much of our papaya as they care to buy?"

"It is my padre's wish," Don said with a tone of finality.

Angry indignation rose slowly in Landa. "Well, it isn't mine," she said sharply. "And I own half the island."

Jim Blair got to his feet. "If I may be excused," he said pleasantly. "I think I'll turn in. This getting up with the sun makes the bed look very inviting about nine o'clock."

Brown and McCullough took the cue and rose from their chairs. "I think that's an excellent suggestion, Blair," Brown said. "Mac here and I could do with a little extra sleep and maybe things will look differently to all of us in the morning."

Landa crossed the room and pulled a bell cord that tinkled faintly in the far reaches of the hacienda. Presently Maria appeared in the doorway with a lighted candle in her hand.

"The gentlemen are leaving, Maria," Landa said.

After the three men had left the room Landa and Don sat for a long time without speaking. The distant roar of the pounding surf came in even cadence to fill the room. Finally Landa heard heavy footsteps on the patio floor and looked up to see Mike O'Shanessey coming in the door. The anger was gone from his face. He sat down heavily, facing the two.

"I'm sorry if I embarrassed you in front of your friends tonight, Landa," he said. "My temper doesn't seem to improve with age like my Irish whiskey." He laughed briefly at his own humor, and then went on in a smoothly even voice. "It's just that I'm getting old and sentimental about this island of ours. You know this is hallowed ground to me. My children were raised here and my whole life is rooted like the trees to this soil."

The old man stopped and smiled faintly at the two. "There's so much for you to do here, Landa child," he went on. "Pleasant things I mean, like you used to. Painting the lovely fields and coves, going on with your music, being a good wife to my son. Business is nothing for a lovely girl to worry her head about. I'm sure if your father were here he would say the same as I. Let's not discuss this subject again. I'll speak to the buyers first thing in the morning." Landa didn't speak, but small fires had kindled in her eyes and there was a certain gleam of defiance as her gaze went quickly from Don to his father and she rose to run from the room.

Move Toward . . .

Other manpower developments:
1. An assertion by Secretary of War Stimson that foes of army expansion are trying to avoid "inconveniences and relatively minor sacrifices."

2. A Senate battle over the type of legislation desired to defer farm workers from military service.

3. An effort by Senator Wheeler (D-Mont.) to attach a rider to the farm deferment legislation eliminating induction of fathers over 38.

4. Renewal of hearings on the Austin-Wadsworth national service bill amid predictions of opponents that congress "will not dare" to junk the present voluntary work system in favor of a compulsory draft of civilians.

Reiterating advocacy of compulsory manpower legislation, the secretary said he had concluded "that one of the reasons why industry and agriculture and the whole civilian population have not moved more rapidly towards an all-out effort is that we have relied almost entirely on voluntary cooperation."

Bankhead said that it is "regrettable the secretary did not account for the fact our allies are urging us to send more food and equipment—not more American soldiers."

Nye accused Stimson of "driving for complete government regimentation of manpower" and "the surrender of the very liberties for which we allegedly are fighting." In asserting that the 1943 expansion plan has been carefully thought out, Nye added, "The secretary is disproved by the serious threat already upon us by reason of a food shortage traceable in the main to absence of manpower."

Meantime, the Senate Military Committee, resuming hearings on the Austin-Wadsworth bill, called Chairman Downey (D-Calif.) a special senate investigating committee to testify on his findings in a three-weeks study of agricultural and industrial labor shortages in western states.

Despite Stimson's advocacy of national service legislation, some congressmen predicted privately that unless their constituents make it clear they desire such a measure most lawmakers would not dare vote for government direction of workers.

3 letters spelling ACID

Your engine's cylinders can't stop empty. They'll either load up with fresh raw gas when you shut 'er off, or get caught with stale burned gas they can't belch out.

In those useless leftovers are corrosive acids, trapped in the engine you can't replace—along with moist "sweat" as the interior cools. Any chemistry freshman knows these causes of biting corrosion, always present—long before wartime. But when your car was in frequent use, at speeds that thoroughly warmed the engine, it helped to offset the worst acid effects. How different today, when mileage, speed, and average engine heat are all down—giving acid its chance to run riot!

You can't open the engine and keep sponging out any acids or other moisture, while your car stands little used nowadays. But without extra fuss or extravagance you can change to Conoco Nth motor oil and get your engine internally OIL-PLATED.

You're familiar with anti-corrosive plating...like chromium-plating. Just as closely, this protective OIL-PLATING will be kept surfaced to delicate parts by advanced synthetic means—as described in the celebrated patent on Conoco Nth. Though your gasoline-ran car makes few runs, you can combat corrosion between times. For you can keep your engine OIL-PLATED by changing to Conoco Nth this Spring at Your Mileage Merchant's Conoco station. Continental Oil Company

Tully Marshall Dies
Hollywood, March 10 — (AP) — Tully Marshall, 79, screen character actor, died early today at his home in suburban Encino. Marshall, his physician said, had been confined to bed for 10 days. He was attended by his wife, Mrs. Marian Marshall.
The veteran actor left the stage in 1914 to enter motion pictures under the guidance of D. W. Griffith.

DODGERS GET WANER BROS.

Pair Together For Third Time In Major Leagues

By HAROLD CLAASSEN
New York, March 10—(AP)—The Brooklyn Dodgers, known in pre-war days as the Dodgers, have brought the Waner Brothers together for the third time on a major league baseball club.

The outfield act that wowed the fans for 14 years in Pittsburgh and for a short time in Boston now is going into a rehearsal for a Brooklyn appearance. Paul was picked up during the winter as a free agent and Lloyd was acquired yesterday by the trade that sent Babe Dahlgren to Philadelphia.

Paul, older by four years and now approaching 40, joined the Pittsburgh club in 1926 and preceded his brother to the big top by one season.

For years the pair has been known as "big and little poison," a nickname picked up when the Pirates of 1927 battled the New York Yankees in the world series and a Pittsburgh fan, not too familiar with the buccaners, in a heavy accent asked a fellow spectator to identify the "big person on our club."

Paul, now one of three national league players ever to connect for 3,000 hits, was pointed out and his younger brother automatically became "little poison."

It was during this season that Paul won the first of his three league batting championships and was declared the loop's most valuable player. And it wasn't their fault that the Pirates lost the world series in four straight to the Yankees as Lloyd batted .400 in the series and Paul .333.

The Waners, Oklahoma products like the Dean Browns of St. Louis Cardinals fame, bear little resemblance to ball players. They are light. Downer fellows and neither, winning his favorite bet, will push the scales to 160 pounds.

Neither has the habits of a ball player, Paul frankly admitting that he sometimes goes an entire week without eating a steak.

"I like salads and when it is hot sometimes on a week without steak," says big poison, "Frankly, I don't think meat is the most desirable food in the summer time."

It was Paul who astounded baseball players and doctors last summer by admitting that he was so near-sighted he could not read the signs on the stadium walls in which he played. But Lloyd's eye-sight is okay. During his many years at Pittsburgh he struck out only once in 49 times at bat.

Norfolk Tars Get Yankee Players

Norfolk, Va., March 10—(AP)—Three former Rocky Mount, N. C. baseball players, among them Chick Summers, who previously had stayed with the Norfolk Tars in 1940 and 1942, have been assigned here by the New York Yankees, big brothers of the Piedmont league locals.

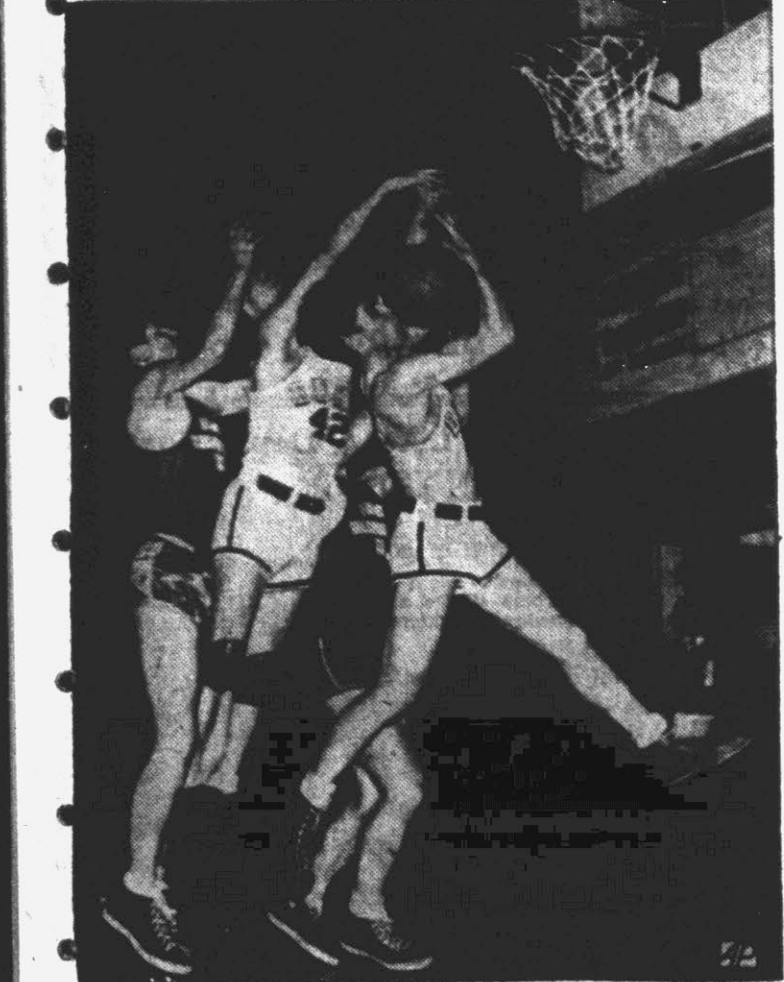

Quentin Martin, who plays any position, was the other ex-Rocky Mount performer to be assigned here from the bi-state league.

In addition to Summers, who plays first base and the outfield, the players are catcher Charles Mundy and second baseman George Maxie Biershenk.

The Price of Victory TAXES AND WAR BONDS

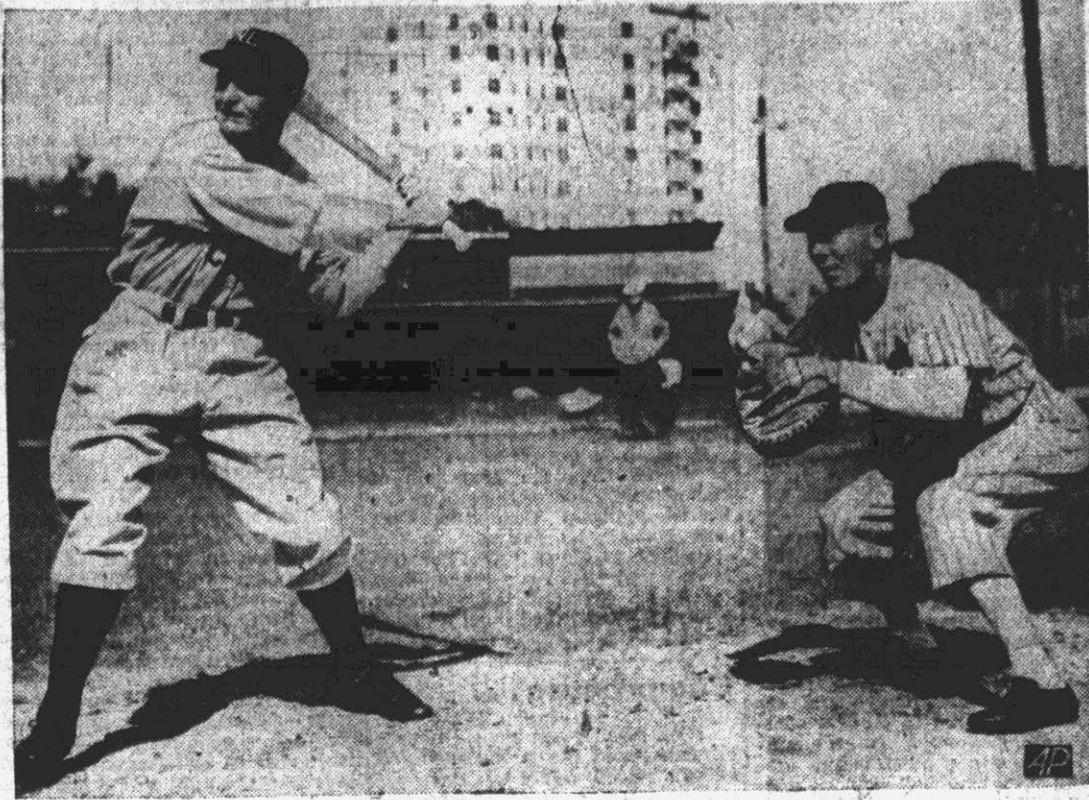

It Takes Both

George Washington Beats Duke

All tangled up in this frantic struggle for the ball are, left to right: Ed Gustafson, George Washington forward; Garland Loftin, Duke guard, and John Seward, Duke forward, and another George Washington player, unidentified, behind them. This action took place under George Washington's goal in the final game of the Southern Conference basketball tournament at Raleigh. George Washington beat Duke 56 to 40 and won the tournament.

Waner Starts Spring Training In Florida

Paul Waner, Brooklyn Dodger outfielder, takes a cut at the ball while Walter "Dutch" Henline, former big league player, now an umpire, catches for him in a bit of an official spring training at Sarasota, Fla. The Dodgers, as a team, will do their training in the north this season because of transportation problems.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, March 10 (AP)—With a Brooklyn outfield squad composed of 41-year old Johnny Cooney; Paul Waner, who'll be 40 before the season starts, Lloyd Waner, 29, Dixie Walker, 32, and Joe Medwick, 31, Boss Branch Rickey might be accused of trying to work an old Dodger on the fans. It's a little different with the Indians, who farm Ted Szepkowski out to Baltimore so he could finish his high school course before being inducted into the army. Johnny Cooney's son busted a hand recently knocking a fellow out. He'll never be a Dodger if he's that brittle. What price victory? It cost the N.Y. track team two bucks to fill the I.C. 4-A trophy with beer so they could toast last Saturday's triumph.

It Burned Him Up.

When George Von Elm, former National Amateur Golf Champion, shot a wild one into a trap at Los Angeles' Kakeside Course recently, he found his ball had rolled into a paper bag. George isn't used to being in traps, or bags either, but the situation didn't stump him. He merely lit a match, burned the bag and then played his shot. Wonder if the match could be counted as his 15th club?

Postman's Paragraph.

A bit too late, Jack Miller of the Independence, Kas., Army Basic Flying School, points out that those Iowa Pre-Flight Cadets who accomplish 1,000 sit-ups each didn't set any record. That mark, he says, is 1,600 and was made years ago by Dr. James E. Barnes of Youngstown, O., president of the Ohio Association of Boxing Commissions. Navy Cadet Sam Sturgis now has raised it to 2,003, so the doc no longer holds the record, but he's still able to sit up and take notice of things. And Neale Patrick, former Raleigh, N. C., sports scribe turned sailor, asks how come George Senesky of St. Joseph (Philadelphia) gets credit for a basketball scoring record by beating Stutz Modzelewski's season mark of 509 points when North Carolina's George Glumack hit 578 in 1941. This dept. will stand by Brooms Abramovic and his 700-odd points for Salem, W.

Va., and "small time" basketball.

Today's Guest Star.

Paul Menton, Baltimore Evening Sun: "The state senate committee of Arkansas didn't pass a law making the university of Arkansas hire a $12,000 football coach; it simply recommended it. And there's more to the recommendation. The new coach's job is to produce a skilled, colorful and victorious team. That's a tough enough job in the southwest conference in peace time without tackling it now."

TESTIFIES ON ABSENTEEISM

Perkins Says Legislation Will Not Cure Evil

Washington, March 10—(AP)—Secretary of Labor Perkins told the House Naval Committee today that the "causes and nature of absenteeism are such that legislation is almost certain not to be the real corrective and may result in delaying practical solution by industry and labor."

She appeared before the committee as it neared the end of its public hearings on an anti-absenteeism measure designed to put service uniforms on able-bodied, draft-age men who take unwarranted holidays from their work in war industries.

"The bill which your committee is considering would not, I fear, solve the problem either of absenteeism or of production. x x x The problem before us is to control and discourage absenteeism without having to discharge men as a disciplinary measure in a time of labor shortage," she maintained.

Miss Perkins is to be a witness before the House Labor Committee Friday in an investigation of its own.

She suggested to the Naval Committee that "deliberate and repetitive shirkers could be fined for their absences and added, 'if they are 18-45 and male, I take it the draft boards will consider their cases.'"

In a statement prepared for the committee, the labor secretary said that "there is no single cause or cure for absenteeism. The causes vary widely from plant to plant, as is indicated by absentee rates ranging from 2 per cent and 3 per cent up to 6 per cent and more."

"As I see it," she said, "the most effective approach on the part of the government to the problem of absenteeism is to carry directly to the thousands of plants now operating on war contracts information about the methods that have been developed and proved practicable in our leading industrial establishments."

"Assume," she said, "that this bill is passed. Workers who are absent excessively from their job will have their occupational deferment cancelled."

But if these workers are drafted this will not expedite production for their vacant places on the production line will have to be filled by finding and probably training new workers.

"You must remember that a large and increasing part of our future labor force will be women, men with physical defects and workers too old to draft."

Southern Coaches In The Navy Now

U. S. Air Force To Handle Offensive In China

By The Associated Press

Creation of a full-fledged U. S. air force command in China, fulfilling a hope long cherished by the Chinese, was officially announced today and some quarters declared it marked the beginning of a new phase in the war against Japan.

Military observers said the announcement clearly indicated a sizable expansion of American air power in the China theater and possibly heralded new bombing attacks on Japan.

Heretofore, China has had the services of only part of the 10th U. S. Air Force, with headquarters in India.

Under the new setup, the newly activated 14th U. S. Air Force under the command of Brig. Gen. Claire L. Chennault will replace the old China air task force.

On the far Pacific fighting fronts,

American-built Liberator bombers of the RAF attacked enemy positions in Japanese-occupied Burma, while Japan showed a resurgence of aerial strength in the New Guinea theater.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters said a formation of 26 Japanese bombers and 21 fighters attacked the allied mountain outpost at Wau in New Guinea yesterday, but caused only light casualties and small damage.

Wau lies 35 miles southwest of the big enemy base at Salamaua, the target of a drive by American and Australian troops since their conquest of the Papuan peninsula in the South.

In Burma, the RAF blasted rail yards at Prome for 90 minutes, setting large fires, and strafed Japanese troops near Akyab on the Bay of Bengal coast.

British Endorse Wallace Statement

London, March 10 — (AP) — Vice President Henry A. Wallace's proposal that a satisfactory understanding be reached by the western democracies and Russia before the present war ends received strong endorsement today from most of the influential sections of the press in Britain, which already has a 20-year treaty of collaboration with the Soviet.

The Times devoted nearly three columns in its wartime edition of only ten pages to an exhaustive argument for "truly close collaboration" among Britain, Russia and the United States.

Nearly all the newspapers gave prominent display to Under-Secretary of State Sumner Welles' statement that Ambassador William H. Standley's assertion in Moscow that the Russian people are not being told the full story of American aid was made without consultation with Washington.

Urges Deferment Of Farm Workers

Washington, March 10 — (AP) — Declaring that crop shortage this year "might bring disaster" Senator Revercomb (R-W.Va.) urged the Senate today to vote for blanket deferment of all farm workers.

Conceding that enactment of such a law would be only a stopgap until an overall decision on the use of the nation's manpower is reached, he pointed out that crops grow in season not to suit the convenience of Congress, and "the time for planting is at hand."

"Action must be taken at once on this subject or it must be forgotten for 1943," he declared in a speech before the Senate.

"A crop shortage in 1943, with the immense feeding program that we have undertaken, would place us in a dangerous position. It might bring disaster. Men with empty stomachs cannot fight, and a hungry people cannot be a strong people."

Score Hits On German Tanker

London, March 10 — (AP) — A British coastal force scored torpedo hits on a tanker, severely damaged an enemy patrol craft and left another burning in naval actions off the Dutch coast last night, the admiralty announced today.

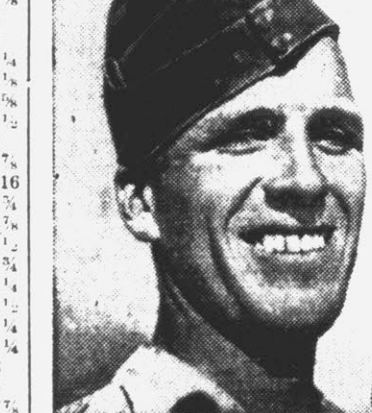

Three patrol craft first were engaged, it said, and one was left burning and another severely damaged. Later a strongly escorted tanker was encountered and it burst in flames after two torpedo hits were scored.

"Gunfire from our forces inflicted considerable damage on the enemy escort," the war bulletin added. "One of our vessels failed to return to base. The remainder suffered only minor casualties and superficial damage."

The German high command had reported an action in which it said three British motor torpedo boats were sunk and two were set afire. It gave no details on German losses.

Travel to national parks decreased 30 per cent in 1941-42, the greatest decrease being at Yellowstone, Glacier and Crater Lake.

REDS GIVE LIST OF SHIPMENTS

Publish Full Facts On Lend-Lease Aid To Russia

Moscow, March 10 (AP) — On the heels of U. S. Ambassador William H. Standley's statement Monday that the Russian people were not being properly informed of American lend-lease aid to the Soviet Union, the Soviet press today reprinted a dispatch from Izvestia, government newspaper, which quoted Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., on the amount of American supplies shipped to Russia.

The story was printed on the back of newspapers, (the space usually given to all foreign news except that of the utmost importance). The New York dispatch was credited to Tass, official Russian news agency, and was dated "March 9, by mail."

Quoting an article by Stettinius in an American magazine, the date of which was not specified, the dispatch said the greater part of food supplies shipped to Russia in 1942 consisted of pork, dairy products, fats and eggs.

"The Moscow radio broadcast at length Tuesday night a later statement made by Stettinius last Saturday listing planes, tanks, trucks, and many other articles sent to Russia. The broadcast was recorded by Reuters and the Soviet Monitor in London.

(The statement was read slowly, the usual sign provincial papers were expected to copy it.)

In the first half of 1942 the greater part of lend-lease supplies was shipped to England, the Izvestia dispatch said, but by last December, the majority of such shipments were to Russia.

Standley's press conference statement that Russia's failure to acknowledge American aid was unfair to the American people and might tend to endanger the renewed lend-lease bill pending in Congress, was not published in the Russian press.

The total mobilization bill came from Rep. Priest (D-Tenn.) who recommends the special authority "to provide for an adequate supply of workers in war industries and agriculture."

The bill would give the President the right to virtually conscript "all the material resources industrial and other productive organizations and services of its citizens."

Rep. Ploeser (R-Mo.) introduced the resolution for the inquiry by the federal trade commission and how best to effect the transition from war to peace economy.

Ploeser suggested the investigation into the causes of the depression of 1929 and reasons for failure of "the free enterprise system to recover."

Munich, Germany's fourth largest city, besides being the site of the Nazi Brown House and other Nazi party headquarters buildings, has important locomotive and car repair shops, vital to Hitler's communications, a motor works, engineering shops and other plants producing submarine and airplane engines, armored cars and tanks.

The beer cellar in which the Nazi party was founded is in Munich. Canadians, who again participated strongly in the attack, said the entire heart of Munich appeared to be "one big fire" at one time, with one explosion shooting flames nearly 2,000 feet into the air and starting a column of fire visible for 60 miles despite other big fires around it.

The flash lasted four or five seconds and that's a long time," said one of the Canadian pilots.

"The flash was so intense we could have read a newspaper in our kite and we were 20,000 feet up," said another.

The German broadcast, recorded by the Associated Press, said preliminary reports showed that 12 British planes had been downed, indicating that the raid probably was carried out on a large scale.

A Vichy broadcast, also heard by the Associated Press, reported that RAF planes were over northern and western France.

German bombers caused some loss last night in the coastal districts and several casualties ear- of eastern and southern England but there was little activity, it was authoritatively announced, and one enemy bomber was shot down into the sea.

A DNB broadcast from Berlin said Nazi bombers raided Worthing on the South English coast yesterday and bombed Hull and other coastal towns last night. Military installations were destroyed at Worthing, the broadcast said and fires started at Hull.

Anti-aircraft gunners destroyed two of the enemy planes yesterday, the Air Ministry said.

general readiness for any possible attack. Such an attack, civilian as well as military leaders continue to point out, is still possible.

Even though Republican and Democratic leaders expressed confidence the bill would win overwhelming approval, the assertion of U. S. Ambassador William H. Standley in Moscow that the Russian people are not being told the full story of American aid still excited comment.

Reaction in Congress was mixed. It ranged from the suggestion of Chairman Sumners (D-Tex.) of the House Judiciary Committee that this nation "be patient," to the statement of Senator Wheeler (D-Mont.) that "Salin is a realist—he's for Russia first and last." Senator Wiley (R-Wis.) called it all a "tempest in a teapot."

The committee thus abandoned all long-debated current tax collection proposals, and transferred to the House floor the issue of whether one tax year should be cancelled to put all tax-payers on a pay-as-you-go basis, as proposed by Beardsley Ruml, New York banker.

Approving the compromise plan were 15 Democrats and one Republican. Gearhart of California, Nine Republicans were in opposition.

The Republicans issued a statement saying "the mountain has labored and brought forth a mouse," and "it is obvious that the house will have to take the matter into its own hands if taxpayers are to be made current."
