NEW SHOWS ON DISPLAY AT LOCAL ART CENTER
(By Lucy Cherry Crisp)

Two new shows are on display at the Community Art Center gallery this week and next, following the close of the American Federation of Arts show, "The American Scene."

First is a collection of prints of paintings by Grant Wood, Iowa, painter whose death last year, in his early fifties, seemed to many a major tragedy in the world of American art. The collection now on display has been loaned the gallery by Miss Kate Lewis of ECTC, and includes some of Grant's most widely discussed paintings, in addition to several less well known.

Spivey-Williams.
Miss Thelma Virginia Williams became the bride of Staff Sergeant Thomas Kenneth Spivey on Friday, June 4, at 5:30 in the Pentecostal Holiness Church of Greenville. Rev. James Grier Spivey, father of the groom and pastor of the church, officiated, using the ring ceremony.

The vows were spoken before a background of ferns and standards of white larkspur and bristol fany interspersed with seven branched candelabra holding lighted cathedral tapers.

Prior to the ceremony, Jesse Noah Williams, Jr., cousin of the bride, rendered a program of nuptial music. Mr. John W. Shropshire sang "The Sweetest Story Ever Told" and "I Love You Truly." The wedding march from Lohengrin was used as a professional and Mendelssohn's march for the recessional. "Ave Maria" was played in muted tones during the ceremony.

The bride entered the church with her brother, James Moody Williams of Petersburg, Va., who gave her in marriage. They were met at the altar by the bridegroom, who was attended by Rudolph Shepherd of Washington, N. C. as best man.

The bride's wedding gown of Chantilly lace and net was made with a lace bolice finished with a sweetheart yoke of net outlined with orange blossoms, and long sleeves ending in points over the hands. Her full skirt of net with inserts of lace paneling ended in a train to the end of which the veil of net and Chantilly lace extended from a Juliet cap caught in the back with orange blossoms. A single string of pearls was her only ornament. She carried a bouquet of bride's roses.

She was attended by her sister, Mrs. Charles Whitley Brown, as dame of honor, and Miss Isla Mae Spivey, sister of the groom, as maid of honor. The dame of honor wore a floor-length dress of petal rose with a lace torso and carried a bouquet of pink roses tied with blue satin ribbon. The maid of honor wore a gown of blue marquisette with a long lace bodice and a full skirt. Her bouquet was pink roses tied with pink satin ribbon.

The ushers were Harold and Howard Williams, twin brothers of the bride.

The bride's mother wore a gown of navy crepe with a lace yoke and white accessories. Her corsage was red roses tied with white ribbon.

The bridegroom's mother was dressed in black with corresponding accessories. She wore a corsage of

"Tell Them It's the War of Every American"

Chapter 9

TOWARD the end of the first week there was a brief lull in air attacks. We thought maybe the Japs were concentrating on Hong Kong, intending to knock it out before tackling Manila; but later we learned that they had been moving their planes from Formosa down to bases on northern Luzon, at Aparri and other points.

We kept asking each other, "Why doesn't our Air Force knock them out?" Ever after hearing the stories of Clark Field, I still thought we had planes at other fields—and so did our soldiers.

When they got their bases set up the Japs came back to Manila. They came almost every day, usually at noon when the sun was directly overhead and their targets were unshaded. Their bombing was erratic. Sometimes they hit their targets on the nose as they did at Cavite. Other times they would miss by a mile or a couple of miles. They concentrated on Nichols Field and Fort McKinley, which was the barracks for American troops in Manila, on Zablan Field where the midjet Philippine Air Force was based, and on the dock area. They didn't waste bombs on hospitals, churches, or schools.

ONE day at Nichols Field we were stopped at the gate and then escorted around by a sweat-soaked sergeant of the Air Corps. From the city it had looked as if Nichols was badly hit, but the flames and smoke were from a single gasoline truck and from an officer's home and a corner of the barracks.

The sergeant was still shaking from the excitement of battle. He'd been firing a 30-caliber machine gun at the enemy planes.

"For Christ's sake," he said, "the people back home to send us some anti-aircraft guns and some airplanes that'll fight those Jap fighters and climb high enough to knock down those bombers. All we can do now is sit here and take it and it's a hell of a lousy situation. Tell them this isn't our war—it's the war of every American."

At his insistence, I took out my notebook and wrote "Try to impress Roosevelt and Washington that we must have planes here!" The book by that time, had many such notations.

Another day Russell Brines and I reached Zablan Field as the dust from the bombs was still settling. Under the trees dividing the field from the Wack Wack golf course we met Colonel Backus, American commander of the Philippine forces, and a group of his officers. One of them was Captain Villamor.

The colonel said only two men had been killed in the raid. "Both of them failed to duck, or get down in a foxhole, and were cut to pieces."

He showed us a fragment of the Jap bombs, a wickedly jagged, spinning piece of the casing, about a foot long.

"When the bombs burst, they throw out the casing fragments like whirling saws that cut to pieces any man they hit."

ONE old B-10, out in front of the hangars, was still on fire, and the pilots were laughing about it. It had been wrecked in a landing a month before the war, but the Japanese pilots developed it.

I asked, "How big is the Philippine Air Force?"

"There it is," was the reply. "Those four old P-26's scattered around the field. We have one other like it, and a couple of biplanes. One of them is going to take General George Brett to Mindanao."

Later General Brett's pilot took off from a highway in the Beechcraft and landed safely in Mindanao. Then the general got a bomb to the Netherlands East Indies where he served as Air Force commander before going to Australia.

The Americans in Manila were beginning to sense that something was wrong. The USAFFE communiqués were worded optimistically, but not much fighting seemed to be going on. If the Asiatic Fleet was in action, we didn't know it, and the Army didn't seem to be doing anything to chase the Japs out of their air bases on Luzon.

In the Manila Hotel there were still nightly dances in the blacked-out, air-conditioned dining room. Lunch was served in the big outdoor restaurant right off the water front and the more carefree of the guests could sit there, eating and drinking, and watch the bombs falling around Pier 7, only a couple of hundred yards away.

Many preferred to sit out the raid, in the small, low ceilinged, dark-paneled taproom. There was so much noise overhead that even with the bombers overhead it was difficult to hear them. Bombs falling within a quarter of a mile made only a faint whoomph inside.

TO THE Americans and English people living in the Manila Hotel the greatest annoyance was the nervous watchman assigned to enforce the blackout. If you lit a cigarette in your room a bullet from a .45 revolver or a 30-30 carbine might come whistling through the window and plunk into the ceiling. The only light in the room was a dim blue bulb in the bathroom. Even when the whole city was lighted by fires from oil tanks or buildings ignited by Jap bombs, the blackout guards at the hotel discharged their duties—and their guns—conscientiously.

The Americans in the hotel adopted the anti-aircraft men of the 200th New Mexico National Guard. They would load their arms with sandwiches and soft drinks and stumble through the darkness across the Lunetta to the gun emplacements. Then they would chat for several hours with the gun crews, recalling their own experiences in the last war and passing around cigarettes and listening while the youngsters told stories of their own homes. When the boys from the guns weren't busy firing at Jap planes they would come into the hotel to get their hair cut or have a coke or a sandwich.

ONE evening, a week after the war had started, we sat around a table in the hotel and talked things over. Most of them thought the Japs would go for Singapore and not attempt a major invasion of the Philippines. They were optimists.

The General Motors man had the best news of all. "This is continental but it comes from a high source. There are two American aircraft carriers off Corregidor. They'll be here within a few days."

C. C. "Chappie" Chapman of Mackay Radio had heard that one too. He bet drinks for the crowd that the reports were true.

I said, "Look, you fellows. This may be fifth column stuff. But here's the way I've got it figured out and I've been talking to everybody in town. You all heard Savre's frantic appeal for help to-day in which he said 'Time is of the essence.' Pearl Harbor has stunned us. Wake Island is the tip-off. We have plans that run out as early from Midway to Wake to give those Marines a hand. Our ships could have reached there by now to fight off those Japs."

"But we're back on our heels, now. Most of our admirals are punch drunk. We have lost our old, steady, rock-bottom. It's S. I. S. is going to play this thing slow and cautiously and take no chances. This means they are going to let us go out here."

CHAPPIE laughed at me. He was a fountain of rumors and optimistic reports in those days. "The Lexington is off the coast," he said. "We are getting planes tomorrow."

After I saw MacArthur for the first time I tried to force myself to believe that maybe, after all, the Lexington was on the way. I hadn't seen him before because I was constantly on the move getting first-hand stories of the bombing and he didn't have time to attend the press meetings.

MacArthur didn't speak. He just walked with long strides through the room at No. 1 Victoria where we were waiting for the press communiqué, and up the stairs to his office.

He nodded confidently to us on the way past. His gold-braided cap was tilted jauntily. His shoulders were back. He was smoking a cigarette in a long holder, and swinging a cane.

He looked so young that I nearly asked, "Is that MacArthur or his chief of staff, General Sutherland?"

Then I saw the four silver stars gleaming on the shoulder of his neatly pressed shirt.

He looked completely sure of himself. He looked like a man who wouldn't lose.

SCARCITY OF FOOD IN '43

Agriculture Department Concerned About Shortages

Washington, June 3.—(AP)—Unless things look up, be ready to change your diet somewhat or pull in your belt, come 1944.

The Agriculture Department is concerned about the situation in some foods.

Its bureau of economics in a review, said today there are enough rationed foods on hand, together with expected production, to maintain present eating levels for the remainder of 1943. But here's the rub—unrationed foods are not too plentiful and the anticipated supplies for the fall months are not too favorable. That goes for eggs, cereals, fruits and vegetables.

Vegetable output is running about 13 per cent below last year. Early freezes have cut crops of apricots, cherries, peaches, plums and prunes materially below 1942. The peach crop in southern states may be cut to half its normal size.

Supplies of eggs in the fall and winter "will be considerably below current levels," the report said.

Livestock may be affected adversely. Unless there are extraordinary grain yields, the present level of production cannot be maintained beyond 1943, it was said.

The potato supply for the year was calculated at 125 pounds per capita, a total crop of about 400,000,000 bushels. The bureau said the expected winter crop would not be big enough to permit a rate of consumption as high as the first quarter of this year.

Butter and cheese stocks are plentiful for this year, however.

Winter "will be considerably below current levels," the report said.

and work places checked, and given some good advice. Some of the men were held in custody. One who said a shipyard had given him a two-week vacation was among them.

"These men on war time or essential jobs are going to work regularly, join the armed forces or go to jail," Solicitor Eli Bloom of City Recorder's Court stated.

Greenville police are responding to urgent calls from Washington for regular and full time work by everybody on essential jobs. It has been reported to authorities that hundreds of men—white and Negro—in Pitt County and in Greenville who work on war time projects and "make more money in a day than they ever made in a week," work a few days, get in some Saturday and Sunday overtime for double price, and then spend the balance of the week loafing.

It is not unusual to hear some man—white or colored—say he made $30 wages in two days. Police here say the appearance of anybody loafing on the streets or elsewhere indicates that they are not helping to win the war. "They are going to work regularly or take the consequences," one official stated.

Mayor Bruce Sugg, Police Chief George Clark, Judge J. W. H. Roberts and Solicitor Eli Bloom of City Recorder's Court and Bob Pease, manager of the local office of the U. S. Employment Office are cooperating in this work.

The authorities request that any person who knows of a worker who wilfully loses a day or more from war time or other essential work report the names of these persons to the police. "The police will do the rest" and not call on informers as witnesses.

The rest-pause that refreshes

Welcome in peace... more welcome in war work

WAR plant managers will tell you that anything that contributes to contented workers makes better workers. In plant after plant it has been found that a rest-pause breaks monotony, lessens tiredness and tension.

When you add refreshment to a rest-pause, you not only have a pause that rests, but refreshes, too. A moment for ice-cold Coca-Cola makes a rest-pause take on more meaning... promoting contentment that leads to more work and better work. Yes, contentment comes when you connect with a Coke.

Close work brings the need to pause. Ice-cold Coca-Cola brings tingling refreshment to make any pause the pause that refreshes.

The best is always the better buy!

Letters from plant managers from coast to coast emphasize that the little moment for ice-cold Coca-Cola means a lot to workers in war plants. It's a refreshing moment on the sunny side of things... a way to turn to refreshment without turning from work.

Joe Norman's Cat Versatile Feline

BY CHESTER WALSH

Henrietta is providing rations for her offspring without the aid of ration tickets and the family was faring well today. She is a cat of the Funder's Store at Fourth and Evans streets. "The feline has rat and mice poison beaten a mile," said Joe Norman, manager of the store this morning about 7 o'clock when Henrietta was heading for the store from the direction of Blount-Harvey's with a round mouse-trap and a mouse in each one of the five holes. She was foraging for a new litter of kittens.

Norman's cat recently conquered a rat at the rear of the store that weighed five pounds, seven ounces. In a skirmish that lasted half an hour in the presence of a group of early morning risers, with a number of bets being placed on the outcome of the combat, Henrietta rose like a bronco until the rodent was so tired he simply turned over on his back and welcomed death.

To Hold Inquest In Fatal Shooting

Norristown, Pa., June 3.—(AP)—An inquest into the death of Lewis Hutchinson, Jr., 11, will be held here Tuesday. C. roner W. J. Rushong announced last night, as Delaware County District Attorney William B. McClenahan quoted William Donner Roosevelt, 10-year-old son of Col. Elliott Roosevelt and grandson of the President, as saying he was holding a 22 caliber rifle when it discharged, fatally wounding young Hutchinson.

McClenahan, reporting a statement he said Billy had given to State Police Sgt. Peter Reilly, quoted young Roosevelt as saying, "I went into the house to get some arrows, and Lewis was right behind me. The rifle was standing at the doorway in the closet. I picked it up with my left hand so I could reach the arrows with my right hand."

"I heard a shot. The trigger must have been moved by my thumb or wrist."

Both Rushong and McClenahan said they considered the shooting purely accidental.

Strength FOR THE DAY

By EARL L. DOUGLAS BURDEN OF A HEAVY CONSCIENCE

We read in the Bible (1 Samuel 16:14) that the Lord sent an evil spirit on King Saul which troubled him.

This statement has often perplexed Bible readers. Would God send an evil spirit upon a man to trouble him? He certainly would. He certainly did, and He certainly does to this very hour.

A person who has any conscience at all experiences considerable discomfort every time he does anything wrong. We can be pretty sure that it is the Spirit of God Himself — and not the spirit of Satan — which gives us a troubled conscience under these conditions. That idea of God which looks upon man always as the Giver of pleasures and pleasures finds no justification in the Bible. The Lord is indeed full of mercy and loving kindness, but the very fact that He is, causes Him to be extremely severe in His treatment of erring men; not for the purpose of punishing them but for the purpose of turning them from their evil. God sent the spirit of discontent and misery on Saul not to punish him but to make his wickedness so apparent to him that he would see it in all its hideousness and turn from it.

The next time you have a conscience, think about it as one of heaven's best gifts. God has sent a spirit of heaviness and distress upon you, not that He might repay you for your evil, but that He might redeem you from it.

BENEDICT ARNOLD WAS A SAINT COMPARED WITH JOHN L. LEWIS

(From Oklahoma City Daily Oklahoman)

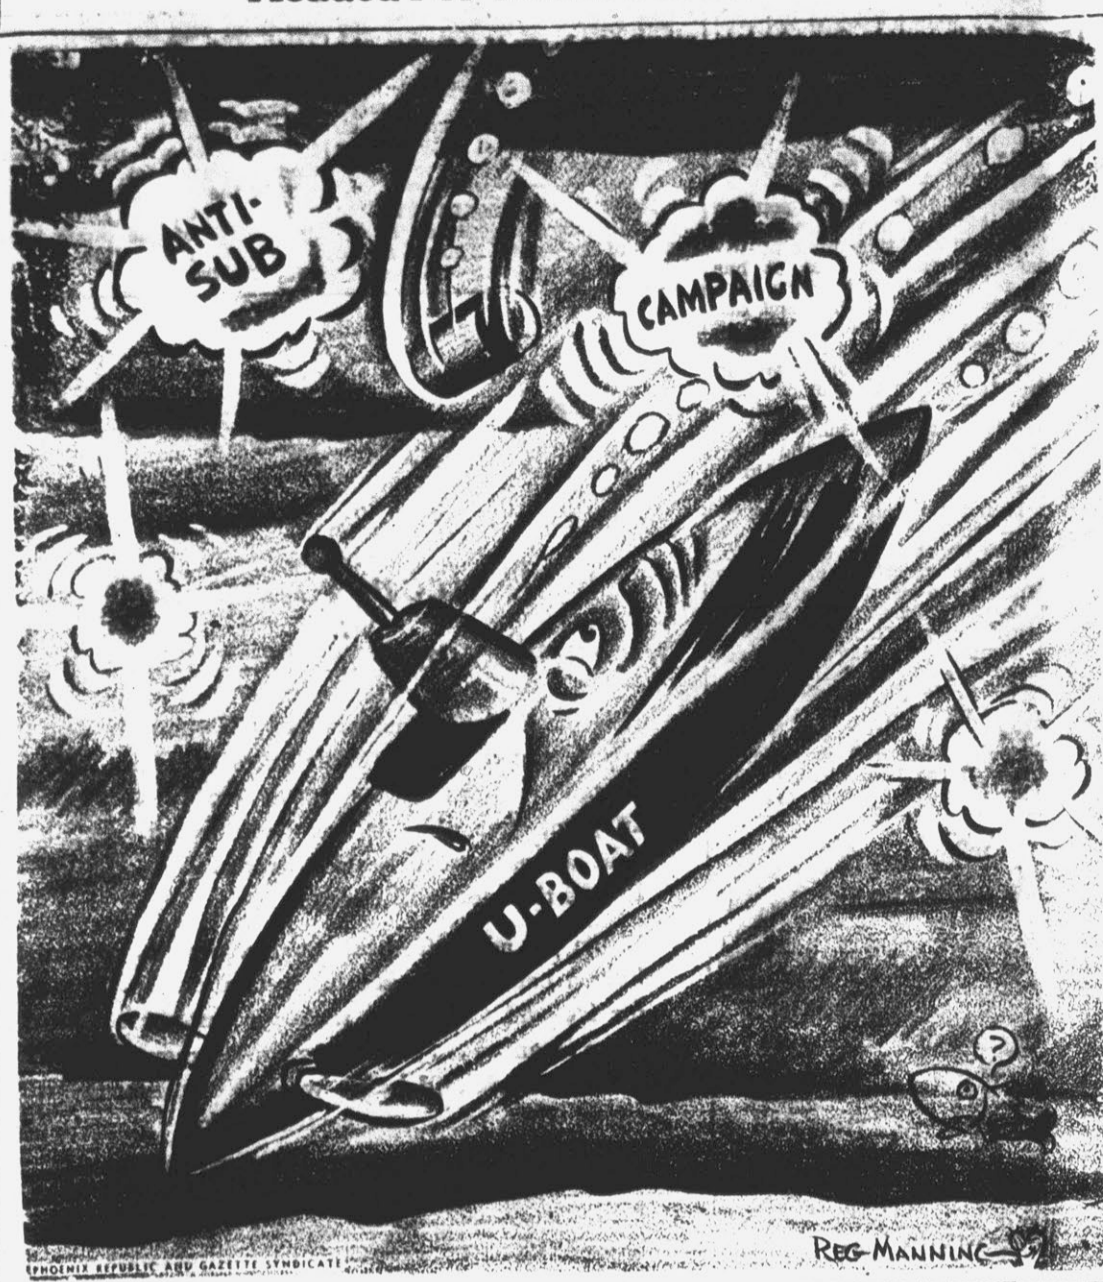

No traitor in American history has ever done America so much harm as John L. Lewis. John L. Lewis is now more powerful than the President of the United States. He can prevent 500,000 miners from working and the President of the United States cannot compel them to go back to work.

Unless Congress enacts new laws immediately, the President can and will be defied indefinitely. Labor legislation now pending in Congress, known as the Smith-Connally bill, even if it were a law, would not start miners to digging coal. It provides for arrest and imprisonment and fines for labor leaders calling strikes, only in such industries as have already been taken over by the government.

It might take two years to get John L. Lewis behind the bars, under the provision of such a law, with trials dragging through lower and higher courts.

This nation is at war and it is a time when every hour counts. The production of coal cannot be delayed for days, weeks and months. The drafting of coal miners into the regular army would accomplish nothing. Their local boards in many mining communities would not draft union miners. If drafted, they could be made to drill or fight but not necessarily to work in coal mines. Notwithstanding this, there is a remedy.

Congress can pass legislation authorizing the President, as commander in chief of the army, to designate the workers in any industry as an industrial army and place all such workers under command of regular army officers. These officers would see that the miners work the mines instead of drilling on parade grounds.

John L. Lewis' most potent weapon is the tens of millions of dollars of which he holds absolute control and with which he can pay strike benefits to his idle miners.

Strikers in essential war industries are deadly domestic enemies of the United States. It is even more essential to defeat them than to defeat foreign enemies. Congress should immediately provide for the appointment of a custodian of domestic enemy property who shall seize all the funds of every union, local and national, the moment a strike occurs.

If the funds of John L.

Lewis and the miners union are frozen in the banks and placed in the custody of a custodian of domestic enemy property, there will be no funds with which to continue the strike. If the miners union is drafted bodily into an industrial army, John L. Lewis and every other miner will immediately be subject to military discipline and if a guard house will not take care of John L. Lewis, a firing squad will.

Abraham Lincoln said this nation could not survive half slave and half free. If he were alive today he would say this nation cannot survive half controlled by government and half controlled by labor leaders defiant of government.

John L. Lewis has demonstrated that he can defy the government of the United States indefinitely and with impunity. Fifteen months ago the people of this country rose up and demanded of Congress that they pass laws which would absolutely prevent the humiliating and disastrous situation which now faces our armies, our navies and our allied governments.

Our cowardly Congress refused to pass such laws and accepted the pledged word of irresponsible labor leaders that there would be no more strikes in war industries. Since that time hundreds and hundreds of strikes have occurred and millions of hours of work in the production of arms and munitions have been lost. Thousands of American boys have died on foreign battlefields or on the high seas because of lack of some of the airplanes, guns, ammunition and equipment which were not produced in time because of the millions of hours of lost work.

Thousands more American boys are going to die unnecessarily unless Congress passes the drastic laws which the American people demand.

WASHINGTON IN WARTIME

By JACK STINNEY

Washington — Critics of our failure to concentrate on the Pacific are going to have to bide their time for a short while at least.

Prime Minister Winston Churchill has said that an offensive in the Pacific, backed by all the United Nations, is imminent. However, Army strategists are exchanging knowing winks. They are saying that President Roosevelt has again maneuvered some highly respected person "to take the heat off."

They argue that the heat definitely was on to concentrate our energies on the Pacific — even in spite of victories in North Africa. Madame Chiang Kai-shek had just visited Washington and made a trans-continental tour. Her appeal could not be ignored.

The President knew that Churchill was coming over long before any one else had dreamed of it. Then he jumped Sen. A. B. "Happy" Chandler of Kentucky with a third-alarm attack on our neglect of the Pacific. He still was shouting when the Prime Minister arrived. The only thing Churchill could do, the strategists say, was to promise an immediate offensive in the Pacific.

Whether there is any truth in that diagnosis of the situation, I can't say at this writing. Senator "Happy" Chandler has been considered pretty close to the White House and numberless observers here were surprised by his all-out attack on the war administration for failure to open a Pacific offensive first.

Some war observers, however, are unshaken by such speculations. They argue that there are only two possible ways to open an offensive against Japan now. (1) To knock the Nips out of Burma, reopen the Burma Road and start an attack from unoccupied China. (2) To get Russia to declare war on Japan, lend-lease her border with men and planes, and drive on the heart of the Setting Sun empire from nearer bases than we could

LOSER TAKE ALL By Adelaide Hazeltine

Chapter 4 When Ann went to the big dining room for lunch she was seated at a small table in the corner. She was glad for the privacy it gave her, glad too that from here she could watch the guests come in.

There was a big boomed woman whose name she learned was Mrs. Andrew Fay, and five or six others of typical health resort caliber. Then there was a large blustering man who walked with a cane and acted as though he resented every step. That would be Roscoe Newton. Her grandmother had mentioned him.

Glancing swiftly around the room, Ann counted eleven persons. Mr. Baxton was right. The house was full.

On every table sat a conspicuous decanter of mineral water labeled, "Drink to health from Terrence Springs." Ann poured a second glassful and looked up to see Mr. Baxton and Jerry entering.

They were placed at a table at the far side of the room but Jerry's glance sought her and for a moment he hesitated as if considering coming to speak to her. But she turned away, gazed out the window while her foolish heart thudded faster.

She was still staring in the other direction when someone slipped into the opposite chair and she turned quickly to find Bert Renfrow smiling across at her.

"Hello," he said genially, his dark eyes probing hers. Admiring her, too. "Sarah told me you were here." "Yes, I came last night." She leaned toward him. "I want to talk to you, Bert. About Terrence House. They haven't been able to find my grandmother's will."

"I understand she didn't leave one."

"But she did, Gibbs witnessed it. She left Terrence House to me!" "She did?" Surprise covered his round olive-skinned face. His closely cropped mustache drew to a straight, speculative line. "How sure is Gibbs of this?"

"He remembers all the details. He and a Miss Warbuck witnessed it. Miss Warbuck is dead but Gibbs can swear to it. He says it was about three years ago."

"Well, now," Bert puckered his mouth thoughtfully. "You know Gibbs is old, Ann. His memory's not what it could be." His long fingers drummed on the table.

"I believe him, Bert. I—I thought maybe you'd help me find it."

"Sure, sure." Suddenly he lowered his voice. "By the way, won't you like to get away tomorrow night. We might drive some place for dinner, right?"

"Right!" She smiled and tried to match his own careless manner. She would be glad to get away. Already the atmosphere of Terrence House was beginning to depress her.

The encounter with Mrs. Charles Moran immediately after lunch did nothing to cheer her. The woman, one of Grand Gussie's close friends, tackled her in the reception hall.

"Ann! It's so nice to see you, child."

"Thank you, I came as soon as I could."

"I knew you would. We're all so glad you're going to carry on here just as your dear grandmother did. Everybody in Radville grieves for poor Mrs. Terrence. She was so good to all of us. Why we would never have had a hospital or anything without her. I'm president of the hospital board this year, you know, and only yesterday we voted to change its name to the Augusta Terrence memorial."

"I'm sure it would please my grandmother."

"And when we have the dedication ceremony," the woman continued, "we want you to be our honor guest and sit on the speaker's platform."

Then she sailed out the front door under full steam.

Ann spent the afternoon sitting on a wide bench and wondering about the grounds. But her mind was busy with imagining where Grand Gussie might have put her will.

It was like her to hide it. She loved to hide her possessions in out of the way places. Often hid them, Ann thought, for the pure joy of finding them again herself. She had had a well safe put in her bedroom. But she never used it. "Too obvious," she fretted once when Ann mentioned it. "Burglars look for safes."

So she would have put the will in one of her innumerable and unpredictable hide-outs.

At last Ann decided the only way to find it was to get permission from a couple of years of fighting up from the south.

If the second could happen, the Pacific situation might be as clearly defined as the European. But Russia has her hands full with Germany. To open another front, even with all our lend-lease aid and the manpower that we could ship over the few trans-Siberian railroads, at a two-front war, following the emulating battles against the Nazis, might collapse before the Allies could get their aid over those endless miles.

As for No. 1, we can't even make headway in Burma until the monsoon season is over.

The best guess here is that for some months we will keep our "offensive-defensive" against Japan in the Pacific, but with much greater airpower and seapower — not because of any change in strategy, but because our production of planes and ships will permit it. In the meantime, our moves to knock Germany out of the war will progress "as planned."

Mr. Churchill did take any "heat off" there was no harm done. It's hard to find any important military or naval strategist who doesn't agree that the global war is being fought about the only way possible.

from Mr. Baxton to search the suite herself.

She was near the back porch and going up the steps to the door when she heard a frantic fluttering of wings. She turned to see a gilt cage and in it Mattie dashing herself against the wires.

"So there you are," Ann said as she went to the cage and stuck a friendly finger up to be pecked. Then noticing the bird had neither seed nor water, she added, "What are they trying to do? Keep you in a concentration camp?"

At Grand Gussie's suite Ann found the door ajar. She pushed it open, drew back. There was no one at the desk but a tall figure in uniform stood at the window. When he recognized Ann, he smiled.

"Come in."

"No, I—I was looking for Mr. Baxton," she stammered, finding it difficult to meet the level, intent gaze of Jerry Lane.

"Don't go," he urged. "I've been wanting to talk to you. Won't you sit down?" He drew a chair for her. "She must not be fooled by her easy smiling ways. Color felt warm in her cheeks as she let her anger rise. "I'm afraid I have nothing to say to you."

"But—if you would let me explain?"

"Explain what? The polite way for a gentleman to commit grand larceny?"

"But listen. Surely you know I hadn't the faintest idea—"

"How to do it?" she cut in. "But you were smart enough to hire a lawyer who did?"

She turned and fled from the room, ashamed that she had let him see how upset she was. Ashamed, too, that she had so little control over her stupid, pounding heart.

She ought to hate him. She did hate him. She hoped!

President . . .

(Continued from Page One) William N. Porter, chief of the chemical warfare service, said last May that if the enemy starts using war gases "we have plenty to give back and they'll probably get more than they give out."

It is known, Porter said, that Germany and Japan have large amounts of gases ready which are designed to attack lungs and others intended to blister and burn the skin. He added that American arsenals "can produce the same gases in almost unlimited quantities if the need arises and, moreover, our methods of protecting our own troops against enemy gases have kept pace with our production of these chemical weapons for offensive purposes."

Argentina To . . .

(Continued from Page One) The government declared earlier it would maintain neutrality "for the present" and that it sustains the principle of absolute autonomy of states to set up their own standards of government."

Montevideo dispatches said that although the new Argentine regime has made no mention of congress, which was dissolved by decree shortly after the coup, there were indications "the government was looking forward to holding elections, possibly in the not too distant future, and that Ramirez himself was likely to be a candidate."

The Montevideo sources also shed further light on the sudden resignation of the provisional government of Gen. Arturo Rawson, leader of the revolution. His one-day government resigned in favor of Ramirez, these sources said, because Rawson favored an immediate rupture with the Axis but was opposed by his collaborators.

Ramirez was reported to have successfully organized his government through a middle course, approving immediate measures to re-establish solidarity but leaving the question of breaking relations, which would have involved a test of government strength, for later consideration.

BALL MEN STAGE HUGE BOND EVENT

Ring Up Total Of $124,000,000 In Sales Yesterday At Yankee Stadium

By SID FEDER
New York, June 9.—(AP)—There's obviously a lot of the elephant in the sports fan in general and the baseball fan in particular, even when it hits him where he feels it most—in the B. R.

The B. R., naturally, is the bankroll, and the rubber band was peeled all the way off it yesterday as the faithful of all shapes and sizes bid off their favorite New York and Brooklyn baseball players to the tune of $124,000,000 in the biggest one-day bond sale super-duper the Treasury Department ever witnessed. Buyers bid millions as if they were two-bit pieces for the privilege of sponsoring various players the rest of the season.

It was just another way of showing that Gus never forgets. He showed it one day last summer when he and 69,136 of his family flocked to Yankee Stadium to see old Babe Ruth and ancient Walter Johnson strut what was left of their stuff.

Yesterday, 1,500 of the boys were on hand for the bond-selling stunt in which the successful bidder not only put cash on the line for the original "investment," but pledged "upkeep" in bonds for his hero's performance the rest of the season.

And up on the block, getting the most attention as "auctioneer" Jimmy Walker worked, were the three top guys—King Carl Hubbell, Belting Bill Dickey and Dixie the Dasher Walker.

They were the "favorites" of their respective teams. Dixie, the "people's choice" in Brooklyn in spite of years of the front office "brush-off," drew the top bid of the day—$11,250,000—from the Brooklyn club, a social organization, and this was strictly a "steal." For an industrial organization which had been against the Brooklyn club decided it was a cricket to fight out with a social organization and so stopped raising the ante, although one of its representatives explained later it had been prepared to go to $15,000,000 to get Dixie.

And Hubbell "went" for $3,000,000 after the representative of the Esso Marketers, which had already over-subscribed its scheduled allotment, "stalled" the bidding for a few minutes to call his home office and get an "okay" to go even higher for old King Carl.

And, about the neatest gesture of all was a bid for $2,000,000 by a group who called themselves the "Bronx Syndicate," in order to get get Dickey. It turned out they were just neighbors of Yankee Stadium.

All told, 37 players were "bin in"—a dozen each from the Yanks and Giants and 13 from the Bums (Pat Freddy Fitzsimmons was the extra). For each single a player makes the rest of the season, his sponsor agreed to buy a $2,500 bond; for each double a $5,000; for each triple $7,500, and for a homer $10,000. If he's a pitcher, a win calls for $35,000 subscription and a shut-out for $50,000.

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, June 9.—(AP)—Don't know who rounded up the bidders for that War Bond auction of baseball players yesterday, but there was so much Brooklyn money in the place that the buyers from across the river were even bidding for Giants before the finish. . . . When they put the first bunch of Horace Stoneham's hired hands on the block, though, a gent arose and solemnly announced, "The Brooklyn Junior Chamber of Commerce bids 25 cents for the entire Giant team." . . . INDIANS HAVE SMALL CHANCE

Home Games, However May Provide Needed Pep For Team

By JUDSON BAILEY

(Associated Press Sports Writer)
One of the questions to be taken up for settlement as the major leagues swing back into action today is whether the Cleveland Indians can become contenders in the American League again now that they are back on their own reservation.

The Indians never have been much of a threat while traveling and their recent invasion of the east was particularly disastrous. They had moved into first place on May 23 to climax a successful home stand and then they proceeded to lose 11 out of 16 games on the

ARMY NEEDS NEW DOCTORS

Eighty Per Cent Of Graduates Going to Armed Forces

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Service Editor

Chicago, June 9—Only 20 per cent of the medical graduates each year can now be spared for care of civilians. The others will go into the military medical corps as long as the war lasts.

This prospect was sketched to the House of Delegates of the American Medical Association here last night by Dr. James E. Paullin, of Atlanta, the association's new president.

The yearly total of new civilian physicians he estimated at about 1,200. To this he added about 600 who are being retired each year from military service. Against this the doctors, who are left, mostly men over 45, are dying at the rate of 2,500 a year.

This leaves a deficit of about 700 a year. To meet this, and the big shortage due to nearly half the active doctors already in military service, Dr. Paullin said plans should be made now for better use of the older physicians who have not been very active in medical practice.

It is the hope of organized medicine to have one doctor for each 1,500 persons in the United States. This compares with an average of 2 to 4 per thousand in many areas, and is much better than some rural communities which have seldom or never had more than one doctor for 2,500 to 3,000 persons.

The rapid expansion of war industries has created regional shortages, Dr. Paullin said, which now require about 300 additional doctors. The only way to get them is by relocation, a difficult problem, since it requires a doctor to leave his home and everything he has built up in practice, to start over again.

Dr. Paullin said however that this need not be met voluntarily. He pointed out that already nearly 1,000 physicians have relocated in the expanded war areas.

Official Visit
Miami, Fla., June 9—(AP)—President Higinio Morino of Paraguay left Miami by plane today for Washington, "taking with me a warm salutation and admiration from my people to President Roosevelt."

The chief executive of the South American Republic was to be greeted at the capital late today by President Roosevelt's guest at a dinner at the White House tonight.

Rent Profits Up
Washington, June 9—(AP)—Replying to real estate groups who have been petitioning for alterations in rent control, the Office of Price Administration said today that its surveys show that net operating income from rental properties has increased 9 to 17 per cent since rent control was instituted.

Immigration Change
Washington, June 9—(AP)—A twin proposal that all immigration quotas be cut and Chinese allowed the same rights of entry to the United States as other nationalities, was advanced in congress today in an effort to compromise divergent opinions over the Chinese exclusion laws.

American Japs Not Loyal
Los Angeles, June 9—(AP)—Ralph M. Gelvin, associate director of Poston, Ariz., relocation center, says 430 American-born Japanese at the camp have refused to repudiate their loyalty to the Emperor of Japan or swear allegiance to the United States.

Testifying before the Dies Congressional Sub-committee, Gelvin said yesterday that the refusals were written on questionnaires given to all the center's evacuees over 17 years of age.

Chinese Recapture Kungan

Chinese troops (arrows) penetrated to the outskirts of Ichang and recaptured Kungan in a mounting offensive that had cleared most of the area north of Lake Tungsing to the Yangtze river, Chungking announced at week's end (June 5). About 4,000 Japanese troops were reported trapped at Tsingshih.

PREDICT DROP IN FOOD PRICES

Lower Prices And Bigger Subsidies In Prospect

Washington, June 9—(AP)—Congressional critics of a rollback in food prices expressed belief today that a general price decrease for most foods is in prospect with the completion probably of more subsidy payments to compensate for lowered returns.

This opinion was strengthened, they said, by disclosure before a senate investigating committee that the Office of Price Administration already is planning to apply the rollback to fresh vegetables as well as to butter, meats and coffee.

While the new order is not expected to extend subsidy payments to vegetable producers or processors, some opponents predicted that an estimated $450,000,000 to be paid out for the 10 per cent cut in butter and meat prices would be "a drop in the bucket" compared with subsidies which they said would be demanded for decreases in prices of other foods.

Senator Maloney (D-Conn.) declared that OPA had established a precedent in granting subsidy payments for butter and meat price cutbacks and that vegetable growers could be expected to demand similar treatment.

Senator Taft (R-Ohio) and other foes maintained that the savings to the consumer by the rollback in prices would be more than offset by taxations to pay the subsidies. The bill would be greater, they contended because of the added costs for interest and administrative expense.

Praise for the rollback-subsidy directive was voiced by witnesses representing affiliates of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, who called it a sign that OPA is "at last beginning to show its muscles."

The high command said the annihilation of enemy forces south of Sungtze, another Yangtze port between Shasi and Ichang, was expected soon.

The Chinese were said to be attacking the important Japanese-held city of Yingshan, 75 miles northwest of Hankow, and to have inflicted other losses on the enemy south of Sinyang.

A new Japanese thrust south fromates.

Italian Bases ...

Lampedusa, 70 miles east of Tunisia, on Sunday night and "suffered no damage or casualties." Two members of a landing party failed to return.

Axis reports asserted yesterday that about five companies of British troops staged a commando raid on Lampedusa on Monday night and were beaten off.

While the world awaited fulfillment of Prime Minister Churchill's frank warning to Adolf Hitler that "ambitious operations of peculiar complexity and hazard on a large scale are approaching," Allied commandos announced these blows over a 48-hour period:

Pantelleria—For the sixth time in little more than a week, Allied cruisers and destroyers shelled the "Italian Gibraltar" yesterday, achieving satisfactory results without suffering either casualties or damage.

Bombers from the African command also pounded the volcanic Isle yesterday, marking the 17th successive day of aerial attack there, and Allied night raiders hit the outpost Monday night.

Sicily—Bombers from the Middle East heavily punished the ferry terminus and rail sheds at Messina, across a narrow strait from the toe of Italy, and left big fires raging near the city's main railway station.

Sardinia—Axis bases in southern Sardinia again felt the scourge of bombs from Lieut. Gen. Carl A. Spaatz' northwest African air force.

Greece—Striking into the European mainland in Greece, Allied planes blasted a supply train near Kyparissia, on the west coast of the Peloponnese, and rained along both the Grecian west and east coasts to hammer enemy shipping.

The Italian garrison's reported refusal to surrender at Pantelleria indicated that Premier Mussolini's high command was determined to make it serve as an example to the invasion-jittery Italian people, regardless of the terrible punishment inflicted on the island by day and night.

Allied pilots said Italian garrison troops must be suffering acute shock from the weight of explosives rained on the Isle almost without pause for more than two weeks.

Knox Says ...

"The people of this country do not intend to scrap again the fleet that we are building. You can be sure, there is going to be work for every one of you who looks on the navy as a career—an opportunity, indeed, for you to make a contribution of great and lasting value to your country and your world."

Recalling he had spoken here in 1941 shortly after returning from an inspection trip to Pearl Harbor when "I was much worried," Knox told the largest graduating class in academy history he could speak more confidently today.

"Since last I stood before you, I have seen the miracle of American production step up to full speed ahead," he said. "I have witnessed the revival of the old American 'don't tread on me' spirit—as compelling, as devastating as it was when our forefathers coined the phrase."

Knox, asserting that U. S. industry was turning out the best combat planes in the world, paid tribute to the growing importance of air power.

"As other generations have won and saved the freedom of the seas you must win and save the freedom of the air as well," he told graduates.

broadcasts, mentioned fighting there.)

Russian bombers striking at a German airport in an unspecified area destroyed 20 Nazi craft on the ground and damaged eight others, dispatches said.

Describing German attempts to send supplies to their besieged garrison at Novorossisk on the Black Sea, the Russians said they sank three barges carrying supplies and troops.

For the first time in weeks, Russian dispatches reported the appearance of Italian planes over the front. Five Italian fighters were shot down near Leningrad, they said.

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned, convicted of being drunk and disorderly and of public nuisance on November 23, 1942, in the Municipal Recorder's Court of the City of Greenville, N. C., and sentenced to eighteen months in jail to be held under supervision of the North Carolina Prison for Women, will make application to the Commissioner of Paroles and the Governor of North Carolina for a parole for the remainder of said sentence.

All persons who desire to oppose said parole are invited to forward their protests to the Commissioner of Paroles, Raleigh, N. C., without delay.
