Ruhr War Industries Again Targets Of British Bombs

RAF Rounds Off Week Of Heavy Destruction Over Area; Last Night's Raid Followed Heavy Attack By U. S. Bombers Yesterday; 30 Planes Lost

By LYNN HEINZLERING London, June 26.—(AP) A heavy force of British bombers spread new destruction last night in the German Ruhr, hitting targets in Bochum and Gelsenkirchen, and one military observer declared that neutralizing of this great industrial valley was nearing completion.

This observer, who cannot be identified by name, estimated that nearly 30,000 tons of bombs, many of them block-busters, had been cast upon this compact Nazi industrial region since the massive bombing experiment started three and a half months ago.

The normal industrial haze over the Ruhr now is reported thinned out and is said, in fact, to have actually disappeared in some places. During the three and one-half month period, more than 500 buildings have been lost, this source said, and some 3,000 men have been killed or captured.

In last night's attack coal mining and steel plants were among the objectives. Thirty of the RAF's big aircraft were listed as missing in the night's activities.

The British bombers, following by only a few hours the United States heavy bombers which attacked undisclosed targets yesterday in Germany, encountered the same cloud formations of the Americans and it was reported that results could not be observed accurately.

However, the Air Ministry communique reported that large fires were started in Bochum and Gelsenkirchen.

Strong new defensive squadrons which the Germans have thrown into the battle of the Ruhr were out in force the British announced, and there were many air battles. Two enemy planes were reported destroyed.

Yesterday's fighting over northwest Germany on the American front was described by an American Air Force spokesman as "a prolonged battle of the clouds" and it was said that weather conditions were so unfavorable that some of the bombers selected their targets as best they could on the return journey.

Calls Attention To City Ordinance

In connection with the plan of the Mayor and Health Officer looking to a cleaner and healthier city, the following suggestion is made to the business houses.

It has been observed that certain business houses sweep their trash, paper, etc., either in the street or in the alley. This practice is in violation of the City Ordinance.

The City Sanitarian, J. T. Welch, is being requested to check the business houses on this point of sanitation.

REDS ATTACK FINNISH LINE

Two Nazi Thrusts On Central Front Beaten Off

London, June 26.—(AP)—Attacking Russian troops broke into Finnish trenches on the northern Karelian front last night and wiped out about a company of the enemy in savage bayonet and grenade fighting, the Soviet moon communique said today.

Ten dugouts and two blockhouses were blown up and mortar batteries and an ammunition dump were destroyed, the Russians said in the communique which was broadcast from Moscow and recorded by the Soviet Monitor here.

Two German stabs, a reconnoitering attempt in the Sevsk area southwest of Orel, and south of Balakleva where they attempted to cross the Donets river, were beaten off with enemy losses, the war bulletin said.

Russian artillery action also was reported near Sevsk where big Soviet guns were said to have started fires at two enemy strong points.

(The German communique, broadcast from Berlin and recorded by the Associated Press, said several tank-supported Red army attacks in the Orel sector were repelled. German and Rumanian shock troops were said to have conducted successful operations at various points on the front.)

Heavy losses were suffered by the Germans in their attempted crossing of the Donets south of Balakleva and they were forced to retreat behind a smoke screen from (Continued on Page Six)

Announce Change In Retail Milk Prices

The Office of Price Administration has released an amendment to the regulation covering milk at retail by eating establishments effective whereby such establishments may sell milk at the highest price charged during March 1942 or the present wholesale price plus 2c for half pints or 3c for pints, whichever is higher.

This allowance would make the retail price on half pints of milk 6c and on pints 11c except in rare instances where an establishment had been charging a higher price since March 1942. The War Price and Ration Board on Fourth Street should be advised of any establishments that sell at prices higher than these.

Draft Dodgers Arrested By FBI

Washington, June 26.—(AP)—Arrest of 779 men on charges of violating the Selective Service law was announced today by FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover in the second report in six weeks on nationwide enforcement of the act.

The largest number of arrests, most of which occurred yesterday, was 161 in New York City, Hoover said.

SENATE DOWNS SUBSIDY PLAN

Follows House Action To Abandon Subsidy Payments

Washington, June 26.—(AP)—Drastic legislation to halt the administration's price-reducing food subsidy program and transferring all other agricultural subsidy authority to the War Food Administrator was passed by the senate today and sent back to the house.

In a series of swift defeats for administration forces which followed their setback yesterday on the strike bill, the senate followed the lead of the house in passing legislation extending the life of the Commodity Credit Corporation for two years with restrictive amendments against subsidies.

In its final action before passage of the bill, the senate adopted on a voice vote an amendment by Senator O'Mahoney (D-Wyo) which would lodge all of the food subsidy functions of the Office of Price Administration in the War Food Administrator. Chester C. Davis.

The chambers thus took a step toward establishing Davis as a food czar, a move which President Roosevelt has opposed.

Previously the senate had voted 46 to 20 to write into the bill an amendment by Senator Aiken (R-Vt) which would stop the administration's food price roll back program.

This amendment provided for continuation, for the remainder of this crop growing season, of incentive payments to encourage the production of certain vitally needed crops.

The House passed a similar bill yesterday increasing the OCC's funds $500,000,000 but with a provision outlawing any subsidies other than those to which the government already is committed.

Thus both houses were on record for abandonment of the administration's food price roll-back program. Before its adoption, however, the Clark proposal had been amended to permit the continuance of subsidies to meet higher wartime transportation costs, to encourage agricultural and mineral production and to finance the importation of strategic materials.

Completion of action by the Senate later on the bill would send the measure back to the House where it probably would be assigned to a joint conference committee to compose the differences.

The Senate's action apparently foreshadowed defeat of a compromise proposal supported by the administration to provide $500,000,000 for price reducing subsidies, without which Price Administrator Brown has said it would be impossible to continue price controls.

Administration forces, rallying around President Roosevelt's declaration that subsidies comprised the only solution to the inflation problem, went all out in an effort to save the price rollbacks on meats, butter and coffee.

Send Old Magazines To Men In Service

Charles Cobb, chief specialist in the U. S. Navy, stationed at Ocracoke island, has sent a message to Greenville and Pitt county people, requesting donations of magazines, books, etc., for the men stationed on the island and on ships off the coast.

Persons willing to cheer up the men and help provide entertainment and recreation for them are requested to send literature to "Charles Cobb, Recreation Department, Section Base, Ocracoke, N. C."

Great Possibilities In Shuttle-Bombing Plan

Washington, June 26.—(AP)—There are ominous portents for the Axis in the British experiment in round-trip shuttle bombing flights between England and North Africa.

It raises a question whether the whole weight of allied air power in England and Africa, may suddenly be concentrated to blast invasion bridgeheads through the western or southern walls of the Axis European fortress when the moment comes.

That possibility must double the strain under which the Axis high command is laboring in deploying its defensive forces to guard three fronts simultaneously. It cannot hope to match the awe-inspiring air power that could be thus massed virtually overnight. What happened to Pantelleria well could prove a mild forerunner of what might happen to any selected continental invasion bridgehead.

Littell Testifies In Oil Land Probe

Sitting beside Rep. James W. Mott (R-Ore), (left), Norman Littell, assistant attorney general, testified yesterday before the House Public Lands committee that the contract between Standard Oil Co. of California and the Navy Department, for joint operation of the Elk Hills (Calif.) petroleum reserve, "went beyond agreements involved in the Teapot Dome and Elk Hills oil scandal of the Harding administration," during a hearing in Washington.

Doubt As To Effect Of New Anti-Strike Law

Congress Takes Quick Action in Overriding President's Veto

By The Associated Press

Washington, June 26.—Congress, in a stunning reversal of President Roosevelt, put American war production today under the whip of an anti-strike law so stringent that union leaders proclaimed it a "major disaster." Republicans saw in it a blow to the administration and resentful coal miners exploded in a new revolt.

Whirlwind action on the Connally-Smith-Harness bill forced the long-awaited issue yesterday.

Anti-Climax set in today and with it came doubt and confusion on the full effects of the law, how it could be applied to the thing that inspired it—the coal walkouts—and a certain amount of fear as to the ultimate reaction at the workbenches of the "arsenal of democracy."

Attention focused on the coal fields where 250,000 miners—about half the total—had failed to return to work despite orders from John L. Lewis and his United Mine Workers ending the recent walkout, the third in seven weeks. On top of that passage of the law was followed immediately by fresh strikes by 20,000 more miners.

Mr. Roosevelt touched off a momentous day when he vetoed the anti-strike law as more likely to stir labor troubles than to settle them. Except for the coal strike, he insisted labor had kept its no-strike pledge since Pearl Harbor.

With speed unequalled in recent years, the senate and the house promptly overrode his veto to make law the measure providing fines and imprisonment for persons instigating or aiding wartime strikes in government-operated industries, and outlawing stoppages in other war plants without a permit of the workers. The law also broadens the powers of the War Labor Board.

It was the eighth time a Roosevelt veto had been overridden since 1933. With that success that presaged the result, the senate took up the veto (Continued on Page Two)

Anti Strike Bill

Washington, June 26.—(AP)—Salient provisions of the anti-strike bill passed by Congress over President Roosevelt's veto: Prohibits any strike in a government-held plant, with fines up to $5,000 and imprisonment up to one year for persons instigating or aiding such a work stoppage.

Provides for 30 days notice and a secret ballot by workers before a strike is called in any war plant.

Gives statutory authority and subpoena power to the War Labor Board.

Gives specific authority to the President to seize war facilities.

Provides for maintenance of existing terms and conditions of employment except as directed by the WLB.

Forbids wartime political contributions by labor organizations.

ing or aiding wartime strikes in government-operated industries, and outlawing stoppages in other war plants without a permit of the workers. The law also broadens the powers of the War Labor Board.

It was the sharpest congressional rebuff handed the President since the Supreme Court Reorganization bill was junked in 1937. It followed by just a week of preliminary house rebellion which saw the administration's price roll-back and subsidy program snipped down.

It was the eighth time a Roosevelt veto had been overridden since 1933. With that success that presaged the result, the senate took up the veto (Continued on Page Two)

Fortresses In Heaviest Raid On Sicily Yesterday

Talk Of Invasion Turns To Balkans

German Radio Says Allied Attack in that Area Imminent

By The Associated Press Axis invasion anxiety, while still centered chiefly on Italy and her island outposts, turned again to the Balkans today following Thursday's raid by American bombers on an airbase near Salonika, Greece, and German radio reports that the British Eighth Army is poised in Syria for action.

"There are signs that an allied attack on the Balkans is imminent," said the German-controlled Vichy radio last night in broadcast recorded by Reuters.

From within the Balkans themselves came reports of new defense measures. A Swiss telegraphic agency dispatch from Sofia said that Bulgarian police had arrested a number of persons and barricades were erected after "suspicious persons" were seen near the water-works.

Discovery of a Bulgarian espionage agency and the arrest of five of its members was reported in dispatches from Budapest.

General Count Waldemar Stillefried, military commentator for transoceanic German propaganda news service, said he considered reports of the annihilation of 10,000 Serbian partisans in Montenegro as of considerable importance because the action removed a threat to Axis communications in case of an allied Balkan invasion.

Even London observers entered the Balkans guessing game by pointing out that the most likely reason for air raids on Greece would be to knock out bases from which German planes might operate against an allied invasion of the island stepping stones to Greece.

A mop-up of Crete and the Dodecanese islands in the eastern Mediterranean might be undertaken at virtually the same time as an invasion of Sicily and Sardinia to deploy Axis strength and win full and final control of the Mediterranean, the Observers held.

Some London speculation, based on a study of the aerial onslaught and the stabilized Russian front, was that Mediterranean island outposts are on the 1943 allied invasion program with an invasion leading to Berlin from the west unlikely until later.

German guesses on the invasion, meanwhile ranged all the way to Norway, where a German admiral was reported to have told Nazi Marines in a speech at Trondheim that the allies would invade Norway "within a short time."

The one place on which both German and Italian speculation coincided was Italy herself, where unofficial London reports said the Nazis were massing about 10 divisions—150,000 troops—to guard the Brenner pass in case of an Italian collapse.

The newspaper Popolo Di Roma was quoted in a Rome broadcast as saying editorially: "Today the Italian front is the most important and the most logical of the war between Europe and anti-Europe."

The Russian midday communique said today that about 1,000 Italian (Continued on Page Six)

Potato Famine And Prices Hit Bottom

By CHESTER WALSH Potato growers today were still expressing their disappointment over the bottom falling out of the market and failure of the government to provide for handling the crop when marketed.

The government urged us to plant more potatoes to help feed the nation during the war; it urged canning and preserving of food, and now here we are with the potatoes rotting in the ground or in transit and we are taking the loss," was the gist of expressions of farmers.

The whole situation smells "fishy," said a farmer and business man who neglected other crops to plant potatoes and then took them to market to be offered cut-throat prices for the spuds. "The Irish potato program flopped—just at the regular time—to permit the buying trust to get the crop for nearly nothing and then shoot up the prices when the potatoes are offered to consumers," one of the leading men of the county said to a Reflector reporter last night.

The potato situation is serious. In many places they cannot be bought. What farmers cannot understand is why the government did not arrange for marketing the crop after inducing them to plant more potatoes. Peanuts and soy beans, except for home use, are not so interesting to Pitt county farmers, who are mad—pity mad!

The recent appointment of British Field Marshal Sir Archibald Wavell (above) to the post of Viceroy of India led to speculation on Allied plans for an offensive against Japan from India and the Pacific.

EAST FACED BY GAS SHORTAGE

Elimination Of All "A" Cards Seen As Possibility

Washington, June 26.—(AP)—The east coast faced a new crisis in gasoline today, and it was anybody's guess whether passenger car rations would have to be cut again in July.

Talk was revived of suspending all A cards, and an Office of Price Administration spokesman admitted this was a possibility.

Suspension of the A coupons, it was said, would be a "last resort."

The civilian allotment, made yesterday, was 328,000 barrels a day for all civilian use throughout July, August and September.

The allotment was 2,000 barrels higher than that for June but some OPA officials estimated that the season gain in commercial use—farm trucking, produce hauling—(Continued on Page Six)

Small Submarine Is Reported Lost

Washington, June 26.—(AP)—Recent loss of the small submarine R-12 and part of her crew during training operations has been announced by the navy. The statement merely saying that the announcement of the loss "probably" to accident and not to enemy action.

How many of the normal complement of 28 were lost, the Navy did not say, but it attributed the indications of accident to "survivors."

The scene of the sinking was not given beyond the statement that it was off the east coast. Nor was the date given. The Navy statement merely saying that the announcement of the loss "probably" to accident and not to enemy action.

A number of officers and men were unable to escape from the vessel before it sank," the Navy said. "The depth of water makes it impossible to salvage the submarine and hope has been abandoned for recovery of the bodies of the missing personnel."

Outlook For The Banks

Changes In Commercial Banking Policies

New York City, June 26.—Inflation is witnessed by rising prices and an increased shortage of consumer goods. We have been in an inflationary period for some time. Signs point to further inflation. Inflation will affect all types of business and all individuals in varying degrees. In thinking of how one business with which nearly all of us are connected, I have felt that some explanation of what inflation might mean to the banks would be of interest to all. Hence, today I will hit some of the high spots in the banking picture.

Americans Blast Messina While RAF Pounds Port And Airbase on Sardinia; Fighter - Bombers From Malta Also Attack Points In Sicily

By NOLAN NORGAARD Allied Headquarters in North Africa, June 26.—(AP)—More than 100 Flying Fortresses, striking in their greatest raid of the Mediterranean war, hit the vital straits city of Messina in eastern Sicily yesterday and kicked up such a huge cloud of fire and smoke that the entire target area was obscured at the end of the 18-minute attack.

Rivalling the Fortresses' attack on Messina, essential in the rail and ferry links with the Italian mainland, the RAF's Wellingtons roared over Olbia in northern Sardinia the preceding night and started at least seven fires and a big explosion in the port area, near the railway station and among military installations and ammunition dumps.

Describing the American attack on Messina, an official report said "the port and marshalling yards were thoroughly smothered by bomb bursts and when the last raider attacked there was so much smoke and dust that further observation of damage was impossible."

A Reuters dispatch said 300 tons of bombs were dropped in the assault. Attacking without protection, the B-17s met extremely violent opposition from enemy anti-aircraft fire, as well as intense anti-aircraft fire.

Fighting desperately to block the continuing series of devastating Allied raids which already are crippling Sicily's lines of communication and supply, enemy fighter-bombers swept over the high-flying Fortresses, dropping fragmentation bombs intended to explode among the defense formations.

At the same time, the heaviest anti-aircraft barrage yet encountered south of Naples was opened up against the raiders.

But despite the attacks, which compelled the Fortresses to battle their way both to the targets and home, only three planes were lost in all Allied operations of yesterday and the preceding night, while 20 of the enemy aircraft were destroyed.

The Axis interceptors braved even their own flak in efforts to break into the compact formations, and one bomber flight was followed by the enemy to within sight of the (Continued on Page Six)

The films will also be shown at the Grimesland school next Thursday night at 8 o'clock. J. L. Outland is the Grimesland observer.

The pictures show actual battle scenes taken by the Germans in different countries. They will demonstrate the value of airplane observation by civilians in preventing in this country what happened in European territory.

The WAR TODAY AN ANALYSIS OF THE NEWS

By MAX HILL There is so much loose talk now about shortages of food, and of the cost of various products, that a comparison with what the rest of the world is eating may be worth while.

I am convinced the food situation is being exaggerated. We are not hungry now, nor are we likely to be hungry in the future. It is quite obvious that we may have to change some of our fancy eating habits, but that is about all.

Ever since I returned from Japan in 1942 I have been astonished by our waste of food. Our garbage pails contain enough scraps to feed either Germany or Italy or Japan in far better fashion than they eat now.

This belief story, perhaps, will illustrate what I mean. After our arrival in New York, I went immediately to a large hotel for a breakfast of bacon and eggs. I was sure the bacon, which before the war we got about once a month in Tokyo, wouldn't taste like fish; that the eggs would be fresh; that the toast would be buttered, and that the bread wouldn't be gray and doughy from adulterants. They might even be jam with sugar in it, and a cup of coffee.

I placed my order. Meanwhile one of the waitresses busied herself with a fruit salad for the noon meal. She opened a two-quart can of peaches, deliberately poured all of the rich syrup down the drain and (Continued on Page Two)

String Beans Canned. Thousands of quarts of string beans have been canned by ladies throughout the county this week and thousands of quarts more will be canned next week. To can string beans, select those that are young and tender and which have few strings. The green pod stringless is a good variety. If the beans are gathered when young and tender, and the strings removed, a good product results. Snap the beans at both ends, string, and place in a thin cotton bag, and dip in boiling water from three to five minutes. This improves the flavor of the beans and allows more to be packed in a can. Pack closely to within one-quarter inch of the top, and fill with hot water. Add one level teaspoonful of salt.

String beans are a non-acid vegetable and should be processed with steam under pressure. If no pressure cooker is available, the young tender beans can be processed for one hour and 30 minutes in a hot water canner. If the beans are older and small beans have formed, process for three hours. Do not can mature beans. Do not use canning powders.

Schedule. Monday, June 28—Cannon's Crossroads H. D. club meets with Mrs. Lonnie Stokes at 3 o'clock.

Forty Years Ago Today

THE DAILY REFLECTOR June 26, 1943

It has been said that lightning does not strike twice in the same place, but the saying has proven untrue. During the storm Friday evening lightning struck the tower of the Presbyterian Church and badly damaged the building. The bolt knocked the bell out of place and tore the woodwork near it into splinters.

The young men of the town gave a complimentary german in the opera house Friday night, complimentary to the visiting young ladies.

We may have no war in the Philippines, but the white winged dove of peace certainly is not hovering over the home plate to any extent.

As the vote was being taken, CIO representatives were circulating an open letter to congressmen from President Philip Murray, who declared that the veto had made possible "a more careful consideration of the devastating implications of the measure passed by congress in haste." In his veto message, the President said he was "unalterably opposed to strikes in wartime," but expressed the view the Conally-Smith-Harness bill contained provisions "which in fact would foment slow-downs and strikes."

His major objection was directed at a section legalizing strikes in war industries not operated by the government provided a secret ballot of workers was taken and 30 days notice given before a strike was called.

then chopped up the peaches. I recently returned from a tour through the midwest, and nowhere did I find an area where people couldn't buy more than they needed to eat.

Let us be realistic about the war. We cannot have the luxury and ease we have had in the past. The Axis is fighting an all-out, 24-hour-a-day battle against us. We must do the same. To say the least, we will suffer less and enjoy more than any other nation in the world.

Once in Tokyo, a member of our diplomatic staff was trying to convince me I should return. He said: "Look, the worst over there is going to be far better than the best over here." Think about such things the next time you are tempted to complain when you can't buy the rib roast you want, or find potatoes scarce.

Car Thieves Being Sought By The FBI. Washington, June 26.—(AP)—FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover said today that agents are searching across the nation for Ralph Livingston Baldwin, 43, in connection with an automobile theft ring which Hoover said stole cars in California, Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Kentucky, Virginia, Tennessee, North and South Carolina.

Four alleged members of the ring already have been arrested on charges of violating the national motor vehicle theft act, the FBI chief said, adding that one man, Enoch W. Wilson, had committed suicide shortly after FBI agents had searched his farm near Goldsboro, N. C.

Hoover charged that in North Carolina, activities centered around the Victor Transit Company at Goldsboro, which he described as a taxi firm operating automobiles with recut motor numbers.

Carolina Boys Speed Through Radio Course. Three Carolinians were in the class of 30 seamen graduated from the radio training school at the Charleston Navy yard recently. They paced the class with the motto which they wrote on the class room blackboard: "Not a minute to lose!"

Our Farm Folks. County Officers Elected. Mrs. Laurie Ellis of the Winterville Home Demonstration club was unanimously elected president of the County Council of the Federation of Home Demonstration Clubs on Wednesday afternoon at the June County Council meeting.

Mrs. Lonnie Stokes of the Cannon's Crossroad club was elected vice president, and Mrs. Amos Evans, Red Oak club, secretary.

These officers will succeed Mrs. Herman Baker, president; Mrs. Levi Worthington, vice president; and Mrs. Cecil Satterthwaite, secretary; after the annual Achievement day this fall.

County project leaders were as follows: Chick, food conservation, Mrs. E. G. Hardee; Farmville, house furnishings, Mrs. B. R. Fields; Patoxville, home management, Mrs. J. P. Davenport; Pierce, home beautification, Mrs. Clarence Whitehurst; Littlefield, home garden, Mrs. E. G. Garrison; Falkland, home poultry, Mrs. G. H. Pittman; Red Oak, home dairy, Mrs. Orla Kittrell; St. John, president, Mrs. L. B. McGlohan; Belvoir, health, Mrs. J. T. Dupree; Stokes, education, Mrs. Ola Forbs; Winterville, recreation, Mrs. Rick Jackson; Bethel, markets, Mrs. R. R. Whitehurst; Meadow Brook, citizenship defense, Mrs. E. A. Fuller; Red Banks, song, Mrs. J. Brooks Tucker.

Mrs. Herman Baker, president, presided over a short business session after which the meeting adjourned.

The 75 ladies present, then enjoyed the 4-H Health Pageant on the court house lawn.

Winterville H. D. Club. The Winterville Home Demonstration club met on Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. Joe Beddard. The president presided.

After the regular routine of business and book reviews, a delicious busy day meal was prepared and served by Miss Joyner, Mrs. Beddard and Mrs. Dave Buck. The menu consisted of scalloped soup mixture, leaf vegetable salad, bread, fruit cobbler with fruit sauce and ice tea.

Due to war time conditions and the heavy duties of the club women the August picnic has been dispensed with.

The meeting adjourned to meet with Mrs. R. L. Worthington in September.—Reported by Mrs. Rick Jackson.

Farmville Club Serves Service Men. One hundred service men and junior-senior hostesses were guests of the Farmville Home Demonstration club at a fried chicken dinner on Sunday night, June 20. The committee from the club that served the supper were Mrs. Lenwood Tugwell, Mrs. J. H. Bynum, Mrs. Herman Baker, Mrs. Leroy and Roy Bowling and Helen Horton, Red Oak Club. The service men ordered a fried chicken supper this Sunday night.

String Beans Canned. Thousands of quarts of string beans have been canned by ladies throughout the county this week and thousands of quarts more will be canned next week. To can string beans, select those that are young and tender and which have few strings. The green pod stringless is a good variety. If the beans are gathered when young and tender, and the strings removed, a good product results. Snap the beans at both ends, string, and place in a thin cotton bag, and dip in boiling water from three to five minutes. This improves the flavor of the beans and allows more to be packed in a can. Pack closely to within one-quarter inch of the top, and fill with hot water. Add one level teaspoonful of salt.

String beans are a non-acid vegetable and should be processed with steam under pressure. If no pressure cooker is available, the young tender beans can be processed for one hour and 30 minutes in a hot water canner. If the beans are older and small beans have formed, process for three hours. Do not can mature beans. Do not use canning powders.

Schedule. Monday, June 28—Cannon's Crossroads H. D. club meets with Mrs. Lonnie Stokes at 3 o'clock.

William E. Tucker Promoted Captain. Lieut. William E. Tucker, of the United States Army, with the armed forces in North Africa, has been promoted to the rank of captain.

According to a message received by his parents, Assistant Superior Court Clerk Edwin F. and Mrs. Tucker of this city.

Doubt As To...

(Continued from Page One) five minutes after the President's message was read late in the afternoon. The senators overrode it by a 56 to 25 vote, 29 Democrats joining 27 Republicans to override Mr. Roosevelt, and 19 Democrats, five Republicans and one Progressive voting to uphold the executive. Among those voting to override was Acting Democratic Leader Hill of Alabama.

The senate's action was reported to the house while it was in the middle of a heated debate on an anti-subsidy bill. Cries of "vote" immediately went up.

Delaying tactics by a few members were futile.

With a margin of nine votes, compared with the senate edge of only two (a two-thirds vote being required in each case), the house overrode the veto as quickly as the roll could be called. Voting against the President were 114 Democrats and 130 Republicans, while 67 Democrats, 37 Republicans and four minor party members upheld him.

As the vote was being taken, CIO representatives were circulating an open letter to congressmen from President Philip Murray, who declared that the veto had made possible "a more careful consideration of the devastating implications of the measure passed by congress in haste." In his veto message, the President said he was "unalterably opposed to strikes in wartime," but expressed the view the Conally-Smith-Harness bill contained provisions "which in fact would foment slow-downs and strikes."

His major objection was directed at a section legalizing strikes in war industries not operated by the government provided a secret ballot of workers was taken and 30 days notice given before a strike was called.

They Call It Pacific

by CLARK LEE
Farewell to "The Rock" and Bataan

Chapter 24
FROM about the middle of February we had begun to discuss plans for leaving the Philippines. I had made my arrangements with Lieut. Buckley while Jacoby was keeping in touch with the Army officers operating the small ships running to the southern islands and coming back with supplies.

We had two motives for wanting to leave. None of us wanted to fall into Japanese hands there or anywhere else. We had heard that Don Bell, the American radio announcer in Manila, had been tortured and killed after failing to escape from the capital. We had strong reasons to suspect that we would face the same fate.

Our second reason was "less selfish." By mid-February we had learned that there was very little likelihood of reinforcements being sent to Bataan. We began to suspect that Bataan was becoming an embarrassment to the military leaders in Washington; the longer it held the longer the American people were clamoring that help be sent. And the government had no intention of taking the risks involved in a major relief expedition. MacArthur's messages, when they were answered, informed him of that fact.

We believed that if we could escape from the Philippines and get to Australia, and then fly to the United States, we might be able to persuade the authorities that the battle was not yet lost. We might be able to convince them that MacArthur's Army had become a veteran, tough outfit, full of fight and confidence, and tell them that a few airplanes could make all the difference in the world, and that given a little encouragement the people of the Philippines would fight with us to the death.

We wanted to convince them that, unless we proved to the native populations of the Orient that the United States was not buying time at their expense, there was grave danger that those populations would turn against us and join the Japanese.

On the morning of February 22, Jacoby met me at the mouth of Malinta tunnel. "Annalee and I are going out tonight," he said. "You'd better come along." "I'm supposed to go with Buckley," I reminded him. "Yes," he said, "but you better check up on it. I hear there is a possibility his trip will be called off."

I WENT over to the Navy tunnel and found Captain Ray, the chief of staff. "Captain," I said, "Lieutenant Buckley has told me I could go along with him on his trip to China. Now there is a chance for me to leave by another way. What is your advice?" "You better go the other way," Captain Ray said. "Buckley's orders may be changed, or the boats may be sunk or break down, or they may be required for some other purpose."

I thanked him and found Jacoby, and together we made arrangements to see MacArthur after noon. He received us at his desk in the USAFFE tunnel. "Do you want to go?" the general asked. We told him that it depended on whether we could do more good by staying than by going. The general refused to make our decision for us, but as a result of what he said we decided to take a chance on getting through.

MacArthur talked to us for more than an hour, as eloquently and stirringly as ever. He discussed not only his own desperate situation but the entire world picture. His heart was in the Philippines, but his brilliant mind grasped the whole strategy of the world struggle. He felt that there was not sufficient understanding in Allied councils of the time element in the Pacific or of the fact that we did not have unlimited time to defeat Japan.

He pointed out the futility of trying to defeat Japan by "blockade" and "attrition," now that Singapore had fallen and Java was about to go. With the capture of those places Japan would have all the raw materials and the bases needed for a war of blockade and attrition against us. He was disturbed but he was not bitter. He was ready to face his fate like a soldier; but, like an American soldier, he wanted to win—not to lose.

"GO ARMED while you are in the Philippines," the general advised. "When you board a ship to leave the islands, if you are fortunate enough to make connections, throw away your khaki, Hester, Supt.

Strength FOR THE DAY

By EARL L. DOUGLAS

THE SEA IS BEYOND

The late Edward W. Bok tells the delightful story of an Indian chief who used to try out the physical stamina of his young braves by having them run up the side of a mountain and bring back to him some evidence of the distance they had traveled.

Four started one morning at day-break. One came back late in the afternoon with a branch of spruce, which indicated the height he had attained. The second returned with a twig of pine; the third with a shrub which grew only far up toward the top of the mountain. The fourth did not return until long after sundown. His feet were torn and bleeding, and his whole appearance bore witness to extreme exhaustion. In reply to questioning he maintained that he had gone beyond the height where trees or flowers grew, so that he had no evidence to offer. His eyes, however, lighted up as he said, "But Sire, I beheld the sea."

The greatest reward of those who keep on climbing is vision. The top brackets in education can scarcely ever be redeemed in gold. The man who makes a great scientific discovery is almost never paid anything commensurate with the service he has rendered. The greatest reward such people have is that which comes from being able to see beyond those horizons which hem in the lives of the rest of us.

The greatest reward of climbing high is that beyond the mountains we catch a glimpse of the sea.

IT'S A FACT

Yes, folks, we are really going to have an airport despite some recent reports to the contrary.

TIME TO PAY AGAIN

Of course gas rationing is keeping your driving at a minimum, but regardless of that, don't forget that Uncle Sam is looking for another $5 ante from you July 1 if you expect to keep on driving even on short rations. The motor excise stamp is due again on that date.

SAME OLD STORY

For months the government has been urging farmers to grow more food and then when the potato crop comes in, prices drop to bottom and below because no provision has been made for handling deliveries of the potatoes. Some of the growers are beginning to feel that it's the same old story of low prices while the farmer has something to sell and then high prices for the consumers after the crops pass into the hands of the speculators.

HURRAH FOR CONGRESS

Mr. Roosevelt declares that he will not accept the October 31 deadline proclaimed by John L. Lewis in his back-to-work order to the coal miners, and that production in all vital industries must be continued one way or another. At the same time the President vetoed the anti-strike bill that would make it a crime to strike during the war emergency. Just how Mr. Roosevelt expected to accomplish his purpose of preventing strikes without the law we don't know. One thing is certain and that is that to date he has been unable to do so.

In our opinion, the Senate and House did exactly right in passing the measure over the veto. The public has become fed up with the failure of the administration to get results and in enacting this law over the President's opposition we believe Congress carried out the wishes of the people

The men on the fighting fronts can't strike, but it must also be remembered that they can't win the war for us unless they have the materials and supplies with which to fight. The job on the home front is to see to it that they get these supplies, but that job can't be accomplished if the war program is to be hampered by labor racketeers seeking personal gains, and scheming politicians who are counting votes rather than losses of American lives on the battlefields.

WASHINGTON IN WARTIME

By JACK STINNETT

Columbus, O. — While Washington has been fooling around with post-war planning, the states have been going to town. The 35th annual governors' conference here proved that as nothing else has.

In Washington, they have appointed several committees to study the situation. Some are partisan, some bipartisan. None has progressed beyond the talk stage. The states are writing a different story. There wasn't one of the 40 represented here that hadn't made some actual post-war headway.

Most of the governors are positive the states have not gone far enough. The surpluses that they have piled up (as in the case of Ohio — $20,000,000 for the state welfare and education programs, plus $50,000,000 for "other purposes" on appropriation) won't they say, make a dent on the post-war situation unless the national government comes through or unless the states develop a self-sufficiency not now apparent.

As Governor John W. Bricker, Republican of Ohio, put it: "If unemployment becomes extensive, the states can provide but a small part of the necessary employment." Governor Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts is working on the idea that "jobs in private industry for all who are able to work are the surest solution to postwar problems." Thinking of government projects (both national and state) as merely "stop-gaps" between V-day and full peace time employment, the Massachusetts post-war planning committee has been needing private industry to make its own post-war plans and Governor Saltonstall is proud to cite as typical one major war plant which has figured out how it can convert to 175 per cent of pre-war employment without actually firing any war workers.

Governor J. Melville Broughton of North Carolina has a little different slant on the situation. Standing firmly on "states' rights," the Governor feels that post-war problems "cannot be solved by business and industry at once and should not be solved by government alone."

As outlined here in Columbus, there is really very little difference between the opinions of the Democrats and Republicans on post-war planning. Leaders of both parties were emphatic that neither the states nor the federal government could do the job alone. That should point the way. The only questions apparently are to what extent federal and state controls will regulate private industry.

It becomes pretty clear now that these differences will be used as the basis for the 1944 campaigns, both for the presidency and the seats in Congress. If the Governors' Conference tells any story at all it is that the states are demonstrating more "unity" than Washington, and that unity consists in winning the war and in winning the peace.

to receive dollar deposits and pay out dollars.

Depositors Are Safe
As all Federal Reserve Member Banks and most other banks are also members of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, deposits up to $5,000 have for some time been insured by our government. Depositors are thus well-protected and bank failures for years have been at a minimum. I look for no increase in bank failures. However, some banks may consolidate or liquidate and go out of business. In some instances this would be a sensible thing for them to do. The larger a bank is the more valuable its stock should be.

Bank customers will continue to receive much the same type of service as they have always had from their banks, but they must expect to pay more and more for it. Banks will be obliged to meet increased living and operating expenses occasioned by inflation just as manufacturers and other business houses will be. They are faced with declining mortgage income; their returns on commercial paper, municipals and corporation bonds are also extremely low. It looks as though they might be largely dependent upon their service charges and safe deposit box rentals.

Investment Policies For Banks
The banking fraternity is today carrying too much of the government debt in the form of bonds. There should be proportionately more in the hands of the public than in the hands of the banks. However, while the rate of interest on government holdings is extremely small, banks can be certain that their holdings of governments—particularly those due within the next ten years—will be paid at par upon maturity. Furthermore, I do not look for any extreme fluctuations in their prices immediately after the war as was true of the Liberty Bonds of World War I.

Unlike individual investors or businessmen, banks cannot protect themselves against inflation through the purchase of tangible goods and property. Yet, like merchandizing groups, they must have an inventory with which to do business. Therefore, inasmuch as they deal in dollars, they must have a

LOSER TAKE ALL

Chapter 19
Bert made his call and took Ann to a little roadside inn for lunch. They didn't talk about love or wills or Terrence House. In fact they hardly talked at all.

When he left her at the hotel in mid-afternoon he said, smiling crookedly, "I'm till placing that long shot."

She answered with a toss of her head and ran up the steps to find three messages from Mrs. Morgan reminding her of the dedication tomorrow at 1:30.

She dressed carefully the next day, anxious to look her best for an occasion she dreaded.

She slipped into her fresh pink jacket frock, added an off-the-face black hat with matching gloves and pumps. When Sarah called to say the car was ready she hurried through the hall to the front door.

Then she stopped abruptly. Jerry Lane offered her his arm.

She brushed past him, went quickly down the steps. But he followed even so far as to climb into the seat beside her and tell the driver to go ahead.

"I think you've made a mistake. This car was sent for me," she said.

"And for me," he corrected. "Much as it grieves me to force my presence on you, Mrs. Morgan insisted we come together. I didn't have the heart to explain we commanded opposing factions."

"But—why would she want you?" "Simple, Watson." He smiled the smile that went all over his face. The smile that had first turned her heart to a pulp of indecision.

"Someone mentioned to her that we were having a little argument over the inheritance. She wanted to be sure to get the right heir."

"If I'd know!" "You would have refused to come. I anticipated that. So I let it be a surprise to you."

"I don't like surprises."

"I gathered that. Well," he waved his hand in the general direction of a mob of people, "here we are!"

The crowd was assembled in front of the hospital and she had no choice but to let him guide her through it to the platform and an effusive Mrs. Morgan.

"Oh, how nice of you both. We are so happy to have you with us. Right this way, please, right this way. I have saved reserved for you."

And she did have. Side by side in the middle of the speaker's platform. To the right of the American flag and to the left of a conspicuously draped easel.

Ann wondered what the easel held and supposed it was the personal touch Bert mentioned. She was afraid to guess just what coup d'tat Mrs. Morgan held in store for them.

The band played the national anthem. Jerry touched her arm to remind her to stand. Automatically her lips formed the familiar, stirring words but her heart thumped dully, out of tune.

It would have been trying enough to have to sift through the eulogies for her grandmother without having to do so with a man she couldn't face.

The speeches began. The speeches and the prayers, fine, glowing tributes to a woman who had given so generously of all she had to make Radville a better place in which to live. A woman who had set a standard it would behoove all coming generations to emulate. A woman who—Ann couldn't listen to another one. What would these people think when they heard the truth about the fake spring?

"And now," Mrs. Morgan lifted her voice in a final spasm of elation, "now we come to the surprise of the dedication. The unveiling!"

She paused. "I'm going to ask the one most worthy of the honor, the granddaughter of our beloved benefactor, to come forward and unveil the picture." She came to an impressive stop and turned to Ann.

"That's you," Jerry nudged the girl at his side. "She wants you to go up there."

"Dazed, Ann rose, prayed that her knees would hold her as she walked to the shrouded easel.

The audience clapped tentatively and subsided. Ann touched the grey cloth.

"In renaming the hospital for Augusta Terrence," Mrs. Morgan continued, "the board of directors thought nothing would be more in keeping with the occasion than a portrait of our dear friend to hang in the entrance hall. We asked one of the finest artists in this part of the country to make an oil of her. This he did by using a photograph for a model. Now Miss Ann Harrington will show it to you!"

At a nod from Mrs. Morgan Ann lifted the shroud and threw it back over the gold encrusted frame. The audience as of one breath rose to its feet. Gasps of "oh" and "ah" and "marvelous" ran from lip to lip.

Ann leaned over to get a view of the painting. She, too, gasped.

It wasn't just a copy of a photograph. It wasn't just colors on canvas. It was Grand Gussie brought to life.

There were her sure, eager eyes, her large mobile mouth, the brows a little too heavy for beauty but full of strength and purpose. Her hair, as always, went its own way without regard for style and surrounded her almost masculine features with a halo of disorder.

Ann blinked back the tears that rushed to her eyes and turned away. "Grand Gussie! She wasn't the angel the speakers eulogized this afternoon but Ann still loved her."

It hurt her to think that she had made no progress in her efforts to preserve the legend her grandmother represented.

On the way back to Terrence House Jerry was the first to speak. "She must have been a wonderful woman."

"She was."

"You were all she had and you loved her very much."

"Yes. I—I loved her."

"Then she would have left her property to you. That's only good sense. She must have made a will!"

She glanced up at him, anger suddenly warm in her veins. "Of course she made a will!"

"Maybe I can help look for it? Have you any idea where it could be?"

"Have I—?" She couldn't conceal her amazement. "Have I any idea? Why you know—the vase shaped like a hand—the roll of paper? You know where the will is!"

Dollars To Be Plentiful

Forward-looking bankers, therefore, will gradually depend less on normal investment income and educate the depositors to heavier service charges. These will be permitted by the government, even looked upon with favor. Unless Washington wishes to take over the actual operation of the banks, they must make it possible for banks to have sufficient income from sources other than through normal investments.

As mortgages are paid off in cheap dollars, income from this source will also decline. But dollars will be exceedingly plentiful. Money in circulation per capita today is the highest in the history of our country. It will continue to rise. For every government bond sold our credit resources are multiplied six or seven times. I forecast that dollars will be far more plentiful than certain commodities.

What About Bank Stocks

What I have outlined is far from an ideal domestic banking economy. It is no real way for banks to function, but it is the only way they can survive. But I would not dump my bank stocks. They may be as good as anything else to hold. In some ways perhaps a little better in the case of the larger banks. At least their real estate constitutes real property. But I would not be surprised to see many banking quarters turned into funeral parlors.

WENSLOFF IS UNLUCKIEST IN AMERICAN

Yankee Pitcher Has More 'Near Wins' Than Any Other In League

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sports Writer
There are managers and players in the American league who will tell you that the outstanding rookie pitcher in the junior circuit this season is Charley Wensloff of the New York Yankees. This may be open to debate, but no one will question his right to be called the unluckiest.

Wensloff, called the "Iron man" on the Yankees' Arkansas City farm last season, has received little of the publicity that has centered on the Athletics' Jesse Flores, the Senators' Mito Candini, the Tigers' Stubby Overmire and other newcomers.

Yet he has pitched a brand of ball that might well have earned him an undefeated rating instead of his present record of four won and the same number lost.

Wensloff won 21 games in the American Association last year, the only hurler to reach the charmed "20" bracket, and pitched 25 complete games. He has been a starting pitcher for New York ever since manager Joe McCarthy looked him over in spring training.

The climax to his hard luck came in a twilight game at Boston last night which resulted in a 2-2 tie in 11 innings after darkness forced a halt.

Wensloff pitched four-hit ball, fanned seven, and might have won except for one of the rarest happenings in Major league baseball—a player batted out of turn.

Joe Gordon, the stellar second baseman, who has been doing everything wrong ever since the last world series, batted in the wrong place in first turn at the plate, but no scoring was involved and if the Red Sox noticed they said nothing.

But on his second turn he slammed a drive against the fence that brought a tally home.

Then manager Joe Cronin of the Sox rushed out to the umpire and pointed out that Gordon had hit out of turn, nullifying the run. Gordon made an attempt to redeem himself by hitting his seventh home run of the season to tie the score in the ninth, but it turned out to be just another victory Wensloff should have had and missed.

The Senators gave ground to the Yankees, however, by dropping a 5-2 decision to the Philadelphia

The Pittsburgh-Cincinnati game was postponed.

New York, June 26—(AP)—There's been a lot of moaning along Jacobs beach the last couple of weeks because there wasn't an important fight on the program and very few good fighters on hand. Then somebody got out the record books and showed that last year the 20th Century club didn't stage a brawl from May 28 until July 23 and what followed was the most successful season—financially—since Mike Jacobs moved into the Garden in 1937. ... Vernon Trucks, age 49, whose son Virgil pitches for the Tigers, still can do a pretty fair country job of flinging in the Industrial Service league in Alabama. ... Eight "small" Ohio colleges that will have Navy V-12 delegations this year are talking about forming a sports league. ... Fritzie Zivic has joined the American Guild variety actors—and he insists it's because of his night club M. C. activities and has nothing to do with his coming return boot with Jack Lamotta.

New York, June 26 - (AP) - A little profit taking on the 4-session recovery push stalled a number of stocks in today's market but many leaders held their ground. The advance was extended by fractions at the opening, with scattered favorites registering peaks for the year or longer in relatively lively transactions. Transfers were around 500,000 shares. Among shares edging into the "new high" class were Willys-Overland, Sears Roebuck and International Harvester. Doing fairly well were Santa Fe, Pennsylvania, Standard Oil (N. J.), Texas Co., Westinghouse, American Telephone and J. I. Case. Intermittent losers included U. S. Steel, General Motors, Chrysler, U. S. Rubber and Goodrich. Bonds were steady and most commodities higher.

SAYS JAPS ARE BADLY BEATEN

Jap Forces Reported Crushed In Yangtze Fighting

By J. REILLY O'SULLIVAN. Enshih, on the Upper Yangtze Front, China, June 26 - (AP) - Gen. Chen Cheng, the hero of the defense of the gateway to Chungking, declared today that the Japanese bloodily defeated in the battle of the upper Yangtze, were in no position to renew their attack unless they moved in reinforcements. One of China's top generals, Chen was hastily recalled from Yunnan province by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek to turn back the recent enemy threat to the Chinese capital. "The Japanese at present do not have enough troops in China to begin another offensive," the general said in an interview. "They would have to draw reinforcements from Burma, the southwest Pacific or the northern provinces. Whether they will do this remains to be seen."

Asked his opinion of the possibility of a Japanese attack against the Russians in Siberia, Chen replied: "It is hard to say. The Japanese are reckless, as was evidenced in their Pear Harbor attack." He said he had not been advised of any Allied plans for retaking on morale," he replied. "From this again opening up the Burma road supply route to Chungking. "What is needed to drive the Japanese from China for all time?" the general was asked. "We have fought nearly six years on mortle," he replied. "From this campaign it is evident we need a bigger air force and more heavy guns."

"Talking about the amount needed of any Allied planes for retaking that, considering the enormous producing capacity of the United States, we don't expect to see one per cent of that production. We will be satisfied if we receive one-thousandth."

When correspondents told him the estimated airplane production of the U. S. was about 84,000 planes a year, he conceded that one-thousandth of that number wouldn't hurt, but insisted that one per cent (840 planes) "would be enough." He doubted, though, that China would get that many. Chen, 47, is one of the youngest Chinese generals. He is slightly built but holds him self very erect and is known as a strict disciplinarian.

Flies

Here is another item on City Sanitation. It is common knowledge that the ordinary house fly is a carrier of disease. Many diseases are spread by the house fly, chief of which are typhoid fever, and other intestinal diseases, especially diarrhea and enteritis in babies. The principal breeding places for flies are horse stables and decayed garbage. Flies multiply very rapidly. Flies are strong of wing and are able to migrate from house to house over long distances. Food scraps and garbage attract flies very readily, therefore, these articles should be kept in closed receptacles. All residences should be properly screened. It is extremely important that the baby and the baby's food be protected against flies. The City Sanitarian, J. T. Welch, has been requested to carefully inspect all horse stables in the city and, as far as practical, he will visit residential premises to see that the garbage is in proper containers.

NEW TAX LAW IS AN ORPHAN

Neither Side Will Claim Authorship Of Measure

Washington, June 26 - (AP) - With pay-as-you-go taxation effective less than a week hence - July 1 - neither Republicans nor Democrats in Congress were disposed today to claim credit as the authors. Rep. Patman (R-Tex) said pay-as-you-go was a Republican bill, and House GOP Leader Martin of Massachusetts leaped to his feet immediately with a denial. "That was the tax bill the Republicans were trying to put 'the money' on somebody else's back. "Much has been said by our good friends on the Republican side," commented the Texas, "that they could do much better running the war and running our domestic government if they just had charge of it."

"There is one bill that passed the Congress a while back that is a Republican bill - strictly, solely and purely a Republican bill. That was the tax bill the Republicans wrote that bill they are entitled to the credit, and I am willing to give them credit."

Martin shot back: "The compromise which passed came from a distinguished senator, the senator from Georgia, Mr. George," the Texas replied. "Of course, in placing the monkey around on different backs I am sure the gentleman would like to place it on somebody else's back but the fact remains that the gentleman boasted he got his amendment (the modified Ruml skip-a-year plan) substantially his amendment, written into law."

"The gentleman knew that our amendment was rejected by this house on three occasions," returned Martin. "There was the one part of the tax bill which the people will object to rather strenuously - the proposal by the Treasury Department, which was supported by the Democrats, and that is the withholding part of this bill." Patman closed off the debate: "You had to have the withholding tax to pay what you were forgiving the war millionaires. We forgave under that bill the millionaires seven or eight billion dollars and you had to put this 20 per cent withholding tax on in order to pay that. So on July 1, when that tax bill goes into effect, it can be pointed to as an example of legislative clarity on the part of our Republican friends."

Reds Attack ...

Ruhr War ...

Headquarters of the European theater of operations of the U. S. Army said that U. S. heavy bombers had destroyed nearly 100 enemy fighters in their last two engagements over the Reich, while losing 37 of their own bombers. Headquarters, which first announced that 18 American planes were missing from yesterday's attack, said today that only 17 were lost. One of the missing planes returned. A commentator from the Eighth U. S. Air Force headquarters said: "The primary task of heavy bombers operating in daylight against war industry targets is to slow enemy armament production, but attrition against enemy fighter defenses, an important secondary consideration, is mounting steadily."

Last night's Ruhr raid was the 11th attack by the RAP on the Reich in two weeks. Bochum was last raided the night of June 12 and on May 13 some 1,000 tons of bombs were spread over its industries. The Bochum-Gelsenkirchen district produces a third of the Ruhr coal and is an important point in an intricate network of railroad communications serving the Ruhr. The steel works of Bochumer Verein are important producers of war products and the coal mining industry of Gelsenkirchen has by-product factories and synthetic oil plants. The German high command, in a communique broadcast from Berlin and recorded by the Associated Press agreed with the British in declaring that 30 night raiders were shot down and said the population at Bochum "sustained losses by hits by explosive and incendiary bombs."

In describing the American raid yesterday a communique said "strong American bomber formations attempted to attack north Germany under cover of thick clouds. German fighter planes gave battle early, with the result that the attacking formations were dispersed and compelled to drop their bombs over the open sea or over the coastal region."

SEE BLOW TO FOURTH TERM

Republicans Say Anti-Strike Action Slap At President

Washington, June 26 - (AP) - The whirlwind enactment of the anti-strike bill over President Roosevelt's veto today prompted Republican assertions that there would be no fourth term and counter contentions that the action should not be considered a reflection on the executive. Blasted at the result of Senate and House votes overriding the veto, Senator Wherry (R-Neb) told reporters: "This is the first concrete evidence that there will be no fourth term."

The President's veto of the measure also provoked sharp criticism from members of his own party, with Senator Byrd (D-Va) asserting that the action was laden with politics.

"The veto was not the act of Franklin Roosevelt, commander in Chief of the Army and Navy in time of a desperate war," Byrd declared. "It was the act of Franklin Roosevelt, candidate for re-election to a fourth term as president of the United States."

On the other hand, Senator Pepper (D-Fla), who voted to override the veto in the Senate, said he thought Congress' action expressed only a bi-partisan determination to prevent further strikes in war industries such as the coal walkouts. "This is a national issue and not a political issue," Pepper declared. "Congress is determined to prevent strikes and if this bill doesn't do it, it will enact further and more drastic measures." Pepper said that while the President's veto obviously was pleasing to leaders of organized labor who demanded that such a course be taken, he felt that it ought not to be necessary for the president to demonstrate that "he is labor's best friend."

Pepper said pressure from members of the armed forces and their relatives had a hand in congressional determination to take action on the strike question.

East Faced By ...

(Continued from page one) logging operations and the likelihood would result in a net loss to passenger cars of about 7,000 barrels a day in July. This seemingly small deficiency of about 300,000 gallons daily could upset the precarious balance between supply and consumption which has been achieved by the carving of A, B, C and T ratios and bans on non-essential driving in the opinion of several ration officials. There was some indication OPA would appeal to Ickes for increased supplies entering the east, but a spokesman for the petroleum administration for war shrugged off this report with the comment: "There just isn't any more gasoline available." Hence the oft-discussed suspension of A cards must be considered a possibility, OPA sources said.

Fortresses In ...

(Continued from Page One) African shore. The Wellingtons, however, encountered scant resistance on their mission and all returned safely. In other action yesterday RAF Beaufighters of the coastal command carried torpedoes and attacked medium-size enemy supply ships escorted by three destroyers and a Heinkel 115 twin-engine float plane east of Sardinia. The ship was left emitting a column of smoke. "Photographs taken from the Fortress showed two strikes and two damaging misses on a 40-foot merchant vessel in the harbor, one hit on the foredeck of a 500-foot ship and hits among a large number of buildings, warehouses, rail road tracks and station facilities," said an official account of the raid on Messina. "Reconnaissance pictures taken after the raid showed a large fire burning in the railway station."

(The number of fortresses participating in the attack on Messina was the number of members of his own party, said an official account of the raid on Messina. "Reconnaissance pictures taken after the raid showed a large fire burning in the railway station."

"The number of fortresses participating in the attack on Messina was the number of members of his own party, said an official account of the raid on Messina. "Reconnaissance pictures taken after the raid showed a large fire burning in the railway station."

At the same time, an RAF communique from Malta announced, fighter-bombers from that fortress island 60 miles to the south of Sicily, swept over the Italian island attacking various targets. By daylight yesterday aircraft of the coastal air force attacked a medium sized merchant vessel and left it burning, the war bulletin said. "The Flying Fortresses did considerable damage" at Messina yesterday, according to the Saturday Italian communique as broadcast from Rome and coded by the Associated Press.

(Reggio Calabria, one of the two mainland terminals of the Messina ferry San Nicandro, on the Adriatic side of the mainland, and Vizzini, 29 miles southwest of Catania in Sicily, also were bombed, the communique said.

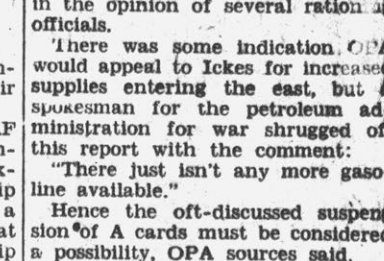

The Italians said 18 Allied planes were shot down during the day at a loss of two Italian planes. An Italian submarine failed to return to its base, it added.

A German broadcast, quoting Milan dispatches, declared 50 Allied merchant ships totalling 333,000 tons, had been sunk in the Mediterranean by Italian and German air and naval forces since the beginning of June. There was no Allied confirmation of this claim.)

Talk Of ...

(Continued from Page Four) troops had been killed or wounded in recent fierce battles with Greek Guerrillas in southern Macedonia. Rifles and supplies were captured by the Greek patriots, said the communique as broadcast from Moscow and recorded by the Soviet Monitor at London. The communique also said that guerrillas operating in the Pinsk area of Poland wrecked a German train and liberated civilians whom the Nazis were taking to Germany for forced labor.
