Allied Bombers Continue To Pound Italian Cities And Communications

Main Seaports Both Sardinia and Sicily Blasted... Reports Heavy Damage in Sardinian Capital; Fliers Describe Palermo As "Finished"

By NOLAN NORGAARD Allied Headquarters in North Africa, July 2—(AP)—Allied airmen shot down four German fighters and slashed again at Axis Mediterranean shipping yesterday in the wake of a fire-setting attack upon barracks and railway facilities of Cagliari, Sardinia's major port, it was announced today.

(The Italian communiqué said that Palermo, the Sicilian capital, was attacked again last night, and that the royal palace was among the numerous buildings damaged. Cagliari, Sardinia, also was raided, it was said.)

(A DNB dispatch broadcast from Berlin reported that United States airmen "carried out a bombing raid against a bathing resort situated near Athens yesterday in full daylight" and that 38 persons were killed and 60 injured. Allied communiqués did not touch upon such a raid.)

Spitfire pilots of the U. S. AAF shot down the four German fighters off the North African coast. Routine sweeps and patrols were maintained from northwest African bases.

Wellington bombers, which have pounded away night after night for many weeks at vital ports in Sicily, Sardinia and northern Italy, concentrated upon troops quarters and the railway station of Cagliari Wednesday night.

All operations of the northwest African, Middle East and Malta commands were reported carried out without the loss of a plane.

Yesterday's Italian communiqué acknowledged that fires were started in Cagliari, the Sardinian capital, and several buildings in the central area of the town were said to have collapsed.

(A Berlin broadcast of a Rome dispatch, recorded by the Associated Press, reported meanwhile that the heavy Allied daylight attack on Palermo Wednesday had destroyed two churches and other buildings. "The heart of the city was particularly damaged," the broadcast added.)

The raid on Palermo, Sicilian capital located on the northern coast, was timed with assaults on four airfields on Sicily. Returning (Continued on Page Six)

ANTI-SUBSIDY BILL VETOED

President Describes Measure As "Inflation Bill"

Washington, July 2—(AP)—Declaring it to be "an inflation bill," which would set the soldier, worker and unorganized consumer "at war with the farmer," President Roosevelt vetoed today a bill which would extend the life of the Commodity Credit Corporation and also junk the administration's plan to whittle down food prices by subsidizing processors.

In one of the most acid messages he ever transmitted to Congress, the chief executive said that the measure was not one to continue the CCC but to "hamstring" it. "It places new and unwarranted restrictions on the use of its funds," he asserted, "and on the powers heretofore given to the administration to stabilize the cost of living. These restrictions would prevent our giving to farmers the assistance they need in carrying out our new food production programs. They would make it impossible for us to stop the rising cost of living."

"As the measure now stands, this is an inflation bill, a high cost of living bill, a food shortage bill," he said in his veto message to Congress. In his lengthy and critical message, Mr. Roosevelt said that he had tried to translate a part of the bill "into common sense English" and frankly did not know what it meant. He said reputable lawyers had advised that one section nullified another.

"No matter how this measure is interpreted," the President said, "it will have a devastating effect upon our economy and our war effort about which I believe the Congress and the American people out clearly to be warned."

Mr. Roosevelt contended that the legislation would virtually nullify the economic stabilization act of last October since he said the cost of living cannot be stabilized effectively by the government if the cost of necessary foods cannot be stabilized.

By this bill, he said, Congress would "put new shackles on those whose duty it is to fight inflation," and the fight cannot be won that way, he added.

Returning the bill to a Congress which was discussing the possibility of overriding his veto, the President said the measure would become law only over his "strenuous objection and protest."

URGENT EARLIER MART OPENING

Governor Discusses Matter With Tobacco Group

Raleigh, July 2—(AP)—Governor Broughton told the sales committee of the United States Tobacco Association today that "the circumstances with respect to farm labor are so grave that it will be necessary for tobacco companies and other groups concerned to make some sacrifice towards the solution of a problem affecting the national welfare."

The Tobacco Association declined Wednesday to accept opening dates for sales recommended previously by the governor's committee and fixed the same opening dates as last year. The meeting today continued that action.

Meeting in a lengthy session with the governor were A. B. Carrington, Jr., of Danville, Va., association president; H. A. Pettus, chairman of the sales committee; T. W. Blackwell of Winston-Salem; Senator John S. Watkins of Oxford; Senator J. Con Lanier of Greenville; committeeman Harry Caldwell, director of the State Farm Manpower Commission, and Dr. J. M. Dorton, state director of the War Manpower Commission.

The committee told the governor that the reason his dates were not strictly followed was an inability to staff the several markets with buyers if they should be running concurrently. He was advised, however, that if the growing season on the Georgia markets should indicate a possibility of selling out earlier than now anticipated, the association would consider the feasibility of fixing earlier dates for the other belts in line with those made by the governor's committee.

Burton proposer that conferences be called soon between representatives of private and public enterprise at home and abroad to lay the groundwork for agreements on post-war principles.

American Warships Steam Unchallenged Into Northern Solomons Waters; Jap Plane Losses In Two Days 123 Against U. S. Losses of 25

By ROGER GREENE (Associated Press War Editor) Allied naval supremacy in the southwest Pacific appeared unchallenged today as U. S. warships steamed deep into the northern Solomons, shelling a series of Japanese strongholds, while victorious American troops completed the conquest of Rendova Island after wiping out the enemy garrison.

U. S. shore batteries on Rendova were heavily bombarding the Japanese air base at Munda, New Georgia Island, seven miles away. American dive bombers also smashed at Japanese positions in the Munda area. The Navy said, setting fires, and pounded enemy encampment at Vila on Kolombangara Island.

Dispatches said it was not immediately known whether the American warships thrusting 150 miles northwest of the Rendova-New Georgia area represented a diversion or the beginning of expanded operations.

A bulletin from Admiral William F. Halsey's headquarters announced today that 123 Japanese planes had been blasted out of the skies over the New Georgia islands Wednesday and Thursday, against a loss of 25 U. S. planes and 15 pilots.

Production Loss Puts Germany On Downgrade

tant symptoms of industrial deterioration appeared in the available figures, the sources said. Steel production, which was at an annual rate of approximately 25,000,000 tons in January, 1942, fell to 92.5 per cent of that peak by the first of this year and was down to 89.5 per cent in May according to the figures here. Tied in with reported electric power difficulties was an oil shortage. The best sources estimate that Germany normally needs 12,000,000 to 13,000,000 tons of oil yearly, and Italy 2,500,000 while a comparative lull in fighting exists. Major operations naturally send this consumption skyrocketing. Germany's present oil reserve is (Continued on Page Four)

City Homemakers Enlist For Service

Winning the War and the Peace

What will it take to win the war and the peace? Here is one question upon which all minds are centered. Several answers have been suggested by thinking people but the one slogan that is uppermost, not only in the minds of America but also in the minds of the allies is this: "Food will win the war and the peace."

Whether or not we agree with the leaders who proposed this solution we all know that food is essential for our selves and our families. Not only is it important to have the right amount of food in the diet but it is necessary to have the different types of food that give us life and health.

Home Canned Food Not Rationed

Authorities tell us we cannot hope to have well-balanced diets through next winter unless we conserve the surplus food now available.

The displays in the windows of J. C. Penney Store on Evans street and Whites Stores on Dickerson Avenue present a food budget recommended by reliable authorities.

The budget of canned food at Whites is for one person. It consists of samples of home canned food which is of superior quality. Multiply the number of jars by the number in your family and you will have the number required.

Notice also the point values. One special advantage of home-canned food is that it is not rationed. No points are necessary. This releases points for others.

Home Dried Food Without Canners. The exhibit in J. C. Penney's window shows the suggested budget of dried fruits and vegetables which can be had without the use of rationed pressure canners. Be sure to study these budgets carefully.

"Work or Fight" Campaign. As an officer stood in front of the stores studying the exhibit of home canned food another observer remarked: "If all citizens not engaged in full-time public employment were to accept this as their food budget there wouldn't be any need of enforcing the governor's work or fight proclamation would there?"

The officer agreed as he pointed out his favorite jars of canned food.

Choosing of Canning Equipment. If in doubt about the type of canning equipment for your produce don't forget to notice the charts in Grant's window and especially the hot-water canner which any homemaker can improve.

Attention—Victory Gardeners. While you salute Old Glory on Independence Day don't forget that Victory Garden. What to plant in July? See the planting schedule in Blount Harvey's window on Fourth Street.

Forty Years Ago Today

THE DAILY REFLECTOR July 2, 1903

Bryan Grimes Camp of Confederate Veterans held its annual meeting and reunion here today. Many of the boys who wore the gray in 61-65 were here and a great crowd came to help them make it an eventful day.

After the speaking a bounteous picnic dinner was served in the afternoon.

The crowd in town was estimated at about 3,000 and all helped to make a glad day for the old heroes who are passing from us.

German-Jap Films Shown Grimesland

By J. PRESTON COREY. A large number of men, women and children were present at a special showing of war films, captured from the Germans and Japanese, in the Grimesland schoolhouse Thursday night, sponsored by J. Hicks Corey, area supervisor of the Air and Warning Service, and J. L. Outlaw, chief observer of the Grimesland observation post.

The films were shown for the purpose of stimulating the interest of all persons in serving his or her country in order that the post might be effectively operated for each 24 hours around the clock period, and further, to recognize and take advantage of an opportunity to render a much needed service to our armed forces, both in the defense of the home front and in training our air force for service on the battlefield.

In a brief talk, Arthur B. Corey, district supervisor of the A. R. W. S., called on each and everyone to perform his duties in keeping the battlefront as strong as the home front. Nevertheless, some persons, apparently, shirk every opportunity as civilians, to serve on the "home front" of their country.

Lieut. Patrick, Sgt. Stant and associates of the Army and Navy Signal Corps were present. Lieut. Patrick in a short talk stated that every person when on active duty at the observation post "is a part of the air force of your country." He further said that the volunteers of the air raid warning service relieve 10 or 12 divisions of not less than 15,000 men each for active service in the armed forces. Therefore, saving cost in taxes to equip, pay and maintain the additional divisions saving the number of persons necessary to be called by the draft boards and at the same time enabling everyone to be of service in winning this war or our continued freedom.

Asks Cooperation For Cleaner City

In commenting on the condition of some of our back alleys, J. T. Welch, city sanitary inspector, stated that some improvement has been made in the manner of handling trash and waste paper. In spite of this improvement, our alleys are still far from ideal.

While many business firms are careful to cooperate in this matter, there are some who so far have not cooperated.

Mr. Welch stated that the city ordinance requires every business establishment, as well as every household, to provide garbage cans for all garbage and paper. While in some cases it may not be practical to provide such metal cans for paper emptied cartons and such matter, it certainly is in order to provide large wooden boxes for trash, and to keep all more readily decomposable matter in covered cans.

The city street department will render any necessary assistance in providing containers, the cost to be borne by the individual.

Junior Chamber Is Active Group Men

The Greenville Junior Chamber of Commerce, at its bi-monthly fellowship supper meeting in the Marine Room of the Old Towne Inn, welcomed four new members, Claude Gaskins of the Greenville Feed Mills, Frank Dudley of J. A. Collins and Son's furniture store, Lloyd Vincent of the Planagan Buggy Company and W. G. Garner of the Pepsi Cola Bottling Company.

President Hadley, who presided, appointed a committee, Herbert Warwick chairman, Fred Forbes, Jr. and Hoyt Mines to investigate the feasibility of sponsoring a baseball game here between the Navy Pre-Flight School at Chapel Hill and the Norfolk (Va.) Naval School.

The Jayvees acknowledged an invitation from the New Bern Junior Chamber of Commerce to attend a supper meeting and dance next week. It was declined with thanks due to the gasoline shortage.

The Junior Chamber is taking renewed interest in community affairs. Its personnel is representative of nearly every line of business and the professions. Many new members, taking the place of those gone to war or into war work, have stimulated interest and inspired more activity. President Hadley stated today.

PLEDGE BOOST STEEL OUTPUT

Nelson Says Industry Has Promised Co-operation

By ROBERT GRUBB. Pittsburgh, July 2—(AP)—Chairman Donald M. Nelson of the War Production Board wound up a two-day tour of Pittsburgh's "Victory Valley" steel mills today after receiving pledges from labor and management to help boost steel production in the next six months by 2,000,000 tons.

Nelson and other high-ranking ports on its orders that three live-steel for victory" drive by calling upon the industry for a "renewed production effort going far beyond anything we have yet achieved."

Management's answer to the government plea was expressed by Benjamin F. Fairless, president of the United States Steel Corporation, the nation's largest steel producer, when he said after the party had toured four of the district's largest plants: "What we saw today gives us faith that labor and management will meet the new production quota set by the government. This is the kind of a day that makes our enemies exceedingly unhappy."

Labor's assurance came from Philip Murray, president of the CIO and the United Steel Workers of America, who said: "We are behind this big push for more steel. Let the 200,000 steel workers now in the armed forces hear this message from the steel workers on the production front: 'We will not fail you.'"

Nelson, Murray, Fairless and their large party spent a full day yesterday walking through the heat, dust and grime of the plants. At times they peered into open-hearth furnaces from such close proximity the heat nearly blistered their faces.

LEHMAN GROUP MAKING PLANS TO FEED ITALY

Will Be All Set If Allies Take Over Country

By RICHARD G. MASSOCK

(Former Chief of the Rome Bureau of the Associated Press)

Washington, June 2—(AP)—Plans to feed Italians when United Nations troops occupy Italy are being drafted in Washington, with Herbert H. Lehman's office of relief and rehabilitation operations prepared to handle the job.

This does not mean, Lehman's aides say, that he has been tipped off to an imminent American invasion of Italy. This office is just being foresighted—making outline plans not only for Italy but for other countries that are to be liberated eventually from Axis domination.

Some civilian strategists in the government have been skeptical of the advantages to be gained from invasion of Italy because, they say, food will have to be diverted from the other fighting fronts and from the home front to feed the people.

Others contend that the psychological effect of Italy's occupation and the distribution of food to the people, as a promise of what awaits other people from the United Nations, would outweigh such considerations.

Those concerned with relief and rehabilitation grant that the invasion question is strictly one for the military to determine, on considerations of strategy alone. The relief administrators are merely figuring out how much would be needed and where it could be obtained when and if Gen. Dwight Eisenhower or any other commanding general called for their services.

Some say that Italy would need little foodstuff except grain for bread and spaghetti and a certain amount of fats to supplement Italy's insufficient olive oil shortage, since she grows much of what she eats and her food shortage has been largely due to the drain by Germany. And wheat stocks are plentiful.

Others say that large shipments probably more than enough to cover Italy's deficiencies would be needed at first that it would be some time before the Italian peasants, reassured by the sight of ample heaps of bread and spaghetti in the stores would bring their own grain out of hoarding. Shipping, therefore, would be a vital consideration.

Also, Italy's coal requirement, of a million tons a month, obtained since the war from Germany, would pose a serious problem, even if the Italians got along with much less coal while their war industries were shut down during an armistice.

In this argument, Washington's answer again is that the Allies should staff must determine how shipping is to be used. The general, presumably would make their decision solely on the military merits of winning the war, deciding whether the feeding and heating of a population would facilitate their achievement of complete victory in Europe.

Persons who should know most that whatever happens in Italy, the Allies will insist on unconditional surrender, and will make no pact with any turncoat Fascist or member of the royal family. The authorities here want the Italian high command to surrender, so that no future war propagandists can say that Italy was not defeated militarily, as the Nazis said Germany was defeated militarily in World War I.

Also they want the Italians to elect freely the government that must eventually sign the peace treaty after the war, so that no future political of the Fascist stripe may arise later to say that a non-representative government sold Italian interests down the river, using that as an excuse for new aggressions.

Administration of Italy by the Allied military authorities until the Italians can choose their own post-Fascist government by popular vote consequently is the program as envisaged here at present.

The U. S. Goes on the Offensive

Chapter 29

WHEN we cleaned up the story of Midway in The AP office I began to think again about going home for a few weeks. But a telegram came assigning me to an aircraft carrier. I was glad that it was one of the biggest ships afloat. I had ridden on the smallest of the Navy's ships, the PT's in the Philippines, and now I hoped to see action on one of the largest. This carrier had arrived too late for the Battle of Midway and its fliers and crew were impatiently waiting to mix it with the Japs.

Our carrier sailed out of Pearl Harbor early on July 7, and about three weeks later we rendezvoused one sunny Sunday afternoon with a tremendous force of ships. I counted nearly ninety vessels stretched to the horizon on all sides; two carriers beside our own, cruisers, destroyers, a modern battleship, transports, tankers, and fleet auxiliaries. It was the biggest thrill of the war! Everybody on board was excited.

A few days later we found out that our objective was the southeastern part of the Solomon Islands.

Looking at the map of the Solomons and the Jap positions there, many of the younger officers decided that our plan of attack was limited by overconservatism. Hitting that limited area, we would leave Jap bases all around us.

It seems like sending ten men on a football team around the left end, and the ball carrier around the right," one aviator said.

Anyway, there is was. And at least it was an offensive.

THE transports with us were carrying Marine raiders who had undergone months of special training. They were to occupy and hold part of the north shore of Guadalcanal Island, where the Japs were completing an airfield, and the small islands of Tulagi, Gavutu, and Tanambogo, which lay twenty miles north of Guadalcanal across the sheltered waters.

The Japs had other bases in the Solomons, the nearest only 125 miles from Guadalcanal, but we were not going to attack them immediately.

Our offensive had been well timed, as the airfield was almost ready for operation and the area was not yet strongly defended. We began our run-in to the Solomons on the night of August 6.

The planes were already warming up when I received the flight deck next morning, the blue flashes of their exhausts punctuating the roar of many motors. A fresh, strong breeze blew in our faces, and a quarter-moon cast a warm glow along the broad deck.

Swiftly the minutes sped by, and soon the horn on the flight bridge bellowed the take-off signal. I climbed to a 5-inch gun gallery overlooking the deck. Commander LeRoy Simpler, commander of the fighter squadron, squared his Wildcat away in the take-off position and sped down the deck between the twin rows of runway lights. As soon as he was in the air he switched on his wingtip lights. Quickly the other planes climbed aloft after him and soon the air was filled with circling lights as the fighter, dive-bomber, and torpedo planes felt their way into position behind their squadron leaders.

It was fully light when I climbed into the seat of a torpedo plane behind Lieutenant Bruce Harwood, a big, rascally pilot who was itching for his first action of the war.

Our first dive bombers were already coming back when we took off. Bruce climbed fast and circled while our machine gunners test-fired their guns and the other planes in our squadron got into position on our wingtips. Overhead the sky was clear, and in the distance we could see the mountains of Guadalcanal through a thick layer of white clouds.

Flying over the sharply sloping mountains we heard our group commander giving orders to the planes attacking Tulagi and Guadalcanal. We circled down through the clouds and came out over the north shore of Guadalcanal. Beneath the overcast we saw our invasion force of transports, cruisers, and destroyers bunched off Guadalcanal and off Tulagi, dimly discernible in the distance.

We quickly located the Jap runway on Guadalcanal stretching from behind the coconut groves along the channel shore back to the foothills of the jungle-covered mountains. The brown landing strip ran from northeast to southwest, with three thousand feet already surfaced and steel hangars partly completed.

Two miles west of the runway the island jutted sharply at Lunga Point, and there and at nearby Kukum, Japanese huts and stores were blazing from fires set by our dive bombers. East of the airfield open stretches of flat grassy plane divided the jungle areas which extended from the coconut trees to the foothills.

WE circled the airfield and watched one of our cruisers firing its guns spitting blue flame. The shells hit in trenches near the landing field, throwing up sharp clouds of black dirt.

Out near the transports hundreds of Marine landing boats circled and then headed shoreward. We saw the first one hit the beach at Tenaru plantation at exactly 9:10 A.M., and the first Marines jump out with rifles at the ready. But there was no opposition. Most of the Japanese on Guadalcanal were labor troops and they took to the hills when our planes attacked. Our Marines came ashore quickly and their tanks were soon pushing cautiously inland through a clearing leading to the Tenaru River and the airfield.

Bruce circled low over the airfield, followed by our other planes and waiting for orders from the group commander flying overhead in his dive bomber.

Finally the order came: "Bruce, go over and get a bunch of Japs hiding in the woods down there off the runway."

I watched a tremendous thrill out of watching the bright blue flash of our bombs bursting in the woods.

That afternoon our Marines got their first taste of enemy planes. We had gone back to our carrier to refuel and while we were there an alarm came that Jap dive bombers had left Rabaul and were speeding in our direction. I decided to remain on the carrier to see if we were attacked.

The Japs flew straight for our transports in the channel between Tulagi and Guadalcanal. The dive bombers came in at nine thousand feet. Our patrolling fighters were flying at ten thousand and they jumped the dive bombers. Then some escorting Zeros dived on our Wildcats. Our planes shot down a dozen of the Japs, and we lost nine fighters. Only two of our ships were damaged.

NEXT morning, flew in to Tulagi with Lieutenant Harold Larsen in his torpedo plane. The transports in the channel of fighting we had faced on Bataan and later faced in New Guinea.

The Marine shock troops—the "Raiders"—were more than a match for the Japs Armed with tommy guns, grenades, bayonets, knives, and bravery, the Marines calmly and coolly fought their way across the mile-long, quarter-mile-wide island of Tulagi. Supported by shelling from our ships, the Marines wiped out the last Jap after two days of fighting and firmly consolidated their hold on Tulagi and the near-by islands.

On Guadalcanal they reached the airport and seized it within two days. One day later it was ready for our planes.

Everything went well those first two days of the landing. The Japs came back on the afternoon of August 8 with torpedo planes, but twenty-one out of twenty-four of them were blasted out of the air by our fighters and the anti-aircraft guns of ships in the channel. The Japs never located our carriers.

The afternoon of August 8, aboard the carrier, I heard that a small Jap warship force was coming down toward Guadalcanal. Army and Navy reconnaissance planes reported that it consisted of two or three cruisers and a couple of destroyers.

One of the torpedo plane pilots came to me. "Get your life jacket and helmet," he said. "Maybe we'll be taking off soon to hit those babies."

But the planes never took off. When all the planes were back aboard that evening our carriers and their screening ships turned around and headed south. The following morning they were still heading south. The planes were launched and flew as far as the south shore of Guadalcanal Island, but by that time the Japanese had attacked and their ships were safely speeding back to Rabaul, undamaged, after striking one of the most devastating blows in the Pacific war.

Strength FOR THE DAY

FAITHFUL UNTO DEATH

In the war between the states which occurred three-quarters of a century ago, a certain Confederate cavalry officer had a negro boy assigned him as a personal servant.

The camp was attacked by Union soldiers, and one of these unable to wrest the boots from the negro lad, ran him through with a bayonet and left him dying.

When he heard the story of the officer's refusal to give up the boots and of his subsequent death, the officer gathered up the boots carefully and sent them back to his home.

The New Testament has a great deal to say about fidelity. It is one of the simplest of virtues and yet one of the most precious.

NO TIME FOR WASTE

We agree heartily with Senators Byrd and George that a close check should be made on expenditures of the Army and Navy, as well as other parts of the government.

IN DUE TIME IT WILL COME

Naturally all of us are anxious for the invasion of Europe to get started as quickly as possible, because we feel that such a step will indicate the final drive for the extermination of Hitler and the European arm of the Axis.

"Little Joe" held his party, but there wasn't anything political about it. As a matter of fact, only a few of the Democratic state executives showed for the purely social affair.

When it came to personal charm — that political "it" that has little to do with the executive record, but a lot to do with reelections — visitors at the governors' conference were almost unanimous in their opinions that it was up-ec- between host Governor Bricker.

"The river!" Jack gasped. He pushed the baby into Ann's arms. "Daddy says for you to take care of Mary Lee."

"A flood! That meant—" Oh, Jack, hurry. Tell your father to get you all out quick!"

"Where's the fire?" said Bert nonchalantly, not bothering to take his arms from around Sarah.

"It's the river," she said and was proud of the cool contempt in her voice. "The Masons sent their baby here. I'm going to try to warn the others. If it floods there'll be work for everybody."

"More charity," said Sarah and turned brazenly back to Bert. Ann didn't wait to hear more. She rushed outside, started for the hill.

It was dark on the street, and the close, limitless dark of a rainy night. It would be dark in the trailer camp, too. Too dark for the people to see the treacherous water creeping nearer to their doors.

Her shoes squashed on the wet boards as she dashed across. She escaped her feet off the cot, made an effort to get up but sank back. "I'm so shaky."

"I'll have to get help," Ann dashed to the door, peered out. A man's figure splashed past. "Help!" she called.

"I tried a minute ago," she said weakly. "I'll try again." She eased her feet off the cot, made an effort to get up but sank back. "I'm so shaky."

"Where is she?" "In there!" His hand gripped her arm. "I'll get her. You stay here." "I'll help some of the others," Ann cried. "They don't seem to realize how much they'll have to hurry!" Cartright Is Leading Hitter In Big Leagues

Chicago White Sox Rookie Outfielder Tops American And National Players

By JUDSON BAILEY

(Associated Press Sports Writer) Since Joe DiMaggio swept through his spectacular 56-game hitting streak two years ago every other consecutive-game hitting performance has been dwarfed in significance.

But a little known rookie outfielder for the Chicago White Sox, Guy Paxton Cartright, right now is nursing a hot hitting streak that has reached 26 games and it rates attention from the fans, not only because it is the longest of the year but because it has made Cartright currently the leading batter in the major leagues.

His average today was a classy .362, ten points better than Babe Dahlgren of the Phillies, the National League leader, and 24 better than Vernon Stephens of the St. Louis Browns, who has been the American League pace-maker most of the spring.

Cartright is a chunky righthander hitter whom the White Sox bought up from St. Paul this spring. He is 30 years old and except for the war might not yet be in the big leagues. Last year he batted .291 for the Saints and even though he hit 13 home runs, batted in only 45 tallies in 101 games.

There was no fanfare about his joining the Sox and he was a benchwarmer during the early days of the season, making occasional pinch-hitting appearances. But the death of outfielders caused Manager Jimmy Dykes to give him a trial as a regular. Three weeks ago his average still was a modest .290, and then he began to click. When he passed the border of 150 times at bat yesterday to rate consideration among the American League regulars, he bounced right into the king row.

Actually, he made only one hit yesterday, but this was a lousy triple and it kept his streak going although it did not figure in the Sox 2-0 triumph over the Washington Senators.

The Cleveland Indians were given a 3-2 decision over the New York Yankees when rookie Charley Weisloff walked two men with the bases loaded in the first inning to force in two runs and catcher Ken Sears fumbled a grounder with two out in the eighth to let in the Indians' other run.

Detroit outlit 12-7 nosed out the Boston Red Sox 3-2 when Ned Harris singled with the bases loaded in the ninth and the St. Louis Browns trampled the Philadelphia Athletics

Reunion At "Somewhere"
More from Corp. Murphy: "Also if there is any football played in North Africa (or on the continent) next fall, coaches wouldn't have to look far for backfield aces. Here's my choice of four pretty fair boys: Major Clint Frank of Yale, Lt. Tom Harmon, Michigan, Lt. Banks McFadden, Clemson, and Lt. Walt Daly of Penn. Daly and Harmon had a chance meeting recently. Michigan game at Franklin Field which the Wolverines took 19-17. Daly was clearing the way for Frank Reagan that day while Harmon was well, you probably remember, too. Daly, by the way, is working in the same outfit with the Omvacs centerfielder had to me take off the fence."

Official Approval
Can't be much question about Vince's dope on that reunion. On the outside of the V-mail letter was the note: "Censored by Walter J. Daly, Lt. A. C."

Domestic Department
When Clark Shaughnessy collected his first Pitt football squad for practice the other day, he told them, "we will have as many as 10,000 pass plays." And in reply to a few skeptical looks, Clark insisted that with small variations he might really approach that figure. Since Pitt has only six veterans on a squad of 56, one variation likely will be the play where the coach buries his face in his head and refuses to look until it's over.
