Red Forces Drive Nazis Out Of Key City Of Stalino

Other Russian Drives Threaten Nazi Forces In Sea Of Azov Sector

Soviet Communique Places German Losses For Summer Campaign At 420,000 Dead, 1,080,000 Wounded And 38,000 Captured; Russian Losses Not Given

By LEWIS HAWKINS
London, Sept. 8.—(AP)—Capture of fiercely-defended Stalino by the Russians was acknowledged by the Germans today, restoring the last of the great industrial cities of the Donets Basin to the Red army which already has won back two-thirds of the Ukraine's rich grain lands.

Marshal Stalin triumphantly announced in a special order of the day that "the Donets Basin is cleared of the Germans. Our troops have captured a number of cities, including the city of Stalino."

The Red army advance also crossed the rail line to Mariupol, 65 miles southwest of Stalino on the Sea of Azov, making it almost certain that Nazi forces which have been fighting east of that town must withdraw to escape encirclement by the southern turning move.

The Red army newspaper Red Star reported that other units had severed the main railroad from the Donets Basin to Dnepropetrovsk, 115 miles west of Stalino.

The German communique, recorded by the Associated Press, said Stalino, Russia's 12th largest city, had been evacuated to shorten the front after all military installations had been destroyed.

Russian dispatches indicated Stalino fell in flanking moves rather than by direct assault.

This new victory followed upon Moscow's announcement that the Red army had killed more than 420,000 Germans, wounded 1,080,000 and captured 38,000 in taking back at least 30,000 square miles of occupied territory.

Rome Suburbs Bombed Today

London, Sept. 8.—(AP)—The Rome radio said today that Frascati and other localities in the suburbs of Rome were heavily bombed at noon today by Allied planes.

A broadcast recorded by the Associated Press said the towns of Colonna, Grottoferata, Lariano and Velletri, along a railroad circling Monte Albano, which dominates the Italian capital, were also bombed and strafed.

The greatest damage was done, however, the broadcast added, at Frascati by "enemy" planes which swept over the town in waves exactly at noon.

The town was described as a favorite summer resort for the population of Rome.

Plans For Second Front In Europe Already Made

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
Washington, Sept. 8.—(AP)—Allied preparations for smashing Germany's European fortress—including an invasion of northwestern Europe—are virtually complete, Gen. George C. Marshall disclosed today, and plans for decisive triumphs over Japan are well advanced.

"The end is not yet in sight," the army chief of staff said of history's greatest war, "but victory is certain."

EMPLOYEES WILL AID BOND DRIVE

Plans For War Loan Campaign Completed Today

Greenville retail employees attended the War Bond meeting at the Pitt Theatre this morning in large numbers. Many of them pledged to sell at least $200 worth of War Bonds, the quota set for each retail store employee.

J. Herbert Waldrop, Pitt County War Bond chairman, explained the importance of everybody helping to sell and to buy the bonds to back up the men on the fighting fronts.

The retail employees of the county are swinging into action to help put over this Third Victory Bond sale of 15 billion dollars. In Greenville they have made a good start to help sell the city's quota of $840,000 and Pitt county's quota of $2,100,000.

Chairman Waldrop stated in his brief talk this morning. He complimented the retail group on their interest and presence and added that the failure of a special war picture to arrive in time to be shown made no difference. "Those who need to see the picture are those who are not at the meeting," he said.

Jack Allee was master of ceremonies. Erskine Duff led the pledge of allegiance to the flag.

Henry Morgenthau, Jr., Secretary of the Treasury, will issue a citation to every retail employee who sells his or her quota of $200 worth of War Bonds or more.

More than 5,000,000 retail workers throughout the country are lined up with the Greenville retail employees in this job of selling the War Bonds and proving to the men in the service that the homefronters are behind them," Waldrop stated.

About 175 employees of retail stores attended the meeting, and 115 of them have already signed a pledge to try to sell $200 worth of bonds and to do their best to encourage the purchase of War Bonds.

Mrs. Cora Powell, executive secretary of the Merchants' Association, stated.

SCHOOLS GET NYA CENTER

To Use Facilities For Vocational Education

The NYA center in Greenville will be made available to the youth of Greenville and Pitt county as a vocational and technical school.

Supt. J. H. Rose was informed today of this decision on the part of the Procurement Division of the Treasury Department. The City Board of Education and the State Board of Vocational Education will work together to render a service to the boys and girls of this section.

Supt. Rose will attend a meeting of the State Board of Vocational Education in Raleigh tomorrow and Friday making plans for the beginning of operations as soon as possible. The center is ideally equipped to train boys and girls in the vocational fields.

This action on the part of the Treasury Department was hailed with delight by local education officials and all those who are interested in the practical aspects of the school program immediately upon the termination of the NYA.

Jap Facilities In China Blasted

Fourteenth U. S. A. F. Headquarters in China, Sept. 7.—(Delayed)—(AP)—American Lightnings and Warhawks took further toll of Japanese transport facilities in the area south of Hankow Monday in dive-bombing and strafing sweeps, a communique announced today.

Four Yangtze river boats, two tugs and two barges were reported sunk and five other river boats were burned or damaged. Only one Japanese plane was encountered and it was shot down.

Police Nab Alleged Forger Here Today

William Corney, Negro youth about 18, was arrested this morning on a charge of forgery through the aid of an executive of the Guaranty Bank and Trust Company, Wien questioned by Police Chief Herbert Wooten. Corney admitted forging Cecil Bibbo's name to several checks. He cashed one at Belk-Tyler's store and was trying to cash another at the bank when bank officials became suspicious and called the police, the chief stated. There is still another forged check out, police believe.

Corney is employed by the Greenville Utilities Commission. He will be tried in City Recorder's court Friday morning.

Allies Closing Pincers On Japs In New Guinea

Artillery Dropped From Planes Now Blasting 20,000 Japs Trapped In Lae-Salamaua Area

By VERN HAUGLAND
Allied Headquarters in the Southwest Pacific, Sept. 8.—(AP)—Field artillery pieces dropped by paratroopers with American paratroopers at Nadzab airport Sunday now are firing at Japanese targets in the Markham valley in the direction of Lae. Allied headquarters disclosed tonight.

It was also announced a strong offensive patrol of 100 Japanese troops was routed with heavy casualties near Singaua plantation 10 miles east of Lae on Monday by Australian infantry which had landed on the New Guinea coast 48 hours earlier.

The troops were advancing westward along the Huon Gulf toward Lae itself and were approaching the Busu river, only five miles from Malahang, one of the threatened city's main airbases.

The Australians were within range of enemy guns at Lae but they have not been fired, as yet. The silence of these weapons indicates the effectiveness of the heavy aerial pounding of Lae by Liberators before the Allied invasion Saturday.

The field guns dropped from transport planes Sunday were assembled "as quickly as men could find the pieces in tall grass" and now have been rolled into position and placed in action, headquarters announced.

The guns have been directed on a target along the road to Lae. U. S. paratroopers and other units in Markham valley have not yet met serious opposition.

It was said officially that operations on both sides of Lae are proceeding according to plan without real resistance. Since the first few days are all important in operations of this kind it was pointed out that the lack of opposition augurs well for the ultimate success of the pincer movement.

Malahang airbase, across the Busu river from the advancing Australians is three miles from Lae. Allied property, which was the town's secondary airbase, was sighted early Monday morning.

The strong Japanese patrol group was sighted early Monday morning crossing the Busu river, seven miles east of Lae and traveling westward. The enemy was met by Australian troops.

The WAR TODAY

AN ANALYSIS OF THE NEWS

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
The Italian government's unconditional surrender applies to the people and territory actually under its control, but the strong German forces reportedly holding along the line of the Po in northern Italy must be accounted for before we can know the full significance of today's historic capitulation.

Presumably the southern portion of the country can be occupied by Allied troops without serious opposition by the Germans. If the Nazis choose to defend Treviso, however, there may be grim fighting in the northern zone. Although it should be overlooked that the Hitlerites might be forced to abandon this position by concerted Anglo-American bombing of the Brenner pass to Germany. Crippling of this gateway would cut the Nazis off from retreat, and they might make a quick withdrawal if bombing operations threatened such an eventuality.

One highly important item is whether the Badoglio government still has control of the Italian fleet so as to deliver it to the Allies. Half of the navy is said to be at Pola, the big base at the head of the Adriatic and the other half is reported to be at La Spezia on the

REACTIONS TO FALL OF ITALY

Italian Surrender Is Hailed As Greatest Allied Victory

Washington, Sept. 8.—(AP)—President Roosevelt was seated at his momentous desk in the White House offices and Prime Minister Churchill of Great Britain was busy elsewhere in the executive mansion when the world heard today that Italy had capitulated.

Both obviously had known the news for some time since the terms were agreed upon last Friday. But from neither of the leaders was there immediate formal comment.

It was "big stuff" elsewhere. Suppressed excitement was evident among the White House staff when news dispatches gave the story to a jubilant American capital.

Secretary Stephen Early rushed into the presidential offices with the dispatch and reported later that Mr. Roosevelt commented calmly: "It is General Eisenhower's story. Let him tell it."

The word was also conveyed to Churchill whose reasons for tactfulness in the American capital so long after the Quebec conference now became apparent. Obviously awaiting the surrender announcement at any moment Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt conferred into the late hours last night, and were together again this morning.

Secretary of State Hull likewise withheld a statement when he held his press conference soon after the announcement.

Reports that "a break" was imminent spread over Washington last night and formal announcement of the Italian surrender brought enthusiastic expressions concerning a final victory for the United Nations from many leaders on Capitol Hill.

Tripartite Meet Held In London

London, Sept. 8.—(AP)—The first actual Anglo-Soviet-American meeting since a tripartite parley was proposed at the recent Quebec conference took place here today when Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden had luncheon with Ivan Maisky, Soviet vice-commissioner for foreign affairs, and U. S. Ambassador John G. Winant.

The luncheon came on the heels of President Roosevelt's announcement that prospects for a Roosevelt-Churchill-Stalin meeting were now brighter. The fact that the wives of the three diplomats were present at today's luncheon was interpreted here as meaning the spade work for the conference had been completed in the friendliest atmosphere.

Maisky, Eden and Winant had been meeting heretofore in pairs without all three being together at one time.

SURRENDER IS BLOW TO NAZIS

Loss Italy Places Germany In Grave Position

By WILLIAM SMITH WHITE
London, Sept. 8.—(AP)—The war for the western world entered its final and decisive phase tonight with the fall of Italy, bloody and prolonged though that phase may be.

It was a collapse that laid the whole German position in the south open to attack over the full course of the Mediterranean, along whose shores immense Allied forces were marshalled and ready for campaigns of destiny now ahead.

It was the first great payment on Hitler's bill of defeat: The loss to him of what was by far the strongest of his European Allies. The loss was perhaps as punishing and fatal as was the Kaiser's loss in 1918 of his southern flank when Bulgaria and then Turkey and then Austria-Hungary collapsed. Then came catastrophe.

The capitulation was the greatest turn of the war since the Russians demonstrated their ability to hurl back the Germans.

It had the immediate effect of stripping Hitler's Balkan defenses of an estimated 27 Italian divisions and putting him in imminent peril in such vital areas as Rumania, where he is believed to have been getting a fourth of his entire oil supplies.

The longer range effects of Italy's surrender were even more staggering to the Nazis, for the final defeat of the first home of Fascism and Germany's ally put in grave question Hitler's ability to hold on militarily anywhere in southeastern Europe.

The surrender exposed the bankrupt principle of ruthlessness, originated in Fascist Italy, on which Hitler's evil politics had been based.

Arrayed against the Germans in the Mediterranean were all or parts of seven Allied armies, exclusive of those mobile forces of vengeance built up in these islands to Hitler's west. These included the American fifth and seventh armies; the British eighth, ninth, tenth and first armies and the French forces of (Continued on Page Four)

Urges Farmers To Hold Back Tobacco

Raleigh, Sept. 8.—(AP)—Governor Broughton recommended today that farmers withhold or at least retard the movement of their tobacco to markets.

Commenting that "the farm labor problem of the state is in its most critical stage," the governor said that "every available individual on the farms of the state should give full time to picking cotton, to housing or stacking hay, harvesting peanuts and other food and feed crops. The marketing of tobacco in any great quantities can wait until these important crops are saved."

Hotel Fire Death Toll Reaches Fifty

Houston, Tex., Sept. 8.—(AP)—Two more deaths in hospitals today raised to fifty the toll of flames which trapped screaming, frantic men in the old, three-story Gulf hotel in downtown Houston yesterday.

Six have died in hospitals and 44 never got out of the building, turning quickly into an inferno by the swiftly spreading fire. They died fighting to reach the only fire escape not blocked by flames.

A dozen others remain in hospitals, some in serious condition.

Soldier Legislation Is High On Congress' List

By FRANCIS J. KELLER
Washington, Sept. 8.—(AP)—Revering the general sentiment that "nothing's too good for our boys in the service," legislation to broaden and liberalize veterans' benefits is expected to command increasing attention when Congress reassembles Sept. 14 after its summer recess.

The green light for such proposals winked on at the White House in July when President Roosevelt set forth in a national broadcast a six-point program for taking care of the serviceman after "V-day."

Weeks and months before, however, scores and possibly hundreds of bills along the same line were introduced in both houses. The veterans subcommittee of the Senate Finance committee has 49 such proposals pending on its calendar.

Congress was way ahead of the President on most of this," boasted Senator Davis (R-Pa.).

Mr. Roosevelt's program called for mustering-out pay to tide a discharged soldier over until he could find a job; unemployment benefits; an opportunity for education or trade training at government expense; uninterrupted status for the soldier with regard to Social Security benefits; liberalized hospitalization; rehabilitation and medical care for disabled veterans; and "sufficient" pensions for disabled soldiers and sailors.

The suggested mustering-out pay plan appears to have gained strong support. Returning Congressmen report the folks back home are insisting that the men who risked their lives for their country must not be reduced to peeing apples. (Continued on Page Three)

OPINIONS BY ATTY GENERAL

Taxing Of Railroad Properties Included In Rulings

Raleigh, Sept. 8.—(AP)—Railroads are not required to list for local taxation their stations, freight warehouses and the real estate upon which they are located where such property is necessary for the construction and successful operation of the railroad or is used in the daily operation of the railroad, Attorney General Harry McMillan ruled today.

He also held in a digest of opinions that after a vote of the people, county, city or town may levy a tax and appropriate money for the purpose of advertising the county, by or through so as to encourage the carrying of industrial and commercial plants therein. The amount expended shall not exceed one-tenth of one per cent and be less than one-fourth of one per cent upon the assessed valuation of the taxable property.

Other opinions: A person must be a legal resident of a county in order to be eligible to file a petition before the clerk of the superior court for the removal of his name.

A justice of the peace does not have final jurisdiction of an offense of violating the motor vehicle law relating to speed.

The register of deeds has no authority to make changes in names in marriage licenses after the licenses have been issued.

A municipality, in providing water throughout the city for fighting fires, is not exercising a private corporate duty arising out of contract but is exercising a governmental function and is not liable for damage to a citizen by reason of failure to perform such duty or perform it properly.

There is no law in North Carolina which prohibits the sale of untested tobacco on warehouse floors.

Since the position of deputy clerk of the superior court is an office, he must be 21 years of age before he is entitled to hold such a position.

The county commissioners are authorized to reduce, for the purpose of taxation, the valuation of motor vehicles, the sale of which is subject to priorities, rationing and restrictions by the federal government's regulations on account of war.

Cities, towns and counties may levy a tax of $300 for each location in seasonal, temporary, transient or itinerant dealers in used motor vehicles.

Soldier Legislation

On street corners. Many lawmakers believe servicemen should be granted a reduction of pay at their army discharge six months after their discharge. One has suggested a full year. Senator Davis said he thought it to six months would be about right.

Congress already has approved several liberalizing measures. Veterans of the present conflict have been guaranteed the same free hospitalization service afforded the men who fought in 1917-18. The dependents of men who died in the service of this war are receiving increased allowances under a measure which became law last July 13.

In March Congress approved soldiers' vocational rehabilitation legislation which provides free training for handicapped veterans to other with payments of $80 a month and up while they are learning a trade.

Several moves are under way to make soldiers' insurance payable in event of total and permanent disability, as well as upon death. Half dozen bills have been introduced in the House to increase pensions to match climbing living costs. Increases of 10, 15, 20, and even 50 per cent have been proposed by various legislators.

While veterans' problems are certain to figure extensively in congressional debate this fall, actual consideration of the bills may be postponed until a new tax bill is out of the way. That measure will have the right of way in the Senate Finance committee which by long custom considers much veterans as to the world at large: our progress may seem slow but it is steady and determined, and it has been accompanied by a terrific destruction of enemy planes and surface vessels. This attrition must present an appalling problem for the enemy high command.

Plans For Second

"In brief," he said, "the strength of the enemy is steadily declining while the combined power of the United Nations is rapidly increasing, more rapidly with each succeeding month."

"There can be but one result and every resource we possess is being employed to hasten the hour of victory without undue sacrifice of the lives of our men."

Marshall divided the fifth and last phase from the start of the offensive against Guadalcanal last August. The first two phases from the fall of France to the German attack on Russia he dealt with in his biennial report of June 30, 1941.

In his present report, dated June 30, 1943, but brought up to date by footnotes, he deals with the last three periods, beginning with the full mobilization in this country after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor and continuing through the months of defensive warfare to the time when offensive actions could be undertaken.

Spotted throughout are evidences of the advanced state of planning and preparation for final victories in which the United Nations now find themselves.

In contrast to 1941 when there were never enough troops, planes, guns or bullets to fill the requests of Allies and field commanders, Marshall said that the United States now has "a reserve of trained units ready for dispatch to the various theaters as rapidly as shipping becomes available."

It was at the Casablanca conference, he revealed, that the decision was made to capture Sicily, which suggests that later conferences at Washington in May and Quebec in August dealt with objectives far beyond that goal.

The course demands the utmost in leadership, scholarship, and physical stamina. To complete it successfully, the candidate must have confidence in himself and his weapons; he must be aggressive, skillful, and able to assume the initiative.

Strength FOR THE DAY

By EARL L. DOUGLAS

OUR ONLY CONSOLATION

When the affairs of state were pressing down upon Abraham Lincoln to an almost unbearable degree, his son Willie suddenly died. It was the second child the Lincolns had lost, and the President's grief was so intense that he practically withdrew himself from the exercise of his office for several weeks. Some people, knowing his tendency to extreme melancholy, believed that he would never again be able to take up his duties.

But he did. The day his boy was buried he said to a friend, "I will try to go to God with my sorrow." It almost overwhelmed him, but in the end he emerged a stronger man than he had been before.

He took the right pathway. He went down the right road in seeking strength and consolation. The only place we can go when we are overwhelmed with sorrow is to God. The issues of life are in His hands. If there is still hope of life, He can restore it if it be His will; and if death has come, He can heal the broken heart, rearrange the circumstances of life until it is possible for one to live again with courage and purpose.

"I will try to go to God with my sorrow," said the Great Emancipator. He had turned his face in the right direction. Many a tired and sorrowful soul in these days of pain and tears has turned his face or hers in that direction and has found a peace higher than anything the world has to offer.

MR. HULL WAS RIGHT

This country was exactly right in refusing lend-lease aid to Argentina and Secretary Hull was none too harsh in his criticism of that country's neutral stand that has made it possible for Axis agents to operate in this hemisphere. This is a world war, upon the outcome of which the future of the world depends, and there is no place in the present picture for such so-called neutrality as has been shown by Argentina and Spain. If these countries are not willing to reveal that they are at least on our side in spirit by breaking with the Axis, then they should be treated as being in favor of the Axis and the things for which it stands. No country should expect or be permitted to sit in the middle of the present world conflict and play one side against the other for its own gain.

THEY DESERVE IT

The surrender of Italy, the fall of Stalino to the Russians and the progress being made in the South Pacific against the Japs presents an encouraging war picture for our side today. We are on the road to victory, and while we have the enemy reeling from our mighty punches is the time to put everything we have into the fight in order to win a complete victory as quickly as possible.

Beginning tomorrow, this nation will launch a campaign to raise fifteen billion dollars to purchase more needed equipment and supplies for our fighting men and our Allies. This money is essential for successful prosecution of the war and it seems to us that one of the best ways to prove to our fighting men that we appreciate what they are doing is to buy bonds to the limit of our own ability and render every possible aid in getting others to do likewise.

Pitt County's quota in the drive is $2,100,000. Let's show our men how proud we are of them by going over the top before the drive ends.

WASHINGTON IN WARTIME

By JACK STINNETT

(First of Four Articles on the Peace-time Future of the Veterans of World War II.)

Washington—Observers returning from the war fronts say that the question most asked by American fighting men is "What's cooking for us when we come marching home?"

It isn't that they're selfish or want anything handed them on a silver platter, these observers say, it's just that they want to be sure they'll get a slice of those Four Freedoms they are sweating and bleeding for. And according to the men who have known them best, they consider most important the freedom to work and earn a decent living for the missus and the kids. This much assurance can be given them right now. If all or part of the war ended tomorrow, they would find the program of demobilization, rehabilitation and reemployment already functioning.

A survey discloses that these agencies and organizations are operating:

(1) The Reemployment Division of Selective Service, whose chief is Col. Lewis Sanders. This division in time will have one committee member on every Selective Service local board to each 20 or 30 men to be demobilized. It will be their duty, briefly, to see that the soldier gets his old job back and that all rights and benefits specified under the Selective Service law are allowed him. If his job isn't there or he doesn't want it, the committee member will direct him to the other channels of employment.

(2) The Veterans Employment Division of the U. S. Employment Service, the clearing house and placement agency for all veterans who want jobs.

(3) The Vocational Rehabilitation Division of the Veterans administration, whose duty it already is to see that no veterans with any disability go without employment for lack of training or education.

(4) The Vocational Education division of the U. S. Office of Education, which, in cooperation with state vocational education departments in last three years, has trained more than 7,000,000 war workers and has a program this year for training 50,000 physically handicapped.

(5) The Red Cross, which will be the final buffer in hardship cases and will act both as a relief and advisory agency.

(6) The National Clearing House Committee.

This last group hasn't even the semi-official status of the Red Cross, but if it achieves its aims, it may become the most vital unofficial force in seeing that veterans get all that is coming to them under the law in the way of a chance to work.

The committee is headed by L. J. Fenlon of the American Legion and among those who participated in its organization and whose members will serve on the great network of state and local committees are the Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the Disabled American Veterans, the two major affiliated labor unions, junior and senior Chambers of Commerce of the United States, the National Association of Manufacturers, the National Grange, the National Farm Bureau Federation, and a number of other of the nation's largest trade and civic organizations.

The ability and willingness of Hitler's southern European satellites to fight a war of attrition was unquestionable and it is not by any means certain that the mere pressure of the Allied menace will not be enough to cause them to pull out. It appeared in other words, that the business of taking countries "by telephone" as Hitler used to do, might now be turned against him.

The defeat of the master principle was bound to affect these people profoundly just as it was bound to open crevices in the whole facade of the surface of German political unity at home.

THE LONG NIGHT

By Eleanor Attorbury

Chapter 22

The day dragged interminably. Bette watched a sickly sun mount the heavens and finally sink slowly toward the horizon. The injured man lay quietly obedient to her orders, grateful for her care. If darkness came soon enough and they could get him to the shelter for a blood transfusion he had every chance of living. Bette scanned the skies again. Still several hours until nightfall.

Meanwhile her busy thoughts tried to anticipate what possible chances the American forces had against the enemy. They couldn't lose. They wouldn't be driven out of this important base. Not Americans! But—reluctantly, she realized, without supplies, ammunition, planes—what else could they do?

If only those transports had come through in time. If only the thick, blanketing fog hadn't clung for weeks on end around the island making the movements of the enemy. And now with the Japs well established, well supplied on the other side of those mountains, how long before they would be back?

Grimly chanting her new litany of determined hope, Bette searched the skies again, futilely. And what of Sue and the other nurses? But mostly Sue. How was she standing up against all this? She shook her head slowly. It would be harder on Sue than anyone. Still—and an old pang pierced deep with quick pain—Sue must have known just this morning when Scott reached that bomb shelter.

When at last night crept out of the forest, reached the grassy hilllock where Bette and the sleeping soldier lay hidden, Scott himself was the first to reach her. Bearing a stretcher the two men left the shelter of tall trees, raced toward her across the open beach. Bette's heart beat thunderously as she saw their shadowy figures coming, heard their muffled footsteps.

"Everything under control?" Scott asked instantly, his keen eyes searching her face for a moment before he turned to the soldier beside her. "You all right, Bette?"

She nodded, too maddeningly aware of his voice, of his eyes, of her own churning emotions to speak aloud. This was the first time he'd ever spoken her name. For the first time in his life, it sounded like a lovely name.

"How's Coomah?"

"Low, but still holding his own," he replied, amazed that her own voice sounded so calm and professional.

Two other soldiers had followed the stretcher bearers, were taking over the machine gun.

"Ought to be hearing from the Nips pretty soon," one of them said, grinning cheerfully. "Better get going."

They moved the injured man carefully, ette followed with what proved to be alarming difficulty. Every step became an ordeal. Her muscles, aching with fatigue, threatened mutiny. Her head swam dizzily. The beach seemed to ripple like the swells out on the ocean. Twice she stumbled, fell forward into her knees. Twice she forced herself to get up, go on. The third time she fell prone and unconsciousness swept over her so rapidly it was like merciful relief. She was only vaguely aware of Scott's voice from a great distance. Then blackness.

As she came back to consciousness, she was aware of Scott's voice again, carrying her gently, carefully. For a moment, she kept her eyes closed lest the weak tears she couldn't control should betray her. When she opened them, she said, "I'm sorry. I didn't mean to go feminine on you." She tried to laugh. "I can walk now."

But his arms only tightened. Through the gloom twilight she saw him smiling down at her. "You aren't heavy, little red-head. I can't risk having you keel over on us again."

Her smile twisted with the pain in her heart. "Still worrying about the government's investment, I see."

He looked down at her, puzzled for a moment. Then she laughed, edged with a laugh. "Absolutely. And I was quite right from the beginning. You've done everything you could to get killed. You must certainly have nine lives."

Maybe, she thought grimly. She certainly felt feline enough to want to bare claws a moment later when Scott kicked open the door to the bomb shelter and Sue, looking glamorous, pale and hollow-eyed herself, said, "Oh, Bette, darling. How perfectly ghastly you look!"

Bette shut her lips tight on the caustic reply that leaped with her anger, realizing that it was only Sue's way of expressing her concern.

"Yes, I had to break my date at the beauty parlor," she said dryly, and relaxed gratefully as Scott laid her carefully on a smooth, clean-sheeted cot.

"Get her something to eat," she heard Scott order sharply. "Then give her something to make her sleep. She's been through enough for six women in the past few days."

Bette shut her eyes tight, again afraid that her growing weakness would betray her.

"Come, Scott. You're tired. I'll get you something hot to drink, too."

Bette looked then, saw Sue take his arm, draw him toward the improvised kitchen with a smile that would warm an igloo. Sue hadn't changed. Not even a hair, not even the hot breath of defeat on her very cheeks would change Sue. She would never consider anything more important than her own personal desires. She had Scott back at least for the moment. Nothing else was essential.

Wearily, Bette turned her cheek against the pillow released the flood of hot tears that had scalded her eyes too long. What matter if she wept? One couldn't be nobly brave indefinitely. At least, not when one's heart ached so unbearably.

The earth-shaking concussion from the bursting shells woke Bette from a deep sleep. Her senses still dulled, she jerked erect, tried to think what had happened. The great natural cave that served as bomb-shelter was jammed with cots. It was dimly lighted now. A few nurses moved from bed to bed, their smiles steady, their voices calm. Bette got to her feet. Outside, the world seemed to have gone mad with violence.

Another Jap raid! And this one certainly meant business. Bette found Sue trying to cook an alcohol lamp to use.

"Can I borrow a clean uniform from you, Susie?" she asked and began scrubbing herself energetically in icy water from the slim supply stored in a gasoline drum. Sue's full lips twisted bitterly. "Nobody has had a clean uniform since the hospital burned. Nor a decent meal. Nor an hour off duty. This is war, remember?"

Bette straightened, looked at her sister sharply. "That's not the way to talk, Sue. Complaining won't help any."

"Don't I know it! And what wouldn't I give to be home right this minute."

Bette grasped the younger girl's shoulders firmly. "Look here, I'm ashamed of you, Sue! There's a job to be done. We've got to see it through."

Sue shrugged herself loose from Bette's grasp, turned away. "Oh, go peddle your fine talk somewhere else. I'm tired of listening to it."

Then, as if to point up Sue's mood, the shells fell closer, rocked the shelter fearfully. The big drum of water rocked perilously near to spilling over. Several basins fell clattering to the earthen floor. Bette steadied the drum, picked up the basins, went immediately to a bedside of a flyer whose head was swathed in bandages. His hot hands plucked the bed-clothes feverishly. She took them to her own slim cool grasp, held them until the patient quieted.

Gradually the shelling subsided. Outside, the world was ominously calm.

"What does that mean?" Bette asked Dr. Farrell as she passed him on the way to the improvised kitchen.

He shrugged. "Maybe we're about to be honored with a landing party. Our boys haven't been holding their fire for nothing."

Before she could answer, firing began again. Not the great explosions that had ripped the night apart at first, but the staccato chatter of machine-guns, the steady pound of rifle fire.

All through that endless night, Bette worked shoulder to shoulder with the other nurses, moving automatically when fatigue so dulled her senses that she seemed moving through a horrible dream.

When the firing stopped, it stopped so abruptly the girls interrupted their work to look up, stare at each other. Pale and hollow-eyed, Bette saw fear leap from one stricken glance to the next. If the battle was over, who had won?

The tense interval that they waited was the onest of Bette's life. Outside, quiet persisted like a hovering threat. Until finally, Bette could stand it no longer. Running to the great heavy door that had stood between them and certain death these many hours, she dragged it open, slipped outside.

The beach was deserted. On second glance, she saw why. Brown bodies in grotesque, unnatural positions, sprawled in the sand. At the beach's edge were landing barges, bullet riddled, half-submerged, battered now by the pounding surf. Her glance pushed on out to sea. There the prow of a ship pointed skyward.

Before she had time to decide what it all meant, the shout came. One of the officers climbed out of a fox hole dug not far from where Bette stood. Holding his rifle high, he whooped like some Indian on the war-path. As if it had been a signal, hundreds of fox-holes gave up their fighting men. They surged down toward the beach, grim, hollow-eyed, boys their tired faces alive with exaltation now.

A moment later, Scott MacQuinn raced toward her. Jubilant, he swung an arm around her waist.

tugged her fiercely. "That's the way we got those dirty yellow skunks."

Thrilled to the point where she could hardly control her voice, Bette asked, "What happened? Tell me." "They shelled us first. Softened us up, you see." His blue eyes met hers, laughing. "We held our fire until they put their landing barges ashore. We even let them get up the beach a ways. Then we let them have it. I think we got every last one of them."

"And—our own boys?" Bette's first thought went to them. "How many—did we lose?"

"Not many—I hope. Some injured probably. We'll hope that's all." He looked out across the water again. "And we'll hope that with reinforcements, they'll get them off until we get reinforcements. Boy could we clean up on those—"

He stopped and stared. Bette tried to see why. In a moment it was obvious. There in the blue sky, still small enough to be great birds, but approaching with rapidity and hum of engines enough to prove they were not, came three huge transport planes.

"There they are," Scott said with a calm that didn't match the excitement in his expression. "We got rid of those Japs not a minute ago."

The rest of the weary men gaped on the shell-pitted flying field, now theirs. And for a moment as they stood their places turned skyward, a hush over the group as deep as if it stood in a great cathedral. Instinctively Bette knew that every man there was echoing silently the silent prayer of thanksgiving those great planes brought promise of new life to the hard-pressed little out-post.

Only Six Pitchers 20-Game Winners

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

With the closing of the major league campaign less than four weeks away, the field of potential 20-game winners among the pitchers has narrowed to half a dozen men, two in the American league and four in the National.

In 1942 the two St. Louis stars, Morton Cooper and Johnny Beazley won 22 and 21, respectively, in the National league while Cecil (Tex) Hughson of Boston and Ernie Bonham of the New York Yankees won 22 and 21 in the American league.

Of this group only Cooper will be a repeat this year. He has won 19 and lost eight.

Truett (Rip) Sewell of the Pittsburgh Pirates, proponent of the famed parachute pitch sometimes called the Ephus (nothing) ball, already has won 20 game and lost seven.

In the American league Spurgeon (Spud) Chandler of the Yankees is the nearest thing to a sure shot for 20 with a present record of 18 and three and Paul (Dizzy) Trout of the Detroit Tigers has won 17 and lost ten.

Trout attained his 17th triumph and fifth shutout yesterday as the Tigers took a doubleheader from the Chicago White Sox 5-0 and 6-0.

The next time Ace Adams goes to the mound, which may be today, he'll break his relief pitching record of 61 approaches. And Paul Dinger needs only two more mound victories to make it 200 for his major league career. Then he'll probably be ready to join the only other 200-game winners in the league, Carl Hubbell and Freddie Fitzsimmons—on the bench. Don't worry too much about those "out-classed" civilian footballers at Big Ten colleges. Minnesota has a 6-foot, 7-inch tackle named Don Bunge who is too big for the army, and Ohio State's Ray Stackhouse, a mere 230-pound freshman, seems to have clinched a first-string tackle job. New York, Sept. 8.—(AP)—Luis Suarez, Mexican sports writer who came all the way to Forest Hills for a few days at the national tennis championships, is trying to persuade some of the girl players to spend a few months in Mexico this winter studying and playing tennis. "Our men players are pretty good, especially in doubles," explains Luis, "but the girls aren't. They need some competition." He thinks he has succeeded in interesting Louise Broughton, Dot Bundy and Margaret Osborne in the proposition. Miss Osborne, Pauline Betz and Doris Hart likely will visit Mexico City for the Pan-American tournament next month. Golfers at Coeur D'Alene, Idaho, didn't think much of the idea of letting a bunch of boys from seven to 14 years old use the sporty Hayden Lake course for weekly tournaments. The kids still wanted to play, so two dozen of them spent a good part of the spring and summer on hands and knees pulling weeds so they could play. By SCOTT SUMMERS
Raleigh, N. C. Sept. 8.—(AP)—Don't be surprised if Peahead Walker turns up with a better football team this year than his squad of only 19 men would indicate. The Wake Forest Mentor has four good backs and a trio of linemen returning. They include Bill Stafford, ace center, and most coaches admit that the middle-man in the line make or break a good defense. It looks like a good first string for Peahead, with a dearth of substitutes.

CONTINUE AIR WAR ON NAZIS

Americans Blast Airfield In France Today

By GLADWIN HILL
London, Sept. 8. (AP) - American twin-engined Marauders blasted two enemy air fields near Lille in France today, rounding out a full week of non-stop assaults by Allied air units based in Britain to support the Mediterranean campaign and pave the way for the invasion of western Europe.

At the same time Thunderbolt fighters of the U. S. 8th air force augmented their drive with sweeps over Belgium and northern France.

The targets of the medium Marauders in their seventh consecutive day of operations were the Nazi air bases at Lille-Nord and Lille-Vandeville, both of which had been hit previously in recent days. The announcement, from the U. S. army's European theater headquarters, said RAF, Dominion and Allied Spitfires escorted the bomber fleets.

The Nazi-controlled Paris radio declared that American bombers had struck in the "violent attack" at Amiens and had pounded Abbeville twice more, but there was no announcement from Allied air officials of new raids against these oft-battered objectives.

Mosquito bombers pounded enemy airfields and rail targets in France and Belgium, the Air Ministry announced, to keep the air offensive rolling through another night, and naval planes destroyed a German E-boat in the channel.

Although the RAF's heavy bombers took their first layoff in three nights in the large-scale bombardment of German industrial centers and railroads leading into Italy, the night forays of the swift Mosquitos and the daylight attacks by Allied bomber formations carried the non-stop offensive against western Europe into its seventh day.

The Berlin radio, in a broadcast recorded by the Ministry of Information, said two British "nuisance raiders" flew over German territory last night.

The latest blows against the west side of the European fortress came after one of the heaviest days in the week-long series of assaults yesterday when American heavy and medium bombers and fighters joined British air units in blasting enemy objectives on land and sea.

The score at the end of six days was around 25 Nazi air fields bombed and at least 14 railroad yards attacked. This appeared to be a significant campaign to divert aerial and ground reinforcements from the Italian and Russian fronts to soften western Europe for possible Allied invasion.

NO LEND-LEASE TO ARGENTINA

Hull Criticizes Country's Attitude Toward Axis

Washington, Sept. 8. (AP) - Possibly jealous and fearful over the growing power of Brazil, Argentina has asked for—and been firmly refused—American lend-lease materials, including the implements of war.

The request came from the Argentine foreign minister, Vice Admiral Segundo Storni, on August 5 and the flat turnaround was released by Secretary of State Hull last night. The exchanges, in which Hull pulled no punches, were made public here and in Buenos Aires.

The Argentine cabinet distributed the messages without comment.

Storni contended Argentina was pre-Ally, though it is the only neutral in the hemisphere. All others have broken off relations with the Axis. He intimated also that his country would be accused of stab-in-the-back tactics if the situation were changed now, likening it to Italian regime of form from neutrality to open warfare against France in 1940.

Hull shot back that Argentina still is doing business with the Axis, and harbors enemy agents and espionage.

As long as Argentina stays out of the inter-American hemispheric defense setup, it would be folly for the U. S. to allow this country to have American-produced instruments of war, Hull intimated.

Storni, in his letter, recalled the military coup which placed General Pedro Ramirez' government in power and he said the present administration was not Fascist nor even sympathetic with the Axis.

"Argentine sentiment, eminently American, firmly opposed to totalitarian regimes, is on the side of the United Nations in material and spiritual action," he declared.

The Argentine's principal competitor in South America—Brazil—was praised only today by U. S. Army Chief of Staff George C. Marshall for its early plunge into the war on the Allied side and for its work in protecting that theater.

Storni contended that Argentina couldn't take such an abrupt step.

He acknowledged that "defeat is inexorably drawing closer to the Axis," but that to break relations now would "put Argentine chivalry to a hard test. Let it suffice to recall the judgment which Italy merited when, in a similar situation, it took its position against defeated France."

Said Hull:

1.—Only Argentina, of the 21 American republics (13 of whom have declared war) has not broken relations with the Axis, nor has it severed financial and commercial relations, and as a result has authorized financial transactions beneficial to the enemies of the United Nations.

2. Axis agents continue to engage in espionage activities in Argentina which cost United Nations ships and lives. They spread Axis propaganda, and their publications receive supplies of newsprint at favorable prices through the intervention of the Argentine Ministry of Agriculture.

3. Argentina is the only American republic still maintaining radio-telephone and radio-telegraph communications with Japan, Germany and Italy.

All these, said Secretary Hull, were contrary to inter-American agreements to which Argentina had fully subscribed.

They explained convincingly, he indicated, why Argentina's neutrality had not been "understood."

friends are no longer endangered by Allied bombs and shells," a spokesman said. "Practically all the prisoners grinned widely when they heard the news over radios permitted in their quarters. Their only fear now is that Germany will 'punish' Italy by bombing the surrendered country."

Reactions To ...

tee: "It is very, very cheerful news—something that will lead to a final victory in our war in Europe. It is a stepping stone in the right direction."

Rep. Sabath (D-Ill), chairman of the House Rules Committee: "A great victory for a great cause. They used good judgment and it will save the lives of thousands of our boys. It should bring about an early ending of the war in Europe and, as I predicted some time ago, the downfall of Hitler this year."

Sen. Guffey (D-Penna) member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee: "I'm delighted. It's a great victory for the Allies. General Eisenhower and his staff deserve the highest praise for this magnificent triumph."

Rep. Cole (R-NY) member of the House Naval Committee: "I am delighted at the good judgment of the Italians in removing themselves from a hopeless cause and thus preventing needless bloodshed. This will give us a broad stepping stone to press the attack to the heart of Germany."

Chairman May D-Ky) of the House Military Committee: "That's the beginning of the end. Germany next and then Japan. The psychological effect of this will be tremendous in favor of the Allies."

Senator Hatch (D-NM): "While the news of the surrender of the Italians is gratifying, it is not surprising. It bears out Gen. Marshall's statement the war is entering its final stages. At the same time we must not forget Germany has surrendered. Neither has Japan. Nevertheless the surrender emphasizes the need for a quick decision on constructive post-war policy."

London, Sept. 8. (AP) - News of Italy's surrender was greeted happily by the free Italian organization here and by the Greeks, who called it the biggest step yet toward liberation of their countries.

Andrea Simoni, head of the free Italian movement, said "It is perhaps too soon to talk, but it is a happy thing that Italy is out of the war."

Awaiting word from the government seat in Cairo, Greek sources were cautious, but stressed that the Axis would be unable to continue domination of the Balkans with the east coast of Italy occupied by the Allies.

The first public break of news that Italy had capitulated caused major excitement in the foreign office section of the British Ministry of Information.

It was obvious that, although the officials here sitting on a big news story, they had not expected it to break as quickly as it did.

Nearly half an hour after the news had been flashed by the agencies from army headquarters in North Africa, the Ministry of Information summoned newsmen to confirm the announcement.

J. H. Brebner, head of the Ministry's news division, smiled when he stepped to the microphone to read Gen. Eisenhower's announcement.

As Brebner finished Eisenhower's text he added these words: "End of a damned good message."

Bacon, Ga., Sept. 8. (AP) - Italians in the prisoner of war camp at Camp Wheeler today greeted with cheers the announcement of Italy's surrender.

Camp authorities said the prisoners were almost unanimous in their expression of relief at the news. "They are glad their relatives and gists who think the only way to give the American people determination to carry on is to frighten them by predicting a long war.

This sort of thing strikes me as being just as objectionable as false optimism. Americans by and large are an understanding people, and thrive best on the straight truth. To tell them on general principle that the war is going to run on interminably, despite their efforts, not only isn't a safeguard against complacency but it causes deep discouragement.

General Marshall doesn't specifically mention the "second front" which Moscow is demanding. He
